bodies which do not look alike; and as much as the sun illuminates it, warms it, communicates its admirable effects, since it does not communicate its life nor does the earth surrender its rights of life in the sun, the earth will always be earth and the sun will always be sun. Such is the state my Divine Will was and is in: until man surrenders his will in Mine, Mine cannot cast Its principle of life in the human will, the fusion of One with the other cannot take place, the creature will always be creature without the likeness and the Life of her Creator in the depth of her soul, which only my Divine Fiat can form. Therefore, there will always be dissimilarity, distance, even though my Divine Volition illuminates it and communicates to it its admirable effects out of its goodness and liberality, and by the effect of the power and immensity that It possesses by Its own nature. More so since, by sinning, by doing his human will, Adam not only formed the wood worm in the root of the tree of humanity, but he added the graft to it - a graft which communicated all the bad humors that in the course of the centuries the graft of Adam would produce in the tree of humanity. At the beginning, a graft can produce neither great goods nor great evils, but only the beginning of evil or of good. In fact, Adam did not do the many evils of the human generations, but made only the graft, and was yet the cause of torrents of evils; more so, since he did not have immediately the opposite graft of my coming upon earth, but centuries upon centuries were to pass, therefore the bad humors kept growing and the evils multiplied, and so the Kingdom of my Will could not even be thought of. But when I came upon earth, with my Conception I formed the opposite graft with the tree of humanity, and the evils began to stop, the bad humors to be destroyed; so, there is all the hope that the Kingdom of my Divine Will be formed in the midst of the human generations. The many truths I have manifested to you about my Divine Fiat are sips of life, some of which water, some cultivate, some increase the humors for the tree of humanity grafted by Me. Therefore, if the Life of my Divine Fiat has entered into the tree of my Humanity and has formed the graft, there is all the reason to hope that my Kingdom will have Its scepter, Its just dominion and Its command in the midst of creatures. Therefore, pray and do not doubt."

* * *

October 30, 1929

One who lives in the Divine Will can go around in all the works of God and acquires the divine rights.

The sweet enchantment of the Omnipotent Fiat keeps me as though eclipsed in It with Its light, and I can see nothing but all of Its acts, to place my "I love You" as a seal upon each one of Its acts in order to ask for the Kingdom of Its Divine Will in the midst of creatures. Now, before my mind I saw a great wheel of light which filled the whole earth; and while the center of the wheel was all one light, many rays were sticking out around it for as many acts as the Divine Fiat had done, and I moved from one ray to another to place on them the seal of my "I love You", to then leave it in each ray asking continuously for the Kingdom of Its Divine Will. Now, while I was doing this, my always lovable Jesus, coming out of my interior, told me:

"My daughter, with one who lives in my Divine Will and forms her acts in It, these acts remain as the work of the creature, binding God to give her the rights of a Kingdom so holy, and therefore the rights to make It known and to make It reign upon earth. In fact, the soul who lives in my Fiat reacquires all the acts of It done for love of creatures. God renders her the conqueror not only of His Will, but of all Creation; there is not one act of It in which the creature does not place her act, be it even one 'I love You', one 'I adore You', etc. So, having placed something of her own, everything remains bound, and my Fiat feels happy because finally It has found the fortunate creature to whom It can give what It wanted to give with so much love from the very beginning of the creation of all the universe.

"Therefore, by living in my Divine Will, the creature enters into the divine order, she becomes the proprietor of Its works, and, by right, she can give and ask for others that which is her own. And since she lives in It, her rights are divine, and she asks by a right that is divine, not human. Each of her acts is a call that she makes to her Creator, and with His very divine empire, she says to Him: 'Give me the Kingdom of your Divine Will, that I may give It to creatures, so that It may reign in their midst, and all of them may love You with divine love, and be all reordered in You.' Now, you must know that every time you go around in my Will to put something of your own, it is one more divine right that you acquire to ask for a Kingdom so holy. This is why, as you go around in It, all the works of Creation come forward before you, and all those of Redemption line up around you, waiting for you, so as to receive, each one of them, your act, to give you the requital of the act of Our works; and you keep tracing them one by one, to recognize them, embrace them, to place your little 'I love You', and your kiss of love to make a purchase of them. In Our Fiat there is neither 'yours' nor 'mine' between Creator and creature, but everything is communion, and therefore, by right, she can ask for whatever she wants. Oh! how afflicted and sorrowful I would feel amid so many pains and acts of mine done while I was on earth, if the little daughter of my Divine Will did not even recognize them and did not try to place around my act the cortege of her love and of her act. How could I give you the right if you did not recognize them? And even less could you make them your own. Recognizing Our works is not only a right that We give, but possession. Therefore, if you want my Divine Will to reign, always go around in Our Fiat, recognize all Our works, from the smallest to the greatest, place your act in each one of them, and everything will be granted to you."

* * *

November 6, 1929

Jesus, center of the Creation. The word, outpouring of the soul; the value of it. Who is the bearer of the works of God.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues, and it seems to me that all of Creation and the many works It encloses are my dear sisters - but so bound to me that we are inseparable, because one is the Will that animates us, and everything that Jesus did while on earth forms my life, and so I feel as though kneaded with Jesus and with all His acts.

So, I felt myself surrounded by everything, and in the center of all things I could see my sweet Jesus, taciturn; though in the midst of so many works, everything was silence, and He had no one to whom to say a word - the most beautiful works were mute for Him. Then, drawing me to Himself, He told me:

"My daughter, I am the center of all Creation, but isolated center; everything is around Me, everything depends on Me, but since created things do not have reason, they do not keep Me company; they give Me glory, they honor Me, but they do not break my loneliness. The heavens do not speak, the sun is mute, the sea tumults with its waves, it murmurs tacitly, but does not speak. It is the word that breaks loneliness; two beings who, in words, exchange their thoughts, the affections and what they want to do - this is the most beautiful joy, the purest feast, the sweetest company. Their secrets, manifested in words, form the dearest harmony. And if these two beings blend in their sentiments, in the affections, and one sees his will in the other, this is the most pleasant thing that can exist, because one feels his life in the other. Great gift is the word - it is the outpouring of the soul, the outpouring of love; it is the door of communication, it is the exchange of joys and of sorrows. The word is the crown of the works. In fact, who formed and crowned the work of Creation? The word of Our Fiat. As It spoke, the portents of Our works came out, one more beautiful than the other. The word formed the most beautiful crown for the work of Redemption. Oh! had I not spoken, the Gospel would not exist., and the Church would have nothing to teach to the peoples. The great gift of the word has more value than the whole entire world.

“Now, daughter of my Divine Volition, do you want to know who breaks my loneliness in the midst of so many works of mine? One who lives in my Divine Will. She comes into the middle of this center, and she speaks to Me; she speaks to Me about my works, she tells Me that she loves Me for each created thing, she opens her heart to Me and speaks to Me of her intimate secrets; she speaks to Me of my Divine Fiat and of her sorrow for she does not see It reigning. And my Heart, in hearing her, feels in her Its own love and sorrow; It feels as though portrayed again, and as she speaks, my Divine Heart swells with love, with joy, and unable to contain it, I open my mouth and I speak, and speak at length. I open my Heart and I pour my inmost secrets into her heart; I speak to her about my Divine Will as the only purpose of all Our works. And while I speak, I feel true company - but a speaking company, not mute; a company that understands Me, that makes Me happy, and into which I can pour Myself. Has everything I have manifested to you about my Divine Will perhaps not been outpourings of love, transfusion of life that we did, one into the other, and that, while I would speak to you, served to entertain us and to form the sweetest and most pleasant company? A soul that lives in my Divine Will is everything Me, she makes up for the muteness of my works for Me; she speaks to Me for everything, she makes Me happy, and I do not feel lonely; and having someone to whom to give the great gift of my word, I am no longer left as the mute Jesus who has no one to whom to say a word - and if I want to speak, if my Fiat is not there I will not be understood - but the Jesus who speaks and has His company.”

Then, my poor and little mind kept wandering within the Divine Fiat, and my lovable Jesus added:

“My daughter, my Divine Will simplifies the creature, It empties her so much of everything that does not belong to It, that nothing else is left of the human being but a complex of simplicity. Simple the gaze, the word, the manners, the steps; the mark of the divine simplicity can be seen in her as though in a mirror. Therefore, when my Divine Will reigns on earth, pretence, lie, which can be called origin of every evil, will no longer exist; while simplicity, as origin of every true good, will be the true characteristic that will point out that here reigns the Divine Will. Now, you must know that Our love for one who lets herself be dominated by Our Divine Fiat is so great, that everything We want the creature to do is first formed in God Himself, and then it passes into her. And since her will and Ours are one, she keeps it as her own act, and she repeats it to Us as many times as We want. So, one who lives in Our Divine Volition is the bearer of Our works, the continuous copier and repeater. With the eye of light that she possesses, given to her by It, she fixes upon her Creator to see what He is doing, in order to absorb it into herself, to say to Him: ‘I want to do nothing else but what your adorable Majesty does.’ And We feel twice as happy, not because We are not happy without the creature, since, in Us, happiness is Our nature, but because We see the creature happy, who, by virtue of Our Will, comes closer to Our likeness, loves with Our love and glorifies Us with Our own works. We feel that the creative power of Our Fiat reproduces Us and forms Our Life and Our works in the creature.”

* * *

November 10, 1929

Only the little ones enter to live in the Divine Will. Example of the little boy. Difference between the creation of the universe and that of man.

The Divine Fiat absorbs me completely within Its light, and in order to give me Its prime act of life, this light palpitates in my heart and makes me feel the heartbeat of Its Light, the heartbeat of Its Sanctity, of Its Beauty and Creative Power; and I feel my little soul like a sponge, all soaked in these divine heartbeats. And unable to contain it because of my littleness, and feeling itself burned by the scorching rays of the Sun of the Divine Fiat, in spasm, it keeps repeating: ‘Fiat! Fiat! have pity on my littleness. I feel I cannot contain your Light - I am too little. So, You Yourself - form the void, make me larger, so I can contain more light, that I may not remain suffocated by this Light, which it is not given to me to be able to embrace completely, so as to enclose It in my little soul.’

But while I was thinking of this, my sweet Jesus told me:

“My little daughter, courage, it Is true that you are too little, but you must know that, in my Divine Fiat only the little ones enter to live in Its Light; and at every act that these little ones do in my Divine Will, they suffocate their own, giving a sweet death to the human will, because in Mine there is no room nor place to let it operate. The human volition has no reason nor right, it loses its value before a Will, reason and right which are Divine. It happens between the Divine Will and the human as it could happen to a little boy to whom, on his own, it seems he is able to say and capable of doing something, but if he is placed near someone who possesses all sciences and is skillful in the arts, the poor little one loses his value, remains mute, and is incapable of doing anything; and he remains fascinated and enchanted by the lovely speaking and fine operating of the scientist. My daughter, this is what happens: the little one without the great one feels he is something, but before the great one he feels more little than he is. More so before the height and immensity of my Divine Will.

“Now, you must know that as many times as the soul operates in my Divine Will, she empties herself of her own and forms as many doors to let Mine enter. It happens as to a house which could possess a sun inside: the more doors it has, the more rays come out through each door. Or to a piece metal which had holes, and were placed in front of the sun: the more holes it has, the more each little hole is filled with light and possesses the ray of light. Such is the soul; the more acts she does in my Divine Will, the more entrances she gives It, in such a way as to become all irradiated by the light of my Divine Fiat.”

After this, I was continuing my round in the Creation, to follow the acts of the Supreme Fiat done in It; and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, there is great difference between the creation of the whole universe and the creation of man. In the first there was Our creative and preserving act, and after everything was ordered and harmonized, We added nothing else that was new. On the other hand, in the creation of man, there was not only the creative and preserving act, but the active act added to it - and of an activity ever new; and this, because man was created in Our image and likeness, and since the Supreme Being is a new continuous act, man too was to possess the new act of his Creator, which might resemble Him in some way. Therefore, Our active act of continuous novelty remained inside and outside of him; and by virtue of this, Our active act, man can be and is always new in his thoughts, new in his words, new in his works. How many new things do not come out of mankind? And if man does not give his new act as continuous, but at intervals, it is because he does not let himself be dominated by my Divine Will. How beautiful was the creation of man - there was Our creative, preserving and active act; We infused in him, as life, Our Divine Will in his soul, and We created Our Love as blood of his soul.

“This is why We love him so much - because he is not only Our work, like an the rest of Creation, but he possesses part of Our Life, in a real way; We feel in him the Life of Our Love. How not to love him? Who does not love one’s own things? And if one did not love them, he would go against nature. Therefore, Our Love toward man gives of the incredible; but the reason is clear: We love him because he came out of Us, he is our child, and a birth from Our very Selves. And if man does not exchange his love with Ours, if he does not surrender his will to Us, to keep Ours, he is more than barbarous and cruel against his Creator and against himself, because, not recognizing his Creator and not loving Him, he forms a maze of miseries, of weaknesses, inside and outside of himself, and he loses his true happiness. And by rejecting Our Divine Will, he puts himself at a distance from his Creator, he destroys the principle of his creation, consuming the blood of Our Love in his soul, to let the poison of his human will flow in it. Therefore, until Our Will is recognized and forms Its Kingdom in the midst of creatures, man will always be a disordered being, and without the likeness of the One who created him.”

* * *

November 14, 1929

How the rights of Creation are just and holy. Example of the sun, and how one who lives in the Divine Will is the true sun.

I am always in my dear inheritance of the Divine Fiat. The deeper I remain in It, the more I feel like loving It; the more I move within It, the more It unveils Itself - the more It makes Itself known, and says to me: “Live always in your precious inheritance, which was given to you with so much love. It is yours - It will always be yours, inseparable from you; nor will I ever permit that my little daughter not feel the heartbeat of my Light, the breath of my balsamic air, the Life of my Divine Will.”

But while my little mind was wandering within the Divine Volition, my lovable Jesus, coming out from within that same Light of the Divine Fiat, told me:

“My daughter, because the sun possesses the strength of the unity of its light, given to it by its Creator, its light is not subject to separating, and not even to dispersing one little drop of its light. Therefore, by virtue of this one strength of light that the sun possesses, there is nothing it touches and invests to which it does not give its precious effects. The sun seems to play with the earth; it gives its kiss of light to each creature, to each plant; it embraces everything with its heat, it seems to blow and communicate colors, sweetness, flavors. And while it abounds so much in giving its effects, it is also jealous in not giving up to anyone even just one drop of the so much light it possesses. And why this? Because it wants to maintain the rights of its creation and disperse nothing of what God gave it. Oh! if the sun dispersed its light, it would end up happening, little by little, that it would no longer be sun. The first rights of how all things were created, including man, are sacred, are holy and just; and, with justice, all should stick to the first act, as they were created. Only man was unable to maintain for himself the great honor of the way he was created by God; but this cost him so much, and therefore all evils swooped down upon him.

“Now, my daughter, one who lives in my Divine Will possesses the rights of her creation, and therefore, more than sun, she lives in the unity of her Creator; she is the reproducer of the effects of the divine unity. In this unity she gathers everything, embraces everyone, warms everyone, and with the breath of the divine unity she produces in the hearts of creatures all the effects that are present in the kingdom of grace. But while, more than sun, she plays in touching everything, with her touches she gives sanctity, virtue, love, divine sweetness; she would want to enclose everyone in the unity of her Creator. But while she wants to give everything, jealous, she preserves for herself the rights of her creation - that is, the Will of her Creator as her first act and the origin of her creation; and she says to all: ‘I cannot descend from within the Divine Fiat, nor do I want to lose even one drop of It - I would lose my rights, which I do not want to do. Rather, come up, all of you, and one will be the Will of all; in this way we will live common life. But for as long as you remain at the low level of the human will, like sun, I will give you the effects of the Divine Will; however, Its Life will be always mine, praying and waiting for all of you in the Will of our Creator.’ One who lives in my Will is the true sun, which is such that apparently one sees nothing but light and feels nothing but heat, but how many goods are there not inside that light and heat? How many effects? The life and the goods of the earth are enclosed inside that light and heat. In the same way, with one who lives in my Divine Fiat, apparently one sees a creature, but inside there is a Divine Will that sustains everything - Heaven and earth, and does not want to keep inactive the one who possesses such a great good.”

* * *

November 20, 1929

How peace is the fragrance, the air, the breath of Jesus. How the works of God are all ordered. How He does minor things first, and then greater things. Example of Creation and Redemption.

I was concerned about this blessed printing of the Divine Will, and at any cost I would have wanted to prevent some other things that regarded me, and many other things that my beloved Jesus told me, from being printed. I feel a nail driven inside my soul, which embitters me deep into the marrow of my bones. So, I was thinking to myself: “Blessed Jesus could have spoken of His adorable Will first, and then of all the rest. In this way He would have spared me this sorrow that pierces me so much.” But while I was pouring out my bitternesses, my always lovable Jesus, all goodness, clasped me in His arms and told me:

“My daughter, courage, do not lose peace; peace is my fragrance, my air, it is the effect that my breath produces. So, in the soul in whom there is no peace I do not feel I am in my royal palace - I feel uncomfortable. My very Divine Will, which is peace by nature, finds Itself like the sun when clouds advance against the light and prevent the sun from shining in its fullness over the earth. It can be said that when the soul is not all peace, whatever the circumstances might be, it is like a rainy day for her, and the Sun of my Will feels as though hindered from communicating to her Its Life, Its heat, Its Light. Therefore, calm yourself, and don't form for Me clouds in your soul - they hurt Me, and I cannot say: 'I am in this creature with perennial peace, with my joys, and with my Light of my Celestial Fatherland.'

"Now, daughter of my Volition, you must know that I am order, and therefore all of my works are ordered. Look at how ordered is Creation. The purpose of Creation was man, yet I did not create man as first; had I done it I would not have been orderly. Where to put this man? Where to place him? Without the sun that would illuminate him, without the pavilion of the heavens that would function as room for him, without plants that would nourish him, everything was disorder, and my Fiat reordered and created everything; and after It formed the most beautiful dwelling, It created man. Does the order of your Jesus not show in this? Now, for you also I was to maintain order, and even though Our primary purpose was to make known to you Our Divine Will, that It might reign in you like King in His royal palace, and as It would give you Its divine lessons, you might be the herald in making It known to others, yet, like in Creation, it was necessary to prepare the heaven of your soul, studding it with stars through the many sayings of the beautiful virtues which I manifested to you. I had to descend to the low level of your human will in order to empty it, purify it, embellish it, and reorder it in everything. It can be said that those were many sorts of creations that I was doing in you. I was to make the ancient disordered earth of your human will disappear in order to call back the order of the Divine Fiat in the depth of your interior, which, making the ancient earth of your whole being disappear, would make heavens, suns, seas of surprising truths rise again with Its creative strength. And you know how all this was matured through the cross, through segregating you from everything, making you live on earth as if it were not earth for you, but Heaven, keeping you always absorbed, either with Me, or in the Sun of my Divine Fiat.

"Therefore, everything I have done in you has been nothing other than the order which was needed in order to give you the great gift of my Divine Will, as it was given to the first man at the beginning of his creation. And this is why there were so many preparations - because they were to serve that man who was to possess the great gift of Our Will as his beloved inheritance, symbol of the great preparations made in your soul. Therefore, adore my dispositions and thank Me by being faithful to Me.

"Another example is my Redemption, and how it is necessary to do secondary works in order to obtain the intent of forming the primary works of a goal We have set. My descent upon earth, taking on human flesh, was precisely this - to lift up humanity again and give to my Divine Will the rights to reign in this humanity, because by reigning in my Humanity, the rights of both sides, human and divine, were placed in force again. Yet, it can be said that I said nothing about it, or just a few words, making it understood that I had come into the world only to do the Will of the Celestial Father, so as to make Its great importance be comprehended. And in another circumstance I said: 'Those who do the Will of my Father are my mother, my sisters, and belong to Me.' As for the rest, I kept silent, while the purpose was precisely this, of constituting the Kingdom of my Divine Will in the midst of creatures. In fact, it was right that I not only was to place creatures in safety, but I also was to place my Divine Will in safety, by giving back to It Its rights over all flesh, as I had given It over mine; otherwise, there would have been a disorder in the work of Redemption. How could I come to place creatures in safety, and let Our divine rights, those of Our Fiat, go to rack and ruin? This could not be. But even though the first purpose was to balance all the accounts of my Divine Will, as Celestial Doctor I complied with giving medicines, remedies, I spoke about forgiveness, about detachment, I instituted Sacraments, I suffered atrocious pains, even unto death. It can be said that this was the new creation I prepared so that creatures might receive my Divine Will as King in the midst of His people, in order to let It reign. So I have done with you; first I prepared you, I spoke to you about crosses, about virtues, about love, to dispose you to listen to the lessons of my Fiat, so that, by knowing It, you would love It, and feeling within yourself the great good of Its Life, you would want to give Its Life to all, making It known, loved, and letting It reign.”

* * *

November 26, 1929

Each act that is done in the Divine Will is a Divine Life that one encloses. How the creature enraptures God.

I was feeling very afflicted because of the continuous privations of my sweet Jesus; I felt everything missing in me without Him. With Jesus everything is mine, everything belongs to me, it seems to me that I am in the house of Jesus, and He, sweetly, with an admirable gentleness, says to me:

“All that is mine is yours. Even more, I do not want you to say to me: ‘Your heavens, your sun, your many created things’, but you must say to me: ‘Our heavens, our sun, our Creation’. In fact, in my Divine Will you were creating with me, and continuing your life in It, you offered yourself together with Me in preserving It. Therefore, my daughter, everything is ours - everything is ours, and if you do not consider what is mine as fully your own, you place yourself at due distance, and you show that you are not one from the Celestial Family, and that you do not live in the house of your Divine Father, and you would break the familiar bond with your Jesus.”

So, without Him I feel myself put out of His Family, out of His house, and - oh! what a dismal and sorrowful change I feel in my poor soul. I feel I am without the One who alone can give me life. I experience the true abandonment and what it means to be without Jesus. Oh! how the exile weighs upon me, and I feel, vividly, the extreme need of my Celestial Fatherland.

But while many oppressing thoughts crowded my mind, wounding my little and poor soul and reducing it as if it were in extreme agony, my dear Life, my sweet Jesus, rose like Sun; the oppressing thoughts fled, and with a sweet tone He told me:

“My daughter, courage, do not lose heart too much; don’t you know that you must cover your way in my Divine Will? And this way is long, and these oppressions of yours, these thoughts that crowd within you, are stops that you make; and even though you do not go out of It, yet the journey you should make is somehow arrested, and your Jesus does not want this moving back - He wants you to walk always, without ever stopping. In fact, you must know that each step you take in my Divine Will is a Divine Life that you enclose; so, one step less is one Divine Life that is not formed; and you deprive Our Supreme Being of the glory, of the love, of the happiness and satisfaction that another same Life of Ours can give Us; and if you knew what it means to give Us the glory, the love, the happiness of Our very Life! With the strength of Our own Will, as the fortunate creature has the great good of living in It, We feel Ourselves being enraptured, and her enrapturing strength is such and so great, that We bilocate Our Divine Being and We enclose It in the step, in the act, in the little love of the creature, to have Our highest contentment of receiving, through her, Our Life, Our glory, and all Our goods. Therefore, when, you always walk in Our Will, We feel the sweet enchantment of your enrapturing that you do to Us; while when you do not walk, We do not feel the enchantment of your enrapturing, the sweet treading of your steps, and We say: 'The little daughter of Our Will is not walking, and therefore We do not feel within Ourselves her sweet enrapturing of her acts.' And promptly I reprimand you by saying to you: 'Daughter, walk - do not stop; Our Fiat is continuous motion, and you must follow It.'

"So, you must know that this is the great difference between one who lives in Our Divine Volition and one who is resigned and, in the circumstances, does Our Divine Will: the first one, it is Divine Lives that she offers to Us by means of her acts; the other one, in operating, encloses the effects of Our Will, and We do not feel within Ourselves Our very enrapturing strength that enraptures Us in her acts, but only the effects; not the whole of Our Love, but a small particle of It; not the source of Our happiness, but its mere shadow. And from Life to effects there is such difference - just as between life and works. Who can say that a work has all the value that a life of creature can possess? Much less can the Divine Life formed by the creature in my Divine Will be compared with her works done outside of It."

* * *

November 30, 1929

Condition of man before sinning. How in each of His acts he looked for God, he found His Creator, he gave and received. How the human will is night for the soul.

I was beginning my round in the Divine Will according to my usual way, and wanting to reorder all Created Intelligences in order with God, from the first to the last man that will come to earth, I was saying: 'I place my 'I love You' upon each thought of creature, so that, in each thought, I may ask for the dominion of the Divine Fiat over each intelligence.' But while I was doing this, I thought to myself: 'How can I arrive at pearling each thought of creature with my 'I love You'?' And my sweet Jesus, moving in my interior, told me:

"My daughter, with my Will you can do anything, and can reach anything. Now, you must know that, before sinning, in each thought he made, in each gaze, word, work, step, heartbeat, man gave his act to God, and God gave His continuous act to man. So, his condition was of always giving to His Creator, and of always receiving. There was such harmony between Creator and creature that, on both sides, they could not be without one giving and the other receiving, to then give his act again, be it even a thought, a gaze. Therefore, each thought of man looked for God, and God ran to fill his thought with grace, with sanctity, with light, with life, with Divine Will. It can be said that the smallest act of man loved and recognized the One who had given him life, and God loved him back by requiting him with His Love, and by making His Divine Will grow in each act of man, small and great. He was incapable of receiving the Divine Life all at once - he was too narrow, and God gave It to him sip by sip, in each act he did for love of Him, taking delight in giving him always, to form

His Divine Life in him. Therefore, each thought and act of man poured into God, and God poured into him. This was the true order of Creation: to find His Creator in man, in each act of his, so that He might be able to give him His light and what He had established to give him. Our Divine Will, present in Us and in him, made Itself the bearer of one and of the other, and forming the full day in him, It placed in common the goods of both. How happy was the condition of man when Our Divine Fiat reigned in him. It can be said that he was growing on Our paternal knees, attached to Our breast, from which he drew growth and his formation.

“This is why I want that, in my Divine Volition, each thought of creature have your ‘I love You’ - to call back the order between Creator and creature. In fact, you must know that, by sinning, man not only rejected Our Fiat, but broke the love toward the One who had loved him so much; he put himself at a distance from His Creator, and a far away love cannot form life, because true love feels the need to be nourished by the love of the Beloved, and to remain so close as to be impossible for it to separate. So, the life of the love created by Us in creating man remained without nourishment and almost dying; more so, since every act he did without Our Divine Will was as many nights that he formed in his soul: if he thought, it was night that he formed; if he looked, spoke, and so forth everything was darkness, which formed a dark night. Without my Fiat there can be no day nor sun; at the most, a few tiny little flames, which can hardly guide his step.

“Oh! if they knew what it means to live without my Divine Will, even if they were not evil and did some good. The human will is always night for the soul, which oppresses her, embitters her, and makes her feel the weight of life. Therefore, be attentive, and let nothing escape you which does not enter into my Divine Fiat, which will make you feel the full day that will give you back the order of Creation. It will call back the harmony, which will place in force the continuous giving of your acts and the continuous receiving of your Creator; and embracing the whole human family, you will be able to impetrate that the order of the way in which they were created may come back, that the night of the human will may cease, and the full day of my Divine Will may arise.”

* * *

December 3, 1929

Difference between the sanctity founded in the virtues and the one founded in the Divine Will.

My little mind was wandering in the Supreme Fiat, and I was thinking to myself: ‘What can be the difference that passes between one who has founded his sanctity in the virtues, and one who has founded it only in the Divine Will?’ And my sweet Jesus, moving in my interior, sighing, told me:

“My daughter, if you knew what great difference exists.... Listen - and you yourself know this: the flowery earth is beautiful, the variety of the plants, of the flowers, of the fruits, of the trees, the diversity of colors, of sweetnesses, of flavors - everything is beautiful. But would you be able to find one plant, one flower, be it even one of the most precious, which is not surrounded by earth, as the earth keeps each root as though on its lap, attached to its breast to nourish it? It can be said that it is impossible for man to have a plant if he does not entrust it to its mother earth. Such is the sanctity founded in the virtues - the human earth has to place something of its own. How many human satisfactions in the holiest works, in the virtues that they practice. The earth of esteem, of human glory, always runs and forms its small receptacle, in such a way that the virtues appear as many beautiful fragrant flowers, of such vivid color as to arouse marvel, but around them, underneath them, there is always a little something of human earth. So, the sanctity founded in the virtues can be called flowery earth, and according to the virtues that they practice, some form the flower, some the plant, some the tree; and they need water to water them, and the sun to fecundate them and communicate to them the different effects needed for each one of them - that is, my Grace. Otherwise, they would run the risk of dying at birth.

“On the other hand, the Sanctity founded in my Divine Will is Sun - It is up high, the earth has nothing to do with It, nor does the water need to nourish Its light. It draws Its nourishment directly from God, and in Its continuous motion of light, It produces and nourishes all the virtues in a divine manner. Human satisfactions, even holy, vainglory, self-esteem, have lost the way, nor do they have any reason to exist, because they feel, vividly, the Divine Will that does everything in them, and they feel gratitude because this Divine Sun, lowering Itself, dwells in them, and nourishing them with Its Light, makes them undergo Its transformation, to form one single Light with this Divine Fiat.

“Furthermore, Its Light has the virtue of sweetly eclipsing the human will, because it is forbidden even for one atom of earth to enter into my Divine Volition; they are two opposite natures - light and earth, darkness and light, It can be said that they shun each other, nor can the light tolerate even just one atom of earth; and therefore it eclipses it, it serves as its sentry, as defense, so that all may become Divine Will in the creature. And just as the sun gives everything to the earth, but receives nothing and is the primary cause of its beautiful flowerings, in the same way, those who found their life, their sanctity in my Will, together with It are the nourishers of the sanctity founded in the virtues.”

After this, I was doing my round in the Divine Fiat, to find all the acts of creatures, past, present and future, so as to ask, in the name of all, for the Kingdom of the Divine Will. But while I was doing this, my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, anything good that has been done from the very beginning of the world outside of my Divine Will, are little lights, as the effects of my Divine Fiat. In fact, even though they have not operated inside of It, as creatures would dispose themselves to do good, Its rays would fix themselves upon them, and, at Its reflections, the tiny little flame would form in their souls, because, since my Will is eternal and immense light, It can produce but light. These little flames, as the effects of It, remain around the Sun of my Divine Will as honor and glory of Its effects, and as the fruits of the good operating of the creatures. In fact, as they want to do good, Its rays fix themselves upon them, and give them the effects of the good they want to do. It can be said It is more than sun, which is such that, as it finds the good seed in the earth, its light warms it, caresses it and communicates to it the effects to form the plant of that seed. There is no good without my Will; just as there is no color, sweetness, maturity, without the effects of the light of the sun, so there can be no good without It. However, who can form the Sun with her acts? One who lives in my Divine Will. My Will not only fixes Its rays upon her, but descends in her with the whole of Its Sun, and with Its creative and vivifying virtue, It forms another Sun in the act of the creature. Do you see, then, the great difference that exists? Just like between plants and sun, and between sun and little flames.”

December 10, 1929

Perfect balance of God in His works. Triple balance.

I was feeling all abandoned in the Divine Will, and continuing to do my acts in It, I heard a voice that whispered to my ear: "How tired I am." I felt stirred by this voice, and I wanted to know who it might be that was tired; and my sweet Jesus, moving and making Himself heard in my interior, told me:

"My daughter, it is I Myself - I who feel all the weight of so much waiting; and this produces such tiredness in Me, that I feel all the weight of wanting to do good and not being able to do it because of the lack of disposition of those who must receive it. Oh! how hard it is wanting to do good, having it prepared and ready to give it, and finding no one who would receive it.

"Now, you must know that, when my Fiat places Itself in the act of operating, It has the same Power, Wisdom, Immensity and multiplicity of effects which Its single act produces. If only It decides to go out into Its divine field of action, Its act possesses balance between one and the other, and contains the same value, weight and measure. My Divine Will, in going out into Its field of action in Creation, made display of such great magnificence of works, so much so, that man himself is incapable of numbering them all and of comprehending the right value of each work. And even though he sees them, touches them and enjoys Its beneficial effects, yet he can be called the first little ignorant one of Creation. Who can tell how much light and heat the sun contains; how many effects it produces, and what the light is formed of? No one. Yet, all see it and feel its heat; and so with all other things. Now, my Redemption hold hands with Creation, and possesses as many acts for as many as Creation possesses; they are in perfect balance, one with the other, because Creation was an act of my Divine Will, and an act of It was Redemption. Now, having to do another of Its acts in the great Fiat Voluntas Tua on earth as It is in Heaven, many other acts are there ready in my Divine Fiat, in such a way that they will have the triple balance of acts, the same value, weight and measure. And in seeing Myself forced to wait, and feeling within Myself the multiplicity of the acts I want to do, and not doing them because the Kingdom of my Fiat is not known and does not reign on earth, I feel such tiredness, that I become fidgety and I say: 'How is it possible that they do not want to receive my goods?' And I remain afflicted because my acts, the power of my Divine Volition, Its light, Its happiness and beauty, do not bind themselves as brothers with the creatures, and do not run into their midst. Therefore, compassionate Me if you see Me and hear Me taciturn; it is the too much tiredness I feel from so much waiting that reduces Me to silence."

* * *

December 16, 1929

How Jesus had need of nothing, possessing within Himself the strength creative of all goods. How the Divine Volition is the bearer of all created things. The generative virtue.

I was continuing my round in the Divine Fiat, to unite myself to all the acts done by It for love of us all, Its creatures. But as I arrived at the point in which my lovable Jesus descended into the lowliness of the human acts, such as suckling the milk from His Mama, taking food, drinking water, and lowering Himself even to work, I felt amazed in seeing that Jesus, by His nature, had need of nothing, because, possessing within Himself the strength creative of all goods, He could do without making use of the very things created by Him. But while I was thinking of this, my sweet Jesus, making Himself seen and heard in my interior, told me:

“My daughter, you are right that I had need of nothing, but my Love, having descended from the height of the Heavens to the lowliness of the earth, could not remain quiet nor still - I felt the irresistible need to let my Love out, and to love in those very acts which the creature did by necessity; while I did them to let my Love run toward her, and so be able to say to her: ‘See how much I have loved you; I wanted to descend into your littlest acts, in your necessities, in your work - in everything, to tell you that I love you, give you my Love and receive your love.’

“But do you want to know the primary reason for which I lowered Myself so much in doing so many lowly and human acts? Necessity did not exist in Me, but I did it in order to fulfill, in each act, the Divine Will. All things would present themselves before Me for what they were in themselves where they had come from, sealed by the Divine Fiat, and I would take them because it was wanted by It. It can be said that there was a contest between my Divine Will which, by nature, as Word of the Celestial Father, I possessed within Me, and my same Divine Will spread in the whole Creation. So, in all things, I knew and saw nothing but my Divine Will; It was my food, my water, my work everything would disappear from Me, and it was always my Divine Will that I would deal with. And while my Divine Will would make Me descend into the human acts of creatures, I would call all the human acts of each one of them, that they might receive the great gift of having my Divine Volition descend as prime act and as life of their acts. Oh! if creatures looked at created things for what they are in themselves - their origin, Who it is that nourishes them and preserves them, and Who the Bearer is of so many things that serve the human life - oh! how they would love my Divine Will and would take the substance of created things. But they look at the exteriority of things, and therefore they attach their hearts to them, and feed themselves from the cortex of them, losing the substance present inside created things, which came out of Us so as to let creatures perform many acts of Our Divine Will.

“But, to my sorrow, I am forced to see that creatures do not take the food, the water, nor perform their work in order to receive and fulfill my Divine Volition, but out of necessity and to satisfy their human will. And my Divine Fiat is put out of their acts, while We created so many things in order to place Our Divine Will as though in a bank in the midst of creatures; and by not using It, they keep It as though in a continuous act of bankruptcy. All the good which they should take if in all things they fulfilled and took my Divine Will, remains broken for them, and We remain with the sorrow of not seeing It as dominator and Queen of all the human acts of creatures.”

Then, I continued my abandonment in the Divine Fiat. I felt the great need of It and of remaining always in Its sea of light, never to go out. I felt It like heartbeat, like breath, like air that infused life in me and maintained in me the order, the harmony, the dissolving of my little atom within Its Divine Sea. But while my little mind was crowded with thoughts of Divine Will, my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, there is no order, nor rest, nor true life, but in my Divine Fiat. In fact, the life of each creature, her first act of life, is formed within the womb of her Creator; and then, as a birth from Us, We put it out into the light of the day. And since We have within Ourselves the generative virtue, as a child of Ours, it carries with itself the seed that generates; and with this seed the creature forms many other births; and as she keeps carrying out her life, she forms the birth of her holy thoughts, of her chaste words, of the beautiful enchantment of her works, of the sweet treading of her steps, of the refulgent rays of her heartbeats. And as all these births are formed from the creatures they take their way to ascend to their Creator, to recognize Him as their Father, to love Him, surround Him by cortege, and form His long offspring, as Our glory and that of Our generative virtue. But in order for Our generative virtue to fecundate, it takes Our Divine Will, dominating in the birth come out of Us, otherwise there is the danger for it to be transformed into a brute, and to lose the virtue generative of good; and if it generates, it generates passions, weaknesses, vice; and these not only do not have the virtue of ascending to Us, but, on the contrary, they are condemned as births that do not belong to Us.”

* * *

December 18, 1929

Ardor of Love. Specialties of the three ardors of Love of Our Lord. The devouring Love, and how It devoured all souls. Tears of Baby Jesus.

I was thinking about the Incarnation of my sweet Jesus in the maternal womb of the Celestial Sovereign; and my sweet Jesus, coming out of my interior, clasped me in His arms with an unspeakable tenderness, and told me:

“My daughter, Creation was ardor of Love, and was so intense and great, that overflowing from Our Divine Being, it invested the whole universe and diffused everywhere. And Our Fiat, pronouncing Itself and operating in this, Our race of Love - that ran and ran without being able to stop if not when It spread everywhere and gave its first kiss of love to all creatures, who did not yet exist; its kiss of love was kiss of joy, of happiness, which it impressed on all generations - and Our Divine Fiat, that ran together with it, did not content Itself with only kisses, but, pronouncing itself, formed suns, heavens, stars, seas and earth, and everything that can be seen in the great void of the universe. So, the ardor of Our Love in Creation was ardor of celebrating love, of happiness, of joy, with which We were to play with and delight all creatures. On the other hand, in incarnating Myself in the maternal womb, Our ardor of Love which, as We could not contain it, overflowed from Us and did the same race as in Creation, was ardor of love, of tenderness, of compassion, of mercy, and it put at risk the Life of a God in order to find man and give him its kisses of love, tender and compassionate; its kisses of forgiveness; and enclosing the life of all creatures within its sea of love, it gave them the kiss of life, laying down its life of love to give life to man. Our Love reached the excess in the Incarnation, because It was not, as in Creation, love that celebrates, that rejoices, but sorrowful love, suffering love, sacrificed love, that would give its life to make a prey of the life of man.

“But Our Love is not yet content. Place your hand upon my Heart and feel how strongly It beats, to the point that I feel It explode. Prick up your ears and hear how It seethes, almost like a stormy sea which, forming its gigantic waves, wants to overflow outside to invade everything and everyone. It wants to do Its third race of Love, and in this ardor of Love It wants to form the Kingdom of my Divine Will. This ardor of Love of Ours will unite together that of Creation and that of my Incarnation, and will make them one; and it will be ardor of triumphing love, and will give its kiss of triumphant love, of conquering love, of love that wins over everything to give its kiss of perennial peace, its kiss of light that will put to flight the night of the human will, and will make the full day of my Divine Will arise, which will be the bearer of all goods. How I long for it; Our Love seethes so much within Me, that I feel the necessity to let It overflow outside. And if you knew what relief I feel when, pouring It out with you, I speak to you of my Divine Volition.... The ardor of my Love, that gives Me the delirious fever, calms down; and feeling refreshment, I put Myself at work so that all may be my Will in your soul. Therefore, be attentive, and let Me do.”

After this, my poor mind was wandering within the Love of my sweet Jesus, and I saw, before me, a great wheel of light, burning more than fire, which contained as many rays for as many creatures as had come and will come out to the light of the day. And these rays invested each creature and, with sweet enrapturing strength, captured them into the center of the great wheel of light, where there was Jesus, waiting for them from the womb of His Love in order to devour them - not to make them die, but to enclose them within His little Humanity, so as to make them be reborn, grow and to nourish them with His devouring flames to give them new life - the life all of love. My little Jesus, just newly conceived, enclosed within Himself the great birth of all generations - more than a tender mother who encloses the birth from herself - to deliver it to the light, formed by His Love, but with unheard-of pains, and even with His death.

Then, my tender Jesus, the middle of that chasm of flames, so very little, told me:

“Look at Me and listen to Me. My daughter, in the middle of this chasm of flames I breathe nothing but flames; and in my breath I feel that the flames of my devouring Love bring Me the breath of all creatures. My tiny little Heart palpitates flames which, extending, capture the heartbeats of all creatures and place them inside my Heart; and I feel all heartbeats palpitating in my little Heart. Everything is flames - flames spout my tiny little hands, my immobile little feet. Ah! how demanding is my Love! In order to enclose Me completely and make Me give life to all, It put Me in the middle of a devouring fire, and - oh! how vividly I feel the sins, the miseries, the pains of all. I am still little, yet, I am spared nothing! I can say: ‘All evils have fallen inside and outside of Me.’ And in the midst of these devouring flames, loaded with so many pains, I look at everyone and, crying, I exclaim: ‘My Love has given Me everyone back as gift; It gave them to Me in Creation, and they escaped from Me; It gives them to Me again in conceiving Me in the womb of my Mama. But, am I sure that, they will not escape from Me? Will they be mine forever? Oh! how happy I would be if all would not escape from Me. Their pains would be refreshment for Me if all of my dear children, the dear birth from Me, conceived in my little Humanity, were safe.’ And, crying and sobbing, I looked each one in the face to move them with my tears; and I repeated: ‘My dear children, do not leave Me, don’t go away from Me any more; I am your Father, do not abandon Me. O please! recognize Me, have pity at least on the fire that devours Me, on my ardent tears - and all because of you, because I love you too much, I love you as God, I love you as most passionate Father, I love you as my Life.’

“But do you know, little daughter of my Divine Volition, what was the greatest interest of my Love? That of devouring, in creatures, their human will, because it is the origin of all evils, and in spite of all Its devouring flames, it formed clouds so as not to let itself be burned. Oh! what tortured Me the most was the human will, which not only formed clouds, but formed the most sorrowful scenes in my very Humanity. Therefore, pray that my Divine Will be known and reign in it; and then will you be able to call Me the happy Jesus. Otherwise, my tears will not cease, I will always have reason to cry over the lot of poor humanity, as it lies under the nightmare of its miserable will.”

* * *

December 22, 1929

How the greatest works cannot be done on one's own, for they would die at birth. The three prisons of Jesus. The two mamas.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues, and my tender Jesus, making Himself seen as a tiny little Baby, either in my heart or in the womb of the Celestial Mama, but so very tiny, with an enrapturing beauty, all love, with His face wet with tears - and He cries because He wants to be loved - sighing, tells Me:

“Ah! ah! why am I not loved? I want to renew in souls all the love I had in incarnating Myself, but I find no one to whom to give it. In incarnating Myself I found my Queen Mama who gave Me the field to pour out my love and to receive in Her maternal Heart all the love that creatures rejected from Me. Ah! She was the depository of my rejected love, the sweet company of my pains, Her ardent love that dried my tears. The greatest works cannot be done on one's own, but two or three at least are needed, as depositories and nourishment of the work itself. Without nourishment works cannot have life - there is the danger that they might die at birth. This is so true that, in Creation, there were the Three of Us, Divine Persons, in creating It; and then We made man as the depository of Our work. Not content, because works alone do not bring happiness, We gave him the company of the woman. In the Incarnation, the Three Divine Persons were concurring, and in my company - or rather, They were inseparable from Me, with the addition of the Celestial Queen; and She Herself was the divine depository of all the goods of the Incarnation. See, then, how the company of the creature is necessary to Me in order to form my works - a creature who would place herself at my disposal in order to receive the great good I want to give her. So, do you want to be my second mama? Do you want to receive the great good of the renewing of my Incarnation, as the endowment of the Kingdom of my Divine Fiat? In this way I will have two mamas - the first, who let Me form the Kingdom of Redemption; the second, who will let Me form the Kingdom of my Divine Will.” And placing His tiny little hands on my face, caressing me, told me: “My mama! my mama! Maternal love surpasses all loves; so, you will love Me with insuperable love of mother.”

After this, He kept silent, wanting to be rocked in my arms; and then, He added:

“My daughter, now, you must know the excess of my love - where it led Me. In descending from Heaven to earth it led Me into a most narrow and dark prison, which was the womb of my Mama. But my love was not content; within this very prison it formed for Me another jail, which was my Humanity, which jailed my Divinity. The first prison lasted nine months for Me; the second prison of my Humanity lasted for Me as many as thirty-three years. But my love did not stop; toward the end of the prison of my Humanity it formed for Me the prison of the Eucharist, the smallest of prisons - a little host in which it imprisoned Me, Humanity and Divinity; and I would have content Myself with being there as though dead, letting not one breath, not a movement, nor a heartbeat be heard - and not for a few years, but until the consummation of centuries. So, I went from prison to prison - they are inseparable from Me; therefore I can be called the Divine Inmate, the Celestial Prisoner. In the first two prisons, in the intensity of my love I matured the Kingdom of Redemption; in the third prison of the Eucharist I am maturing the Kingdom of my Divine Fiat. And this is why I called you to the prison of your bed, so that, together, both of us prisoners, in our solitude, bonding together, we may make the good of the Kingdom of my Will mature. If a Mama was necessary to Me for Redemption, so also do I need a mama for the Kingdom of my Fiat, and my demanding love wanted this mother as imprisoned, so as to keep her at my disposal. Therefore, I will be your Prisoner, not only in the little host, but also in your heart; and you will be my dear prisoner, all intent on listening to Me and on breaking the loneliness of my long imprisonment. And even though we are prisoners, we will be happy, because we will mature the Kingdom of the Divine Will to give It to creatures.”

* * *

December 24, 1929

When Jesus speaks of His truths He unleashes light. The truths, read and reread, are like wrought iron. Run of the Divine Will.

I was thinking about all that my sweet Jesus, with so much goodness, deigns to tell to my poor soul, and which, as reread them in the circumstances, sparkle with light. And my always lovable Jesus told me:

“My daughter, when I speak I unleash light of truth, and I want that it be accepted and caressed by the soul. If this light is accepted and put in a place of honor in her interior, it calls for another light; so, one calls for another. Otherwise, it goes back to its source. And when the soul returns to read them, if they are written, and to ponder them, my truths are like wrought iron - as the iron is beaten, it becomes red-hot and gives out sparkles of light; while, if is not beaten, the iron is hard, black, and an ice-cold metal. So it is with my truths; if the soul reads them over and over again in order to suck the substance that is inside my truths that have been communicated to her soul which is symbolized by the iron, its blackness and coldness - she remains red-hot; and by pondering them, she strikes blows over herself, who has received the good of hearing my truth, which, feeling honored, sparkles with light of more truths. But if my manifested truths are put into oblivion, nor are they put in a place of honor, they remain as though buried. But the living are not buried; in fact, they are light which possesses and brings life; therefore, since they are not subject to dying, the time will come in which others will treasure them, and will condemn those who have kept them in oblivion and as though buried. If you knew how much light there is in everything I have manifested to you on my Divine Will, and how much more light would sparkle if they were read and reread, you yourself would remain eclipsed and amazed at the great good they would do.”

Then, I was continuing my acts in the Divine Volition, and as I was thinking about the loneliness of Jesus in the womb of His Mama. He added:

“My daughter, how sweet and pleasing to Me is the company of the creature. Since my descent from Heaven to earth was precisely for her - to find her, to make her my own, keeping her in my company - I feel it as though repaid. However, know that if I am content with the mere company of the creature who loves Me and tries to break my loneliness, with one who lives in my Divine Will I am not content - I want her always together with Me, as spectator of my baby tears, of my moans, of my sobs, my pains, works and steps, and also of my joys, because I want to make the deposit of them in her. In fact, my Will being in her, it would be too hard for Me if I did not have her always together with Me, keeping her aware of everything. My Divine Will feels the irresistible need to share with the creature everything It does in my Humanity, so that the Will which reigns in Me and that which reigns in the creature might not be a divided Will. And this is the reason why I call you in each of my acts and I want you to know what I have done and do - so as to give it to you as gift and be able to say: 'The one who lives in my Divine Will never leaves Me - we are clasped and inseparable'."

And I: 'My Love, your run of love never stops; You run - You run always, and I feel I am incapable of doing my runs of love as You do them - I am too little and do not have the flight of running everywhere to love You.' And my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, you too can do runs of love in the immense sea of my Divine Will. You will act as a ship does: when it wants to cross the sea, it plunges into the sea, the waters split and let it pass; and while it moves quickly, it leaves a white wake behind itself, as the sign that the ship is passing through that point of the sea; and then, little by little, the wake disappears, and no sign is left that the ship ever passed. But, in spite of this, the ship has done its run in the sea, and has arrived there where it had established to go. In the same way, if the soul wants to love, she will plunge into the sea of my Divine Fiat and will form her run of love; she will go around all eternity, and it will not happen to her as to the ship - that nothing remains in the sea of its having passed, as the waters, proud, close from behind, leaving no trace that the ship ever passed. On the contrary, in the sea of my Divine Volition, as the soul plunges into It to do her run, Our divine waters seethe, and in their gurgling they form the furrow, which does not disappear, but the sign remains, and it points out to everyone her run of love done within Our sea, in such a way that We are able to say: 'Through here passed, and did her run of love, the one who lives in Our Will, because what is done in It remains as indelible.'"

"In the same way, if you want to do your adorations, if you want to be embellished, if you want to be sanctified, if you want to be powerful, wise - plunge yourself into Our Will, and while you do your run, you will remain all love, all beautiful, all holy; you will acquire the science of who your Creator is, and all your motions will be profound adorations. And you will leave in Our sea as many furrows for as many different runs as you have done in the Divine Fiat, in such a way that We will say: 'In this run that the little daughter of Our Divine Volition did in Our sea, she formed the furrow of sanctity, and We sanctified her and she remained holy; in this other run she plunged into the sea of Our beauty and formed her furrow, and We embellished her and she remained embellished; in this other run she formed the furrow of Our knowledges, and she knew Us, and We spoke to her and made Ourselves known, and spoke to her at length of Our Divine Being; Our word bound her, identified her with Us, and We feel the irresistible need to make Ourselves known more and more, and to give her the greatest gift of manifesting to her Our truths. So, for each run you do in Our Supreme Fiat, you always take of Our own; and Our love, seething, speaks of you to Us, and points out to Us your runs with its gurgling, as the sign that you have been in Our divine sea.'"

* * *

December 25, 1929

How the birth of Jesus was the rebirth of the Divine Will in His Humanity, and everything He did were rebirths of It, formed in Him in order to make It be reborn in creatures. Jesus was the true Sacrificed One of His Will.

I was thinking of when my most sweet Baby Jesus, fidgeting with love, came out of the womb of His Celestial Mama. What joy for Her to be able to squeeze Him in Her arms, kiss Him, and engage in a contest in loving the One who so much loved Her. But while many thoughts were crowding my mind about the holy birth of the Divine Infant, I felt Him move in my interior, and coming outside, He placed Himself in my arms, and stretching out His tiny little hands to my neck, He told me: “My daughter, you too - kiss Me and squeeze Me to yourself, as I kiss you and squeeze you to Myself, and let us love each other with such contest of love as to never stop.” And abandoning Himself in my arms as a tiny little Baby, He remained silent. But who can say the squeezes, of love, the affectionate kisses? I believe it better to pass over them in silence.

Then, afterwards, resuming His speaking, He added:

“My daughter, my birth in time was the rebirth of my Divine Will in my Humanity; and as It was reborn in Me, It brought the good news of Its rebirth in the human generations. My Fiat is eternal, but it can be said that It was as though born in Adam in order to form the long generation of the rebirth in the creature. But since Adam rejected this Divine Will, by rejecting It, he prevented the many rebirths It was to have in each creature; and with constant and invincible love It waited for my Humanity in order to be born again in the midst of the human family. Therefore, everything I did in the whole course of my Life - the baby tears, my moans and wailings - were nothing other than rebirths of my Divine Will that were formed in Me so as to make It be reborn in creatures. In fact, It being reborn in Me, and possessing It as my own, I had the right and the power to give It and make It be reborn in the creature. So, everything that my Humanity would do - steps, works, words, pains, and even my breath, and my very death - formed as many rebirths of my Divine Will for as many creatures as would have the good of the rebirth of my Divine Fiat. Since I am the head of the human family, and it, my members, as the head I called with my acts - I called the many rebirths of my Divine Volition within Me, to let, them pass, to be reborn in my members, the creatures.

“Therefore, there was not one act I did - even my very Sacramental Life, each consecrated Host, are continuous rebirths of my Supreme Volition, which It prepares for the creature. So, I am the true Sacrificed One of a cause so holy - that my Will may reign. I Myself am the One who formed Its Kingdom within Me; and making It be reborn in Me as many times for as many creatures as It would be reborn in, I formed Its most holy empire and Its reigning in the midst of my members.

“Now, my daughter, after I placed the Kingdom of my Divine Will in safety within my Humanity, I had to manifest It in order to make It known. Therefore I came to you and I began to narrate to you the long story of my Divine Fiat. Now, you must know that I have made and I make so many manifestations, I have spoken so many truths, so many words, for as many rebirths, as my Will did in my Humanity. Its rebirths in Me and Its knowledges that I manifest to you Will be in perfect balance; each rebirth of my Divine Volition done in Me and in each consecrated Host will find a manifestation and a truth of Its own that confirms It, and will give It rebirth in the creature. In fact, in God the word forms the life of the good He wants to form in the creature; Our word is bearer of life. Was is not Our word ‘Fiat’ that, pronouncing Itself, created the heavens, the sun and everything that can be seen in the entire universe, and even the very life of man himself? Until We pronounced ‘Fiat’, everything was in Us; as It was pronounced, It populated heavens and earth with so many works, beautiful and worthy of Us, and It gave the start to the long generation of so many human lives. See, then, how everything I tell you on my Divine Will will bring, with the power of my creative word, Its many rebirths done in Me into the midst of the human family. Here is the great reason for a story so long and a speaking of mine so continuous. It will be in balance with everything that was done by Us in Creation, and with everything I did in Redemption. And if it seems that sometimes I remain silent, it is not because I have ceased my speaking, but because I take rest. In fact, it is my usual way to rest in my very word and works that come out of Me. Just as I did in Creation - It was not pronounced always; I would say 'Fiat' and I would pause, and then I would pronounce It again - so I do in you: I speak, I give you my lesson and I take rest; first, to enjoy in you the effects of my words; and to dispose you to receive the new life of my lesson. Therefore, be attentive, and let your flight in my Divine Will be continuous."

* * *

December 29, 1929

How, in descending from Heaven to earth, Jesus formed the new Eden. How the Divine Will has always been Queen.

I felt my little intelligence being as though captured and as though transported to look at my little newborn Jesus on the lap of my Celestial Mama - now crying, now wailing, now all numb, shivering with cold. Oh! how my little soul would want to melt in love in order to warm Him and calm His crying. But my celestial and charming Little Baby, calling me close to Himself in the arms of His Mama, told me:

"My daughter of the Divine Volition, come to listen to my lessons. In descending from Heaven to earth to form the Redemption, I was to form the new Eden; I was to restore the first act, and the beginning of the creation of man, in my Humanity. So, Bethlehem was the first Eden. I felt within my little Humanity all the strength of Our Creative Power, the ardor of Our Love with which man was created; I felt the fibers of his innocence, of his sanctity, of his dominion with which he was invested. I felt within Me that happy man - oh! how I loved him; and since he had lost his place of honor, I took back his place, because it was befitting for Me to first place in Me the order of how man was created, and then descend into his misfortune in order to lift him up again and place him in safety.

"Therefore, in Me there were two continuous acts, fused in one - the happy Eden with which I was to place in force all the beauty, the sanctity, the sublimity of the creation of man; he was innocent and holy, and I, surpassing him, was not only innocent and holy, but was the Eternal Word; and having within Me all possible and imaginable power, and an immutable Will, I was to completely reorder the beginning of the creation of man, and lift fallen man up again. Otherwise, I would not act as God, nor would I love him as Our work, come out and created in an ardor of Our Love. Our Love would feel stopped and as though impotent - which cannot be - had I not completely mended the lot of fallen man, and the destiny of the way he was created. It would have been a slash to Our Creation, and it would have accused Us of weakness, had We not restored man completely. Therefore, Bethlehem was my first Eden, in which I did and embraced all the acts that innocent Adam did, and those which he would have done had he not fallen. Our Divinity expected with justice my requital in his place; and as I kept redoing what innocent Adam would have done, so I lowered Myself and stretched out my hand to lift him up again from his fallen state.

"Therefore, as I would go around and stop, my Humanity did nothing other than form new Edens, because in Me there were all the acts of the beginning of the creation of man, and wherever I stopped

I could form new Edens with my innocence and holiness. So, Eden was Egypt, Eden was Nazareth, Eden was the desert, Eden was Jerusalem, Eden was mount Calvary; and these Edens that I formed called the Kingdom of my Divine Will to reign, and are sure proofs that, just as I fulfilled the Kingdom of Redemption and It is making Its round to be established in the whole world, so will these Edens, in which all acts were done by Me as if man had not fallen, follow the acts of Redemption, and will make their round to establish the Kingdom of my Divine Fiat. Therefore, I want you always together with Me, that you may follow Me in all my acts and offer everything so that my Divine Will may reign and dominate, because this is what interests your Jesus the most.

Then He added:

“My daughter, my Divine Will acted in Me as Queen, because indeed It has always been such. In fact, It is Queen by nature; in Our very Divinity It holds the first place, It rules and dominates all Our attributes; there is not one act of Ours in which It does not hold Its place of Queen. So, It is Queen in Heaven, on earth, in Creation - It reigns in everything and everywhere. Therefore, wanting that man would do Our Divine Will and would give It the place of Queen was the greatest honor and the most insuperable love that We gave him; and as one single Will would reign, We would let him sit at Our divine table, sharing Our divine goods with him. We wanted him happy, and wanted the glory of seeing him happy, whom We had created with so much love with Our creative hands. So, Our Divine Volition and Our Love could neither content themselves nor stop as the mere work of Redemption, but want to move forward, up to work-fulfilled; more so, since We know not how to leave works half-done, and having the centuries at Our disposal, We can reach wherever We want.”

* * *

January 2, 1930

Difference between acts and effects of the Divine Fiat. How many goods an act of It can produce. Example of the sun.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues, and carrying on my round in Its works, I was feeling all surrounded by them, and each of them was waiting for me to recognize them as works of my Creator, so as to bind ourselves together with inseparable bonds. It seemed to me that the Divine Will, with Its light, flowed in all Creation as our blood flows in the body, and so It also flowed in all the acts, words, steps, pains and tears of Jesus; and I went in search of everything as my own things, to love them and recognize them as things that belong to me. But while I was doing this, my sweet Jesus told me:

“My daughter, one who lives in my Divine Will is in communication with all things created by Us, because my Will is of all and belongs to all. Since one is the Will that dominates and operates, all things are to It like members to the body, whose Head is God, who has such bond with all things - because Our Divine Volition flows as prime act of life - that they are inseparable from Him. Only the human will, if it wants to operate on its own, without the union of Ours, can break this beautiful union, this bond of inseparability among God, created things and creatures. Therefore, my Divine Will is the bearer to the creature of all Our acts done in Creation and in Redemption; It is the revealer of Our secrets. Since Our Will is one with the creature who lives in It, how can It hide? And I, my daughter - how bad I would feel if I did not render you aware of my tears, of my inmost pains, and of what I did while I was on earth. And in my sorrow I would say: 'Not even the little daughter of my Will knows everything I have done and suffered so as to receive the requital, even of her little repeated 'I love You', and give her the gift of what belongs to Me.'

"Therefore, each thing you know of Me and you love as your own, I give to you as a gift; and making feast, I say: 'I have always something to give to my daughter, and she has always something to receive; therefore we shall always be together, because we are occupied in the exchange we make I, in giving, and she, in receiving'."

After this, I continued my round in all the good acts done from the beginning of the creation of all creatures, not excluding my first father Adam, so as to offer them in order to obtain the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon earth. And my sweet Jesus, moving in my interior, told me:

"My daughter, there is not one good thing that does not come from my Divine Will; however, there is difference between acts and effects of It. Creation was an act of my Fiat, and - oh! how many beautiful things came out: heavens, suns, stars, air, which was to serve for the natural life of the creature; sea, wind everything was fullness and multiplicity of works. In fact, one act of my Divine Will is capable of filling everything and of doing everything. The creation of man was an act of It - and what did It not enclose in the small circumference of man? Intelligence, eyes, hearing, mouth, word, heart, and even Our likeness, by which We made him the bearer of his Creator. How many prodigies does he not enclose? Not only this, but the whole Creation was placed around him to serve him, as if a first act of Our Fiat done in Creation wanted to serve the second act done in creating man. Another act of Our Divine Will was the creation of the Immaculate Virgin; the prodigies operated in Her were such and so great, that Heaven and earth were stupefied; so much so, that She arrived at making the Divine Word descend upon earth, which formed another act of my Fiat - and this was my Incarnation; and you know how it was the bearer of all goods to the human family.

"All the rest of the goods that there have been in the midst of creatures - virtues, prayers, good works, miracles - are effects of my Divine Volition, which act according to the dispositions of creatures, and therefore are always limited, nor with that fullness as to fill Heaven and earth. On the other hand, the acts of my Divine Fiat are independent of them, and therefore one can see the great difference between acts and effects. And this can be seen so very well also in the sun and among the effects it produces. The sun, as an act, is always fixed in its fullness of light, which, with majesty, fills the earth; nor does it ever cease to give its light and its heat; while the effects of the sun, which can be said to depend on the dispositions of the earth, are inconstant - now one sees the earth flowery, with the variety of all colors; now one sees it stripped and without beauty, as if the sun did not have the communicative virtue of always communicating its admirable effects to the earth; while it can be said that it is the earth's fault. The sun lacks nothing - what it was yesterday, it is today, and will be. Now, when I see you go around also in the effects of my Divine Fiat, as though wanting to miss nothing, so as to enclose them in It and give It the homages, the love of the effects It produces, to ask It to come upon earth to reign, you dispose Our Will to form another act of It. In fact, you must know that the Fiat Voluntas Tua on earth as It is in Heaven will be another act of Our Supreme Fiat; It will not be an effect, but an act - but with such magnificence, that all will remain stupefied.

"Now, you must know that man was created by Us with this prodigy - he was to possess within himself Our continuous act of Divine Will. By rejecting It, he lost the act and remained with the effects, because We knew that just as the earth cannot live without at least the effects that the sun produces, if it does not want to live in the fullness of its light and of its heat, so could man not live without at least the effects of Our Divine Will, since he had rejected the life It. Therefore, Its Kingdom will be nothing other than calling back the continuous act of Our Divine Fiat operating in the creature. And this is the reason for my long speaking about It - it is nothing other than the beginning of the continuous act of my Divine Fiat, which never ends when It wants to operate in the creature, and is so manifold in the works, in the beauty, in the grace and in the light, that Its boundaries cannot be seen. Therefore, continue going around in everything that my Divine Fiat has done and produces; and never tire, if you want to obtain a Kingdom so holy.”

Then He added:

“My daughter, just as the effects are produced by my sole and one Will, and they act according to the dispositions of the creature, so the acts of Our Divine Will, independent of them, are produced by the unity of the single act of Our Divine Fiat. So, in Us, the act is always one, because in Us there is no progression of acts; and if to the creature it seems that now We do the Creation, now the Redemption, and now We want to form the Kingdom of Our Divine Will in the midst of creatures, it is the manifestation that We make to them of what Our sole and one act possesses, such that, while to them it seems that We do and issue many distinct acts, for Us everything was enclosed in one single act. In the unity of Our Divine Volition, which encloses one single act, nothing can escape It - It encloses everything, It does everything, It embraces everything, and It is always one single act. Therefore, both the effects that Our Fiat produces, and the acts of It, always start from the unity of Our sole and one act.”

* * *

January 7, 1930

Exchange of gifts between God and the creature. How one who lives in the Divine Will is the divine bank upon earth and forms a nimbus of Heaven.

I was feeling all abandoned in the Supreme Fiat, and I thought to myself: ‘What could I give to my beloved Jesus? And He, immediately:

“Your will.”

And I: “My Love, I gave it to You, and, having given it, I believe I am no longer free to give it to You, because it is yours.’ And Jesus:

“My daughter, every time you would like to give me the gift of your will, I accept it as a new gift, because I leave the human will in its free willing, in such a way that the creature can be in the act of giving it to Me always. And I accept it as many times for as many as she gives it to Me, because she sacrifices herself as many times for as many as she gives Me the gift of it. And in seeing that the creature is constant in giving Me her continuous gift, I see that there is true decision on her part, and she loves and esteems the gift of my Will; and I, just as she gives Me the continuous gift of hers, give her the continuous gift of Mine; and expanding her capacity - because the creature is incapable of taking the whole endlessness of my Volition - I keep increasing, continuously, more sanctity, more love, more beauty, more light and more knowledge of my Divine Will. So, in the exchange we make - you, of your will, and I, of Mine - we double the gifts, and it remains bound so many times for as many as we make the exchange of it. Therefore, I always have something to give you, and you too, because in my Will things never end, they arise in every instant; and as you gave your will to Me, at the contact with Mine, yours has acquired the prerogative of Mine, of being able to give itself continuously to your Jesus.”

Then, I was following the acts of the Divine Will, accompanying them with my ‘I love You’; and I could comprehend the great difference in greatness and magnitude of the works of the Divine Fiat and of my little ‘I love You’. Oh! how small I felt, and truly just, newly born before that Fiat which can do everything and embraces everything. And my lovable Jesus, clasping me in His arms, told me:

“My daughter, one who lives In my Divine Will is my rich bank upon earth; and as you say your ‘I love You’, I invest it with my own, and from small it becomes great, it diffuses in the infinite, in such a way that the riches of my love become immeasurable, and I deposit them in the bank of your soul. And as you continue your acts, I invest them with mine, and I deposit them in your bank so as to have my divine bank upon earth. Therefore, your little acts done in my Divine Volition serve Me in order to give Me something to do, to make Our divine qualities, which are infinite, flow in your little acts, which are finite, mix them together and make of them as many acts of Ours, depositing them in the bank of your soul, so that Our bank may find in you Its Heaven. Don’t you know that one who must live in Our Divine Fiat must be a nimbus of Heaven? Such that, as it lowers itself upon earth - but so much as to eliminate any distance - at that point of the earth where there is the fortunate creature, one must see Heaven, not earth. Nor would my Divine Will be without Its Heaven; It Itself would form It for Itself, and the drapes of Heaven would lower themselves to pay homage to that Fiat from which they recognize their existence. Therefore, all the Blessed remain stupefied in seeing a nimbus of Heaven upon earth; but their stupefaction ceases immediately, when they see that that Divine Will which forms their Heaven and all their happiness is present as reigning in that creature, precisely at that point where they see that the drapes of Heaven, lowering themselves, surround that creature to sing the praises of my Supreme Fiat.

“Therefore, be attentive, my daughter, and if I tell you this, it is to let you know the great gift of making my Will known to you, and how It wants to form Its Kingdom in you, so that you may thank Me and be grateful,”

* * *

January 10, 1930

One who lives in the Divine Will belongs to the Divine Family. Different ways of belonging to God; example of a kingdom. Some live in God, some outside of God.

Though I felt abandoned in the Divine Fiat, I also felt all annihilated, but so much, that I saw myself as smaller than an atom; and I thought to myself: ‘How miserable, small and insignificant I am.’ And my adorable Jesus, interrupting my thought, making Himself felt and seen, told me:

“My daughter whether small or great, you belong to Our Divine Family; you are a member of It, and this is enough for you. Even more, it is everything for you, and is the greatest glory and honor you could possess.”

And I: ‘My Love, we have all come out of You, and we all belong to You, therefore it is no wonder that I belong to You.’ And Jesus:

“Indeed everyone belongs to Me by bonds of creation, but there is great difference from one who belongs to Me not only by bonds of creation, but with bond of fusion of wills - that is, Mine is her sole and only will. I can say that these belong to Me with bonds of true Family of Ours, because the will is the most intimate thing that can exist, both in God and in the creature; it is the essential part of life, it is the director, it is the dominator that has the virtue of binding, with inseparable bonds, God and the creature; and from this inseparability it can be recognized that she belongs to Our Divine Family.

“Does this not happen inside a kingdom? All belong to the king, but in how many different ways they belong: some belong as people, some as army, some as ministers, some as sentries, some as courtiers, another as the queen of the king, and others as his children. Now, who belong to the royal family? The king, the queen, their children; all the rest of the kingdom cannot be said to belong to the royal family, though they belong to the kingdom, they are obliged to laws, to subjection, and rebels are put in jail.

“Therefore, even though all belong to Us - but in how many different ways; and only one who lives in Our Divine Will lives in Our midst. Our Divine Fiat brings her to Us on Its lap of light, into Our inmost divine womb; nor can We put her outside of Ourselves; in order to do that, We would have to put Our Divine Volition outside of Ourselves, which We cannot do, nor do We want to. On the contrary, We are happy to have her, to cuddle her as Our dear memory, when Our love, overflowing, issued the Creation, wanting the creature to live in Our inheritance of the Divine Will and to amuse herself with her Creator with her innocent smiles. And if you see yourself small, it is the exuberant love of my Fiat, which is all attention and jealousy over you, that concedes you not one act of your human will; therefore the human has no growth, and you feel yourself always small. And this is because my Will wants to form Its Life in your smallness, and when Its Divine Life grows, the human life has no reason to grow, therefore you must content yourself with remaining always small.”

Then, I continued my abandonment in the Holy Will, and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, one who lives in my Divine Fiat lives in God, therefore she possesses and can give the goods that she possesses. The Divine Being surrounds her everywhere, in such a way that she sees, feels, touches nothing but God. In Him she delights, Him alone she comprehends and knows, everything disappears for her, and what is left to her is only the memory that, while she is in her God, she is still a pilgrim, and as a pilgrim she must plead for her brothers, because, finding herself in the condition of giving the goods she possesses, she must give according to their dispositions. Don’t you remember, years ago, when I would show you how I would place you inside my Heart and everything would disappear for you, and you would enjoy it and no longer wanted to go out; and I, to make you remember that you were a pilgrim, would place you outside, at the door of my Heart or in my arms, to let you see the evils of the human kind, so that you would plead for them; and you were displeased with Me, for you did not want to go out of my Heart? It was the beginning of the living in my Divine Will that you felt in my Heart - exempt from any danger, free of all evils, because God Himself posts Himself around the happy creature to keep her defended from everything and from everyone. On the other hand, one who does my Divine Will and does not live in It, finds herself in the condition of being able to receive, but not to give; and since she lives outside of God, not in God, she sees the earth, feels the passions, which put her in continuous danger and give her an intermittent fever, such that they feel now healthy, now sick; now they want to do good, and now they get tired, they are bored, they become irritated and leave good. They are just like those who do not have a home in which to be safe, but live in the middle of the street, exposed to cold, to rain, to the scorching sun, to dangers, and they live of alms. Just penalty, for one who could live in God, while she contents herself with living outside of God.”

* * *

January 16, 1930

How in Creation, Redemption and Kingdom of the Divine Will, the operating role is of the Divine Will and the Three Divine Persons are concurring. How the Creation wants to narrate the story of the Divine Will. How one who lives in It receives everything, can give everything, and takes part in all the divine qualities.

I was following the Divine Fiat in the work of Creation, and - oh! how beautiful, pure, majestic, ordered It seemed to me, worthy of the One who had created It. It seemed to me that each created thing had its little story to tell me, which it enclosed, about that Fiat which had given it life; and as It issued them to the light of the day, they were to narrate it so as to make known what they knew of the Divine Will. And, united together, they were to narrate the long story of that Fiat which had not only created them, but, in preserving them, gave them the task to narrate Its long story, giving each created thing a lesson to narrate to creatures, to make known that Divine Will which had created them. But while my poor mind was wandering in looking at the Creation, and wanted to listen to the many beautiful lessons that each created thing wanted to give me about the Divine Fiat, my sweet Jesus, coming out from within my interior, told me:

“Little daughter of my Eternal Will, I want to make known to you that the work of Creation, of Redemption, and that of the Kingdom of Our Will, are all work of Our Supreme Fiat. It is the Fiat that took on the operating role, and the Three Divine Persons took on the concurring role; but it was to Our Divine Fiat that We gave the task to create the Creation, to form the Redemption, and to re-establish the Kingdom of Our Divine Will. In fact, in the works that come out from within the Divinity, it is always Our Divine Volition that takes on the active role, though all of Our Divine Being concurs together; because Our Will has the directing and operating virtue and office of all Our works. Just as you have hands in order to operate, and feet in order to walk, and if you want to operate, you do not make use of the feet, but of the hands, though all of your being is concurring in the work you want to do - so it is with Our Divine Being: there is not one part of Us which does not concur, but Our Divine Will takes on the directing and operating role. More so, since It has Its dwelling in Our Divinity, Its Life flows within Our divine womb - It is Our Life; and while It goes out of Our divine womb - that is, It goes out and It remains - It carries outside of Ourselves the creative virtue of what It wants to do, direct and preserve.

“Now, as you see, everything is work of Our Divine Fiat, and therefore all created things are like as many children who want to tell the story of their Mama, because, feeling Her Life within themselves and knowing the origin from which they come, they feel the need to tell, each one of them, who their Mama is, how good She is, how beautiful She is, and how they are happy and beautiful because they were given birth by such a Mother. Oh! if creatures possessed my Divine Will as life, they would know many beautiful things about It; and knowing It and not speaking about It would be impossible for them; therefore they would do nothing else but speak of It, love It and lay down their lives in order not to lose It.”

Then He added:

“My daughter, Our Divine Will is everything, and since It is everywhere, the soul who lives immersed in It does nothing other than take continuously from God; and God is in continuous act of pouring Himself into her - but so much, that He not only fills her, but since she is incapable of containing everything inside, He forms seas around her. In fact, Our Divine Will would not be content if in the soul who lives in It, It were not able to let her share in all the particles of Our divine qualities, as much as it is possible for a creature; in such a way, that the soul must be able to say: ‘You give me everything, and everything I give You. In your Divine Will I can give You all of Yourself.’ This is why, then, one who lives in Our Fiat is Our inseparable one; We feel her littleness flow in Our power, and she fills herself with Our power as much as she can, and honors Our power, because she places it in the condition of communicating itself to the creature. We feel her flow in Our beauty, and she fills herself with beauty; in Our love, and she fills herself with Our love; in Our sanctity, and she remains filled with it. But while she remains filled, she honors Us, because she places Us in the condition of embellishing her with Our divine beauty, of filling her with Our love, of impressing Our sanctity, in such a way as to place all Our divine qualities in attitude. In a word, she puts Us in the condition of operating and working hard to communicate Ourselves to her, because it is not befitting for Us to keep her in Our Divine Will as dissimilar from Us. She may be small, she cannot enclose all Our Divine Being, but as for sharing with her all Our divine qualities as much as it is possible for creature, in a way that nothing must be lacking to her - this is possible. Therefore, We want to deny her nothing; and besides, We would deny it to Our Divine Will, and it would be like denying to Our very Selves what We Ourselves want to do. Therefore, be attentive, my daughter; in Our Fiat you will find the true purpose for which you were created, your origin, your divine nobility - you will find everything, will receive everything, and will give Us everything.”

* * *

January 20, 1930

How beautiful is the living in the Divine Will. The soul places God in the condition of repeating His works. How the Divine Fiat acts as Actor and Spectator.

I was doing my round in the Divine Will, and I arrived at that point when the Queen of Heaven was created, and the Divinity laid down the garments of Justice; and as though putting on the garments of feast, It renewed the solemn act of the beginning of Creation, calling to life the noble creature who, by living in the Divine Will, the only purpose for which God had created man, would not go out of the house of Her Father, because only our human will puts us outside of God, of His dwelling, outside of His goods, of His sanctity, of His light. In creating the Holy Virgin, God resumed the feasts of Creation, His sweet smiles, His holy conversations with the creature; and He overflowed with love so much, that immediately He made Her Queen of the whole universe, commanding everything and everyone to honor Her as such, and, prostrate at Her venerable feet, recognize Her and sing Her praises as Queen. So, according to my usual way, I was singing the praises of my Mother Queen, hailing Her, in the name of all, Queen of Heaven and earth, Queen of hearts, and Celestial Empress who rules over everything, and even in Her Creator. 'O please!, I was saying to Her, 'with your universal empire rule over all, so that the human will may surrender the rights to the Divine Will. Rule over Our God, that the Divine Fiat may descend into the hearts and reign in them on earth as It does in Heaven.'

Now, while I was doing this, my sweet Jesus moved in my interior and united Himself with me in singing the praises of the Celestial Mama as Queen; and clasping me to Himself, told me:

"My daughter, how beautiful is the living in my Divine Will. It keeps, as though present, everything that has been done by God; and the creature finds everything that her Creator has done, and takes part in His works, and can render to her Creator the honors, the love, the glory of that act. It can be said that one who lives in Our Divine Will places Us in the condition of renewing Our most beautiful works, and makes herself the re-newer of Our feasts. The creation of the Virgin says in clear notes what Our Divine Will means and what It can do. As soon as It took possession of Her virgin Heart, We did not wait even one minute, but immediately We made Her Queen. It was Our Will that We were crowning in Her, because it was not befitting for a creature who possessed Our Will not to have the crown of Queen and the scepter of command. Our Divine Will wants to hold nothing back; It wants to give everything to one who lets It form Its Kingdom in her soul. Now, you must know that just as you find, present in the Divine Fiat, the creation of the Sovereign Lady and you sing Her praises as Queen, so did She find you present in the same Divine Fiat and heard your singing. The Mama does not want to be outdone by the daughter; from that time She sang your praises to honor that Divine Will which was to possess you; and in order to requite your singing, how many times She calls the heavens, the sun, the Angels, and everything, to sing the praises of Her little daughter who wants to live in that Fiat which formed all Her glory, Her greatness, beauty and happiness."

Then, I continued my abandonment in the Divine Fiat, and my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, when my Divine Will reigns in the soul, It takes on the acting and directing role within her. There is not one thing she does in which my Divine Will does not take on Its first act in order to call Its divine act upon the act of the creature. So, if she thinks, It forms His first thought and calls all the sanctity, the beauty, the order of the divine intelligence; and since the creature is incapable, nor does she have sufficient space to receive Our intelligence, every time my Fiat does Its first act in the intelligence of the creature, with Its power It keeps expanding her capacity so as to, enclose new divine intelligence in the mind of the creature. Therefore, it can be said that, there where It reigns, my Will is the first to breathe, the first to palpitate, the first act of the blood circulation, so as to form in the creature Its divine breathing, Its heartbeat of light, and in the blood circulation the total transformation of Its Divine Will in her soul and body. And while It does this, It gives the virtue to the creature, and renders her capable, of being able to breathe with the divine breath, palpitate with Its heartbeat of light, and feel the whole of Its Divine Life, more than blood, circulate in all her being. Therefore, wherever my Will reigns, It is the continuous Actor that never ceases to operate; and making Itself Spectator, It delights in Its divine scenes which It Itself unfolds in the creature; and she lends her being like matter in Its hands, to let It unfold the most beautiful and delightful scenes, which my Fiat wants to do in the soul in whom my Divine Volition dominates and reigns.”

* * *

January 26, 1930

How each word spoken by Jesus on His Fiat is like a child of His that comes out of His womb, and has the communicative strength to communicate itself to all Creation. Empire of the prayer done in the Divine Will.

My flight in the Divine Fiat continues, and I comprehend more how Heaven and earth are filled with It; there is not one created thing that is not the bearer of a Will so Holy. But while my mind was wandering within the Fiat, my sweet Jesus, moving in my interior, told me:

“My daughter, all created things, by virtue of my Divine Will in which they live, perceive when my Divine Volition wants to manifest a truth that belongs to It, a knowledge about It, or wants to do one of Its works. Since the Will that dominates all Creation is one, they feel within themselves the communicative, creative and preserving virtue that wants to operate and make itself known; therefore they feel as if another sister were adding into their midst, and they celebrate the newcomer. So, each word I have spoken to you on my Divine Volition has been a Fiat pronounced by Us, which has come out like a child from the womb of Our Will. This Fiat is the same Fiat as that of Creation, which, forming Its echo, makes Its vital strength felt there where Our Will resides.

“It happens, when Our Divine Fiat wants to operate, wants to pronounce Itself by making Itself known and manifest more of Its truths, as to a family when they see that their mother is about to give birth to other little children. The whole family celebrates, because the family becomes larger, and every time it increases by another little brother or little sister, they make feast and delight in the one newly arrived in their midst. Such is the Creation; since It has come out of the womb of my Divine Will, all my works form one family, and are so bound among themselves, that it seems that one cannot live without the other. My Will keeps them so united as to render them inseparable, because they feel that one is the Will that dominates them. Now, hearing a speaking so prolonged of my Fiat, the many of Its knowledges It keeps manifesting to you, they feel that the number of the divine generation of my Fiat increases in their midst, therefore the family of Creation feels Itself expanding and celebrates the prelude of the Kingdom of my Divine Will. Therefore, when I speak to you of my Fiat, and It pronounces Itself by manifesting Itself, the heavens reverently lower themselves to receive the new birth and Its child into their midst, to pay him honors and to celebrate the newcomer. My daughter, when my Divine Will wants to pronounce Itself, It extends everywhere and makes Its echo and Its creative strength felt in all the things in which It reigns.”

After this, I continued to pray so that blessed Jesus would hasten in making the so longed-for Kingdom of the Divine Will come upon earth. And my beloved Jesus, as though wounded by such prayer, for He Himself so much longed to see the triumph of the Divine Will upon earth, told me:

“My daughter, the prayers done in my Divine Volition to obtain the advent of Its Kingdom upon earth hold a great empire over God. God Himself cannot rid Himself of it, nor can He not grant it. In fact, as the creature prays in my Divine Fiat, We feel the strength of Our Will that prays with Its empire; with Its immensity, It extends everywhere, and embracing the universal strength, the prayer extends everywhere, in such a way that We feel surrounded from all sides, We feel Our own Will praying within Us; and from prayer it changes into command, and says: 'I want'. And as it rules over Our Divine Being with its sweet empire, We say: 'We want.' Therefore, the prayers done in Our Divine Fiat can be called decisions, commands, which carry the signed deed of that which is wanted; and if what is wanted cannot be seen instantly, it is because We are disposing the secondary causes so as to let what We have decided to give come out of Us. Therefore, it is not to be put in doubt that, sooner or later, one will see, descend from Heaven, that which, with decision, has been granted to him. Therefore, continue the prayers in Our Fiat - prayers that move Heaven and earth, and even God Himself, if you love to see my Kingdom upon earth; and I will pray together with you in order to obtain the intent. More so, since the ultimate purpose of Creation is precisely this - that Our Divine Will was to reign on earth as It does in Heaven."

* * *

January 30, 1930

As Redemption unfolded, so will the Kingdom of the Divine Will unfold. Analogy between the two of them. Leap of joy and of sorrow of Jesus.

I was thinking about how the Kingdom of the Divine Will could come upon earth, and in what way It may unfold. Who will be the first fortunate ones to have such a great good? And my sweet Jesus, making Himself seen, clasped me all to Himself, and giving me three kisses, told me:

"My daughter, in the same way as the Kingdom of Redemption unfolded, so will the Kingdom of my Will unfold. It can be said that Redemption is making Its round throughout the whole world, a round which It has not yet entirely completed, because not all the peoples know about my coming upon earth, and therefore they are without its goods. Redemption keeps preparing and disposing the peoples for the Kingdom of my Divine Will. So, just as my Redemption had Its beginning, not in the whole world, but in the center of Judea, because in this nation there was the little core of those who were awaiting Me, there was She whom I had chosen as Mother, and Saint Joseph, who was to be my foster father - in this nation I had manifested Myself to the prophets by letting them know that I was going to come upon earth; it was right that, there where this was known, they be the first ones to have Me in their midst; and even though they were ungrateful, and many did not want to know Me, yet, who can deny that my Celestial Mama, the Apostles, the disciples, were from the Jewish nation, and that they were the first criers who exposed their lives, to make known to the other nations my coming upon earth and the goods which are in my Redemption? - so it will be for the Kingdom of my Divine Fiat: the towns, the provinces, the kingdom, which will have been the first to know the knowledges about my Divine Will and Its expressed Will of wanting to come to reign in the midst of creatures, will be the first to receive the goods that Its Kingdom will bring. And then, making Its way with Its knowledges, It will do Its round in the midst of the human generations. My daughter, there is much analogy between the way in which Redemption unfolded and the way in which the Kingdom of my Divine Will will unfold. See, in my Redemption I chose a Virgin, in appearance She had no importance according to the world, either of riches, or of height of dignity or positions which would indicate Her; the very city of Nazareth was not important - a tiny little house was Her whole abode. But even though I chose Her from Nazareth, I wanted for it to belong to the capital city, Jerusalem, in which there was the body of the pontiffs and priests who then represented Me and announced my laws. For the Kingdom of my Divine Will I have chosen another virgin who, in appearance, has no importance, either of great riches or of height of dignity; the very city of Corato is not an important city, but it belongs to Rome, in which resides my representative on earth, the Roman Pontiff, from whom come my divine laws; and just as he makes it his duty to make my Redemption known to the peoples, so will he make it his duty to make known the Kingdom of my Divine Will. It can be said that one and the other will proceed in the same way and manner, as the Kingdom of my Supreme Fiat must unfold.”

After this, I continued my round in the Divine Volition, and as I arrived at Eden, I prayed Jesus that He would soon restore the purpose of the creation of man, just as he came out of His creative hands. But while I was doing this, my beloved Jesus, making Himself felt in my interior, made Me feel His Divine Heart leaping so very strongly, and, all tenderness, told me:

“My daughter, every time Eden is mentioned my Heart leaps with joy and with sorrow in remembering the way - the manner in which man was created, his happy state, his enrapturing beauty, his sovereignty, Our innocent joys and his, with which We delighted together. How beautiful was Our child, a birth worthy of Our creative hands. Remembering this is so sweet and pleasing to my Heart, that I cannot help leaping with joy and with love. But then, in seeing him changed in his lot, descended from his happiness into the evils of the human will - because Our Divine Will was the safeguard against all his evils and the preserver of the way in which he came out of Our creative hands, and placing him in a contest with his Creator, It placed him in the condition of being able to give his love, his innocent joys to the One who had created him - so, in seeing him unhappy, my leap of joy is followed immediately by the leap of intense sorrow. And if you knew how pleasing to Me is your coming back into this Eden to place before Me what was done, beautiful, holy, great, in the creation of man.... You give Me the contentment, the joy of letting Me repeat my leap of joy, and of placing a lenitive to my leap of sorrow, which is such that, if it were not followed by the sure hope that my child, by virtue of my Fiat, must return to Me happy, by giving Me his innocent joys, as it was established by Us in creating him, my leap of sorrow would have no respite, and I would emit shouts so loud as to make even the Heavens cry. And therefore, in hearing your continuous refrain: ‘I want the Kingdom of your Divine Will’, my Divine Heart feels Its leap of sorrow being stopped, and, leaping with joy, I say: ‘The little daughter of my Will wants and asks for my Kingdom.’ But why does she want It? Because she knows It, loves It and possesses It, and therefore she prays that other creatures may possess It. In fact, since my Divine Will is the origin of life of the creation of man, It alone gives him the capacity to be able to receive everything from his Creator, and to be able to give back to Him everything he wants, which He wants. My Fiat has the virtue of making the conditions of man, his fortune, change; with It everything smiles at him, all love him, all want to serve him, and they consider themselves fortunate to serve my Divine Will in him - that is, in the creature in whom my Divine Will reigns.”

* * *

February 6, 1930

Effects of living in the Divine will and in the human will. How Its way of operating in the soul symbolizes the Creation. How It does small things first, and then the great ones.

I continue my abandonment in the Divine Volition. My poor mind is always as though crowded with what regards a Will so Holy; even more, it seems to me that my thoughts plunge into Its sea of light, and then come out like many messengers that bring many beautiful news from within that sea in which they have been; and one wants to say something, another something else about that Fiat, which they glory in knowing, and in receiving Its life. And I delight in listening to them, and many times I cannot say with words the many beautiful news which my thoughts bring me about the sea of light of the Divine Will; and I feel the need for Jesus to guide me, to feed me the words, otherwise I would not be able to say anything. So, while I was in the sea of the Divine Fiat, my sweet Jesus, making Himself seen in the act of helping me to change into words what my mind was thinking, told me:

“My daughter, the effects of living in my Divine Will are admirable. My Fiat keeps the creature always turned toward Heaven, and It makes her grow, not of earth, but of Heaven; and since my Will is one with my same Will that operates in the creature, this same Will of Mine places the creature in order with her Creator and keeps manifesting to her Who the One is who created her, how much He loves her, and how He wants to be loved. And placing her before the divine reflections, It makes her Creator delight by dint of reflections, in making grow and portraying His image in she who possesses the Will of He who created her, and makes her will one with His. And since my Fiat keeps her always turned toward Heaven - nor does she have the time to look at the earth, because she is absorbed by the Supreme Being; and even if she looked, all things convert into Heaven, because wherever It reigns, my Will has the virtue of changing the nature of things - so, everything is Heaven for the creature who lives in my Divine Will; she grows for Heaven, because the Heaven of my Divine Will reigns in her soul.

“On the other hand, one who lives of human will is always turned toward herself, and by her looking at herself, the human will keeps uncovering for her what is human, and places her in the reflections of what exists in the low world, in such a way that it can be said that she lives of earth and grows without the likeness of the One who created her. There is such difference between one and the other, that if creatures could see it, all would love and yearn to live in my Fiat, and they would abhor living of human will, and would hold it as the greatest misfortune, which makes them lose the purpose and the origin for which they were created. It would happen as to a king who lays down his crown, his royal garments, descends from his throne, and clothes himself with dirty rags, feeds himself with filthy foods and lives in a stable together with the beasts of his passions. Would the lot of this one not to be cried over? Such is the one who lets himself be dominated by his human will.”

After this, I continued thinking about the many things that my beloved Jesus has operated in my poor and little soul - His so many loving ways, such that, if I wanted to tell them all, it would be impossible for me. But who can say what I was thinking, and the reason why my little intelligence was as though crowded with what had happened to me in my existence? But while I was prey to so many thoughts, my highest and only Good, Jesus, clasping me all to Himself, with unspeakable tenderness, told me:

“My daughter, my way of operating in your soul symbolizes the whole Creation. Great work was the Creation, but since Our works are orderly, We contented Ourselves with creating small things first - the heavens, the stars, the sun, the sea, the plants and everything else - that is, small in comparison with the creation of man, who was to surpass everything and hold supremacy over everything; and when things must serve the one who must master them and be their king, as great as they might be or appear, they are always small compared to the one whom they must serve. So, after the universe was created and all things were at their place of order, waiting for the one around whom, like an ordered army, they were to line up so as to serve him and obey his wishes, We created man. All created things, and his very Creator poured themselves over him to sing to him Our eternal loves, and say to Him: 'We all have the mark of our Creator, and we pour it over you, who are His image.' Heaven and earth made complete feast, and Our very Divinity celebrated with so much love the creation of man, that at the mere memory of it, Our love seethes so strongly that, overflowing, it forms immense seas around Us.

"Now, the Kingdom of my Divine Will is greater than the work of Creation, and therefore, it can be said, it is the call for Our Divine Being to operate more than Creation Itself. So, everything I did in your soul at the beginning symbolizes the Creation. I wanted you all to Myself and all mine, so as to be free to do what I wanted; I wanted the void of everything in your soul, to be able to lay my Heaven; and the many sayings on the virtues were stars which, practiced by you in the way wanted by Me, I used in order to adorn the Heaven I had extended in you. Therefore, I wanted to redo in you and be repaid for everything evil and unworthy that the human family had done; in order to call back the Sun of my Divine Fiat, it was necessary to prepare with decorum the one who was to receive, as the first, the Life of my Divine Will. This is why, then, I made flow seas of grace, the most beautiful flowerings, almost as in the creation of man, in whom my Divine Fiat was to reign. The same in you: everything I did placed itself in waiting, like a divine army, to form the cortege of the Sun of my Eternal Will. And just as in Creation We abounded so much in creating so many things that were to serve man, but because this man was to let my Divine Will reign within himself, the same in you: everything has been done so that my Will would find Its place of honor and of glory. This is why it was necessary that first I was to prepare you with many graces and teachings, as small things compared to the great Sun of my Divine Volition, which, with Its many manifestations, while making Itself known, formed Its Life in order to reign and form Its first Kingdom in the creature.

"Therefore, do not be surprised - this is the order of Our Wisdom and Providence, which does small things first and then the great, as cortege and as decorum of the great things. What does my Divine Fiat not deserve? What is not owed to It? And what has not been done by It? Therefore, when it is about my Will, or about making It known, Heaven and earth prostrate themselves, reverent, and all adore in mute silence even just one act of my Divine Will."

* * *

February 11, 1930

How man was created to live in intimacy with God and in His house, and as he withdrew from His Will, by God's goodness he was given the legal share.

My poor mind undergoes the sweet enchantment of the refulgent Sun of the Eternal Fiat, and - oh! how many beautiful touching scenes It unfolds within me, such that, if I were able to tell them as I see them, all would undergo the sweet enchantment and, in chorus, all would say: "We want to do the Divine Will." But, alas! I am always the little ignorant one, and only stammering can I say something. But in comprehending the great good of this Divine Volition, and how we swim in Its gigantic waves of light, of unspeakable beauty, of unreachable sanctity, I was thinking to myself: 'How is it possible for such a great good not to be known? And while we swim inside of it, we ignore the great good that surrounds us, that invests us inside and out, that gives us life; and only because we ignore it, we do not enjoy the admirable effects of all the great goods that a Will so Holy contains? O please! reveal Yourself, Oh Omnipotent Fiat, and the face of the earth will change. And besides, why did Our Blessed Lord not please to manifest, from the beginning of Creation, the many admirable things that this Most Holy Will wants to do and give to creatures?' And while my mind was wandering, as though enraptured in the sweet enchantment of the Divine Volition, my Love, my Life, Jesus, the Celestial Teacher, who charms with His lovely speaking on His own Will, making Himself seen, told me:

"My little daughter of my Will, the creature cannot live, either soul or body, Without my Divine Will; and since It is her first act of life, she finds herself in the condition either of receiving Its act of continuous life from It, or of not being able to have existence. And since man was created for him to live in the opulence of the goods of this Divine Will, his beloved inheritance, he was therefore created for him to live of Us and in Our house, like a son who lives with his father. Otherwise, how could he be Our amusement, Our joy and happiness, if he were not to live close to Us, together with Us in Our Divine Will? A son who is far away cannot form the joy of his father, his smile, his amusement, his intimate conversation. From afar, they cannot play together or smile with happiness; on the contrary, the mere distance breaks the love and brings the bitterness of not being able to enjoy the beloved.

"See, then, man was created to live in intimacy with Us, in Our house, in Our own Will, for Us to secure Our joys and perennial happiness as well as his. But man, Our son, though he was happy in the house of his Father, rebelled and went out of his paternal house, and by doing his will he lost the smile of his Father, His pure joys; and since he could not live without the concurrence of Our Divine Will, We acted as Father and gave him the legal share of Our Divine Will - no longer as life, which carried him on Its lap to render him happy and holy, but as concurring, to preserve him alive not to make him happy as before, but to give him the things of strict necessity and according to how he would behave. Without my Divine Will there cannot be life. And this is why so little is known about my Divine Fiat, because it is Its mere legal share that creatures know, and many times this legal share is not even recognized completely, because one who lives of the legal share does not live in the house of his Father; he is far away from Him, and many times he finds himself in the condition of spoiling with unworthy acts the very legal share he received.

"Therefore, do not be surprised if little is known about my Divine Will, if one does not live in It, if one is not in continuous contact to receive Its Life that makes one happy, that sanctifies and, one being close to It, opens Its secrets and makes Itself known - who It is, what It can give to the creature, and how It yearns to keep her on Its lap to form in her Its Divine Life. More so since, by doing his will, man placed himself in the condition of a servant, not of an heir, and a servant has no right to the inheritance of his master, but to the miserable compensation for him to live life with hardship. Therefore, my daughter, it can be said that with you I have opened the doors, to let you enter to live in Our house, in Our Divine Will. And keeping you with Us, We have manifested to you so much about Our Divine Volition - not as the legal share, but as Our fortunate heiress."

After this, He added:

"My daughter, more so, since in that little which was written of my Divine Will in the whole history of the world, having known only the legal share, they have written of It what they have known of my Fiat after sin, which relationships It has with creatures, even though they offend It and do not live in Our house. But as for the relations that passed between my Fiat and Adam innocent, before sinning, they have written nothing. And how could they write if no one has lived in my Divine Will as in one's own house? How could they know Its secrets and the great prodigy that the operating Life of a Divine Will can do in the creature? Therefore, they could and can say of my Divine Fiat that It disposes everything, that It commands, that It concurs; but as for saying of my Divine Will how It operates within Itself, in Its house, the power of Its immensity that in one instant does everything, envelops everything, in the creature as It does within Itself - this is science that the creature has ignored until now; it could not be written if not by manifestation of my Divine Fiat, and to one whom It called to live in Our house as Our daughter, close to Us, inside my Will - not far away; such that, being able to amuse Ourselves with her, We would make her aware of Our most intimate secrets. And if We had wanted to manifest what regards Our Will in relationship with the creature, and she were not living in It, she would not have understood Us; it would have been for her like a foreign and unintelligible dialect."

* * *

February 17, 1930

How the Divine Will is the heartbeat, and the creature is the heart, the Divine Will the breath, the creature the body. Inseparability of one from the other.

The Divine Volition continues to occupy my little intelligence, and I, immersing myself in It, feel Its vivifying strength that surrounds me inside and out. And my sweet Jesus, who seems to hide behind the gigantic waves of light of His Divine Volition, very often moves in these waves of light; and making Himself seen, with unspeakable tenderness, He told me:

"My daughter, my Divine Will is heartbeat without heart - the creature is the heart, my Will is the heartbeat. See what inseparable union exists between my Fiat and the creature. The heart is nothing, it has no value without the heartbeat; with the heartbeat the life of the creature is constituted, but the heartbeat cannot beat without the heart. Such is my Divine Will; if It does not have the nothingness of the heart of the creature, It has no place in which to form Its heartbeat of life to carry out and form Its Divine Life. See then, not having a heart, my Divine Will has created it in the creature, so as to have Its heart in which to be able to form Its heartbeat.

"In addition to this, my Divine Will is breath without body - the creature is the body, my Will is the breath. The body without the breath is dead; so, what forms the breath of the creature is my Divine Will; therefore, one can say: 'The body of It is that of the creature, and her breath is that of my Divine Volition.' See what further union exists between one and the other - a union which cannot be separated, because if the breath ceases life ceases. Therefore, my Divine Will is everything for the creature; It is word without mouth, It is light without eye, It is hearing without ears, It is work without hands, It is step without feet, and therefore the soul who lives in my Divine Will serves It as mouth, as eye, as ears, as hands and as feet. My Will restricts Itself to enclose Itself in the creature, while remaining immense; and, victorious, It forms Its Kingdom in her, making use of her as if she were Its body, in which It palpitates, breathes, speaks, operates and walks. Therefore, the sorrow of my Divine Fiat, because creatures do not lend themselves to let It carry out all Its operations in them, to let It reign, and they force It to silence and to inactivity, is incomprehensible; and with divine and unspeakable patience, It waits for those who must live in Its Will, so as to resume Its speaking and Its divine activity, to form Its Kingdom in the midst of creatures. Therefore, be attentive, my daughter listen to the speaking of my Divine Fiat, give It life in all your acts, and you will see the unexpected portents that my Divine Will will do in you.”

May everything be for the glory of God, and for the fulfillment of His Most Holy Will.

Deo Gratias

*The Kingdom of the
Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 28

Contents

February 22, 1930 .....	p. 1
Whoever lives in the Divine Will is surrounded by the divine immutability.
The death of good. The sacrifice of the life to make the good rise again.
February 26, 1930 .....	p. 3
It is necessary to desire a good. If the people of the Divine Will are not formed, the Divine Will cannot have Its Kingdom. Whoever lives in the Fiat is owner; who does Its Volition is a servant.
March 5, 1930 .....	p. 5
Jesus wants to see his Fiat palpitating in creatures.
Living in his Fiat is the call to all acts into the Divine Unity. What Unity means.
March 9, 1930 .....	p. 6
The knowledges of the Divine Will contain the science of forming Its Life and the people of Its Kingdom. At the soul's remembrance of what Jesus did and suffered, Jesus' love is renewed, is swollen, and overflows for the good of creatures.
March 12, 1930 .....	p. 8
God does not calculate time, rather the acts that we do. Example of Noah.
The good that a long-term and continuous sacrifice possesses.
Each act of the creature possesses its distinct seed.
March 24, 1930 .....	p. 9
The creature is nothing other than an effect of the reflections of God.
The love of God in creating the creature.
The firmness in repeating the same acts forms in the soul: The life of the good that is wanted.
April 1, 1930 .....	p. 10
What it means to enter in the first act of the Divine Volition. The little drops that the creature forms in Its sea of light. God put as many acts of love in all created things for as many times that created thing must serve the creature. Life needs food.
April 12, 1930 .....	p. 11
The acts done in the Divine Volition are walls of light around Jesus.
The sun, the sower of the love of its Creator.
The Sun of the Divine Will forms Its Sun in the creature, and is a Divine Sower in the creature.
April 18, 1930 .....	p. 13
All of the first acts were done by God in Adam. The Divine Love's jealousy.
Guaranty and certainty of the Divine Fiat for the creature.
In the creation of man, everyone was present and in act.
The vivifying and alimentary virtue of the Divine Volition.
April 23, 1930 .....	p. 15
In creating man, God did not detach man from Himself. Condition of necessity to love man.
The last assault. The Great Gift of the Divine Will. The order that God had in creating man.

May 2, 1930 .....	p. 16
The Divine Will always runs towards the creature to embrace it and make it happy, and has the virtue to empty it of every evil. The course of the "I love you" in the Divine Volition.
May 10, 1930 .....	p. 17
All created things are happy because they were created by a Divine Will.
God loved man with perfect love and gifted him with love, sanctity, and complete beauty.
May 20, 1930 .....	p. 18
All of Creation is a member of God, and participates in all the Divine qualities.
The Divine Will, gatherer of all the acts that pertain to It.
June 2, 1930 .....	p. 19
The Divine Will is peace and security. Doubts and fears.
Jesus, the only author of the laws. Necessity of the truths of Jesus.
The lack of confidence (in God) - the weak point of our centuries.
June 18, 1930 .....	p. 21
All created things call the creature to fulfill the Divine Will.
In creating man, God put him inside of his Divine confines.
July 4, 1930 .....	p. 23
All created things possess the repetitive virtue of the Divine Fiat.
July 9, 1930 .....	p. 24
Value of the human will when it enters into the Divine Will.
Fears because of authoritative judgements. Jesus' responses and his teachings.
July 16, 1930 .....	p. 26
The Divine Will - life; love - food. One sole act does not form life nor a complete act.
Necessity of the repetition of the acts in order to form the life of the Divine Will.
July 24, 1930 .....	p. 28
The Divine Will is in continuous movement in Our Divine Being.
The prodigy of when the Divine Will works in the creature; God's satisfaction.
August 2, 1930 .....	p. 29
All created things are veiled. Only in Heaven everything is unveiled.
Necessary conditions and work in order to know the truths.
August 12, 1930 .....	p. 30
Disheartenment doubles the weight of the pains. In what way Jesus visits us. Love was the first thing that moved the first act in everything that God did for creatures, but the Divine Will gave life to love.
August 15, 1930 .....	p. 32
The life of the Sovereign Queen was formed in the Divine Sun.
August 24, 1930 .....	p. 32

*The Divine Will takes on all forms to give Itself to the creature.
The creation of man, investiture of the center of love and of the Divine Fiat.*

August 29, 1930 ..... p. 34
Created things are filled with the Divine Will. Crosses form the road that conducts to Heaven.

September 20, 1930 ..... p. 35
*Bitternesses, the slow poison of good.
The Divine Will, the cradle of the soul. Jesus, the Divine Administrator of his Most Holy Will.*

September 30, 1930 ..... p. 36
Eden, field of light. Difference between one who works in the Divine Will, and one who works in the human will. The little terrain of the creature; and the Celestial Sower.

October 7, 1930 ..... p. 38
*How the Redemption is owed to the fidelity of the Most Holy Virgin.
Fidelity, the sweet chain that rapt God.
The Celestial Farmer. The necessity of the seed to be able to diffuse the Divine works.*

October 12, 1930 ..... p. 39
*Fear is the whip of the poor nothing.
God's Love towards creatures is such that He puts the creature in competition with Him.
God established all the acts that all creatures should do.*

October 18, 1930 ..... p. 40
Value of the kisses and embraces of the Virgin to Baby Jesus. Because she possessed the Divine Will, all of her acts were rendered infinite and immense for Jesus. Resurrection of the acts done in the Divine Volition. Effects of the "I love You".

November 9, 1930 ..... p. 42
*Difference between the created love and the love that creates.
The dowry with which God endowed the creature. Example.*

November 20, 1930 ..... p. 44
*The fear of losing a good, means to possess it.
Who has the right to ask for the Kingdom of the Divine Will.
Food to form and grow the Life of the Divine Will in the creature.*

November 24, 1930 ..... p. 45
*There is no point where the Divine Will does not perform Its operating act towards creatures.
Creatures receive the effects of that sole act according to their dispositions.
Jesus speaks of chastisements.*

November/December?, 1930 ..... p. 46
The reason why God is not known or loved: Because they think that He is a God who is distant from creatures; while in reality, He is inseparable. How the Divine Will attracts the soul, and how the soul attracts the Divine Fiat in itself.

December 21, 1930 ..... p. 48

*Triumphs on the part of the Divine Will when the creature lets itself be molded by the Divine Fiat.
Exchanges of triumphs on both parts.*

February 8, 1931 ..... p. 49

Accusations, calumnies, condemnation. God's Will costs more than His power.

The Divine Will moves in two ways: In a willed way and in a permissive way.

Round of chastisements that He will do to all nations.

Volume 28

J.M.J.
Fiat!!!

February 22, 1930

Whoever lives in the Divine Will is surrounded by the divine immutability. The death of good. The sacrifice of the life to make the good rise again.

I am always the prey of that Divine Fiat who knows how to sweetly and strongly conquer. With Its sweetness, It attracts me in an irresistible way. With Its strength, It wins me over in a way that It can do with me what It wants. “Oh! Holy Volition, since You conquer me, please, make me win You over with Your very strength and sweetness. And, ceding to my continuous supplications, come to reign upon the earth, form your sweet enchantment to the human will, and make everything become Divine Will on the earth.”

While I was thinking about the Divine Volition, my sweet Jesus, moving in my interior and making Himself be seen, said to me:

“My daughter, if you only knew what it means to make yourself the prey of my Divine Will! The soul remains surrounded by Our immutability, and everything becomes immutable for the soul; immutable - the sanctity, the light, the grace, love. So, the soul no longer feels the variety of the human ways, but the stability of the divine ways. Therefore, whoever lives in my Divine Volition, can be called “sky”, which is always fixed and stable in its place of honor with all of its stars. And, if the sky moves, since it is together with Creation that moves, it doesn’t change its place, nor does it change itself, but the sky always remains immutable with all the stars. Such is the soul that lives in my Divine Will. It can move around and will do various actions. But, since the soul will move around in the driving power of my Divine Fiat and together with my Will, it will always be sky and immutable in its goods and in the prerogatives - which my Supreme Will gifted it with.

Instead, whoever lives outside of my Divine Fiat, without Its driving power, can be called like those wandering stars that fall in space, as if there were no fixed place for them. And, those souls are constrained like wandering stars that fall headlong, as if they had gone astray from the vault of the sky. Such is the soul that does not do and does not live in my Divine Will. It changes in each occasion, feels in itself such a variety of change, that it is annoyed to repeat a continuous good. And, if some spark of light goes forth from the soul, it is like the sparkle of the wandering stars that immediately disappears. It can be said that this is the sign for to know if one lives of the Divine Will: The immutability in the good. And, this is the sign to know if one lives of the human will: It changes itself in every little moment.”

After that, I was following the acts of the Divine Fiat. I was going around in all the works of Creation, in Eden, in the more notable points and more notable people of the story of the world, to ask for the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth in the name of everyone. My sweet Jesus, moving in my interior, said to me:

“My daughter, by withdrawing himself from my Divine Will, man gave death to the goods that my Divine Fiat would have made rise in him if my Fiat had not been rejected. As man went out of my Divine Will, so, the continuous act of the Divine Life in man died. The sanctity that always grows died. The light that always rises died. The beauty that never stoops in order to always embellish died, as well as the untireable love that never says “enough” - that always, always wants to give. Even more so, by rejecting my Divine Will, the order died, the air, and the food that would have nurtured him continuously.

Do you see then, how many Divine goods man made die in himself by withdrawing from my Divine Will? Now, where there has been the death of good, the sacrifice of the life is required to make that destroyed good rise. That is why, when I wanted to renew the world and give a good to creatures, with justice and wisdom I asked for the sacrifice of life, like I asked the sacrifice from Abraham, that he sacrifice to Me his only son, which in fact, he did. And, impeded by Me, he stopped. In that sacrifice that cost Abraham more than his own life, the new generation rose, from which the Divine Liberator and Redemptor had to descend, who, had to make the good - dead in the creature - rise again.

With the passing of time, I permitted to Jacob the sacrifice and the great pain of death of his beloved son, Joseph. Even though Joseph didn't die, for Jacob, it was as if in reality he died. It was the new call that was rising again in that sacrifice; the Celestial Liberator was calling to make the lost good rise again.

Moreover, it was the same with my coming upon the earth. I wanted to die. With the sacrifice of my death, I was calling the rising of so many lives and the good that the creature made die. And, I wanted to rise again to confirm the life of good and the resurrection of the human family. What a great offense it is to make good die! So much so, that the sacrifice of other lives are necessary to make it rise again.

Now, with all of my Redemption and with the sacrifice of my death, since my Divine Will was not reigning (in the creature), all the good had not yet risen in the creature. My Divine Will is repressed and cannot unfold the sanctity that It wants. Good suffers intermittently; now it rises, now it dies. And my “Fiat” remains with the continuous pain of not being able to make all the good rise in the creature that It wants. That is why I remained in the little Sacramental Host, departed for Heaven, but remained on the earth in the midst of creatures to be born, to live, and to die - even though mystically - in order to make all the good rise again in creatures, which man had rejected by withdrawing himself from my Divine Will. And united to my sacrifice, I asked for the sacrifice of your life, to make the Kingdom of my Divine Will rise again in the midst of the human generation. And from each Tabernacle, I am there on the lookout to fulfill the work of the Redemption and the “Fiat Voluntas Tua come in Cielo cosi in terra” (“Your Will be done on earth as in Heaven”), contenting Myself with sacrificing Myself and with dying in each Host in order to make the Sun of my Divine Fiat rise again, and the new era and its complete triumph. When departing from the earth, I said: “I am going to Heaven, and I remain upon the earth in the Sacrament”. I will content Myself in waiting centuries. I know that it will cost Me much. Unheard-of offenses will not be lacking to Me, perhaps more than in my very Passion. But, I will arm Myself of divine patience. And, from the little Host, I will fulfill the work. I will make my Volition reign in hearts, and I will continue to remain in the midst of creatures to enjoy the fruit of so many sacrifices that I underwent. Therefore, be united to the sacrifice together with Me for such a holy cause, and for the just triumph that my Will reign and dominate.”

* * *

February 26, 1930

It is necessary to desire a good. If the people of the Divine Will are not formed, the Divine Will cannot have Its Kingdom. Whoever lives in the Fiat is owner; who does Its Volition is a servant.

I was thinking about the great interest that my always amiable Jesus has - to make his Holy Will known. I said to myself: “He loves, sighs, and wills that his Kingdom come. And then, He delays so long to make It rise in the midst of creatures. If He wanted, He can do everything, He does not lack the power. In one moment, He can overturn Heaven and earth. Who can resist his power? No one. Even more so, in Jesus, to will (something) and to be able to do (something) are the same thing. Then, why does He delay until now?” But while I was thinking this, my sweet Jesus, moving and making Himself be heard in my interior, said to me:

“My daughter, to long for, desire, and want a good is to dispose oneself to receive it. When one receives a good that he has longed for so much, he loves that good, appreciates it, takes care of it, and welcomes the bringer of that good that he was longing for. Furthermore, this is another excess of Our love: That We make the creature long for the good that We want to give, because We want that the creature put forth something of its own, at least its sighs, its prayers, and its will to want that good, so We can say to it: “See, you have merited it, because for your part, you have done what you could to obtain it. And with all of Our Heart, We give it to you.” In reality, it is all the effect of Our Goodness. This is the reason why We first make known what We want to give to creatures. It can be said that We send it correspondence, sending it Our lettres of love. So, We dispatch Our messengers, making them say what We want to give. And all of this is to dispose them, to make them long for the great gift that We want to give. Didn’t We do the same for the Kingdom of the Redemption? There were four thousand years of waiting. The more the time neared, the more pressing the notices were, and the letters were more frequent. And all of this was to dispose them.

So it is for the Kingdom of my Divine Will. I delay, because I want that they know about It, pray for It, long for It to come to reign, and understand the great Gift of It, so I can say to them: “You have wanted It, merited It, and It is already coming to reign in your midst. By knowing It, praying for It, and longing for It, you have formed Its elect people where It can dominate and reign.” Without a people, a Kingdom cannot be formed. And that is the other reason why it must be known that my Divine Will wants to reign on the earth: so that they pray, long for, and dispose themselves to form Its people-of where to descend in the midst of them and form Its royal palace, Its seat, Its throne. Therefore, don’t be marvelled that while you see so much interest by my part that I want my Will to reign, and then see that I delay. They are the dispositions of Our unattainable Wisdom, that disposes everything with order. The delay serves to put Its knowledges into flight, that will make themselves like letters, telegraphs, telephone calls, messengers, to form the people of my Divine Will. So pray, and may your flight in It be continuous.”

After that, I continued my round in the Divine Fiat. And arriving to Eden, I lingered in the thought about the exchange of love between God and innocent Adam. How the Divinity, not finding any impediment on man's part, poured forth torrents upon him. With His love, the Divinity rapt man to Himself with sweet attractions, making man hear His completely soft voice that said to him: "Son, I love you, I love you so much". And Adam, wounded and raptured by the Eternal Love, repeated his response: "I love you, I love you". And, throwing himself in the arms of his Creator, Adam held himself so tightly to Him, that Adam didn't know how to detach himself because his Creator was the only love that he knew, and his reason for living was only to love Him.

While my mind was lost in this exchange of love between God and the creature, my sweet Jesus, all goodness, said to me:

"My daughter, what a sweet memory is the creation of man. He was happy, and Us also. We felt the fruit of happiness of Our work. We felt such pleasure in loving him and in being loved by him. Our Divine Will conserved him fresh and beautiful. And bringing him between Its arms of light, Our Will made Us contemplate him - how beautiful the work created by Us was, Our dear son. We held him as a son in Our house, in Our interminable goods. As a consequence, being Our son, he was like the owner. It would have been against the nature of Our love not to make the one who We loved so much and who loved Us, like the owner. In true love, there is not "yours and mine", but everything is in commune. And then, no bad came to Us by making him like the owner. Rather, We rejoiced. He made Us smile; he amused Us; and he gave Us the beautiful surprises of Our own goods. Furthermore, how can he not be the owner if he possessed Our Divine Will that rules over everything and dominates everything? By not making him owner, We would have had to put Our Will in slavery, which could not have been. No slavery exists where Our Will reigns, but everything is ownership. Therefore, for as long as man lived in Our Divine Fiat, he didn't know slavery. When man sinned, withdrawing himself from Our Divine Volition, he lost the ownership and reduced himself in slavery. What a change! From son to servant! He lost the command over created things and became the servant of everything. By withdrawing from Our Divine Fiat, man felt himself shaken to the foundation, and he felt his very person vacillating. He experienced what weakness is, and he felt himself to be a servant of passions, that made him be ashamed of himself. And he arrived to the point of losing his dominion. So, strength, light, grace, and peace were no longer in his power like before. He had to beg his Creator for them with tears and prayers. Do you see then, what it means to live in my Divine Volition? To be owner. Whoever does his own will is a servant."

Surprised by what Jesus had said, I said to Him: "My Love, for however consoling it is to hear You speak about your Divine Volition, it is equally painful to hear about the evil of the human will."

Jesus added: "My daughter, if it is necessary to speak to you about my Divine Fiat that will serve as an invitation, attraction, and as soft, sweet and strong voices to call everyone to live in the Royal Palace of my Divine Will so that they are no longer servants but owners, so too, it is necessary to speak to you about the evil of the human will, because I will never take away man's free will. Therefore, in the Kingdom of my Divine Will, it is necessary that I make the guardsmen mount, these noble sentinels that make creatures be attentive, making creatures know the great evil of the human will so that they are attentive; and so that abhorring the human will, creatures love the happiness and the ownership that my Divine Will gives them."

* * *

March 5, 1930

Jesus wants to see his Fiat palpitating in creatures. Living in his Fiat is the call to all acts into the Divine Unity. What Unity means.

I live always in the pain of the privation of my sweet Jesus. What a harsh martyrdom! If it wasn't for his Holy Volition having taken Jesus' place, making me feel It continuously, that while his Volition gives me life, It always holds me occupied and lost in Him, I wouldn't know how to live. But with all of this, and with so many dear remembrances of Jesus, I believed that I would never lose sight of Him. His sweet and repeated visits, his so many loving stratagems, his so many surprises that made me seem to live more in Heaven than on earth, and even only remembering Him, are cruel wounds that render my painful martyrdom worse. "Ah! Jesus, Jesus!!! How easy it is for You to put aside and forget the one who loves You and whose martyrdom You form. You Yourself said many times that You loved me! Ah! Jesus, return. I can't go on any longer." But while my poor soul was feeling a fever that wanted Jesus, and that blundered deliriously, my sweet Jesus, moving in my interior and holding me between his arms, almost to stop my blunders, said to me:

"My daughter, calm yourself, calm yourself. I am here. I have not put you aside, nor does the nature of my love know how to forget anyone. On the contrary, I am in you to conduct all your acts into my Divine Will, because I don't want that any of your acts, even minimal, not be noble and divine and not have the seal of my Divine Fiat. I want to see my Fiat palpitating in all your acts. This is all of my attention: To form the first copy of the soul who must live in my Divine Volition."

He said this, and was silent. I continued my round in the Divine Fiat. I wanted to gather everything that creatures had done, to enclose everything in the Divine Will. My Highest Good, Jesus, added:

"My daughter, the living in my Divine Volition is the call of all the creature's acts into the unity of It. Everything has gone forth from inside of Its unity, from Our sole act, which gives life to all acts, because it is Our right of Justice that everything return to Us to acknowledge from where they have gone forth. The acknowledgment of where an act comes from, of who it is that gives life to so many acts, in what way and how, is the most beautiful homage to Our Power and Wisdom, Who, with one sole act, is the life of all acts. Only whoever lives in my Fiat, embracing everything together with It, takes everything as in a handful, and enclosing everything in that Volition in which it lives, ascends in Our unity to bring Us everything and give Us the true homages of all the effects of Our sole act. That is why making rounds in Our Divine Will not only gathers everything, but also communicates its act to all created things, in such a way that all of Heaven poses itself to adore together with your adorations; the sun to love Us together with your love; and the wind to glorify Us together with you. In summary, all created things are invested by my Will. When they feel the act that you do in my Will, they pose to love Us, to adore Us, and to give Us glory and thanksgiving, in such a way that We feel that in Our Divine Fiat, the creature gives Us the fullness of love, the totality of adoration, and the complete glory. Therefore, continue your flight in my Divine Volition, and don't occupy yourself of anything else, because you have much to do in It."

Then, I remained thinking about the unity of the Divine Volition. My sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, do you know what “Unity of Divine Will” means? It means that everything beautiful, good, and holy goes forth from inside of this sole Will. Of this sole Divine Will of Ours, one is Its Unity, one is its act. But while it is one, the Will, the unity, and the act extend themselves everywhere. And because Our Divine Will extends Itself everywhere like inside of one sole breath, It does everything, embraces everything, and gives life to everything. Then, whoever lives in Our Divine Volition, fuses itself in Our Unity, and everything that it does, does not go forth outside of Us, but remains inside of Us. Instead, from whoever lives outside of Our Divine Volition, We feel the pain of his acts being torn away from inside of Our Will. And, since that soul pulls those acts away, he does not return them there, because his will does not form one (thing) with Our Divine Will. Therefore, the great difference of who lives outside of Our Fiat - all of its acts are divided and broken acts, not fused together. So, that soul will not have the good of feeling the fullness of the light, of happiness, nor of all goods-in-itself, but everything will be misery, weakness, and a scarcity of light.”

* * *

March 9, 1930

The knowledges of the Divine Will contain the science of forming Its Life and the people of Its Kingdom. At the soul's remembrance of what Jesus did and suffered, Jesus' love is renewed, is swollen, and overflows for the good of creatures.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues. I feel bound in Its arms of light, and so tightly that I am not allowed to move away even a little, nor do I want to move away. I will well avoid moving away from Its bosom of light. It seems to me that there is an agreement between me and the Divine Volition, that both of us are not able to separate from one another. “Oh! Holy Volition, how amiable and powerful You are! You attract me, rapt me, and enchant me with your amiableness. And I, being enchanted, do not know how to not hold myself fixed in You. With your power, You hold Yourself firm over my littleness. You pour Yourself out in torrents, in such a way that I lost the way to go out from your interminable light. But what a happy loss. Oh please adorable Fiat, make everyone lose the way also, so that they do not know any other way than that which leads into your Divine Will.” But how can creatures know such a good? While I was thinking this, my sweet Jesus, making himself heard in my interior, said to me:

“My daughter, the knowledges of my Divine Volition are ways that can conduct creatures into the arms of light of my Divine Fiat. The knowledges are seeds. And this seed makes the beginning of the Life of my Divine Will be born in the creature. Each one of the knowledges will be like so many sips of Life that will form the maturity of this Divine Life in the creature. For this reason, I have told you many things about my Divine Fiat. Each knowledge will bring something that will mature the Life of my Volition in souls; one will bring the seed, one the birth, one the food, one the breath, one the air, one the light and another the heat. Each knowledge contains one level higher of maturity. Consequently, the more they will look to know what I have manifested about my Divine Fiat, the more they will feel matured. My knowledges about my Divine Fiat will mold souls, and will extinguish the evils of the human will with their touch. These knowledges will do like a merciful Mother, who at whatever cost, wants to heal her child and see it healthy and beautiful. If you knew what one knowledge of my Divine Will means! These knowledges contain the science of to form the Life of my Divine Will, to form the people of Its Kingdom.

See, even in the natural world it happens like this. Whoever wants to be a teacher must know that which regards the sciences. If he does not want to apply himself to know the sciences, he will never be mature to be a teacher. And, according to the level of the sciences that he studied, will he more or less possess the levels of instruction: If little science, he could have the maturity to be an elementary teacher. If he studied much science, he could have the maturity to be a professor of a superior school. So, according to what is known - as much as in the arts as in the sciences, so much more are they mature in that good that they know, and are capable to make the good, the science, and the art that they possess mature in the others. Now, by having told you so many knowledges about my Divine Will, it was not for to give you a beautiful news, no, no. It was to form the science of It first in you, and then in the midst of creatures, so that with this science that is divine and all of Heaven being known, It can mature the Life of my Divine Fiat and form Its Kingdom.”

After that, I was continuing my round in the Divine Volition, and I stopped at one point, then at another of that which my beloved Jesus had done and suffered. He was wounded by his very acts that I was putting around him, by me saying to him: “My Love, my “I love You” runs in Yours. See, Jesus, how much You have loved us. And yet, there remains another thing to do. You have not done everything. It remains for You to give us the great Gift of your Divine Fiat as Life in the midst of creatures, so that It reigns and forms Its people. Soon, o Jesus. What are You waiting for? Your very works and your pains demand ‘Your Will be done - on earth as It is in Heaven’.” While I was thinking this, my sweet Jesus came out from inside of my interior and said to me:

“My daughter, when the soul remembers what I did and suffered in the course of my life here below, I feel my love renewed. As a result, my love swells and overflows, and the sea of my love forms the highest waves to pour itself out in a doubled way upon creatures. If you knew with how much love I await you when you make your rounds in my Divine Volition in each of my acts, because in It, everything that I did and suffered, is all in act as if I am really doing them (in that moment). And with all love, I wait to tell you: ‘See, daughter, I did this for you, I suffered it for you. Come to recognize the properties of your Jesus, which are also yours.’ My Heart would suffer if the little daughter of my Divine Volition did not recognize all of my goods. To hold Our goods concealed from one who lives in my Divine Fiat would be to not deem her as a daughter, or to not have Our full trust with her, which can never be, because Our Will identifies her so much with Us, that that which is Ours - is hers. So, it would be a pain for Us, and We would find Ourselves in the conditions of a very rich father who possesses many properties, whose children don’t know that the Father possesses so many goods. Therefore, not knowing those goods, those children are accustomed to live as poor, to have rustic ways; nor do they take care to dress nobly. Wouldn’t it be a pain for the father who has his properties concealed from these children? But, by making them known, their customs of living would change. And, they would dress and use noble ways according to their condition.

If it would be a pain for an earthly father, much more so for your Jesus, Who is the Celestial Father. As I make known to you that which I did and suffered, and the goods that my Divine Volition possess, thus my love grows towards you, and your love towards Me always grows more. And, my Heart rejoices in seeing Our little daughter rich of Our very goods. Therefore, your rounds in my Divine Volition is a vent of my love, and disposes Me to make you know new things and to give you one more little lesson - of all that which pertains to Us, and disposes you to listen to it and to receive Our gifts.”

* * *

March 12, 1930

God does not calculate time, rather the acts that we do. Example of Noah. The good that a long-term and continuous sacrifice possesses. Each act of the creature possesses its distinct seed.

My flight in the Divine Fiat continues. My poor mind does not know how to be without going around in Its innumerable acts. I feel that a supreme strength holds my mind fixed in the works of my Creator, and my mind goes around and around again - always without ever tiring. And oh! How many beautiful surprises in finds; now in the Creation, and now in the Redemption, of which blessed Jesus makes Himself a narrator, and in which, when something surprises me, it is nothing other than a greater invention of his love. While I was making my rounds in Eden and in the times before his coming on the earth, I thought to myself: "Why did Jesus wait so much time before coming to redeem mankind?" Moving in my interior, He said to me:

"My daughter, when Our infinite Wisdom must give a good to the creature, It doesn't calculate the time, rather the acts of creatures, because days and years do not exist before the Divinity, rather one sole perennial day. Therefore, We do not measure the time, rather We count the acts that creatures have done. So, in that time that seems so long to you, the acts that We wanted in order for Us to come to redeem man - had not been done. Only the acts determine to make the good come, not the time. Even more so, acts constrain Our Justice to exterminate creatures from the face of the earth, as it happened in the flood, which only Noah merited to be saved with his family, by obeying Our Will and with his long-term sacrifice of building the Ark. Through his acts, He merited the continuation of the new generation, in which the promised Messiah must come. A long-term and continuous sacrifice possesses such attraction and rapt strength to the Supreme Being, that they make Him determine to give great goods and continuation of life to mankind. If Noah had not obeyed Us and not sacrificed himself to fulfill such a long work, he would have been overturned by the storm in the flood. And not saving himself, the world and the new generation would have ended. Do you see what a long-term and continuous sacrifice means? It is so great, that it puts one into safety, and makes the new life rise in the others, as well as the good that We have established to give. That is why for the Kingdom of my Divine Will, I wanted your long and continuous sacrifice of so many years in bed. Your long sacrifice put you in safety - more than the Ark, in the Kingdom of my Divine Will, and inclines my goodness to give such a great Good to make It reign in the midst of creatures."

After that, I was continuing my round in the Divine Fiat to bring all the acts of creatures in homage to my Creator, and was thinking to myself: "If I will be able to gather everything that they have done and enclose everything in the Divine Volition, won't the acts change into acts of the Divine Will? my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, each and every act of creatures possesses its seed according to how it was done. If it wasn't done in my Divine Fiat, it does not possess Its seed. Therefore, it will never be an act of my Will. Because in the act of doing it, the act lacked my Will's seed of light, which has the virtue of changing the act into a sun - since the Divine Fiat's seed of light is the first act in the act of the creature. In the acts of creatures, it happens in this way: If a person has the seed of flowers and plants it, he will have flowers. If he plants the seed of fruits, he will have fruits. The seed of flowers will not give fruits, nor will the seed of fruits give flowers, but each will give according to the nature of its seed. Such are the acts of creatures. If there was a good purpose in the act, a holy purpose, to please Me, to love Me, in each act will be seen the seed of goodness, in the other, the seed of sanctity, the seed of to please Me, the seed of to love Me. These seeds are not light, but typifies which is the flower, which the fruit, which a little plant, and which a precious gem. And, I felt the homage of the flower, of the fruit, and so on; but not the homage that a Sun can give Me. By you gathering all these acts to enclose them in my Fiat, these acts remain what they are, each one the nature that the seed gave it. And, it is seen that these are acts that the creature can do, not acts that my Divine Will can do with Its seed of light in the act of them. The seed of Divine Will is not ceded by It if the creature does not live in the Divine Will, and if the creature does not give the Divine Will the first place of honor in its acts.”

* * *

March 24, 1930

The creature is nothing other than an effect of the reflections of God. The love of God in creating the creature. The firmness in repeating the same acts forms in the soul: The life of the good that is wanted.

I was doing my round in the Divine Fiat in order to follow all of Its acts. And arriving in Eden, I understood and admired the magnificent act of God, and his exuberant and overflowing love of the creation of man. And not being able to contain his flames, my always amiable Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, Our love became enamoured so much in the act that We created man, that We did nothing other than reflect upon him, so that he was a work worthy of Our creative hands. And, as Our reflections rained upon him, thus came to be infused in the man: The intelligence, the sight, the hearing, the word, the heartbeat in the heart, the movements to the hands, and the step to the feet. Our Divine Being is purest Spirit; therefore, We don’t have senses. In the whole of Our Divine Being, We are purest and inaccessible light. This light is eye, hearing, word, work, and step. This light does everything, looks at everything, hears everything, and is found everywhere. No one can escape from under the dominion of Our light. Therefore, while We created man, Our love was such the Our light formed him by bringing Our reflections upon him. And forming him, Our light brought him the effects of the reflections of God. Do you see the, my daughter, with how much love man was created? Our Divine Being went as far as dissolving Itself in reflections upon him, in order to communicate Our image and likeness to him. Could We have given a greater love? An yet, man makes use of Our reflections to offend Us, while he should have made use of Our reflections to come to Us, and with the reflections that We gave him, say to Us: ‘How beautiful your love created me, and in exchange, I love You, I will always love You, and I want to live in the light of your Divine Will’.”

Then, I was continuing to follow the acts in the Divine Fiat, and was thinking to myself: “I am always repeating and repeating the long story of my acts of the Divine Volition, the long monotonous song of my ‘I love You’. But what are their effects? Oh! If I could obtain that the Divine Will be known and reign upon the earth, at least for me, it (my acts) would be worthwhile.” But while I was thinking this, my beloved Jesus held me tightly to his Divine Heart, and said to me:

“My daughter, the firmness in asking forms the life of the good of what is asked for, disposes the soul to receive the good that it wants, and moves God to give the gift that is being asked for. Even more so, with so many repeated acts and prayers that the soul has done, it has formed in itself - the life, the practice, and the habit of the good that it is asking. God, won by the firmness of the asking, will give the soul the gift. And finding in the creature: The life of the gift that God makes to it - in virtue of the creature's repeated acts, the good that was asked for will convert into nature, in such a way that the creature will feel itself owner, and victorious in feeling itself transformed in the gift that it has received. So, your incessant asking for the Kingdom of my Divine Will forms Its Life in you, and your continual 'I love You' forms the life of my love in you. Since I have made the Gift of both of them to you, you feel in yourself, as if your very nature didn't feel anything other than the vivifying virtue of my Volition and of my love. The firmness in asking is the assurance that the Gift is yours. And by asking for the Kingdom of my Divine Will for everyone, it is the prelude so that the others can receive the great Gift of my Supreme Fiat. Therefore, continue to repeat (your acts) and don't grow weary."

* * *

April 1, 1930

What it means to enter in the first act of the Divine Volition. The little drops that the creature forms in Its sea of light. God put as many acts of love in all created things for as many times that created thing must serve the creature. Life needs food.

My poor intelligence feels drawn to cross the immense sea of the Divine Fiat, and goes looking for Its acts in Its sea to love It, adore It, and give It company. So, my poor mind is under the influence of an irresistible force, that makes it always go wandering in search for the acts of the Supreme Volition. But while I was doing this, I was thinking: "What good do I do in going around and around in the sea of the Divine Fiat?" My sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, far as many times as you go around in the sea of my Divine Volition, so many places you take in It and form your little drops in Our Sea, which disperse themselves in It and remain inseparable. And, we feel your little drops that love Us and make one sole Life with Us, and We say:

"The newborn of Our Volition loves Us in Our sea, not outside of It. It is just that We cede to her the rights of allowing her to come as many times that she wants in Our sea. Even more so, she doesn't want other than what We want. And this is the greatest joy that she brings Us, as if she brought in her little womb - all of Our Divine Will to Us, which, overflowing upon her from all parts, she remains eclipsed in Its light. We enjoy seeing your littleness enclosed in Our light. If you feel the irresistible strength to come to do your little rounds in the sea of Our Fiat, it is the prevailing strength of It, that loves so much to see your littleness form the drops of light in Its Sea. That's what it means to enter in the first act of Our Volition: The creature takes its place in It and forms its drops. So, consider making your rounds in Our Fiat as your great fortune."

Then, I followed the acts of the Divine Fiat in Creation. It seemed to me that everything palpitated of the love of their Creator towards creatures. The sky, the stars, the sun, the air, the wind, the sea, and all created things are in perfect harmony amongst themselves, they live as fused together. This is so true that where there is the light of the sun, in the very same space is the air, the wind, the sea, and the earth, but each one has its distinct palpitation of love towards the creature. While I was thinking about this and other things, my amiable Jesus, holding me tightly in his arms, said to me:

“My daughter, Our love in Creation was exuberant, but always towards man. In each created thing, We put so many acts of love for as many times that the creature must make use of that created thing. Our Divine Fiat, which maintains the equilibrium in all of Creation and is the perennial life of it, when It sees that the creature is about to serve itself of the light of the sun, It puts Our love in function to make Our love be encountered in the light that the creature receives. If the creature drinks water, Our love makes itself be encountered to say to the creature while it drinks: ‘I love you’. If the creature breathes air, Our love repeatedly says to it: ‘I love you’. If it walks on the earth, Our love says to in under its steps: ‘I love you’. There is nothing that the creature takes, touches and sees, in which Our love does not make its happy encounter with the creature by saying to it: ‘I love you’, to give it love. But do you know what the cause is of so much insistence of Our love? So that We receive the encounter of the creature’s love in each thing that it takes. Therefore, infinite love wanted to encounter finite love and form one alone, to put the equilibrium of His (God’s) love in the creature. And since the creature serves itself of created things without even thinking that Our love goes to meet it in the things that it takes to make it hear Our repeated chorus ‘I love you, I love you’, and serves itself without giving a glance to Him who sends the created things to it, the creature’s love remains unbalanced, because not meeting with Our love, the creature’s love loses the equilibrium and remains disordered in all of its acts, because it has lost the Divine equilibrium and the strength of the love of its Creator. So, be attentive with your exchange of love in order to make reparation to Me for so much coldness of creatures.”

Then, I was continuing my round in the acts of the Divine Will, and I was thinking to myself: “What good are the so many times that I make my rounds and remake them in the Supreme Fiat to follow Its acts?” My sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, all lives need food. Without food, the person is not formed, nor does it grow. And if the person lacks food, there is the danger that its life will be taken away from it. Now, following my Will, uniting yourself to Its acts, making your rounds and remaking them in It, serves to form the food to feed and form the Life of my Will in your soul, and make It grow. My Will does not know how to nurture Itself of other acts, if not of those that are done in Its Volition; nor can It form Itself in the creature, nor grow - if the creature does not enter into It. And, with the union of the creature’s acts (to my Divine Will), my Will forms its birth of light to form Its Life of Divine Will in the creature. And, the more acts of Divine Will the creature forms, and the more it unites itself with the acts of the Divine Will and lives in It, the more abundant food the creature forms to feed the Life of my Will and make It grow quicker in its soul. Therefore, making your rounds in It is Life that you form. It is food that serves for the development of the Life of my Divine Will in your soul, and serves to prepare the food to feed my Will in other creatures. So, be attentive and don’t want to stop.”

* * *

April 12, 1930

The acts done in the Divine Volition are walls of light around Jesus. The sun, the sower of the love of its Creator. The Sun of the Divine Will forms Its Sun in the creature, and is a Divine Sower in the creature.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues. And following Its acts, I was thinking about and accompanying the very bitter pains of my sweet Jesus. I was saying to myself: “Oh! How I want to defend and impede Jesus from receiving new offenses.” Moving in my interior and holding me between his arms, He said to me:

“My daughter, if you want to defend Me in such a way that the offenses do not reach Me, make reparation to Me in my Divine Will, because as you repair in It, you will form a wall of light around Me. And if they offend Me, the offenses will remain outside of this wall of light; they will not enter inside. I will feel defended by this wall of light; that is, by my very same Will, and I will remain there as in safety. So, your love in my Divine Volition will form for Me a wall of love, of light. Your adoration and reparations will form for Me a wall of light, of adorations, and of reparations, in such a way that the acts of not loving, and the scorns of creatures - will not reach Me, but will remain outside of these walls. And if I feel them, I will feel them from a distance, because my daughter has surrounded Me with an impregnable wall of my Divine Will. My daughter, love, reparations, and prayers outside of my Fiat are barely little drops. Instead, in my Divine Will, the same things and the same acts are seas, very high walls, and endless rivers. That which my immense Will is, so does It render the acts of the creature.”

Then, I was following the Supreme Fiat in Creation, and my mind was lost in understanding the continuous act of It towards creatures through created things, as well as directly. Directly, the continuous act of the Supreme Fiat brings us as if in Its arms to be our movement, breath, heartbeat, and our life. Oh! If creatures could see what this Divine Will does for us, oh how they would love It and would let themselves be dominated by It! But oh my! While we are inseparable from the Divine Will, and everything comes to us through It, and It is more than our very lives, It is not recognized, not looked at, and one lives as if we were far from It. So, while I was making my rounds in Creation, coming out from inside of my interior, my beloved Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, all created things say ‘love’. But the sun, with its light and heat, has the supremacy over everything and is the sower of my love. As the morning rises, thus the sun begins its sowing of love. The sun’s light and heat invests the earth, and as it passes from flower to flower, by its sheer touch of light, it sows the diversity of colors and perfumes, and pours out the seeds of love, of the different divine qualities, and of Its loving perfumes. As the sun passes from plant to plant, from tree to tree, with its kiss of light it pours forth the seed of sweetness of the divine love in some; the diversity of Our loving likes in others; and the substance of the divine love in others. In summary, there is no plant, flower, nor grass that does not receive the seed of Our love that the sun brings to it. In can be said that the sun passes its day sowing love. And irradiating all the earth, the mountains and the sea with its light, the sun sows the love of the eternal light of its Creator everywhere. But do you know the reason for this continuous, uninterrupted sowing of Our love that the sun does upon the face of the earth and in so many ways? Perhaps for the earth? For the plants? Ah no! Everything is for creatures. Oh! Yes, for their love, and to have the exchange of love from them. And oh! How wounded and embittered We remain when We see that creatures make use of the flowers, the fruit, and other things without recognizing that in every thing that they take, there is the seed of Our love which We have poured out upon each created thing through the sun. And to so much love, an ‘I love you’ is denied to Us.”

Having said this, He was silent. Because Jesus’ pain was so much, I remained afflicted. I continued my acts in the Divine Fiat, and Jesus added:

“My daughter, although the sun is untireable as a sower of Our love upon the earth, when it withdraws itself to form the day for other regions, the evening seems to give peace to the earth, giving the earth the freedom to produce or not to produce the seed that the sun has planted, reserving to itself (the sun) the new assault of the seed of love.

Instead, the Sun of my Divine Will never leaves the soul. As It reflects upon the soul with Its light, and more than sun - It is a Divine Sower in the soul, It forms Its Sun there in the creature with Its reflections. Therefore, for whoever lives in my Divine Volition, there are no nights, no sunsets, no sunrises, nor daybreaks, but always full day, because the light of my Divine Volition is given to the creature for to be its own nature. And that which is given as one's nature, remains as its own property. Even more so, the Sun of my Divine Will possesses the source of the light. As many Suns that It wants to form, so does It form. But with all of this, even though whoever lives in my Volition possesses its own Sun of the Divine Volition that never withdraws itself, the Sun of my Fiat always has new light and heat to give, new sweetness, new likes, new beauty, and the soul always has something to take. There are no pauses like in the sun that is under the vault of the sky, because not possessing the source of light, the sun cannot form as many suns for as many times the earth goes around it. But, for the Sun of my Divine Volition, which possesses the source, Its light always strikes. And calling the creature in continuous work with It, the Sun of my Divine Volition always gives the creature Its new, uninterrupted act.”

* * *

April 18, 1930

All of the first acts were done by God in Adam. The Divine Love's jealousy. Guaranty and certainty of the Divine Fiat for the creature. In the creation of man, everyone was present and in act. The vivifying and alimentary virtue of the Divine Volition.

My poor soul feels the irresistible need to cross the interminable sea of the Supreme Fiat. More than by a powerful magnet, I feel drawn to make my sweet sojourn in my dear Inheritance, given to me by my dear Jesus, which is his adorable Will. It seems that Jesus awaits me to give me his admirable lessons - now at one act done by his Divine Fiat, then at another. Then, my mind lost itself in going around in the Divine Fiat's innumerable acts. And arriving in dear Eden, where everything was celebration, my dear Jesus, stopping me, said to me:

“My daughter, if you only knew how much love the creation of man was formed with! By only remembering it, Our love swells and forms new inundations. Our love assumes the attitude of rejoicing when remembering Our work - beautiful, perfect, and made with such a mastery of art that no one else can form another similar to it. Man was so beautiful that he arrived to stir up jealousy in Our love, that everything (of man) be for Us. Besides, man was made by Us; he was Ours. To be jealous of him was a right of Our love. It is so true that Our love arrived to so much, that all the first acts done in Adam were done by his Creator. So, the first act of love was created and done by Us in Adam; the first heartbeat, the first thought, the first word. In summary, everything that he could have done afterwards, contained Our first acts that We did in him. And, on top of Our first acts, the acts of Adam followed. So, if he loved, his love came forth from inside Our first act of love. If he thought, his thought came forth from inside Our thought, and so on with all the rest. If We had not done the first acts in him, he would not have been able to do anything, nor know how to do anything. Instead, with the Supreme Being doing his first acts, We put so many little fountains in Adam for as many first acts that We did in him, in such a way that every time he wanted to repeat Our first acts, he had these little fountains at his disposition as so many diverse source of love, of thoughts, of words, of works, and of steps.

Therefore, everything was Ours, inside and outside of man. Therefore, Our jealousy was not only a right, but also justice - that everything must be for Us and all Ours. What's more, We gave him Our Divine Volition so that It would keep him beautiful, fresh, and make him grow of a Divine beauty. Our love was not content nor satisfied with having given him so much. But, Our love wanted to continue to always give; It didn't want to say 'enough'. Our love wanted to continue Its work of love. And, to have him with Our love, to have something to occupy Ourselves with man, Our love gave him Our same Volition so that It would render him capable of being able to always receive, and to hold him always with Us, with one sole Will. With my Will, everything was guaranteed and in safety, for him and for Us. So, he must be Our plaything, Our joy and happiness, and the object of Our conversation.

So, at the remembrance of the creation of man, Our love puts itself in the attitude of celebration. But, seeing him without the guarantee of Our Fiat, without safety, and therefore vacillating, disfigured, and far from Us, Our love is sad, and feels all the weight of Our infinite love as closed within itself, because it can't give itself to him, because it doesn't find him in Our Divine Will. But all of this is not everything. It was not only on Adam that Our love poured itself out so much, that it (Our love) arrived to do all the first acts, from which all the human acts must have life, but each creature that must come to the light of the day (that must be born) was present in that act of the creation of man. And Our Fiat, united to Our love, ran and ran, and embracing everyone, and loving everyone with one sole love, Our love put the primacy of Our acts in each creature that would come into existence, because of Us, there is no past, no future, but everything is present and in act. If it wasn't like this, Our Fiat would find Itself restrained and blocked, nor would It be able to spread Its flames out so much to enclose everyone in Its light, in such a way to do in everyone that which It does in one sole creature.

So, it wasn't only Adam who was the fortunate one of creation. All the other creatures came to be enriched of all the goods; and in him, owner of his same goods. What's more, everything that God does in one sole creature, all the other creatures acquire the right of Our acts, except the one who does not want to make use of those acts. Doesn't the same thing happen in the Redemption? as the Sovereign Lady of Heaven had the good of conceiving Me and of giving Me to the light (of making Me be born), all the other creatures acquired the rights of the goods of the Redemption. Not only this, but each and everyone acquired the right of being able to receive me in their hearts. And only the one who is ungrateful, who does not want Me, remains deprived of Me.

Now, my daughter, by disobeying Our Wills, Adam lost Our Kingdom. And for him, all the goods of Our Fiat were without the alimentary, vivifying life of Our Divine Will. One can say that he was like the destroyer of the goods of the Kingdom of my Divine Will in his soul, because for all the goods, if they lack the vivifying virtue and continuous food, by themselves, they lose their life little by little.

You must know, that to call these goods to life again in the creature, one was necessary who would call my Fiat again in its soul and refuse It nothing, making It dominate its soul freely. Then, my Fiat will be able to administer again Its vivifying and alimentary virtue to the goods, to call the destroyed goods to life again. That is why my Divine Will, by subduing you, and by you making yourself subdued, has revived Its vivifying virtue in you soul. And calling you in Its sojourn, It feeds you in order to call all of Its goods in you again. And all of your acts that you do in my Divine Will, making your rounds and remaking your rounds in Its acts, and your continuous asking for Its Kingdom on the earth, are none other than food that It gives you, and constitutes the right to the other creatures to be able to receive the Kingdom of my Divine Will again, with the life of all of Its goods. When I want to work a good to all creatures, I put the rising fount in one creature. From this fount, I open many channels, and I give the right to everyone to take the goods that the fount possesses. Therefore, be attentive, and make your flight in my Divine Will be continuous.”

* * *

April 23, 1930

In creating man, God did not detach man from Himself. Condition of necessity to love man. The last assault. The Great Gift of the Divine Will. The order that God had in creating man.

It seems to me that my sweet Jesus has desires to speak of the overflowing love with which man was created. He wants to tell his story as a venting of his intense love in order to be sympathized by his little daughter and give her the reason why He loves us so much and has the right to be loved. Then, making my rounds in the acts of his Divine Volition, and arriving in Eden, He continued to speak:

“Daughter of my Divine Volition, I want to make you know all the details with which man was created, to make you understand the excess of Our love and the right of Our Fiat to reign in him. You must know that in the creation of man, Our Divine Being found Itself in the situation of the necessity of Our love to love him, because everything that We gave him did not remain detached from Us, but transfused in Us. This is so true, that breathing into him, We infused life into him. But, We did not detach Our breath from that which We created in him, rather We made his breath be identified with Ours, in such a way that as man breathed, We felt and feel his breath in Ours. If the word was created with Our Fiat, and with Our Fiat pronouncing the word upon man’s lips, the word did not remain detached; (this was) a great gift given to him from inside Our Divine Volition. If We created in him: Love, movement, and step, this love remained bonded with Our love, his movement with Our movement, and his steps with the communicative virtue of Our steps in his feet. So, We felt man inside of Us, not outside of Us; not the son from a distance, but near; rather, fused with Us. How can We not love him if he was Ours, and his life was in the continuation of Our acts? Not to love him would go against the nature of Our love. And then, who is it that does not love that which is his own and which has been formed by him? Therefore, Our Supreme Being found Itself, and even now finds Itself in the situation of the need to love man, because man is still even now that which We created. We feel his breathing in Ours, his word is the echo of Our Fiat. We have not withdrawn all of Our goods. We are the immutable Being, nor are We subject to change. We loved, and We love. This love of Ours is so much that We Ourselves put Ourselves in the condition of the need to love him. That is the reason for Our so many stratagems of love, and for the last assault - in which We want to give him the great Gift of Our Fiat, so that he makes It reign in his soul, because without Our Volition, man feels the effects of the Life of the Divine Will, but does not perceive the cause, and therefore he does not take care to love Us. Instead, Our Divine Will will make him feel who it is that gives him life. And then, even he will feel the need to love - to love He who is the primary cause of all of his acts, and who loves him so much.”

Then, I was continuing my rounds in Creation, and my always amiable Jesus added:

“My daughter, look at what order there is in the Creation of all the universe. There are skies, stars, suns; everything is ordered. Even more so in the creation of man, Our Divine Being extended the order of Our Divine qualities in the depth of his soul like many skies. Therefore, We extended the sky of Love in him, the sky of Our Goodness, the sky of Our Sanctity, of Our Beauty, and so on with all the rest. And after having extended the order of the skies of Our Divine qualities, Our Fiat, in the vault of these skies, constituted Itself Sun of the soul, which with Its light and heat reflecting in him, must grow and conserve Our Divine Life in the creature. And, as Our Divine qualities point at Our Supreme Being, thus these skies extended in the man, indicate that he is Our dwelling. Who can tell you the way and the love with which We delighted in creating man? Oh! If he knew who he was, what he possesses, oh how he would esteem himself more and would be attentive to not stain his soul, and would love He who created him with so much love and grace.”

* * *

May 2, 1930

The Divine Will always runs towards the creature to embrace it and make it happy, and has the virtue to empty it of every evil. The course of the “I love you” in the Divine Volition.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues. Its light eclipses me, Its strength enchains me, and Its beauty rapt me, so much so that I felt myself nailed - without being able to move from the thought of such a Holy Volition, nor can I keep myself from looking at It. Its Life kills mine, and I lose myself in Its immensity. But while my mind was losing itself in the omnipotent Fiat, my sweet Jesus moved in my interior, and holding me tightly in his arms, said to me:

“My daughter, my Divine Will always runs as the first act of life towards the creature, to make it happy, to embrace it, and to empty it of the weight of all the human acts, because all that which is not my Will in the creature is hard, heavy, and oppressive. My Will empties the creature of everything that is human and makes everything light with Its breath. Therefore, the sign if the soul lives in my Divine Will is if it feels happiness within itself, because my Will is happy by Its own nature, and It cannot give unhappiness to whoever lives in It, because It does not possess unhappiness, nor does It want it, nor can my Divine Will change Its nature. So, whoever lives in my Fiat, feels within itself the virtue that gives happiness, and feels a vein of happiness flow in everything that it does, which makes every act light, every pain and sacrifice. This happiness brings with it the emptying of all evils and fills the creature of invincible strength, in such a way that with all truth, the creature can say: ‘I can do everything, and I can arrive to do everything, because I feel myself transmuted in the Divine Will, which has disbanded weaknesses, miseries, and passions from me. My very will, made happy from the Divine Will, wants to drink Its Divine happiness in large sips, and does not want to know how to live of anything if not of Divine Will’.”

The unhappinesses, the bitternesses, the weaknesses, and the passions do not enter into my Will, but remain outside of It. The balsamic air of my Will sweetens and fortifies everything. And, the more the soul lives in my Will and repeats its acts in my Divine Volition, the more levels of happiness, of sanctity, of strength, and of Divine beauty does it acquire. And even in the very created things, the soul feels the happiness that those created things bring of its Creator. My Divine Will wants to make the creature who lives in It, feel the nature of Its happiness. So, my Divine Will makes the creature happy in the light of the sun, in the air that it breathes, in the water that it drinks, in the food that it eats, and in the flower that entertains it. In summary, in everything, my Will makes the creature feel that my Will does not know how to give anything other than happiness to the creature. Therefore, Heaven is not far from the soul, but inside of the soul, which wants to see it happy in everything.”

Then, I was continuing my round in Creation to follow the Divine Fiat in every created thing. I was looking everywhere to put my usual “I love You”, to reciprocate Him for his so much love dispersed in all the universe. But my mind wanted to interrupt my course of my continuous “I love You”, by saying to me: “Is the life of this ‘I love You’ that I go repeating - in me?” While I was thinking this, my sweet Jesus, holding me tightly to Himself, said to me:

“My daughter, you have forgotten that one ‘I love You’ in my Divine Will has the virtue of: Having been said one time, it never finishes to say ‘I love You, I love You’. The ‘I love You’ in my Divine Will is life, and as life, it is not able to stop living, it must have its continuous act. My Fiat does not know how to do finite acts, and everything that the creature does in It, acquires continuous life. And since the breath, the heartbeat, and the continuous movement are necessary for to live, so the acts done in my Divine Will, having their beginning in It, are changed into life. And as life, they acquire the continuation of the same act, without ever stopping. Therefore, your ‘I love You’ is none other than the continuation of your first ‘I love You’. Being life, your first ‘I love You’ wants food for to grow. It wants the breath, the heartbeat, and the movement to live. And by repeating your ‘I love You’, your first ‘I love You’ feels the heartbeat, the breath, the movement, and grows in the fullness of love, and (repeating your ‘I love You’s) serves to multiply as many lives of love for as many ‘I love You’s you say. If you only knew how beautiful it is to see all Creation - strewn with so many lives of love for as many ‘I love You’s that you say. Therefore, on ‘I love You’ calls and recalls with insistence the other ‘I love You’. That is why you feel a need, a necessity of love to follow the course of your ‘I love You’. True good never remains isolated, much more so in my Divine Will, which being Life and has no beginning nor end, everything that is done in It is not subject to an end, nor to being interrupted. Therefore, one ‘I love You’ serves to call back to life another ‘I love You’ and to maintain it in life. The ‘I love You’s are steps of life of love that the creature does in my very Volition. So, don’t stop. Continue the course of your ‘I love You’ for the One who loves you so much.”

* * *

May 10, 1930

All created things are happy because they were created by a Divine Will. God loved man with perfect love and gifted him with love, sanctity, and complete beauty.

My little soul continues its course in the works that the Divine Will created. While I was looking at Creation to unite myself to the homages that created things give to my Creator, I saw that everything was happiness in them. The sky was happy in its extension, extendible to every point. It seems that its extension says “fullness of happiness”, and that all of its stars are levels of happiness that the sky possesses. And elevating them towards its Creator, the sky glorifies Him with the happiness of its extension and with so many levels of stars that it possesses. The sun is happy in its light, in the fecundity of its heat, in the beauty of its varied colors, in the sweetness and distinct tastes that it possesses. Oh! How happy the sun is, as it elevates itself to Him who has created it, to bring Him the glory, the homages of so much happiness that it possesses. But while my mind was losing itself in the many happinesses that Creation possesses, my sweet Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, all created things are happy; happy because they were created by a Divine Will, which in Itself is eternally happy. They are happy for the office that they occupy, happy in the space in which they find themselves, happy because they glorify their Creator. Nothing created by us has been created unhappy. So, everyone possesses the fullness of happiness.

Now, if We poured forth so much happiness in all Creation, in the creation of man, We not only created him doubly happy, giving him the vein of happiness in the mind, in the sight, in the word, in the heartbeat, in the movement, and in the step, but also We gave happiness itself to him in his power, multiplying it in each good act, word, step, and in everything else that he would have done. There were no limits of happiness for him like in created things. The virtue of always growing more in happiness was given to man, but only if he made himself be dominated by my Divine Will. Without my Will, happiness cannot reign. Oh! If created things could go out from Our Fiat, they would lose happiness in that instant, and would change into the most unhappiest works. So, if you want to be happy, let yourself be dominated by my Divine Volition, because only It has the virtue of giving happiness to the creature and of changing the most bitterest things into the sweetest nectar.

My daughter, you must know that We loved the creature with perfect love. Therefore, in creating it, We put complete happiness in the creature, love, and complete sanctity and beauty, so that the creature could put itself in competition with Us and reciprocate Us in happiness, and in complete love and sanctity, in a way that We could delight so much in it, to be able to say: “How beautiful is the work created by Us!” And to be sure that Our gifts would not suffer detriment in the creature, We entrusted the creature to Our Divine Will, so that It would be Life to the creature to take care of Our happiness, Our love, Our sanctity and beauty in the creature, making them always grow. So, all the good of man was tied to Our Divine Will. Rejecting Our Divine Will, all the goods finish; and there is no greater misfortune than that of not making oneself be dominated by my Divine Will, because only It is the conserver and the call of Our goods in the creature.”

* * *

May 20, 1930

All of Creation is a member of God, and participates in all the Divine qualities. The Divine Will, gatherer of all the acts that pertain to It.

I was doing my usual: Following the acts of the Divine Will in Creation. I understood that Creation is so united with its Creator, that it seems like a member that enjoys the union with its body, and in virtue of this union, the member feels the heat, the movement, and the life. But while I was thinking this, my always amiable Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, each created thing is a distinct member of Mine, and as such, is useful to Me to maintain the order and the life of Creation. And through Creation, I make use of it to make use of mercy in one moment, of my power in another moment, of my justice in another. Even more so, being that Creation is immersed in my Divine Will, it cannot move nor function if my Divine Fiat does not give it the movement or the aptitude to function. Now, just like Creation, the creature is a member of God, and as long as it remains united with God, it participates in all the qualities of God, like a member attached to the body participates in the circulation of the blood, in the heat, and in the movement of the same body. But, who maintains this union welded? Who maintains this member - of the creature attached to its Creator - permanent and in full vigor? My Divine will. My Divine Will is the bond of union, and the communication of heat and of movement, in such a way as to make the Life of its Creator felt in every movement. And more than blood, my Divine Will puts the Divine Sanctity, the strength, love and goodness in circulation with this member; in summary, It puts all the qualities of its Creator. But if my Will is not there, the creature will be a detached member that cannot flow to the communication of the body. The creature apparently seems united, but it will be like a paralyzed member that lives with difficulty, without movement. And, it will be a bother and a pain to the Divine Head to have a member and not be able to communicate the good of Its Life to it.”

After that, He added:

“My daughter, my Divine Will is the gatherer of everything that pertains to It. Jealous of Its acts, my Divine Will does not let even one go astray, because each one of Its acts contains an infinite act, a complete eternity, an interminability that never finishes. Therefore, they are acts not subject to get lost. And when my Fiat forms Its acts, the love and jealousy of Its act is so much that my Fiat holds the act in Its bosom of light as glory and triumph of the power of Its work. Now, when the soul lives in my Divine Will and encloses its acts in my Will, its act becomes an act of Divine Will; and then, by itself, the soul repeats all the acts that the Divine Will does, and gives the Divine Will the glory, and the reciprocation of its (the creature's) divine acts. And oh! How my Divine Fiat feels triumphant over this creature that It finds a pure act of Its Will in him, and makes Itself a gatherer of everything that this creature can do. My Divine Fiat does not lose even one breath, because It finds Its operating Will in everything; and that is enough for my Divine Fiat to have acts worthy of It. And my Divine Fiat loves the creature so much, that It holds the creature completely in Its bosom of light to give the creature the continuous Life of Its Volition and to receive the reciprocation from the creature. Therefore, my daughter, be attentive to receive this Life of Divine Will, so to be able to say: ‘You give me Life of Divine Will, and I give You Life of Divine Will’.”

* * *

June 2, 1930

The Divine Will is peace and security. Doubts and fears. Jesus, the only author of the laws. Necessity of the truths of Jesus. The lack of confidence (in God) - the weak point of our centuries.

I felt all oppressed because of the privations of my sweet Jesus. Oh God, what pain! His pain is without mercy, without relief, without support; lacking Jesus, one lacks everything. Consequently, one feels that he lacks the Life of He who can give life. It is a pain that converts all of the poor human being into voices that call Him Who can give it life. It is a pain of light that reveals with more clearness who Jesus is. But while I was swimming in the hard pain of his privation, another pain was added that hammered my poor intelligence. They had said to me that they doubted my writings, that it was found in them that Jesus had kissed me, embraced me, and had come to me almost everyday. My poor mind did not hold out. And talking nonsense, I said: "You see, my Love, what it means to not make Yourself seen and known to everyone? If You did this, they would fall into the net of not being able to be without You, and they would make You fall into the net of not being able to be without them." I was feeling tortured by doubts and fears, which are not necessary to say on paper. Having compassion on me, and with all goodness, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, calm yourself, calm down. You know that I have never tolerated doubts and fears in you. They are the old rags of the human will. Where my Divine Fiat reigns, my Fiat does not permit these miseries, because It is peace and security by Its nature, and renders the soul as such who makes itself be dominated by Its light. Therefore, what I want from you is that your breath, your heartbeat, and all of your being - be nothing other than my Will and love. Love and the Divine Will united together, form the greatest offering and the most beautiful homage that the creature can make to its Creator. It is the act that most resembles Our act. So, let's remain at our place of always loving one another and of never interrupting our love. A Divine Will always fulfilled, and a love never interrupted is the greatest thing that can be found in Heaven and on earth, which is only of Our Divine Being and of who gives himself in dependency upon Our Volition.

And then, my daughter, why do you afflict yourself so - for what they said? I am the author of the laws, and no one can subject Me to any law. So, I do what I want, and what I like. The disposing of souls, the fulfilling of a design of Mine on someone, and on someone else - another (design), is a right that I have reserved to Myself alone. What's worse? Giving Myself Sacramentally everyday, entering into their mouth, descending into the stomach, and perhaps even into souls who are full of passions, in order to communicate my Life, my blood mixing with their blood? Or, to give a kiss or an embrace to who loves me and lives only for Me? Oh! How true it is that the human sight is short, and that they make big things small, and small things big, only because they are not common to everyone. Besides this, everything that has happened between you and Me - the many intimacies, the many excesses of my love, and my repeated visits, was necessary for the Gift of my Divine Will, which had to make Itself known through you. If I did not come often, how could I have told you so many things about my Divine Will? If I had not made my seat in your heart as my living temple, my lessons would not have been so continuous.

Therefore, they must understand that everything that I have done to your soul was necessary to my Divine Will, Which merits everything, and was necessary so to hear of my many loving condescensions, to make them understand how much I love the creature, and how much I can love it in order to elevate it to my pure love and to the full confidence that it must have towards the One who loves it so much. Because if there is not full confidence between Me and the creature, they are not able to be elevated to live in my Divine Will. The lack of confidence always puts an obstacle to the union between the Creator and the creature. It is the thing that impedes the flight towards the One who loves it so much, and makes the creature live close to the earth. And even though the creature doesn't fall, the lack of confidence makes the creature feel its passions alive. Much more so, the lack of confidence has been the weak point in the course of the centuries. And at times, even good souls have been set back from the way of the virtues because of a lack of confidence. To remove this lethargy that the ghost of the lack of confidence produces, I wanted to show Myself all love with you, and with intimacy - more that Father and daughter, to call not only you, but also everyone else to live as children, to be lulled in my arms. I have enjoyed it, and you too. How beautiful it is to have the creature all love and all trust with Me. I can give it what I want, and it has no fear of receiving what it wants. Then, with the true confidence between Me and the creature put in order, the greatest obstacle of making my Divine Will reign in its soul has been removed.

Therefore, my daughter, I know where my plans are aimed at, what they must do, what I am doing, and of the great and the beautiful - when I elect a creature. And creatures, what do they know of this? As a result, they always have something to say about my work. And, this was not spared to my brief life here below, when my Most Holy Humanity was in the midst of creatures, and I was all love for them. If I neared sinners too much, they had something to say about it - that it wasn't decorous for Me to deal with them. And I let them say it. And without giving weight to what they said, I did it. I neared even more to sinners. I loved them more to attract them to love Me. If I did miracles, creatures had something to say, because they believed Me to be the son of Saint Joseph. They said that the promised Messiah could not come forth from a craftsman. And, they went rousing doubts about my Divine Person, so much as to form clouds around the Sun of my Humanity. And, I stirred up little winds to free Me from clouds. I reappeared shining more radiantly of light in their midst, to fulfill the purpose of my coming upon the earth, which was the Redemption. So, don't be surprised that they have found something to say about the way I have conducted Myself with you. Although they have formed clouds around the work that I have done with you, I will stir up my little winds to clear Myself of these clouds. If they love the truth, they will know that the way that I have acted with you, even though I have not done so with other souls, was necessary for Our love, because it was necessary to Our very Will in order to make It known and reign."

Then, He added with a more tender accent:

"My daughter, the poor things - they are not accustomed to walking in the fields of the light of my Divine Will. Consequently, it is not surprising that their intelligence has remained blinded. But, if they accustom themselves to look at the light, they will clearly see that only my love could reach to so much. And, since I love so much that my Divine Will be known - in order to make it reign, I wanted to be exuberant in the excess of my love that I contained in my Heart. Much more, everything that I did with you, can be called preludes of what I will do to those who make themselves be dominated by my Fiat! But, I tell you that all those who had something to say about my Humanity on the earth, and did not surrender to believe in the sanctity of my works, remained deprived of the good that I came to offer to everyone, and they remained outside of my works. It will be the same for those who murmur of the how, of the way, and of what I said. But, if they do not surrender, even they will remain deprived and outside of the good that I wanted to offer to everyone with so much love."

* * *

June 18, 1930

All created things call the creature to fulfill the Divine Will. In creating man, God put him inside of his Divine confines.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues. While my poor mind followed the Creation to give company to the acts that the Divine Will does in it, my sweet Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, every created thing calls the creature to do the Divine Will. They are without voice, and they speak. But they speak according to the act that the Divine Volition unfolds in them, because each created thing unfolds a distinct act of Divine Will. And with that act, the created thing calls the creature to fulfill His Divine Will. For this end, every created thing had a special delight from God to allure the creature with a mysterious way - to do his Divine Will. Behold therefore, the order and the harmony of all Creation around the creature, in such a way that the sun calls with its light. And emitting its heat, the sun calls the creature to fulfill the Will of its Creator. Hidden under the veils of the light, my Divine Fiat, with insistence and without ever retreating, calls the creature to receive Its Life so to be able to unfold It like It unfolds It in the sun. And almost about to attack the creature to make it listen, the sun invests the creature on all sides, to the right, to the left, above its head, and extends itself even under the creature’s feet to tell it with its mute language of light: ‘Look at me, listen to me. How beautiful I am. How much good I do to the earth, because a Divine Will reigns and dominates my light! And you, why don’t you listen to me with my touch of light, about receiving the Life of the Divine Volition to make It reign in you?’”

The sky speaks to you with gentle twinklings of the stars. The wind with its dominion, the sea with its murmur and with its tumultuous waves. The air speaks to you in your breathing, in your heartbeat; the little flower with its perfume. In summary, all created things compete to call you to receive my Will to make It reign, so that Heaven and earth are none other than one act of Divine Will. Oh! If creatures would listen to the many voices of Creation, that although mute, but real, and always in their midst, they would surrender to make the Divine Will reign, as It reigns with Its complete triumph in everything created by Us.”

Then, I was continuing my round in Creation. And arriving in Eden, I followed what God did in the creation of man. My beloved Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, as you reach this point of the creation of man, We feel wounded and have before Us the moving scene of how man was created by Us. Our love swells, overflows, and runs to find man as he was created by Us. Our love is delirious, and in its delirium, wants to embrace man, hold him tightly to Our bosom, beautiful and holy as when he came forth from Our creative hands. And not finding him, Our love changes into a delirium of grieving love, and longs for him who It loves so much.

Now, you must know that Our love was so much in creating man, that as soon as he was created, We put him in Our divine confines, and We gave him the human will as a little atom immersed in the immensity of the Divine Will. So, living of the Divine Will was innate for man because he was a little atom. Our Divinity said to man: “We give you Our Divine Will at your disposition so that the little atom of your human will feels the need to live of the immensity of the Divine Will, to grow of Its sanctity, to embellish itself with Its beauty, and to make use of Its light.” Seeing himself little, man will feel happy to live in the confines of Our Fiat, and to live of Our Divine qualities. And, We delighted in seeing this little atom of the human will live in Our endless confines, in Our care. Under our sight, man was growing beautiful and gracious, of a beauty so rare - enough to rapt Us and make Us find Our delights in him. But man’s happiness, and Our joys for having created man, were brief. This atom of the human will did not want to live of Divine Will, but of itself. It can be said that man repressed Our Will to live of his own will, because for as much that he wanted to go out of Our Will, he did not find even a little space of where to go, because there is no point where Our Will is not found. Therefore, for as much that man didn't want to live of Our Will, he didn't have anywhere to go. So, while he was in Our Divine Fiat, he was living there as if he wasn't there, and was voluntarily living of his miseries and of the darknesses that he himself was forming. That is the reason for Our continuous sighing: That man no longer holds Our Volition repressed, but rather represses the atom of his own will so he can live happy and holy, and so We can find Our delights in him."

* * *

July 4, 1930

All created things possess the repetitive virtue of the Divine Fiat.

I felt crushed under the weight of tremendous oppressions that surrounds my poor existence. Oh! How I longed for the Heavenly Fatherland. I would have wanted to disappear from the earth without ever hearing or seeing anyone again. I love and long to throw myself in Jesus' arms to say to Him: "My love, hold me tight in your arms. Don't leave me anymore, because only in your arms I feel secure and don't have fear of anything. Jesus, have pity on me. You know what's happening in my soul. Don't abandon me." I tried as hard as I could to abandon myself in the Supreme Fiat. Having compassion on me, and making Himself be seen, my sweet Jesus said to me with all tenderness:

"My poor daughter, courage. You know that you are not alone in suffering, but you have your Jesus who suffers them together with you. Rather, I suffer more than you, because they are things that regard Me more than you. I feel those sufferings so strong that I feel my pierced Heart tear. But, what must be consoling to us is that they are things of their exterior. Nothing has changed between Me and you. Things are the way they were. Human judgements have no power over Our intimacies and communications; so, they cannot hurt us.

Therefore, I never want your flight in my Divine Will interrupted. My Divine Will has the repetitive virtue. All things created by Us that continuously stay in Our Volition, possess the virtue of repeating the continuous act that they received by God in Creation and of giving their continuous act to creatures everyday. Everyday, the sun gives its light, and the air continuously makes itself be breathed. Everyday, water repeatedly gives itself to man to quench him, wash him and refresh him. And so, all the other created things repeat the repetitive virtue of my Divine Fiat. And, if some of these created things could go out from inside of my Divine Fiat, they would instantly lose the virtue of repeating their continuous act - that although that act is old, it is always new for the good of creatures.

This is the surest sign that created things are in my Divine Will. And this is the sign that the soul lives in It and makes itself be dominated by It: If its acts, although old, have the virtue as if they were always new and continuous. In my Divine Will, there are no stops. The soul feels the ease and virtue of its continuous act. Does the sun perhaps stop in its course of always giving light? Certainly not. Such is the soul who lives in my Divine Will. It feels all the fullness of the life-giving virtue of the Divine Goods and of the continuous act of the Divine Fiat in itself, as if converted into its nature.

Now, just as created things repeat their continuous act, so do my acts and those of my Celestial Mother. Because done in the Divine Will and animated by It, Our acts possess the repetitive virtue.

And more than sun, Our acts dart creatures and rain all the goods of all of Our acts upon their heads, which although old, are always new and for the good of wretched humanity, because they possess the continuous act. But, even though they rain upon their heads without ever stopping, Our acts are not taken by creatures. So, creatures receive the fruit of Our continuous acts when creatures recognize them, implore them, and want to receive them. Otherwise, they receive nothing. It's the same as to the sun. if the creature does not go outside to enjoy and receive the good of its continuous light, the creature does not receive all the good of its light, and receives it only those times when the creature goes outside. And if another doesn't open the door, even though the sun invests the earth with its continuous act of light, the creature will remain in the darkness. Therefore, my daughter, if you want to take all the good of your Jesus and of the Sovereign Lady of Heaven, you will find them all in act in Our Fiat. Implore them upon yourself, recognize them, and you will feel yourself under the rain of Our continuous acts."

* * *

July 9, 1930

Value of the human will when it enters into the Divine Will. Fears because of authoritative judgements. Jesus' responses and his teachings.

My little intelligence feels the extreme need of the Divine Volition, because It alone is my support, my strength, and my life. Oh, Divine Will! Oh please, don't abandon me. If I, who am ungrateful, did not know how to follow your flight, your light, please forgive me. And strengthening my weakness, absorb the little atom of my existence in You, and make it live lost in You, so to live only and always of your Supreme Will. But, while my mind was losing itself in the Divine Fiat, my sweet Jesus, making his little visit to my soul, said to me:

"My daughter, courage. I am with you. What do you fear? If you knew the beauty, the value that the human will acquires when it enters and makes its continuous stay in the Fiat! Ah! Don't lose one instant of living in It. You must know that as the human will enters into the Divine Will, Our light invests it and embellishes it of a rare beauty. The soul remains so fused, that it does not feel like a stranger to its Creator. Rather, the soul feels that its own being is all of the Supreme Being, and that the Divine Being is all its own - and with the freedom of child. Without fear, and with a rapt trust, the soul elevates itself in the unity of the Will of its Creator. And in this unity, the atom of the human will puts its 'I love You'. And while the soul forms its act of love, all of the Divine Love runs, surrounds and embraces the 'I love You', and transmutes Itself in the 'I love You' of the creature. And, the Divine Love makes the creature's 'I love You' so big - for as big as is Our love. And We feel the fibers, the life of Our love in the little 'I love You' of the creature. And, We give the 'I love You' of the creature the value of Our love. And, We reciprocate this 'I love You' by giving the happiness of Our love in the little 'I love You' (of the creature). This little 'I love You' does not go out anymore from inside of the unity of Our Volition. And while the 'I love You' remains there, it diffuses itself so much in the orbit of the Fiat, that it does nothing other than follow the Divine Will everywhere. And it is the same with all the other acts that the creature proposes to do in Our Will. You must think about - that it is a creative Will that enters into the act of the creature, and therefore It must do worthy acts, acts that It knows how to do and that is proper to a Divine Will."

Then, I felt more oppressed than ever. My poor mind was saddened from thoughts that crushed me.

They took away the beautiful serene of the day of peace that I always enjoy, and which Jesus Himself held as so important and was jealous of my peace, and did not permit that anything disturb me. And now, I feel that they want to make a thunderstorm rain upon my head. Authoritative persons, having read some volume of my writings, found difficulty with the intimacies of Jesus that He had used with me; the pouring out of his bitternesses in the unworthy soul of mine, and so many other things, that it wasn't of the Divine dignity to act in this way with the creature.

Since I was in my simplicity, and being that my past confessors assured me, and even holy and authoritative people to whom I asked with trepidation if it was Jesus or not who was acting with me, and they assured me that it was Jesus, saying to me that it is usual for Him to joke on the face of the earth with His creatures, and since I believed their assurances, I gave myself into Jesus' hands and let Him do with me what He wanted. Even though He subjected me to atrocious pains and even death, I was happy each time that it happened, because it was enough for me that Jesus was happy. What's more, that which Jesus has done with me, be it pouring forth (his bitternesses), be it that he brought me together with Him, or whatever else He did to me, I don't ever remember of having felt a shadow of sin, or not good or unholy tendencies. Rather, His touch was pure and holy. And, I felt that even more pure, was his pouring forth from his mouth into mine, which was like a little fountain that went forth from Jesus' mouth and poured into mine. And as for the pains that I felt, I discovered how much Jesus suffered, and how ugly sin is. And, I would have given my life many times rather than offend Him. I felt my little being convert all into reparation to be able to defend my sweet Jesus. Therefore, to think that an act so holy of Jesus had been interpreted so badly, I felt so horrible that I do not have the words to express myself. Then, having compassion on me, blessed Jesus made himself seen, and all afflicted and with tenderness, said to me:

"My daughter, do not fear. My way of acting is always pure and holy - whatever it is, even if it seems strange to creatures, because all sanctity is not in the exterior act of the way of acting, but from the fount of the interior sanctity where it goes forth, and from the fruits that my way of acting produces. If the fruits are holy, why want to judge my way? I liked my way, and therefore, I did it. From the fruit, one knows the tree - if it is good, mediocre, or bad. And to my highest regret, instead of judging the fruits, they have judged the bark of the tree and perhaps not even the substance and the life of the very tree. Poor things! What can they understand by looking at the cortex of my ways, without descending to the fruits that it has produced? they remain more in the darkness and can suffer the disgrace of the pharisees, who, looking at the cortex of my works and words and not at the substance of the fruits of my life, remained blind, and finished by giving Me death. And so, a judgement is given without imploring help from the author and giver of lights, and without consulting He - who with such ease they judge! And then, what bad did I do, and what bad did you receive when I poured forth - the little fountain that went forth from the fount of my bitternesses and from what creatures gave Me - from my mouth into yours? I didn't pour sin into you, but part of the effects. And so, you felt the intensity of the bitternesses, the nausea, and how ugly sin is. And feeling these effects, you abhorred sin and understood how much your Jesus suffers. And you transmuted your being, and even every drop of your blood in reparation for your Jesus. Ah! You would not have loved to suffer so much to make reparation to Me if you had not felt the effects of sin in you and how much your Jesus suffers in being offended. But, they can say that because I did it from the mouth, I was able to do it differently. I liked it in that way. I wanted to do to you like a Father does with his little daughter. Because she is little, she lets one do what one wants. And her Father pours forth in his little one, with ways so affectionate and loving, as if He found his own life in her, because He knows that she would refuse nothing to her Father, even if it meant the sacrifice of her own life.

Ah! My daughter, my crime is always love, and it is also the crime of the one who loves Me. Not finding other material to judge, they judge my excessive love and that of my children, who perhaps put their own life for those very ones. Now, they can judge how they want. But what will be their embarrassment when they come before Me and will know with clarity that it was I who acted in that way that they condemned, and that their judgement impeded a great glory of Mine for Me - and a great good in the midst of creatures, which is to know with more clearness what it means to do my Divine Will and make It reign? There is no greater crime than that of impeding good. Therefore, my daughter, I recommend to you that you don't let it trouble you, nor change anything of all that happens between Me and you. Give Me an assurance that my work will have its fulfillment in you. Don't want to give Me any pain on your part. I wanted to diffuse the good outside of you, but the human will gets in the way of my designs. So, pray that the human will is overcome, and that the Kingdom of my Divine Will does not remain suffocated in the midst of creatures.

But, I tell you that my knowledges of my Divine Will will not remain buried. They are part of my Divine Life. And as Life, they are not subject to die. At the most, they can remain hidden, but die - never, because it is decreed by the Divinity that the Kingdom of my Divine Will be known. And when We decree, there is no human power that can oppose Us. At the most, it will be a question of time. And, in spite of the oppositions and contrary judgements from these authoritative people, I will make my way. And, if these, with their judgements, want to bury such a great good and so many Divine Lives of my truths, I will put these people aside, and will make my way, disposing other persons - more humble and simple, and more easy to believe in my admirable and multiple ways that I use with souls. And with their simplicity, and being disposed, instead of finding quibbles, they will recognize that which I have manifested on my Divine Will as a gift of Heaven. And these will serve Me admirably to propagate the knowledges of my Fiat in the world. Didn't the same happen in my coming upon the earth? The wise, the educated, and the people of dignity didn't want to listen to Me. Rather, they had shame to come near Me. Their doctrine made them believe that I could not be the promised Messiah, in such a way that they arrived to the point of hating Me. And, I put them aside and chose the humble, the simple, and the poor fishermen, who believed Me, and I made use of them in an admirable way to form my Church and propagate the great good of the Redemption. I will do the same of my Divine Will.

So, my daughter, don't batter yourself in hearing of so many difficulties that they make, and let's not change anything of what happens between Me and you. Continue to do in my Divine Will that which I taught you. I never omitted doing anything of what I had to do for the Redemption, in spite that not everyone believed in Me. All the bad remained for them (they remained in the dark because they didn't judge the fruit, rather the bark of the tree). For Me, it was necessary to continue my course that had been established to be done for the love of creatures. You will do the same. Continue your abandonment in my Divine Will and your acts in It, and I will not leave you. I will always be together with you."

* * *

July 16, 1930

The Divine Will - life; love - food. One sole act does not form life nor a complete act. Necessity of the repetition of the acts in order to form the life of the Divine Will.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues. Oh, yes! I feel It, which as air, makes Itself breathe from my poor soul. I feel Its most pure light that holds the darknesses of the night of my human will repressed. As my human will rises to put itself into action, the light of the Divine Will, sweetly reigning over my will, not only represses the darknesses to not allow my human will to have life, but also powerfully calls me and draws me to follow Its acts. Then, following Its divine acts, I ascertained how much He loves us, because in each of Its acts, seas of love went forth for creatures. My always amiable Jesus, making his Heart seem invested of ardent flames for love of creatures, said to me:

“My daughter, my love towards creatures is so much that it does not cease even one instant to love them. If my love ceased one sole instant to love them, all of the universe and all creatures would end in nothing. But, the existence of all things had the first act of life from my full, whole, complete, endless and unceasing love. And, to make my love have all its fullness, I made my Divine Will go forth from Me as the act of life of all the universe and of each act of the creature. So, my Will as the Life of everything, my love is the continuous food of all Creation. Life cannot live without food. If food does not find life, it does not have anyone to give itself to, nor anyone to nurture. Therefore, all the substance of all Creation is my Will as Life, and my love as food. All other things are superficial and as ornamental. So, the Heavens and earth are full of my love and of my Will. There is no point where They do not pour Themselves out as an impetuous wind towards creatures. And this is always, always, without ever ceasing. My Will and love are always in act to pour Themselves out upon creatures, so much so that if the creature thinks, my Divine Will makes Itself Life of the creature’s intelligence, and my love, feeding the intelligence, develops it. If the creature looks, my Divine Will makes Itself Life of its eye and my love feeds the light (the creature uses to see with). If the creature speaks, if its heart beats, if it works or walks, my Will makes Itself Life of its voice, my love - food of the word; my Divine Will makes Itself Life of the heart, my love - food of the heartbeat. In summary, there is nothing that the creature does in which my Will does not run as Life and my love as food. But what is Our pain in seeing that the creature does not recognize Who forms its life and Who feeds all of its acts!”

After that, I was continuing my acts in the Divine Volition. In my mind, I was thinking to myself: “What glory do I give to my God always repeating the same acts, and what good is it to me?” My sweet Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, one sole act does not form life, nor whole works in creatures. In Creation, the very Divinity wanted to do the repetition a good six times in order to form all the machine of the universe. We could have made all created things with one sole ‘Fiat’; but no, it pleased Us to repeat It to have the pleasure in seeing go forth from Us with Our creative strength: Now the blue sky, now the sun, and so on with all the other things created by Us. The last ‘Fiat’ was repeated upon man, as the fulfillment of all the work of the Creation. And although Our ‘Fiat’ did not add another ‘Fiat’ to create other things, It always repeats Itself to maintain and conserve all things in act in Its breath of the ‘Fiat’, as if (in that moment) We had created them. And oh, how necessary is the repetition! By repeating, love grows, and the enjoyment is doubled. One appreciates more what is repeated, and one feels the life of the act that is repeated. Now, as you continue your acts in my Divine Will, you come to form the Life of my Divine Will in you; by repeating your acts, you make that Life grow and you feed it. Do you believe that by having repeated them a few times, you would have been able to form Its Life in you? No, my daughter. At the most, you would have been able to feel Its balsamic air, Its strength, Its light, but not form Its Life. The acts that never cease are necessary to be able to say: 'I possess the Life of the Fiat'. Doesn't perhaps the same happen to the natural life? Food and water are not given only once, and then put aside without giving the creature anything anymore; rather everyday. If one wants to conserve life, it is necessary to feed it. Otherwise, by itself it extinguishes. Therefore, continue your acts in my Fiat - if you don't want Its Life to be extinguished and not have Its fulfillment in you."

* * *

July 24, 1930

The Divine Will is in continuous movement in Our Divine Being. The prodigy of when the Divine Will works in the creature; God's satisfaction.

My poor heart finds itself between two insurmountable powers: The Divine Fiat and the pain of the privation of my sweet Jesus. Both are powerful over my poor heart. While I feel all the bitterness of being deprived of Him who formed all the happiness of my poor existence - and now lacking Him, it is converted into intense bitterness for me. The Divine Volition, subduing me, absorbs me into his Divine Will to transmute by bitterness in It. Now, while I found myself under tremendous oppressions, my sweet Jesus, surprising me, said to me:

"My daughter, courage. Don't fear. I am here with you. And the sign - is that you feel the Life of my Fiat in you. I am inseparable from It. You must know that Our Will is in continuous movement in Our Divine Being. Its movement never ceases, Its works are always in act. Therefore, It is always operating. The marvelous surprises that happen when the creature enters in Our Will are enchanting and prodigious. As the creature enters, Our Volition closes Itself within the creature. And while It closes Itself to the point of completely filling the creature, since the creature is not able to completely embrace It nor completely close It all inside of itself, Our Volition overflows outside of Itself, in a way that fills Heaven and earth, and in a way that one sees that the littleness of the creature encloses a Divine Will, which maintains Its incessant movement and Its operating works in the creature. There is nothing greater, more holy, more beautiful, more prodigious than the operating of my Volition in the littleness of the creature. While my Volition works, since the creature cannot completely enclose It within itself, nor completely embrace It because the creature is finite, and therefore it doesn't have the capacity to enclose the immense and the infinite, the creature takes as much as it can contain until It is overflowing outside. And while my Volition overflows, one sees the creature under a rain of light of various and rare beauties inside and out, which Our Divine Being takes so much delight in - that We feel Ourselves rapt, because We see that the human littleness, in virtue of Our Fiat that fills it, is transmuted in the beauties of Our Divine qualities, which have such strength to rapt us and make Us enjoy Our pure joys and Our inexpressible happinesses in the creature.

You must know that each time the creature calls my Volition as operating Life in itself and plunges itself to remain submersed, We like it so much that all of Our Being contributes, and We put such value (in that act) for as much value as Our Divine Being contains. Even more so, Our Divine Fiat has the first act of life in the act of the creature. The creature had been nothing other than the participant. Therefore, since it is Our act, We put all the weight of Our Divine Life. Do you see then what it means to do one act in Our Will? what it means to multiply the acts? And, do you understand the great loss of the one who does not operate in Our Volition?"

* * *

August 2, 1930

All created things are veiled. Only in Heaven everything is unveiled. Necessary conditions and work in order to know the truths.

I was thinking about the many truths that blessed Jesus had told me about the Divine Will, and the only to obey, I wrote them on paper. I was thinking about how some people, reading them not only do not remain taken by these truths, but it seems to me that they consider them as truths not to give importance to. I felt badly for this. While for me, these truths seem like many Suns - one more beautiful than the other, capable of being able to illuminate all of the world; for others, it is the contrary. To the others, It seems that these do not have even have the capacity to warm the world and give it a little bit of light. While I was thinking this, my amiable Jesus, all goodness, said to me:

"My daughter, everything here below, as much in the supernatural order as in the natural order, are all veiled. Only in Heaven are they unveiled, because in the Celestial Fatherland, veils do not exist, but things are seen as they are in themselves. So, up above, the intellect does not have to work to understand them, because by themselves, they show themselves for what they are. And, if there is work to do in the Blessed Dwelling, if one can truly call it work, it is to enjoy and be happy in the things that one openly sees.

Instead, here below, it is not like that. Since the human nature is spirit and body, the veil of the body impedes the soul from seeing my truths. The Sacraments and everything else are veiled. I Myself, Word of the Father, had the veil of my Humanity. All of my words and my Gospel were under the form of examples and of similes, and whoever neared Me to listen to Me with faith in their heart, with humility, and with wanting to know the truths that I manifested to them in order to put them in practice, understood Me. By doing this, they broke the veil that hid my truths, and they found the good that was in these. (Acting) with faith and humility, and wanting to know my truths, was a work that they did. And with this work, they broke the veil and found my truths for what they are in themselves. Therefore, they remained tied to Me and to the good that my truths contain. Others who didn't do this work, touched the veil of my truths, not the fruit that was inside. So, they remained deprived and didn't understand anything. And turning their back on Me, they left Me.

Such are my truths that I, with so much love, manifested to you about my Divine Will. In order to make my truths shine like unveiled suns, which they are, creatures must do their work, make the road to touch them, which is faith. They must desire my truths, want to know them, and pray and humble their intelligence in order to open their intellect, to make the good and the life of my truths enter into themselves. If they do this, they will break the veil and will find the truths more than a shining sun. Otherwise, they will remain blind and I will repeat the saying of the Gospel to them: "You have eyes and you do not see, ears and you do not hear, tongue and you are mute."

See, even in the natural order, all things are veiled. Fruits have the veil of the rind. Who likes the good of eating the fruits? The one who does the work of nearing the tree, gathering the fruit, and removing the rind that hides the fruit. This one likes and makes the desired fruit his food. The fields are veiled with straw. Who takes the good that the straw hides? Whoever strips that straw has the good of taking the grain to form the bread to make his daily food. In summary, everything here below has a veil that covers them in order to give man the work and the will, and the love of possessing them and liking them. Now, my truths greatly surpass natural things, and present themselves to the creature like veiled noble Queens, in act of giving themselves to the creature. But, my truths want the work of the creature. They want the steps of the creature's will to near them, in order to know them, possess them and love them, which are conditions necessary to break the veil that hides them. Once the veil of the truths is broken, the truths make their way by themselves with their light, giving themselves in possession to the one who has looked for them.

Here is the reason why some read the truths about my Divine Will and don't understand what they read; even more so, they are confused: Because they lack the true will of wanting to know them. It can be said that they lack the work to know them, and without work, nothing is acquired, nor do they merit such a great good. And I, with justice, deny them what I abundantly give to the humble, and to those who long for the great good of the light of my truths.

My daughter, how many of my truths are suffocated by who does not love to know them and by who does not want to do his little work to possess them! I feel that they want to suffocate Me if they could. And in my pain, I am constrained to repeat what is said in the Gospel, and I do it with acts: I take away from the one who has nothing or who has some little thing of my goods, and I leave those souls in their wretched misery, because these, not wanting my truths and not loving them, will hold them without esteeming them and without fruit. And, I will give more abundantly to those who have, because these will hold my truths as precious treasures, which will always fructify them more."

* * *

August 12, 1930

Disheartenment doubles the weight of the pains. In what way Jesus visits us. Love was the first thing that moved the first act in everything that God did for creatures, but the Divine Will gave life to love.

I am under the dominion of the Divine Fiat, the only One who knows my profound wounds, which are always embittering and multiplying in my poor soul. But all of my hope is that only the Divine Volition reigns in the unfortunate painful circumstances of my existence here below, and that these circumstances want to hurry my departure for the Celestial Fatherland. But while I found myself under the nightmare of very bitter pains, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, don't batter yourself, because battering calls disheartenment, which doubles the weight of the pains, so much so that the poor creature, with this doubled pain, can hardly drag itself in the way that it must travel, while my Volition wants that it doesn't drag itself, but that it fly in the interminable light of my Volition.

And then, the pain. It is I in the pain who am making my little visits. The pain is the veil, but inside is my Person, which hidden inside the veil of the pain, visits the creature.

And then, the necessities (of the creature). It is I who am hidden in the necessities. I dispose the necessities so that I can make the most beautiful visits in order to make Myself the help of those necessities. (So,) I visit creatures not only by making Myself seen, but in so many ways, that it can be said that in every meeting, in every circumstance, in big or small things that happen, is a visit to the creature that I dispose Myself to make - to give creatures what they need. And then, for whoever lives in my Divine Volition, being that my permanent dwelling is in the creature, I not only visit it, but I enlarge the confines of my Volition.”

Then, I continued to follow the acts in the Supreme Fiat, to be able to follow the incessant and interminable love of my Creator with my acts of love. My sweet Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, if you knew how sweet your love is to Me, because I hear Our echo in your love, Our divine fibers, which, elevating your love in Ours, your love runs and runs so sweetly in Our love, telling Us: ‘I want to love You as much as You loved me, and how You loved me. For as many times that You told me that You loved me, I want to say it too’. We are so pleased, that We want the creature to be the repeater of Our love, and We enlarge the love of the creature so much, in a way to hear the sweet sound of the creature’s love in all of Our love. Even more so, the first thing that moved the first act in everything that We did for creatures, was love. And since without Our Will, Our love would have been as a fire without light; and without Our love, Our Will would have been as light without heat, that which has given Life to Our love has been the Fiat. Therefore, what moved Us was love, but that which gave and gives Life to everything is Our Divine Will. That is why whoever wants to find true Life, must come in Our Divine Will, in which the soul will find the fullness of Our love, and will acquire the prerogatives of Our love, which are: Fecundant love, love that rises, love that embraces everything, love that moves everything in love, insuperable love and without end, and love that loves everything and conquers everything. Therefore, when I hear you run from one created thing to another - to put your ‘I love You’ on every act of my Will to invest the acts of my Will with your ‘I love You’, I hear the sweet sound of your love in Ours, and I love you more.”

Then, He added with a very tender accent:

“My daughter, Our love towards creatures is so much, that in each act that the creature does, Our love runs to love the creature, and Our Volition runs to form the Life of its act. So, in each thought that the creature forms in its mind, is an act of love that We send it, and Our Will loans Itself to form the Life of its thought. In every word that it pronounces, in every heartbeat of its heart, in every step that the creature moves, are so many acts of Our love that run towards the creature, and in which Our Fiat loans Itself to form the Life of its word, the heartbeat of its heart, and the step of its feet. So, the creature is kneaded by Our love, and lives under the sweet storm of Our love. Above the creature, pends Our incessant love that loves it so much. And Our love runs rapidly to give the creature the Life to each of its acts, even to the smallest. Oh! If creatures knew how much We love them, and how inclined We are towards them to love them always, always - that We do not even let one of its thoughts escape in which We don’t send Our special and distinct love, oh, how they would love Us, and Our love would not remain as isolated - without the love of creatures!

Our love continually descends towards creatures, and their little love does not dispose itself to rise up towards its Creator. What pain, my daughter, to love and not be loved. This is why when I find a creature who loves Me, I feel its love harmonize with Mine, and as my love descends towards that creature, thus its love rises towards Me, and I give it such an abundance of graces, favors, and divine gifts, enough to stupify Heaven and earth.”

* * *

August 15, 1930

The life of the Sovereign Queen was formed in the Divine Sun.

I was thinking about my Heavenly Mamma in the act when she was assumed into Heaven. I offered my little acts done in the Divine Fiat to give her my homages and praises for her honor and glory. But while I did this, my sweet Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, the glory, the greatness and the power of my Celestial Mamma in Our Fatherland is insuperable. Do you know why? Her life on earth was lived inside of Our Divine Sun. she never went out from inside the dwelling place of her Creator. She knew nothing other than only Our Will. She loved nothing other than Our interests, and she asked for nothing other than for Our glory. It can be said that she formed the Sun of her life in the Sun of her Creator. So, whoever wants to find her in the Celestial Dwelling, must come in Our Sun, where the Sovereign Queen, having formed her Sun, pours out her maternal rays to the benefit of everyone. She is radiant of such beauty, that she rapt all of Heaven, and everyone feels doubly happy to have such a holy Mother, and a Queen so glorious and powerful. The Virgin is the first and only daughter who possesses her Creator, and is the only one who has made her life in the Sun of the Supreme Being. And, having drawn her life from this Eternal Sun, it is not a marvel that she who lived of light, formed her refulgent Sun that makes all the Celestial Court rejoice.

To live in my Divine Will means exactly this: To live of light and form one’s life in Our very Sun. this was the purpose of Creation: To have creatures created by Us, Our beloved children, in Our very dwelling, feeding them with Our very food, vesting them with royal clothes, and making them enjoy Our same goods. What earthly father and mother thinks about putting the birth of their viscera outside of their dwelling, their dear children, without giving their heredity to their own children? I believe no one. Rather, how many sacrifices do they not make to render their own children rich and happy? If an earthly father and mother arrives to do so much, much more so - the Celestial Father. He wanted and loved that His children remain in His dwelling to hold them around Himself, to be happy with them and hold them as a crown of His creative hands. But ungrateful man abandoned Our dwelling, rejected Our goods and contented himself with wandering about, living in the darknesses of his human will.”

* * *

August 24, 1930

The Divine Will takes on all forms to give Itself to the creature. The creation of man, investiture of the center of love and of the Divine Fiat.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues. I feel that Its invincible power absorbs me to Itself, and in so many ways that I cannot do less than follow Its acts. While I was following the acts of the Divine Will done in Creation, my amiable Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, the love of my Divine Fiat towards creatures is so much that It takes on all forms in order to give Itself to the creature. It takes the form of the sky to remain extended over the creature’s head. And by perpetually remaining extended, my Divine Fiat embraces the creature from all sides, guides it, protects it, and defends it without ever withdrawing, while always remaining a sky to form Its sky in the heart of the creature. My Divine Fiat takes the form of stars and sweetly makes Its gentle twinkling descend upon the creature to caress the creature with Its kiss of light, and sweetly insinuates Itself to form the stars of the most beautiful virtues in the sky of the creature’s soul. My Fiat takes the form of sun to irradiate the creature of light, and to descend in the depth of the soul with Its vibrating heat. And with the strength of Its light and heat, my Fiat forms the tints of the most beautiful colors to form the Sun of Its Fiat in the creature. My Divine Fiat takes the form of wind to purify the creature. And with Its dominion, by blowing, It maintains the Divine Life ignited. And as It blows, thus my Fiat makes the Divine Life grow in the heart of the creature.

My Divine will abases Itself to everything, and Its love is such, that It constitutes life to everything that can serve the creature. My Divine Will arrives to the point of taking the form of air to make Itself be breathed, the form of food to feed the creature, and of water to quench it. In summary, there is nothing that serves the creature in which my Volition does not run together with that thing to incessantly give it to the creature. But how does the creature correspond to Me for the many multiple ways that my Fiat takes in the many loving forms to besiege the creature, so that if the creature does not recognize my Divine Will in one way, it recognizes It in the other, if my Divine Will doesn’t rouse the creature in one way, It rouses it in the other, in order to receive at least one glance, one smile of gratification, one invitation to let It descend in its soul to reign, one ‘thank you’ of gratitude for the so many follies of love? Ah! How many times does my Divine Will remain without the creature giving It any attention. What pain! How my Divine Will remains pierced! But with all of this, my Divine Will does not stop; It incessantly continues. And, It incessantly continues with Its all-divine firmness to make Its Divine Life run in all created things to offer Its Life to everyone under the veil of these created things, waiting with invincible patience for the one who must recognize and receive It to form Its Life inside the appearances and human form (of the creature), and thus completely reign in everything We created.”

After that, I followed the Divine Will in the acts of Creation. And arriving in Eden where man was created, my always amiable Jesus added:

“My daughter, the creation of man was the center where Our Fiat and Our love invested Themselves to hold Their perennial seat. Our Divine Being held everything inside of Us: The center of Our love and the unfolding of the Life of Our Volition. With the creation of man, Our Divine Being wanted to form the second center of Our love, in order that Our Fiat could unfold human lives with Its rule and dominion, like It was doing in Our Supreme Being.

You must know that in creating Adam, all creatures came to be created in him. All were present, no one escaped Us. We loved all creatures like We loved him, and We loved them all in him. When We formed Adam’s humanity with so much love, molding it and touching it with Our creative hands, forming the bones, extending the nerves, covering them with flesh, forming all the harmonies of the human life, all creatures were molded and kneaded in him. We formed the bones in everyone and extended the nerves. And covering them with flesh, We left there the touch of Our creative hands, the seal of Our love, and the vivifying virtue of Our Volition. And infusing the soul into Adam, with the power of Our omnipotent breath, souls came to be formed in all the bodies, with the same power in which the soul came to be formed in Adam. Do you see, then, that each creature is a new creation, as if We had created the new Adam? Because in each creature, We want to renew the great prodigy of Creation, the investiture of the center of Our love, and the unfolding of the Life of Our Fiat. The excess of Our love in creating man was so much, that until the last creature will come on the earth, We will be in the continuous act of creation to give to each one - that which was given to the first created man: Our overflowing love, the touch of Our creative hands for the formation of each of them.

Therefore, my daughter, I recommend that you know how to recognize and conserve in you - the investiture of Our love and the operating Life of Our Fiat. And, you will feel the prodigies of the continuous Creation, and Our overflowing love that drowns you in love. Thus, you will not feel other than love and my Will.”

* * *

August 29, 1930

Created things are filled with the Divine Will. Crosses form the road that conducts to Heaven.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues. An invincible force transports me in Its divine acts, and I feel and know the Divine Will operating in all created things. The Divine Will sweetly invites me to follow It in Its acts so to have my company. But while I was doing this, my always amiable Jesus said to me:

“My daughter, all created things are full of my Divine Will, which left Itself in them, not for Us, because We did not have need, but for love of creatures, giving Itself in so many distinct ways for as many things that the Divine Will created. Acting as true Mother, my Divine Will wanted to attack creatures with as much love for as many things that went forth to the light of the day (for as many things that were born). It wanted to give Itself in each instant without interruption - to give Itself sip by sip, to form Its Life and extend Its Kingdom in each soul. So, you see that there is nothing where my Fiat does not want to give Itself. It can be said that each created thing forms my Fiat’s throne of love, where my Fiat makes Its mercy descend, Its graces and road, to communicate Its Divine Life. My Divine Will is on the look-out to see what good It can do to Its children, to see if they open their hearts to Him to receive Its goods and conform themselves to Its divine ways. So, each created thing is a call that my Divine Will makes to the creature to receive the Gift that my Divine Will wants to give to the creature. Each created thing is a new love that wants to spoon-feed creatures, and is an act towards the creature and inside of the creature.

But, oh my! How much ingratitude on the part of creatures! My Divine Will embraces creatures, presses them to Its bosom with Its arms of light, and they escape from inside Its light without reciprocating the embrace and looking to see Who is the One who loves them so much. Therefore, my daughter, be the one who makes reparation to my Divine Will. Follow It in all the calls that It makes to you through each created thing to give It love for love and to receive all the sips of Its Divine Life in the depth of your soul, to give It the freedom of letting It reign.”

Then, I was following the acts of the Divine Will and continuing my abandonment in the Supreme Volition. But, my poor mind was occupied with the many incidents that Our Lord had disposed and disposed and disposes of my poor existence. My sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, crosses, incidents, mortifications, acts, the abandonment of creatures, and everything that can be suffered for my love, are none other than little stones that mark the road that conducts to Heaven. So, at the point of death, the creature will see that everything that it has suffered has been useful to it to form the road that marked with indelible ways and with immovable stones - the straight way that leads to the Celestial Fatherland. And, if in everything that my providence disposed for the creature to suffer, it suffered in order to fulfill my Divine Will, to receive not the pain but an act of Its Divine Life, the creature will form as many Suns for as many acts it has done and pains it has suffered, in a way that the creature’s road will be seen marked of Suns to the right and to the left, which, taking the creature and investing it with Its light, will conduct it in the Celestial Regions. Therefore, the many incidents of life are necessary, because they serve to form the road and outline the road of Heaven. If roads are not formed, it is difficult to go from one country to another. Much more so, to reach the Eternal Glory.”

* * *

September 20, 1930

Bitternesses, the slow poison of good. The Divine Will, the cradle of the soul. Jesus, the Divine Administrator of his Most Holy Will.

I was feeling all immersed in the Divine Fiat. Its light dazzles my intellect. And while It absorbs me in Its light, It makes me follow Its acts that It did in Creation. But while I was doing this, I was feeling such a bitterness and oppression, that I had difficulty in fulfilling my acts in the Divine Volition. My sweet Jesus, having compassion on me, said to me:

“My daughter, what a pain your bitterness is for Me. I feel it pouring in my Heart. So, courage. Don’t you know that oppressions and bitternesses are the slow poison of good, which produces such a difficulty that it reduces the soul in an extreme agony, in a way that the creature feels the agony in the heart, and my love agonizes in the creature’s heart; the creature feels the agony on its lips, and my prayer agonizes; the creature feels the agony in its hands and steps, and my steps and my works feel agonizing. Even more so for the creature who wants to have my Divine Will as Life; being the creature’s will one with Mine, I feel its agony pour forth in my Divine Person. So, courage. Abandon yourself in my arms, and I will make another light, more refulgent, rise from my Divine Will, which making itself a cradle, will rock you in it to communicate my Divine rest to you. And with its light and heat, it will destroy the slow poison of your bitternesses, changing them into sweetness and into a fount of contentments. And reposing in the cradle of my Divine Will, you will have a sweet rest. And in waking up, you will find the bitternesses and oppressions banished, and I will hold you in my arms, with you having your usual sweetness and serenity, to make the Life of my Divine Will grow more in you.”

Then, I continued my abandonment in the Divine Fiat for as much I could. My sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, the bitternesses, the oppressions, and all that does not regard my Volition, occupies space in your soul. And, my Divine Will does not feel free to be able to extend Its light to make Its Life rise in each particle and recess of your soul with Its creative and vivifying virtue. It feels surrounded as by clouds, which even though the sun is there, the clouds, interfering between the sun and the earth, impede the solar rays from descending with the fullness of the light to give light to the earth. It is the same for the Sun of my Divine Will. It feels blocked by the clouds of bitternesses and oppressions in extending Its light in the depth of the creature, even in the little recesses. And, my Will feels impeded to be able to say: 'Everything is my Will in the creature, everything pertains to Me, everything is Mine'. And your Jesus, who has taken the care to form a soul all of my Will, suffers; and I remain blocked in my work.

You must know that I am the Divine Administrator of my Fiat in the creature. And when I see the creature disposed to do my Will in everything, in each act that it does, I get ready to do the preparatory work. Suppose you want to do an act of love. I immediately begin to work. I put my breath in that act of love. I place a dosis of my love there, and I embellish the act with the variety of the beauty that my Will contains. And then, the Divine Administrator of my Volition that I am, I administer my Divine Will upon that act of love, in such a way that in that act, the act of the creature is not recognized, rather an act of love as if it went forth from the center of my Divinity. I am too jealous of the acts that the creature wants to do animated by my Divine Will. I do not permit differences between our acts. In order to have this, I must put what is Mine, as well as my work in the creature's act. And I must do this in all of its acts. If the creature wants to do acts of adoration, prayer, or sacrifice, I put my work there so that its adoration be the echo of the Divine adoration, its prayer be the echo of Mine, and its sacrifice be the repeater of Mine.

In summary, I must find Myself in each act of the creature, your Jesus - as Owner, possessor of my Divine Will. I would not administer my Divine Will if I did not find the sanctity, the purity and the love of my Humanity in the act of the creature. Therefore, I want to find the creature free of whatever cloud that could shade my Divine Will. So, be attentive, my daughter. Don't block my work that I want to do in your soul."

* * *

September 30, 1930

Eden, field of light. Difference between one who works in the Divine Will, and one who works in the human will. The little terrain of the creature; and the Celestial Sower.

I was continuing my usual acts in the Divine Volition, and my poor mind stopped in Eden, where God was creating man to give the beginning of life to the creature. My beloved Good, Jesus, making Himself seen all tenderness and goodness, said to me:

"My daughter, Eden is a field of light in which Our Supreme Being created man. It can be said that man was created in the light of Our Fiat. His first act of life was light, which extended an interminable field of light behind and before him, to the right and to the left. His first act had to run its course in order to form Adam's life, with Adam drawing in his acts - as much light for as many acts that he did, in order to form a light all his own, as his own property in virtue of his acts, although (the light was) drawn from my Divine Will.

Now, one who works in my Divine Will as its beginning and end, in which all of its acts are tied to the beginning of the light where the creature's life was formed and had its first act of life, the light holds this life in custody, defends it, and lets nothing foreign enter in that creature's light, to form one of the portents that only the light knows how to form. Instead, whoever descends from this light, enters inside the obscure prison of its will. And in doing its acts, it draws darkness. It draws as much darkness for as many acts that the creature forms, to form a property all of darkness, that is all his own. Darkness do not know how to take care of, nor defend he who lives in it. And, if that creature does some good act, the act is always obscure, because it is tied to darkness. And since the darkness do not have this virtue of knowing how to defend, foreign things to the same darkness enter (the soul): The molestations of weaknesses, the enemies of the passions, and the tenacious thieves that make the creature fall headlong in sin - even to the point of making it fall headlong in the eternal darkness where there is no hope of light. What a difference there is between one who lives in the light of my Divine Will, and one who lives as imprisoned in its human will!"

After, I continued to follow the order of the Divine Will in Creation. My little, poor intelligence stopped at the point when God created the Immaculate Virgin. My amiable Jesus, moving in my interior, said to me:

"My daughter, all the good and holy acts of the Prophets, of the Patriarchs, and of the people of the Old Testament, formed the terrain where the Supreme Being sowed the seed to make the life of the Celestial baby Mary germinate, because her seed was taken from the human race. The Virgin, holding the operating Life of the Divine Will in herself, widened this terrain with her acts, fecundated it and divinized it, and made the sanctity fro her virtues and the heat of her love flow in it more than a beneficent, restorative rain. And darting the terrain with the light of the Sun of the Divine Will that she possessed as her own, she prepared the terrain to germinate the Celestial Savior. And, Our Divinity opened Heaven and made rain the Just, the Holy, the Word, inside of this sprout. And in this way, my Divine and human Life came to be formed, to form the Redemption of the human race.

Look, then. In all of Our works directed to the good of creatures, We want to find a support, a place, a little terrain where to place Our work and the good that We want to give to creatures. Otherwise, where do We put it? In the air? Without at least one (soul) who knows about it and draws Us with its acts, forming its little terrain? And without Us, as the Celestial Sower, sowing the good that We want to give? If both parts - Creator and creature, didn't feel it together: The creature - preparing itself with its little acts in order to receive; and God - giving it, would be as if We did nothing and wanted to do nothing to the creature.

So, the acts of the creature prepare the terrain for the Divine Sower. If there is no dirt, there is no planting to hope for. No one goes to plant if he does not have a little terrain. Much less, does God, the Celestial Sower, throw the seed of His truths, the fruit of His works, if He doesn't find the little terrain of the creature. In order to work, the Divinity first wants to have an agreement between Itself and the soul. After we are in agreement together, and We see that the soul wants to receive that good - even unto praying to Us and forming the terrain for Us of where to place it, then, with all love, We give it. Otherwise, it would be exposing Our works to uselessness."

October 7, 1930

How the Redemption is owed to the fidelity of the Most Holy Virgin. Fidelity, the sweet chain that rapt God. The Celestial Farmer. The necessity of the seed to be able to diffuse the Divine works.

I was following the Divine Will, and my poor mind was occupied with the many things told to me by my sweet Jesus about the Kingdom of his Divine Fiat. It seemed to me, in my ignorance: "Oh! How difficult Its fulfillment is on the earth, Its reigning and triumph in the midst of creatures". But, while I was thinking this, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, the Redemption is owed to the fidelity of the Queen Virgin. Oh! If I had not found this Sublime Creature who denied Me nothing, nor ever held back in whatever sacrifice, her firmness in asking for the Redemption without ever hesitating, her fidelity without ever tiring, her ardent and strong love without ever stopping, always being in her place, all of her being - of her Creator, without ever shifting herself for whatever thing or incident she could see - either by the part of God or by the part of creatures! She formed such bonds between Heaven and earth, and acquired such ascendancy, and such dominion over her Creator, that she rendered herself worthy of making the Divine Word descend upon the earth. Because of her fidelity never interrupted, and because Our very Divine Will held Its Kingdom in her Virginal Heart, We didn't have enough strength to deny her. Her fidelity was the sweet chain that bound Me and rapt Me from Heaven to the earth. That is why what creatures do not obtain in many centuries, they obtain through the Sovereign Queen. Ah, yes! Only she was the worthy one who merited that the Divine Word descend from Heaven to the earth, and who received the great good of the Redemption, in such a way, that if they want, everyone can receive the good of the Redemption.

The firmness, the fidelity, and the immovability in good and in the asking for the known good, can be called divine virtues, not human. Therefore, it would be to deny to Our very Selves - if We deny that which she asks of Us. Now, it is the same in the Kingdom of the Divine Will. We want to find a faithful soul where We can operate, who, with the sweet chain of its fidelity, ties Us everywhere and from every part of Our Divine Being, in such a way that We cannot find a reason to not give it what it asks. We want to find Our firmness, which is a necessary support to be able to enclose the great good in the soul that it is asking. It would not be decorous for Our Divine works to entrust them to souls who are inconstant and not disposed to face whatever sacrifice for Us. The sacrifice of the creature is the defense of Our works. And, it is as to put Our works in a secure place. Then, when We have found the creature to be faithful, and the work goes forth from Us to take its place in the creature, everything is done. The seed is already thrown. And little by little, it germinates and produces other seeds, and they diffuse themselves. Whoever wants, can procure that seed to make it germinate in its soul.

Doesn't a farmer do the same? If the farmer has the good of having one sole seed that can be its fortune, he plants it in his terrain. That seed, germinating, can produce ten, twenty, thirty seeds. The farmer no longer plants only one, but every one of those that he gathered. And so much comes back to him, that he can plant enough seeds to fill all of his terrain, and arrives to the point of giving the seed of his fortune even to the others. I, the Celestial Farmer, can do much more, because I find a creature who prepared the terrain of its soul where I can throw the seed of my works. That Celestial seed of my Divine Will that is planted in the depth of their souls will germinate. And little by little,

It will make its way, and will make itself known, loved and desired, by a few, and then by many.

Therefore, my daughter, be attentive and faithful. Make it be so that I can plant this Celestial seed in your soul, and that I don't find any hindrance to make it germinate. If the seed is there, there is the certain hope that germinating can produce other seeds. But, if the seed does not exist, all hopes cease, and it is useless to hope for the Kingdom of my Divine Will, just as it would have been useless to hope for the Redemption if the Celestial Queen had not conceived Me as fruit of her maternal viscera, fruit of her faithfulness, and of her firmness and sacrifice. Therefore, let Me operate, and be faithful to Me, and I will think of everything else."

* * *

October 12, 1930

Fear is the whip of the poor nothing. God's Love towards creatures is such that He puts the creature in competition with Him. God established all the acts that all creatures should do.

I am always in my dear and holy heredity of the Divine Fiat. I feel the extreme need to never ever go out of It because my little atom of my existence feels its nothingness, and as nothing, not good enough to do anything if the Divine Volition, playing with it, does not fill it of Its All, making it do what It wants.

And oh! How I feel the need for the Divine Volition to hold me in Its Life, and for I to always remain in It. Now, I, all fearful, feel that I cannot live without the Divine Fiat. My sweet Jesus, with an inexpressible goodness, said to me:

"My daughter, do not fear. Fear is the whip of the poor nothing, in such a way that the nothing that is battered by the whip of fear, feels itself fading and losing its life. Instead, love is what makes the nothing throw itself in the All. The All fills it of Divine Life, and the nothing feels the true life that is not subject to fade, but always to live.

Now, you must know that the love that nurtures Our Divine Being towards the creature is so much, that We give of Our own to put the creature in the condition of being able to compete with its Creator. That is why We give the creature Our Will, Our love and Our very Life, so that the creature makes Them all its own to fill the void of its nothingness, and thus be able to give Me Will for Will, love for love, Life for Life. And We, even though We gave these things to the creature, We accept what it gives Us as if it was the creature's own, enjoying that it can compete with Us - the creature to give to us, and We to receive. We do this, so to give the creature again what it gave Us, so that it always has something to give Us. If the creature does not want to receive, then it feels the void of its nothingness, without a Divine Will that sanctifies it, and without the love that brings it to love its Creator. And the, upon this nothing, rushes all evils, the whips of fears, the darknesses of terrors, the rains of all miseries, and the weaknesses where one feels its life dying. Poor nothing that is not filled of the All!"

Then, I continued to pray, completely abandoned in the sweet dominion of the Divine Will. My beloved Jesus added:

“My daughter, in the creation of man, Our Supreme Volition already established all of the acts that all creatures must do, and constituted Itself Life of all of these acts. So, there is no human act that does not have its place in Our Divine Will. So, when the creature fulfills each of its acts, Our Divine Will goes forth in action in the human act of the creature. Therefore, all the power and sanctity of a Divine Will enters into the act of each creature. Each act (of the established acts of creatures) entered in the order of all Creation, each one taking its place, almost like stars in which each one has its place under the blue of the sky. And since all of the human race with all of its acts were ordered and formed by Our Divine Fiat in Creation, when the creature does an act, all the order of Creation is moved and Our Volition finds Itself in act as if It was creating all the Creation in that moment. This happens because everything is in act in Our Volition, and the act of the creature enters in the act of Our Volition, and taking its place established by God, the effects of all of Creation are renewed, and the human act enters in the course of all created things and has its distinct place there. That human act is always in motion in the Divine motion to adore and love its Creator. So, the operating of the creature in Our Divine Will can be called the fecundant and divine field of Our same Will in the little field of the creature.”

* * *

October 18, 1930

Value of the kisses and embraces of the Virgin to Baby Jesus. Because she possessed the Divine Will, all of her acts were rendered infinite and immense for Jesus. Resurrection of the acts done in the Divine Volition. Effects of the “I love You”.

I continue my usual state. And dwelling on the act when the Sovereign Queen gave birth to little Baby Jesus (gave him to the light), and pressing him to her bosom, she kissed Him and re-kisses Him, and delighting in Him, she gave Him her most sweet milk. Oh! How I longed to give my Baby Jesus my affectionate kisses and my tender embraces also. And He, making Himself seen in the act of receiving them, said to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, the value of my Celestial Mamma’s acts were such because they went forth from the immense bosom of my Divine Will, in which she possessed Its Kingdom, Its Life. There was no motion, act, breath nor heartbeat that she did - that was not full of the Supreme Volition to the point of flowing outside. Her loving kisses that she gave Me went forth from the fount of It. Her chaste embraces, with which she embraced my infantile Humanity, contained the immensity (of my Supreme Volition). Sucking her most pure milk from her virginal bosom with which she nurtured Me, I sucked from the immense bosom of my Fiat. In that milk, I sucked the infinite joys of my Fiat, Its indescribable sweetness, the food, the substance, and the growing infancy of my Humanity, from the immense abyss of my Divine Will. So, in her kisses, I felt the eternal kiss of my Volition, which, when my Volition does an act, It never ceases to do it. In her embraces, I felt a Divine immensity that was embracing Me. With my Will that kept her completely filled, in her milk, she divinely and humanly nurtured Me and re-gave Me my celestial joys and the contentments of my Divine Volition. If the Sovereign Queen had not held a Divine Will in her power, I would not have been content with her kisses, with her love, with her embraces and with her milk. At the most, my Humanity would have been content. But my Divinity, the Word of the Father, who held the infinite, the immense in my power, wanted infinite kisses, immense embraces, milk full of divine joys and sweetnesses. Only in this way did I remain satisfied: That my Mother, possessing my Divine Will, could give Me kisses, embraces, love and all of her acts - that gave of the infinite.

Now, you must know, that all the acts that are done in my Divine Will are inseparable from It. It can be said that the act and the will form one sole thing. The will can be called light, and the act can be called heat, which are inseparable from one another. So, everyone who will possess my Fiat as Life, will have all of the acts of the Celestial Mamma in their power. She held all of their acts in her power, in such a way that in her kisses and embraces, I felt kissed and embraced by all those who must live in my Will. And in those souls who must live in my Will, I feel kissed again and embraced by my Mamma. Everything is in commune and in perfect agreement in my Volition. Each human act descends from her bosom. And with her power, she makes it go back up in the center from where it went forth.

Therefore, be attentive, and don't let anything escape from entering into my Divine Will, if you want to give Me everything and receive everything."

My poor mind continues its course inside of the Divine Will. The Divine Will is always my support, my beginning, the middle and end of my acts. Its Life runs in me like the sweet murmur of the sea that never stops. And I, to exchange the homage and love, give the Divine Will the murmur of my acts that the same Divine Fiat makes me do: My always amiable Jesus continues to tell me:

"My daughter, each act done in the Divine Will forms a Divine Resurrection in the soul. Life is not formed of one sole act, but of many acts united together. So, the more acts that are done, the more times the soul rises in my Volition, in a way to be able to form a complete life all of Divine Will. Human life is formed of many distinct members to be able to form its life. If there was one sole member, it could not be called life. And, if it lacked some member, it would be called a defective life. Thus, the repeated acts done in my Volition serve as if they formed the different members of the Divine Will in the creature. And while they serve to unite these acts to form the life, they serve to feed the very same Life. Since my Divine Will does not have boundaries, thus the more acts that are done in It, the more Its Divine Life grows in the creature. And while the Divine Life rises and grows, the human will receives death from these same acts done in my Divine Volition. The human will does not find food to feed itself, and feels itself die in each act done in my Divine Will. But what pain! As many times the creature does its will in its acts, the more times the creature makes my Divine Will die in its act. Oh! How horrific it is to see that a finite will puts an infinite Volition outside of its act, who wants to give it Life of light, of beauty, and of sanctity."

Then, I was continuing my acts in the Divine Volition with my usual refrain: "I love You, I love You, in everything that You have done for our love". But while I was doing this, I was thinking to myself: "My refrain of 'I love You, I love You' will be tiring to Blessed Jesus. So, what good is it to say it?" My sweet Jesus, moving in my interior, said to me:

"My daughter, true love, accompanied even by the words 'I love You', is never tiring to Me, because I, being a complex of love and a continuous act of love who never ceases to love, when I find my love in the creature, I find Myself. The sign that the love of the creature is part of my love is when the creature's love is continuous. An interrupted love is not a sign of Divine Love. At the most, it can be a love of circumstances, or a love of interest, which, once these cease, love ceases. Even the words

‘I love You, I love You’ are nothing other than the air that my love produces in the creature, which, condensed in the creature, produces many flashes of lights towards Him who the creature loves. And I, when I hear said ‘I love You, I love You’, do you know what I say? ‘My daughter is flashing lights - in the air of her love towards Me, and one flash does not wait for the other.’ And then, all the continuous acts (done in my Volition) are those that have the virtue to conserve, feed, and grow the Life of the creature. Look at the sun. It rises each day and has its continuous act of light. It cannot be said that by rising each day, it tires men and the earth. Rather, everything is on the contrary. Everyone longs for the rising of the sun. And only because it rises everyday, it forms the food of the earth. Day by day, it goes little by little feeding the sweetness in the fruits, until it makes them reach perfect maturity. It feeds the various tints of colors to the flowers and the development to all the plants. And so one with all the rest. One continuous act can be called a perennial miracle, even though creatures do not give it any attention. But your Jesus cannot do less than give it attention, because I know the prodigious virtue of one act never interrupted. Therefore, your ‘I love You’ serves to conserve, feed and grow the Life of my love in you. If you do not feed this Life of my love in you, It cannot grow nor receive the multiplicity of the sweetnesses and variety of the divine colors that my love contains.”

* * *

November 9, 1930

Difference between the created love and the love that creates. The dowry with which God endowed the creature. Example.

I live between the continuous privations of my sweet Jesus. Ah! Without Him, I don’t find my center in Whom I rest. So, I don’t know what flight to take (to find Him). I don’t find the guide that I can trust in. I don’t find He, who with so much love, made Himself a Teacher to me, giving me the most sublime lessons. His words were showers of joys, of love, and of grace upon my poor soul. And now, everything is profound silence. I would like the sky, the sun, the sea, and all of the earth to melt themselves in tears for to cry to Him who I no longer find, for I don’t know where his steps were directed. But, oh my! No one points at Him to me. No one is moved to pity for me. “Ah! Jesus, return. Return to she, to whom You Yourself said that you didn’t want other than - that she live only for You and with You. And now, all is finished.” My poor heart is full, and who knows how many things can be said of the pains that my heart feels from the privation of its Jesus, of its Life, of its All. So, I go on, and I do ... Then, while I found myself in the vehemence of the bitternesses, I was following the acts of the Divine Will. In an instant, everything was present before me. My always amiable Jesus, making Himself seen all tenderness, said to me:

“My daughter, courage. My love does not have any limits. Therefore, I love the creature with infinite and insuperable love. You say that you love Me. But, what difference is there between the created love and the love that creates? Creation gives you an image of the difference. Look at the sun. Its light and heat fill your eye and invest all of your person. And yet, how much light do you take? Very little; barely a shadow of it. That which remains of the light of the sun, is so vast it can invest all of the earth, symbol of your little created love, which, for as much that you feel filled (with it) to the point of overflowing, your love will always be little.

More than the sun, the love of your Creator always remains immense and infinite, which, surpassing over everything, brings the creature in its triumph of love, making the creature live under the continuous rain of its creating love.

Another symbol is the water. You drink it. But how much do you really drink in compared to the water that exists in the sea, in the rivers, in the wells, in the viscera of the earth? It can be said: "Very little". And, that which remains symbolizes the creating love, which, in its own virtue, possess immense seas, and knows how to love the little creature with immense love.

The very earth tells you of your little love. How much earth do you need to support your feet? Barely a little space. And that which remains, oh, how much it is! So, between the love of the Creator and that of the creature, passes an extensive and immeasurable difference.

Other than that, you must add, that the Creator, in creating man, endowed him with His property. Therefore, He endowed him of His love, of his sanctity, goodness, intelligence and beauty. In summary, We endowed man of all of Our Divine qualities, giving him free will so that he could put Our dowry into business, always enlarging it more - according to how he more or less grew, even putting of his own acts in Our very same Divine qualities, as the homework that he received to conserve and enlarge the dowry that We gave him. Our infinite wisdom did not want to put outside - the work of Our creative hands, Our birth and Our son, without giving him of Our own. Our love would not support putting him outside to the light of the day (giving him birth) - nude and without property. It would not have been an act worthy of Our creative hands. If We gave him nothing, Our love would not have much reason to love him. Because he is Ours, has what is Ours, and costs so much to Our love, We love him much, to the point of giving him my Life. Things, when they cost nothing and nothing is given, they are not loved; and it is exactly this that always maintains lit and alive the ardent fire of Our love; because We gave much, and We still give to the creature.

Do you see, then, what a great difference there is between the love of the creature and that of the Creator? If the creature loves Us, it takes of Our same property given to it - to love Us. It loves, even though that it is the little created love, compared to the creating love. Yet, We want this little love; rather, We long for it. We covet it. And when the creature does not give it to Us, We become delirious. It happens to Us as to a loving father of his son, who endows his son with his properties. And this beloved son of the father, very often takes the fruit from the property given to him, and sends it as a gift to his father. Oh! How the father enjoys them, even though he doesn't need to receive the gifts. He feels loved by his son in the gifts. The gift is the operating and speaking love of his son. And, the love of the father always grows for him. The father feels honored, satisfied for having given his properties to he who loves him and who nurtures the affection for his father. But, what would be the pain of this father if the son never sent anything of the goods given to him? He would break his most sacrosanct duty, the love between son and father, and would convert the joy and the happiness of the paternity into sorrow.

More than a father do we love the creature, and all of Our happiness is in being loved in return. And, if the creature does not love Us, Our Paternity would convert into sorrow if it could. Therefore, my daughter, the more you love Us, the more gifts you send to your Celestial Father. These gifts are so pleasing to Us, because they are fruits of Our Divine properties, given to you with so much love from your Creator."

* * *

November 20, 1930

The fear of losing a good, means to possess it. Who has the right to ask for the Kingdom of the Divine Will. Food to form and grow the Life of the Divine Will in the creature.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, although with fear - that because of my unfaithfulness, I could have the great misfortune of being rejected of living inside the beautiful Heaven of the Supreme Fiat. Oh God, what a pain! "My Jesus, do not permit that I go outside of my dear Heredity, which You have given to me with so much love, and which You have always taken care of for me with so much jealousy. I ask this of You, for the love of the sky, which, with so much love, You extended over my head, symbol of Heaven, which, with a greater love still, You have enclosed in my poor soul, which is your Will. Make your Will always reign in me, and Its Kingdom extend Itself in all the world. I ask You for this with the love with which You created the sun that continuously beats the earth, which never stops its course to offer me its love of light, a live and real image of the Sun of your Volition, in which more than a sea of light You have enclosed your little daughter. I ask You for it for the labyrinth of pains in which I have been enveloped and besieged, pains that continuously give me gall to drink, and that make me feel myself under the storms that threaten to suffocate me, pains that I do not feel comfortable about writing on paper. Jesus, Jesus, have mercy on me, and make your Divine Will reign in me and in everyone."

While I poured out my pain, my sweet Jesus, my dear Life, extended his arms to sustain me and said to me:

"My daughter, courage. The fear of losing a good signifies to possess it, know it, and love it, and to possess it not with usurpation, but with right of property. When a good is possessed with right of property, no law - human or divine, can, with legitimate ways, remove the goods that are possessed. Much more so, it is the absolute Will of your Jesus that you possess the heredity of my Divine Fiat with the right of property, which I have given you with so much love, so that you could ask with right, that Its Kingdom come upon the earth. Because only whoever possesses my Will has the right to ask, and can with right - that Its Kingdom come upon the earth and extend Itself everywhere. And, since my Volition fills the sky, the sun, the sea, and everything, even though they don't have reason, they are freely dominated by the powerful strength and reason of my Fiat, which they never shift themselves from. Therefore, in the name of the sky, the sun, and everything, you, with right, can ask for Its Kingdom. Since the smallest and the greatest thing that is animated and dominated by my Divine Will is always superior to man, because without my Divine Will, man occupies the last place, man is the degraded one and the most humiliated among all created things. He is the most needy, the poorest, which, in order to live, must hold out his hand to all created things to receive the charity of their beneficial effects. And, at times, it is denied to him by the express Will of He Who dominates that created thing. Even more so, the Will of God puts the elements against man to make him experience what it means to not live in the heredity of my Divine Will. Only my Will gives the exaltation to the works of Our creative hands, puts them in the place of honor, and equips them of all goods, in a way that they will need no one. Even more so, my Will renders these works dominator of themselves and dominator of everything in virtue of my Will that they possess; everyone bows down and feels honored to be dominated (by them).

So, do not fear, because fear renders unhappy the good that one possesses, and embitters the most pure, holy, divine joys that are in my Fiat. Much more so, every act done in my Divine Will forms the food for to feed the past acts done in It. This is so, because many acts united together has formed the life of my Will in the soul, and life cannot be conserved nor grow without food. Thus, one act serves to conserve another and to form the Life of my Will in the creature. The repeated acts form the water with which to give water to the Life of my Will, as well as the air for to give the continuous breath to this Life all of Heaven. The repeated acts form the heartbeat for to make the Life of my Will in the creature feel the continuous heartbeat of my Volition. They form the food for to conserve the Life of my Will in life. The body cannot live without food, without air that makes it continuously breathe, nor without the heartbeat that gives it the motion to all its life, nor is it enough to eat food only sometimes, breathe and have a heartbeat at intervals, in order to form the human life, but (the body needs these things) always, always, because only the continuous acts have the virtue of forming life. Otherwise, life is extinguished. Whoever wants to form the Life of my Volition in himself, needs repeated acts, in such a way that this Life must not lack the air to make It breathe, the food to feed It, the heat, not the light, in order to make the creature feel the Life of Heaven in Its soul. Therefore, don't worry yourself of other things, but always go forward in my Divine Will."

* * *

November 24, 1930

There is no point where the Divine Will does not perform Its operating act towards creatures. Creatures receive the effects of that sole act according to their dispositions. Jesus speaks of chastisements.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues, but my poor existence unfolds itself very often among the bitternesses of the privations of my sweet Jesus. Meanwhile, I long for Him, arriving to the point of feeling myself lacking life, because He is my Life, nor do I know another life or pleasure other than Jesus. Then, if He comes for a little, while I feel myself revive, He embitters that puff of life that He gave me, because He says nothing other to me than about the great chastisements that the Divine Justice has prepared, how all the elements will put themselves against man: Water, fire, the wind, the stones and the mountains will change themselves into deadly arms, and strong earthquakes will make many cities and people disappear - and in all the nations. Not even ours will be spared. And then, the revolutions that exist, and those that will occur, the wars that are about to break out. It seems that almost everyone will be taken in the net that they themselves are preparing. But, Jesus said this with such bitterness, and then left me without my usual pains that He usually communicated to me before. Then, while I was embittered, I continued my acts in the Divine Volition. And my sweet Jesus, making Himself seen, said to me:

"My daughter, rise up. Come into my operating Will. It is immense. But in Its immensity, there is no point where It does not perform special and distinct acts towards mankind. Although my Will is one, one is Its immensity, one is Its act, and It holds the order of all the effects in Its immensity, which, as acts, go forth from the one sole act to pour themselves out towards each creature. Each creature then, receives them according to its disposition. If the creature is found disposed to love Me, it receives the effects of love that my operating Volition is pouring forth. If the creature is disposed to be good, it receives the effects of the operating goodness of my Volition. If it is disposed to make itself holy, it receives the effects of the sanctity of my Volition. So, according to their dispositions, the immensity of my Fiat pours out Its distinct effects upon each creature, which converts into acts for them. And whoever is not disposed, receives nothing, even though my Divine Will is always operating upon each one of these. And since they do not want to receive the good that my Will wants to give them, my Justice converts these goods that the creature rejects into chastisements. That is why my Divine Will is as if on the look-out from inside the elements to see if creatures are disposed to receive the good of Its continuous operating. And seeing Itself rejected, my Will, tired, arms the elements against creatures. Therefore, unforeseen chastisements and new phenomenon are about to occur. With its almost continuous trembling, the earth warns man to use good sense. Otherwise, the earth will sink in under his feet because it can no longer sustain him. The evils are grave which are about to occur. Otherwise, I would not have suspended you frequently from your usual state of victim.

Now, for the creature who enters in my Divine Will, there is no act that escapes it. The creature runs to each of my Will's operating acts, adores them, thanks them, loves them, and honors the Supreme Volition everywhere, and keeps them company. And in the creature's littleness, the creature would like to guarantee all of the acts of my Will with its little love. Therefore, only who lives in It can defend the rights of such a holy Volition. So, I always want you in my Will. Don't want to ever go out of It."

* * *

November/December?, 1930

The reason why God is not known or loved: Because they think that He is a God who is distant from creatures; while in reality, He is inseparable. How the Divine Will attracts the soul, and how the soul attracts the Divine Fiat in itself.

I was making my round in Creation to follow the acts that the Divine Fiat does in created things. And arriving in Eden, it seemed to me that my amiable Jesus was waiting for me for to be able to communicate to me - the love, the goodness, the sanctity, the power, and everything that He did in creating man, pouring all of Himself forth in man to the point of filling him all of Himself and of His Divine qualities, but so much so, to the point of them overflowing outside of man. God gave man a task, as man's highest honor: To make use of God's love, goodness, sanctity and power to unfold his life in the same goods of He who had created him.

I felt saturated by the Divine qualities. My sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, man was created to be inseparable from God. And, if God is not known and loved, it is exactly because man thinks that God is the Being who is far from him, as if We had nothing to do with him, nor he with Us. Believing that God is far makes man go astray from God. Consequently, everything that man had when he was created, Our same Divine qualities, remain weakened and suffocated; and for many, as if they did not have life.

Our Divinity is not far, but near. Even more so, inside of man. And, in all of his acts, We are Actors and Spectators. So, Our pain is great in seeing that creatures hold Us far from themselves and believe that We are far from them. Therefore, they do not know Us nor love Us. Thinking that We are far is the deadly tool that kills the love of the creature towards its Creator. Distancing breaks any friendship. Who can ever think to love, know and hope (for something from) a Being who is distant? No one. We are constrained to repeat: 'We are with them, inside of them, and it seems that they do not know Us'. And while their love and their will are far from Us because of not loving Us, they say that We are for from them. That is the reason why some who have read of my intimacies with you, have arrived to the point of doubting Me. It is exactly this, because they think that I am a distant God, and because of this distance, so many intimacies between you and Me could not happen. Now, my daughter, do you want to know who makes one feel God alive in the heart of the creature? My Will reigning in the creature. Because not giving life to the human will, my Fiat makes the creature feel Its love, power, goodness, and sanctity - alive, which run in all the acts of the creature. For this creature, the distant God does not exist, rather a God who is near and is the primary Life of the creature's life and of all of its acts. Consequently, the living in my Divine Will maintains the vigor to all the goods that We gave to man in creating him, and makes of him the Throne of God and His glory, where God dominates and reigns."

After that, I continued to follow everything of admiration and sublimity that the Divine Fiat had done in Creation. I said to myself: "I want to enter into the sun to find the Divine Will operating in the light of the sun to give to the Divine Will all the beautiful, the pure, the holy, and the power that a human will, operating in the light of the sun, can contain. I want to enter in the blue sky to embrace it and give the Divine Will my operating will in the vastness of the skies and in the multiplicity of the stars, so to give the Divine Will the glory and the love of a sky and as many profound acts of adoration for as many stars there are. And in this way, I followed all created things. But while I was doing this, a thought said to me: "Created things do not have reason. Created things are veils that hide that Fiat. And, with the Fiat's divine reason - more than if created things had reason, and with the Fiat's power, the Fiat dominates created things, maintains the perfect equilibrium, and adores Itself, loves Itself, and glorifies Itself by Itself." But while I was thinking this, my beloved Jesus made Himself seen, held me tightly between his arms, and with all tenderness, said to me:

"My little daughter of my Divine Volition, my Will is one. Although It has the bilocative virtue, It bilocates Itself in every instant, in everything and in every act, in such a way that everyone can have It as their own act and their own Life. But, my Will never loses Its unity. It is always one. And with Its singular strength, It maintains the union, the harmony, the order, the communication and the inseparability where It reigns, and holds everything in Itself enclosed inside of one sole act. The act is one. My Will is one. But, It extends Itself everywhere, without leaving even one atom of created things without Its operating and vivifying Life. Ah, yes! Created things are really veils that hide my Will. My Will veils Itself of light. And extending Itself in the sun with Its light, my Will caresses creatures, embraces them, kisses them, warms and loves them. My Will extends Itself in the sky, and makes Itself all eyes for as many stars that there are, to look at creatures. And, the gentle sparkling of the stars are silent voices, as if the sparkling very quietly calls creatures to the Celestial Fatherland. My Will pours Itself in the air. And completely filling it, my Will makes Itself the breath of creatures. And blowing on them, my will makes Itself be breathed, and gives creatures life. My Will runs towards creatures in all created things to give them so many distinct effects to offer them Its love, Its Life and their conservation. But, the act is one. One is the Will that fills Heaven and the earth.

Now, my daughter, whoever does my Will and lives in It, when that creature does its acts, it draws in itself all the acts that my Fiat has done and that It continues to do. And, my Will draws the creature and the creature's act in the act of my Will. So, by virtue of Its one Will, It draws the creature in the sky, in the sun, in the air, in everything. And then, do you know what happens? No longer does one single reason and Divine Will fill the sky and the earth, but another reason and will - a human reason and will, which, with them dispersing themselves in the Divine reason and Divine Will, it can be said that this remains as the veil of created things. But, a veil that has a human reason and will, sacrificed and fused in the Divine reason and Divine Will. And then, it happens that my Fiat is no longer alone to love Itself, honor Itself and glorify Itself in created things, but there is another will - a human will that loves It, adores It, and glorifies It, in the sky, in the sun, and in the air; in summary, wherever my Fiat finds Itself and in each distinct thing where my Fiat reigns.

So, as my Divine Will draws the human will in Itself and in my Will's acts to make the creature love, adore and glorify with my Will's same love, adoration and glory, thus the creature, who does not want to live of anything but my Will alone, draws all the acts done by my Will in itself, and makes itself to love and sanctify like a Divine Will knows how to love and sanctify; and the Divine Will extends Its sky and forms Its Sun. In summary, my Divine Will continues Its Divine art, like It began and is continuing to do in Creation. Do you see, then, what it means to do my Divine Will? And, that not doing It - means to lose the sky of my Will, Its Sun, Its air, Its seas of grace and Its Divine art? Therefore, I always want to find the daughter of my Divine Will in It."

* * *

December 21, 1930

Triumphs on the part of the Divine Will when the creature lets itself be molded by the Divine Fiat. Exchanges of triumphs on both parts.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues. It seems that I call the Divine Volition because (if not), I would lack the Life of good, the Life of love, the Life of light, and the Life of peace. My human will, seeing itself alone, would assault me and give life to my passions. Accordingly, I fear so much that even one sole instant remain deprived of the Fiat operating in me, because when the Divine Will remains, my human will remains hidden and does not dare to move before such a holy and powerful Will. So, I call the Divine Will and It gives me a hand to bring me in Its acts, so that I follow It and keep It company. And, since the Divine Volition has created everything for love of creatures, when It feels the creature near It and fused in It, It finds such pleasure that It feels reciprocated of the many things that went forth from Its creative hands.

Then, while I followed the acts of the Divine Will done in Creation, my sweet Jesus, making himself seen and looking at me, said to me:

"My daughter, how sweet it is to Me to look at a soul who lets itself be molded by my Divine Will. A triumph occurs on both parts. My Will invests the intelligence of the creature, and the creature lets itself be invested. In summary, an agreement is formed from both parts. Then, my Will forms Its triumph over each thought of the creature. And, the creature acquires and bears in triumph so many Divine thoughts in its mind. So, my Divine Will triumphs by giving (to) and taking possession (of the creature). The soul triumphs by wanting it and receiving it. Then, if the creature looks, speaks, if its heart beats, if it works and walks, they are all triumphs of my Will over the creature, and the creature is triumphant and takes possession of so many Divine acts. Between these exchanges of triumphs and possessions, such joy and happiness is formed on both parts, that you are not able to understand them all. You must know that the good, the triumph and the possession, brings joy and happiness when it occurs between two beings. Good that is isolated has never made anyone happy. As the good sees itself isolated, it loses all the beauty of the happiness. So, my Divine Will looks for its creature to form Its triumphs to be able to form together with the creature Its joys and happiness upon the face of the earth.”

* * *

February 8, 1931

Accusations, calumnies, condemnation. God’s Will costs more than His power. The Divine Will moves in two ways: In a willed way and in a permissive way. Round of chastisements that He will do to all nations.

It has been some time that I have not written, because my poor heart is swollen of intense bitterness, to the point of completely sweeping me away in the highest stormy waves of pain and of profound humiliations. I did not have the strength to put on paper one page of the most painful period of my existence here below. In the vehemence of my pain, I repeated the saying of our Lord several times: “I looked for a consoler in so many pains, and I did not find one; a friend to say a word in my defense, and there was none; much more, the one who should sustain Me and give Me a breath of courage, I felt him changed as if he was my most cruel enemy.” Ah, yes! I can repeat well with my sweet Jesus: “A fleet of dogs has surrounded me to tear me to pieces and devour me.” I believe that the Heavens have cried over my harsh situation, just like my sweet Jesus has cried with me many times. Oh! How true it is that only Jesus remains (with the soul) in the pain and humiliations. Creatures know how to be around when everything smiles at us and brings us glory and honor. But when the contrary happens, they escape and leave the poor victim alone and abandoned. “Oh! My Highest Good, Jesus, don’t leave me alone in such a painful period of my life. Leave Yourself with me, or bring me with You. I feel smothered. My strength is becoming less. Oh please, help me! Help me, oh Jesus!”

And then, what torments me more are the very struggles that I must sustain with my sweet Jesus. Because of the printing of the Divine Will, they accuse me at the Holy Office of things that I do not know. I do not know where my accusers live, nor where they are, and they are as distant from me as the sky from the earth. It has been forty-six years that I have been living in bed. It can be said that I am a poor one, buried alive. I do not know the earth, nor do I remember of ever having a love of interests. My sweet Jesus has always been vigilant over my heart, and has held it completely detached. May the Lord always be thanked! They have maligned at the Holy Office about the coming of the priest who comes to call me to obedience in the state of my sufferings. Consequently, impositions and prohibitions. Here, a struggle is opened with my beloved Jesus. I pray to Him that He free me, or, that He does everything Himself; that is, make me fall in the pains and free me when He likes. And Jesus, all goodness, said:

“My daughter, do you believe that I cannot do it? I can do it! But, I don’t want to. To Me, my Will costs more than my power. For Me, power is nothing. In one instant, I can make the sky and the earth. In another instant, I can destroy them. Such is the strength of my power. But, to destroy an act of my Volition, which I do not want to do, nor can I, I would destroy the order of the acts of my Will, which, from all Eternity, are from the Divine stability. I would go against my Wisdom, against my very designs, and against my love. I would be acting not as God, but as man, who easily changes according to how things are pleasing or displeasing to him, and according to how they seem to him, and how he likes them. I am the Immutable, and I do not change in the designs and acts that my Holy Divine Will with Highest Wisdom has established to do. And then, I would not be acting as God, (changing) only because they wanted to accuse you of black calumnies, making use of their authority and wicked perfidy to the point of arriving to the Holy Office. (There, one arrives when a bad has reached to the excess and that no other authority can put a remedy to. And just from this, one can see the highest perfidy 'of the accusers'). Should I change my designs and ways, which for so many long years I have held upon you? Oh! If you knew what pain they have given to my Heart, which, not being able to support the torture, I am constrained to strike all those who have contributed to such a black accusation. And, don't think that I will do it today. In time and in circumstances, my Justice is arming its arm against them. No one, no one will be spared. The pain they have given Me is too much."

And I: "My Love, if You let me fall (into the state of victim) and don't help to free me, how will I do it? You don't want to change your ways that You have held upon me. If authorities, who want differently, do not cede to what You want, how will I do it? At least assure me the You will bring me to Heaven. And then, You, I, and they, will all remain content. Don't You see in what a labyrinth they have put me in? I am the accused, the condemned, as if I have become the most disgraceful creature that exists on the earth, and as if a curse rains upon my poor existence. Jesus, Jesus! Help me. Don't abandon me. Don't leave me alone. If everyone has been so barbarous - that they have left me, You won't leave me; isn't that true, Jesus?" My pain was so much that I broke out in bitter tears. And Jesus, also bursting in tears, said to me:

"Good daughter, courage. You must know that my Divine Will moves in two ways: In a willed way and in a permissive way. When my Will moves in a willed way, It fulfills my designs, It forms sanctity. And the creature who receives this willed act of my Will, receives it enclosed with light, with grace, and with help. Nothing must be lacking to this fortunate creature so that it can fulfill this willed act from my Will. On the other hand, my Divine Will acts in a permissive way when creatures, with their free will that they have, look to tie the hands of the Omnipotent, as in this (situation) - in what they want from you, wanting to change things to their way, and not how I, who with so much love and for the good of all, have disposed until today, constraining Me to act in a permissive way. And, my permissive Will is with Justice and chastisement. The accusers have such a blindness - that who knows where they are going to precipitate. Therefore, I will act with my permissive Will. Since they do not want the way willed by Me, I will hold you suspended from the state of victim. And my Justice, not finding its support, will vent itself freely against the people. I am making the first round in all nations, so much so that very often, I suspend you from the state of victim because I see you too embittered for my cause and because of what they want, and because of so much perfidy that they have had against you, and because in seeing you so embittered, I don't have the heart to throw you in your usual state of pains, which you, with so much love, have received, and which I, with even a greater love, have communicated to you. Therefore, I pass over you. But, if you knew my pain, and in my pain I go repeating: "Human ingratitude, how horrendous you are!" I am ready to do the second round of chastisements in all nations again, repeating earthquakes, mortalities, unforeseen phenomenon, evils of every type, enough to give terror and shock. The chastisements will rain like a dense fog on the people, and many will remain nude and famined. And when the second round will have finished, I will do the third. And where the chastisements will rage more, the wars and revolutions will be more ruthless.

My daughter, what I recommend to you is: Patience. Oh please, don't give Me the pain of your will opposing Mine. Remember how many graces I have given you, how much love I have loved you with to win your will and make it Mine. If you want to make Me content, assure Me that you will never, never do your will."

And I, while I assure Jesus that I never want to do my will, the present circumstances are such that I live with a continuous fear that continuously poisons me, that I could fall into the great disgrace of not always doing the Divine Will. My God, what a pain. What a torment to my poor heart, even more so because of my inconstant state, because I pass days without falling in the state of suffering. And now, I am tortured thinking that Jesus has left me, and that I will no longer have the good of seeing Him. And in my pain, I go repeating "Good-bye, Jesus. We won't see each other anymore. Everything is finished." And I cry to Him who was more than my own life to me. I pass two, three days in this torture. And, when I persuade myself that I will no longer fall in that state of pains, then Jesus suddenly surprises me and makes me fall in the sufferings. And then, I am tortured with the thought: "How will I be obedient?" So, whether in one way or in another, I feel such sadness and bitterness that I myself don't know how I can continue to live. I hope that my sweet Jesus will have mercy on me in my pain, and will bring his poor exiled one in his Celestial Fatherland. "I only pray you, Jesus, to put an end to this storm. With your power, command that it calm itself. And, by You giving light to who has aroused this storm, they are able to know the bad that they have done, so that they can make use of that light to sanctify themselves."

Fiat!

*The Kingdom of the
Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 29

Contents

February 13, 1931 .....	p. 1
One who lives in the Divine Volition lives in the center of his light, instead one who doesn't live in him lives in the circumference of his light. How God finds his knoll. How the creation is mute, the creature is (the) speaking creation. The echo of God in the creature. God with manifesting the truths goes out from (his) rest and continues his labor.
February 15, 1931 .....	p. 4
How the divine life has need of foods in order to grow in the creature. The creature with her love forms in God himself his divine life. How the divine love holds the germ/seed to generate continuous life.
February 17, 1931 .....	p. 5
Impositions, bitter tears; Jesus consoles her with the assurance that he concedes her the grace to not let her fall into the sufferings. How only voluntary suffering constitutes the true victim.
March 2, 1931 .....	p. 7
How offering the sacrifice of the saints doubles the glory. The Divine Will holds the re-arising virtue. One who does the Divine Will acquires the rights to the divine goods.
March 6, 1931 .....	p. 9
How only Jesus has been the author of her state of sufferings, and why they have forced him to permit a pause. How in God is absolute rest, outside of God, labor.
March 9, 1931 .....	p. 10
The first love of God towards man was expressed in the creation. Completed love in the creation of man.
March 16, 1931 .....	p. 11
The sky and the creation all symbolize the celestial hierarchy. How an act of pure love is formed.
March 23, 1931 .....	p. 13
How feeling one's own will is one thing, to want it is another. The most beautiful rest that the Divine Will wants to give. Triple acts in the act of the creature.
March 30, 1931 .....	p. 14
The humiliations, bearers of glory. The tenderness of the heart of Jesus. A hard heart is capable of all evils. Invitation to take the crumbs in the divine goods.
April 2, 1931 .....	p. 16
How that which the creature holds as most precious is the will. Power of voluntary sufferings. The support. How the little flame is inflamed in the soul and how it is fed.
April 4, 1931 .....	p. 18
The "I love you" is thunder. The Divine Will is Heaven, our humanity is earth. The sufferings of the heart of Jesus. Exchange of life. The Divine Will the beginning, middle, and end.
April 16, 1931 .....	p. 20

Courage is of resolute souls. Six angels with Jesus at (the) head. How the acts done in the Divine Will are pledges of infinite value, eternal bonds, chains non subject to break.

April 24, 1931 ..... p. 22

*How God in working requires the acts of creatures as little ground where to lean his works.
Who forms the breath, the heartbeat of the creation. The works of God bearers of life.*

May 4, 1931 ..... p. 24

*Power of the word of Jesus. How the repeated acts are as juice to the plants.
Forced sufferings lose the freshness. Jesus wants to be free in the soul.*

May 10, 1931 ..... p. 25

*One who wants to receive, must give. Ways that Jesus holds.
The divine gifts, bearers of peace. How the Divine Will holds the leavening virtue.
What good a completed act of the Divine Will encloses.*

May 16, 1931 ..... p. 28

*The Divine Will confirmer of the acts of the creature.
Enthusiasm of divine love in creating man; touches of the divine qualities.*

May 19, 1931 ..... p. 29

*Scenes of Eden. Fall of man. The Queen of Heaven who crushes the head of the infernal serpent.
How the words of Jesus hold the communicative virtue.
How he speaks of the doubts and difficulty.*

May 27, 1931 ..... p. 31

*The life of good doesn't die and is defended by all creatures.
A prolix good puts in security God and the soul.*

May 31, 1931 ..... p. 33

*The happiness of Jesus is to find his creature in the Divine Will.
God plunges himself in the creature and she in God. The tiny little house of Nazareth.*

June 5, 1931 ..... p. 35

*How it is necessary to make friends in the beautiful time.
Sorrow of Jesus for the abandonment of the apostles. The human will prison of the creature.*

June 8, 1931 ..... p. 37

*Pleasure of God when one remembers that which he did in the creation.
The repeated acts form the food of the soul. How in earth it begins and in Heaven it is completed.*

June 16, 1931 ..... p. 39

*Jesus prays. The necessity to possess a good in order to be able to communicate it to the others.
The little lights form the interlacement with the great light of the Divine Will.*

June 23, 1931 ..... p. 40

How the creation manifests the divine paternity and how God feels Father of one who recognizes him in his works.

June 30, 1931 .....	p. 41
How the greatest grace that God made man in the creation was to be able to do his acts in the Divine Will. How this kingdom exists, and liv(ing) humanity have possessed it.
July 2, 1931 .....	p. 43
How the Divine Will holds the virtue to convert into nature the good that one does. The return of the work to its Creator. How the creation holds a determined act, the creature a growing act.
July 6, 1931 .....	p. 45
The book of the Fiat in the depth of the soul. The book of the Fiat in the creation. How the Divine Will holds all creatures under the rain of his continuous act.
July 13, 1931 .....	p. 47
The motion is sign of life. The passport in order to enter into the Kingdom of the Divine Will; the language and the city of it. The peacemaker between God and creatures.
July 17, 1931 .....	p. 48
Beneficent rain. Continuous creation of the Divine Will; external and interior order of him. The creature becomes carried in his arms.
July 23, 1931 .....	p. 49
Fecundity of light. The creation: feast of God and the creature. The Divine Will: regime and rule.
July 27, 1931 .....	p. 50
The great evil of one who doesn't do the Divine Will. Most interesting example of Adam.
August 3, 1931 .....	p. 52
Every act done in the Divine Volition forms the food in order to make the divine life grow in the creature. The greatest gift that God makes: truths.
August 10, 1931 .....	p. 53
Ugliness of the human nature without the Divine Will; beauty of one who lives in him. The smile of Heaven on earth.
August 22, 1931 .....	p. 55
Divine messengers that bring the beautiful news to the celestial country. How the Divine Will is not content with only words, but wants to do deeds.
August 30, 1931 .....	p. 56
How God wants the creature to himself in order to give her the surprise of new gifts. The love, the order, the inseparability of all created things and how the creature is bound with them.
September 7, 1931 .....	p. 58
The appeal to all the works gone forth from the Fiat. The palpating life of the creature in them. Protections, speaking voice, assailants.
September 12, 1931 .....	p. 59
True love forms the fire where to consume oneself in order [to make] he whom one loves live again. Jesus' day in the Eucharist.

September 16, 1931 .....	p. 61
Admirable effects of the light of the Divine Will. How Heaven opens itself over working souls.
How our acts are as so many puffs that make the good matured.
September 21, 1931 .....	p. 62
How the Divine Will forms the day in the act of the creature, and how with doing her will she forms
the ways to exit, the sorrowful steps, the night of vigils.
September 29, 1931 .....	p. 63
Growth of the creature before the Divine Majesty. Living in the Divine Will is (a) gift that God will
make the creature.
October 4, 1931 .....	p. 65
How doubts, fears, are wounds to love. The Divine Will is one act alone.
The greatest of wonders. The night and the day of the soul.
October 8, 1931 .....	p. 67
The Divine Will, depositary of all the acts of all the saints. How God and the creature give each
other the hand. What are the lost acts from the purpose of our Creator.
October 12, 1931 .....	p. 68
Incessant breath of God. Divine life and completed act of God in the creature. Image.
The People, the princes, the noble court and the regal army of the celestial kingdom.
October 20, 1931 .....	p. 69
Meetings of steps between God and the creature.
How God has formed the creature center of the creation.
October 26, 1931 .....	p. 71
The good acts done in the Divine Will change into light.
Admirable effects of the abandonment in the arms of Jesus.
One who lets herself be dominated by the Divine Will becomes people of his kingdom.

Volume 29

This is a rough draft translated from a modified Italian edition and still needs to be compared to the original one final time. I expect there will be multiple corrections in format and translation errors.

- - -

Fiat!!!

[In Voluntate Dei! Deo gratias.]

In the Will of God! Thanks be to God.

February 13, 1931

One who lives in the Divine Volition lives in the center of his light, instead one who doesn't live in him lives in the circumference of his light. How God finds his knoll. How the creation is mute, the creature is (the) speaking creation. The echo of God in the creature. God with manifesting the truths goes out from (his) rest and continues his labor.

My life, my sweetest Jesus, oh, come to my help, do not abandon me, with the power of your Most Holy Volition invest my poor soul and put forth from me all that which disturbs me and tortures me! Oh, make that the new sun of peace and of love rises in me! Otherwise I don't feel any more strength to continue to make the sacrifice to write, already (my) hand trembles and the pen doesn't flow upon the paper. My love, if you don't help, if you don't remove from me your justice that justly knocks me down in the sorrowful state in which I find myself, I feel unable to write even a word; therefore help me, and I will strive for as much as I can to obey he who commands me to write all that which you have said to me on your Most Holy Will, and since they are things past, I will make all together a little sign of every thing that regards your Divine Will.

Whence feeling oppressed and all flooded with intense bitterness, my sweet Jesus making himself seen and sustaining me between his arms said to me:

"My daughter, courage, think that a Divine Volition reigns in you, that he is the source of happiness and of perennial joy; whence your bitterness and oppressions form the clouds around the sun of my Will, which impede his rays from shining in all your being, because wanting to make you happy he feels the happiness that he wants to give you rejected by your bitterness; and in spite that you possess a divine sun at your disposition, in virtue of your bitterness you feel the rain that oppresses you, that fills your soul even to the brim. Because you should know that one who lives in my Will lives in the center of the sphere of the divine sun, and can say: 'The sun is all mine.' Instead one who doesn't live in him lives in the circumference of the light that the divine sun spreads everywhere, because my Volition neither can with his immensity deny himself to anyone nor does he want to deny himself, he finds himself as the sun that is constrained to give light to everyone, although not everyone might want it, and why is this? Only because he is light and the nature of the light is to give itself to everyone, to whom doesn't want him and to whom wants him. But what great difference there is between one who lives in the center of my divine sun and between one who lives in his circumference? The first one possesses the properties of the light and all his goods that are infinite; the light holds her defended from all evils, so that sin can not have life in this light, and if bitteresses arise, they are as clouds that can not have perennial life, a little breeze of my Will is enough to put in flight the densest clouds, and the soul finds herself sunk in the center of her sun that she possesses; more so that bitternesses of one who lives in my Volition are always for my cause, and I can say that I am embittered together with you, and if I see you cry, I cry together, because my same Will makes me inseparable from one who lives in him and I feel her sufferings more than if they were mine. Indeed my same Will that resides in the soul calls my Humanity in one who suffers, in order to make him repeat his living life upon the earth; and oh, (the) divine prodigies that happen, the new currents that are opened between Heaven and earth, for the new life of sufferings that Jesus holds in his creature! And my heart while it is human it is divine, it possesses the sweetest tenderness, they are such and so many the attractions and the powerful tendernesses of my heart, that as I see one who loves me suffer, my most tender love liquefies my heart and repours itself out over the sufferings and over the heart of my beloved creature. Therefore I am with you in the suffering and do two offices: as actor of sufferings and as spectator, in order to enjoy the fruits of my sufferings that I want to go developing in her.

"Therefore for one who lives in my Will they are suns and center of her life, hence we are inseparable, I feel her palpating life in me and she feels my palpating life in the intimacy of her soul. Instead for one who lives in the circumference of the light because the sun of my Divine Will spreads everywhere, she is not proprietor of the light, because true mastery is said when a good resides in oneself and no one can take away the good of within, neither in life, nor after death, instead the good of outside is subject to peril nor does it hold power to hold us in security, and the soul suffers weakness, inconstancy, passions that torment her, and she arrives to feel as distant from her Creator. Therefore I want you always in my Will, in order to let me continue my life upon the earth."

Whence I continued my little acts of adorations, of love, of praises, of benedictions in the Divine Fiat to my Creator, and as I emitted my acts, thus the Divine Volition extended them anywhere and everywhere where the Divine Will found himself, because there is no point where he doesn't find himself; and my always amiable Jesus added:

"Dearest daughter of my Will, you should know that my Volition doesn't know to do acts at half, but complete and with such fullness as to be able to say: 'Where there is my Will there is my act; and our Divinity seeing in our Divine Will the adoration, the love of his creature extended, he finds his knoll in his immensity in whatever point he wants lean himself. Whence we feel our profound adoration, that the creature has put us in our Will, and we lean and we rest; we feel that everywhere she loves us and we rest in her love, and thus with her praises and benedictions. So that the creature in our Will becomes our knoll and our rest, there is nothing that delights us more than to find our rest in our creature, symbol of the rest that we took after having created all the creation.

"Beyond this our Divine Will remains everywhere, and Heaven and earth and all are filled up to the brim with him; so that all are veils that hide him, but mute veils, and if in their muteness they eloquently speak of their Creator, it is not them, but my Will himself hidden in the created things (so that) he speaks by way of signs as if he might not have word: he speaks in the sun by way of signs of light and of heat, in the wind giving penetrating and ruling signs, in the air he gives mute signs, as to form the breath of all creatures. Oh, if the sun, the wind, the air and all other created things might have the good of the word, how many things would they say of their Creator!

"Instead who is the speaking work of the Supreme Being? It is the creature. We in creating her loved her so much, that we gave her the great good of the word; our Will wanted to make himself word of the creature, he wanted to go forth from the muteness of created things, and forming the organ of the voice in her, formed the word in order to be able to speak. Hence the voice of creatures is speaking veil in which my Will speaks eloquently, wisely; and since the creature doesn't say nor does she always do the same thing, as created things that never change action, they are always at their post to do that same action that God wants from them, therefore my Will maintains the continuous attitude of the multiplicity of the ways that there are in the creature; whence one can say that he not only speaks in the voice, but makes himself speaking in the works, in the steps, in the mind and in the heart of creatures. But what isn't our sorrow in seeing this speaking creation make use of the great good of the word in order to offend us, make use of the gift in order to offend the giver and to impede the great prodigy that it can do, of graces, of love, of divine knowledges, of sanctity, that I can do in the speaking work of the creature! But for one who lives in my Will they are voices that speak, and oh, how many things I go manifesting to her! I am in continuous motion and attitude, I enjoy full liberty to do and to say surprising things and I complete the prodigy of my speaking, loving and working Will in the creature. Therefore give me full liberty, and you will see that which my Volition knows how to do in you."

Whence I was thinking of all that which my sweet Jesus had said to me, and my beloved Good repeated:

"My daughter, the substance of our Divine Being is an immensity of purest light, that produces an immensity of love; this light possesses all the goods, all the joys, interminable happiness, indescribable beauties; this light invests everything, sees everything, encloses everything, for neither past nor future exist for it but one act alone, always in act, that produces such multiplicity of effects, as to fill Heavens and earth. Now the immensity of the love that this light of ours produces makes us love our Being, and all that which goes forth from us, with such love as to render us true and perfect lovers, so that we don't know how to do other than to love and to give love and to ask for love. Now [in] one who lives in our Will, our light and our love makes the echo in the creature and transforms her into light and love. Now what is our happiness [in] forming our types and models with the work of our creative hands! Therefore be attentive and make that your life does not become formed of other than light and love, if you want to make your dear Jesus content."

Whence I did how much more I could to abandon all of myself in the Divine Will, and I thought of the so many truths that blessed Jesus had manifested to me concerning his Holy Volition. Every truth embraced the infinite and contained so much light as to fill Heaven and earth, and I felt the strength of the light and the weight of the infinite, that invading all of me with an indescribable love they invited me to love them and to make them mine with putting them into practice. But while my mind lost itself in so much light, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, our labor toward the creature commenced with the creation, and our labor remains in the word, because containing our creative strength, he speaks and creates, speaks and forms the most beautiful and marvelous works. In fact with the work of six Fiats that we pronounced there was formed the whole great machine of the universe, I included man who should live (in) it and be the king of our so many works. Whence after having reordered everything, our love called us to rest, but the rest doesn't say completion of the labor, it says a pause in order to resume the labor again.

"Now do you want to know when we resume our work again? Every time that we manifest a truth we resume the work of the creation. So that all that which was told in the Old Testament, they were resumptions of the labor; my coming upon the earth was none other than to resume the labor for the love of creatures: my doctrine, the so many truths uttered by my mouth, showed in clear notes my intense labor for creatures. And as in the creation our Divine Being rested, thus with my death and resurrection I wanted to also rest in order to give the time in order to make the fruits born in the midst of creatures of my labor, but always rest, not completion of labor. Our labor even to the end of the centuries will be alternated with labor and rest, with rest and labor. You see therefore, good daughter, that long labor that I have had to do with you with manifesting so many truths on my Divine Will; and since the thing that most interests our Supreme Being is to make him known, hence I have not spared anything to a labor so long, although I have often taken the little pauses of rest in order to give you the time to receive my labor and to prepare for you the other surprises of the labor of my creative word.

"Therefore be attentive to conserve and to not lose anything of the labor of my word, that contains an infinite value that is enough to save and to sanctify an entire world."

* * *

February 15, 1931

How the divine life has need of foods in order to grow in the creature. The creature with her love forms in God himself his divine life. How the divine love holds the germ/seed to generate continuous life.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues, although I live under the nightmare of intense bitterness, of continuous tears, and I am constrained to live with an unhealthy air of agitation, that takes away the beautiful serene day of peace from me, always enjoyed by me. I am resigned, I kiss the hand that strikes me, but I feel alive the fire that burns me with so many tempests that they are unloading upon my poor existence. My Jesus help me, do not abandon me! Oh, give me peace, that peace that you wanted so much that I might possess! And although Jesus very often tears the veils of the dense clouds that surround me with telling me some little words, afterwards however I return, encouraged a little, to my uneasy state. Whence my sweet Jesus surprising me said to me:

"My good daughter, courage, nor fear that I might be able to abandon you; I feel my life in you, and if I might abandon you, this life of mine in you would remain without food to make him grow, without light in order to felicitate him, he would lack the real cortege to my divine life that I myself have formed in you. Because you should know that my life in myself doesn't need anything, neither to grow, nor [is it] subject to decrease, but my life that I go forming in the creature in order to make him grow, he has need of divine foods in order to make him grow in a way that little by little my divine life fills the whole creature. Therefore I can not leave you, and while it seems that I leave you and it seems that everything is finished between me and you, suddenly I return to my little daughter to feed you the food of my Will. Because you should know that my Will is light, and [to] the soul that lives in him the properties of the light become administered to her, and while she works, her works fill themselves with light but so much so as to overflow outside of her, in a way that one sees them done in the properties of the light of her Creator; if they are the properties of the divine love, they fill the love of the creature; if she adores, the properties of divine adoration fill the adoration of the creature; in short there is no act that the creature does, in which the divine properties do not fill these acts. In my Will the human ceases, remains annulled, and the creature always holds to take; the divine properties remain at her disposition. Oh, if everyone might know what it means to live in my Divine Volition, the great good that comes to them and in the simplest way!"

Whence I continued my abandonment in the Divine Fiat, and not knowing how to do other went saying my little "I love you" in the divine acts, not only, but I said to myself: "My Jesus, my love, my 'I love you' flows in your heartbeat, in your breath, upon your tongue, in your voice, even in the littlest particles of your adorable Person." But while I did this, the dear (of) my life making himself seen put my "I love you" in his heart, inside and outside of all his Divine Person, and he enjoyed it so much that it incited me to repeat how many more "I love you's" I could, in order to be able to find the pleasant "I love you" in all his Being; and then pressing me to himself he said to me:

"My daughter, love is life, and when this love goes forth from the soul that lives in my Will, it holds the virtue to form in God himself the life of love; and since the substance of divine life is love, hence the creature with her love forms in God another divine life, and we feel in ourselves our life formed by the creature. This life that [the creature has formed] with her love united to our Will, because it is he that administers the power (so) that the creature can arrive to form the divine life himself all of love in God, this life is God's triumph and the triumph of the creature; and in the act of triumph we take this divine life that the creature has formed in ourselves and we give him to (the) good of all creatures, as precious gift that the little daughter of our Volition makes to everyone, and with anxiety we await that with her love she comes to form other divine lives in our Supreme Being.

"My daughter, our love is not sterile, rather it holds the germ/seed to generate continuous life. So that as you said: 'I love you' in my heartbeat, in my breath, thus I generated another heartbeat, another breath, and so on with all the rest, in a way that I felt in myself the new generation of your 'I love you' that formed the new life of my love. And oh, how happy I felt thinking that my daughter was forming inside of me my own life in me, all of love! If you might know how moving this act of the creature is that she gives God to God with her love! Oh, how it enraptures us! And feeling ourselves enraptured we give other love in order to have the contentment to have her repeat our new lives of love. Therefore love, love a great deal and you will make your sweet Jesus more happy."

* * *

February 17, 1931

Impositions, bitter tears; Jesus consoles her with the assurance that he concedes her the grace to not let her fall into the sufferings. How only voluntary suffering constitutes the true victim.

I pass most bitter days, my poor existence unfolds under the nightmare of a tragedy. My Jesus, help me! do not abandon me! You who have always been so very good with me and who with so much love have sustained me in the struggles of my life, ah, do not leave me now that the struggles are more tremendous and they attack furiously! Ah, my love, demonstrate your power! See, O Jesus, they are not demons that fight me, that with a sign of the cross I would make them flee who knows where, but they are superiors that only you can put them at post. I am the poor condemned one and I myself don't know what I have done; oh, how sorrowful is my story! They have told me that they want to put me under another priest delegated by the Bishop, who will call physicians and will make all those proofs that he wants, leaving me abandoned from all the others, in the authority of he. To such announcement I have burst into crying, without being able to stop from crying, my eyes had become fountains; I passed the whole night in crying and I prayed Jesus that he might give me strength and that he might put an end to such a tempest. "You see" - I said - "my love, I am two months and more in continuous struggles: struggles with creatures, struggles with you that you might not make me fall into sufferings." And oh, how much it costs me fighting with my Jesus! But not because I didn't want to suffer, but because thus they want one who is over me; but now I can endure no more of it, and then I will stop crying, when he tells me that he concedes to me to free me from the annoyance that I give to the priest; everything for this is war. And I cried and cried with such bitterness that I felt (my) blood poisoned in (my) veins, so much so that I often felt as without life, without breath, but as I felt thus I continued to cry and to sob. Whence while I was in a sea of tears, my sweet Jesus pressed me to himself between his arms, and with a tender voice as if he also might want to cry he said to me:

"My good daughter, do not cry anymore, my heart can not endure it anymore, your tears have descended even into the depth of it and I feel your bitterness so alive that I feel it burst. My daughter courage, know that I have loved you a great, great deal, and this love now does violence to me to content you: if until now I have held you suspended from the state of suffering some day, in order to make it understood that it was my Will that continues to hold you as I have held you for well forty-six years, but now that they want to put (your) shoulders to the wall, they put me in the condition to make use of my permissive Will, not wanted, to suspend you from the state of victim. Therefore do not fear, for now then I will communicate my sufferings to you no more, I will extend myself in you no more, in the way that you remained stiffened and without motion; hence you will remain free without needing anyone. Remain calm daughter, even to such that they don't calm down and that they don't want that you fall into the sufferings, I won't do it anymore.

"Now you should know that the state of sufferings in which I put you regarded my Humanity, which wanted to continue its life of sufferings in you. Now my Will (in) you remains the most important thing; give me the word that you will always live in him? that you will be sacrificed, the victim of my Will? that letting him dominate in you you won't surrender one single act of life to your will? Assure me good daughter that you will omit nothing of that which I have taught you to do, and continuing that which you have done in my Fiat until now. This is the culminating point of your Jesus over you, to put in safety the rights of my Will in your soul. Therefore do it soon, tell me that you will content me."

And I: "My Jesus I promise it, I swear it, I want it, to continue that which you have taught me, however you must not leave me, because with you I know how to do everything, without you I am good for nothing."

And Jesus resumed to speak:

"Do not fear, I won't leave you; know that I love you, and they have induced me to surrender that you might not fall into the state of sufferings, it has not been other than a great love, intense, excessive toward you; my love in seeing you cry so much has conquered my Will and has put forth an enough for now. But know that the scourges will rain down as copious rain, they merit it, when they don't want the victims as it pleases me and in the way wanted by me, justly they merit that they be severely stricken, and do not believe that I will do it the same day, but allow that some time passes and then you will see and you will feel what my justice holds prepared."

Whence I have passed the first day free without fighting with my Jesus, because having assured me that he would not make me fall into the sufferings, I didn't feel anymore incitement, to press, that I might accept to submit myself to the sufferings that Jesus wanted to give me. Hence while the struggle ceased, (there) still remained in me such a fear [that] unexpectedly my beloved Jesus surprised me, and in order to quiet me he said to me:

"Good daughter, do not fear, Jesus has said it to you and enough. There is not one creature that fails the word, I am God and when I speak I don't change. I have told you that even to such [that] they do not calm down and do not (sample) things, I won't make you fall, and thus will it be; and although the world might go upside-down, because my justice wants to punish creatures, I won't change my word. Because you should know that there is no thing that more placates my justice, and that arrives to change the greatest chastisements into rescripts of graces, than voluntary suffering; and true victims can be called, not those that suffer by necessity, for illness, for accident, the whole world is full of these sufferings, but those that have exhibited voluntarily to suffer that which I want and in the way how I want, these are the victims that resemble me; my suffering was all voluntary, not one suffering were they able to give me even little, if I might not want it. Behold, therefore I almost always asked you, when I should make you fall into the sufferings, if you voluntarily accepted it, in order to have your sufferings voluntary, not forced; a forced suffering or by necessity is not a great thing before God, that which enamors, which enraptures and which arrives to tie God himself is voluntary suffering. If you might know how it wounded my heart when you put yourself in my hands like a little lamb, so that I might tie you and do to you that which I wanted! I removed the motion from you, I petrified you, I can say that I made you feel mortal sufferings, and you let me do it; and this was nothing, the strongest knot was that you could not go out from that state of sufferings in which your sacrificer Jesus had put you, if my minister might not come to call you to obedience. It was this that constituted you true victim, to not one sick one, not even to prisoners themselves, is motion denied and to ask for help in extreme needs, only for you, my love had prepared the greatest cross, because I wanted and want to do great things with you. How much greater are my designs, so much more unusual (a) cross I form, and I can say that there has never been in the world (a) cross similar to that which with so much love your Jesus had prepared for you.

"Therefore my sorrow is indescribable in seeing myself crossed by creatures, for how much authority they have, in the ways that I want to hold with souls; they want to dictate the laws to me as if theirs intended more than me. Therefore my sorrow is great and my justice wants to punish those people that have been (the) cause of such sorrow of mine."

* * *

March 2, 1931

How offering the sacrifice of the saints doubles the glory. The Divine Will holds the re-arising virtue. One who does the Divine Will acquires the rights to the divine goods.

I was following my acts in the Divine Will and went offering the sacrifices that the saints of the Old Testament made, those of my celestial Mama, all the sacrifices of my beloved Jesus and thus little by little with all the rest. The Divine Volition puts them all in order before my mind, and I went offering them as the most beautiful homage to my Creator. But while I did this, my sweet Jesus moving in my interior said to me:

"My daughter, there is no thing suffered and worked by all the saints in the story of the world, in which my Will has not had his part doing as actor and concurrent with strength, with help, with support, with that sacrifice or work that they have done. Now the soul offering them to God as homage of glory, recalls the memory of that sacrifice and work, and my Divine Will recognizes that which he has put forth of his in (those) acts and he gives the virtue to double the glory of that sacrifice, for God and for the one who has had the good of sacrificing themselves and of working in order to complete my Divine Will. True good never ceases, neither in Heaven nor in earth; one creature who remembers and offers them is enough: the glory is renewed in Heaven and the effects of that good descend in earth to the benefit of creatures; therefore the life of true good is not subject to die. In fact who is the life of my Church, who feeds her and acts as Teacher, if not the brief course of my life down here? I can say that it is my sufferings that sustain her, it is my doctrines that teach her.

"So that all the good that I did didn't die, but remained with the fullness of life and life that vivifies, conserves, feeds and grows continually, and gives itself to whoever wants it. And as the creature remembers, she already puts herself in rapport with my goods, and as she goes offering them, thus they double themselves in order to give themselves to her, and I feel the glory doubled of that which I did for love of creatures. More so that one who works in my Divine Will acquires the re-arising virtue, as the soul goes doing her acts, her offerings in him, thus my Fiat races in order to put there the germ/seed of the light, and his light possesses the virtue to re-arise in every instant and act. He seems as the sun, that rises for every seedling, for every flower, because he doesn't give the same thing to each one, as if he might rise for each one: he gives one effect to the seedling, to the flower a color, and he colors (each) distinct the one from the other. Such are the acts done in my Divine Will: they expose themselves to the rays of my divine sun and they receive the seed/germ of the light, which makes arise such a variety of beauties in distinct colors in every act of the creature, and one act calls the other to arise. So that one who lives in my Will with the germ/seed of my light re-arisen always gives me new things, and she is always in the act of re-arising continually in love, in glory and in the life itself of her Creator."

Whence I continued my acts in the Divine Will, I wanted to embrace everything in order to put in every created thing my adoration, my love, my gratitude for he who had loved me so very much and who had created so many things for my love. And my sweet Jesus added:

"Good daughter, [for] one who lives in my Divine Will and works in him, so much is the love of my Fiat in seeing the littleness of the creature that turns in all created things in order to put there her little acts, in order to say that she not only loves this Divine Will, but wants to recognize all his acts as so many pledges of love. The love makes arise the other love, and my Volition gives the rights to the soul in the divine goods; so that every act that the creature does is a right that she acquires in the properties of her Creator. Whence it happens that through right she feels loved by the Supreme Being, because she has put there her love in the eternal Love and has acquired the right to be loved; the love of the creature and the divine love are fused together, and both parts feel the right to love each other; with right she enjoys the light of the sun, with right she breathes the air, she drinks the water, feeds herself with fruits of the earth, and so on with all the rest. And oh, the great difference of one who takes with rights the divine goods! This one can be called daughter, and the others can be called servants; and the creature with these rights gives us the love of child, love of unselfishness, love that says true love. Therefore live always in my Will, so that you feel in yourself and you enjoy all the love of the divine paternity."

* * *

March 6, 1931

How only Jesus has been the author of her state of sufferings, and why they have forced him to permit a pause. How in God is absolute rest, outside of God, labor.

I continue to live in the bitterness of my present state; the thought that blessed Jesus is making scourges rain down and that people remain naked and fasting tortures me, and the thought that my beloved and highest good Jesus remained alone in his suffering and I am not together with him anymore in the sufferings, oh, how it torments me! It seems to me that Jesus is all attention over me in order to not let me fall into the sufferings as before, rather he hides the sufferings all in himself in order to leave me free; and seeing me afflicted, it seems to me that his intense love makes him put his sufferings as aside in order to give attention to my affliction, and he said to me:

"Good daughter, my daughter, courage, your Jesus loves you still, [in] nothing is my love diminished for you, and this because it has not been you who has refused me the suffering, no, my daughter would never have done it, they have forced you; and I in order to give you peace and in order to make you see that it has been really I who have held you in that state of suffering for so many years - (that) it was neither the illness nor other natural cause, but my paternal goodness wanted to hold one who might make up for my sufferings for me in earth, and these for the good of everyone - and now that I have forced you and they have also forced me with their impositions, I have made it cease entirely, giving you a pause. This says in clear notes that only your Jesus was the author of your state. But I can not hide my sorrow (that) is so very great, that I can say that in the whole story of the world I have never received a similar sorrow from creatures. My heart is so very sorrowful and torn by this sorrow, that I am forced to hide from you the deep tear in order to not embitter you more; and then in seeing the indifference of some, and you know who they are, as if they might have done nothing to me, it increases my sorrow and they constrain my justice to continue to rain scourges, and I will continue to rain chastisements my daughter. I told you before, that if I might arrive for one single month to hold you suspended from your state of sufferings, they will feel and they will see how many chastisements will rain down on the face of the earth. And while my justice will make its course we will occupy ourselves together with my Divine Will, I to make you know him and you to receive the good of his knowledges, because every knowledge carries the growth of the life of my Will in you, and [to] your every act done in the new knowledge my Fiat takes more ground in your soul and extends there all the more his kingdom; more so that creatures don't have the power to enter in my Divine Will in order to disturb us and to dictate law to us, therefore we are free to do that which we want, we have absolute liberty. Therefore be attentive to continue to cross over his interminable seas."

Whence while he said this, my little intelligence felt transported into an abyss of inaccessible light; this light hid all the joys, all the beauties, apparently it seemed light, but looking within it there was no good that it didn't possess.

And my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, our Divine Being is purest light, light that contains everything, fills everything, sees everything, works everything; light that no one can arrive to see where our limits arrive, his height and profundity. The creature loses herself in our light, because she doesn't find his shore, his door in order to go outside; and if the creature takes of this light of ours, they are hardly little drops, that serve in order to fill her all with light even to overflow outside of her, but our light doesn't diminish because the creature has taken of ours, but it becomes replaced in the instant by the re-arising virtue of our light. So that our Supreme Being is always at one level, in perfect equilibrium, we can give how much we want, if we find souls that want to take of ours without losing anything; indeed if we find one who wants to take, we put ourselves to work, because you should know that inside of us is absolute rest, nor do we have anything to do, there is neither to take away nor to put forth; our happiness is full and complete, our joys are always new, our unique Will as agent in us gives us perfect rest with the beatitudes of our Divine Being, that doesn't have beginning and neither will it have end. So that this abyss of light that you see contains an abyss of joy, of power, of beauty, of love, of so many et cetera, and we, while we felicitate ourselves, we rest in them, because it can then be called true and absolute rest, when nothing lacks and there is nothing to add on. Instead of our Divinity our work goes forth in field, and this field is creatures; our same divine qualities that inside of us gives us rest, outside of ourselves gives us work. And now we make our Will work to the benefit of creatures; that Divine Fiat that we put forth in field in the creation, from which all things went forth, doesn't ever cease from his labor, incessantly he labors: labors in order to conserve everything, labor that wants to be known, that wants to reign, labor in bringing forth other souls to the light of the world, and there he forms his admirable designs in order to develop his labor and in order to have occasion to always labor; labor in withdrawing souls into the bosom of eternity. Our Divine Will we can call him the busybody who doesn't ever spare his continuous labor, and even for the benefit of one who doesn't recognize him. Labor our love, labor our mercy, our power, and also our justice labors for the benefit of creatures, otherwise our Supreme Being would not be balanced and perfect, but would be lacking with weakness if our justice might be put aside when there is the whole reason to make its punishing course. You see therefore, our labor are creatures, because having gone forth from within our enthusiasm of love, our love brings us to labor to always love them, always, because if our labor might cease the love, and the creation would resolve into the nothing."

* * *

March 9, 1931

The first love of God towards man was expressed in the creation. Completed love in the creation of man.

My abandonment continues in the Divine Fiat, and since I was doing my acts in him in order to be able to unite mine to his acts, all the creation lined up before my mind and in its mute language it said that so many times more the Divine Volition had loved me, so many things more he had created, and that now it was my part to love him in every thing created in order to reciprocate him with as many acts of love of mine, so that his and my love might not be isolated, but they might keep sweet company.

Now in this meanwhile my sweet Jesus had gone forth from the depth of my soul that he seemed so very interned inside, that it was not given to me to see him, and he said to me:

"My daughter, our love for the creature was ab eterno inside of us, we always loved her, but outside of us was externalized our first love in the creation. As our Fiat went pronouncing himself and step by step he created the sky, the sun and so on, thus he went externalizing in every created thing, almost step by step, our love, contained since eternity, for love of creatures. But do you know, my daughter, one love calls the other; being externalized in the creation of the universe and having experienced how refreshing it is, how sweet is the vent of love, and only with externalizing it is it vented and one feels how sweet it is to love, therefore our love having begun to (be) externalized didn't say peace anymore, if it didn't create the one for who's cause he had given beginning to externalize his love as sowing it in all created things. Hence [the love] regurgitated strongly inside of us, wanting to make (a) completed act of love, calling from the nothing he/(man), in order to give him being and to create in him our own life of love. If we didn't create in him the life of love in order to be re-loved, there would have been no reason, neither divine nor human, to externalize so much love toward man; if we loved him so much it was reasonable and with right that he might love us, but not having anything by himself, it was appropriate to our wisdom (for) ourselves to create the life of love in order to be re-loved by the creature.

"But do you feel, daughter, the excess of our love: before creating we were not content to have externalized our love in the creation, but arrived to so much, that putting forth our Divine Being, our qualities, we put forth seas of power and we loved him in our power, seas of sanctity, of beauty, of love and so on, and we loved him in our sanctity, in our beauty, in our love; and these seas should serve in order invest man, so that he might find in all our qualities the echo of our powerful love and he might love us with powerful love, with holy love and with love of enrapturing beauty,

"Hence, when these seas of our divine qualities were put forth from us, we created man enriching him with our qualities for how much he could contain from us, so that he also might have an act that can make an echo in our power, in our love, in our goodness, in order to be able to love us with our same qualities. We wanted man not (as) servant but child, not poor but rich, not outside of our goods but inside of our inheritance, and as confirmed of this we gave him for life and for law our own Will. Behold the cause why we love the creature so much, because she holds of ours, and to not love one's own things is outside of nature and against reason."

* * *

March 16, 1931

The sky and the creation all symbolize the celestial hierarchy. How an act of pure love is formed.

I felt my poor mind immersed in the interminable light of the Divine Will. Whence I sought to follow his acts done in the creation and I said to myself: "I would like to be sky in order to be able to extend myself in everyone and everywhere, and in all points and over everyone [to be able to extend] my love, my adoration, my glory toward my Creator. I would like to be sun and to have so much light as to fill heaven and earth and to convert everything into light, and in this light to make my continuous cry: 'I love you, I love you.' But while my mind blundered, my sweet and highest good Jesus making himself seen said to me:

"My daughter, all the creation symbolizes God, the order of the diversity of the saints and of souls; his harmony, the union that all the creation possesses, the order, the inseparability, it symbolizes the celestial hierarchy with its Creator at (the) head. Look at the sky that extends itself everywhere and holds under its azure vault all created things, reigning over everyone, in a way that no one can escape from its sight and from its empire; oh, how it symbolizes God, who extends his dominion everywhere and no one can escape from his sight! This sky while it contains all, one sees however a great diversity in created things; some are as immediate to the sky, and they are the stars, that although from the base they appear little, beyond they are very great and with such variety of colors and beauty, and they have a symphony in their dizzy course with all the creation, as to form one of the most beautiful musics; their motion sounds so sweet and vibrating as to not be able to compare to any of the most beautiful musics of down here. These stars it seems that they live of the sky, they are so identified with it, symbol of the souls that will live of the Divine Will: they will be so very immediate and identified with God, as to receive all the varieties of the divine qualities and to live of them in a way as to form the most beautiful ornament to Heaven of their Creator.

"My daughter look still: under this sky, but as detached from it, between the sky and the earth one sees the sun, star put forth to the benefit of the earth; its light descends into the base and elevates itself on high as if it might want to embrace heaven and earth, hence one can say that its light touching the sky it lives of sky, symbol of those souls chosen by God in order to make graces descend from Heaven, and to make them descend upon the earth in order to recall them to live in the Divine Will; and the first one is my celestial Mama, unique as the sun, who stretches forth her wings of light, and this light raises itself on high, descends into the baseness, in order to reunite God and man, in order to reconcile him and to conduct him through means of her light to her Creator.

"The stars it seems that they live by themselves, united with the divine Sky, instead the sun lives of God but gives itself to everyone, and its mission is to do good to everyone; such is the Sovereign Queen, but this sun won't be alone, so many other little suns will arise that will draw light from this great sun, and they will be those few ones that will have for mission to make my Divine Will known.

"Whence the baseness of the earth, the sea, the plants, the flowers, the trees, the mountains, the forests in bloom, they symbolize the saints, the good souls and all those that enter in the door of salvation. But see the great difference: the sky, the stars, the sun don't have need of the earth, rather they give much to the earth, they give life to it, they sustain it; not only, but all things created by us that are in the heights are always at their post, they never change, nor do they increase nor do they decrease, because they have such fullness that they don't need anything. Instead the earth, the plants, the sea and so on, they change, now they take on a beautiful appearance and now they arrive to disappear entirely; they have need everything, of water, of light, of heat, of seed to reproduce. What difference! Created things that are in the heights can give and they need God alone in order to be conserved; instead the earth not only has need of God, but of everything, and if the human hand might not work it it would remain sterile, without making any great good. Such is the difference; one who lives in my Will feels only the need of God in order to live her life, instead one who doesn't have his life for beginning goes begging support and help from everyone, and when she doesn't find them she remains as earth, that doesn't know how to produce anything great of good.

"Therefore let your life and the beginning of all your acts be my Divine Will alone, if you want to feel only the need of your Jesus; you will always find me ready, I more desirous to give you him than you to receive him; instead the helps of creatures become given hardly and unwillingly, so much so that one who receives them feels the bitterness of the help that becomes given by the creature. Instead my helps bring joy and happiness."

Whence I followed (with) my "I love you" in the Divine Fiat and I thought to myself: "But is my love pure?" And my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, in order to be able to give me a pure love, a look at your interior says everything: if your heart palpates, sighs, desires only my love, if your hands work only for my love, if your feet walk only for love, if your will wants only my love, if your intelligence seeks always how to love me, (and) your 'I love you' with your word do you know what it does? It collects all together all the entirety of the love that you have inside of yourself and makes of it one alone, and forms an act of pure and complete love, to your Jesus; so that your word doesn't do other than to externalize its extension of the love that you have inside of you. But if inside is not all love, lacking the pure font inside, there can not be neither pure nor complete love."

* * *

March 23, 1931

How feeling one's own will is one thing, to want it is another. The most beautiful rest that the Divine Will wants to give. Triple acts in the act of the creature.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, but the circumstances are such and so many in which I presently found myself, that my poor human will would like as to emerge from all the parts of my being in order to have some act of life, and I feel all the enormous weight (of it), I feel myself crushed, ground under my human volition; oh, how true it is that it is the cruellest tyrant! My Jesus, help me, do not abandon me, do not leave me in the authority of my will! If you want you are able to put it under the sweet empire of your Divine Will. And my beloved Jesus making himself seen and hearing me said to me:

"My daughter, courage, do not worry so much, to feel the weight of one's own will says nothing, it is a suffering more sorrowful than all the other sufferings, and if you might have wanted it it would not be a suffering anymore, but the suffering would be changed into satisfaction; to feel it is one thing, to want it is another. Hence remove the thought that you always sin because you feel your will. Therefore do not fear, I am watching you and when I see that it wants life in your things, I give you suffering in order to make it die of suffering; therefore trust your Jesus, because that which makes you more ill is mistrust; ah, it is always (the human will) that makes souls uneasy, even when I hold them in my arms! And then this suffering of feeling the weight of human wills, oh, how much more alive your Jesus felt it, because it lasted me all (my) life; therefore mine and yours unite together and I offer them for the triumph of my Will in souls.

"Hence put everything aside and come to rest in my Divine Will; with so much love he awaits you in the center of my heart in order to love you and the most beautiful love that he wants to give you is rest in the sufferings that you suffer; oh, how sweet, refreshing, it is to see our daughter rest she who we love and who loves us! And while you rest he wants to rain on you the celestial dew of the light of my Divine Will. He in the unity of his light does always one act, nor does he ever cease doing it, and an act then can be called completed, when it is not subject to interruption. This act not ever interrupted says everything, embraces, loves everyone; from his heights, in which this act never says enough, it casts an infinity of effects that makes him hold as in one's own fist Heaven and earth, and communicates the celestial dew of the effects of his sanctity, of his love and of his divine life to creatures. But these effects for the creature convert themselves into acts, in a way that she feels in herself the act of divine life, of the light of our sanctity, (and) of the love, and the creature that lives in my Will forms there her life, her food, and grows under the rain of the celestial dew of the single act of her Creator. And these effects changed into acts in the creature, form her little sun, which says with its little reflections: 'Continuous love, glory, honor to he who has created me. So that the divine sun and the sun formed by my Divine Will in the creature, continually meet, wound each other, (and) the little sun is transformed into the immense sun of the Eternal, and they form life together loving him with reciprocal love and never interrupted. This continuous love inebriates and puts to sleep the human volition and gives the most beautiful rest to the creature.'

After this I followed my acts in the Divine Will and I understood how when we dispose ourselves to do an act, before we might do the act the Divine Volition puts there his prime act in order to give the life of the act in the creature; and my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, in every act of the creature there is a triple act: first is formed the act the creative strength; the creature onto the act of creative strength forms the act of her working love, that becomes fed by the creative strength, and according to the intensity of the love of the creature, her prolixity, the good, the value that her act contains, thus it receives more or less the food of the act of the creative strength, because there is no taste and delight more beautiful and pleasing for God, than to feed (on) than the acts of the creature; and this is because seeing of ours in the human act, we feel as proprietors, recognized by them, we feel them as affiliated, not distant children but nearby, indeed unified with us, who make for us a crown of so many children, that justly want of ours and we with all love, gladly we give our food to their acts, more so that fed by us they will grow as noble children worthy of their Celestial Father. Now to the act of creative strength and the act of the working love of the creature follows the act of the love of satisfaction. Every act could not be said (to be) complete nor to give the just value, if it might lack a comma, a point, any shade; a labor if it is not completed, not only can't it be given value, but it can not receive honor and glory. Whence after the working love rises the love of thankfulness, of thankfulness and of giving to God that which is of God. The creature has received from God the first act of his work, she has followed it with her working love, but fed by God, she completes it with a greatest love, with giving to God that which from God has had beginning. Behold the ultimate point and the most beautiful shade of the act of the creature, which God himself benigns to give his divine appreciation and feels honored and glorified with the little gift received, and in virtue of this he gives to the creature other occasions to make other acts done in order to always hold her near and in continuous correspondence."

* * *

March 30, 1931

The humiliations, bearers of glory. The tenderness of the heart of Jesus. A hard heart is capable of all evils. Invitation to take the crumbs in the divine goods.

I am again under the nightmare of my usual sufferings. After a month of a break they are afresh; I (had) felt as emptied from all the sufferings, my sweet Jesus did not stiffen me anymore nor make me immobile and without motion. [Before, when he did this,] I felt as if my life might finish in remaining without motion and stiffened, and yet I lived, but with a strangled life and without the least mastery of myself, waiting with a patience that only Jesus could give me, (for) he who should call me to obedience in order to give me motion and to make me go out from the abyss in which I found myself. Whence seeing myself free, for how much I loved to divide the sufferings together with Jesus, yet my nature felt triumphant, more so than I didn't have anymore need of anyone; hence in finding myself again tied up, impeded within the former abyss, my poor nature feels such repugnance, that if my beloved Jesus doesn't help me, doesn't strengthen me, doesn't entice me with special graces, I don't know what I would do in order to not fall into that state of sufferings. Ah, my Jesus help me, you who have sustained me for so many long years in a state so sorrowful! Oh, if you want that I might continue, continue to sustain me and use your mercy toward this poor sinner, so that I don't oppose your Most Holy Will!

Whence while I was between repugnances and fears of being surprised by my usual sufferings, my adorable Jesus making himself seen that he suffered much said to me:

"My daughter, what is (this), you don't want to suffer anymore together with me? How (is it), you want to leave me alone? You want to take away from me the rights that you have given me so many times, that I might be able to do with you that which I want? Good daughter, do not give me this sorrow, abandon yourself between my arms and leave me to do that which I want."

And I: "My love, pardon me, you know the struggles in which I find myself and in what profound humiliations I have been cast; if things might remain as before, whenever have I refused you anything? Therefore mind and think there, O Jesus, to that which you do to me and in what a labyrinth you cast me if you make me fall into (my) usual sufferings; and if I tell you Fiat it is with so much force that I do it, but I feel myself die. Jesus, Jesus, help me!"

And Jesus: "My good daughter, do not fear, the humiliation is bearer of glory, to the contempt of creatures divine appreciation arises, and the abandonment to them is the re-call of the faithful company of your Jesus. Therefore leave me to do. If you might know how armed divine justice is, you would not oppose it, rather you would pray me that I might make you suffer in order to partly spare your brothers; other regions will be devastated and misery is at the doors of the cities and of the nations. My heart feels such tenderness in seeing in what state of desolation and of upsetting the earth reduces itself and this tenderness of mine so very sensible for creatures becomes offended by the hardness of the human heart. Oh, how intolerable to me is the hardness of the human heart! more so before mine, which is all loving tenderness and goodness toward them. A hard heart is capable of all evils and arrives to such as to make a joke of the sufferings of others, and it changes the tendernesses of my heart for him into sorrows and profound wounds. The most beautiful prerogative of my heart is tenderness; all the fibers, all the affections, the desires, the love, the heartbeat of my heart have for beginning tenderness, so that my fibers are tender, my affections and desires are most tender, my love and heartbeat are so very tender that they arrive to liquefy my heart for tenderness, and this tender love makes me arrive to love creatures so much, that I am content to suffer, rather than to see them suffer. A love when it is not tender is like a food without seasoning, like an aged beauty that doesn't know how to attract anyone to make itself loved, and like a flower without perfume, like an arid fruit without humor and sweetness. A hard love without tenderness is unacceptable and would not hold the virtue to make itself loved by anyone; therefore my heart suffers so much in seeing the hardness of creatures, that they arrive to change my graces into scourges."

After this I found myself (under) a supreme force, to which it was not given to me to be able to resist, in my sorrowful state, and although I felt great repugnance I have sought to abandon myself in the Divine Will, my only refuge. And Jesus, in order to give me the strength, made himself seen for a little and said to me:

"My daughter, in creating man, our Divinity put outside of ourselves sanctity, love, goodness, beauty and so on, that should serve man in order to make him holy, good, beautiful, and to give us love for love. Now our goods have not been entirely taken by him and therefore they await one who takes them. Therefore come into our goods, come to take the crumbs of the sanctity, of the love, of the goodness, the crumbs of beauty, of fortitude; I say crumbs in comparison to those that you will leave, because our goods are immense and that which the creature can take can be called crumbs in respect to that which she leaves, but for her they will fill her up so much as to overflow outside. Our love then is content, when he sees the beloved creature, in our goods filled even to the brim. Now these crumbs form so many different foods, one more beautiful than the other, so that [the creature] takes from our celestial table, and feeds herself abundantly with these divine foods. And since she gives of that food that she takes, thus in giving us her acts, one who has fed on these divine crumbs gives of sanctity, is filled with such beauty, that we immediately recognize that it is the food of our crumbs that she gives us in her acts. And oh, how content we remain that the creature gives us her acts that give of the divine! We feel our perfumes, we touch our sanctity and goodness and we feel ourselves reciprocated for the crumbs that we have given her."

* * *

April 2, 1931

How that which the creature holds as most precious is the will. Power of voluntary sufferings. The support. How the little flame is inflamed in the soul and how it is fed.

My abandonment continues in the Holy Volition, but for how very abandoned, I feel my repugnances alive in falling into the state of my usual sufferings, and these repugnances are caused by the struggles and by the impositions that there are over me. Whence in the bitterness of my soul I said to my sweet Jesus: "My love, you want to make me fall into sufferings, even offence, but I don't want to put forth my will from me; you will do it, I will be content, but from me I don't want to put forth anything." And Jesus all afflicted said to me:

"My daughter, what would I do without your will with your sufferings? I don't have anything to do with it nor could they serve me to disarm divine justice nor to placate my just scorn, because that which (is) most beautiful and most precious (that) the creature holds is the will, it is the gold, all the rest are superficial things, things without substance, and the sufferings themselves (are) without value. Instead if the gold thread of spontaneous will flows in the sufferings, it has the virtue to change them into purest gold, worthy of he who all voluntarily suffered, and even death itself for the love of creatures.

"If I might want suffering without will, there is so much abundance in the world, that when I want some I could take some, but since there lacks the gold thread of their will, they are not for me, they don't attract me, they don't wound (my) heart nor do I find the echo of my voluntary sufferings in them, hence they don't have the virtue to change the scourges into grace. Hence sufferings without will are empty inside, without fullness of grace, without beauty, without power over my Divine Heart; one quarter hour of voluntary sufferings (is) enough in order to make up for and to surpass all the most atrocious sufferings that there are in the world, because these are in the human order, the voluntary ones are in the divine order. And then from the little daughter of my Volition I would never accept her sufferings without the spontaneity of her will; it was this that made you beautiful and graceful to my presence, that opened the current of my manifestations on my Divine Will and that with magnetic strength pulled me to make my visits so often to your soul. Your will sacrificed voluntarily for my love was my smile, my amusement, and it had the virtue to change my sorrows into joys.

"Hence I will be content rather to hold only for myself the sufferings, rather than to make you suffer without the spontaneous acceptance of your will. Oh, how it would degrade you and you would descend into the depths of the children of the human volition, losing the noble title, the precious characteristic of daughter of my Will! In my Will force doesn't exist, in fact no one forced him in creating the sky, the sun, the earth, man himself, but he did it voluntarily, without anyone saying anything, for love of creatures; and yet he knew how much he had to suffer for their cause. Thus I want one who wants to live of my Will; force is of the human nature, force is impotence, it is mutability, force is the true character of the human will. Therefore be attentive good daughter, we don't change things and you do not want to give me this sorrow to my heart too embittered."

Whence in my bitterness I said: "My Jesus, and yet those that are over me they say to me: 'How ever can it be possible? For four, five persons who have wanted to do evil, he should send so many chastisements? Rather Our Lord has reason, because the sins are a great deal, and therefore the scourges,' and so many other things that they say and that you know." And Jesus all goodness added:

"My daughter, how mistaken they are! It is not for the sin of four or five that with so much perfidy they have arrived even to the calumnies, these will be punished individually, but it is the support that they have taken away (from) me. Your sufferings serve me as support, the support taken away from me, (and) my justice doesn't find one who sustains him and remaining without support he has made rain, in the time that you have been free from your usual sufferings, continuous and terrible scourges. Instead if there might have been the support, even though [the scourges] happen, they would have been one tenth, one fifth the part, more so that this support was formed of voluntary sufferings and wanted by me, and in the voluntary sufferings there enters a divine strength, I could say that I myself in your sufferings made myself (a) support in order sustain my justice. Now lacking your sufferings I lack the material in order to form the support and hence my justice remains free to do that which he wants; from this they should understand the great good that I have made everyone and the entire world in holding you for so many years in the state of voluntary suffering. Therefore if you don't want that my justice continues to shake up the earth, do not deny me your voluntary sufferings, and I will help you. Do not fear, leave me to do."

After this I all abandoned myself in the Divine Fiat, with the dread that I might deny something to Jesus and be able to lack in always doing the Divine Will. This dread tears my soul and makes me uneasy, and only with the presence of Jesus do I feel the peacemaker of (before); but as I lose him from sight I return under the tempest of dreads, of fears and repugnances. And my sweet Jesus in order to raise me up added:

"Good daughter, courage, raise yourself up, do not batter yourself. Do you want to know how the light of my Divine Will forms itself in your soul? The repeated desires are like so many puffs, that blowing on your soul they call the little flame, the little drops of light, to inflame themselves inside of her, and how much more intensely she desires, so many more puffs in order to feed the little flame and to magnify it more; if the puff ceases, there is the peril that the little flame is extinguished. So that in order to form and to ignite the little flame there is needed the true and incessant desires, and in order to mature and to magnify the light there is needed the love that the germ/seed of the light contains; in vain you would blow with your desires if there might lack the ignitable material over your repeated puffs. But who puts in security this little flame in a way as to make it imperishable, without peril of extinguishing? The acts done in my Divine Will; they take the material of igniting the little flame of our eternal light that is not subject to extinguish, and they maintain it always alive and always growing, and the human will is eclipsed and becomes blind before this light, and seeing itself blind it doesn't feel the right to act anymore and it gives peace to the poor creature. Therefore do not fear, I will help you to blow, we will blow together, thus the little flame will be more beautiful and more brilliant."

* * *

April 4, 1931

The "I love you" is thunder. The Divine Will is Heaven, our humanity is earth. The sufferings of the heart of Jesus. Exchange of life. The Divine Will the beginning, middle, and end.

My abandonment continues in the arms of the Most Holy Supreme Will, and although I feel under the dense clouds of inexpressible bitterness, which takes away from me the beauty of the divine light, and if I feel it it remains behind the clouds, yet as I say my "I love you" and I do my acts in the Fiat, it forms the thunder and issuing forth the lightning it tears the clouds, and from those tears the brilliant light enters in my soul and it brings me the light of truth that Jesus wants to manifest to his little creature. It seems to me that how much more I repeat my "I love you", so much more often it thunders and flashes, and these lightning flashes tearing the clouds wound my highest good Jesus, who wounded sends me his light as heralding his little visit to his embittered daughter.

Whence while I found myself in this state, my beloved Jesus had come in a compassionate and afflicted state: he had broken arms for the grave offenses he received, and casting himself in my arms he asked help of me in so many sufferings; I don't know how to resist, and while I pressed him between my arms felt him communicate his sufferings to me but so many as to feel myself die. Hence I had fallen into the abyss of my sorrowful state. Fiat!... Fiat!...

However the thought being able to relieve Jesus with my little sufferings gave me peace. And although Jesus had left me alone in the sufferings, afterwards he returned and said to me:

"My daughter, true love doesn't know how to do anything, or suffer, if it doesn't put (in) part she who loves me. How sweet is the company of dear persons in sufferings! Their company mitigates for me the sufferings and I feel as if they might re-give me life, and feeling life re-given to me by way of sufferings it is the greatest love that I find in the creature, and I re-give her my life for exchange. So that the love is so much, that they exchange the gift of life the one for the other.

"But do you know who has pulled me into your arms in order to ask help of you in my sufferings? The continuous thunder of your 'I love you', that flashing they have pulled me to come to cast myself into your arms in order to ask relief of you. Beyond this you should know that my Divine Will is Heaven, your humanity is earth. Now as you go doing your acts in him, you take Heaven, and how many more acts you do, so much more post do you take in this Heaven of my Fiat, And while you take Heaven, my Will takes your earth, and Heaven and earth are fused together and they remain lost the one in the other."

After this I continued my abandonment in the Divine Fiat, and blessed Jesus returned with (his) heart open, from which poured forth blood, and in that Divine Heart was seen all the sufferings of Jesus, that he suffered in all the parts of his Divine Person, centralized all in (his) heart, indeed in it there was the seat and the beginning of all his sufferings, that circulating through all his Most Holy Humanity, as so many rivulets went up again in his Most Holy Heart; bringing with them the torment that all his Divine Person suffered.

And Jesus added:

"My daughter, how much I suffer! Look at this heart of mine, how many wounds, how many sorrows, how many sufferings it hides. It is the refuge of all the sufferings, there is no sorrow, nor spasm of pain, nor offense that does not flow into this heart of mine. My sufferings are so many, that not being able to sustain the bitterness I go finding one who wants to accept some little particle of these sufferings in order to have a breath of relief, and when I find her I hold her so very dear to me, that I don't know how to leave her anymore, nor do I feel alone anymore, I have one to whom I can make my sufferings understood, to whom I can confide my secrets and to whom I can pour out my flames of love that consume me. Therefore I often ask that you accept part of my sufferings, because they are very many; and if I don't go to my children to ask relief, to whom should I go? I would remain as a father without children, who doesn't have offspring, or else the ungrateful children have abandoned him. Ah, no, no, you won't abandon me, isn't this true my daughter?"

And I: "My Jesus, never will I abandon you, but you will give me the grace, you will help me in my present conditions, because you know how very painful they are. My Jesus, help me and I also say to you with (my) heart: oh, do not abandon me, don't leave me alone! Oh, how I feel the need of you alive! Help me! Help me!" And Jesus taking a most sweet aspect took my poor soul in his hands, and in the depth he wrote:

"I put my Will in this creature, as beginning, middle and end."

And then he repeated:

"My daughter, I put my Divine Will in your soul as beginning of life, from which all your acts will descend as from a single point, that diffusing themselves in all your being, in (your) soul and in (your) body, they will make you feel the palpating life of my Divine Volition in you, whom will hide in himself all your acts, as inside of a sanctuary, as follows from his divine beginning. Now with holding my Divine Will as beginning, you will remain all ordered in your Creator and you will recognize that every beginning comes from God, and you will give us the glory and the exchange of the love of all created things, that have gone forth from our creative hands. With doing this you will embrace the work of the creation, of which we were the beginning, the life and the conservator of it.

"From the beginning you will pass on to the middle. You should know that man (with) removing himself from our Divine Will refused to acknowledge the beginning and disordered himself, and remained shaky, without support, without strength; to (his) every step he felt inclined to fall as if he felt he might lack the ground under (his) feet and the Heaven over (his) head in the act of striking him in fierce tempest. Now there is needed a middle in order to reconfirm the earth and to make Heaven smile; and behold my coming upon the earth as middle in order to reunite Heaven and earth, God and man. Hence [to] one who holds my Divine Will as beginning, the middle will be revealed to her, and she will embrace the whole work of the redemption and she will give the exchange of the love and the glory of all the sufferings that I suffered in order to redeem man.

"Now if there is the beginning and the middle, there must be the end; (the) end of man is Heaven, and [for] one who holds my Divine Will as beginning, all her acts flow in Heaven as end where her soul must arrive and as beginning of her beatitude that will never have (an) end. And if you will have my Divine Will as end, you will give me the glory and the exchange of the love, that I have prepared a celestial country for creatures for their happy sojourn.

"Therefore my daughter be attentive, and I seal in your soul my Divine Will as beginning, middle and end, which will be for you as life, (and) as sure guide he will conduct you between his arms to the celestial country."

* * *

April 16, 1931

Courage is of resolute souls. Six angels with Jesus at (the) head. How the acts done in the Divine Will are pledges of infinite value, eternal bonds, chains non subject to break.

My continuous life under the empire of the eternal Fiat, which involves me inside and outside and makes me feel his infinite weight; and I as (an) atom involved by this infinity that doesn't have limits, and for how much I love him and sigh, I feel the sorrow alive of my human will grinded and almost dying under the empire of an immense and eternal Divine Will. My Jesus, help me and give me strength in the sorrowful state in which I am; my poor heart bleeds and searches for a refuge in so many sufferings, you alone, my Jesus, can help me. Oh, help me, do not abandon me...

And while (my) poor soul vented in sorrow, my sweet Jesus made himself seen in my interior crucified with six angels, three to the right and three to the left of his adorable Person. Each one of the said angels held his crown between (their) hands, studded with brilliant gems, in the act of offering them to Our Lord. I remained amazed in seeing this, and my beloved Jesus said to me:

"Courage, my daughter; courage is of souls resolute (in) doing good, They are imperturbable under whatever tempest, and while they feel the roar of the thunders and lightnings even to tremble from it, and they remain under the copious water that rains on them, they make use of the water in order to wash and to go forth more beautiful, and without minding to the tempest, they are more than ever resolute and courageous to not move themselves from the commenced good. Discouragement is of irresolute souls who never arrive to complete a good. Courage paves the way, courage puts in flight any tempest, courage is the bread of the strong, courage is (of) the warlike one who knows how to conquer whatever battle. Therefore, good daughter, courage, do not fear; and then what fears? I have given you six angels for your custody, each one of them holds the assignment to guide you through the interminable ways of my eternal Volition, in order to make that you might be able to exchange me with your acts, with your love, that which the Divine Will did with pronouncing six Fiats in the creation. Therefore every angel holds a consigned Fiat and that which went forth from this Fiat, in order to call you to exchange every one of these Fiats, even with the sacrifice of your life. These angels gather your acts and form crowns with them, and prostrate they offer them to the Divinity for exchange of that which our Divine Will did, so that he be known and form his kingdom upon the earth. But this is not everything; at the head of these angels there I am who guide and watch over you in everything, and who form in you the acts themselves and that love that there is wanted by us so that you might be able to hold sufficient love in order to be able to exchange so many great works of our Supreme Volition. Hence do not stop, you have much to do: you have to follow me, he who never stops, you have to follow the angels because they want to complete their entrusted assignment, you have to complete your mission as daughter of the Divine Will."

After this I felt worried, and fearing I thought to myself; "The circumstances of my life are most sorrowful, so much so that many times I feel I succumb under a tempest so long that it doesn't indicate an ending, indeed often it seems that it rages more, and if Our Lord doesn't give me (the) superabundant help and grace, my weakness is so much that I feel as if I might want to go out from the Divine Will, and if, never may it be, this happens, poor me, everything will be lost." But while I thought this, my adorable Jesus extending (his) arms to me in the act of sustaining me said to me:

"My daughter, you should know that the acts done in my Divine Will are imperishable and inseparable from God and they are the continuous memory that the soul has had the good to work together with a Divine Will, and that God has held together with himself the creature in order to make her work with his same Divine Will. This happy memory, operational and holy makes us always hold God and the soul in sight, in a way that the one and the other remain unforgettable, so much so that if the creature might have the misfortune to go out from our Will, to go roaming, she will turn distant, but she will feel the eye of her God over herself that tenderly calls her, and her eye toward he who looks at her continually, and that although she goes roaming she feels the irresistible need, the strong chains that pull her between the arms of her Creator. This happened to Adam; because the beginning of his life was done in my Divine Will, in spite that he sinned, was chased from Eden, he went doing all his life, but perhaps he was lost? Ah, no, because he felt over himself the power of our Will in which he had worked, he felt our eye that watched him and that pulled his eye to look at us, and the dear memory that the his early acts had had life in our Will.

"You can not understand all the good and what it means to work in our Will. With working in him the soul acquires so many pledges of infinite value for how many acts our Fiat does, and these pledges remain in God himself, because the creature doesn't hold the capacity nor post where to hold them, so much is the value that they contain. And can you ever believe that while we hold these pledges of infinite value of the creature, we should permit that she might become lost, she to whom these pledges so precious belong? Ah, no, no!... Therefore do not fear, the acts done in our Volition are eternal bonds, chains non subject to break. And do you suppose that you might go out from our Divine Volition, that which won't be, you can go out, but your acts remain nor can they go out, because they have been done in our house, and the creature holds her rights even to such that she is in our house, that is in our Will; as she goes out she loses her rights, however these acts will have such power as to recall she who was possessor of them. Hence do not want to devastate the peace of your heart, abandon yourself in me and do not fear."

* * *

April 24, 1931

How God in working requires the acts of creatures as little ground where to lean his works. Who forms the breath, the heartbeat of the creation. The works of God bearers of life.

I was following my acts in the Divine Fiat; oh, how I would love that nothing might escape me of that which he has done, as much in the creation as in the redemption, in order to be able to make competition with my little incessant "I love you, I adore you, I thank you, I bless you and I pray to you that the Kingdom of the Divine Will comes upon the earth!" But while I thought this, my amiable Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, our divine work, although it super-abounds, but so much so that the creature can not arrive to take all the overabundance of the goods that we put in our creative works, however in order to work we always require the little work of the creature, and according to the more or less worked by her, thus we dispose the more or less of the goods that we want to give in the work that we want to do for the benefit of creatures, because the work of them serves us as the little ground or space where to lean our goods. If a ground or space is little, little can we put there, if it is great we can put more there, and if we want to put more there she will be incapable of taking and understanding that which we have given her. You see therefore how very necessary is the little work of the creature in order to make that our work might have life in the midst of the human generations, more so that as the creature commences her little acts, her prayers, her sacrifices in order to obtain the good that we want to give them, thus she puts herself in communication with her Creator, she opens a kind of correspondence and all her acts are none other than little letters that she makes arrive to him, in which now she prays, now she cries, and now offers her own life to move him to give the good that we want to give them. This disposes the creature to receive it and God to give it. If this might not be, there would lack the way, and all the communications would be closed; there would lack the knowledge of he who wants to give the gift, and our gifts would be given and exposed to enemies, who are neither loved by us nor lovers of us, that which can not be; while when we want to do a work we always flutter over one who loves us and (who) we love, because love is the germ/seed, the substance, the life of our works, and when there lacks the love there lacks the respiration, the heartbeat of a work and one doesn't appreciate the received gift, and with not appreciating it there passes the peril that it dies on being born.

"Behold therefore the necessity of your acts and the sacrifice also of your life, in order to make my Divine Volition known and to make him reign. There is no greater work of him, and therefore I want your repeated acts, your incessant prayers and your prolix sacrifice of a life buried alive: it is none other than the spacious ground where to lean such a good. Your every act is a little letter that you send us, and we reading it say: 'Ah, yes there one who wants our Volition upon the earth and one who wants to give us her own life in order to make him reign!' With this we dispose the things, the graces, the events, in order to fill your little ground, and we wait that it might be enlarged more in order to lean (on it) the great gift of the Kingdom of our Will.

"This happened in the redemption; I waited such a long time in order to descend from Heaven in earth, in order to give the sufficient time to the elect people to prepare with their acts, prayers and sacrifices, the little ground where I could lean the fruits of the redemption, so that they were so very superabundant, that creatures have yet to take everything; and if they might had done more, more

I would have given, and if I might had wanted to give more, without even a comma, a point of their acts, it would have been for them as an illegible book of which if the language is not known it is like a treasure without a key, that one doesn't know that which is inside, because the act of the creature is the eye that reads and the key that opens in order to take my gifts. And then to give without making known the good that is given, it would have been a sorrow and not worthy of our wisdom. Therefore be attentive in following my Divine Will; how much more you will follow him, more you will recognize him and more will he be superabundant in giving his goods."

After this I was following my round in the creation in order to unite myself to the acts done by the Divine Will in it and my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, the breath, the heartbeat, the circulation of the blood of the creation is our love, adoration, glory. We put in it that which we are in ourselves; our nature is purest love and our sanctity is so much, that that which this love produces is none other than profound adoration and perennial glory to our Divine Being. Hence putting forth the creation we had to put forth that which we possess, nor can we put forth that which didn't belong to us; therefore the breath of the creation is love, and as I palpate thus it becomes pearled with new love, that giving the course of the circulation it repeats incessantly: 'Adoration and glory to our Creator.'

"Now the creature, if she turns in created things putting there her love, she puts forth hers and takes our love, and [this] makes the other love arise in order to wait again for it to receive and to give her love. Hence an exchange and a competition occur between the created things and the creature, that uniting themselves together they give love, adoration, glory to our Supreme Being.

"Therefore if you want love think that all created things hold our mandate to give you love, always that they receive yours; thus the feast of our love will be maintained between Heaven and earth, and you will feel the happiness of our love, and the breath of love, the heartbeat of adoration will be substituted for you, and perennial glory will circulate in your blood to your Creator.

"Whence you should know that our works are full of life; our creative strength holds the virtue to put there the vital germ/seed in all the works that we do and to communicate it to the creatures who make use of them. The creation is stuffed with our creative works; the redemption is a boundless field of our actions, done because they brought the life and the good that they contain to creatures. So that we are surrounded by the magnificence of our works, but we hold the sorrow that these works do not become taken, and many (are) not even known by the creature, and hence they are for them as dead, because they bring life and produce fruits of life as much as [creatures] make use of them. And to hold so many vital works compromised, as so many of our properties, without producing the fruits that they contain, and more so to see the creature poor, weak and without the life of true good, it grieves us so much, that you can not understand what condition of sorrow creatures put us in. We find ourselves in the conditions of a father who having many children prepares lunch, and while he prepares it he is all festive thinking that his children won't be fasting, but (that) they will eat of his; then he sets the table, prepares the plates with the diversity of the foods that he has prepared, then he calls the children so that they come to taste the beautiful foods that he has prepared, but the children don't listen to the voice of the father, and the lunch remains without anyone touching it. What is not the sorrow of this father in seeing that the children do not sit at his table and do not eat any of the foods that he has prepared! (For) he himself to look at the table full of foods causes him sorrow. Such are we in seeing that creatures do not take care of the so many works that we have done with so much love for them. Therefore how much more you will take of ours, more divine life you will receive, you will make us more content and you will heal for us the profound wound of human ingratitude."

* * *

May 4, 1931

Power of the word of Jesus. How the repeated acts are as juice to the plants. Forced sufferings lose the freshness. Jesus wants to be free in the soul.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues; his sweet empire entices my poor will, that although it would very often like to go out as in field to make its way, given the sorrowful circumstances in which I find myself, however the omnipotent Fiat with the irresistible force of his light fixes upon the night of my will and impedes my step, and forming his day of light in my soul he pulls me to do my little acts in his Divine Volition. And I thought to myself: "Why does Jesus hold so much interest that I don't skip my repeated acts in his adorable Will?" And Jesus all tenderness and goodness said to me:

"My daughter, because all the acts that you do in your interior are acts taught and formed by me, so that they are my acts, and I don't want you to leave yourself behind, without uniting yourself together with me in order to follow them, because you should know that when I do a labor in the soul, when I speak and I teach, your Jesus holds such power, (as) to convert into nature the good taught and worked in the creature, and the good in nature can not be destroyed; it would be as if you might have the eye given to you by God as property of your nature and it might not serve you in order to look, the voice, the hands; the feet and they might not serve you in order to speak, to work and to walk: wouldn't it be worthy of condemnation? Now as I give gifts in nature to the body, thus when I speak, my creative word holds the power to give to the soul as in nature the gift that I intend to give with my word, because one Fiat of mine can enclose a sky, a sun, an incessant prayer for gift, with which my Fiat holds the power to convert these gifts as in nature of the soul. Hence that which you do in your interior are gifts in nature that my word has formed in you, therefore you will remain attentive to not hold my gifts useless; I have put them in you in order to make that, with these repeated acts in my Volition, we can impetrate together the great gift that my Divine Will comes to reign upon the earth, more so, good daughter, that the repeated acts are as the juice to the plant: if the plant doesn't hold juice, it dries out and can neither produce flowers nor fruit. The juice is as the vital blood of the plant, that circulating in it conserves it, makes it grow and produces the most beautiful and savory fruits, as to form the glory and the profit of the farmer; but this juice doesn't form itself by the plant itself, it is the farmer that must be attentive to water it and to cultivate it, but not one time, but always, giving them as in nature the sufficient juice in order to make that the poor plant might find the daily food in order to vegetate and grow, in order to be able to give its fruits to he who cultivates it. But if the farmer is sluggish, the plant loses the juice and dies.

"You see therefore what the repeated acts are: they are the blood of the soul, the food, the conservation and the growth of my gifts, in which I as celestial farmer never cease watering you, [and of] which there is no peril that I can be sluggish. But you must receive this vital juice, and then you receive it, when you repeat the acts in my Will in the depth of your soul: then you open the mouth, and I watering you give you the blood in your soul in order to give you the divine heat, the celestial food, adding on to you my other words, I conserve you and I increase my gifts. Oh, if the plant might have reason and might refuse to be watered by the farmer, what would (the) fate be for the poor plant? The fate to lose (its) life! And what sorrow for the poor farmer? Therefore repeating the acts is to want life, it is taking the food; the repetition is to love and to appreciate, and to satisfy the desires and to render your celestial farmer content, that I have worked in the field of your soul with so much love; and as I feel you repeat your acts, whether together with me or alone, you give me the fruits of my labor, and I feel re-loved and repaid for the so many gifts that I have given you, and I dispose myself to give greater gifts. Therefore be attentive and make that your constancy be the winning strength that conquers and dominates your Jesus."

After this I felt as if I should fall into my usual state of suffering, and given the impositions that there are I felt repugnant to accept (them), my poor nature trembled and I felt myself say with my sweet Jesus: "Father, if it is possible let this chalice pass from me; but not my will, but yours be done." And my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, I don't want forced sufferings, but voluntary, because forced sufferings lose the freshness, the beauty and the sweet enchantment of the likeness of the sufferings of your Jesus, that were suffered by me all voluntarily; and they are as those faded flowers as those immature fruits, that the sight disdains to look at and the mouth can not swallow, so much is the insipidity and the hardness of those fruits.

"You should know that when I elect a soul, I form there my residence, and I want to be free in my house to do that which I want and to remain as pleases me, nor do I want restriction from the part of the creature; I want absolute liberty, otherwise I would become unhappy and impeded in my way of acting. It would be the greatest misfortune, even to the poorest (person), to not enjoy liberty in his little hovel, and I would incur the misfortune of a poor individual, that having formed a residence with so much love, when he has equipped it and put it in order he enters in order to live there, but with his sorrow there becomes made impositions and restrictions for him; it is said to him: 'In this room you can not sleep, in this one you can not receive, in this other one you are not able to pass.' In short he can not remain as he wants nor do that which he wants; so that the poor little one feels unhappy, because he has lost his liberty, and he has repented of the sacrifices that he has made (in order) to build this residence. Such am I; how many labors, how many sacrifices, how many graces have I not poured out in order to adapt one creature for my residence! And when I take the possession of her, more than everything I love and want liberty in my house; and when I find now the repugnancies, now the restrictions, instead of the residence adapting to me, I must adapt to her, hence I can't develop either my life or my divine ways, nor is it given to me to complete the purpose for which with so much love I selected this residence. Therefore I want liberty, and if you want to make me happy leave free to do that which I want."

* * *

May 10, 1931

One who wants to receive, must give. Ways that Jesus holds. The divine gifts, bearers of peace. How the Divine Will holds the leavening virtue. What good a completed act of the Divine Will encloses.

I am always in the dear inheritance of the Divine Will; (my) mind turns everywhere, the step, I find him as ruling Queen, that with his sweet empire he wants to reign over my poor soul; and with the most eloquent, sweet and strong voice he says to me, exhaling love, as to be able to convert into fire the whole entire world:

"As Queen I wait for you in every work of mine, so that you come to form and to extend your little divine kingdom in my same works. Look at me, I am Queen, and one who is Queen holds the power to give to her children that which she wants, more so that my kingdom is universal, my power is without limits, and as Queen I love to not be alone in my kingdom, but I want the cortege, the company of my children, and to divide my universal empire together with them. Therefore your way is my works, that as so many signs they will show you so many meetings to make with your Celestial Queen, who waits for you in order to give you her gifts as certain pledge of his kingdom."

Whence while my poor mind was lost in the immense light of the Divine Will, my always amiable Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, one who wants to receive must give; giving disposes the creature to receive and God to give. Many times also your Jesus holds this way: when I want (something) from the creature I give, and if I want great sacrifices I give much, so that she looking at the much that I have given will be ashamed and won't have the courage to deny me the sacrifice that I ask of her. The giving is almost (a) pledge that the person (also) receives, it attracts her attention, her love; giving is appreciation, giving is hope, giving makes rise in the heart the memory of the giver. And how many times persons that didn't know each other, they become friends through a gift?

"Now in the divine order the giver is always God, in which he does as (the) first to send his gifts to the creature, but if she is not moved to give anything to her Creator, might it even be her little love, her gratitude, a little sacrifice, because if we have given it is because we want (something), no more if they send (for) other gifts from us, because with not giving us anything she has closed the correspondence and has broken the beautiful friendship that our gift should make arise. Now, my daughter, to give and to receive are first and indispensable acts, that show in clear notes that we love the creature and she loves us; but it is not enough, she must know how to receive with converting into nature the good received, with eating it and chewing it very well, in a way as to convert the gift into blood of the soul. And this (is) our purpose in giving our gifts: to want to see converted into nature the gift that we have given, because then our gifts are not in peril and they dispose us to give greater gifts; and the creature having converted it into nature puts our gift into security, she remains possessor of it and will feel in herself the good, the source and the received gift converted into nature. And since our gifts are bearers of peace, of happiness, of invincible strength, of celestial air, hence she will feel in herself the nature of peace, of happiness, of divine strength, that will form in herself the air of Heaven.

"Behold therefore the reason that when I make for you the great gift of my word, afterwards I am silent: it is because I am waiting that you feed on and chew my word well, in a way as to see that which I have said to you changed in you into your nature; and when I see this, then I feel the irresistible need of love to speak to you again, because one gift of mine calls the other, nor do they know how to be alone, and I always hold to give, always to say and to do with one who converts into nature my gifts."

After this I was thinking of the Divine Will, how difficult it seemed to me that his kingdom might come; and my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, as the yeast holds the virtue to leaven the bread, thus my Will is the leavening agent of the acts of the creature; as she calls my Divine Will into her acts, thus they remain fermented by him and they form the bread of the Kingdom of my Volition. Now the yeast is not enough in order to make a lot of bread, but there is needed a lot of flour, there is needed one who must complete these acts to unite flour and yeast, there is needed the water, bond of union in order to be able to knead flour and yeast, in order to make that the yeast might communicate the leavening virtue and the flour might receive it; then there is needed the fire in order to cook this bread, in order to form it (as) bread to feed on and to digest. Now isn't there needed more time, more acts in order to form it than to eat it? The sacrifice is in forming it, to eat it one does it immediately and the taste of the sacrifice is felt.

"Whence, my daughter, the yeast of my Divine Fiat is not enough that holds only the virtue to ferment your acts, to empty them of the human volition in order to convert them into bread of Divine Will, but there is needed a continuation of acts, of sacrifices, and for a long time, in a way that my Volition with his leavening virtue will ferment/leaven all these acts, in order to form a lot of bread and to hold it prepared and reserved for the children of his kingdom. When everything will be formed, there remains to dispose the events, and this is easier and is done more immediately, because it is in our power to move the reasons accordingly in order to do that which we want. Didn't I do as much for the Redemption? My long thirty years of my hidden life were as yeast, in which all my acts were leavened in order to form and to leaven the great good of the Redemption, the brief life of my public life and my passion. It was my leavened bread that my Divine Will formed and leavened in my acts, that as bread broken to everyone and I gave it to eat in order to make that everyone might receive the bread of the redeemed, in order to acquire the necessary strengths in order to put themselves in safety. Therefore do not give it any thought, think to make it your duty and do not let any act of yours escape in which there isn't put the yeast of my Divine Will, so that your being remains fermented by him, and I will think of all the rest."

Whence I continued to think: "But what has Jesus (gained) with this poor state of mine and why does he have such interest that I might fall into my usual sufferings with so much trouble and annoyance (so) that he makes me give it to the others, that I could call it my martyrdom? Oh, how hard it is to have to do with creatures, to feel through pure necessity the need of them! This humiliates me so much, that I remain as annihilated in my own nothing. But while I thought this and other, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, do you want to know what I have (gained) from it? My completed Divine Will, and this is everything for me. One completed act of mine of my Will encloses all the sky, the sun, the earth and also myself; there is no love that I don't find [in it], good that it doesn't possess, glory that it doesn't give me; all (the) rest remains centralized in a completed act of my Will, and the happy creature that completes it can say to me: 'I have given you everything, even yourself, I have nothing more that I can give you.' Because my Divine Will encloses everything, there is no thing or good that escapes, hence completing it in that which I want, the creature finds that which is in herself my Will; and I can say: 'With giving you the grace to let you do a completed act of him, I have given you everything.' Indeed with completing it my sufferings arise, my steps, my words, my works double themselves and they put themselves in motion in order to give to creatures, because my Divine Will working also in the creature puts in motion all our works in order to make them rise to new life. And you tell me what I have (gained) from it? My daughter, think to do it and make that your life might be one continuous act of my Will."

* * *

May 16, 1931

The Divine Will confirmer of the acts of the creature. Enthusiasm of divine love in creating man; touches of the divine qualities.

I am always afresh, in my dear inheritance of the Divine Fiat; it seems to me that he whispers to me in the ear:

"As I was in the beginning, I will always be, in the centuries of the centuries. Also if you will remain in my Divine Will you will be always equal to yourself, you will never change action, you will always do my Will, and the variety of your actions you can call them effects of that first and only act of him, that flows in your acts in order to make one alone of them, that holds the virtue to produce as sun the beautiful rainbow of the variety of the colors, as effect of his light, without changing his sole act of always giving light."

What happiness is felt in the soul to be able to say: "I always do the Divine Will!"

Now my little and poor intelligence I felt it absorbed in the light of the Divine Will and I felt in me the unique and powerful strength of him and the innumerable and various effects of him making (a) crown for me and investing me they were bearers of joy, of peace, of fortitude, of goodness, of love, of sanctity, of indescribable beauty; these effects were like so many kisses of life that they gave to my soul, and I remained possessor of them. I was amazed by it, and my always amiable Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, all the acts done by the creature in the Divine Will are confirmed by God as divine acts, and this confirmation forms the life of the same acts, and they become sealed with the divine seal as imperishable acts always new, fresh and of an enchanting beauty. The acts done by the creature in my Will I could call them (a) new creation that I make the creature; as she goes doing her act in him, my Fiat imposes himself with his creative strength and forms there his act and as right confirms it. It happens as happened in the creation: since the creative strength of my Will raced in creating so many things, they remained immutable without ever changing; maybe the sky has changed, the stars, the sun? Quite; what was created such they are, because wherever my Volition puts his creative strength, the perennial life of his same act remains, and as confirmation it can never change. You see therefore what it means to do and live in my Divine Will: to be under the empire of a creative and confirming strength, that puts in security all the acts of the creature making them immutable. So that with living in my Volition she will remain confirmed in the good that she does, in the sanctity that she wants, in the knowledge that she possesses, in the triumph of the sacrifice.

"Our Divinity of our spontaneous Will remains under the empire of a love that irresistibly races, that wants to give to the creature, so much so that in creating man he was created in our enthusiasm of love from the touches of our divine qualities. Our Divine Being being Most Pure Spirit he had neither hands nor feet; our divine qualities served us as hands in order to form man, and re-pouring himself over him as an impetuous torrent we molded him and touching him we infused the effects of our supreme qualities. These touches remained in man, and therefore there are seen in him certain beautiful qualities of goodness, of talent, of intelligence and other, they are the virtue of our divine touches, that continuing to mold man produces their effects; they are our pledges of love with which we kneaded him, that in spite that he doesn't remember and perhaps doesn't even know us, they continue their perennial office to love him. And since when one touches an object or a person, one who touches feels the impression of the person touched, hence as our touches of divine qualities remained in man, thus the impression of having touched him remained in our supreme qualities. So that we feel him in ourselves; how not to love him? Therefore for how much of it man does, we go toward meeting him with new contrivances of love and with our pleasant refrain to always love him."

* * *

May 19, 1931

Scenes of Eden. Fall of man. The Queen of Heaven who crushes the head of the infernal serpent. How the words of Jesus hold the communicative virtue. How he speaks of the doubts and difficulty.

I was continuing my acts in the Divine Volition, and uniting myself to his acts that he did in the creation, in order to give him the homage, the love, the adoration for every created thing for love of creatures, my poor mind carried itself in Eden, in the act of the fall of the man: how the infernal serpent with his astuteness and lies induced Eve to remove herself from the Will of her Creator, and Eve with her flattering ways induced Adam to fall into the same sin.

Now while I thought this, my beloved Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, my love didn't extinguish itself because of the fall of man, but caught fire more, and although justly my justice punished him and condemned him, my love kissing my justice, without time interfering in the midst, promised the future Redeemer and said to the deceiving serpent, with the empire of my power: 'You made use of a woman in order to snatch away man from my Divine Will, and I through means of another woman, who will hold in her power the power of my Fiat, will demolish your pride, and with her immaculate foot she will crush your head.' These words burned the infernal serpent more than hell itself, and enclosed so much anger in his heart, that he could not be more stopped; he did none other than to turn and to return the earth in order to discover she who should crush his head, not in order to make her crushed, but in order to be able with his infernal arts, with his diabolic astuteness, to make her fall, she who should defeat him, weaken him and tie him in the dark abysses. Hence for four thousand years he went always turning, and when he saw women more virtuous and good he armed his battle, he tried them in all ways, and then he left them, when he assured himself through means of some weakness or defect that it was not through her means by which he should be defeated, and he followed his turn.

"Whence the celestial creature in fact came, who crushed his head, and the enemy felt such power in her, that it knocked him down and he didn't have the strength to draw near; this gnawed him with anger, and he put forth all his infernal weapons in order to combat her, but what! He went in order to draw near, he felt himself weaken, the legs break and he was constrained to turn back, and from afar he spied her admirable virtues, her power and sanctity; and I in order to confound him and to put him in doubt made him see the celestial Sovereign Lady, her human things, as she was taking food, crying, sleeping, and other, and he persuaded himself that it was not she, because being such a powerful and holy person she should not be subject to the natural needs of life; but then he returned to doubt and he wanted to return to the assault, but in vain. My Will is power that weakens all the evils and all the infernal powers, he is light that makes himself known by everyone, and where he reigns he makes his power felt, that even to the demons themselves does it become (impossible) to refuse to acknowledge. Hence the Queen of Heaven was and is the terror of all hell.

"Now the infernal serpent feels over his head my rapid word told to him in Eden, my irrevocable condemnation that a woman will crush his head; hence he knows that with his head being crushed his kingdom on earth will be overthrown, he will lose his prestige, and all the evil that he did in Eden which through means of a woman will be redone by another woman. And although the Queen of Heaven weakened him, crushed his head, and I myself tied him to the cross, hence he is free no more to do that which he wants, but some unfortunately he approaches, of them he makes fools. More so that he sees that the human will is not subjugated by the Divine and His reign is not yet formed, he fears that another woman has to finish burning the temples, in order to make that the divine condemnation he has on his head crushed by the foot of the Immaculate Queen (has) its completion, because he knows that when I speak, my word has the communicative virtue to the other creatures.

"Hence as he was made certain that she whom he feared was the Most Holy Virgin, and not being able to combat her more he resumed his round, he is all eyes and as on the look-out in order to see if another woman might have the assignment from God to make the Divine Will known in order to make Him reign; and having seen you write so much on my Fiat, only the doubt that this might be (and) he has aroused all of hell against you - behold the reason for all that which you have suffered - making use of wicked men, making them invent calumnies and things that don't exist. Whence in seeing you cry so much, [the demons] are persuaded that you are not that one who they fear so much who is able bring to ruin their diabolic kingdom. This is that which regards the Queen of Heaven on the part of the infernal serpent, now I want to tell you what regards the part of creatures to the advantage of him.

"My daughter, the celestial creature was poor, her natural dowries apparently were common, nothing of the extraordinary appeared in the exterior, she takes for bridegroom a poor artisan who earns his daily bread with his modest work. Suppose that it might be known, beforehand that she was Mother of the Word, that it was she, from the great ones of the world, from the doctors and priests, that she was the Mother of the future Messiah; they would have made a tireless war, no one would have believed her, they would have said: 'Possible that there have not been and there are women in Israel, that it should be this poor one the Mother of the eternal Word? There has been Judith, Ester and so many others.' Hence no one would have believed, and they would have put forth doubts and difficulties without number. If they put forth doubts on my Divine Person, to not believe me that I was the longed for Messiah, and many arrive to still not believe me that I descended upon the earth in spite that I did many miracles as to induce the most incredulous to believe me! Ah, when (there) enters in hearts the hardness, the obstinacy, it renders them incapable to receive any good; the truths, the miracles themselves are for them as dead and without life. Hence much more so the celestial Mama, that nothing of miraculous was seen in her exterior.

"Now, my daughter, listen to me, the serious doubts, the gravest difficulties that they have found in your writings are really these: what I have said to you that I called you to live in the Kingdom of my Divine Will, giving you the special and unique mission to make him known, so that as I myself said in the Pater Noster and the Holy Church still says it: 'Your kingdom come, that is that your Will be done as in Heaven so in earth'; it doesn't say in the Pater that this kingdom is upon the earth, but it says come, and I would not have composed a prayer if it should not have the effects of it. Hence in order to arrive to this, shouldn't I elect another woman, that the infernal serpent fears so much, and that through means of the first woman ruined for me mankind, and I in order to confound him I make use of the woman in order to re-do for me his ruin and to make good arise to everyone, that he sought to destroy? Behold therefore the necessity of the preparations, of the graces, of my visits and communications.

"This has sounded badly to one who has read, hence doubts and difficulties, that it can not be possible that [of] so many other great saints not one has lived in the Kingdom of my Will, so that it is she alone that he prefers to everyone. And when they have read that I put you next to the Sovereign Queen, because having lived in the Kingdom of my Divine Fiat you could imitate her, wanting to make of you a copy that resembles her, and I put you in her hands so that she might guide you, assist you, protect you, so that you might be able to imitate her in everything, it seemed to them so much absurdity, and sinisterly misunderstanding the sense they have said as if you might have said (that) you were another Queen. How many blunders! I have not said that you are like the celestial Queen, but that I want you similar to her, as I have said to so many other souls dear to me that I wanted them similar to me, but with this they didn't become God like me; and then being the celestial Lady the true Queen of the Kingdom of my Will, it is her completion to help and to teach the fortunate creatures who want to enter to live in him. [With] this they make seen as if I might not have the power to elect whom I want and when I want; but of the rest time will say everything, and as they can not refuse to acknowledge that the Virgin of Nazareth is my Mama, thus they can not refuse to acknowledge that I have elected you for the unique purpose to make my Will known and that through your means I will use it so that the 'Your kingdom come' has its completion. It is certain that creatures are instruments in my hands and I don't look at who it is, but I look at if my Divine Will has decided to work through means of this instrument, and this is enough for me in order to complete my highest designs; and of the doubts and difficulties of creatures I make use of it in his time in order to confound them and to humiliate them, but I don't stop and I go ahead in the work that I want to do through means of the creature. Therefore you also follow me and do not step backwards. Of the rest one sees from the way of their thinking that they have calculated only your person, but they have not calculated that which my Divine Will can do and that which he knows how to do; and when he decides to work in a creature in order to complete his greatest designs in the midst of the human generations, laws are not dictated by anyone, nor who one should be nor the time nor the way nor the place, but in an absolute way he acts; nor does he take account of certain small minds that don't know how to elevate themselves into the divine and supernatural order nor bow before the incomprehensible works of their Creator, and while they want to reason with their human reason, they lose the divine reason and they remain confused and incredulous."

* * *

May 27, 1931

The life of good doesn't die and is defended by all creatures. A prolix good puts in security God and the soul.

My poor mind swam in the immense sea of the eternal Fiat; I flowed in him like a little rivulet, and in my littleness I wanted to embrace his immensity in order to fill all of me with a Volition so holy, in order to be able to have the contentment to be able to say: "My little being is none other than one act alone of Divine Will, my little tiny rivulet is full inside and outside with that Volition that fills Heaven and earth. Oh, holy Volition, you be the life, the actor and the spectator of all my acts, so that everything re-arising in you it can be the call of all the acts of creatures in order to make them re-arise in your Fiat, so that his kingdom may be extended in all creatures! But while I did this, a thought said to me: "What is the good that I do with [the] call (to) the acts of creatures to re-arise in the Divine Will?" And my amiable Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, good is not subject to die, and as the life of the good rises, it puts itself at the defense of all creatures; and if creatures are disposed they take that good, they not only remain defended, but they take the life of that good, and the good rises and forms so many other lives for how many creatures take it; and for the indisposed ones it always remains for their defense, awaiting that they dispose themselves. The acts done in my Volition acquire the germ/seed of the light, and as light, although one, it holds the virtue to give light to whatever eye wants the good of the light in order to make it its own, thus the littlest acts done in my Divine Volition, since he is immense and involves all, the littlest act becomes light and defense of everyone; not only, but it reciprocates her Creator with the love, glory and adoration that with right he awaits and demands from creatures. The acts done in my Volition always have of the prodigious and as by themselves say: 'We are the defense of everyone, we remain between Heaven and earth in order to defend creatures, and with our light we are light of every mind, we are the defenders of our Creator with repairing him with our perennial acts [from] the offences that elevate themselves from the earth.' And then good is always good; do you believe that all that which I did (while) being upon the earth has all been taken by creatures? Quite; how much there still remains! But with this one can not say that it is not good; centuries and centuries will pass and the time will come when all the good that I did will have life in the midst of creatures; that which one doesn't take today, other creatures can take tomorrow, in other epochs. Therefore the true life of the good does not become tired with waiting, and with (an) air of triumph [the acts in my Volition] say: 'We are not subject to die, therefore with certainty the time will come when we will give our fruits, which will make arise so many other lives that resemble us.' Do you believe that with not seeing any effect of all your acts in our Divine Fiat, there will be nothing of good? Quite; today it seems so, but wait for the times and they will say the great good that will come from them; therefore continue and do not give back. Because you should know that the prolixity of the good is, alone, the most certain proof, that assures God and the soul of the state in which she finds herself. A prolix state of patience in the sufferings and sorrowful meetings of life, a prayer repeated without ever tiring of repeating itself, a fidelity, a constancy and equality of ways in all circumstances, it forms sufficient ground, watered by the blood of one's own heart, where God feels called by all the acts of the creature as so many assurances that he can complete his greatest designs; and the creature herself feels in the prolixity of her acts the dominion of herself and the assurance that she won't vacillate.

"The good of one day says nothing, a good today yes and tomorrow no, it says weakness and inconstancy, all fruits of the human will; an inconstant good says that [for] the creature that good, that virtue is not her property, and therefore the good not being in her power it changes into evil and virtue into vice. You see therefore that the soul in order to be sure that she possesses a good, a virtue, she must feel in herself the life of that virtue, and with iron constancy, for years and years and for all (her) life, she must exercise herself in that good. And God feels secure to put there his and to work great things in the constancy of the creature.

"I did this with the Queen of Heaven; I wanted the prolixity of fifteen years of pure life, holy and all of Divine Will in order to descend from Heaven in earth in her virgin bosom. I would have been able to do it beforehand, but I didn't want to; I first wanted her acts of assurance and the prolixity of her holy life, almost in order to give her the right to be my Mama and my infinite wisdom in order to hold reason to have worked unheard of prodigies in her. And is not this perhaps the reason (for) the long prolixity of long sufferings, why did I want to be sure of you and not in words, (but) with deeds? Has it not perhaps been the reason for my so many visits and for the so many truths that I have manifested to you in the prolixity of your sacrificed life? I can say that I made myself seen and I spoke to you in the center of the fire of your sacrifice. And when I hear you say: '(Is it) possible, my Jesus, so long (is) my exile? How do you not pity me?' and I, do you know what I say? 'Ah, my daughter doesn't know well the secret that a prolix sacrifice contains, and how much longer, (so much) greater are our designs to complete. Therefore entrust yourself to me and leave me to do it.'"

* * *

May 31, 1931

The happiness of Jesus is to find his creature in the Divine Will. God plunges himself in the creature and she in God. The tiny little house of Nazareth.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, and my poor mind now stops at one point and now at another, as if I might want to take rest in every single effect of the Divine Will, that although his act is one, his effects are innumerable, so much so that I never arrive to re-find them all, much less understand them, and therefore seeing that it is not given to me to embrace them all being too little, I stop in one of his effects in order to enjoy myself and to rest. And my sweet Jesus, who takes so much pleasure in finding me in his adorable Will, stops in order breathe him as life, said to me:

"My daughter, how sweet it is to find you in my Divine Will, and not those creatures that find themselves in him forced, by necessity and because they can't do less, and while they remain in him they don't know him nor do they love him nor do they appreciate him; but finding you, you find yourself [in him] voluntarily, you know and love him and you arrive even to find your sweet rest, I feel very drawn toward you, more so that the same power of my Will imposes himself over your Jesus to reveal myself, and I don't know how to deny her anything, because I could say that the only happiness that comes to me from earth is to find the creature in my Divine Will. And when I find her I want to repay her with the happiness that she gives me, first with making her happy and then with preparing and disposing her to do an act in my Will; I prepare the space for it, because so much is the greatness, the sanctity, the power that an act done in him contains, that the creature could not contain it if I might not give her the capacity for it. Therefore for one who lives in my Volition she is inseparable from me, because while she has done an act, I must prepare for her the other act, more so that I never leave the creature at one point, but I make her always grow even to be able to say: 'I don't have more to give her, I am content that I have given her everything.' Because you should know that when the creature does an act in my Divine Will, she plunges herself in him and God plunges himself in the creature; whence in plunging into each other, God communicates his new act not ever interrupted, and the human will remains in the authority of the Divine Will and she feels new love, new power, new freshness with all the divine refreshments, in a way that in every act she feels newly reborn in divine life, without losing that which she has received in the other acts, she acquires and incorporates in herself the new life that has been communicated, so much so that she feels herself raised, fed with new growth and with new foods.

"Whence one who lives in our Will always acquires new knowledges of her Creator, and the new knowledge brings her the current of the continuous new act that God possesses. Don't you see the sky, the stars, the sun? Do you perhaps see some change in them? Or else after so many centuries are they not always fresh, beautiful, new, as they were created? And why? Because they are under the empire of the creative strength of our Fiat that created them and remained in them as perennial life. Therefore the permanence of my Will in the creature produces with his empire dominant new life of patience, of prayer, of peace, of sacrifice and of infinite joys; that is my Will, such does he want to render one who lives in him."

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Volition, and my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, when my Divine Will emits an act, he never withdraws it, rather he makes perennial life with his act. The creation itself says it; with continually doing those acts that my Volition put forth in creating them, the created things can call themselves the repeaters of the acts of my Divine Will. The sky always remains extended, it never withdraws from any point, and with being always extended it does repeated acts of Divine Will; the sun always gives light and is all (the) busy-body in completing the innumerable acts of the Divine Will that become entrusted to it in its light, and as it gives the color and the perfume to every single flower, the manifold sweetnesses and flavors to the fruits, the development to the plants, the light and the heat to every single creature and so many other acts that it does, so many acts of my Will does it go completing; it seems that it makes its course with all ruling majesty completing so many acts entrusted to it, true symbol of the majestic and ruling way of my Will. The sea as it murmurs, the water as it gives itself to creatures, the earth as it verdantly greens and produces plants and flowers, so many manifold acts of my Will do they complete; he is the engine of everything and holds all the creation in the act of making his Will complete; and therefore they are all happy, they never lose their post of honor nor are they subject to die, because my Will working in created things gives them perennial life. Only the creature, who should show off more in doing a continued act of my Will, she is the only one who goes forth from the motor of him and arrives even to put herself against a Volition so holy; what sorrow! And what account won't she give me?"

My sweet Jesus became silent and withdrawing he left me in the light of his Will; and oh, how many things I understood! But who can tell them all? More so that in him one speaks with celestial words, and in finding myself in myself I must adapt the celestial words to the human ones, and fearing to make a muddle (of things) I content myself with passing on, hoping that if Jesus wants he will adapt himself to talk with the words of the base world.

After this I continued my acts in the Divine Fiat, and my poor mind stopped in the little house of Nazareth, where the Queen of Heaven, the celestial King Jesus and Saint Joseph were in possession of and lived in the Kingdom of the Divine Will. So that this kingdom is not estranged to the earth: the house of Nazareth, the family that lived in him belonged to this kingdom and they held him in full vigor. But while I thought this, my great King Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, it is certain that the Kingdom of my Divine Will has existed upon the earth and therefore there is the hope that he will return again in his full vigor; our house of Nazareth was his true kingdom, however we were without people. Now you should know that every creature is a kingdom, hence one who lets my Will reign in her can be called a little kingdom of the Supreme Fiat; so that she is a tiny little house of Nazareth that we hold upon the earth, and for however little, being (that) our Will reigns in her, Heaven is not closed for her, she observes the same rights of the celestial country, loves with the same love, feeds herself with the foods of up there and is incorporated in the kingdom of our interminable regions. Now in order to form the great Kingdom of our Will upon the earth we will first make the so many little tiny houses of Nazareth, that is the souls that will want to know him in order to make him reign in them. I and the Sovereign Queen will be at the head of these little tiny houses, because we having been the first ones that possessed this kingdom in earth, it is our right, that we won't surrender to any one, to be the managers of them. Whence [with] these tiny little houses we repeat our house of Nazareth, we will form so many little states of ours, so many provinces, that after it has been well formed and ordered as so many little kingdoms of our Will, they will fuse together and will form one kingdom alone and one great people.

"Therefore in order to have our greatest works, our way of acting is to commence first alone, one on one/[to you for you], through one creature alone; when we have formed this, we make her a channel in order to enclose in our works another two, three creatures, then we enlarge it forming a little nucleus and then we enlarge it so much as to take the whole entire world; our works commence in the isolation of God and the soul and they finish continuing their life in the midst of entire peoples. And when there is the beginning of a work of ours it is a sure sign that it won't die upon being born, at the most it could live hidden for some time, but then it will go forth and will make its perennial life. Therefore I want you always ahead in my Divine Will."

* * *

June 5, 1931

How it is necessary to make friends in the beautiful time. Sorrow of Jesus for the abandonment of the apostles. The human will prison of the creature.

I am always in the sea of the Supreme Volition; oh, how many beautiful things are found in him! There are all the acts of Jesus as in act, there are those of the Sovereign Queen, there are those of our celestial Father, what he has done and what he will do; it is a sea not divided but one, interminable, it is everything. In this sea there are neither perils nor fears of falls, because the happy creature that enters there leaves her cast-offs and she takes the divine cast-offs. Whence while I was in this sea, my sweet Jesus made me present when in his passion the apostles dispersed, they fled from him leaving him alone and abandoned in the midst of enemies. And my highest good Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, the greatest sorrow that I had in my passion, the nail that most transfixed my heart, was the abandonment and the dispersion of my apostles; I didn't have a friendly eye in which my gaze could find. The abandonment, the offenses, the carelessness of friends exceeds, oh, how much! all the sorrows and even death that enemies can give. I knew that the apostles had to give me this nail and cowardly they would flee from me, but to this I didn't mind, because, my daughter, one who wants to do a work must not mind to his sufferings, rather he must make friends in the beautiful time, when everything smiles around him, step by step seeding triumphs and prodigies, not only, but he communicates miraculous strength to whom he makes his friend and disciple; then everyone gives the boast to be the friend of one who is surrounded with glory and honor, everyone hopes; and how many friends and disciples want to have of it, because the glory, the triumphs, the beautiful time are powerful magnets that attract creatures to follow the triumphator. Who wants to follow and to be a friend or disciple of a poor slandered, humiliated, despised one? No one; rather they feel fear, horror to draw near and they arrive to refuse to acknowledge he who before they were in friendship with, as St. Peter did with me. Hence it is useless to hope for friends when the poor creature is found under the nightmare of humiliations, contempts and calumnies; therefore it is necessary to make friends when Heaven smiles and fortune would put us on the throne, if we want that the good, the works that they want, have life and continuation in the other creatures. With making friends when I sowed miracles and triumphs, (so) that they arrived to believe that I had to be their King upon the earth, hence having been my disciples they should occupy the first posts near me, in spite that they abandoned me in my passion, when my Resurrection sounded my full triumph, the apostles retracted, they reunited among themselves and as triumphators they followed my doctrine, my life, and they formed the dawning Church. If I might have minded that they had fled me, not making them my disciples in the time of my triumphs, I would not have had one who might speak of me after my death, who might make me known.

"Therefore the beautiful time, the glory is necessary, (and) yet it is necessary to receive transfixing nails and to have patience to suffer them, in order to have material in my greatest works, so that they might have life in the midst of creatures. Now has this not been (in) everything, a likeness of my life in your sorrowful state that you have passed of humiliations, of calumnies and contempts? I felt repeated in you the nail of the abandonment and dispersion of my apostles, in seeing who had so very held there to assist you, disperse from you and with the will to abandon you; and seeing you abandoned I saw you alone, alone in my arms with the nail of the abandonment of whom had sustained you, and in my sorrow I said: 'Bad world, how well you know how to repeat the scenes of my passion in my children!' And you offered your bitterness for the triumph of my Will and for the help of those who should make him known.

"Therefore courage in the sorrowful circumstances of life; but know that your Jesus will never abandon you. I don't know how to do these things; my love is not of an inconstant nature, but firm and constant, and that which I speak with my mouth goes out from the life of the heart. Instead creatures say one thing and feel another in the heart, they also mix many human goals even in making friends, behold therefore they change according to the circumstances.

"Whence the dispersion of one who seemed that they wanted to put forth their life in the beautiful time and then cowardly they flee in the time of the humiliations and contempts, they are all effects of the human will; it is the true prison of the creature, and it is even in the art to know how to form so many little rooms, however all without windows, because it does not intends to form openings in order to receive the good of the light. Hence the passions, the weaknesses, the fear, the excessive dreads, inconstancy, they are so many dark rooms of her prison, and (so) that now she remains impeded by one and now by another, and the fear makes her dread and she distances herself from (he) who is putting forth (his) life for her love. Instead [the soul] where my Will reigns lives in my palace, where there is so much light that the sufferings, the humiliations, the calumnies, are none other than staircases of triumphs and of glory and completion of great and divine works; hence instead of fleeing from the poor martyr that is cast in the dust by human perversity, she presses nearer to him waiting with patience the hour of the new triumph. Oh, if my Will fully reigned in the apostles, with certainty they would not have fled in a time in which I felt the need of their presence, of their fidelity in my so many sufferings! In the midst of enemies that wanted to devour me, I wanted my faithful ones near, for which there is no greater comfort than to have a friend near in time of bitterness. I would have seen in my dear apostles near to me, the fruits of my sufferings, and oh, how many sweets memories would be aroused in my heart, that would have been balm to my intense bitterness! My Divine Will would have impeded their step to flee with his light, and hence they would have pressed more around me; but since they lived in the dark prison of their will, their mind was darkened, the heart was cooled, fear invaded them, in a moment they forgot all the good that they had received from me, and they not only fled from me, but they were dispersed among themselves; all effects of the human volition that doesn't know how to maintain the union and only knows how to disperse in one day the good that has been done in so many years with so many sacrifices. Therefore let your only dread be that of not doing my Will."

* * *

June 8, 1931

Pleasure of God when one remembers that which he did in the creation. The repeated acts form the food of the soul. How in earth it begins and in Heaven it is completed.

I feel the powerful strength of the Divine Fiat that calls me in him to follow his acts. Whence my little intelligence stopped in Eden, in the act of the creation of man. What (a) solemn act! After having created all things as preparation, as (if) he (wanted) to celebrate for having created all the creation as palace where man should live with all sumptuousness and comfort, that nothing should be lacking to him; it is enough to say that it was a palace formed by our celestial Father by the power of his Divine Fiat. Whence while I thought this, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"Blessed daughter, the sweetest memory that I enjoy more immensely is when the creature remembers my love in the creation, in a special way that of man: our love eviscerated itself more than a mother when she puts forth her dear child to the light. Our love raced, raced, in order to enclose her in himself, so that wherever, inside and outside of herself, she might be able to find the knoll of our love that says to her: 'I love you, I love you.' The sweet sound of our love whispers to the ear, beats in her heart, resounds strongly and kisses ardently to the lips, tightly embraces (her) in our paternal arms as triumph of our love, that at whatever cost he wants to love the creature. So that there is nothing more sweet, more pleasant, than remembering with how much love we created man and all things. And so much is our pleasure, that the fortunate creature that comes before our adorable Majesty in order to remember this love of ours so great, we redouble our loving bonds with her, we give her new graces, new light and we call her the repeater of our feast, because in the creation everything was feast for us and for everyone, and the creature with remembering that which we did in the creation puts in feast our love, our power, our creative wisdom, that had created the whole universe with so much inimitable mastery, and then the mastery in creating man, that exceeds everything. Hence all our divine qualities celebrate, and the creature looking, has put in feast with her memory and with her little exchange of love, she makes competition between them, and some double the love, some the goodness, some the sanctity; in short every single divine quality of ours wants to give of his, in order to repeat with her that which we did in the creation.

"Therefore repeat often the sweet memory of our insuperable love, that we had in the creation; it was a creature of ours, one of our images, one child of ours that we put forth to the light, and therefore we showed off so much in love, and to feel the remembering of it we feel (ourselves) love her more. So that all the creation is none other than a display of our loving Will toward the creature, and in his loving display he goes repeating: 'Fiat, Fiat', in order to pearl all the creation with his display of love.

"More so that every act, word, thought done in our Divine Volition, forms the food of the soul, the food conserves the life, makes her grow and maintains the necessary strength in order to be able to form sufficient foods in order to not be able to remain fasting, hence the continued acts are none other than foods that have been prepared for one day to the other, in order to always (have) something with which to feed herself. If the acts not are not done, she won't have food, hence the poor creature won't have anything that satisfies (her) hunger, therefore the life of the acts, good, holy and divine will die in her. If then the acts are not continuous, but of such in so much, she will have scarce foods, and when the food is not sufficient the life of the good grows weak, and the weakness makes one lose the taste and the appetite to feed herself. Instead when the acts are continuous, every act holds its exercise: some make food, some water, some fire in order to cook them, some condiments in order to make it taste in a way as to satisfy the appetite; in short the repeated acts are none other than divine kitchen, that form the celestial table for the creature. And oh, how beautiful it is to see the creature that [with] the continuation of her acts in our Fiat she prepares divine foods, and feeds on the foods of her celestial country! Because you should know that one holy thought calls the other, one word, one good act calls the other and one serves to the other as to feed itself, and the food forms the life."

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Will and the great good that one receives with living all abandoned in his arms. And my sweet Jesus added:

"Good daughter, the great good of living of a Divine Volition is surprising and almost incomprehensible to the human creature. You should know that all that which one does of good, of sanctity in my Divine Will, they are none other than seeds that germinate in the field of the soul, putting forth as so many seeds of divine light, that put forth a beginning that won't have an end, because all that which one does in my Divine Will is sowed, germinates, grows in an admirable way, upon the earth while she lives, but the completion will be formed in Heaven: the ultimate development, the variety of beauties, the tones, the most beautiful and specious tints, will be given in the celestial country. So that every act done in earth will find (it will) take more post in Heaven, one right more and an anticipated possession in the celestial sojourn; every act more that the creature will have done, will bring with itself new beatitudes, new joys communicated by my Volition. My Divine Fiat never says enough to the creature, he wants to make her grow in sanctity, in grace, in beauty, even to the last breath of life down here, and therefore he reserves to give the last brush stroke and the completion as his full triumph in the celestial regions. Therefore in my Will they do not stop, and the circumstances of life, now with sufferings, now with humiliations and now with glory, they form the courses in order to be able to always race in him, in order to give the free field to let him cast in the creature new divine seeds, that the Divine Fiat will take the pledge to cultivate and to make them grow in an admirable way, and to give them the completion in the celestial glory. Hence in Heaven nothing commences, but everything commences in earth and Heaven completes it."

* * *

June 16, 1931

Jesus prays. The necessity to possess a good in order to be able to communicate it to the others. The little lights form the interlacement with the great light of the Divine Will.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, although under the nightmare of the privations of my sweet Jesus. My poor heart, how tortured, troubled it is, that it doesn't find he who makes me breathe his celestial air and beat the life of his same heartbeat! My Jesus, my life, didn't you yourself say to me that you wanted that I might live and might breathe your divine air, and that you might form my life in your same heartbeat, so that mine might be dispersed in yours and might live of your heartbeat, and hence of your love, of your sufferings and of all yourself?

But while my poor heart vented for the sorrow of the privation of my beloved Jesus, I felt myself moved in my interior sensibly, and with clear voice his words resounded in my hearing, that said with indescribable tenderness:

"Holy Father, I pray to you for my children and for all those that you have given to me and because I recognize that they are mine; in these arms of mine I press them to me, so that they remain defended and secure from the tempest that they are arming against my Church."

Then he added:

"My daughter, how many turn-a-rounds there will be, how many masks will they unmask! I could not support anymore their hypocrisy, my justice was overwhelmed with so many pretenses, and therefore they have not been able to hold onto the mask that covered them anymore. Therefore pray together with me, so that those people that must serve to my glory remain safe and those people that want to strike my Church remain confused."

Whence he became silent, and my poor mind saw so many deadly and tragic things, and while I prayed, my highest good Jesus repeated:

"My daughter, in order to communicate the goods to the others it is necessary to possess the fullness of the same good, because [the soul] with possessing it knows the effects, the substance, the practice [of] how one acquires that good, hence she will hold the virtue to be able to infuse it in the others, to know how to say beauties about it, the prerogatives, the fruits that that good produces. Instead if the soul has hardly acquired a sip of a good, of a virtue, and she wants to commence to teach it to the others, she won't know in depth the fullness of that virtue, therefore she won't know how to repeat its great good nor give the practice of how to acquire it; whence she will make the figure of a child, that having hardly learned the vowels, wants to act as teacher to the others: poor child, she will act the teacher as a joke, because she can not go ahead in the teachings! Behold therefore first the true saints are so filled with love, with divine knowledges, with unconquered patience and other, and when they are so filled as to not be able to contain anymore inside of them, it pours forth to (make) the goods go forth that they possessed to make it communicated to the people; and their word was fire, it was light, and they taught not in a superficial way, but in a practical and substantial way the good that they possessed. Behold the reason why so many want to act as teachers and they don't do any good, because there lacks the sufficient food in them; how can they feed the others?"

Whence after this I abandoned myself all in the Supreme Fiat, and my poor mind lost itself in him, and I remained as enraptured in seeing before me the Divine Being and an interminable light arranged in so many innumerable rays [that] went forth from him. These rays were very often woven by little lights that were tied up in the interminable rays of the adorable Majesty, which seemed birth of the light itself, and that were fed with light in order to form the life of light and to grow as God wanted them to. What enchantment is the Divine Heights! His presence enraptures, the eye loses itself in his immensity so much is his beauty, the multiplicity of his infinite joys, that it seems that more than copious rain it falls from his Divine Being; so that one feels struck dumb and therefore one knows how to say little or nothing. Hence while I was all immersed in that which was present to my mind, my beloved Jesus said to me:

"Daughter of my Divine Volition, look at this immense light, it is none other than the emanation of our Will from the center of our Divine Being; as we pronounced the Fiat, thus he extended himself in order to form with his creative strength every created thing, and in order to make that not one thing might go forth from inside of his light, he remained in that which went forth from our creative hands. So that those interlacements that you see with the rays of our light, are none other than all created things: some are as in custody in our light, so that they don't undergo any change, others, and they are the creatures that live in our Volition, are not only in custody, but in the act of continually receiving from God in order to grow, in order to feed themselves with light and with their little lights to form (an) interlacement with the Divine Volition himself in order to let him work in the little light. So that these little lights give the field to our Divine Fiat to make him continually work in them, it seems that they give us to do and let us continue the labor that we commenced in the creation with so much love. And when the creature gives us (the) occasion to continue our labor giving us (the) liberty to work in her little light, we enjoy it so much, that we make the little light work together with our work, and we don't feel isolated on the part of creatures, but we enjoy the beauty of her company and she enjoys ours. Therefore with living of Divine Will never leave us alone, and you will have the great good to enjoy our company."

* * *

June 23, 1931

How the creation manifests the divine paternity and how God feels Father of one who recognizes him in his works.

I was doing my round in the creation in order to follow the acts done in him by the Divine Will; it seemed to me that in every created thing he was as a noble Queen, the adorable Will as center of life, in order to make his sweet meeting with creatures in every thing, but this meeting is received by one who recognizes him in every created thing. In this happy meeting the correspondences on both parts are opened, they celebrate together, and the Divine Will gives and the creature receives. But while my mind lost itself with turning in created things, my highest good Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, all the creation manifests the divine paternity, the power, the love, the harmony of he who has created it. But do you know for whom we feel Father? One who remembers and recognizes all the creation as property of her Creator; that wanting to manifest his paternity for creatures, he has created so many beautiful things for their love; hence one who recognizes them in order to repay him with loving him and thanking him, presses herself around her celestial Father as (a) daughter who recognizes his goods, and [recognizes] that [he] has created them as means that he wants his daughter to possess his possessions in the possessions of her Father. If you might know what is our joy and happiness in feeling ourselves Father and in seeing our children pressed around us through means of our created things!

"So that the creature, with remembering and recognizing that which God has done for her, loves us as Father and we love her as daughter; we feel that our paternity is not sterile paternity, but fecund. Thus [in] one who remembers and recognizes that which I did and suffered in my life and passion, I feel (as) Redeemer and I give to possess the goods of the redemption; so that my sufferings, my works, my steps, line up around the happy creature in order to help her, sanctify her and make her feel the effects, in her, of all my life. And [in] one who recognizes that which our love has done and can do in the order of grace, I feel (as the) impassioned lover and give her the possession of my love, in a way that she will feel such love for me, as to not be able to live without loving me; and since true love is in always doing my Will, I make a prodigy of my love and of my Volition.

"What sorrow wouldn't it be for a father, to have children and to not see them around in order to love each other and to enjoy the fruit of his viscera? Such is our Divinity; we have extended our paternity in an infinite way in all the creation, as Father we are all eyes over our children, so that they lack nothing, our arms feel the extreme need of love of pressing her to our bosom to give her love and to receive love, and when we see the creature who races to us, wants our embraces oh how happy we feel that our paternity is recognized and can develop the office of father for our children! Our generation is almost innumerable, yet few children surround us, all the others are distant from us, distant with heart, with will, far from our likeness; and in our sorrow in seeing few children around us we say: 'And our other children where are they? How (is it that) they don't feel the need to have a celestial Father, to receive our paternal caresses, to possess our goods?'

"Therefore be attentive, recognize our goods, our works, and you will feel our paternity in the sky bombarded with stars, that calls you daughter in their gentle twinkling and attests to you of the love of your Father. Our paternity extends itself in the sun, that with its vibrant light calls you daughter and says to you: 'Recognize in my light the great gift of your Father, that loves you so much, that he wants that you be the possessor of this light.' Our paternity extends itself everywhere: in the water that you drink, in the food that you take, in the varieties of beauties of all nature; [our works] have a common voice, that all call you daughter of the great celestial Father and as his daughter they want to be possessed by you. Now what would be our contentment if in all things created by us, to our tender voice (that) calls you daughter, we might hear your voice that might call us Father, and might say to us: 'This is gift of my Father; oh, how he loves me! And I want to love him a great, great deal.'"

* * *

June 30, 1931

How the greatest grace that God made man in the creation was to be able to do his acts in the Divine Will. How this kingdom exists, and liv(ing) humanity have possessed it.

I was thinking of the Holy Divine Volition; how ever can his kingdom come upon the earth? Given the stormy times that threaten tempests and the sad conditions of the human generations, it seems impossible, and it seems to me that they increase the impossibility, the indifference and indisposition of those that at least are said (to be) good, who don't have any interest to make a Volition so holy known and his Will that wants to make the great grace that he wants to reign in the midst of creatures. How ever can one make a good live that one doesn't know? But while I thought this, my amiable Jesus surprising me said to me:

"My daughter, that which is impossible to the human views, everything is possible to God. You should know that the greatest grace that we made man in his creation, was that he could enter in our Divine Will in order to be able to emit his human acts; and since the human volition was little and the Divine great, hence He held the virtue to absorb the little into the great and to change the human into the Divine Volition. Whence Adam in the beginning of his creation entered into the order of our Divine Will and there did many of his acts; and while with removing himself from our Volition he went forth from inside of Him, his human acts worked in our Volition remained as pledge and right of man and as beginning and foundation of a divine kingdom that he acquired. In the Divine Will, that which one does in him is indelible, God himself can not cancel a single act done by the creature in the Supreme Fiat. Now Adam going out, the first created man, it was as a consequence, being he as the root, the trunk of all the human generations; that they might inherit, almost as branches that which the roots possess and the trunk of the tree of man; and as all creatures as in nature inherited the germ/seed of original sin, thus they inherited his first acts done in our Volition, that constitute the beginning and the right of the Kingdom of our Divine Volition for creatures. To confirm this the humanity of the Immaculate Virgin came to work and to follow the acts of Adam, in order to complete all entire the Kingdom of the Divine Will, in order to be the first heiress of a kingdom so holy and in order to give the rights to her dear children to make it possessed; and to complete all this my Humanity came - that possessing my Divine Will in nature, that which Adam and the Sovereign Queen possessed through grace - in order to confirm with the seal of his acts this Kingdom of the Divine Will.

"So that this kingdom exists in reality, because living humanity have formed their acts in him, as necessary materials in order to form this kingdom, in order to give the right to the other humanities to possess it. And in order to confirm it all the more I taught the Our Father, so that with the prayer [the creature] might dispose herself and acquire the rights in order to receive him and God might feel as-duty to give him; with teaching the Pater Noster, I myself put in their hands the right in order to receive him and I undertook to give a kingdom so holy. And every time that the creature recites the Pater Noster, she acquires a kind of right to enter in this kingdom: first, because it is (a) prayer taught by me, that contains the value of my prayer; second, that so much is the love of our Divinity toward creatures, that we pay attention to everything, we notice everything, even the littlest acts, the holy desires, the little prayers, in order to reciprocate them with great graces; we can say that they are pretexts, occasions that we go finding in order to say to her: 'You have done this and we give you this, you have done the little and we give you the great.'

"Hence the kingdom exists. And if I have spoken so much to you about my Divine Will, they have been none other than the preparations of so many centuries of my Church - the prayers, the sacrifices and the continuous recitations of the Pater Noster - that has inclined our goodness to select a creature in order to manifest to her the so many knowledges of our Will, his great prodigies; thus I bound my Will to creatures, giving them new pledges of his kingdom. And as you listened and sought to model yourself to my teachings that I gave you, thus you formed new bonds in order to bind creatures in my Will. You should know that I am the God of everyone and when I do a good I don't ever make it isolated, I do it for everyone, except those who not wanting to take it don't take it; and when a creature corresponds to me, I look at her not as alone, but (as) belonging to the whole human family, and hence the good of the one is communicated to the others. Now if the kingdom exists, live humanity has possessed him and made life in him, my Will wants to reign in the midst of creatures - my knowledges themselves say it in clear notes -how therefore can you think that it is impossible that this kingdom comes? To me everything is possible. I will make use of the tempests themselves and of new events, in order to prepare for me those people that must occupy themselves with making my Will known; the tempests will serve to purify the bad air and also to empty the harmful things. Therefore I will dispose everything; I know how to do everything, I have the times at my disposition. Hence leave your Jesus to do it and you will see how my Will will be known and completed."

* * *

July 2, 1931

How the Divine Will holds the virtue to convert into nature the good that one does. The return of the work to its Creator. How the creation holds a determined act, the creature a growing act.

I was doing my round in the Divine Will in order to follow his acts, and arrived at the point where the celestial baby was in Egypt and the celestial Mama rocking him sought to make him take (some) sleep, and in the same act she occupied herself with her maternal hands to labor on the little dress/[abituccio] for the divine infant; and uniting myself with his Mama I made flow between her fingers, and in the thread that flowed, my 'I love you' to Jesus, in order to form and weave the little dress/[abituccio] together with my 'I love you', and on the foot of the Queen that rocked the crib I put mine, in order to be able to also rock Jesus and do for him that which his Mama did for him. And while I did this, the celestial child between wakefulness and sleep said: "My two Mammias." Whence I remembering this, and that writing that is in the twenty-fourth volume, I thought to myself: "But still my dear Jesus repeats the sweet words: "My two Mammias?" After a tempest so terrible, that as devastating hail had struck my poor soul, [and] who knows how many defects I have committed, Jesus won't feel anymore that tender love to say so sweetly: 'My two Mammias.' But while I thought this, my amiable Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, if you had not stopped repeatedly uniting yourself with our celestial Mama, to rock me, to put your 'I love you' for me in that which she did, could I stop saying: 'My two Mammias?' Then I would be less than you in loving you, while I never let myself be exceeded by the love of the creature. Not only, but you should know that all that which the creature does in my Divine Will, that good that [the creature] does has the virtue to convert into nature, and true good in nature is never lost, nor are there difficulties in repeating it how many times one wants. Do you perhaps have difficulties to breathe, to palpate? [No] because it is in nature, rather if you don't want to you must put forth an effort, but an effort perhaps that if you come to do it, it will cost you (your) life. And this is the greatest prodigy of my Will: to convert into nature the prayer, the love, the sanctity, his knowledges. And when I see that the creature has given herself into the authority of my Will, but so much so that he has been able to change into nature the divine goods, my words resound in the soul with my creative power and give maternity in nature; and how can I not repeat: 'My two Mammias?' When I speak that which I say is reality; is it not perhaps true that my Mama is my Mother according to the order of nature and she is also my Mother in the divine order, in virtue of the Divine Will that she possessed? If she might not have possessed my Volition, she could not be for me either Mother in the human order or in the divine order. Oh, how many things [my Will] knows how to do in one who lets themselves be dominated by him! He knows how to make the divine order descend in the human one and converts into nature the divine order, and makes portents to stupefy Heaven and earth. Therefore let yourself be dominated by my Will, and I will make resound my sweet word in you: 'My dear Mama that my Fiat holds for me upon the earth.'"

After this I followed the Divine Fiat in the creation and I said to myself: "I want to enter into the sun in order to empty it of the love that God put in it for love of creatures, and on the wings of its light to bring it to my Creator as exchange of my love. I want to empty the wind in order to bring back the exchange of the impetuous love, of the groaning, ruling love, so that I rule over the Divine Heart in order to carry off the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth. I want to empty the sky of the love that it contains, in order to bring back to him the love that never finishes, that never says enough, in order to take him from all sides and to bring him the exchange of loving him everywhere and in everyone." But who can say all my blunders that I said of every created thing? It would be too long, therefore I don't go on anymore. Whence while I did this, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"Daughter of my Will, how pleasing is the soul to me who enters in my Volition in order to find in her all my works! And flying over from one created thing to the other, she makes with her little capacity her calculations in order to find how much dose of love, of goodness, of power, of beauty and other, that I have put in every created thing; and since [for] one who is in my Will that which is mine is hers, she embraces everything and brings them back to me into my bosom and around me as exchange of her love, and I feel the love return that we put forth in creating all the creation, the goodness, the power, the beauty with which we brushed all the creation. And in our emphasis of love we say: 'The daughter of our Will returns to us our works, our love, our goodness and other, and while she returns them she leaves them at their post, and we feel repeated the joy, the happiness as if we again put forth all the creation.'

"Now you should know that in creating all the universe, the variety of so many manifold things, we put forth a determined act, an enough to every single thing, in a way that they can not go beyond any limit from how they were created; however although it was a determined act and they can not go ahead more, but it was a full act, so much so that creatures can not nor do they have the capacity to take all the good that every single created thing contains. So very true, [that] who can say that: 'I can take all the light of the sun?', that: 'The sky is not enough for me over my head?', that: 'All the waters are not enough to quench me?', that: 'The earth is not sufficient beneath my feet?' and of so many other things. And this because our Divinity in doing an act, in creating things, so much is our love, the overabundance that we possess, that we put forth the display, the luxury, the splendor; not one work of ours can be said to be poor, they all show off, some in luxury of light, some make a splendor of beauty, some a variety of colors and other; it seems that they say in their mute language: 'Our Creator is immensely rich, beautiful, powerful, wise, and therefore we all, as worthy works of him, make a display of luxury in the office given to us by God.'

"Now, my daughter, it was not so in creating man; in him was not put a determined act, but an always growing act. Our love didn't want to say an enough to man, it would have been as an impediment to our love, to stop our enthusiasm. No, no, our enough didn't pronounce itself in the creation of man, it didn't put a end, but an always growing act, so that our display of love might not have an end, but that it might be able to make a splendor of luxury, of grace, of sanctity, of beauty, of goodness and other, how much more it might please him; we tied our growing act to his free will, so that he might not have any impediment to make how much more luxury he might be able. And in order to make that this growing act of ours in man might have all the possible and imaginable helps, we also gave our Divine Will at his disposition, so that he might be able to maintain at His expenses the whole luxury that was wanted and the overabundance of the goods of his Creator. Our love did not dare to say: 'Enough to man, our child - up to here you can arrive'; no, no, it would have been as if a father might want to say to his child: 'Up to such a day you will sit at my table, and then enough', this would not be love of paternity, but of mastery; that the child can put an end to receive the foods of his father, he can give, but that Father says to him: 'You will remain fasting'; it will never do. Such is our goodness: we will never say enough to the creature; our growing act will serve her continuous food in order to always grow and conserve her, and if ungrateful she won't make use of our growing act, great gift given by her Creator, we will have the sorrow to see our dear child fasting, poor, and our act impeded and without life, and she will exchange our enthusiasm of love into enthusiasm of sorrow. Whence if you want that our growing act might have life in you, never go out from our Divine Will, which will be jealous to make you always, always grow."

* * *

July 6, 1931

The book of the Fiat in the depth of the soul. The book of the Fiat in the creation. How the Divine Will holds all creatures under the rain of his continuous act.

My poor mind it seems that it doesn't know how to do other than to think of the Divine Will; in everything that I see it goes finding his life, and the interior doing this, on the exterior it doesn't find other than that Divine Fiat that loves so much, and wants to be loved. I feel the need to find him in all things in order to breathe him, to feel his heartbeat of light, that as blood circulates in the soul and constitutes itself (as) primary life of my poor being; and where I don't know how to find him in all things I feel I lack a continuous heartbeat, a mouthful of air, in order to facilitate the life of the Divine Will in my soul. And I prayed Jesus that he might teach me to find him in all things, in order to make that I might never be able to lack his perennial life in me.

And my highest good Jesus with all goodness said to me:

"My daughter, one who does my Will and lives in him forms in her soul the book of the Divine Fiat but this book must be full, no void or else some (partially) written page; if it is not full she will immediately finish reading it, and not having that to read she will occupy herself with other, and hence the life of my Divine Will will be interrupted and as broken in the creature. Instead if she is full, she will always hold (something) to read, and if it seems that she finishes, I will add on other pages more sublime, in order to make that she never lacks the life, the always new knowledge and the substantial food of my Divine Volition.

"So that the interior must be as so many pages in order to form this book: pages the intelligence, pages the will and the memory, page the desire, the affection, the heartbeat, page the word that must know how to repeat that which has been read, otherwise it will remain a book that won't do good for anyone, while [for] one who forms a book the first purpose is to propagate it. Hence the entire interior must be written with pages of my Divine Will; and this book must be so very full, as to not be able to find other to read if not my Will alone. Now when the soul has her interior book full, she will know much good (of) the exterior book of the Divine Will. All the creation is none other than

(a) book of him, every created thing is a page that forms a most great book and of many volumes. Whence having formed her interior book and (having) read it very well, she will know how to read very well the exterior book of all the creation, and in all things she will re-find my Divine Will in act to give her his life, his most high and sublime lessons and his dainty and holy food. It will happen, to one who has formed in her interior this book of the Divine Fiat and read it very well, as [to] one who has possessed a book, has read it and reread it, has studied well the most difficult things, has smoothed out all the difficulties, made clear the most obscure points, in a way that she has consumed her life over that book: if a person of outside might bring her another similar book, she will most certainly know it and will recognize in that book hers, more so that my Divine Will has enclosed the creature in his most holy circle and has put in the depth of (her) soul the book of his Fiat, and in the creation he has repeated his divine book, in a way that the one makes the echo in the other and they understand each other admirably. Behold therefore it is necessary to recognize the book of the Divine Fiat in the depth of one's own soul, to read it very well in order to make perennial life of it, and thus with facility she can read the beautiful pages and the great book of my Will of all the creation."

After this I continued my acts in the Divine Will and my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, my Divine Volition holds his continuous act that he never ceases pouring over all creatures his continuous act and investing them with his continuous act of light, of sanctity, of beauty, of love, of help, of power, of happiness; so much is his love, that one act doesn't wait for the other, and in torrents more copious than rain they are poured out over all creatures. This continuous act becomes recognized and received by all the inhabitants of the celestial country, in a way that always forms new surprises of ineffable joys and happiness without end; one can say that it forms the life and substance of the beatitude of all the blessed. Now since my Divine Will possesses this continuous act in nature, he can not nor does he want to change regime: as he gives this continuous act of good in Heaven, thus he gives it to all the creation and to every and each creature, because everyone receives life from this continuous act of his, if this might cease, the life of everyone would cease; at the most there can be changes of effects, because he acts according to the dispositions of each one, and therefore his same continuous act to some produces one effect, to some another, and [there is also] some who unfortunately, while she remains under the rain of this continuous act of light, of sanctity, of beauty and other, doesn't even remain wet, nor illuminated, nor holy, nor beautiful, and she converts the continuous act of good in herself into darkness, into passions and perhaps also into sin. But with all this my Volition never ceases his continuous act of raining his divine goods on everyone, because he finds himself in the conditions in which the sun is found, that in spite that human beings might not want to receive its light, nor trees, nor plants, nor flowers, to which he could communicate the so many admirable effects that his act of continuous light contains - that is of sweetness, flavor, the beautiful rainbow of all the colors - (which) would continue his act of light; but if the sun might have reason, it would cry with tears of ardent light for the sorrow of seeing in the great void of his light all the goods that in reality it gives, but are not received. More than sun is my Divine Volition: he holds involved in his infinite light everyone and everything, his nature is to always want to give, and in fact he gives; if everyone might take everything they would be holy, the world would be changed into happiness. But with highest sorrow his goods do not become received, rather they are rejected in his same light; but he does not stop, with tender and insuperable love he continues his continuous act to give that which his light possesses."

* * *

July 13, 1931

The motion is sign of life. The passport in order to enter into the Kingdom of the Divine Will; the language and the city of it. The peacemaker between God and creatures.

I was following my acts in the Divine Will and I thought to myself: "How can one know if the Divine Fiat reigns in the creature? And do I have in my poor soul the good that he reigns or not?" But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"Motion is the sign of life, where there is no motion there can not be life. Therefore in order to know if the creature possesses my Will, it is if in the intimacy of her soul she will feel my Will alone as first motion of all that which unfolds in her, because he being first motion, where he reigns he will make felt his first divine motion, from which all the internal and external acts will lean upon as from the center of the first motion of my Divine Will. Hence he will be the first motion, the word of order, the commander, the ruler, in a way that every act will remain in expectation of receiving the first motion in order to move and work. Whence if the creature will feel in her acts the first motion of my Volition, it is a sign that he reigns in her soul. But if instead she will feel in her first motion the human goal, (her) own pleasure, the natural satisfactions, the gusto of pleasure with creatures, my Will will not only not reign, but from Queen he will become as servant, serving her in her acts, because there is no act that the creature can do if my Divine Will doesn't concur there, or dominate or serve.

"Now you should know, my daughter, that the passport in order to enter into my kingdom is the resolved will to never do one's own will, even at the cost of one's own life and whatever sacrifice. This act resolved, but true, is as the signature that one puts on the passport in order to depart into the Kingdom of my Divine Will, and while the creature signs in order to depart, God signs in order to receive her; this last [signature] will have so much value, that all of Heaven will go to meet her in order to receive her into the Kingdom of the Divine Fiat in which they live, and they will be all eyes over this creature that from earth holds for life and for kingdom that same Will that they hold in Heaven.

"But the passport is not enough, the language must be studied, the ways, the customs of this divine kingdom; and these are the knowledges, the prerogatives, the beauties, the value that my Will contains. Otherwise she would be as a foreigner, nor would she take love nor would she be loved; if she does not sacrifice to study in order to be able to talk with that same language and (if) she is not adapted to the customs of those that live in this kingdom so holy, she will live isolated, because not understanding her they will avoid her, and isolation doesn't make anyone happy.

"Beyond this she needs to pass from study to the practice of that which she has learned, and after a length of practice she becomes at last declared city of the Kingdom of my Divine Will. And then she will taste all the happiness that there is in a kingdom so holy, indeed they will be her properties, and she will acquire the right to live in it as her country."

After this he added:

"My daughter, one who lives in my Volition becomes the peacemaker between God and the creature;

all her acts, words, steps, her prayers, her little sacrifices, are like so many bonds of peace between Heaven and earth, they are as weapons of peace with which she combats her Creator with weapons of peace and love, in order to disarm him and to make him propitious and exchange the scourges into mercy. And as the human will formed the war in order to wage war with he who had created her, not only, but broke the accord, the order and the peace, thus my Volition, with the force of his omnipotence, reigning in the creature converts that which the creature does into bonds of accord, of order, of peace and of love. So that from her goes forth as a little white cloud, that elevating itself spreads out and rises up even to the divine throne, that bursts forth in so many voices for how many acts she has done (and) says: 'Great God, I bring you peace from the earth, and you give me your peace in order to bring it as bond of peace between you and the human generation.' This little cloud rises and descends, descends and rises and does the office of peacemaker between Heaven and earth."

* * *

July 17, 1931

Beneficent rain. Continuous creation of the Divine Will; external and interior order of him. The creature becomes carried in his arms.

I felt all immersed in the Fiat; his air is so sweet, refreshing, that I feel in every instant reborn to new life. But what does one breathe in this air of the Divine Volition? One breathes air of light, of love, of sweetness, of fortitude, of divine knowledge, and so on, in a way that [the creature] feels renewed to new life. This beneficent and balsamic air, as she breathes, thus the divine life grows in the creature; and since when she breathes the air, with the breath she encloses it inside and with repeating the breath she puts it forth, because so much is the strength of the air, that it can hold within how much (is) enough in order to live, the surplus with the same breath must be put forth; but what does is put forth? That which it has received after she has filled it; love, light, goodness she has breathed, love, light, goodness she will re-give. But while my poor mind was lost in this divine air, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, all the good acts that the creature does in my Divine Will raise themselves to God, because he holds the divine power in order to draw into the celestial country that which one does in his Volition, and then with his own power he makes them re-fall as beneficent rain over the same creature, in a way that if the creature loves, blesses, adores, thanks, praises, God reciprocates her with new rain of love, of benedictions, rain of thanks, because he has felt loved and thanked by the creature, and bursting in rain of praises, the praise before the whole celestial court. Oh, how our divine goodness is waiting for adoration, the pleasant 'I love you' of the creature, in order to be able to give our love the vent to be able to say: 'Daughter, I love you!' Hence there is no act that the creature does for us, that our tenderness all paternal doesn't give her the multiple exchange."

Whence I continued my acts in the Divine Fiat, and my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, the creature is carried in arm by my Divine Will, and so much is his love, that he holds her around all the creation as if in (the) same act always, always creating in order to make her pleased and render her happy and say to her: 'My creative strength maintains all this machine of the universe; if it might retire, the sun as for enchantment would disappear, the sky and all the other things would break down into nothing, as from the nothing (from which) they went forth, because my creative power maintains it with continually creating it, and can say with all reality: 'Truly for you I am creating the sun, because your life, your walk was scattered with light; for you the azure sky, so that your eye might soar and might be pleased in its extension; I am creating everything for you, I maintain everything in order because I love you.' My Divine Will makes himself life in the act of all things, he sustains and conserves them, puts them around the creature in order to make them feel his unshakable life, his immutable strength, his invincible love from all things and from all parts; it can be said that he embraces her everywhere as triumph of his love. And he not only maintains the exterior order and all things in act as if creating the same, but he maintains internally, with his creative strength, the whole interior order of the creature. So that he is always in the act of creating the heartbeat, the breath, the motion, the circulation of blood, the intelligence, the memory, the will; he races as life in the heartbeat, in the breath, in everything; he sustains and conserves without ever retiring from the soul and from the body. And yet this Supreme Will of mine is everything, he does everything, gives everything, and he is not recognized, indeed he is forgotten; one could say as I said to the apostles: 'So much time that I am with you and you don't know me yet.' They know so many things that don't form the life of the creature, and [of] my Will nothing is known who forms life and is (the) continuous act of life, otherwise she could not live. Therefore, my daughter, be attentive, recognize him in you and outside of you, in everything, more than your life itself, and you will sense admirable things, his continuous act that with untiring love loves you, and only because he loves you he gives you life."

* * *

July 23, 1931

Fecundity of light. The creation: feast of God and the creature. The Divine Will: regime and rule.

I am back in the arms of the Divine Fiat, it seems to me that his immense light flows in me as sea around me; and as I do my acts of love, of adoration, of thanksgiving, I take from within this light the love that the Divine Will possesses, however I take how much I can take of it, because as a creature it is not given me to take all, he is so very immense, and I have neither the capacity nor space where to enclose this interminable love, but however he fills all of me, in a way that in spite that I am (a) creature my love toward he who has created me is full and entire; thus my adoration, because the acts done in the Divine Volition must possess such fullness, that the creature must be able to say: 'My being is dissolved all in love, in adoration, nothing of me has remained', and the Creator must be able to say: 'All the love that she could give me she has given me, nothing has remained for herself.' However as I did my little acts in this sea, little waves were formed, that discharging themselves in my intelligence they changed into light of knowledge on the Divine Will. And my always amiable Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, one who lives in my Divine Will always has something to do with the light, never with the darkness; and since the light is fertile, it gives birth in the soul to the truths that it possesses. The virtue of the light is marvelous and miraculous, and while with looking one doesn't see other than light, inside it possesses the fullness of goods, but it doesn't communicate these good to one who only looks, but to one who lets herself be touched, molded, embraced, kissed with its ardent kisses; as it touches it purifies, as it molds it transforms, as it embraces thus it encloses its light in the soul and with its fecundity that doesn't know how to ever be idle, its work is incessant, it communicates the beautiful rainbow of the colors and divine beauties, and with its kisses it infuses the most beautiful truths and the ineffable secrets of its Creator. Living in the light of my Divine Will and not to be able to be light of the divine things, of our secrets, to not feel the fecundating virtue of this light, would be as if God might want to make life separate from his creature; instead it was this the unique purpose that we want that our Will to be also that of the creature, because we want to make life together and permanent with her. Hence it would be absurd to live in my Volition and to not feel the fecundity of his goods that this light possesses, that is that of making life of God (the) same (with) the creature."

Then he added:

"My daughter, behold therefore in the creation there were so many preparations, as preparatory to one of the most solemn feasts, that our Divinity wanted to solemnize with the creature even from the beginning of her existence. What thing didn't we prepare in order to make that this feast might be one of the most solemn? Skies plastered with stars, sun radiant with light, refreshing winds, seas, flowerings and enchanting fruits with the variety of so many tastes and sweetnesses. After having everything prepared we created man so that he might celebrate, and we together with him; it was just that the master of the feast, that had prepared it with so much love, might assist and might enjoy it together, more so that the substance of the feast was formed (by) the company of the guests that were wanted at the feast, and in order to make that this feast might never be interrupted between us and man, we gave him our same Will that regulated our Divine Being, so that one might be the regime and the rule between God and the creature. Whence as man withdrew from our Will he lost our regime and our rule, and we finished celebrating on both parts. Whence as you do your acts in him and you remember all that which we do in the creation in order to prepare our feast with the creature, we feel that our Fiat is your regime and your rule; this ties and presses us anew and forms for us the new feast, and makes us repeat that of the creation."

And I: "My beloved Jesus, for how much more I want to live in your Volition and (I would) rather die than not do your Most Holy Will, yet I feel bad, dirtied; how can I repeat this feast for you?"

And Jesus resumed:

"So much is our love for one who has decided to live in him and to always do it, that he makes himself brush of light, and painting with his touch of light and heat he purifies the creature from whatever stain, so that she might not be ashamed (in) our adorable presence, and he puts her with all trust and love to celebrate together with us. Therefore allow yourself to be painted by my Divine Will, even at the cost of undergoing whatever suffering, and he will think of everything."

* * *

July 27, 1931

The great evil of one who doesn't do the Divine Will. Most interesting example of Adam.

My abandonment continues in the Holy Divine Volition, and I understood the great good that my little soul felt in living in authority of a Volition so holy; he has such jealousy, such love, he takes pledge of everything, even of the littlest things of this creature, that it seems that he says:

"No one touches her (but) me, and trouble to whom might dare."

Whence I thought: 'He loves me so much, and have I ever had the great misfortune to oppose a Will so amiable and adorable? I have strong doubt, especially in this last period of my existence, in that which I have passed, that there has been some breakup between mine and the Divine Will.' And while my poor mind was devastated by the sad doubt, my sweet Jesus, not (able to) support seeing me afflicted, all goodness said to me:

"My good daughter, courage, banish from your mind every doubt and anxiety, because these weaken you and they make you break the flight toward that Volition that loves you so much. It is true that there have been reflections, fears, lackings of full abandonment, in a way that you might feel the weight of your will, as if it might want to go out in field in order to make its way, and it made you as a [picciosa]/(tiny) child, who fears everything, has fear of everything, and so much so that she cries very often, and I hold you pressed between my arms in order to sustain you and I ever watch over your will in order to hold it secure. Hence daughter, there have not been true breakups between my Divine Will and yours, and if, never (shall) it be, this might have been - Heaven free you, my daughter! - you would incur the same misfortune of Adam.

"How many preparations had not preceded his existence! Our love didn't give (us) peace as (we) put forth a sky and sun, pleasant garden and so many other things, all preparatory acts as vent of our works, for love of this man, and in creating him He poured forth our divine life in him, making Himself permanent life of him, in a way that he felt perennial life as inside and outside of him in our works created for his love. Our love was so much that He made Himself revealer of our Divine Being in the interior of man, because He had established our permanent life in him, and revealer outside, in a way that every created thing was a revelation of our love that He made for him, more so that in the creation all created things were given to man as well as our life in a permanent way, not in intervals. A good today yes and tomorrow no, it is a broken love, and the nature of our love is not adapted to an interrupted love, it is eternal and never says enough. Hence Adam, as he broke with our Divine Will, he gambled away all the creation and also our life in him. The offense is very great to remove oneself from our Divine Will, that we put aside all our preparations, the great good that we had put forth and we retired from man, and with us all the creation remained offended. So that as Adam formed the breakup with our Will, he offended the sky, the stars, the sun, the air that he breathed, the sea, the earth that he trod on, all felt offended, because my Divine Will is as heartbeat and circulation of blood of all created things, therefore all felt the sorrow of the breakup of the human volition, feeling the heartbeat touched from which they receive life and conservation. Now, if never may it be, there had been a breakup of will between yours and mine, I would have put aside my so many preparations done in your soul, my so many graces poured forth, and I would have retired myself putting you aside; if you continue to feel me it is a sign that my Will remains firm in you, and yours remains at its post.

"If you might know what it means to not do my Divine Will! The creature dares to impede and to make that motion die that never ceases, and to give death to the holy acts that my Divine Will has established to complete in the creature. He wants to give divine life, and while he remains to give, if the human will doesn't receive him and opposes him she makes the knife in order to kill and to suffocate this divine life in her soul. It seems that not doing my Will is nothing while it is all the evil of the creature and the greatest offense for our Supreme Majesty. Therefore be attentive, and your abandonment in him be continuous."

* * *

August 3, 1931

Every act done in the Divine Volition forms the food in order to make the divine life grow in the creature. The greatest gift that God makes: truths.

I am always there, in the center of the Divine Fiat, although under the nightmare of the privation of my sweet Jesus. Oh, how sorrowful it is to feel Jesus escape who loves me and whom I love, and who forming my life of strength, of love, of light, his life of love escapes from within my life! Oh, God, what pain, to feel life but there is no true life! What torture, what shredding! Oh, how I feel myself repeat: "There is no sorrow similar to my sorrow; Heavens and earth cry with me, and everyone implore for me the return of that Jesus who loves me and whom I love!"

Whence I abandoned myself ever more in that Divine Fiat that no one can take away from me, not even Jesus himself; he hidden, makes little escapes from me, but his Divine Volition never leaves me, He is always with me, and my poor mind turns around all that which the Divine Fiat has done and does for our love; and since I thought of his great love in creating us, my beloved Jesus going out from his hideaway said to me:

"My daughter, the creation of man was the center where our Divinity centralized all the goods that should rise in the creature; we put in her divine life and Divine Will, human life and human will: human life should serve us as residence and the two Wills fused together should make life in common with highest accord, indeed the human will should take from ours in order to form her acts, and ours should remain in the continuous act to give of his, in order to do make that the human will might remain modeled and all informed in the Divine Will.

"Now, there is no life, as much human, as spiritual and divine, that doesn't have need of food in order to grow, in order to become stronger, to embellish and to felicitate himself, more so that we put our divine life in man, [and] because he was incapable of receiving the whole fullness of our Divine Being, we put in him how much he could contain of our life, giving him the liberty to let him grow how much more he could and wanted. Hence our life in man for growth had need of food, behold the necessity to put in him a Divine Will; our divine life would not have adapted himself to foods of the human will.

"Behold therefore all the acts of the creature done in virtue of and in our Divine Will, would serve to feed and to make our divine life grow in her, in a way that as soon as she went doing her acts in our Fiat, now she took our love and fed us, now she took our fortitude, now our infinite sweetness, now our divine joys in order to feed us. What order, what harmony put between him and us in creating man, between him and us, even to ask of him our own foods through his means, not because we had need, no, but in order to maintain the enthusiasm of love, the correspondence, the inseparable union between him and us! And while he occupied himself with us, we occupied ourselves with feeding him and with conserving our dear residence, not only, but making him other more beautiful gifts in order to render him more happy, to love him more and make ourselves more loved.

"But do you want to know what are our most beautiful gifts that we make the creature? To manifest to her a knowledge of our Supreme Being, a truth that pertains to us, one secret of ours, it is the most beautiful gift that we make her; each of these gifts is one more bond that we put between her and us, our every truth is a property that we put in her soul. Behold therefore that in the soul where our Will reigns we find our divine foods, our property for how much it is possible for a creature, our residence; hence we find ourselves in our house, in our center, in the midst of our properties. Do you see therefore what it means to make our Will reign and the great good to make you know our truths? Our every knowledge carries, each one, its distinct gift: some carry his light, some fortitude, some goodness, some wisdom, some love and so on; each one of them binds the creature in a special way to God and God to her. Therefore know how to correspond to the so many gifts that your Jesus has made you and live always in our Volition."

* * *

August 10, 1931

Ugliness of the human nature without the Divine Will; beauty of one who lives in him. The smile of Heaven on earth.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues; I feel his enrapturing force that sweetly imposes itself over me, but without forcing me, because he doesn't like forced things, they are not for him, they are stuff that doesn't belong to him. Hence he is all eyes in order to make that all my acts might receive the life of the Divine Will and they might become as if they might be his acts, and it seems to me that my every act done in his adorable Will is a victory that he makes over the littleness of my will. Whence I thought to myself: "How ugly is human nature without the divine one." And my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, human nature that lives without my Will is ugly, because it was created by the Supreme Being in order to live united together with the Divine Fiat; so that with living without him a move happens in the human nature: in this move the order, the strength, the love, the light, the sanctity, the reason itself is removed. All these beautiful dowries are there in the creature, because they were put there by God as within a sanctuary, but they are out of their post, all in disorder, and since they remain outside (their) post, one is against the other: the passions combat sanctity, weakness combats strength, human love combats the divine, the creature the Creator, and so on. Human nature without the Divine Will transforms into ugly, it overturns itself and in its disorder it moves to war with its Creator.

"It happens as to the soul and the body, that have been created by God in order to have life together: if the body would like to have life separate from the soul, wouldn't the sad fate touch it of undergoing such transformation as to no longer recognize itself from that which it was? With our Divinity creating man, there concurred our infinite wisdom, that as craftsman and as expert that possesses the whole science of the art to know how to create, in our omniscience he sees that in order to make that this man might be our honor and worthy work of our creative hands and our glory and also his, he had to be formed body and soul and loaded (with) our Will as primary life of the soul and of the body; so that that which is the soul to the body, our Will should be for the one and for the other. Hence the creature has been created and has had his beginning: body, soul and human and Divine will, all together, which should have life in common with highest accord; and our Will that held the primacy, should make himself nourisher and conservator and dominator of this creature.

"Whence if without our Divine Will the human nature is ugliness, united with ours it is of a rare and enchanting beauty. In her creation the germ/seed of the light was put by us, and our Fiat more than a most tender mother extended himself with his wings of light over this germ/seed and caresses it, breathes (on) it, kisses it, feeds it, makes it grow and communicates to it with his heat and light all the varieties of divine beauties, and the human nature receives the participation, is under the impetuous and continuous influence of a strength, of a sanctity, of a love all divine, and she grows beautiful, amiable and admirable to everyone. Therefore human nature as it was created by us is not ugly, but beautiful, nor do we know how to make ugly things, but it can render itself ugly with not remaining in the ways (of) how it was created and wanted by us. You see therefore how necessary it is that creatures do and live in our Will, so that she enters in the first act of her creation, hence this destroyed, [the creature] remains disfigured and without true life.

"All created things were created with two and also with three elements together. The sun possesses light and heat: if the light would live isolated without heat, it would be a sterile light without fecundity, and if the heat would like to isolate itself from the light it would be changed into darkness; and behold the most beautiful planet would be disfigured that forms the enchantment of all the universe and with its light dominates and does good to everyone. The earth is formed with the element of earth and water: if the earth would like to do without water it would become dust, and it would not form the solid floor where man could raise buildings, walk with firm step, everything would vacillate under his feet; but it is not enough, if the earth would not like to receive the seed in its bosom, it would not form the beautiful flowerings, the abundances of the fruits. So that earth, water and seed must live together, one must be life of the other, they must remain united together as they had the beginning of their creation; otherwise [the earth] would make one terrorized and it would remain without the life of the good assigned by God, that it should do for creatures.

"All things were not created isolated, and all the good is in sustaining itself as they were created by God. And then also [for] the sciences: if a person would like to learn to read and might not want to learn the vowels and then the union of the consonants, that are the beginning, the foundation, the substance from which one derives the sciences, could they ever learn to read? Not ever, she could become crazy over books, but never learn. You see therefore the necessary straits to follow in the way how things have been formed in the beginning of their existence, if they don't want to change from beautiful into ugly, from good into evil, from life into death.

"Now what thing can the creature hope of good, if not living united with our Divine Will in which was established the beginning of her creation? Oh, if everyone might understand, how attentive they would be to let themselves be dominated, fed, raised by my Will, that being (the) beginning of their existence he would form in them all the beauty, the good and the sanctity, and the great fortune of life down here, and then the great glory of the their life up there!"

After this I continued my acts in the Divine Will, and it seemed to me that these acts done in him had the virtue to unite Heaven and earth, and to attract all the celestial inhabitants to watch the creature that had let herself be invested by the Divine Volition in order to give him the field of action in her acts.

And my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, there is nothing more beautiful, more holy, more attractive and that possesses (more) strength and enrapturing virtue, than a soul that lets herself be dominated by my Divine Will. She is the smile of Heaven and of earth, her every act forms an enrapturement to her Creator, who feels the sweet force of his Will in the creature and sweetly lets himself be enraptured, and all the blessed feel that from the earth there is one who enraptures the Will of Heaven in order to make him hers and to live in common with them. Oh, how doubly happy they feel in seeing that also in earth that Fiat reigns, that while he beatifies them and forms their supreme happiness, he reigns there in a point of earth working and triumphant! Therefore one sees in that point of earth a nimbus of Heaven, a working Divine Will, a smile of the celestial country that attracts the attention of all of Heaven over that point in order to hold her defended and to enjoy that smile that forms the Divine Will in that creature, because the saints are inseparable from all the acts of him and they enjoy and take part according to their merit, more so that the acts done in my Divine Will are so many chains of love that flow between Heaven and earth, and they love everyone without putting anyone aside, and [the creature] since she loves everyone she is the welcomed one by everyone.

"Therefore, my daughter, be attentive, fly, race always in my Divine Volition, so that you form the smile of Heaven on earth. It is beautiful to see the smile (of) Heaven, but since happiness and the smile are his properties, therefore the earth renders itself more beautiful, more attractive, because the celestial smile that my Divine Will forms in the creature is not its properties."

* * *

August 22, 1931

Divine messengers that bring the beautiful news to the celestial country. How the Divine Will is not content with only words, but wants to do deeds.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, and I search for as much as I am able to unite my little acts to those of the Divine Will, in order to form one alone with his acts, almost in order to be able to say: "That which you do I do; I plunge myself into your light in order to extend myself together with you, and thus I can embrace and love everyone with your same Will." But while I did this, my beloved Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, the acts done in my Divine Will have such virtue and power, that they change into divine messengers that depart from earth for the vault of the Heavens. And since these messengers depart from within my Divine Will, but sent by a creature that works and lives in him they bring with them the free entrance into our celestial country and they bring the cheerful news that the earth wants the Kingdom of our Volition, since a little exiled one lives and works in him and doesn't do other than make use of that same Volition that reigns in Heaven, to ask that he descends to reign upon the earth as he reigns in Heaven. These messengers of light, how many secrets don't they hide! Already as by itself the light of our Divine Volition is the secretary of all things divine and human, and knows how to maintain the true secret, and while apparently one sees light, inside of this light it hides all the secrets and all things, no one can escape. This light contains the great secret of the entire story of the creation, and only confides its secrets to one who wants to live in its light, because the light holds the virtue to dispose the creature to live and to understand its divine secrets, and if needs be will dispose her to put forth (her) life in order to be able to give life to his intimate secrets and the purpose of the creation, that was only that our Will might reign as in Heaven so in earth.

"Therefore, my daughter, if you will be attentive to always live of my Will, he will entrust all the secrets of the story of the creation to you, he will make the deposit in your soul of all his joys and his intimate sorrows, and as [with] his secretary, with his vibrant light, transforming itself into brush he will paint in you the sun, the sky, the stars, the sea, the beautiful flowerings, because when he speaks he is not content with words alone, to his inextinguishable love and his interminable light words are not enough for him, but he wants to do deeds, and therefore with his creative virtue, while he entrusts his secrets, he speaks and forms the new creation in the creature; he is not content to speak his secrets, but he wants to make for her works that contain his secrets. Hence new Heavens, suns more brilliant than the creation itself will be seen in the creature that lives in my Will, because you should know that he holds a longing, an ardent desire to always want to work, but he goes finding one who wants to listen and one who wants to receive his creative virtue, in order not to expose his works to uselessness, and in order to be secure he goes finding his same Will in the soul, and finding him he finds his works guaranteed by his same Divine Fiat, therefore he does not spare anything and he makes for you the most beautiful works and the greatest prodigies. Oh, power of my omnipotent Volition, if everyone might know you, they might love you and might let you reign, earth would be changed into Heaven!"

* * *

August 30, 1931

How God wants the creature to himself in order to give her the surprise of new gifts. The love, the order, the inseparability of all created things and how the creature is bound with them.

I was doing my acts in the Divine Volition, praying that he might invest all my being, so that heartbeats, breaths, words, prayers might be able to go forth from me as so many repeated acts of Divine Will. Oh, how I would love to be one continuous act of him in order to be able to say: "I have in my power all your acts, your same love, and therefore I do that which you do and I am no less than you in loving you!" It seems to me that true love doesn't know how to restrict itself, but wants to enlarge itself so much, that it wants infinite love in its power, and since it is not given to the creature to be able to embrace it, she resorts to the Divine Will in order to have it, and plunging herself in him she says with highest contentment: "I love with infinite love." But while my little intelligence lost itself in the Divine Fiat, my amiable Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, one who is content with the little love that the creature possesses, it is not of the nature of true love, more so that little love is subject to extinguish, and [with] contenting itself it comes to lack the necessary source that gives life to feed the flame of true love. Behold therefore, my daughter, our paternal goodness in creating man, gave him all liberty to be able to come to us how many times he might want; not one limit was put (on him), rather in order to induce him to come much more often to us, we premised him that every time that he might come he would be given the beautiful surprise of a new gift. To our inextinguishable love it would have been a sorrow if it might not always have (something) to give to his children, indeed with anxiety he waits for their arrival in order to make them now one surprise and now another, with gifts one more beautiful than the other. Our love wants to banquet together with the creature, and he contents himself to prepare the banquet at his expense, in order to have the occasion to always give. He does just like a father who wants the crown of his children around him, not in order to receive, but in order to give and to prepare feasts and banquets in order to enjoy himself together with his children. What sorrow would it be for a loving father, if the children might not go or they might not have something to give him?

For our paternal goodness there is no danger that we won't have something to give them, but there is the danger that the children won't come, and our love (becomes) delirious because he wants to give. And in order to be more secure [on] where the creature should put our gifts, he wants to find our Divine Will in her, which will conserve the infinite value of our gifts; and the creature won't feel little anymore in her love, in her prayers, in her acts, but she will feel together with our Will that in flows in her, an infinite vein, in a way that everything becomes infinite for her, love, prayers, acts and everything. Hence she will feel in herself the contentment that is no less than us in loving us, because she holds a Divine Volition in her power, and he races in her acts."

Whence I followed my round in the acts that the omnipotent Fiat had done in the creation, in order to love, to honor and thank that which he had done in it, and I understood the order, the union, the inseparability that all created things possess and this only because a Divine Will dominates them. So that all the creation can be called one single continuous act of Supreme Will, which, being that the Will that reigns is one, he maintains the peace, the order, the love, the inseparability between all created things, otherwise if there was not one Will alone that might dominate them, but more than one there would not be true union between them, indeed the Sky would make war with the sun, the sun with the earth, the earth with the sea, and so on; they would imitate men that don't let themselves be dominated by one single Supreme Volition, that there is no true union between them but one against the other. My Jesus, my love, oh, how I would like to be one act alone of your Will, in order be at peace with everyone and to possess the union, the inseparability of the sky, of the sun, of everything! And you would find in me the love that you put in the sky, in the sun, in everything.

And my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, all things created by us possess the unitive strength and the bond of inseparability; our Divine Fiat, for how much he knows how to do distinct things between them, in a way that one created thing can not say that: 'I am like the other', the sky can not say that it is sun, the sun can not say that it is sea, however he doesn't know how to do isolated and separate things between them. Union pleases him so much, that he puts them in the condition that one can not separate from the other, and while they are distinct and each one does his office, however in the motion, in the turning that they do, so much is the order and the union that they hold, that one is the motion, one is the incessant round that they make. But why does my Fiat make them move and turn continually? In order to give them the course of love toward he who has created them, and to make them race toward creatures, in order to exercise their office of offering the love of their Creator for the cause of which they were created.

"Now the creature possesses the bond of all created things and turns together with them, and behold how: if you breathe, it is the air that makes you breathe, palpate, the blood circulates in your veins; now the air gives you the breath, the heartbeat, and takes it in order to re-give it again, and while incessantly it gives and takes your breath, it turns, it races together with all created things, and your breath turns, races together with the air; your eye with filling itself with light races in the sun, your feet race together with the earth. But do you want to know who has the good to feel the strength, the union, the order, the inseparability of all created things alive and the course of all her being toward her Creator? One who lets herself be dominated and possesses the life of my Will. She has changed nothing of how all things had beginning; but rather the creature has changed things with not doing my Will, but for one who does it and lets herself be dominated, she holds her post of honor as created by God, and therefore we find her in the sun, in the sky, in the sea, together with the union of all created things. And oh, how beautiful to find her, together with all things created by us, that only for her love were they made by us!"

* * *

September 7, 1931

The appeal to all the works gone forth from the Fiat. The palpating life of the creature in them. Protections, speaking voice, assailants.

My poor mind, turning in the acts done by the Divine Will, goes retracing all that which he has done, in order to recognize them, love them, appreciate them and then to offer them as the most beautiful homage to the same Divine Will, as worthy fruit of his works. But while I did this, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, how pleasant to my heart and how sweet it sounds to my hearing your retracing of all that which my Divine Will has done, in order to recognize them, love them and to give them to us as the most beautiful homage of the love that we have had for creatures in creating so many things for their love! Your soul with retracing them sounds the bell, as to call the appeal to all the works gone forth from the Divine Fiat in order to say to us: 'How many beautiful things you have created for me, in order to give them to me as gifts and pledges of your love! And making my ways I re-give them to you as gifts and pledges of my love for you.' So that we feel the palpating life of the creature in our works, her little love flows in ours, and the purpose of the creation is realized. To know our works and the purpose for which they were made, it is the point of support of the creature, where she finds a Divine Will in her power, and it is our pretext in order to give other surprises of new gifts and graces to her."

And I: "My love, a thought afflicts me: I fear that I might lack the continuation of my acts in your Divine Will, and the sound of my bell interrupting, you being offended put me aside, and you won't give me anymore grace to let me live in your Will."

And Jesus added:

"My daughter, do not fear, you should know that one footstep gives life to the other footstep, one good is life and support of the other good, one act calls to life the other act; and also the evil, the fault, is life of other evils and of other faults; things don't ever remain isolated, but they almost always have their succession. Good is like the seed, that holds generative virtue: provided that she has the patience to cast it in the bosom of the earth, it will produce ten, twenty, one hundred. Thus the creature, if she will have patience and will be attentive to enclose in her soul the seed of good that she herself has done, she will have the generation, the multiplicity, the hundred-fold of the good acts that she has done.

"And if you might know what it means to do a good act! Every act is a protection that she acquires and a speaking voice, before our throne, of whom has done a good; every act more in good, so many more defenders the creature holds at her defense, and if the circumstances of life make her find (herself) in such straits and dangers, that it seems that she wants to stagger and to fall, the good acts that she has done take the aspect of assailants and they assail us, so that one who has loved us and has had a succession of many good acts won't stagger, and they race around the creature as supporters, so that she doesn't surrender in the danger. And do you suppose that there might have been a sequence of acts done in our Will: oh, then in every act there is a value, a divine virtue that defends the creature! We see in her every act our Will as jeopardized, hence we ourselves make ourselves defenders and supporters of she who has given life to our Divine Fiat in her acts. Can we perhaps deny anything to ourselves, or disown our working Will in the creature? No, no; therefore do not fear, but rather abandon yourself like the little newborn in our arms, so that you feel our support and the protection of your own acts. Do you believe that a repeated, continued good is nothing? They are divine properties that one acquires, they are armies that are formed, that conquer the celestial country. It happens to one who has continued so many good acts, as to one who has acquired a lot of property: if he has an upset it can not harm him much, because the many properties will fill the void of the upset that he has suffered; but if instead another, has acquired few or holds nothing, one little upset is enough to cast him on the pavement of the most squalid misery. Such is doing much good or yet a little or nothing. Therefore I always repeat to you, be attentive, be faithful to me and your flight in my Will be continuous."

After this he added:

"My daughter, you should know that when you go disposing yourself to do your acts in my Divine Will, he remains conceived in your act, and as you do it you give him the field to form his life in the act that you do; not only, (but) your new acts serve as food to those already done, because my Divine Will being life feels the need, when he has been enclosed in the acts of the creature, of air, of breath, of heartbeat, of food. Behold the necessity of new acts, because these serve to maintain his divine air, his continuous breath, his heartbeat not interrupted, and the food in order to grow my own Will in the creature. You see therefore the great necessity of the continuation of the acts, in order to make him live and reign in the creature, otherwise my Volition would find himself in uneasiness without his full triumph in all her acts."

* * *

September 12, 1931

True love forms the fire where to consume oneself in order [to make] he whom one loves live again. Jesus' day in the Eucharist.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, and while I did my acts I thought to myself: "But will it be true that my sweet Jesus might enjoy the continuity of my little acts? And Jesus making himself felt said:

"My daughter, a broken love can never give of heroism, because with not being continuous it forms so many voids in the creature, which produce weakness, coldness and they are almost in the act of extinguishing the little ignited flame, and therefore it takes away from her the fortitude of love, that with its light makes understood who it is whom she loves and with its heat it maintains ignited the flame that produces the heroism of true love, so much so that one feels happy to give one's life for he whom she loves. A continuous love has the virtue to generate in the soul of the creature he whom she always loves, and this generation becomes formed in the center of her continuous love. Do you see therefore what an incessant love means? To form the fire where to consume and burn oneself, in order to be able to form in that fire the life of your beloved Jesus. One can say: 'Consume my life in continuous love in order to make live he whom I love incessantly.' Oh, if I might not have always loved the creature and might not love her with a love that never says enough, I would never have descended from Heaven in earth in order to give my life with so many sufferings and heroisms for her love! It was my continuous love that as sweet chain drew me and made me make the heroic act to put forth my life in order to acquire hers. A continuous love can arrive to everything, can do everything, facilitates everything and knows how to convert everything into love. Instead a broken love can be called love of circumstances, (self-)interested love, vile love, that can arrive, if the circumstances change, to disown and perhaps despise he whom she loved. More so that only continuous acts form life in the creature, as she forms her act, the light, the love, the sanctity, the grace rises in her act itself according to the act that she does. Therefore an interrupted love and good can not be called either true love or true life or true good."

Then he has added with a tender accent:

"My daughter, if you want that your Jesus completes in you his loving designs, make that your love and your acts are continuous in my Volition, because when he finds continuity he finds his way to act divinely and he remains arranged/promised in the perennial act of the creature, and he expedites doing that which he has established for her, finding in virtue of his incessant acts the space, the necessary preparations and the life itself where to be able to form his admirable designs and complete his most beautiful works, more so [that] every act done in my Will is one more retying that becomes formed between the Divine Will with the human, it is one step more that is made in the sea of the Fiat, it is one greater right that the soul acquires."

After this I followed to pray before the tabernacle of love, and in my interior I said to myself: "What do you do, my love, in this prison of love?" And Jesus all goodness said to me:

"My daughter, do you want to know what I do? I make my day. You should know that I enclosed all my life passed down here inside of a day. My day begins with (my) conception and being born, the veils of the sacramental accidents serve me for bands for my infantile age; and when [for] human ingratitude they leave me alone and seek to offend me, I make my exile, leaving me only the company of some loving soul, that as a second mother doesn't know how to detach herself from me and keeps me faithful company. From the exile I pass to Nazareth making my hidden life in the company of those few good ones who surrounded me. And following my day, as creatures approach to receive me, thus I make my public life, repeating my evangelical scenes, handing to each one my teachings, the helps, the comforts that are necessary to her: I do as Father, as teacher, as physician, and if needs be also as judge. Hence I spend my day waiting for everyone and doing good to everyone. And oh, how many times she touches me (only) to remain alone, without a heart that palpates near me! I feel a desert around me, and I remain alone, alone to pray; I feel the solitude of my days that passed in the desert down here, and oh, how very sorrowful it is to me! It is I that palpate for everyone in every heart, jealous I am at watch of everyone, I feel isolated and abandoned! But my day doesn't end with only the abandonment; there is no day in which ungrateful souls don't offend me and receive me sacrilegiously, and they make me perform my day with my passion and with my death on the cross. Ah, it is the sacrilege(,) the most merciless death that I receive in this sacrament of love! So that in this tabernacle I make my day with performing all that which I performed in the thirty-three years of my mortal life. And since [in] all that which I did and I do, the first purpose, the first act of life is the Will of my Father, that he does as in Heaven thus in earth, thus in this little host I don't do other than to implore that one be my Will with my children, and I call you in this Divine Will in which you find all my life in act, and you following it, ruminating (over) it and offering it(,) you unite with me in my eucharistic day, in order to obtain that my Will be known and reign upon the earth. And thus you also can say: 'I make my day together with Jesus.'"

* * *

September 16, 1931

Admirable effects of the light of the Divine Will. How Heaven opens itself over working souls. How our acts are as so many puffs that make the good matured.

My poor mind it seems that it doesn't know how to do other than loose itself in the Divine Fiat, and oh, how sorrowful it proves to me when even for brief instants they are devastated by a shade or thought that is not all Will of God! Oh, then I feel my happiness break, the current of light, of peace break! Alas, I feel the weight of my unhappy will! Instead if nothing that is not Will of God enters in me, I feel happy, I live in the immensity of his light, indeed I don't even know how to see where this light ends, which forms the celestial sojourn of perennial peace in me. Oh, power of the Supreme Volition, you know how to change the human into divine, the ugly into beauty, the sufferings into joys although they remain sufferings, do not leave me one instant! Your arms of light hold me so very pressed, that all other things, dispersed by your light, don't dare to annoy me or break my happiness. But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus, as if he might want to approve and to confirm that which I thought, said to me:

"My daughter, how beautiful my Divine Will is, isn't it true? Ah, he alone is the bearer of true happiness and of great fortune to the poor creature, which with doing her will she doesn't do other than break her happiness, break the current of the light and change her fortune into the greatest bad luck. And as the creature disposes herself to do my Will, thus she goes rehabilitating the lost goods, because the substance of my Divine Will is light, and all that which she works can be called effects of this light. So that [in] one who lets herself be dominated, one will be the act, but as substance of the light that he possesses; [the creature] will feel his so many effects, because [this one act] will produce as effect of his light the works, the steps, the word, the thoughts, the heartbeat of my Will in the creature; hence she can say: 'They are one act alone of Supreme Will, all the rest are none other than the effects of his light.'

"The effects of this light are admirable, they take all the likenesses, all the forms, of works, of steps, of words, of sufferings, of prayers, of tears but all animated by the light, that form such variety of beauty, that your Jesus remains enraptured by it; similar with the sun that animates everything with its light, but doesn't destroy nor change things, but puts there of its own and communicates the variety of the colors, the diversity of the sweetnesses, making them acquire a virtue and beauty that they didn't possess. Such is my Divine Will: without destroying anything of that which the creature does, he embellishes the soul with his light and communicates his divine power there."

After this I followed my abandonment in the Divine Fiat with following his acts, and my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, every good goes out from God matured, and this maturation is formed between God and the soul. You see, with doing your acts you expose yourself to the rays of the divine sun, and as you undergo the heat and the light, your acts don't remain arid, insipid, but matured, and you together with them remain matured in the love, in the divine knowledges in all that which you do. And I seeing you matured in those acts I prepare in myself other love to give you and other truths to tell you, and since all that which goes out from me, nothing is sterile, but everything is fecund and well matured in the living flame of my love you receive the virtue to form in yourself new maturations. Therefore many times I am waiting for the conclusion of your acts, in order to give you the surprise to make known to you other truths; these like so many puffs of light and of heat perform by maturing in your soul the goods and truths that your Jesus has communicated to you. Do you see therefore the necessity of your acts in order to dispose you to receive other knowledges on my Divine Fiat, and in order to let me find in you the continuation of your acts in order to make them mature, otherwise what could I do? I would remain as sun that while it crosses over the earth it doesn't find either a flower to color or a fruit to mature, so that all the admirable effects that the sun contains would remain in its light, the earth would receive nothing. Therefore Heaven opens over working souls, the miraculous strength of the light of my Divine Volition, not over idle souls, but over those that labor, that sacrifice themselves, that love, that always hold something to do for me.

"Rather you should know that the beatitudes of Heaven re-pour themselves out over the earth and they go to depose themselves in the soul that lives and works in my Will, because they don't want to leave her deprived of joys and celestial happiness while she forms one Will alone with Heaven. However the blessed, while they swim in divine joys, they acquire nothing of merit; instead for the wayfaring soul they not only felicitate her, but they add on merit, because for one who does my Will in earth everything is meritorious: the word, the prayer, the breath and the joys themselves convert into merit and into new acquisitions."

* * *

September 21, 1931

How the Divine Will forms the day in the act of the creature, and how with doing her will she forms the ways to exit, the sorrowful steps, the night of vigils.

I was following my acts in the Divine Volition and I prayed to my highest good Jesus that he might make rise in my every act the sun of the Divine Will, so that I might be able to give him in my every act the love, the homage, the glory, as it might form for him in my every act a day of divine light, of love, of profound adoration, communicating in my act through his same Will. Oh, how I would like to say in my every act little or great: "I make a day for Jesus in order to love him more." But while I thought this, my beloved Jesus said to me, with repeating his usual little visit to my soul:

"My daughter, my Divine Will is the true day for the creature, but in order to form this day it needs to be called in the act of her, because as he is called thus he encloses himself in the act in order to make his divine day arise, he holds the virtue to change the act, the word, the step, the joys and the sufferings into most splendid and enchanting days. So that my Will is waiting, as the creature rises from her nighttime rest, to be called in order to form his day of action in her. And since he is pure light, he is not adapted to work in the dark act of the human will, but with his light he changes the act into day, and forms there his splendid full day of heroic and divine actions, with such order and beauty, worthy only of his vivifying and operative virtue.

"One can say that [my Will] is waiting behind the doors of the act of the creature, as the sun behind the windows of the rooms, that in spite that outside there is a lot of light, the rooms are dark, because the doors are not yet opened. Thus with my Divine Will; in spite that it is the light that fills everything, the human act is always dark if [he] is not called to rise in her. Therefore call him to rise in your every act, if you want that he form in you his beautiful day and I can find in you and in your every act my days of love that surround me with joy and with delights, that will make me repeat: 'My delight is to be with the children of my Divine Will.' I will pass my happy days in you, not in the unhappy night of your human will, but in the full sojourn of my light and the perennial peace of my celestial country. Ah, yes, I will repeat: 'I am happy in this creature, I feel the echo in her of my day passed down here upon the earth and the echo of my day that I make in my prison in the sacrament of love, all full with my Divine Will.' Hence if you want to make me happy make found in yourself the working virtue of my Divine Will, that knows how to form for me my most beautiful days of brilliant light, all dusted with ineffable joys and with celestial happiness, more so that the creature even from the beginning of her creation was put forth from God in the happy and pacific day of our Divine Will: inside and outside of her everything was light, indeed full noon; inside of her heart, before her eyes, over her head and even under her steps she saw and felt the palpating life of my Holy Volition, which while he held her immersed in the fullness of the light and of the happiness he closed all the ways and the steps of human unhappiness to her. And the creature with doing her human will forms the escapes, the unhappy ways, the sorrowful steps, the dense obscurities, in which she herself formed the unhappiness, the tortures, the sorrow, the oppressive night, not of rest, but of vigils of passions, of agitations and of torments, and this in my same Divine Will, and this because the creature having been made only for him and in order to live of him and in him, there is no post for her, neither in earth nor in Heaven, nor in hell itself, outside of my Divine Fiat.

"Whence one who seeks to live in my Divine Will closes these escapes, every act of hers in him suppresses the unhappy ways that she has formed, makes the sorrowful steps disappear, suffocates the night, the rest arises and it puts an end to all her evils. Indeed my Volition himself, as he sees that [the creature] wants to live in him, thus he caresses her, it puts him in feast and he helps her to suppress her escapes, he closes the doors to her evils, because we neither want nor do we love the creature (to be) unhappy, this dishonors us and forms her and our sorrow; therefore we want to see her happy, and with our same happiness. Oh, how sorrowful for our paternal heart to possess immense riches, infinite joys and to see our children in our own house, that is in our own Will, poor, fasting and unhappy!"

* * *

September 29, 1931

Growth of the creature before the Divine Majesty. Living in the Divine Will is (a) gift that God will make the creature.

I was doing my round in the Divine Will in order to follow his so many acts done for our love, and I arrived in Eden, I stopped in that act in which God created man: what solemn moments, what enthusiasm of love! So that act can be called purest, complete, substantial act, not ever interrupted, of divine love. Hence man was formed, had beginning, was born in the love of his Creator, it was just that he should grow as kneaded and breathed, as a little flame, from the puff of whom loved him so much. But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus visiting my little soul said to me:

"My daughter, the creation of man was none other than an outlet of our love, but so much so, that he could not receive all inside of himself, not having the capacity to be able to enclose in his interior an act of he whom brought him forth to the light. Whence our act remained inside and outside of him, so that he might be able to make use of it for food in order to be able to grow before he who with so much love had created him and who loved him so much. And since it was not only our love that poured forth in creating man but all our divine qualities, hence power, goodness, wisdom, beauty and so on poured forth, therefore our love was not content with loving him, but pouring forth all our divine qualities the celestial table remained always prepared and at the disposition of man, that every time that he wanted, he could come to take a seat at this celestial table in order to feed on our goodness, power, beauty, love and wisdom, and thus grow before us with our same divine qualities, with the model of our likeness. And every time that he comes in our presence in order to take our sips of our divine qualities, we should cradle him on our knees in order to make him take rest and make him digest that which he had taken, so that he might be able to feed again on our divine outlets in order to form his complete growth of goodness, of power, of sanctity, of beauty, as our love desired and our Volition wanted. We when we do a work, our love is so much, that we give and prepare everything, so that nothing might lack to our creative work; we do complete works, not ever at half, and if it seems that something lacks, it is on the part of the creature that she doesn't take all that which we have put forth for her good and for our glory.'

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Will, and my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, living in my Will is a gift that we make the creature, great gift that exceeds in value, in sanctity, in beauty and in happiness all other gifts, in an infinite and unsurpassable way. When we make this gift so great, we don't do other than to open the doors in order to make her possessor of our divine possessions, place where the passions, the perils don't have life anymore nor can any enemy harm or hurt her. This gift confirms the creature in the good, in the love, in the life itself of her Creator, and the Creator remains confirmed in the creature, hence inseparability occurs between the one and the other; with this gift the creature will feel her fate changed: from poor, rich, from sick, perfectly recovered, from unhappy, she will feel that all things are changed for her into happiness. To live in our Will as gift, there is great difference from doing it; that (first) one is prize/premium and our decision to conquer the creature with an invincible and irresistible force, to fill the human will with our sensible ways, in a way that she will touch with (her) hand and with clarity the great good that comes to her, that only a crazy person would escape from a such a good, because as long as the soul is wayfaring they don't close the doors behind the gift, but they remain open, so that freely and not forced she can live in our gift, more so that [with] this gift she won't do our Will by necessity, but because she loves him and he is hers. Instead doing our Will is not prize/premium but duty and necessity, whether wanted or not wanted she must undergo it, and things that are done through duty and by necessity, if they can escape they escape, because in them doesn't enter spontaneous love, that makes one love and recognize our Will as worthy to be loved and known; necessity hides his good that he contains and makes the weight of the sacrifice and duty felt. Instead living in our Volition is not sacrifice but conquest, it is not duty but love; [the creature] feels herself lost in our gift and she not only loves him as our Will, but also because he is exclusively hers, and not giving him the first post, the regime, the dominion, would be to not love herself.

"Now, my daughter, it is this that we want to give to creatures: our Will as gift, because watching him and possessing him as one's own thing it will prove easy to let him form his kingdom. This gift was given to man in Eden, and ungrateful he rejected it, but we didn't change Will, we hold him at reserve, and that which one rejected from us, with graces more surprising we hold him prepared in order to give him to the others, nor do we mind the time, because the centuries for us are as one sole point. However there is needed great preparations from creatures, to know the great good of the gift in order to long for it; but (the) time will come that our Will will be possessed as gift by the creature."

* * *

October 4, 1931

How doubts, fears, are wounds to love. The Divine Will is one act alone. The greatest of wonders. The night and the day of the soul.

I felt oppressed for the privations of my sweet Jesus; what agonizing nail, that no one can remove nor calm by giving a little relief to such a martyrdom! Only his return, his amiable presence can destroy as enchantment the nail and the sorrow and he makes the purest joys, which only Jesus knows how to give with his amiable presence. Whence I didn't do other than to abandon myself in the arms of the Divine Will, praying that he might reveal he whom I so very long for; and while I did this, my amiable Jesus as lightning illuminated my poor soul and said to me:

"Good daughter, courage, you oppress yourself too much, and your oppression makes you reduce yourself to the extreme and casts in you the sad doubt that your Jesus doesn't love you and that perhaps he will not come forth from you anymore. No, no, I don't want this doubt. The oppressions, the doubts, the fears are wounds to my love and they weaken your love for me, removing from you the impulse and the flight to always race toward me in order to love me; and the tide of continuous love toward me is broken, you remain like a poor sick one and I don't find the powerful magnet of your continuous love anymore that draws me to you. Now you should know how all the acts of my Divine Will, that are innumerable, all reduce themselves to one point and one act alone; it is the greatest wonder of our Supreme Being to form, to possess, to see all the possible and imaginable acts in one act alone. Thus all the acts done by the creature in our Will reduce themselves to one act alone.

"Now in order to have the virtue to enclose all acts in one act alone, [the creature] must form and possess in herself the continuous love, my perennial Will, which will give beginning and will make all the acts depart from inside the virtue of one act alone.

"You see therefore, all that which you have done in my Will is united together into one act alone, and forms your cortege, your support, your strength, your light that never extinguishes, and they love you so much, that making themselves arms they guard you as the dear pupil of my Fiat, because in you they have been formed and have received life. Therefore do not oppress yourself, enjoy the fruits of my Volition, and if you see that I delay in coming wait for me with patient love, and when you less think of it I will surprise you and I will make my usual little visit, and I will be happy to find you in my same Will always in the act of loving me."

After this he added:

"My daughter, our Divine Being is great, immense, powerful, etc.; this doesn't arouse much wonder, because all these divine qualities of ours are by nature, which form everything together of our Supreme Being. So that by nature we are immense in power, immense in love, in beauty, in wisdom, in mercy, and so on, and since we are immense in all things, all that which goes forth remains in the nets of our immense divine qualities. Now that which arouses the greatest of wonders is seeing the soul that lives in our Divine Will, who encloses in her little act the powerful and immense act of her Creator; to see as lined up in the little acts of the finite being the immense love, the immense wisdom, the infinite beauty, mercy without limits, the interminable sanctity of he who has created her. (That) the little encloses the great is more marvelous than the great that encloses the little; to our greatness it is easy to embrace everything, to enclose all, nor are there needed arts nor industry, because from our immensity no one can escape us, but the little enclosing the great, there is needed an art apart, a divine industry, that only our power and our great love can form in the creature; if we don't put forth of ours, by herself alone she could not do it.

"Therefore it is the wonder of wonders, it is the greatest of prodigies living in our Divine Fiat. The soul is made so specious and artful that it is an enchantment to see her, it can be said that in her every little act there converges a miracle of ours, otherwise it could not happen (that) the little encloses the great; and our goodness is so much that he takes the highest pleasure and waits with so much love that the creature gives him the occasion to let him do this divine art of continuous miracles.

"Therefore let the living in our Volition be to your heart more than everything, thus you will be more content and we more content with you, and you will be in our creative hands our field of action and our continuous work. If you might know how much we like our labor in souls that live in our Volition, you would be more attentive to never go out from him."

Whence I followed my abandonment in the Fiat, but accompanied by a sadness for so many afflicting things that crowded in my poor mind, that is not necessary to say on paper; for certain intimate secrets it is just that only Jesus alone knows them. And my beloved Jesus repeated with a most tender accent:

"My daughter, you should know that as nature holds the night and the day, thus the soul holds her night, the aurora, the break of the day, the full noon and her sunset. The night calls the day and the day the night; it can be said they call each other.

"Now the night of the soul are my privations, but for one who lives in my Will they are precious nights, not of sluggish rest, of restless sleep, no, no, but night of operative rest, of pacific sleep, because as she sees (that) night comes, thus she abandons herself in my arms in order to let her rest her tired head on my divine heart and feel my heartbeats, in order to draw in her sleep new love and to say to me (while) sleeping: 'I love you, I love you, O my Jesus!' The sleep of one who loves me and who lives in my Will is as the baby's sleep, that as she closes the eyes to sleep, she calls half sleeping: 'Mama, mama', because she wants her arms and her maternal bosom in order to sleep, so much so that as the tiny little one awakes, (her) first word is: 'Mama', the first smile, the first look is for the mama. Such is the soul who lives in my Volition: she is the little baby, that as the night arrives, thus she searches he whom she loves, in order to draw new strength and new love in order to love me more; and oh, how beautiful it is to see her asleep asking, desiring, longing for Jesus! This asking, desiring and longing for, calls the dawn, forms the aurora and makes the full day break, which calls the sun, and I rise and I form there the course of the day and its full noon.

"But you know, my daughter, that here upon the earth things alternate; only in Heaven is it always full day, because my presence is perennial in the midst of the blessed. Whence as you see that I am about to leave, but do you know where I leave? Inside of you; after [having] taught your soul giving you my lessons before the light of my presence, so that you might understand them very well and they might serve you as food and as work during the day, I retire and I form the sunset, and I hide in you in the brief night, I do as actor and spectator of all your acts; and while for you it seems night, for me it is the most beautiful rest, that after having spoken to you I take rest in my same word, and the acts that you do serves to lull me, as relief, as defense and as sweet refreshment to my spasms of love. Therefore leave me to work, I know when the night is necessary or the day, for you and for me, in your soul; that which I want is perennial peace in you, so that I can complete that which I want. If you don't remain in peace, I feel molested in my work and with difficulty, not with ease, I go completing my designs."

* * *

October 8, 1931

The Divine Will, depositary of all the acts of all the saints. How God and the creature give each other the hand. What are the lost acts from the purpose of our Creator.

My poor mind turns around the sun of the Supreme Fiat, and I find him surrounded by all the works, sacrifices, sufferings, heroisms that all the old and new saints have done, those of the Queen of Heaven as also that which has been done for love of our blessed Jesus.

The Divine Volition conserves all; he having been the first actor of all the good acts of creatures, he guards them jealously, holds them in deposit in himself and makes use of them in order to glorify himself and to glorify those people that have done them. And I seeing that all was of the Will of God, being that he is also mine, all was mine; and turning in every act I offered them as mine in order to greater glorify the eternal Volition and in order to impetrate that his kingdom come upon the earth. But while I did this, my always amiable Jesus surprising me said to me:

"My daughter, listen to the admirable secret of my Volition. If the creature wants to find all that which has been done of beauty, of good, of sanctity, in the whole story of the world, by me, by the celestial Mama and by all the saints, she must enter in the Divine Will; in him one finds all in act. As you paid attention to every act, you remembered it, you offered it, thus the saint that had done that act, that sacrifice, felt himself called by the wayfaring soul and saw his act palpating anew on earth, hence the glory to his Creator and to himself is doubled, and you that offered it (are) covered with the celestial dew of the good of that holy act; and according to the noble and high purpose with which it became offered, thus more intense and great is the glory and good that it produces.

"How many riches my Will possesses! There are all my acts, those of the Sovereign Queen, that are all in expectation of being called, offered by the creature, in order to duplicate the good for the benefit of creatures and in order to give us double glory; they want to be remembered, called, in order to palpate as new life in the midst of creatures, but for lack of attention there are some who die, some who with difficulty through weakness, some who are numb for the cold, some who don't have anything to satiate their hunger. Our good, acts and sacrifices, don't depart if not called, because with remembering them and offering them [creatures] dispose themselves to recognize them and to receive the good that our acts contain. Then there is no greater honor that you can give to all Heaven, than to offer their acts that they did in earth, for the noble, most high and sublime purpose than that the Kingdom of the Divine Will comes upon the earth."

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Volition, and my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, an act, a prayer, a thought, an affection, a word, in order to be accepted, perfect, ordered, complete, must elevate itself to the same purpose wanted by God himself, because as the creature in her act elevates herself to the purpose wanted by the Supreme Being, she embraces the beginning and she takes in her act the purpose with which God has created her, God and the creature give each other a hand and they want and do the same thing; with doing this, the divine order, the divine act and the same purpose with which God wants that she do that act enters in the act of the creature. Whence the divine purpose entering, the act by itself becomes complete, holy, perfect and all ordered; who is the author of the purpose of that act, such does it become. Instead if the creature does not elevate herself to the purpose wanted by God in her act, she descends from the beginning of her creation and she won't feel the life of the divine act in hers, perhaps she will do many acts, but incomplete, defective, messy; they will be as acts lost from the purpose of her Creator. Therefore the thing that pleases us more is to see our same purpose in the act of the creature; it can be said that she continues our life upon the earth and our working Will in her acts, words and in everything."

* * *

October 12, 1931

Incessant breath of God. Divine life and completed act of God in the creature. Image. The People, the princes, the noble court and the regal army of the celestial kingdom.

I feel the omnipotent strength of the Divine Fiat that invests all of me, absorbs me and transforms me in his light. This light is love and makes the life of my Creator palpate in me; this light is word and gives me the most beautiful news of the beginning of my existence, the relationships, the bonds of union, the communicating virtue, the inseparability that still exists between me and God; but who maintains this all in full vigor if not the Divine Volition? Oh, power of the Supreme Fiat! Prostrated in the immensity of your light I adore you profoundly, and my little nothingness loses itself in you loving you. But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus said to me:

"My good daughter, only my Volition maintains and conserves intact, with a continuous act, the beginning of the creation of the creature. Our Supreme Being gave the beginning and animated her life with the power of our divine breath; this breath should not ever be broken, more so that when we give and we do an act we never withdraw it, and this serves in order to form the completed work of the being that we put forth to the light. This first act of ours, while it serves to give beginning and to form the life, the continuation, it serves in order to make of the creature a completed act of ours, and as we breathe (in) her thus we form in her our continuous acts in order to complete our divine life. Our breath, as we give it, forms sip by sip the growth of this life of ours in the creature; our breath, as it gives itself, thus it forms our completed act of sanctity, of beauty, of love, of goodness and so on, and when we have filled her so much, in a way that we don't have anywhere more to put our act in the creature, because she is limited, our breath ceases and her life finishes in earth, and in order to immortalize our breath in Heaven we transport our fully grown life in her, our completed act, into our celestial country as triumph of our creation. There is no more beautiful rarity than these lives and completed acts of ours in the celestial sojourn; they are the narrators of our power, of the enthusiasm of our love, they are speaking voices of our omnipotent breath, that can only form the divine life, our completed act in the creature. But do you know where we can form this life and this completed act of ours, for how much it is possible and imaginable for a creature to receive from her Creator? [In] the soul that lives in our Divine Will and lets herself be dominated by him. Ah, only in her can we form the divine life and develop our completed act!

"Our Volition disposes the creature to receive all the qualities and divine colors, and our breath not ever interrupted, as expert brush/(artist), paints with admirable and inimitable mastery the most beautiful tones and forms there the images of our Supreme Being. If it might not be for these images there would not have been that great work of the creation, nor great work of the power of our creative hands; creating the sun, the sky, the stars and all the universe would have been a beautiful nothing for our power. But instead all our power, the art of our divine arts, the indescribable excess of our intense love, it is to do our completed act in the creature with forming our life in her and so much is our gratification, that we ourselves remain enraptured in our act that we develop.

"In order to do a completed act it is the greatest glory that glorifies us most, it is the most intense love that praises us most, it is the power that praises us continually. But alas, for one who doesn't live in our Volition, how many broken acts of ours, without conclusion, how many divine lives of ours hardly conceived or at the most born without growing! [Creatures] break the continuation of our work and bind our arms without being able to go ahead; they put us in the impotence of a master who holds his earth and is prevented by his ungrateful servants from doing the work that he wants to in his earth, to sow it, to plant the plants that he wants. Poor master, to hold sterile earth, without the fruit that he could receive, for reason of his iniquitous servants! Our earths are creatures and the ungrateful servant is the human volition, which opposing ours with hers puts us in impotence from forming our divine life in them.

"Now you should know that in Heaven one doesn't enter if one doesn't possess our divine life, or at least conceived or born, and such will be the glory, the beatitude of the blessed, for how much growth has been formed of our life in them. Now what will be the difference for one who has hardly let him be conceived, be born or let grow with little proportions, from one who has let us form complete life? So much will be the difference, that it is incomprehensible to the human creature. Those will be as the people of the celestial kingdom; instead our images will be as princes, ministers, the noble court, the regal army of the great King.

"Therefore one who does my Divine Will and lives in him can say: 'I do all and I also belong from this earth to the family of my celestial Father.'"

* * *

October 20, 1931

Meetings of steps between God and the creature. How God has formed the creature center of the creation.

My little existence always turns in the Holy Divine Volition; I feel that he pulls me always more to himself, and his every word, light or knowledge of him is a new life that he infuses in me, an unusual joy that I experience and a happiness without end, that not being able to contain more, because I am too little, I feel as if my heart might want to burst with joy and divine happiness. Oh, Divine Will, make yourself known, possessed and loved, so that everyone might be happy, but celestial happiness, not terrestrial! But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus making me his little visit said to me:

"My daughter, every act that you do in my Divine Will, so many steps do you make toward God, and God makes his steps toward you. The step of the creature is the call that moves the divine step to go to meet her; and since we do not ever let ourselves be conquered nor exceeded by her acts, if she makes a step, we make five, ten, because our love being greater than hers it expedites, multiplies the steps in order to hasten the meeting and to plunge the one into the other. Rather many times it is we who move the step in order to call the step of the creature in order to come to us; we want our creature, we want to give her something of ours, we want that she resembles us, we want to make her happy, and therefore we take the step in order to call her, and one who is in our Will, oh, how she hears the sweet stamping of our steps, and races in order to come to us in order to receive the fruits of our steps! But do you want to know what these fruits are? Our creative word, no sooner than the meeting occurs (and) the creature flings herself in the center of our Supreme Being; we receive her with so much love, that not being able to contain it we unite her [to us] and with our word we pour forth over her our knowledges, making her part of our Divine Being. So that every word of ours is an outlet that we make over of the creature, and how many degrees of knowledge she acquires through means of our word, so many more degrees of participation does she receive from her Creator. You see therefore, every act done in my Divine Will is a way that you form in order to move the step in order to form you all of Divine Will, and my word will make use of you with formation, with light and with participation with our Divinity."

After this my abandonment in the Divine Fiat continued, and my beloved Jesus added:

"My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that (the) only purpose of the creation was our love, that manifesting itself outside of us formed its center, where manifesting ourselves it should center itself in order to develop the purpose for which our love had gone forth from us. Hence our center was the creature, where fixing itself upon we should make our palpating life and our working love felt in her. And all the creation should be the circumference of this center, almost as solar rays that should surround, embellish, sustain this center, that fixing itself in us should give us (the) field to manifest always new love, in order to make the center more beautiful, more rich, more majestic where our love leaned itself, in order to make a worthy work of our creative hands.

"Now all creatures should form, united together, the place of center of our manifested love, but many scattered themselves from the center, and our love remained suspended, it didn't have anywhere to fix itself upon in order to center itself, in order to have its primary purpose, the reason it had gone forth. Hence the order of our wisdom, the working life of our manifested love, could not tolerate the failure of our purpose. Behold therefore that in all the centuries there has always been some soul that God has formed as center of all the creation, and in her our love leaned and our life beat, and obtained the purpose of the whole creation; it is through means of these centers that all the creation is maintained and that the world exists still, otherwise it wouldn't have any reason to exist, because it would lack the life and the cause of everything.

"Hence there has been no century nor will there be, in which we won't choose souls dear to us, more or less portentous, that will form the center of the creation, in which we will have our palpating life and our working love; and according to the epochs, the times, the needs, the circumstances, they have been offered to (the) good of everyone, are given to everyone, have defended everyone, they alone have been the ones that have sustained my sacrosanct rights and have given me field to maintain the order of my infinite wisdom. Now you should know that these souls have been chosen by our Divine Being in every century, as center of all the creation, according to what we wanted, the good that we wanted to do, and that which we wanted to make known and also according to the needs of the scattered centers, and behold the cause of the diversity of their ways, of speaking and of the good that they have done; but all the substance of these souls was my palpating life and my manifested love leaned upon and working in them.

"Now in this century we have chosen you as center of all the creation, in order to make the great good known with more clarity of what it means to do our Will, so that everyone might long for and might call him to reign in the midst of them, thus the scattered centers might unite themselves to the sole center, and form one alone. The creation is (a) birth gone forth by the power of my Divine Will, and it is just and necessary that everyone recognize who is this Mother that with so much love has given birth to them and put them forth to the light of day, so that all his children might live-united together with the Will of the Mother of them; and having one Will alone it would prove easy to form a single center, where this celestial Mother would palpate our divine life and our working love, much more so that the predominant vice of this century, the idol of many is the human volition, and even in the good itself that they do, and therefore one sees that from within the good goes forth many defects and sins; this says that the fount by which it was animated was not pure, but vicious, because true good knows how to produce good fruits, and from this one knows if the good that one does is true or false.

"Hence there is an extreme necessity to make my Divine Will known, bond of union, powerful weapon of peace, beneficent restorer of human society."

* * *

October 26, 1931

The good acts done in the Divine Will change into light. Admirable effects of the abandonment in the arms of Jesus. One who lets herself be dominated by the Divine Will becomes people of his kingdom.

I am always in the arms of the Divine Will, who forms his day of light in my little soul, and although some cloud shows itself in this day, the power of his light fixes upon it, and the cloud seeing itself fixed upon escapes, vanishes and it seems that it says: "One sees that there is no post for me in this day that the Divine Will forms in the creature."

And it seems that he responds to her:

"Where I am there is no post for anyone, because I want to do one act alone of my Will with the creature, which doesn't admit any other than that which belongs to me."

Oh, Divine Will, how very admirable, powerful and amiable you are, and (there is) highest jealousy where you reign! Oh, always put in flight my miseries, weaknesses, the clouds of my will, so that my day may be always perennial and the sky of my little soul may be always serene! But while I thought this, my amiable Jesus said to me:

"My daughter, good is light, and if this good is done in my Divine Will, so many rays form for how many good acts are done, and my Fiat fixes upon these rays of light in the circumference of his eternal light. So that these acts take post in our acts and they do (a) double office: of praise, of adorations, of perennial love toward our adorable Majesty; (and) of defense, of mercy, of help, of light toward the human generation, according to the circumstances in which found. Instead if the good acts are not done in my Will and with his power, for how much they are light they don't have the strength to enlarge themselves in order to fix upon in the circumference of our light, and they remain without supports and as broken rays and hence they don't have perennial life, and lacking the fount of light there is peril that little by little they become extinguished."

After this, following my abandonment in the Divine Volition I felt all afflicted for the privation of my sweet Jesus; his privation is like a hammer that always beats in order to aggravate the sorrow all the more, and then it ceases to beat, when the divine guest goes out from his hideaway in order to make his little visit with his beloved creature: his sweet presence, his All amiableness makes joy re-arise from the sorrow itself, and the hammer stops its cruel constant labor. But no sooner than the celestial visitor retires, then it commences its beating again, and my poor soul feels itself all eyes, all ears, for who knows he might be able to be seen and heard again, and anxious I await and re-await he who having wounded me, (for) only he holds the power to heal the wound that he has made me, alas, too sorrowful! But while I vented my sorrow, my sweet Jesus returned and embracing my poor soul said to me:

"Daughter, I am here, abandon yourself in my arms and rest in me; your abandonment in me calls my abandonment in you and forms my sweet rest in your soul. Abandonment in me forms the sweet and powerful chain that ties me so much to the soul, that I can not release myself from her, even to make myself her dear and sweet prisoner. Abandonment in me gives birth to true trust, and she has trust with me and I have trust with her; I have trust in her love that will never come to less, I have trust in her sacrifices, that will never refuse me anything of that which I want, and I have all trust that I can complete my designs. Abandonment in me says that she gives me liberty and I am free to do that which I want, and entrusting myself to her I manifest my most intimate secrets to her. Therefore, my daughter, I want you all abandoned in my arms, and how much more abandoned in me (you are), (so much) more you will feel my abandonment in you."

And I: "My love, how can I abandon myself in you if you escape me?"

And Jesus added:

"Abandonment is perfect, when seeing myself escape, abandon yourself more; this doesn't give me field to let me escape, rather it ties me more."

Then he added:

"My daughter, life, sanctity consists in two acts: God gives his Will and the creature receives him, and afterwards the life has been formed in herself with that act of Divine Will that she has received, to re-give it as act of her will, in order to receive it again; and to give and to receive, and to receive and to give, in this is everything. God could not give more of his continuous act of his Will to the creature; the creature could not give more to God, for as much as it is possible for (the) creature for his Divine Will to be received in her as formation of divine life. In this way, to give and to receive, to receive and to give, my Divine Fiat takes dominion and forms his kingdom there, and all the interior of the creature forms as the people of the Kingdom of the Divine Will: the intelligence, faithful people that glories with being directed by the Sovereign Commander of the Divine Fiat and the crowd of thoughts that press around and aspire to know always more and to love the great King, who takes a seat as enthroned in the center of the intelligence of the creature; the desires, the affections, the heartbeats that issue forth from the heart, augment the number of the people of my kingdom, and oh, how they crowd around his throne! They are all at attention in order to receive the divine orders and even to put forth life in order to execute them. What an obedient, ordered people, are the people of the Kingdom of my Fiat! There are no contentions, no dissensions, but this entire crowd of people of the interior of this fortunate creature want one thing alone, and as a trained army they put themselves in the fortress of the Kingdom of my Divine Volition.

"Whence when the interior of the creature becomes all my people, he emerges outside from the interior and augments the people of words, the people of works, of steps; it can be said that every act that this celestial people forms contains the word, the written order in gold characters: 'Will of God.' And when this crowd of people move in order to exercise each their office, they put forth the flag with the motto 'Fiat', followed by the words written with living light: 'We belong to the great King of the Supreme Fiat.' You see therefore, every creature that lets herself be dominated by my Volition forms a people for the kingdom of God."

[Semper Deo gratias e benedetta la Divina Volonta.]
Thanks be to God always and the Divine Will blessed.

*The Kingdom of the Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 30

Contents

November 4, 1931 .....	p. 1
How trust forms the arms and the feet of the soul.
How God continues the work of the creation in the soul that does his Will.
The Divine Will, cement of the human will.
November 9, 1931 .....	p. 2
How God holds the acts of creatures established. Working and incessant act of the Divine Will.
Who doesn't do the Divine Will remains without Mother and remains orphaned and abandoned.
November 16, 1931 .....	p. 4
Every act of ours is a game, a pledge in order to win celestial graces.
Our act is earth where the Divine Volition casts his seed. How love constitutes a right.
November 29, 1931 .....	p. 6
Impulse and empire of the acts done in the Divine Will.
Exchange of life between Creator and creature, sweet murmur in the Divine Being.
December 6, 1931 .....	p. 7
Good of the prolixity of the time.
How God counts the hours and the minutes in order to fill them with graces.
Who does the Divine Will breaks the veil that hides her Creator.
Kingdom of light that the Divine Will gives.
December 8, 1931 .....	p. 9
The Queen of Heaven retracer of the good acts of creatures in her seas of graces.
The immutability of God and the mutability of the creature.
December 14, 1931 .....	p. 11
One who does the Divine Will is carried between the arms of his immensity. Man, citadel of God.
Difference between one who lives and between one who does the Divine Will.
December 21, 1931 .....	p. 13
How a continued act is as judge, order and sentinel of the creature.
Who are the depositaries of Jesus. Fields and divine seas.
December 25, 1931 .....	p. 16
Desire of Jesus for the company of the creature.
Extreme need of the little Child Jesus to be loved with divine love by his celestial Mother.
January 3, 1932 .....	p. 18
Certainty of the coming of the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth.
How all the difficulties will melt as snow before an ardent Sun.
The human will is (a) dark room for the creature.
January 7, 1932 .....	p. 20
The Divine Will can be wanted, commanded, operative and completed. Example: the Creation.

January 12, 1932 .....	p. 21
Round in the Divine Will. Pledges, advances and arrangements on the part of creatures.
Capital on the part of the Creator. Echo that the Divine Will forms in creatures.
January 12, 1932 .....	p. 24
Dominant, speaking and felicitating ways of the Divine Will. How heaven remains behind.
Victory of God and victory of the creature. The Divine Will gatherer of his works.
Example of a mother that laments over her crippled child.
January 24, 1932 .....	p. 27
Every little visit of Jesus [is] bearer of celestial truths.
One who lives in the Divine Will is under the rain of the new act of God.
Example of the flower. How every act done in the Divine Will is a stair. Office of Mother.
January 30, 1932 .....	p. 29
The Divine Will: spy, sentinel, Mother and Queen.
His puff forms the knoll of love in the soul in order to enclose his truths.
Ecstasies of love of the Creator; foods that he gives to his gifts.
February 6, 1932 .....	p. 31
One who lives in the Divine Will becomes raised by God with features and divine ways.
The course in the Fiat.
The acts done in Him become put on the eternal balance and enclosed in the divine bank.
February 10, 1932 .....	p. 33
Labor of God in the soul that lives in the Divine Will.
Understanding between God and the creature.
Look-out of Jesus in order to have the company of the creature in his works.
February 16, 1932 .....	p. 34
The acts done without the Divine Will are empty of the infinite. How it is necessary to do everything and to wait for the events in order to make the Kingdom of the Divine Will come. How the acts done in Him depart for Heaven as property of the Celestial Country.
February 24, 1932 .....	p. 36
Continuous rebirths of the creature in the Divine Will.
How the creature becomes protectress of the divine works.
March 6, 1932 .....	p. 37
One who lives in the Divine Will feels the need to turn around the divine works, and how all the divine works turn around the creature. The purpose, seed of light.
March 13, 1932 .....	p. 39
The prisoner and the divine Prisoner.
The Virgin announcer, messenger, conductor of the Kingdom of the Divine Will.
One who lives in the Divine Will forms the speaking creation.
March 20, 1932 .....	p. 41
Three necessary conditions in order to obtain the Kingdom of the Divine Will.

How everyone lives in the Divine Will. Different ways of living.

March 27, 1932 .....	p. 44
Conditions of assurance for the Kingdom of the Fiat to come upon the earth. The manifestations on my Will will be (an) army trained with love, weapons, net, in order to conquer the creature.
April 2, 1932 .....	p. 46
How the divine power will put a limit to the evil of man and it will tell him: "Enough even here."
How Our Lord demonstrates with facts that he wants to give the Kingdom of his Will.
April 9, 1932 .....	p. 48
How Jesus goes molding the creation in order to make it re-arise in the new life of his truth. How only Jesus can manifest so many truths upon the Divine Will, because he possesses the source of him.
April 13, 1932 .....	p. 49
The human nature that let's itself be dominated by the Divine Will: field of his action and earth in bloom. How the Divine Will possesses inseparability.
April 23, 1932 .....	p. 50
How the creature becomes called by the Divine Will.
How many times she does her acts in Him, so many times she is reborn in his acts.
Competition between Creator and creature.
April 30, 1932 .....	p. 52
How living in the Divine Will is a gift. Example of the poor one and example of the king. How the gift is (an) excess of the love and magnanimity of God, which neither minds nor wants to keep accounts of the great value that he gives.
May 8, 1932 .....	p. 54
The creature with doing her will impedes the course to the gifts of God and if she might be able to would put him into immobility. How God in all his works gives the first post to the creature.
May 15, 1932 .....	p. 57
How the knowledges on the Divine Will will form the eye and the capacity in order to look at and receive the gift of the Divine Fiat, and to accustom creatures to live as children. Disarrangement of the human will.
May 22, 1932 .....	p. 59
Delightful scenes that the soul forms for her Creator.
The Divine Will will give the gift of infused science to the creature, which will be as divine eye.
May 30, 1932 .....	p. 61
How the Divine Will searches the act of the creature in order to form his life in her.
Difference between the Sacraments and the Divine Will.
How He is life and those are the effects of Him.
June 12, 1932 .....	p. 64
For one who lives in our Will, she finds all our works all in act and done for her.

One who lives in the Divine Will forms the office of breeze to the divine works.

June 17, 1932 ..... p. 66

How one who lives in the Divine Will encloses and works and weaves her acts with those of the Virgin and those of Our Lord, and how it forms a marriage between all things that belong to the Divine Will.

June 26, 1932 ..... p. 68

Sublimity and power of the sacrifice. How God when he wants to give a great good asks the sacrifice from the creature; example of Noah and Abraham.

June 19, 1932 ..... p. 70

Prodigies and secrets that living in the Divine Will encloses; moving scenes. Generation of the divine acts in the creature, custody and divine jealousy.

July 9, 1932 ..... p. 72

Hunger that the Divine Will produces. Life sentence of love. How God forms the persecution of love to the creature.

July 14, 1932 ..... p. 73

Celestial atmosphere, Jesus at watch of the act of the creature; labor of the one and of the other. How the acts done in the Divine Will watch and embrace the centuries and are the watchmen and the sentinels of creatures.

Volume 30

In the Will of God - Thanks be to God!
[In Voluntate Dei - Deo gratias!]

November 4, 1931

How trust forms the arms and the feet of the soul. How God continues the work of the creation in the soul that does his Will. The Divine Will, cement of the human will.

My Jesus, center and life of my little soul, my littleness is so much, that I feel the extreme need; that you, my love, hold me pressed between your arms, and (that) my great weakness moves you to pity. I am tiny and you know that the little ones, they need bands in order to reconfirm the limbs, and the milk of the mama in order to feed and to grow; and I feel the need alive, that you might wrap me with the bands of love, and pressing me to your divine breast, you give me for food the milk of your Divine Will in order to feed and to raise me. Hear, O Jesus, I feel the need of your life in order to live; I want to live of you, and then you will write(,) not I, and you can write that which you want and how you want. Therefore the assignment is yours, not mine, and I will only lend you my hand, and you will do all the rest. Thus we understand each other, O Jesus.

Whence abandoning myself in the arms of Jesus, I felt whispered in my ear(, the) sweetest(,) who said to me:

“My little daughter, how much more you will abandon yourself in me, so much more you will feel my life in you, and I will take the post of primary life in your soul. You know that true trust in me forms the arms of the soul and the feet in order to climb up even to me and to press me so very strongly as to not be able to release myself from her. So that one who doesn’t have trust has neither the arms nor feet, hence she is a poor cripple. Therefore your trust will be your victory over me, and I will hold you pressed in my arms(,) attached to my breast in order to give you the continuous milk of my Divine Will.

“Now you should know that every time that the soul does my Will I recognize myself in the creature. I recognize my works, my steps, my words, my love. It happens that the Creator recognizes himself, and his works in the creature, and the creature working in the Creator recognizes herself in him. This recognizing each other, God (and) the soul, it calls forth the first act of the creation and God goes out from his rest and continues the work of the creation with this creature that lives and works in my Volition. Because our work doesn’t end; there was only a pause for rest, and the creature with doing our Will calls us to work; but (a) sweet call, because for us work is new happiness, new joys and prodigious conquests. Hence we don’t do other than continue our outlets of love, of power, of goodness and of inarrivable wisdom, which has beginning in the creation. And the creature feels that her God doesn’t rest for her, but he continues the labor of his creative work. And as (the creature) works in our Volition, thus she feels a beginning over her soul (of) the rain of the working love of God, his power and wisdom that doesn’t remain inactive, but that he labors in her soul.

“Oh, if you might know the satisfaction, the pleasure that we feel when the creature calls us to work! With calling us she recognizes us, with calling us she opens the doors to us, gives us the dominion and gives us all the liberty to do that which we want in her soul. Hence we will do (a) work worthy of our creative hands. Therefore do not ever let our Divine Will escape, if you want that our work be continuous. He will be yours and our spokesman where you will introduce your voice in order to call us, and we will hear the sweet whisper to (our) ear and we will immediately descend in our own Volition in your soul in order to continue our work. Because you should know that continuous acts form life and complete works, that which is not continuous can be called effects of my Volition, not life that is formed in the creature, and the effects fade away little by little and she remains fasting. Hence courage and trust, and always ahead in crossing over the sea of the Divine Will.”

After this I was following the acts that my highest good Jesus had done in his Humanity when he was upon the earth, and making himself felt he added:

“My daughter, my human Will didn’t have one act of life, rather it remained in the act of receiving the continuous act of my Divine Will, that I possessed as Word of the celestial Father. Hence all the acts and sufferings, prayers, breaths, heartbeats of mine that I did, my human will undergoing the life of the Divine Will it formed so many knots in order to retie human wills to mine; and since these human wills were as residences, some collapsed, others damaged and others reduced in rubble, my Divine Will, working in my Humanity with my acts prepared the helps in order to sustain the collapsed ones, in order to cement the damaged ones and in order to raise again over the same rubble the destroyed residences. I did nothing for myself, I didn’t have any need; I did everything in order to redo, to rehabilitate human wills. My only need was love and that I wanted to be loved in return.

“Now in order to receive all my helps and all my sufferings and works as working works, speaking voices and helping messengers, the creature must unite her will to mine, and immediately she will feel herself retied with mine, and all my acts will lend themselves around (her) to do their offices in order to sustain, to cement and to raise the human will again. No sooner than she unites herself and decides to do my Divine Will(, then) all my acts as trained army put themselves at the defense of the creature, and form the safety boat in the tempestuous sea of life. But for one who doesn’t do my Will I could say that she receives nothing, nor can she receive, because He alone is the provider of all that which I did for love for the love of the creature.”

* * *

November 9, 1931

How God holds the acts of creatures established. Working and incessant act of the Divine Will. Who doesn’t do the Divine Will remains without Mother and remains orphaned and abandoned.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues. Oh, with what tenderness he awaits me in his maternal womb in order to say to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, do not leave me alone. Your Mama wants you together (with her). I want your company in the incessant work that I do for all creatures; I do everything for them, I don’t leave them one instant, because if I leave them they would lose (their) life. And yet there isn’t one who recognizes me; rather they offend me, while I am all for them. Oh, how hard solitude is! Therefore I long for you, my daughter. Oh, how dear your company is to me in my acts! Company renders work sweet, it empties the weight of it and is bearer of new joys.”

But while my mind was lost in the Divine Will, my amiable Jesus making his little visit with me said to me:

“My daughter, my Will is untiring; wanting to maintain the life, the order, the equilibrium of all the generations and of the entire universe, he can not nor does he want to cease from his work. More so that every motion is as a birth from him and tied with inseparable bonds. The air is image of (this), that while no one sees it(,) yet it gives birth to the breath in creatures and is inseparable from the human respiration. Oh, if the air might cease its work to make itself breathed, within a blow the life of all creatures would cease. More than air is my Will. That is none other than symbol, image, and that produces the life of the respiration, from the vital virtue of my Divine Volition. While my [Will] is life in himself and uncreated.

“Now God holds established all the acts of creatures and the number of the acts of them. Whence the pledge of these acts, because established by God, become taken by my Divine Will: he orders them and introduces his life within, but who gives completion to these acts established by the Supreme Being? One who cooperates and lets herself be dominated by the Divine Will, with the cooperation and with his dominion she feels the bond and the inseparability from Him. And feels flow there his divine life in her acts. While when she doesn’t cooperate she loses the dominion of my Divine Will, and instead of doing mine, she does her will and every act of human will forms a void for the divine in the soul. These voids disfigure the poor creature, and since she has been made for God, only He can fill these voids, because the established acts, their number, should serve to (be) filled with the Divine Being. Oh how horrible are these voids! One sees in them crooked ways, acts without divine beginning and without life. Therefore there is no thing that ruins the creature more, than her will.

“Whence my Will is operative and incessant act inside and outside of the creature. But who receives his operative act(?) One who recognizes him in all her acts; one who recognizes him loves him, esteems him, appreciates him(.) With being recognized, my Will makes his operative and incessant act touched with the hand, and the creature feels his arms in hers, the power of his motion in the hers, his vivifying virtue in her breath, the formation of life in the heartbeat of her heart; everywhere, from outside, from inside, [the creature] feels revived, touched, embraced, kissed by my Will. And as He sees that the creature feels his loving embraces, he presses her more to his divine bosom and goes forming his sweet chains of inseparability between Him and his beloved creature, It seems that he feels repaid with being recognized by his incessant work, and with his power he takes away the veil that hid him from the creature and makes known to her who it is that forms the life of all her acts. Therefore how much more you will recognize him, so much more will you feel how much he loves you, and you will love him more.

“Beyond this you should know that the soul without my Divine Will is like a flower gathered from the plant. Poor flower! They have taken away (it’s) life because it is not tied to the root anymore, and detached it does not receive the vital humors(,) that as blood circulated and maintained it alive, fresh, beautiful, fragrant, because it has lost the root that as mother loved it, fed it and held it pressed to its bosom. And while the root remains under earth as buried alive in order to give life to the flowers, its children, and to make them beautiful in appearance, so much so as to attract the human attention with its sweet enchantment(,) but as [the flower] becomes gathered from the plant(,) as if it might have lost the mother(,) it seems that it becomes melancholy, loses its freshness and finishes by withering.

“Such is the soul without my Divine Will. She has been detached from the divine root that more than mother loved her, fed her; and while [the Divine Will] lives as buried, he lives in all her acts and in the depth of her soul in order to administer the divine humors, that as blood circulates in all hers acts in order to maintain her fresh, beautiful, perfumed by his divine virtues, as to form the most beautiful and sweet enchantment to the earth and all heaven. Hence as [the soul] becomes detached from my Divine Will she loses her true Mama, who guarded her with so many maternal cares, held her pressed to his bosom, defended her from everyone and from everything, and she finishes with disfiguring herself and withering to all that which is good, and [souls] arrive to feel the sad melancholy because they live without He who has generated them, without life, the caresses of their Mama, so that they can be called poor abandoned little orphans without guardianship, and maybe in the hand of enemies and tyrannized by the passions in themselves. Oh, if the root might have reason, how many excruciating cries of sorrow wouldn’t it emit in seeing the life of its flowers torn away, and that they have constrained it as a sterile mother to remain without the crown of its children! But if the plant doesn’t cry, my Will cries in seeing so many of his children orphans, but voluntarily orphaned, who feel all the sufferings of being orphaned, while their Mother lives and does none other than to lament and to call the crown of his children around himself.”

* * *

November 16, 1931

Every act of ours is a game, a pledge in order to win celestial graces. Our act is earth where the Divine Volition casts his seed. How love constitutes a right.

I feel prey of the Divine Will, but not forced, but voluntary, and I feel the need alive to also make myself prey which makes me happy in time and in eternity, and therefore in all my acts I seek to make (them) prey of the light of the Divine Will, of his sanctity, of his life itself. Hence I call him, I press him in order to enrapture him in my acts in order to enclose him in them and to be able to say: “My every act is a prey and conquest that I make, prey and conquest of the Divine Will, more so that having [him] predate mine, without will I can not live. Whence it is just and right that I make prey of his, and in this predating each other it seems to me that we maintain the correspondence, the game and the love on both parts inflames itself more.”

Now while I thought this, it seemed that my sweet Jesus was delighted in feeling my blunders, and I said to myself: “After all I am little and hardly newborn, if I blunder it is not a great one, rather there is to pity, because it is easy for the little ones to blunder and many times dear Jesus delights with the blunders done for pure love, and he takes the occasion to give a little lesson, as he had done, visiting my little soul he said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, it is certain that all that which passes between the Creator and the creature, the acts that she does and that which she receives from God, serves to maintain the correspondence to know each other more in order to love each other more and to maintain the game between the one and the other in order to obtain the intent of that which God wants from the creature, and of that which she wants from God. So that every act is a game that is prepared in order to make the most beautiful conquests and to predate each other. The act serves as material in order to play (for) and as pledge in order to have something to give to one who conquers. God with giving puts forth his pledge, the creature with doing her act puts forth hers, and they establish the game, and our goodness is so much that we make ourselves weak in order to let the creature conquer. Other times we make ourselves strong and we conquer, and we do this in order put her in point/[competition], so that doing more acts she puts forth more pledges, and thus is able to conquer in order to redo some defeat. After all how could one maintain the union, if we had nothing to give and the creature had nothing to give us? You see therefore, [your] every act is a pledging to us in order to give greater graces, it is a correspondence that you open between heaven and earth, it is a game where you call your Creator to stop over with you. More so that every act done by the Divine Will in the act of the creature is a divine seed that germinates in it. The act prepares the earth where my Will casts his seed in order to make it germinate into (a) divine plant, because according to the seed that is cast in the bosom of the earth, that plant is born. If the seed is of flowers, the flower is born; if the seed is of fruit, the fruit is born. Now my Divine Will in every act of the creature casts a distinct seed: there he casts the seed of sanctity, there the seed of love, in others the seed of goodness, and so on. How many more acts [the creature] does in Him, so much more earth is prepared where my Volition prepares his distinct seed in order to fill the earth of these human acts. Whence one who lets herself be dominated by my Divine Will, is beautiful, is specious; every act of hers, containing the variety of divine seeds, is a note of her Creator: one act says sanctity, another mercy, others justice, wisdom, beauty, love; in short one sees a divine harmony, with such order, that shows the finger of God working in her. Do you see therefore the necessity of the act of the creature, in order to be able to try the earth where to enclose our divine seed? Otherwise where do we cast it? We don't hold any earth. Therefore there is [earth] formed with her acts, in order to be able to germinate with our seeds our Divine Being in the creature. Therefore one who does and lives in our Divine Volition can be called She who reproduces her Creator and lodges in herself He who has created her."

Whence I continued my acts in the Divine Volition, and my littleness wanted to embrace everything in my embrace of love in order to be able make my little love race in all things and everywhere. But while I did this, my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, to love means to possess and to want to make one's own the person or object that one loves. To love means bond, now of friendship, now of relative, now of progeny, according to more or less the intensity of love. So that if between the creature and God there is not one void of divine love, if all her acts race toward God in order to love him, if they have beginning from love and they finish in love, if she looks at all the things that belong to the Supreme Being as hers, this says love of child toward her Father, because in this way she doesn't go out neither from the divine proprieties nor from the residence of the celestial Father. Because true love constitutes a right in the creature: right of progeny, right of shared goods, right of being loved. Her every act of love is a vibrating note that palpates in the divine heart and with its sound says 'I love you', and 'love me', and the sound doesn't end if it doesn't feel the note of her Creator, who making echo to the sound of the soul he responds 'I love you, O child.' Oh, how we await the 'I love you' of the creature to make her take the post in our love, in order to have the sweet gusto in order to be able to say to her 'I love you, O child', and thus to be able to give greater right to be able to love us and to make her belong to our family. A broken love doesn't make our things hers, nor does she defend them, it can not be called love of child; at the most it can be love of friendship, love of circumstance, love of interest, love of necessity, that doesn't constitute a right, because only the children have the right to possess the goods of the Father, and the Father holds the sacrosanct duty, also with divine and human rights, to make (his) goods possessed by his children. Therefore love always, so that he finds in all your acts the love, the meeting, your kiss to your Creator."

* * *

November 29, 1931

Impulse and empire of the acts done in the Divine Will. Exchange of life between Creator and creature, sweet murmur in the Divine Being.

I feel the holy duty, the irresistible strength, the extreme necessity to live in my residence given to me by my celestial Jesus, that is his adorable Will; and if I sometimes make some little exits, oh how much they cost me, I feel that all the evils fall on me, and feeling the great contrast that there is between living in my dear residence where beloved Jesus had given me my post, and outside of him, I escape from it to take my post assigned by Him and I bless He who has given me such a happy residence and has given me the great good to make me know his most Holy Will.

But while my intelligence crossed the great sea of the Supreme Fiat, my beloved good Jesus made himself felt in my poor soul, and said to me:

"My daughter, being in the residence of my Divine Will is to be at her post of honor, given to her by God when the creature was put forth to the light of day; and one who is at her post, God doesn't let her lack anything, neither sanctity, nor light, nor strength, nor love. Indeed he puts at the disposition of the creature that which she wants to take from inside the divine source; so that she lives in the abundance of all goods.

"All the acts done in the Divine Will have the operative virtue of God, which feels itself drawn by his same power to work in the act of the creature, and therefore these acts have the virtue to throw themselves with such impetus and empire in the same sea of the Divine Will in order to move him and put him in attitude to re-double his glory and to make him work new goodness, new mercy, new love and light toward all creatures. So that [the creature] with her acts doesn't do other than to turn the divine motor in order to make him work. It is true that by Ourselves we are continuous motion that produces incessant works, but it is also true that with her doing her acts in our Volition she enters into this motion, she puts hers there, and our motion feels itself turn and move through the creature in order to produce our works. We immediately feel her act with all our works. Hence to feel her together with us with our acts is the glory, it is greatest happiness that we can receive. Does it seem little to you that we give to her the virtue to move all our Divine Being? And since we enjoy it provided that she is at her post, we let her do that which she wants, because we know for certain that she won't do (other) if not [that] which We want. All to the contrary for one who lives of human will, her acts don't have (the) divine, they are without impulse, they remain in the baseness and many times they embitter their Creator."

After this I said to myself: "Oh, how I would like [to give] to my Jesus, in order to attest my love, so many lives for how many acts I do!" And my Jesus added:

“My daughter, you should know that in every thing that the creature does, we give the act of life that goes out from us. If she thinks we give her the life of the thought of our intelligence, if she speaks we give her in her voice the life of our word. If she works the life of our works races in hers. If she walks we give the life of our steps in hers. You see, there are two acts of life that must concur in every act of creature: first the act of divine life (and) immediately the act of her. Now, if in all things that she does she does them for love of he who gives her life, an exchange of life is formed; life we give and life we receive. And for as much great difference as there is between the acts of our life and those of the creature, we however remain glorified and satisfied, because she can give us and gives to us. More so that all the acts done by her, in order to give us the exchange of life, they don't remain outside of Us, but inside of Us, as testimonial of perennial life of the creature. We feel the exchange of her life to the life that we have given her in our Divine Being. Our Volition and our love brings us the sweet murmur of the life of her thoughts to us in our intelligence, the sweet murmur of her word in our voice, her works murmur sweetly in our works, and the soft stamping of her steps, as they walk they murmur: ‘Love and testimonials of life to my Creator.’ And We in our emphasis of love say: ‘Who is it that murmurs in our Being Divine with the life of her acts? One who is in our Volition and works for our pure love.’

“But what isn't our sorrow when we give life to the acts of the creature and receive nothing. These acts of hers remain outside of us and as lost because there lacks the tide of our Volition and of our love that brings them to us; and these acts, the greatest part bring the seal of the offense of whom has given them life. Oh, if creatures might understand with clarity what it means to do their will, they would die of suffering in understanding the great evil in which they precipitate themselves and the great good that they lose with not doing our Divine Will.

“Be attentive my daughter, if you don't want to lose the eyes of the soul, that is my Will, and these lost, you yourself won't understand your great misfortune, as so many other creatures don't understand that they gambled away the Divine Will in order to do their own. But in order to do what? In order to become unhappy.”

* * *

December 6, 1931

Good of the prolixity of the time. How God counts the hours and the minutes in order to fill them with graces. Who does the Divine Will breaks the veil that hides her Creator. Kingdom of light that the Divine Will gives.

I felt oppressed for the privations of my sweet Jesus, and as tired from my long exile I thought to myself: “I would never have believed it, a life so long! Oh, if it might have been briefer, as for so many others, I would not have passed so many, but Fiat! Fiat!”

I felt that my mind wanted to blunder, therefore I have prayed to Jesus that he might help me and I have sworn that I want to always do his adorable Will. And Sovereign Jesus, dispelling the darkness that surrounded me, made his little visit to my soul and said to me with indescribable tenderness:

“Good daughter, courage. Since your Jesus wants to give you more and to receive more from you, I permit the prolixity of the time. There is no comparison that holds up between one who has given me proofs for a few years, and one for long years. A prolonged time says always more; more circumstances, more occasions, more proofs, more sufferings, and to maintain oneself faithful, constant, patient in so many circumstances, and not for a little but for a long time. Oh, how many more things it says! You should know that every hour of life under the empire of my Divine Will are new divine lives that one receives, new graces, new beauties, new ascendances near God, correspondents to new glory. By us the time is measured, that which we give, and we await the exchange of the act of the creature in order to give anew. And to the creature there is needed the time in order to digest that which we have given and hence make them take another step toward us. If nothing adds on to that which we have given, we immediately don't give, but wait for her act in order to give again.

“Whence there is nothing more great, more important, more acceptable before us, than a prolix life, piously lived. Already every hour is one proof more of love, of fidelity, of sacrifice that [the creature] has given us, and we also count the minutes so that not one of them is not filled with graces and with our divine charismas. We can count few hours with a brief life, and we can not give her great (things), because her acts are few. Therefore leave me to do, and I want that you remain content with that which I do, and if you want to be content, think that every hour of your life is a pledge of love that you give me, which will serve to pledge me to love you more. Are you not content with this?”

After this I was following my acts in the Divine Will and I felt over me the empire, his immensity that all overwhelmed me inside. And my beloved Jesus added:

“Dear daughter of my Will, living in him means to recognize his paternity, and feeling as daughter [the creature] wants to be held bound on her Father's knees, and living in his house, and with right. Because her birth is recognized, that [the Father] has generated with so much love and given forth to the light, and at all the other things are looked at as extraneous and without the sweet bond neither of Paternity, nor progeny. Hence she sees with clarity that with going out from the house of her Father she will be a lost daughter, that won't even have a den where to be able to form her residence.

“Behold therefore, one who does and lives in my Divine Volition breaks the veils of our Power and finds her Creator who loves her powerfully and draws his creature with his Power to make himself powerfully loved, tearing the veil. She found the sanctuary of the divine power and does not fear anymore, because if [the Creator] is powerful, he is powerful in order to love her and to make himself loved. And loving with powerful love, [the creature] plays a game and breaks the veil of the divine wisdom, of goodness, of mercy, of love and of justice, and finds as so many divine sanctuaries that wisely love her, and with a goodness most tender and excessive united to mercy unheard of. They love her, [and she] finds the love regurgitating that immensely loves her, and being (that) the Divine Being orders that he loves with justice, and the creature passing from one sanctuary to the other, not outside but inside of these veils, she feels the reflections of her Creator and she loves him wisely, with goodness and tenderness, united to mercy, that her God not having need of, he turns it to the good of all the generations, and she feels the love that regurgitates in her bosom, oh, how she would like to melt into love in order to love him! But justice conserving her gives her, for how much it is possible for a creature, the just love and the confirmation in life.

“My daughter, how many things these veils hide of our divine qualities, but it is given to no one to break these veils if not to one who does and lives in our Volition. She alone is the fortunate creature who doesn't see her God veiled but as he is in himself. Since we are not recognized (for) what we are in ourselves, they have ideas so base and perhaps also twisted of our Supreme Being, and this is because not having our Will in themselves they don't feel in themselves the life of He who has created them; they touch our veils, but not that which there is inside, and therefore they feel our power as oppressive, our light as eclipsing as in the act of removing them from us and putting them at a distance. They feel our veiled sanctity that makes them ashamed, and disheartened they live immersed in their passions, but the guilt is all theirs. Because there is a sentence said by us in the terrestrial paradise: 'Here she doesn't enter. This place is only for one who does and lives in our Will', and hence the first creatures were put out, we put an angel at watch so that he might prevent them from the entrance. Our Will is paradise of creatures, terrestrial in earth and Celestial in heaven, and one can say that an angel is put at watch over it; to one who doesn't want to do and doesn't want to live in his arms and have common life in his residence, she would be an intruder if she would do this, but she can not even do it, because our veils make themselves so very thick that she would not find the way in order to enter there. And as one Angel forbids them the entry, thus another Angel guides and gives the hand to one who wants to live of our Will.

"Therefore be content to die a thousand times, rather than not do our Will. You should know that He is all eyes over the happy creature that wants to live of Him; and as [the creature] does her acts, thus [the Divine Will] makes for her his bath of divine light. This bath refreshes and makes them feel the divine refreshments, and since as the light forms itself, thus it produces in its nature, hidden inside of its veils of light, fecundity, sweetness, tastes, colors so that while apparently it seems only light, inside (is) hidden so many beautiful riches and innumerable qualities that no other element can say it is similar to it. Rather it is from the light that [the elements] implore the fecundity and the good that every element must do in the order in which it has been put by God. One can call the soul the light of created things, symbol of our uncreated light of our Divine Fiat that animates everything. Where with this bath of divine light, while she is about to do her acts in Him, the soul feels itself sweetened, molded, embalmed, strengthened, purified and invested with the beautiful rainbow of the divine colors, that make the soul so very graceful, specious and beautiful, that God himself feels enraptured with a beauty so rare. This bath of light is as the preparation in order to be able to cross over the thresholds and to break the veil that hides our Divine Being from human creatures. More so that it is our interest that (for) one who lives in our Volition she resembles us and she might not do something that is unworthy of our Majesty three times Holy.

"Therefore think that a bath of light gives you my Will, every time that you dispose yourself to do your acts in his interminable light, so be attentive to receive it."

* * *

December 8, 1931

The Queen of Heaven retracer of the good acts of creatures in her seas of graces. The immutability of God and the mutability of the creature.

I follow my abandonment in the Divine Fiat. His sweet chains squeeze me so much, but not in order to take away liberty from me, no, no, but in order to make me more free in the divine fields and in order to hold me defended from everyone and from everything. So that I feel more secure chained by the Divine Will. And while I did my acts in him, I felt the need of my celestial Mama that she might help me and that she might sustain my little acts, so that they might be able to meet the divine satisfaction and smile. And the celestial Comforter, who knows how to deny me nothing when one tries to please him, visiting my poor soul said to me:

“My daughter, our celestial Mama holds the primacy over all the good acts of creatures. She as Queen holds the mandate and the right to make the retreat of all the acts of them in her acts. So much is her love as Queen and Mother, that as the creature disposes herself to form her act of love, thus from the heights of her throne, she makes a ray of her love descend, invests and surrounds the act of love of them in order to put there hers as first love, and as it is formed, thus it re-arises in her same ray of love, in the source of her love, and she says to her Creator: ‘Adorable majesty, in my love that always rises for you, there is the love of my children fused in mine, that I with right of Queen have withdrawn in my sea of love, so that [you] might be able to find in mine, the love of all creatures.’

“If they adore, if they pray, if they repair, if they suffer, the ray of adoration descends From the heights of her throne, the ray of her prayer, the ray of her reparation, she emits the vivifying ray from within the sea of her sorrows, and she invests and surrounds the adoration, the prayer, the reparation, the sufferings of the creature; and [when] they have done and formed the act, the same ray of light re-arises even to her throne and they fuse themselves in the sources of the seas of adoration, of prayer, of reparation, of sorrows of the celestial Mama, and she repeats: ‘Most Holy Majesty, my adoration extends itself in all the adorations of creatures, my prayer prays in the prayer of them, it repairs with their reparations, and as Mother my sorrows invest and surround their sufferings. I wouldn’t feel (as) Queen if I didn’t race and put my first act over all of their acts, nor would I taste the sweetness of Mother if I didn’t race in order to surround, to help, to make up for, to embellish, to strengthen all the acts of the creature, and thus be able to say: “the acts of my children are one with mine, I hold them in my power I press God in order to defend them, to help them, and as sure pledge that they will reach me in heaven.”’

“Hence, my daughter, you are not ever alone in your acts, you have the Celestial Mama together with you, who not only surrounds you, but with her light of her virtues she feeds your act in order give them life. Because you should know that the Sovereign Queen, even from her Immaculate Conception, was the first and only creature that formed the ring of conjunction between the Creator and the creature, broken by Adam. She accepted the divine mandate to bind God and men, and she bound them with her first acts of fidelity, of sacrifice, of heroism, to make her will die in every act of hers, not once, but always, in order to (make) live again that of Gods. From this sprang forth a source of divine love that cemented God and man and all their acts, so that her acts, her maternal love, her dominion as Queen, is cement that races, that cements the acts of creatures in order to make them inseparable from hers, except some ungrateful one who refuses to receive the cement of the love of her Mama. Hence you should be convinced that around your patience there is the patience of the Queen Mama, that surrounds, sustains and feeds yours; around your sufferings, her sorrows surround you, that sustain and feed like balsamic oil the hardness of your sufferings; in short in everything. She is the busybody Queen that doesn’t know how to remain in idleness upon her throne of glory, but descends, races as Mother in the acts, [in] the needs of her children. Therefore thank her for her so many maternal solitudes and thank God that he has given to all the generations a Mother so holy, amiable, that loves so much that she arrives to do as re-tracer of all the their acts, in order to cover them with hers, and in order to make up for that which lacks in them of beauty and of good.”

Whence I continued my usual round in created things, in order to follow that which the Divine Will had done in it; and oh, how beautiful and enchanting it seemed to me! Every time that I turn there in it, I find surprises that enrapture me, novelty that before I had not understood; the ancient and the new love of God that is never mute. But while my mind wandered in the horizons of the Creation, my amiable Jesus surprising me added:

“My little daughter of my Volition, how beautiful are our works, is it not true? Everything is solidity from changing itself, nor can it transform itself. You see therefore, the Creation says all and reveals our Divine Being, our solidity in our works, our equilibrium and universality in all things, and for how many pleasing and displeasing things that can happen, our immutability always remains at its post of honor. We have changed nothing from how [the creation] was created, and if the creature sees and feels so many manifold changes, it is she that changes, transforms at every circumstance and since she is changing herself inside and outside, she feels as if our works change for her: they are her changes that surround her that have the strength to remove her from our immutability. All is continued and balanced in us. That which we did in the Creation continues still, and since everything was done for one who should live of our Will, as the creature puts herself in order with Him, our creative work develops his continued act in her, and [the creature] feels the life of our immutability, the perfect equilibrium of our works, our love that always loves her without ever ceasing. Where we find our Will we continue the work of our creation, not because ours becomes interrupted because she doesn’t do our Will, no, no, there is no peril; it is because there lacks in them the reason why they were created, that is to do our Will, and hence they don’t have eyes in order to look at our perfect equilibrium, that remains over them in order to balance their works and to make them immutable together with our immutability, nor ears in order to hear what our works say, nor hands in order to touch them and to receive our continuous love that we offer them, therefore (creatures) themselves make themselves as estranged from the house of their Celestial Father, and our acts continue, they make their course, but for them (the acts) remain as suspended and without effects.”

* * *

December 14, 1931

One who does the Divine Will is carried between the arms of his immensity. Man, citadel of God. Difference between one who lives and between one who does the Divine Will.

I am always re-turning in the Divine Volition. It seems that my little soul takes its flight in his light, in order to consume itself and to lose my life in him. But what? While I am consumed, I re-arise to new love, to new light, to new knowledge, to new strength, to new union with Jesus, and with his Divine Will. Oh, happy resurrection that carries so much good to my soul! It seems to me that my soul in the Divine Will is always in the act of dying, in order to receive true life and form the resurrection of my will in his little by little.

Whence my highest good Jesus visiting my little soul said to me:

“My daughter, our Will is the first point and the immovable and unshakable support of the creature.

She becomes carried between the arms of our immensity, in a way that inside and outside of her nothing vacillates, but everything is firmness and insurmountable fortitude. Therefore we don't want other than that she does our Divine Will, in order to find in the depth of her soul our divine sanctuary, that hearth that always burns and never goes out, the light that forms the divine and perennial day. And since our Will, when he reigns in the creature, he frees himself of all that which is human, hence it happens that from the center of her soul she gives us divine acts, divine honors, prayers and divine love that possess invincible fortitude and insurmountable love. So much so that as you in my Volition wanted to embrace all the works those that are in Heaven and of the creatures that are in earth, so that everyone might ask that the Divine Will be done as in Heaven so in earth, all the works remained marked by the great honor of asking that my Fiat be the life of every creature and that he reign and dominate. And our Divinity received the greatest honor: that all works might ask for the life, the Kingdom of the Divine Will. Not one rescript of grace is conceded by us, if it is not signed by the gold signature of our Volition; the doors of Heaven are not opened, if not to one who wants to do our Will; our paternal knees are not adapted to take her in our arms, in order to make her rest in our loving bosom, if not to one who comes as daughter of our Volition.

“Behold therefore the great diversity that our Supreme Being held in creating the sky, the sun, the earth and so on, from that of creating man. In created things he put forth an enough, in a way that they can neither grow nor decrease, although he put there all our sumptuousness, beauty and magnificence of the works gone forth from our creative hands. Instead in creating man, having to hold our seat in him and hence our dominant and working Will, he didn't put forth an enough; no, but he gave (man) the virtue to do a multiplicity of works, of steps, of words, one different from the other. Our Will in man would remain impeded if it might not give him the virtue to always do new works, [making him] not subject to do one work alone, to say the same word, to move his steps over a single way. He was created by us as king of the creation, because his Creator having to live in him, the King of the kings, it was just that he who formed the residence to our Divine Being should be the little king who should dominate the same things created by us; and he himself for our love should hold the power to do not one work alone but many works, new sciences, in order to be able to begin new things, also in order to do honor to He who lives inside him, and who holding himself back with him in familiar conversation, taught him so many beautiful things to do and to say. Therefore our love in creating man was insuperable, but so much so that it should overwhelm all the centuries in order to give love and to ask love and to form in him the Kingdom of our Divine Will. We don't have other goal over creatures nor other sacrifice, if not that they do our Will and this in order to give him the right of king over himself and created things, and in order to be able to live in him, with the decorum and honor of ours, that belongs to our citadel and palace.”

After this, following my abandonment in the Divine Volition, my beloved Jesus added:

“My good daughter, you should know that our Will holds his life, his dominion, his seat, his center in our Divine Being; he forms one thing alone with us and our life itself; from his center he emanates his full rays of his life that fill Heaven and earth. Now [for] one who lives in our Volition, her acts become formed in the center of his life, that is in our Divine Being. Instead one who only does our Will, she also does good, but she doesn't live in Him. Her acts are formed in the rays that emanates from his center. There is difference between one who can work in the light that the sun spreads from the center of its sphere and between one who can climb in its center of light. This one would feel the consummation of her being and the revival of her being in that center of light, in a way that it would prove difficult for her to be detached from within that sphere of light. Instead the others that work in the light that fills the earth, don't feel the intense strength of the light that consumes them nor do they re-arise in the same light; in spite that she does good, she remains that (which) she is. Such is the difference between one who lives and one who does my Will. Hence how many acts [the soul] does in Him, so many times she re-arises to divine life and consumes and dies to that which is human. How very beautiful are these resurrections in the soul! It is enough to say that they are formed by the wisdom and mastery of the Divine Craftsman, and this says all, all the beauty and all the good that we can do with the creature."

* * *

December 21, 1931

How a continued act is as judge, order and sentinel of the creature. Who are the depositaries of Jesus. Fields and divine seas.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues, his power imposes itself over me, and wants that I recognize him in my every act as life of my act, in order to be able to extend with his power the new heavens of beauty, of love, in order to be able to recognize in my act his act, that he doesn't know how to do little but great things, that should arouse wonder to all heaven and to be able to make competition with all his works. Instead if I don't recognize him, my act doesn't lend itself to receive the power of the act of the Divine Will, and my act remains act of a creature and his power remains apart. Oh, Divine Will, make that I always recognize you, in order to be able to enclose in my act your working and glorifying potentiality of the works of your adorable Will!

Whence while I thought this, my beloved Jesus made his brief little visit to my poor soul and said to me:

"My daughter, recognizing that which my Will can do in the act of the creature forms the divine act in it, and in this act as base [the Divine Will] puts there the divine beginning, and as he goes forming it thus he invests it with his immutability, in a way that the creature will feel in her act a divine beginning that never indicates an end and an immutability that never changes, she will feel in herself the sound of the bell of his continued act that makes its continuous course. This is the sign if the soul has received in her acts the divine beginning: the continuation; a prolix act says that God lives in her and in her acts, it says confirmation of the good. Because so much is the value, the grace, the powers of a continued act, that it fills the little empty voids with (an) intensity of love, the little weaknesses that the human nature is subject to. One can say that an act, a continued virtue is like the judge, the order, the sentinel of the creature. Therefore I hold so much (importance) that your acts are continuous, because there is mine inside and I would feel my act dishonored in yours.

"You see, my daughter, so much is my vent of love that I want all that which I have done for love of the creature recognized but this for none other than in order to give. I feel a yearning to give; I want to form the depositaries of my life, of my works, of my sufferings, of my tears, of everything. But these don't depart from me if they are not recognized. Not recognizing them prevents my step to approach in order to deposit in them that which with so much love I want to give, and then they would remain without effects, they would be as so many blind ones that don't see that which is around them. Instead the knowledge is the sight to the soul, that makes the desire and the love arise and hence the gratitude toward me that I so very want to give, and with jealousy [souls] guard my treasure deposited in them and in the circumstances they make use of my Life for guide, of my works in order to confirm their works, of my sufferings for support of their sufferings and my tears in order to wash them if they are stained, and oh, how content I am that they make use of me and of my works in order to help themselves! This was my purpose in coming upon the earth, in order to remain as (the) little brother in the midst of them and inside of them for help in their needs. As they recognize me, I don't do other than to reflect in them in order to seal the good that they have known, almost like Sun that with reflecting its light on the plants and on the flowers it communicates the substance of sweetness and colors, not apparently, but in reality. Whence if you want to receive much, seek to know that which my Will did and does in the Creation and that which he did in the Redemption, and I will enlarge you and I will deny you nothing of that which I make you know. Rather, know [that] if I don't yet stop dealing with you as Teacher, in order to make you know so many other things that pertain to me, it is because I want to still give you that which I make you know. I would not remain content if I might not have something to give, and always new things to give to my daughter.

“Therefore I wait with anxiety that you put that which you have known at post in your soul, so that you might consider it as your thing, and while you put it at post, in order to give you help to put it forth I go caressing you, molding, strengthening you, enlarging your capacity, in short I renew that which I did in the Creation of the first creature. More so that being my things that you have known and that I want to deposit in you, I don't want to entrust myself to anyone, not even you; I want I myself with my own creative hands to prepare the post and deposit them in you, and in order to hold them secure I surround (them) with my love, with my fortitude, and my light for watch. Hence be attentive do not let anything escape, and thus you will give me the time/[field] to be able to make you the most beautiful surprises.”

After this, my little intelligence continued to cross the interminable sea of the Divine Will, and my Highest Good Jesus added:

“My daughter, we have fields and interminable divine seas; these are full of joys, of beatitudes, of enchanting beauty of every kind, and they possess the virtue to always make new joys and beauties arise that one doesn't resemble the other; but however in these seas and divine fields of ours, for how many things and innumerable beatitudes there are, we don't have life that palpates, while we are ourselves life and heartbeat of all, even of our joys. There lacks the heartbeat of the creature that palpates in ours and as life fills these fields and interminable seas of ours. Now do you want to know who brings us her life? Not one new thing, of them we have so many! (But) one who comes to live in our Will, because He overflowing from us forms for us our fields and divine seas, full of all possible and imaginable happinesses. And the creature comes in them as life, and we have the great contentment and the great glory that she can give us a life. And although this life went forth from us, but she is free to be or not to be in our divine fields; and she loses, sacrifices her human liberty and in our Will takes divine liberty, and as life lives in our fields and seas without confines. And oh, how beautiful it is to see this life that makes herself the breadth in the midst of the pressed crowds of our happinesses and joys and there casts her seed, her grain of wheat, image of her will that forms there its ear, so very tall, but in reality and [not] as apparent, of palpating and working life in our celestial field; or yet as a little fish, also symbol of her will that as life palpates, swims in our sea, lives and feeds itself, is amused, makes a thousand games and recreates/amuses her Creator, not as joy, but as life. There is great difference between those that can give us our joys and those that can give us a life.

“Behold therefore we can say [that] our fields are deserted, our seas are without fishes, because there lacks the life of creatures in order to fill them for us, in order to be able to give and to receive life for life; but the time will come when they will be full, and we will have the full contentment and the great glory that in the midst of our numerous joys [we will have] (a) multitude of life, that will live inside of these fields and they will give us life for life. Now you should know that these fields and seas of ours are at the disposition of those that live in earth and that want to have our Divine Will for life, not for those that live in Heaven, because those are not able to add on even one comma more to that which they have done. These are pleasure-loving life in our divine fields, not the working life. One can say of them, that which [they have] done is done. Instead it is the working and conquering lives of earth that we long for, and that while they are in earth they enter in these fields of ours and work and do as conquerors in (a) divine way. Much more so that [when] man sinned, he went out from inside of our Will, and the doors were closed to him with justice from these fields of ours. Now we want to open these doors of ours after so many centuries to one who wants to enter, not to force her, but freely, in order to make these divine fields of ours populated, in order to give a new form, a way of life all new to the creature, and to be able to receive not works from her, but in her every act life formed in our same life.

“Behold therefore the reason for my speaking so much on my Will (with) the strength of my creative word. It will dispose them, it will give them the desire, it will change the human will, and knowing that I want to open the doors they will knock, and I will open them immediately, so that I myself remain satisfied and have my fortunate people in which I will give myself to, for the exchange of my life that I have given for them, their life in exchange for mine. I have never spoken without having something or in vain. I spoke in the Creation and my word served in order to form the admirable things of the whole universe; I spoke in the Redemption and my word, my Gospel serves as guide to my Church, as light, as support. One can say that my word is the substance and my palpating life in the womb of the Church. Now if I have spoken and still speak on my Divine Will, it won't be in vain, no, but I will make the admirable effects and the life of my Will known, working and palpating in the midst of creatures. Hence leave me to do, and I will dispose things in a way that my word won't be (a) dead word, but alive, that will give life with all its admirable effects.

“More so that these fields and celestial seas of ours will act as Mother to the fortunate souls that want to live in them, they will educate them in (the) divine way, they will feed them with dainty foods taken from the celestial table and they will raise them in a noble and holy way, that in all their acts, steps and words one will see written in clear notes, they are similar to their Creator. God will feel the melody of his voice in the word of them, his power in their works, his sweet motion of steps that race near everyone because he wants them to himself, in the steps of them, and as enraptured he will say: ‘Who is it that resembles me? Who knows how to imitate my sweet, harmonious and strong voice as to be able to shake Heaven and earth? Who holds so much strength as to enrapture me in her works, in order to make me work together with her? Who is it? Who is it? Ah! It is (she) who lives in our divine fields. It is just that she resembles us in all, for how much it is possible to a creature. She is our daughter, and it is enough. We allow that she imitates us, that she resembles us. She will be our glory, our creative work, the longed for one of her celestial Father!’ These souls will form the new hierarchy in their Celestial Country, where there is a post reserved for them, that to no one else is it given to occupy.”

* * *

December 25, 1931

Desire of Jesus for the company of the creature. Extreme need of the little Child Jesus to be loved with divine love by his celestial Mother.

I feel as inundated by the sea of light of the Divine Will. Oh, how I would indeed like to be the little fish in this sea, in a way as to not see, touch, breathe but light, alive with light! Oh, how happy I would be to hear said to me that I am the daughter of the Celestial Father! But while I thought this and other, the dear of my life, the sweet and Sovereign Jesus, visiting my little soul made himself seen that from within his adorable Person went forth a sea of interminable light and from inside of it went forth souls that populated the earth and all Heaven; and Jesus calling me said to me:

“My daughter, come into this light, I want you here. The virtue of my light, his motion as font of life, do as none other than to issue forth, from within his womb of light, souls, that is life of the creature. His power is so much, that as he moves himself (the) soul springs forth, and I want my dear together with me in the bosom of my light, that is of my Will, because as souls become formed and issue forth, I don’t want to be alone, but I want your company, so that you recognize the great portent of the creation of souls, our excessive love. And since I want you in my Will, I want to deposit them in you, to entrust them to you, to not leave them alone while pilgrims (on) the earth, but to hold one who protects and defends them together with me. Oh, how sweet is the company of one who takes care of the lives (that) go forth from me! It is so very pleasant to me, that I make one who lives in my Will depositary of the creation of souls, channel through which I make them go forth to the light and channel in order to make them reenter into the Celestial Country; I want to give everything to one who wants to live in my Fiat. Their company is necessary to my love, to my vents and to my works, because they need to be recognized. To act and to not be recognized are as works that don’t know any triumph, nor [do they] sing victory and glory. Therefore do not deny me your company, you would deny your Jesus a vent of love, and my works would lack the cortege and the satisfaction of the creature and they would remain as isolated works, and my contained love would be changed into justice.”

After this I was thinking of the birth of the little baby Jesus, especially in the act when he went forth from the Maternal bosom, and the Celestial Infant said to me:

“Dearest daughter, you should know that I had no sooner issued forth from the bosom of my Mama, (and) I felt the need of love and divine affection. I left my Celestial Father in the Empyrean, we loved each other with love all divine; everything was divine between the divine Persons: affections, sanctity, power and so on. Now I didn’t want to change ways coming upon the earth. My Divine Will prepared for me the Divine Mother in a way that I had (the) Divine Father in Heaven and (the) divine Mother in earth; and as I went forth from the Maternal bosom, feeling (the) extreme need of these divine affections, I raced into the arms of my Mama in order to receive her divine love as first food, first breath, first act of life to my little Humanity, and she issued forth the seas of divine love that my Fiat had formed in her, and she loved me with divine love as my Father in Heaven loved me. And oh, how content I was! I found my Paradise in the love of my Mama. Now you know that true love never says enough, if it might be able to say enough it would lose the nature of true divine love. And therefore even from the arms of my Mother, while I took food, breath, love, the Paradise that She gave me, my love extended itself, it made itself immense, embraced the centuries, traced, raced, called, was delirious, because it wanted the divine daughters; and my Will in order to quiet my love presented to me the divine daughters, that with the passing of the centuries would have formed for me. And I looked at them, embraced them, loved them and received the breath of their divine affections. And I saw that the divine Queen would not remain alone, but would have had the generation of mine and of her divine daughters. My Will knows how to change and to give the transformation and to form the noble graft from human into divine. Therefore when I see you work in Him, I feel myself give and repeat the Paradise that my Mama gave me when (as) little baby she received me in her arms. Therefore one who does and lives in my Divine Will makes arise and forms the sweet and beautiful hope that his kingdom will come upon the earth and [I feel happy] in the Paradise of the creature that my Fiat has formed in her.”

And while my mind continued to think (of) that which Jesus had said to me, (and) with a most intense and tender love he added:

“My good daughter, our love races continually toward the creature. Our loving motion doesn’t ever cease racing in the beat of the heart, in the thoughts of the mind, in the breath of the lungs, in the blood that circulates, it races, it always races and revives with our note and motion of love, the heartbeat, the thought, the breath, and wants the meeting of the palpating love with the loving breath, with the thought that receives and gives us love. And while our love races with inarrivable rapidity, the love of the creature does not meet with ours, it remains behind and doesn’t follow the course of our love that races without ever ceasing; and not seeing us it does not even follow, while we continue to turn in the heartbeat, in the breath, in the whole being of the creature, delirious we exclaim: ‘Our love is neither known nor received nor loved by the creature, and if she receives it it is without knowing him. Oh, how hard it is to love and to not be loved!’ And yet if our love might not race, at that instant the life of them would cease. It would happen as with a clock: if there is the cord, it makes heard its tic, tic, and admirably marks the hours and the minutes, and serves to maintain the order of the day, the public order. If the cord stops, the tic, tic is heard no more, it remains stopped as without life, and there can be many disorders because the clock doesn’t run.

“The cord of the creature is my love, that as this celestial cord races, the heart beats, the blood circulates, it forms the breath; [these] can be called the hours, the minutes, the instants of the clock of the life of the creature; and in seeing that if I don’t make the cord of my love race they can not live, and yet I am not loved. My love continues its course, but assumes sorrowful and delirious love.

“Now who will take away this sorrow from us and will sweeten our loving delirium? One who will hold our Divine Will for life. He as life will form the cord in the heartbeat, in the breath and thus with the succession of the creature, she will form the sweet enchantment with our love, and our cord and theirs will walk in even steps. Our continuous tic will be followed by their tic, and our love won’t be alone anymore in racing, but will make the course together with the creature. Therefore I don’t want other than my Will; my Will in the creature.”

* * *

January 3, 1932

Certainty of the coming of the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth. How all the difficulties will melt as snow before an ardent Sun. The human will is (a) dark room for the creature.

My abandonment continues in the Divine Fiat, but I felt worried by the thought: “How can this Kingdom of the Divine Will ever come? Sin abounds, evil worsens, creatures seem indisposed to me to receive a good so great, so much so that there is no soul, for how many good ones there might be, who truly wants to occupy themselves to make known that which regards the Divine Will. If God does not work a prodigy with his omnipotence, the Kingdom of the Divine Fiat can remain in Heaven, but for the earth it is useless to think of it. But while I thought this and other, my beloved Jesus, making his usual visit to my soul said to me:

“My daughter, everything is possible to us. Impossibilities, difficulties, insurmountable cliffs of creatures melt before our Supreme Majesty, as snow now opposite to an ardent Sun; everything is in if we want it; all the rest is nothing. Didn’t it happen thus in the Redemption? Sin abounded more than ever, (there was) hardly a little nucleus of people that longed for the Messiah, and in the midst of this nucleus how many hypocrisies, how many sins of all kinds, often idolatry. But it was decreed that I should come upon the earth. Before our decrees all the evils can not impede that which we want to do. One single act of our Will glorifies us more than all the evils and sins that creatures commit offend us, because our act of Will is divine and immense, and in his immensity he embraces all eternity, all the centuries, he extends himself to everyone. Hence is it not of our infinite Wisdom to not give life to one single act of our Will for the evils of creatures. We put forth from our divine side and we do that which we must do, and we leave creatures in their human side, and we do as Sovereign; we dominate everything and everyone, even over evil, and we put forth our decrees.

“Now as my coming upon the earth was our decree, thus is decreed our Kingdom of our Will upon the earth. Rather it can be said that the one and the other are one single decree, [and] that having completed the first act of this decree, there remains the second to complete. It is true that we hold (necessary) the good dispositions of creatures, in order to give the great good that an act of our Will can produce, and therefore at the most we take time and we make our way in the midst of their evils in order to dispose them.

“It is true that the times are sad, the people themselves are tired. They see all the ways closed, they don’t find a way of exit even for the necessary natural means. The oppressions, the demands from the heads are unbearable, just suffering that they have elected for heads men without God, of evil life, without just right to be heads, that they merit a jail more than the law of the regime. Many thrones and empires have been upset and those few that have remained are all shaky ones and in the act of being overthrown, so that the earth will remain almost without king, in the hand of iniquitous men. Poor people, my poor children, under the regime of men without pity, without heart and without graces to be able to act as guide to their dependents. The epoch of the Jewish people is already being repeated, that when I was near coming upon the earth they were without king, and were under the dominion of a foreign empire (of) barbaric and idolatrous men, that didn’t even know their Creator. And yet this was the sign of my imminent coming in the midst of them. Between that epoch and this in many things they give each other a hand, and the disappearance of the thrones and empires is the announcement that the Kingdom of my Divine Will is not far off. Having to be a universal, pacific kingdom, there won't be need of king that dominates, everyone will be king of himself. My Will will be for them law, guide, support, life and absolute King of everyone and of each one, and all the arbitrary heads and without right will go into splinters as dust in the wind.

“Indeed the nations will continue to struggle between themselves, some for war, some for revolution, between themselves and against my Church. They have a fire that devours them in the midst of them, that doesn't give them peace, and they don't know how to give peace; it is the fire of sin and the fire of doing without God that gives them no peace, and they will never have peace if they don't call God in the midst of them as regime and bond of union and peace. And I allow them to do it, and I will make them touch with (their) hand what it means to do without God. But this doesn't impede that the Kingdom of my Supreme Fiat comes. This is all stuff of the creature, of the base world, that my power when it wants to knock down and disperses, and makes arise from the tempest the most serene Sky/Heaven and the most brilliant Sun. Instead the Kingdom of my Divine Will is of the heights of Heaven, formed and decreed in the midst of the Divine Persons, no one can touch it nor disperse it. First we will deal with one single creature, forming the first kingdom in her, then with a few, and then making use of our omnipotence we will spread it everywhere.

“Be certain, do not worry that the evils worsen; our power, our conquering love that holds the virtue to always conquer, our Will who can do all and who with unconquered patience knows how to wait even centuries. But that which he wants, he must do, it is worth more than all the evils of creatures. His invincible power and his infinite value, will be as drops of water. The evils of them as so many nothings that will serve to the triumph of our love and the greater glory of our completed Will. And then when we will have the great glory to form this kingdom inside of one single creature, she will be as Sun so that all have the right to enjoy and to possess. Her light more than Sun will give the right to all creatures to make a kingdom so holy possessed. And we with infinite Wisdom will abound with graces, with light, with helps, with surprising means, so that they might make the Kingdom of my Will reign in the midst of them. Therefore leave me to do it. When Jesus has told you, it is enough; it is as already done. Together all evils and all creatures have neither power nor right over our Will, nor can they impede one single act of our wanted Will with decrees of our Wisdom.”

Whence I followed to think of the Divine Fiat and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, my Will is light, the human will is the dark room in which the poor creature lives. As my Volition enters in this dark room, thus it remains all invested by this light that illuminates it all, even the most remote and little hideaways of the soul. [My Will] makes himself light of the thought, of the word, of the works, of the steps, but with a marvelous diversity. The thoughts take a variety of colors animated by the light, the word takes another variety of colors, the action, the step other varieties of colors; and as [the creature] repeats the thought, the word, the action, the step animated by the light of my Will, thus the shades of the divine colors are formed, and the beauty is that all the colors are animated by the light. Oh, how beautiful it is to see the creature animated by the rainbow of our divine colors! It is one of the most beautiful scenes that he presents to us and lets us enjoy. We look at her and we see that they are none other than the reflections of our thoughts, of our actions, and so on, that has formed the variety of our divine colors, it is our Will that makes a display of light in the acts of the creature, that with his sweet enchantment enraptures us and makes us spectator of our acts. And oh, how we wait with all love the repetition of these scenes so beautiful and delightful!”

* * *

January 7, 1932

The Divine Will can be wanted, commanded, operative and completed. Example: the Creation.

My following the Divine Volition continues; I always feel him over me in the act of enclosing himself in my acts in order to have the contentment of saying to me:

“Your act is mine, because inside there is my life that has formed it.”

It seems to me that with an unconquered patience, but loving, sweet, amiable patience, that enraptures my poor soul. [The Divine Volition] observes, numbers when I should work, move the step and other, in order to enclose his working life and the movement of his step in mine, as if he might want to imprison himself in my act, although he remains immense as he is. But who can say that which I experience and feel under the empire of the Divine Will? I am always the tiny little ignorant one that hardly knows how to say (the) “a, b, c’s”, of the Divine Will. In many things I lack the words, and while my mind is full, and who knows how many things I would like to say, yet I go to speak and I don’t find the words to express myself, and therefore I pass on.

Whence my sweet Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My daughter, my Will holds surprising and different ways of acting, and he acts according to the dispositions of creatures. Many times he makes known that which he wants, but he leaves the doing and the not doing at the disposition of creatures, and this is called wanted Will. Other times to the wanting (Will) he adds the commanding (Will), and gives double graces in order to make the command followed, and this is for all Christians; this not doing means not to even be Christians. The other way is operative (Will), he descends in the act of the creature and works as if the act of the creature might be his act, and therefore as his act he puts there his life, his sanctity, his operative virtue; but in order to arrive to this the soul must be accustomed to the wanted and commanded Will. This prepares the void in the human act in order to receive the working act of the Divine Fiat. But he does not stop: the working act calls the completed act, and the completed act is the most holy act, most powerful, most beautiful, most brilliant with light, that my Divine Will can do. And being his completed act, all that which he has done becomes enclosed in this act in a way that one sees flow and enclosed in it the Sky, the Sun, the stars, the sea, the Celestial beatitude, everything and everyone.”

And I, as surprised: “But how can it be that a single act can enclose everything? It seems incredible.”

And Jesus added: “What incredible! Can my Will perhaps not do everything and enclose everything, as much in the great as in the littlest act? You should know that in the completed acts of my Will (there) enters the inseparability of all that which he has done and will do; otherwise it would not be one act alone, but it would remain subject to (an) ascension of acts, that which can not be neither in our Divine Being nor in our Will; and then the Creation is a palpable example. All created things are inseparable between themselves, but distinct the one from the other. Look at the Sky, completed act of the Fiat, (while) above it acts as footstool to the Celestial Country, where all happiness and joys race, occupied by all. Angels and Saints, and we form our throne. That same Sky forms the azure vault above the heads of creatures, and in the same space are seen the multitude of stars, but they do not extend themselves more than beyond the Sky. More in base there is the Sun, the wind, the air, the sea, but under that same space of the sky. And while each one does its office, so much is their inseparability, that at the same time and place and one sees that the Sun darts with its light, the wind whistles and casts its refreshing breaths. The air lets one breathe, the sea makes its murmur heard, it seems that they are fused together, so much is their inseparability, so much so that the creature at the same time and place can enjoy the Sky, the Sun, the wind, the sea, the earth in bloom.

“The acts completed by my Divine Will are not subject to separate themselves, because from the unique Will from where they are united, they are united with the unitive strength and power. Therefore there is no wonder if in the completed acts that he does in the creature, he encloses all and one sees delineated as if one might be able to see all his works inside of a glass, while every thing remains at its post, they reflect with an admirable power in the completed act of my Will in the act of the creature. This is the reason that between a completed act of my Will, as much in the creature as outside of her, so much is the value, that for how much we give (there) always remains for us to give, because [the creature] doesn’t hold the capacity to take the whole value that it contains. It fills her even to the brim, overflows outside, forms seas around her, and what has she taken? One can say the littlest, because this act encloses the infinite and the creature is incapable of taking the value of an infinite act of my Divine Fiat. It would be easier if one might enclose the whole light of the Sun in the brief round of her pupil, but that however is impossible. The eye can fill itself with light, but how many seas of light doesn’t there remain outside of her pupil. Why? Because there is a Divine Fiat in that Sun, for which it is not given to [to] all pupils to enclose; they will take how much light they want, but will never exhaust it. They will always hold to take, true image of a complete act of my Will in the creature. Therefore be attentive and make that his life be in your acts.”

* * *

January 12, 1932

Round in the Divine Will. Pledges, advances and arrangements on the part of creatures. Capital on the part of the Creator. Echo that the Divine Will forms in creatures.

I was doing the round in the acts of the Divine Will according to my usual way. I felt that in Him and with Him I could embrace everything, remember everything, look at all of that which the Divine Will had done. The infinite theater was presented to my little mind, that with Divine and innumerable scenes he made (me) taste indescribable sweetnesses, and the most beautiful and enchanting scenes, that the Power of the Divine Fiat had put forth in the round of the Creation, the Redemption and the Sanctification. It seems that it is a round that has been done in the course of the centuries, and in this round has been done so many beautiful and marvelous things as to make Heaven and earth astounded, and this round has been done in order to make us turn around us, in order to make us know how much he can do and how much he does for our love.

Whence while I turned in the infinite round of the Divine Volition, my amiable Jesus visiting his little newborn said to me:

“My little daughter of my Will, if you might know how much I enjoy seeing you turn in the infinite round of my Divine Fiat and in seeing you detain yourself as surprised before his prodigies, his admirable and adorable works, his enchanting and enrapturing scenes, in my enthusiasm of love I say: ‘How content I am that my daughter is spectator and enjoys the admirable scenes of He who has created her!’ But this is not enough. You should know that in order to acquire a property there is needed one who must surrender it, must give the liberty to whom should take it in order to visit it, carry it almost in hand in order to make all the goods that are there, the fountains that it possesses, the rarity and preciousness of the plants, the fertility of the ground known, and this serves in order to infatuate one who should acquire it; and (for) who should acquire it it is necessary that she anticipate that he give it, make considerable arrangements in order to tie he who should surrender the property, so that he might not be able to escape.

“Now blessed daughter, wanting to give the Kingdom of my Divine Will it is necessary that you turn in his divine properties, and I carrying you in hand, make you know his interminable seas, the goods, the prodigies, the surprising wonders, the joys, the happiness, all things of infinite value that he possesses, so that knowing him you love him and you fall in love so much that you would not only not know how to live without Him, but you would put forth your life in order to acquire a kingdom so holy, pacific and beautiful. But it is not everything yet. There is needed your part, your pledges, your advances and arrangements. And our love and goodness is so much that he wants to give our Will as property that he might belong to the creature, that he puts at her disposition that which He has done, so that [creatures] might make use of them as equivalent pledges and arrangements in order to receive a gift so great. Now as you turn in the Creation and look at the Sky and you felicitate yourself in seeing the beautiful azure vault carpeted with stars, the sun radiant with light, and you recognize and feel the palpating Divine Fiat still that has created it for love of creatures, and your little love issuing forth from your heart you love He who so very has loved you. Your love is sealed in the heights of the sky, in the light of the sun, and you give us the sky for pledge, for advances the stars, for arrangements the sun, because for you it was created and it is enough that you possess our Will as your life, that he is already yours, and can be the valid arrangement in order to obtain his kingdom. And thus as you turn in all the other created things, you recognize them and you love us. And how many times you repeat your rounds, so many times you repeat the pledges, you make arrangements and you arrange to dispose things, to give graces, helps in order to give as kingdom the great gift of the Fiat Voluntas tua as in Heaven so in earth.

“We know that the creature doesn’t have anything to give us, and our love imposes itself to give our acts as if they might be hers, putting in her hands our works as divine coin, so that she might hold sufficient means in order to be able to bargain with our Supreme Being. But if she doesn’t have anything, she has her little love, issued forth from ours, in the act of creating her, hence she holds a particle of the infinite love of God, and when the creature loves us, she puts the infinite in attitude, we feel the magnetic strength of the particle of our infinite love, that fluttering in her loves us, it elevates her, extends her, she arrives even to us and wants to enter into the infinite from whence she went forth. Oh! how she enraptures us, and in the enthusiasm of our love we say: ‘Who can resist the force of our infinite love that issues forth from the creature and loves us?’ To give heavens and earth seems to us as little in order to repay her for her little love, that although little she possesses the particle of the infinite, and this is enough for us. Oh, how sweet and dear is the precious pledge of the love of the creature! And since there is nothing that in the round of the centuries that hasn't been united by our Will, your turning in the Creation of man is a visit that you make in order to know that which I worked and in what seas of graces, of sanctity, of love [man] was put in the act of being created, and you would like to make yours that love in order to love us, and you make arrangements with us with those same acts with which we created man. And thus when you turn in the Creation of the Virgin, in her seas of graces, in my coming upon the earth and in all that which I did and I suffered, you put forth for arrangement the Queen of Heaven, my life itself and all my acts.

“My Will is everything and in order to give himself to the creature he wants to be recognized, he wants to have (something) to do, wants to bargain over it with her; and how much more [the creature] visits him in his acts, so much more does [my Will] find himself pledged and arranged and he commences the disbursement of his capital. All the truths, the knowledges that I have made you on the Divine Will have they not been perhaps capital that I have made to your soul? And he is so very exuberant that he can fill the whole entire world with light, with love, with sanctity, with graces, with peace. And has it not perhaps been after a turn that you have done in his acts, that I already await you with all love in order to give you his pledges and advances that his kingdom would come upon the earth? You gave your pledges, and my Fiat gave his to you. One can say that every truth and word that he said in his regard were dispositions that he took as to form this kingdom, levy that he called in order to form his army, capital that he disbursed in order to maintain it, joys and delights in order to attract them, divine fortitude in order to conquer them; because first we do the deeds, we order everything, and then we demonstrate and we make known the deeds that we have done. And since we want to give this good to creatures, it is necessary, just and reasonable that we will at least (intend) it with one creature, so that from the one it passes to the other. We don't do our works in the air, but we want a little knoll where to form our greatest works. Was not the Queen of Heaven our little knoll in the great work of the Redemption, which then extended itself to everyone and to whom wants it? Therefore let your flight in my Will be continuous, so that you exchange your pledges and He his capitals, in order to accelerate his kingdom upon the face of the earth.”

After this I felt more than usually all immersed in the Divine Fiat and my Sovereign Jesus added:

“My daughter, when my Divine Will works in the soul he is immediately known. As he works he extends in the human being suaveness, sweetness, peace, fortitude, firmness; before that work he blows there and impresses there his omnipotent Fiat, which extends there his Heaven around the work that he wants to do. It seems that without his Heaven my Will doesn't know how to work, and while he works he makes his sweet, harmonious echo resound in the three Divine Persons, calling them to light of that which he is doing in the soul, because the Will being one of that which he is working in her with that of the Divine Persons, it happens that that which he does in the Divine Persons he makes its powerful echo resound in the creature, and in this echo he brings her the admirable secrets, the ineffable sweetness, the inseparable love of how the Divine Persons love, the sweet accord between themselves. This echo is the bearer of (the) most intimate things of the Supreme Being in the creature. Where my Will is working, the echo of the one fuses itself into the other; that of above makes itself (the) divine revealer, that of the depths resounding in God holds the virtue to speak powerfully with the divine ways for the good with creatures and of the same love that They want. My Will with his power forms the sweet chains and identifies and transforms God and the creature, in a way that God feels remade in the creature and she feels remade in God. Oh, my Will, how very admirable and powerful you are! You extend your sweet chains and tie God and the creature, so that all return into my divine bosom.”

* * *

January 12, 1932

Dominant, speaking and felicitating ways of the Divine Will. How heaven remains behind. Victory of God and victory of the creature. The Divine Will gatherer of his works. Example of a mother that laments over her crippled child.

My little soul continues to cross over the interminable sea of the Divine Fiat. And oh, how I remain surprised, that while it seems to me that I have gone a long way, I go in order to look, (and) I don't find anything other than a few steps in comparison to those that remain for me to make! The interminability is so much, that although I might walk centuries I would always find myself at the beginning, and there is so much to know of the Divine Volition, that finding myself in his sea I always feel as the little ignorant one, that hardly has learned the vowels of the Divine Will; and perhaps I will learn the consonants in the Celestial Country, that I hope to reach immediately. Oh, how I would like ways to move all of heaven to pity, so that I might finish my long exile! But after all Fiat, Fiat, Fiat!

And my always amiable Jesus, having compassion on me, pressed me between his arms saying to me:

“Blessed daughter, courage, do not afflict yourself too much; for now I want your heaven to be my Divine Will. He will be your Celestial Country in earth and he won't lack in felicitating you and in also giving you the pure joys of up there. Therefore where He reigns he holds so many multiple ways in order to give new surprises of joys, of contentments, in order to make that the soul that possesses him might be able to enjoy her Paradise in earth. And therefore now he takes dominant ways and his dominion extends itself in the mind, in the word, in the heart, in all the being of the creature, even in the littlest motion; and oh, how sweet is his dominion! He is dominion and life, he is dominion and strength, he is dominion and light that makes his way, and his light disperses the darkness. He takes away the barriers that can impede the good, and his dominion puts the enemies in flight. In short the creature feels herself carried by the dominion of the Divine Will, and while he is dominant she remains dominator of herself, of her acts, and of the Divine Will himself, that while he dominates and reigns, so much is his suaveness, fortitude and sweetness, that he unites himself with the creature and wants that she dominates together. Because his dominion is pacific, and to all the acts that the creature does he gives his kiss of dominant peace. This kiss, suave and sweet, enraptures the human will in the Divine, and they extend the dominion together in order to form the divine kingdom in the depth of the soul. There is nothing more beautiful, more dear, more great, more holy, than to feel the dominion of my Will flow in all the acts. And in the whole being of the creature, I could say that heaven remains behind before the dominion of my Will in the heart of the wayfaring creature, because in the saints he doesn't have anything to add on; (there) doesn't remain other than to felicitate them continually. Instead in the wayfaring soul there are works that he can do in the soul, new life that he can infuse, new conquests that he can acquire in order to enlarge and to extend his dominion all the more.

“The total dominion of my Divine Will in the creature is our continued victory. [For] every act of his that he does in her with his dominion, so many victories we make, and the creature remains victor over my Divine Will in her acts. Instead in heaven we don't have anything to conquer, because everything is ours, and every blessed has completed his work in the act of exhaling. Therefore our conquering work is upon the earth in the wayfaring souls, not in heaven. In heaven we don't have either something to lose nor something to acquire.

“Now when my Divine Will is assured (of) his total dominion in the creature, he takes his speaking way. You should know that every word of his is a creation. Where He reigns he doesn't know how to remain idle, and since he possess the creative virtue he doesn't know how to speak if he doesn't create. But what does he create? He wants to create himself in the creature, he wants to make a display of his divine qualities, and he does it word by word, almost as I did in the Creation of the universe, that I didn't say one word alone, but so many words for how many distinct things I wanted to create. The soul costs us more than the entire universe, and when he is secure of his dominion, he doesn't save up his words, rather as she receives the act of his creative word, thus he enlarges her capacity and prepares her for another of them. So that he speaks and creates the light, he speaks and creates the sweetness, he speaks and creates the divine fortitude, he speaks and creates there his day of peace, he speaks and creates his knowledges, every word of his is bearer of the creation of the good that it possesses and reveals; his word makes itself announcer of the good that he wants to create in the soul. Who can tell you the value that one single word of my Divine Will possesses? And how many skies, seas of riches, variety of beauty does he put there in the fortunate creature that possesses his sweet and happy dominion?

“Now after the work, the joy, the happiness arises. My Will by his nature is pregnant with innumerable joys. He watches the creature that has lent herself to receive the creation of his words, and oh! how happy he feels, because he sees that every creation received gives birth to a joy and happiness without end, and He passes from the speaking way to the felicitating way; and in order to make that the creature might enjoy more, he does not put himself aside. No, but he felicitates himself together, and in order to make her rejoice more he goes expounding the nature and diversity of the joys that he has created in her soul, only because he loves her and wants to see her happy, and since the joys, the happiness when alone are not full, it seems that it dies, therefore I leave myself together with you in order to be able to always felicitate you and to prepare the new joys with the work of my creative word. Therefore our only feast and happiness that we hold upon the earth is the soul that lets herself be possessed by the dominion of my Supreme Will. In her our word, our life, our joys find the post. It can be said that the work of our creative hands is in the order where it was established by our infinite wisdom, that is at its post of honor in our Divine Will. Instead one who lets herself be dominated by the human will is in disorder and is our continuous [letdown] of our creative work. Hence be attentive, my daughter, and make happy he who wants to make (you) happy, in time and in eternity.”

After this I continued to swim in the sea of the light of the Divine Fiat. I felt drown with light, and his knowledges were so many, that I didn't know which of them to cling to, given my littleness; I didn't know where to put them, hence they dispersed in his same light. And I remained surprised without knowing how to say anything, and my sweet Teacher Jesus added:

“My daughter, my Will is the gatherer of all his works. In his light he hides everything, with his light

he defends them and puts in safety all his works. How much doesn't this light do in order to put the creature in safety, the most beautiful work of our creative hands, and in order to make her return beautiful, specious as we brought her forth? He gathers you in his womb of light and casts there so much light above in order to make all the evil disappear. If she is blind, by way of light he gives her sight; if she is mute, by way of light he wants to give her the word. The light takes her from all sides, and gives her hearing if she is deaf; if lame, he straightens her; if ugly, by way of light he makes her beautiful. A mother doesn't do as much as my Divine Will does in order to make his creature beautiful and restored; his weapons are of light, because there is no power that the light doesn't hide and good that it doesn't possess. What wouldn't a mother do that having given to the light a beautiful child that enraptured her with his beauty, and the mother felt happy in the beauty of the child. But a misfortune strikes him and he becomes blind, mute, deaf, lame; poor mother, she looks at her child and doesn't recognize him anymore. The dulled eye that looks no more, his silver voice that made her start with joy in feeling herself called mama, she listens to it no more; his little feet that raced in order to put themselves in her womb, with difficulty are dragged along. This child is the most transfixing sorrow for a poor mother; and what wouldn't she do if she might know that her child might be able to return anew to his first features? She would turn the whole world if she might be able to obtain this and it would be sweet for her to put forth her own life, provided that she might be able to see her child beautiful as she gave him forth to the light. But poor mother, it isn't in her power to be able to reconstitute the first beauty to her dear child. And it will always be her sorrow and the thorn most transfixing for her maternal heart.

"Such has become the creature with doing her will: blind, mute, lame; our Will laments with tears of ardent light of our love, but that which the mother can not do for her crippled child, my Divine Will does not lack the power (to do). He more than mother will put at (her) disposition his capitals of light, which possess the virtue to reconstitute all the goods and beauty of the creature. He, tender Mother, lover and vigilant of the work of his hands, that more than dearest child he brought forth to the light, he will turn not all the world, but all the centuries, in order to prepare and give the powerful remedies of light, that revive, transform, straighten and embellish; and then he will stop when he will see (her) in his maternal womb, beautiful as she went forth, the work of his creative hands, in order to remake her from the so many sorrows and to enjoy himself with her forever.

"Are not perhaps the so many knowledges on my Will remedies? Every manifestation and word that I say is a fortitude that I put around the weakness of the human will, it is a food that I prepare, it is a bait, a taste, a light in order to make her reacquire the lost sight. Therefore be attentive and do not lose anything of that which my Will manifests to you, because in his time all will be served, nothing will be lost. Do you believe that He doesn't hold account even of one single word of that which he says? All numbered and nothing lost; and if in your soul he has formed his chair/seat in order to deposit his truths, however the primary chair/seat holds it reserved in itself as the greatest treasure that belongs to him, in a way that if you disperse some word or manifestation that belongs to him, already the original is conserved in oneself, because that which regards my Divine Will is of infinite value and the infinite can not be nor is it subject to disperse; rather jealous he conserves his truths in the divine archives. Therefore you also learn to be jealous and vigilant and to appreciate his holy lessons."

January 24, 1932

Every little visit of Jesus [is] bearer of celestial truths. One who lives in the Divine Will is under the rain of the new act of God. Example of the flower. How every act done in the Divine Will is a stair. Office of Mother.

I felt all worried over the so many truths that blessed Jesus had told me on his Divine Will, and while I felt the sacred deposit of his truths in me, together I felt a holy fear of how I guarded them in my poor soul, and many times badly exposed, without that attention that is appropriate to truth that contains infinite value. And oh, how I would like to imitate the blessed, that while they know so much of the Divine Will, they don't say anything to anyone. To the poor wayfarers, they hold them all with themselves, they beatify each other, they felicitate each other, but from up there they don't even send one word in order to make known one single truth of the many that they know. But while I thought this, my amiable Jesus visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My daughter, every word that I have said to you on my Divine Will has been none other than so many little visits that I have made you, leaving in you the substance of the good that every word of mine contains. And not entrusting myself to you, because you were incapable of guarding one single word of mine, I left myself to guard the infinite value of my truths that I deposed in your soul. Hence your fears are not just. I am at watch over everything. They are celestial truths, stuff of heaven, outlets of repressed love of my Will, and for so many centuries. And before deciding to speak to you, already I have decided to remain in you in order to guard that which I deposed in you. You enter into the secondary order, I am the first custodian.

“Now these little visits of mine being bearers of celestial stuff, you will bring them with you into the Celestial Country as triumph of my Will, and as guarantee that his kingdom will not only come upon the earth, but that he has established his beginning of his reign. Those that will remain upon the paper will leave in perennial memory that my Will wants to reign in the midst of the human generations, and they will be spurs, incitements, divine supplications, irresistible force, celestial messengers, commanders of the Kingdom of my Divine Fiat; and also powerful reproach to one whom should occupy themselves to make such a good known; and that for laziness and for vain fears they won't leave themselves to turn through all the world, so that they bring the cheerful news of the happy era of the Kingdom of my Will. Therefore abandon yourself in me and leave me to do it.”

Whence I continued my acts in the Divine Will, in which all that which he had done in the Creation is all in act as if then he was creating the same, in order to give them as vent of his love to the creature, and since I am too little, I can not take them all together, and I go little by little even where I can arrive; and the Divine Love awaits me in every created thing in order to repeat and duplicate the creative act and to say to me:

“Do you see how much I love you? For you I created them, for you I conserve the creative act in act, in order to tell you not with words alone but with deeds: ‘I love you!’ I love you so much that I am drowned with love, yearnings, I am delirious because I want to be loved. So much so that with creating the Creation before you I prepared for you the way, all of love, with maintaining the creative act in act, I tell you in every instant: ‘I love you and I want love.’”

Hence I crossed created things in order not to leave the Loving Craftsman aching, in that I might not have had received his love that he had put in every created thing, that he had put (there) for me; and I arrived in the exuberant act of the love of the creation of man, I felt myself under the rain of this intense love. And my always amiable Jesus said to me:

“Blessed daughter, our way with creatures never changes, as it had the beginning of manifesting itself in the creation, thus it continues and will always continue, always. Now one who enters in our Will touches with (her) hand our creative act, always in act, and our love always new, in act giving itself to the creature; but it is not only our love, but our great love makes us emit it from our bosom and puts en (route) over them new goodness, new power, new sanctity, new beauty, in a way that we hold the creature under the rain of our new acts, always new and always in act. So that all the creation is always in (the) act of repeating itself and of giving itself to them. And since our ways are always equal and never change, that which we do with the blessed in heaven, feeding their beatitude with our new act without ever ceasing. Thus do we do for one who lives in our Divine Will in earth. We feed their life with new sanctity, new goodness, new love, we hold her under the rain of our new acts; it is always in act. With this difference that the blessed acquire nothing new, they only swim in the new joys of their Creator. Instead the fortunate wayfarer that lives in our Volition is always in (the) act of making new conquests.

“Whence one who doesn’t do and doesn’t live in our Divine Will makes herself estranged from the celestial family, nor does she know the goods of her Celestial Father, and hardly takes the drops of the love and of the goods of her Creator. She makes herself an illegitimate daughter that doesn’t have full rights to the possessions of her Divine Father. Only my Will gives her the right of progeny, and the liberty to take that which she wants from the house of her Celestial Father. One who lives in our Will is like the flower that remains on the plant, and mother earth feels the duty to give to the root of the flower the post in her own house, to feed it with the vital humors of hers that she possesses, to hold it exposed to the rays of the Sun in order to color it, and she waits for the nighttime dew, so that her flower might receive sufficient humors in order to make it withstand the ardent kisses of the Sun, in order to make it develop and receive the complexion and the most intense and most beautiful perfume. So that one can say that mother earth is the food and the life of the flower.

“Thus is the soul that lives in our Will, we must give her the post in our house, and more than mother feed her, raise her and give her so much grace as to be able to sustain and to be exposed before and within the ardent light of the immensity of our Will. Instead one who doesn’t do and doesn’t live in Him is like the flower torn from the plant and put in vases. Poor flower, she has already lost her mama who with so much love fed her, held her exposed to the sun in order to warm and to color her; and although there is water in the vase, it is not the mother that gives it to her, hence it is not nourishing water and with all that which is conserved in the vase, yet she is subject to fade and to die. Such is the soul without my Will. She lacks the Divine Mama who has generated her, she lacks the nourishing and fecundating virtue, she lacks the maternal heat that warms her and with her light gives her the brushstrokes of beauty in order to make her beautiful and florid. Poor creature without the tenderness and the love of she whom has given her life, how exiled they will grow and without beauty, and as faded in true good!”

After this I turned in the Divine Will in order to find all the acts of the creature, in order to put there my “I love you” and to ask in every act of the creature the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth. And my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, my Divine Will in the act of the creature, when he is invoked, he removes the roughness from the human will, he sweetens her ways, represses the violent ways and with his light warms the works numbed by the cold of the human volition. So that one who lives in my Divine Will prepares the preventive grace to the human generations in order to make him known, and her every act in Him forms the stair in order to climb before him, and I approach creatures with the knowledges of the Supreme Fiat. So that (for) one who lives in my Divine Will, He gives the maternal virtues and gives the office to press near God and to press near creatures, the office of true mama.

“You see therefore the necessity of your acts in my Will in order to form a long staircase that should touch Heaven, in a way as to violate/rape/(force) with his own divine strength that my Fiat descends upon the earth and forms there his kingdom, making the first people found upon this staircase who receives him and lend themselves to let him reign in the midst of them. Without staircase one can not climb, hence it is necessary that a creature make it in order to give the field to let the others climb; and in order to make that this one might lend herself we must give her the office of mother, that loving creatures as her children, given to her by my Divine Will, she accepts the mandate and spares neither works, nor sacrifices, and if needs be life itself, for love of these children. More so that in giving her the office of mother, my Divine Volition endows the soul with maternal love and makes her feel in (her) own Heart these children, and he gives her divine and human tenderness in order to conquer God and the creature and to unite them together in order to make them do his Divine Will. There is no greater honor that we can give to the creature than maternity. She is bearer of generations, and we give her graces in order to form our predilect people. And although maternity says sorrow, but she will feel the joy all divine to see go forth from within the sorrow the children of my Will. Therefore always repeat your acts and do not withdraw. Withdrawing is for cowards, for the lazy, for the inconstant, not of the strong, much less for the children of my Will.”

* * *

January 30, 1932

The Divine Will: spy, sentinel, Mother and Queen. His puff forms the knoll of love in the soul in order to enclose his truths. Ecstasies of love of the Creator; foods that he gives to his gifts.

I was following the acts of the Divine Fiat and it seemed to me that in his every act that I followed he prepared for me his puff of love, that he contained in himself and that he longed to emit from himself in order to make it imprisoned in my poor soul; and I feeling his love, from inside of his same love I emitted my love toward (he) who so very loved me and I emitted his new puff of love in order to tell him with more intense affection: “I love you.” It seemed to me that so much is the desire that the Divine Will wants to be loved, that He himself puts in the soul the dose of his love in order to make himself loved, and then he awaits the love of the creature in order to be able to say her: “How content I am that you love me.” But while I thought this, my adored Jesus making his little visit said to me:

“My daughter, you should know that our love gives of the incredible. Our Divine Will is the spy of the creature and goes spying when she is disposed to receive his puff of contained love, because He knows that the creature doesn't possess a great quantity of divine love, she hardly holds the particle of the infinite love [of] when she was created, and if this has not been fed, it is like the fire when it is under ash, that while the fire exists, the ash holds it covered and repressed in a way that the heat is not even felt. We don't want any human love, and therefore our Will uses his loving stratagems, he spies the dispositions and blows; his puff as light breeze puts in flight the ash that the human volition has produced; the particle of our infinite love revives itself, ignites itself. My Divine Volition continues to blow and adds on other divine love. The soul feels herself emptied, warmed, she experiences the loving refreshments, and from inside the particle of the infinite love that she possesses, she loves us and gives us our divine love as hers. You should know that the love of my Divine Will is so much, that he uses all the arts, he does as a spy and blows (on) her, he does as Mother and cradles her in his arms, he does as sentinel and watches over her, he does as Queen and dominates her, he does as Sun and illuminates her, and he lends himself even to serve her, and when he wants to depose in you his knowledges, his truths, even one word of his, what does he do? He blows so much on you that he forms in you, first his knoll of love, of light, in order to enclose his truths inside of the knoll of his love and light that he has formed in you. So that he entrusts his truths to his same love, to his light, knowing that only his love can hold the true interest to conserve them, to spur you on so that they don't remain hidden in you.

“Oh, if it might not be for this knoll of love of mine that encloses all the knowledges of my Fiat, how many things would have been buried in your soul without anyone knowing anything of it! Behold the reason that first he must manifest his truths to you, he does (as) the busybody around you in order to prepare you, in order to put (in) you new love, in order to form the new knoll to his truths and put them in the secure bank of his divine love. And if I await you in his acts with so much love, they are our usual pretexts, occasions in which we go searching in order to find the comma, the point of the creature in order to give her new love, new graces. But much more than wanting her company, without one who wants to do our Will we don't know how not to remain, already He carries her between his arms in our acts, so that she is with us and with all that which we do.”

After this I followed my round in the acts of the Divine Will, and I arrived at the point of the Creation of man I detained myself in order to be as a spectator. With what love the Divine craftsman had created him. And my highest good Jesus added:

“Little daughter of my Will, to the little ones we feel ourselves brought to tell our ineffable and infinite secrets; we want to tell our story, more so that her origin enters in (the) midst, in order to have her touch with (her) hand with what love her littleness has been loved and re-loved by us. Because she was present, she was already in us in the act of the Creation of man, and this in order to have her celebrate and together we celebrate the solemn act of her Creation. Now you should know that our Supreme Being found himself, in a kind of profound ecstasy, in the act of creating the creature. Our love enraptures our Divine Being, our love enraptures us and our Fiat put us in act to work with his creative virtue, and it was in this loving ecstasy that all the graces, the gifts, the virtues, the beauties, the sanctities, and so on were put forth from us, with which all creatures should be endowed and enriched. Our love was not content, if not until it put in order outside of us all that which should serve to everyone and each one, all the diversities of sanctity and specialties of beauties and gifts in order for each one to be the image of her Creator. These dowries and riches are already at the disposition of everyone, so that every creature in being born already holds ready her dowry, which God even from when he created man brought forth from himself for each one. But how many don't know it nor do they make use of the rights that God has given them, and while they are rich, they live (a) poor life and are so very distant from true sanctity, as if they might not be beings brought forth from that God three times holy, (as if) he doesn't know how to make creatures holy, beautiful and happy, similar to Himself. But the centuries won't finish nor will [the] last days come, if all that which we brought forth in our ecstasy of love does not become taken by creatures, because it can be said that they have taken very little of so much of that which we have put at their disposition.

“But sense, good daughter, another excess of our ardent love. In putting outside of us the dowries, the graces, the gifts, we didn't detach them from us; outside of us yes, but inseparable from us, so that the creature taking our gifts, with our inseparability might receive the continuous food in order to feed our gifts, our sanctity, our beauty, our graces, so that together with our gifts we made the creature herself inseparable from us, because she doesn't hold the necessary foods and sanctities in order to feed our gifts, and we exhibit ourselves to give gifts and foods in order to feed our sanctity, our celestial graces. So that we are in the continuous act to remain together with her, now to give her the food in order to feed our sanctity, now the food in order to feed our fortitude, now the distinct food in order to feed our beauty; in short we remain around her and always busy to give the diverse foods to every gift that we have given her, and this serves to conserve, to raise and to crown our gifts, and together the happy creature remains crowned with ours and in our same gifts.

“Hence to give a gift to the creature serves to pledge ourselves with her, not only to feed her, but we give her for pledge our work, the inseparability and our life itself, because if we want our likeness we must give our life in order to be able to produce our likeness in her, and this we do gladly, indeed our love repeats our ecstasy for us and makes us give everything in order to make us take the littleness of the creature, who is also ours and who went forth from us. From this you can understand what are our solitudes, our ecstasies of love when we give not a gift, but our Will himself for life of the creature, to feed our gifts is one thing, feeding our Will is another. Already the creature in virtue of Him continually enraptures us with herself, and we suffer continuous ecstasies of love, and in these ecstasies we don't do other than to pour forth love in torrents, seas of light, indescribable graces; nothing is given in measure, because we must not only feed him, but we must hold him courted and honored with divine honors in the creature. Therefore, my daughter, be attentive and let nothing go forth from you of human, in order to be able for you to also honor my Will with divine acts in yourself.”

* * *

February 6, 1932

One who lives in the Divine Will becomes raised by God with features and divine ways. The course in the Fiat. The acts done in Him become put on the eternal balance and enclosed in the divine bank.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues. I always feel (as a) little atom in which I go on and down as wandering in his acts, in order to find his and my life in his acts, and my atom does not stop, it races, races always, because I feel the extreme need to find life in the Fiat! Otherwise I feel that I can not live without his life, and without his acts I feel (as) fasting, and therefore I must race in order to find life and food. More so that the Divine Will awaits me with an indescribable love in his acts in order to prepare his food for his little daughter. But while my mind lost itself in his light, the sweet and Sovereign Celestial Jesus made his little escape with his little daughter and said to me:

“Blessed daughter, how beautiful is your course in our Will, and although you are the little atom, we can raise you as we want. Little ones can grow with our features that resemble us; we teach our divine ways, our celestial science, in a way that she forgets the rough ways and the ignorance of the human will. To those that are great, they are already formed and we can redo little or nothing, and then they are accustomed to live as great, according to the human volition, and to destroy the habits there is needed miracles, even if one succeeds. Instead to the little ones it proves easy to us nor does it cost us so much, because they don’t have any radical habits. At the most (they have) some fleeting impulse, that one little word of ours, a puff of our light is enough in order to have that she does not remember it anymore. Therefore be always little, if you want that my Divine Will doing for you as true Mother raises you, so that all might be (to) our glory and also to yours.

“Now you should know that an act repeatedly renewed forms the habit, and since an act that doesn’t ever cease is only of the Supreme Being, hence if the creature feels in possession of an act that always repeats, it means that God has enclosed his life, his way in that act; a continuous act is life and divine act, and only one who lives in my Divine Will can feel the power, the virtue, the miraculous strength of an act that never ceases in itself, because having been raised by us, it is not easy to draw away from our ways and to not feeling in herself the life and the continuous acts of He who has raised her. Therefore your race, of always feeling the extreme need to find ours and your life in the Fiat, in his acts, it is we that race in you in order to remain in our incessant acts; and while we race, you race together, so that our acts that are in you have common life with our acts that are outside of you. And as you feel the extreme need, thus we feel the extreme need of love to make your littleness turn in all the acts of our Fiat, because you not being capable to enclose them all in yourself, with your turning in them you take part for how much more you can. Therefore race, race always; rather I say we always race, because there is no greater grace that I can give to the creature, than to make them feel in themselves the virtue of a continuous act.”

Whence I continued to follow the acts of the Divine Will, and my beloved Jesus added:

“My daughter, every time that you turn you form one of your acts in the act of my Divine Will, so many bonds more you form in Him, remaining confirmed so many times for how many acts you do in the Divine Fiat, and He remains confirmed so many more times in you; and every bond and confirmation that you make, my Will enlarges his seas around you, and for confirmation as seal he puts there one truth of his, one knowledge of his, and he manifests to you one more degree of value that my Will contains, but do you know what they do in your soul these bonds, confirmations, truths, knowledges, greater values that you come to know? They make the life of my Will grow in you. Not only, but repeating your acts, will make so many more degrees of values for how many more you have known; your acts become put in the balance of the Divine Value, and they are worth so much for how much you have known and for how much value has been communicated by us in your act, so that your act yesterday, repeating it today, it doesn’t have the same value of yesterday, but [it has] acquired the new value that we have made known. Hence the repetition of the acts, accompanied by new truths and knowledges, they acquire day-by-day new degrees of infinite value always growing. We not only put the acts of the creature done in our Will, in our eternal balance in order to re-give them the weight of an infinite value, but we conserve them in our divine bank in order to (re-)give them a hundred fold; therefore every time that you repeat your acts, so many times you come to put your little coins in our divine bank, and hence you acquire so many rights to receive more from us.

“You see therefore where the excess of our love arrives, that we want to make ourselves debtor of the creature receiving the little coins of her acts in our immense bank, that we possess so much of. And yet we so very love to receive the little coins, in order to give her the right to give her of ours. Our love at whatever cost wants to have to do with the creature, it wants to be in continuous relationship with her and this by force (of needing) to give, and perhaps also to lose. How many times while we want to give to her, we want to make her know so many of our beautiful things, we want to make her feel how very sweet and powerful our word is, and she shows herself cold, indifferent, if she doesn’t even turn her back to us. And our love remains as defeated by human ingratitude; but the little daughter won’t ever do that, isn’t (this) true? Your littleness makes you feel the extreme need of your Jesus, of his love and of his Will.”

* * *

February 10, 1932

Labor of God in the soul that lives in the Divine Will. Understanding between God and the creature. Look-out of Jesus in order to have the company of the creature in his works.

My sweet Jesus with his enrapturing strength always draws me in his adorable Will, in order to make me cross over the multiplicity of his works that it seems that they await me in order to give me something more of that which they have given me. And I remain surprised by so much divine goodness and liberality. And beloved Jesus in order to infuse in me greater love and desire to follow the acts of the Divine Will said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Volition, every time that you elevate yourself in Him in order to unite yourself with every act that he has done, and you unite yours to his, the divine act rises and gives you a degree of grace, of love, of sanctity, a degree of divine life and glory. These degrees united together form the necessary substance in order to form the divine life in the creature; some form the heartbeat, some the breath, some the word, some the eye, some the beauty, some the sanctity of God in the depth of the soul. Our acts rise, as the creature approaches, in order to give that which they possess. With anxiety they await her, in order to put themselves in attitude to rise in order to form their divine outlets, in order to deposit and to repeat their acts in her. So that one who unites herself with the acts of our Divine Will gives us occasions in order to let us labor, but in order to do what? To form our life with our work in the creature.

“You should know that the creature, with elevating herself in our Divine Will leaves everything and reduces herself in her nothing. This nothing recognizes her Creator, and the Creator recognizes the nothing that went forth to the light, not the nothing encumbered with things that don’t pertain to Him, no, and finding nothing he fills her with the All. Behold what it means to live in my Will: to empty oneself of all and lightly, lightly fly into the bosom of the Celestial Father in order to make this nothing receive the life of He who created her. Beyond this our Will is our life and our food, and since we have no need of material foods, therefore He gives us the food of his holy works. And since the creature is one of our works, we want to find in her our Will as life, so that not only she but all her works serve us (for) food and we for exchange give her our food. This feeding each other with the same foods forms the agreement between God and the creature. This agreement produces peace, communication of goods, inseparability; it seems that the divine breath/[fiato] breathes in the creature and that of hers in God, that they unite so much as to feel as if the breath/[fiato] of the one (is) as if it might be one alone with the other. Hence agreement of Will, agreement of love, of works happen. We feel that breath/[fiato] that we put forth in the Creation of man, that he broke with doing his will, is reborn anew in the creature; our Will holds the virtue and office to regenerate in her that which she has lost with sin and to reorder her as she went forth from our creative hands.”

After this I was turning in the works of the Creation and Redemption and my Sovereign Jesus added:

“My daughter, our works suffer isolation if they are not recognized as works done for love of creatures, because there was no other purpose in doing so many marvelous works in the Creation, than to give them so many testimonials of love. We didn’t have any need, everything was done with an intense love for them. Now if this love of ours does not become recognized in every created thing, our works remain alone, without cortege, without honors and as set apart by creatures. So that the sky, the sun, the other created things are alone. That [which] I did in the Redemption, my works, my sufferings, my tears and all the rest are isolated. Now who forms the company to our works? One who recognizes them and turning in them finds our palpating love for her, that longs for her company in order to give and to receive love. So much so that when you turn in our Will in order to find our works and to recognize our love and putting there yours, I feel so very drawn that I almost always await you in every single work in order to enjoy your company, your cortege, and I feel as repaid for what I have done and suffered, and when you sometimes delay to come, I wait and I put myself on the look-out from within my works in order to see when you are about to come in order to enjoy your sweet company. Therefore be attentive, do not make me wait.”

* * *

February 16, 1932

The acts done without the Divine Will are empty of the infinite. How it is necessary to do everything and to wait for the events in order to make the Kingdom of the Divine Will come. How the acts done in Him depart for Heaven as property of the Celestial Country.

I was continuing my acts in the Divine Will in order to find all his acts and to fuse them together, [and] thus to be able to say: “I do that which He does.” Oh, what happiness is felt in thinking that I am doing that which the Divine Will does! And my amiable Jesus visiting his little daughter said to me:

“Good daughter, if you might know what void is formed in the act of the creature, when it is not filled with all my Will, so that in that act (there) lacks the fullness of sanctity, (there) lacks the infinite; and since there lacks the infinite, one sees an abyss of void that only the infinite could fill, because the creature with all her acts has been made for the infinite, and when my Will races in her acts he puts there the infinite, and one sees her act full of light, because [my Will] holds it in his womb of light, and he renders the act complete with the infinite inside. Instead when my Will doesn’t enter [in] the act of the creature as life, beginning, means and end, the act is empty and no one can fill the abyss of that void, and if there is sin one sees in that act an abyss of darkness and miseries as to make one shudder.

“Now my daughter, how many of these acts there are in the length of the centuries, void of the infinite. The infinite [is] rejected by the human act. My Divine Will holds right over every act of the creature and in order to come to reign he wants one who lives in Him, who might go retracing all these empty acts in order to pray him, to press him that he might put the infinite in every act, so that [the Divine Will] might recognize in every single act his act in order to make that his dominion might be complete. And although these acts might be past, there is always, for one who lives in my Will, as to be able to do and to repair, because in him there is the power to be able to repair and to re-do all, provided that he finds a creature that lends herself. More so are that they are acts of the creature without my Will, another (who is) united with my Will is able to repair, (and) order everything.

“Behold therefore, my daughter, I have said other times and I repeat it: we do all that which is needed in order to make the Divine Will known and to make him reign. There must lack nothing on our part: prayer, sacrifice of life itself, to take all the acts of the creature as in hand in order to call her to put forth of hers, so that it is mine and your ‘I love you’, mine and your prayer that cries out: ‘We want the Divine Will.’ So that all the Creation and all the acts will be as all covered with Divine Will, and He will feel called by every act of creature, from all points, from every created thing, because you and I have already made the call, wanting to also put forth the sacrifice of life, in every thing and in every act, so that he might come to reign. This will be power before the throne of God, magnetic strength, irresistible magnet, that all acts cry out that they want the Divine Will ruling in the midst of creatures. But who is it that cries out? I and the little daughter of my Volition. Hence as enraptured he will descend to reign.

“Behold therefore the turns and returns in the Creation, in my acts themselves, in those of the Celestial Mama, in order to employ our same divine acts for a kingdom so holy, and in those of creatures in order to copy them and to put there that which can lack; but all must have one single voice, whether directly or indirectly through means of one who wants to make the sacrifice of making herself supplier and repairer, in order to obtain that he comes to reign in the midst of the generations. Hence that which I make you do and what I do together with you are necessary acts, preparations, formations, substances, capitals that are needed. When we have done everything on my part and on your part, in a way that nothing should be lacking, as to be able to say: ‘We have done everything, there doesn’t remain other for us to do’, as I said in the Redemption: ‘I have (done) everything in order to redeem man, my love doesn’t know what else to invent in order put him in safety’, and I departed for heaven awaiting that [man] might take the good that with the sacrifice of my life I had formed and given. Thus when nothing other remains to be done (for) the Kingdom of my Will upon the earth you also can come in heaven, awaiting from (within) the Celestial Country that creatures take the substances, the capital, the kingdom that will be already formed of the Supreme Fiat. Therefore I always say to you: ‘Be attentive.’ Do not omit anything, when one can not do other, we do our part; the rest, the circumstances, the events, the things, the diversity of persons will do the rest; and since [this kingdom] is already formed, it will go forth by itself and will go ahead in its reign. One thing is needed: more sacrifice to form it, that going forth it is done soon. But in order to form it there is needed one who puts forth one’s own life and the sacrifice of a will sacrificed with continuous acts in mine.”

After this he became silent and then added:

“My daughter, you should know that every act of the creature holds its post around God; as every star holds its post under the vault of heaven. Thus the acts of them, each one holds its post. But which are those that depart for the regal way, as property of the Celestial Country, and take the most honored post and give divine glory to their Creator? The acts done in my Will.

“When one of these acts depart from the earth, the Heavens lower themselves, all the blessed go to meet it and they accompany that act to the post of honor around the supreme Throne. They all feel glorified in that act, because the eternal Will has triumphed in the act of the creature and has put there his divine act. Instead the acts not done in my Will, and perhaps even good, they don’t depart by the regal way, they depart by the tortuous ways and they cover a long stop over by going through purgatory and there wait for the creature in order to purify themselves together with ways of fire; and when they finish purifying themselves, then they depart for heaven in order to take their post, but not in the high-class posts, but in the secondary posts. Do you see the great difference? [For] the first acts, no sooner than [the act is] formed, it doesn’t even remain together with the creature, because being stuff of Heaven it can not remain upon the earth, and therefore immediately takes its flight into its Country; not only, but all the Angels and Saints demand in heaven that which has been done by the Divine Will as their stuff, because all that which becomes done by him, as much in earth as in Heaven, are all proprieties of the Celestial Country. Therefore his every little act is demanded by all of heaven, because they are all fonts of joys and eternal beatitudes, that belong to them. All to the contrary (for) one who doesn’t work in my Will.”

* * *

February 24, 1932

Continuous rebirths of the creature in the Divine Will. How the creature becomes protectress of the divine works.

I am always between the arms of the Divine Will, who more than Mother holds me pressed between his arms, surrounded by his light in order to infuse in me his life of heaven. It seems to me that he is all attention in order to have his great glory, of having a daughter all of Divine Will, whom has not taken other food, whom knows no other science, nor other law or other tastes or pleasures, than only his Will; and therefore in order to hold me busy and alienated from everything he makes so many surprises for me. He tells me so many beautiful things, one more beautiful than the other, but always things that pertain, in a way that my poor mind remains as enraptured and sunk in his arms of light. And since all that which he has done, in spite that [his acts] have gone forth, still he holds them all centralized in himself, so much so that if one looks inside of his Will one finds one single act, if one looks outside one finds innumerable works and acts that can not be numbered. I felt in Him the beginning of my existence, as if in that point I was about to go forth to the light; and I remained surprised. And my beloved Jesus making me his brief little visit said to me:

“My daughter, born and reborn in my Volition, every time that you abandon yourself with all (of) your full knowledge in his arms of light and you remain within, so many times you are reborn in Him, and these rebirths are one more beautiful and specious than the other. Behold, therefore I have called you so many times the little newborn of my Will, because while you are reborn, you return to be reborn, because He doesn't know how to be idle with one who lives together with Him, but he always wants to occupy himself with the rebirth in the creature in a continuous way, absorbing her continually in himself, so much so that my Fiat is reborn in her and she is reborn in my Will. These rebirths on both parts are life that are exchanged with each other and this is the greatest testimonial, the most perfect act, to be reborn, to exchange life with each other in order for the one to be able to tell the other: 'You see how much I love you, that I give you, not acts, but continuous life.' Behold therefore, my daughter, for the one that lives in my Divine Will He puts this fortunate creature in the first act of her creation, she feels her beginning in God, the creative virtue, vivifyer and conservator with his omnipotent breath, that if she withdraws, she returns into her nothing from where she went forth, and therefore she feels her continuous rebirth alive in the arms of her Creator; and feeling herself in her beginning, the creature restores to God the first act of life that she received from Him, that is the most holy act, most solemn, most beautiful, act of God himself."

After this I followed my round in the acts of the Divine Will, and oh, how I would like to embrace everything, also that which all the blessed have done, in order to give to every act a honor and glory to God and the saints, and to make use of them through means of the acts themselves done by them in order to honor them. And my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, when the creature remembers, honors, glorifies that which her Creator and her Redeemer has done for her love in order to put her in safety, and (that) all the saints have done, she becomes protectress of all these acts. The sky, the sun and all the creation feel protected by the creature. My terrestrial life down here, my sufferings, my tears feel sheltered in her and they find their protectress; the saints not only find protection in her memory, but the acts of them vivified, renewed in the midst of creatures, in short they feel life re-given in their acts.

"Oh, how many beautiful works and virtues remain as buried in the base world, because there is no one who remembers and honors them! The memory recalls the works of the past and makes them as present. But do you know what happens? An exchange happens: the creature becomes protectress with her memory; all our works, the creation, the redemption and all that which the saints have done, they make themselves protector of their protector. They put themselves around Her in order to protect her, to defend her, they do as sentinel, and while they shelter themselves in her in order to be protected, every work of ours, all my sufferings and all the works and virtues of my saints, make competition giving the exchange to make (an) honor guard for her, so that she remains defended by everything and by everyone. And then there is no greater honor that you can give when you make use of them to ask for in every act the Kingdom of the Divine Will. They feel called and put themselves to do as messengers between heaven and earth to a kingdom so holy. You should know that (the) past, present and future, all must serve to the Kingdom of the Divine Fiat. Now [with] your memory, asking for this kingdom through means of our works, virtues and acts of everyone, all feel put to the service of Him and they take their office and post of honor. So that your turning is necessary, because it serves to prepare the Kingdom of the Divine Will. Therefore be attentive and continuous."

* * *

March 6, 1932

One who lives in the Divine Will feels the need to turn around the divine works, and how all the divine works turn around the creature. The purpose, seed of light.

I followed my round in the divine works. My poor mind I feel it as fixed around the works of my Creator, and it makes its almost continuous course around Him, because being works done for my love, I feel the duty to recognize them, to use (them as) staircases in order to climb to He who has loved me so much, loves me, and to give him my little love because he wants to be loved. But while I did this, I thought to myself: “And why should my mind always race? It seems to me that a powerful strength is over me, that maintains my race. And my sweet Jesus making me his brief little visit said to me:

“My daughter, everything turns around the creature; the Sky turns and it doesn’t make its escape from under its blue vault. The sun turns, and with its little turns of light it gives them light and heat. Water turns around the creature, fire, air, wind, every element giving them the proprieties that they contain. My life itself and all my works are in continuous round around creatures in order to be in continuous act to give myself to them. Indeed you should know that no sooner than the baby is conceived, my conception turns around the conception of the baby in order to form him and hold him defended. And as born, my birth puts itself around the newborn in order to turn around him and to give him the helps of my birth, of my tears, of my whimpers; and even my breath turns around in order to warm him. The newborn doesn’t love me, but unconsciously, and I love him even to folly. I love his innocence, my image in him. I love that which he should be(.) My footsteps turn around his first shaky footsteps in order to reconfirm them and they continue to turn even to the last footstep of his life, in order to hold his footsteps guarded in the turn of my footsteps. In short my works turn around his works, my words around his, my sufferings around his sufferings and when he is about to give his last gasp of his life, my agony turns around him for his support, and my death with impregnable strength turns around [him] in order to give him unexpected help, and with jealousy all divine presses around him in order to make that his death might not be death but true life for heaven. And I can say that my Resurrection itself turns around his sepulcher, awaiting the propitious time in order to call him, with the empire of my Resurrection, the resurrection of his body to immortal life.

“Now all the works gone forth from my Will, all turn and turn around for which purpose they were created. Stopping oneself means to not have life and to not produce the fruit established by us, that which can not be, because the Divine Being doesn’t how know to do neither dead works, nor works without fruit. Whence one who enters in my Divine Will takes her post in the order of Creation and feels the need to turn together with all created things, she feels the necessity to make her rapid turns around my conception, my birth, my childhood age and all that which I did upon the earth. And the beauty is that while she turns around all our works, our works turn around her, in short they make competition to turn [around] each other; but this is all effect and fruit of my Divine Volition, that being continuous motion, one who is in Him feels the life of his motion and hence the need to race together. Indeed I say to you, if you don’t feel the continuous race to turn around our works, it is a sign that your life is not permanently in my Will, but (that) you make some exits, little escapes, and therefore the course ceases, because she lacks (He) who gives the life to the course, and as you enter in Him, thus you put yourself in the order and you follow the course, because another [time the] working Divine Will has entered in you. Therefore be attentive, because you must have to do with an omnipotent Will that always races and embraces all.”

After this I thought to myself: “What will be the good, the benefit of this course of mine, of this turning and returning in the acts of the Divine Will?” And the Celestial King Jesus added:

“My daughter, you should know that every single act of the creature contains the value of the purpose with which she animates her act. The purpose is as the seed, that buried under the earth is dusted with earth, but not in order to die, but in order to be born and form the seedling loaded with branches, with flowers and fruits, that belongs to that seed. The seed doesn’t see it, it remains hidden in its seedling, but from the fruits the seed is known, if it is good or bad. Such is the purpose, it is seed of light and can be said that it remains as buried and dusted in the act of the creature. And if the purpose is holy, all the acts that come from that purpose, all will be holy acts, because there is the first purpose, the first seed that animates and gives life to the succession of the acts of the first purpose, and these acts form the life of the purpose, in which are seen flowers and fruits of true sanctity. And even to such the creature with the whole knowledge of her will doesn’t destroy the first purpose, she can be sure that her acts are enclosed in the first purpose. Now your course in my Divine Will will have the purpose that you want, that it forms his Kingdom, and therefore all your acts become centralized in my Fiat and converting themselves into seed of light all become acts of my Will, which eloquently with arcane and divine voices ask for this kingdom so holy in the midst of the human generations.”

* * *

March 13, 1932

The prisoner and the divine Prisoner. The Virgin announcer, messenger, conductor of the Kingdom of the Divine Will. One who lives in the Divine Will forms the speaking creation.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues, but I feel my extreme poverty, my nothingness, the continuous sorrow of the privation of my sweet Jesus as alive. If it might not be for his Divine Volition that sustains me and that very often brings me together with Heaven in a way that infuses new life in me, I would not have been able to pull ahead without He who very often steals away, hides himself, and I remain on the fire of love to wait for him, because it consumes me slowly, then [Jesus] repeats his brief little visit, when I arrive at the extremes. Whence I thought to myself: “Jesus has impeded and tied me up with chains so that there is no peril that they can be broken, I am really the poor imprisoned one. Oh, how I would like my Celestial Mama in my company, so that under her guidance I might be able to live as is necessary in the Divine Will!” But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus repeated his brief little visit and all tenderness said to me:

“My dear prisoner! How content I am that I have impeded and tied you up, because my fetters and my chains speak only of my love, in order to hold you at my disposition, I have used fetters and chains in order to make you prisoner only for me. But do you know? Love wants (it’s) pair. If I have made you imprisoned, first I made myself imprisoned for you in your own heart, and not wanting to be alone, I made you imprisoned, in a way as to be able to say: ‘We are two prisoners, that the one doesn’t know how to be without the other.’ Thus we can prepare the Kingdom of my Divine Will. Works done alone are not pleasant, but company makes them enjoyable, pushes one to work, sweetens the sacrifice and forms the most beautiful works. And in seeing you call our Celestial Mama as your guide, your Prisoner Jesus has exulted with joy in having her sweet company in our work. You should know that She was the true and celestial Prisoner of my Divine Will, hence she knows all the secrets, the ways, she possesses the keys of his kingdom. Indeed [in] every act that the Prisoner Queen did, she prepared in her act the post in order to receive the acts of the creature done in the Divine Will. And oh, how the Celestial Sovereign Lady remains in expectation and at attention in order to see if the creature works in my Fiat, in order to take with her maternal hands these acts and enclose in them her acts as pledges, as antidotes that she wants the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth!

“So that this kingdom was already formed by me and by the Celestial Lady, it already exists, only that it should be given to creatures. In order to give it it is necessary to know it. And since she is the holiest creature, the greatest and doesn't know other kingdom than the Kingdom of my Divine Will alone, she occupies the first post in Him. By right the Celestial Queen will be the Announcer, the Messenger, the Conductor of a kingdom so holy. Therefore pray to her, invoke her, and She will do for you as guide, as teacher, and with love all maternal she will receive all your acts and enclose them in hers and say to you: ‘The acts of my daughter are like the acts of her Mama, hence they can remain with mine in order to double the right to creatures to give the Kingdom of the Divine Will.’ Since this (is) her kingdom, God must give it and the creature must receive it, there is needed the acts on both parts in order to obtain the intent. Hence She who holds more ascendancy, more power, more empire over the Divine Heart is the Sovereign Lady of Heaven. Her acts will remain at (the) head, with the succession of the other acts of creatures changed into divine in virtue of my Will, in order to give them the right in order to receive this kingdom, and God in seeing these acts will feel moved to give it, for that love that he had in the Creation, that he created everything in order to have his Will done as in Heaven so in earth, and that every creature might be a Kingdom of his Will that might have his total dominion. Therefore always ahead in the work and living in the Supreme Fiat.”

After this my mind was lost in the Divine Volition, and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, the soul that enters in my Will is converted into light, and all her acts, without losing anything of their diversity, of their nature and of that which they are in themselves, they are vivified and animated by the light. So that every act, although distinct between themselves, have for life the light of my Fiat; and He is delighted, now to form with his life of light the thought, the word, the work, the step and so on. And the soul, as first sky animated by the Fiat, forms with her acts the sun, the stars, the sea that always murmurs, the wind that groans, that speaks, that howls, that whistles, that caress and that forms her refreshments, she gives divine light to her Creator, to herself, and it descends even in the depths of creatures, and since the light is fecund and holds the virtue that by itself spreads out everywhere, it forms the most beautiful flowerings, but all invested with the light. And behold that my Divine Will repeats his dear Creation in the soul that lives in his light, indeed more beautiful still, because if the Creation is mute, and if it speaks eloquently it is always in its mute language. Instead the Creation that he forms in the soul is all speaking. The sun of her works speak, the sea of her thoughts, the wind of her words, the stamping of her footsteps, that as she walks she leaves the virtues of her flowers, and all that which she does speaks as bright stars, that with their twinkling pray, love, praise, bless, repair and thank continually, without ever ceasing, that Supreme Fiat that is pleased to form in them the beautiful speaking Creation with so much love, all animated with his divine light.

“Hence it is no wonder if your Jesus forms his continuous abode in the midst of this speaking Creation (that) my Divine Will forms for me. It would be more wonder if I were not there, because the Master, the King would be lacking whom with so much love has formed it. To what benefit to form it, if I should not reside there within and enjoy my pleasant speaking Creation? More so that in this speaking Creation there is always work to do, always to add on. Every act of hers is one voice more that it acquires and that with all eloquence speaks to me of mine and of her love and I must listen to her; not only, but I want to enjoy her tastes that she gives me. I like them so much that I long for them and hence I can not put them aside. Then there is always to give and always to take. Therefore I can not leave her even one instant without me, at the most now I speak and I now am silent; now I make myself felt and now I am hidden; but leave one who lives in my Divine Will I can not. Therefore be secure that even to such (that) you don't go out from Him, your Jesus doesn't leave you; I will always be with you and you will always be with me."

* * *

March 20, 1932

Three necessary conditions in order to obtain the Kingdom of the Divine Will. How everyone lives in the Divine Will. Different ways of living.

I was thinking of the Divine Will and I said to myself: "If Our Lord so very loves to make known a Volition so holy and wants that he reign in the midst of creatures, why then does he want that one prays in order to obtain it? While one time (that) he wants it, he can also give it without so much (as anyone) praying for it."

And my sweet Jesus surprising me said to me:

"My daughter, knowing my Divine Will is the greatest thing that I can give and the creature can receive. And his reigning is the confirmation of his great gift, it is the carrying out of his known Will. Hence it is necessary to ask for him. With asking for him [the creature] disposes herself for it, she forms in herself the Palace where to receive him. With asking for him she acquires the love in order to love him, she acquires the dowries of sacrifice that is needed in order to possess him, and as she asks, the human volition loses its ground, is weakened, loses strength and is disposed to receive the dominion of the Supreme Volition. And God seeing himself prayed to disposes himself to give it. The dispositions are needed on both parts in order to give our celestial gifts. How many gifts we want to give, but because we are not asked we retain them in ourselves, waiting to give them when we will be asked. Asking is as if it might open the commerce between the Creator and the creature. If she does not ask, the commerce is closed and our celestial gifts don't descend in order to put themselves in circuit upon the face of the earth. Hence, (the) first indispensable necessities in order to obtain the Kingdom of the Divine Will is to ask for it with incessant prayers, because as one prays, thus the little letters arrive to us, now with solitudes, now with supplications, now with accord that want to have to do with our Will, until the last letter will arrive with the final accord.

"(The) second necessities, more indispensable than the first in order to obtain this kingdom: it is necessary to know what can be had. Who can ever think of a good, desire it, love it, if she doesn't know that she can obtain it? No one. If the ancients might not have known that the future Redeemer should come, no one would have given thought nor [would they have] prayed, nor hoped for salvation, because the salvation, the sanctity of those times remained fixed, centralized in the future

Celestial Savior. Outside of this there was no hope for some good. To know that one can have a good forms the substance, the life, the food of that good in the creature. Behold therefore the so many knowledges on my Will that I have manifested to you, so that it can be known that they can have the Kingdom of my Will. When one knows that a good can be had, the arts are used, the industries, and the means are undertaken in order to obtain the intent.

“The third necessary means is to know that God wants to give this kingdom. This casts the foundations, the certain hope in order to obtain it, and forms the last preparations in order to receive the Kingdom of my Divine Will. [For] a good that one wants and longs for, to know that who can give it, already wants to give it, it can be called the last blow of grace and the final act in order to obtain that which one wants. In fact if I might not have manifested to you that I can give and want to give my Divine Will dominating and reigning in the midst of creatures, you would have been indifferent like all the others for a good so great. So that your interest, your prayers have been effects and parts of that which you have known. And I myself when I came upon the earth, [in] the thirty years of my hidden life it can be said that I apparently didn’t do good to anyone, nor did even one know me. I remained in the midst of them unobserved, the whole good was developed between me and the Celestial Father, my Celestial Mother and dear St. Joseph, because they knew who I was; all the others [knew] nothing. Instead when I went out from my hideaway and openly made myself known saying that I was really the promised Messiah, their Redeemer and Savior, and although with having made myself known I attracted on me calumnies, persecutions, contradictions, anger, hatred of the Hebrews and the Passion and death itself. All these evils that as copious rain rained on me had the beginning in making myself known, I affirmed that which I really was, the Word Eternal descended from heaven in order to save them. So very true that even when I (was) in the house of Nazareth, not knowing who I was, no one said anything of me, nor did they slander me nor did they hurt me. As I revealed myself all the evils fell on me. But this was necessary to make myself known, otherwise I would have left again for heaven without completing the purpose for which I came upon the earth. Instead with making myself known, in spite that I attracted so many evils, in the midst of this abyss of evils I formed my Apostles, announced the Gospel, worked prodigies, and my knowledge instigated my enemies to make me suffer so many sufferings, even to give me death on the cross. But I obtained my intent, that so many would know me in the midst of so many that didn’t want to know me, and to complete my Redemption. I knew that, with making myself known, the perfidy and pride of the Hebrews would have done so much. But it was necessary to make myself known, because a person, a good if it isn’t known it is not bearer of life nor of good. The good, the truths not known remain impeded in itself without fecundity, as so many sterile mothers that finish with their generation.

“You see therefore how necessary it is that one knows that I can give the Kingdom of my Will and that I want to give it. I can say that (there) enters the same necessity as that to make known that I was the Son of God that I came upon the earth. And it’s also true that many with knowing this will repeat that which they did to me when I made known who I was; the longed for Messiah; calumnies, contradictions, doubts, suspicions, contempts, as already they have done [there was] hardly the beginning of the printing that mentioned to make my Divine Will known. But this says nothing, and the good possesses the strength to wound evil, creatures, hell, feeling themselves wounded they are armed against the good and would like to annihilate the good, she or he who wants to make the good known. But in spite of all that which they have wanted at the first beginning, on his wanting the knowledge of my Will to be born, and that he wants to reign, they have as suffocated him. Yet he has made his first steps, and that which some didn't believe, others have believed. The first steps will call the second, the third, and so on, in spite that there won't lack those people who will arouse contradictions and doubts, but it is of absolute necessity that one knows my Divine Will, that I can give him and I want to give him. These are the conditions that without them God can not give that which he wants to give, and the creature can not receive him. Therefore pray, and do not give back in making my Divine Will known. The time, the circumstances, the things, the persons change, they are not always those. Therefore that which one doesn't obtain today can be obtained tomorrow, however to the confusion of whom has suffocated a good so great. But my Will will triumph and will have his kingdom upon the earth."

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Will and I abandoned all of myself in his divine arms, and my beloved Jesus added:

"Good daughter, you should know that my Divine Will possesses and contains inside of himself everything; all the joys, all the beauties, from Him everything goes forth, and without losing anything, he contains everything in himself. It can be said that he carries everyone and everything in his immense womb of light. So that everyone lives in Him, with this difference, that one who with all her will wants to live in Him and lets herself be subjugated by his dominion, lives as daughter, and as daughter becomes constituted heiress of joys, of beauties, of the goods of her Mother/(the Divine Will), in a way that this Divine Mother is all intent to embellish, to enrich and to make her daughter rejoice. Instead one who wants to live of human will and does not let herself be subjugated by his dominion she lives in this Holy Will, but lives not as daughter but as stranger, and all the joys are converted for the creature into bitterness, the riches into poverty, beauties into ugliness; because living as stranger she lives as set apart from the goods that my Divine Will possesses, and justly merits that she possesses nothing of the good. Her human volition that subjugates her gives her that which it holds: passions, weaknesses, miseries. Nothing escapes from my Divine Will, not even hell, and since they have not loved him in life, they have lived as limbs detached from Him, but always inside, not outside. Now in those dismal prisons joys, happiness, the beatitudes of my Divine Will are converted into sufferings and into eternal torments. Therefore the living in my Will is not new, as some believe. Everyone lives in Him, good and bad. If one wants to say new, it is the way of living.

"One who recognizes him as continuous act of life, who gives him the dominion in all her acts, because the living in Him is the sanctity of every instant that the creature receives. It can be said that she grows continually in sanctity, but sanctity fed by my Will, grown together with Him. So that she feels my Will for life more than her own life. Instead one who doesn't live in Him, in spite that she remains there within she doesn't recognize him in her every act, and lives as if she might live distant from Him and might not receive the continuous act of his life, in spite that she receives it. In this way the sanctity of living in my Volition is not formed, but at the most the sanctity of circumstances. So that they remember my Divine Will when oppressed by a need, a sorrow, a cross, [then] he hears them exclaim: 'The Divine Will be done.' And in all the rest of their life, my Will where is he? Isn't he already with them contributing to all their acts? He remained, but they didn't recognize him. It happens as to a mother that lives in her palace, who has given forth many children to the light. Some of these always remain around the mother, whom infuses in the children her noble ways, she feeds them with delicate and good foods, dresses them with decent attire, entrusts her secrets to them and makes them heirs of her goods. One can say that the mother lives in the children and the children in the mother. They felicitate each other and love with inseparable love. The other children live in the palace of the mother, but are not always around her. They find pleasure in living in the distant rooms from those of the mother, hence they don't learn her noble ways, they don't dress with decency. The foods that they take do them more evil than good, and if sometimes they go to the mother it is not for love, but for need. Whence the great difference between the one and the other of these children; in spite of all this the one and the other live in the palace of the mother. Thus everyone lives in my Will, but only one who wants to, lives of Him, lives in Him as child with her Mother. All the others in spite that they live in Him, they don't even know him, others live as strangers, others know him in order to offend him."

* * *

March 27, 1932

Conditions of assurance for the Kingdom of the Fiat to come upon the earth. The manifestations on my Will will be (an) army trained with love, weapons, net, in order to conquer the creature.

I felt all immersed in the Divine Volition, and oh! how many thoughts were crowded in my mind. And his light that formed his waves, and one followed the other, and these waves converted into voice, into murmur, into celestial music, but oh, how very difficult it is to retain the language of that interminable light! When one is inside of Him it seems that she understands much, but no sooner than she withdraws does (there) remain some little drops, and the sweet and unforgettable and dear memory of having been in the light of the eternal Fiat. If blessed Jesus might not work a miracle abasing Himself with more adaptable ways to the human nature, I would not have known how to say anything. Whence I felt in my mind the picture of the Kingdom of the Divine Will, and I wanted that Jesus might say what the conditions were of Him, in order to be certain of his coming. And my celestial Teacher visiting the little newborn of his Volition said to me:

"My blessed daughter, the absolute conditions, necessary and of highest importance, that form the life and the food in order to assure the Kingdom of my Divine Will, is to ask of the creature degrees and prolixity of long sacrifice. Hence our goodness, in virtue of the sacrifice that it asks, must give surprising graces to whom it asks this sacrifice of, in a way that to the creature that I ask fascinated by my love, by my gifts and by my graces, the sacrifice will seem as nothing to her, in spite that she knows that her life is finished; she will not have right anymore over herself. All the rights will be of whom asks the sacrifice of her. If she might not know the whole intensity of the sacrifice that she accepts, [this] would not have all the value, because how much more she knows the greatness, the weight of the sacrifice, so much more value becomes put within. The knowledge puts the exact and complete value in the sacrifice; instead one who doesn't know all the weight of a sacrifice, oh, how much it diminishes the value, the grace, the good that one should obtain, and then our love remains wounded, our power feels impotent before a creature to whom we ask great sacrifices, making them know the weight for which she should submit herself, with her accepting everything only for our love and in order to complete our Will. The prolix sacrifice carries the prolixity of the prayer; and oh! how our ears are all attentive, our glances remain enraptured in seeing that through means (of) the fire of the sacrifice wanted by us, she prays, and what does she ask for and want? That which we want: that our Will be done as in Heaven so in earth. Ah! if she might be able to she would put in disorder heaven and earth, she would (have) all in her power, in order to make that all might ask for that which she wants, so that her sacrifice might obtain the purpose and might bring forth the fruit wanted by God. Our Paternal goodness is so much that it proves impossible to us to not grant the purpose of a long sacrifice and a prolix prayer. These are the conditions on the part of creatures, and this we have done with you and we want that you know it, because we don't give our things to the blind, that because of their blindness they don't know the goods, nor does it become given to them, nor to those that are around them, much less to the mute, that for their muteness they don't have words in order to manifest our truths and our graces. The first thing that we give is the knowledge of that which we want to do with her, and then we give and do that which we have disposed.

“The knowledge can be called the beginning, the void, the seed where to put the sacrifice, our things, and to make the beautiful prayer arise that weakens us, chains us with chains, with inseparable bonds, and makes us surrender that which she wants. More so that our Will being life and work that gives life to everything and to everyone, in order to come to reign upon the earth (there) is needed from the part of the human family a life of (a) creature at his disposition, and that without opposing him she remains in the authority of his Divine Will, so that of her he might do that which he wants. This will serve as knoll and condition in order to assure his kingdom, on the part of creatures. Now comes the conditions of assurances from the part of God. But to whom can he make them, if not to whom he had asked the sacrifice of? So that my long prolixity of manifesting so many truths on my Divine Will, my long speaking on his kingdom and on the good that he wants and should do, his long sorrow of around six thousand years that he wants to reign, and they have rejected him, the many promises that he wants to give of goods, of happiness, of joys, if they let him reign, they have not been other than assurances that I have made to the creature of this Kingdom of my Fiat; and these assurances were made and sealed in the most beautiful thing, most sacred, most precious, that is in the center of the fire of your sacrifice wanted by us. I can say that I never tire of making assurances; you could say, I return to always say with new ways, new truths, new forms, surprising similes, always on my Divine Will. I would never have said so much if I might not be certain that my kingdom might not be able to have his dominion upon the earth. Hence it is almost impossible [that] my speaking so prolix and a sacrifice of yours so continuous should not have the longed for fruits on the part of God and on the part of creatures. Therefore continue your flight in that Fiat that holds power to make himself road, to demolish all the difficulties and by force of love to make the most faithful friends and defenders (from) his most merciless enemies.”

Then he added: “My daughter, my conception, my birth, my hidden life, my Gospel, the miracles, my sufferings, my tears, my blood poured forth, my death, re-united everyone together, they formed an invincible army in order to complete my Redemption. Thus all my manifestations on my Divine Will, from the first to the last word that I will say, should serve in order to form the army trained all with love, with invincible strength, with irresistible light, with transforming love. They will cast around the creature a net, that if they want to go out they will stumble within, they will become entangled within so much that they won't know how to go out from it; and while she will seek to go out, the so many manifestations of mine on Him will continue to assail her in a way as to extend his net more. Whence seeing herself entangled she will take gusto of the so many beauties of truth and she will feel happy to have stumbled into the net of my manifested truths. So that They will form the completion of the Kingdom of my Divine Will! Therefore my every manifestation on Him is a weapon that should serve to complete a kingdom so holy. If I manifested him and you don't speak it, you will make lack the necessary weapons, therefore be attentive.

“Beyond this you should know that every word gone forth from the Uncreated Wisdom contains life, substance, work, teaching. So that every truth manifested on our Divine Will will have in our kingdom its own office: many truths will have the office to form and to grow the life of the Divine Will in the creature; others will occupy the office to feed him; others will do as teacher; other truths will have the office of defenders, in a way that they will put themselves as an army around the creature, so that no one will be able to touch her. You see therefore the necessity of my speaking so prolix and of the so many truths that I have manifested; it was a kingdom that I had to form, which one doesn’t form with a few words, with a few acts and offices, there are needed so many of them! And my every single truth has the virtue to occupy an office in order to maintain the perfect order, (the) perennial peace; it will be the echo of Heaven, and [creatures] will swim within a sea of graces, of happiness, under a sun that doesn’t know clouds; the sky will be always serene. My truths upon my Divine Will will be the only laws that will dominate; (for) creatures that will enter to live in this kingdom laws not of oppression but of love, that sweetly will make themselves loved, because in them [creatures] will find the strength, the harmony, the happiness, the abundance of all goods. Therefore courage and always ahead in my Divine Will.”

* * *

April 2, 1932

How the divine power will put a limit to the evil of man and it will tell him: “Enough even here.”
How Our Lord demonstrates with facts that he wants to give the Kingdom of his Will.

I am always re-turning in the Holy Divine Volition, nor can I do less, because being Life, life is always felt, the breath is felt, the motion, the heat. Thus is it with the Divine Will; as one feels, thus his life is felt, his heat, his motion and all that which He encloses, only with this difference, that when one pays attention to a thing that encloses life, and when to another. Whence I thought to myself: “How ever can the creature return beautiful and holy as she went forth from the creative hands of God, in order to realize the Kingdom of his Fiat in the midst of the human family?” And my beloved Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My daughter, all the works of our Supreme Being are perfect and complete. Not one work of ours is at half. The creation is all complete and perfect; indeed there are not many things of absolute necessity, but as luxury and splendor of our Power, love and magnificence. Only man, for which all things were created, should he remain as our defective and incomplete work, without the purpose for which he was created. What is it? That our Fiat might have his kingdom in every creature. And this is because he sinned and remained stained and made ugly, that he surrenders as a collapsed residence, exposed to thieves and his enemies. As if our Power might be limited and might not have all the power to do that which it wants, as it wants, and how much it wants. Whoever thinks that the Kingdom of our Will can not come, puts in doubt the Supreme Power itself. We can do all, the volition can be lacking to us, but when we want it, our power is so much that that which we want we do, there is no thing that can resist before our Power. Hence we have the power to rehabilitate him/(man), to make him more beautiful than before, and to strengthen and to cement his collapsed residence in a way as to make it stronger than it was, and with the puff of our power to enclose the thieves and his enemies in the dark abysses.

“So that man, for how much he slipped from within our Divine Will, he didn’t stop being our work, and although he disordered himself, our Power for decorum of our work that should be perfect and complete as we want, with his power he will put a limit to his/(man's) disorders, to his weaknesses and he will tell him with his empire: 'Enough even here; reenter into the order, take your post of honor as worthy work of (your) Creator.' They are prodigies of our omnipotence that he will work, which [man] won't have the strength to resist, but without force, spontaneous, enticed and attracted by a supreme strength, by an invincible love. Was not the Redemption a prodigy of our Power wanted by our Will, and our love that knows how to conquer all, even the blackest ingratitude, the gravest faults, and reciprocates in love where ungrateful man has offended him more? If drawn by man, (it is) certain that he could not re-arise with all the helps of my Redemption, because he is not disposed to take them. Many don't cease being sinners, weak, dirtied by the gravest faults. But if drawn with my Power, with my love, when the two balances overflow a little more and they touch it, with Will to conquer it, man will feel shaken and knocked down in a way that he will re-arise from evil in good and will reenter in our Divine Will from where he went out, in order to take his lost inheritance. Do you know where everything is? Everything is if our Will wants it and with divine decrees has decided on it; if there is this, everything is done, and it is so very true this decision, that they are facts.

"You should know that when I came upon the earth, while I made the office of Redeemer, at the same time all that which my Holy Humanity did enclosed so many acts of my Will as deposit to give to the creature. I didn't have need because I was the Divine Will himself. Hence my Humanity did as a most tender Mother, he enclosed in himself so many births of my Will for how many acts he did, in order to give them to the light and to give them birth in the womb of the acts of creatures, in order to form in their acts the kingdom of the acts of my Fiat. Whence he remains like a Mother, waiting with a love that makes him racked with spasms of pain, to give these divine births of his to the light. The other fact [is] that I myself taught the Pater Noster, so that everyone might pray that my kingdom come, so that my Will be done as in heaven so in earth. If it should not come, it would have been useless to teach such a prayer. And I don't know how to do useless things, and then the so many truths manifested on my Divine Will don't they say in clear notes that his kingdom will come upon the earth, not through human work, but through work of our omnipotence? Everything is possible when we want it. Much ease we put in doing as much in the little things as in the great ones, because all the virtue and power is in our act, not in the good that the act of our Power receives. In fact when I was upon the earth, since in all my acts my Power raced, the touch of my hands became powerful, the empire of my voice, and so on; and with the same ease I called to life the young girl, she had died by a few hours, and with the same ease I called to life Lazarus, he had died by four days, from which he was already corrupt and gave forth an unbearable stench; I commanded that they take away the bandages from him and then I called him with the empire of my voice: 'Lazarus, come forth!' To my ruling voice Lazarus resuscitated, the corruption disappeared, the stench stopped, and he returned healthy and flourishing as if he might not have died. True example (of) how my Power can make the Kingdom of my Fiat re-arise in the midst of creatures. This is a palpable and certain example [of] how my Power, in spite that man is corrupted, the stench of his faults more than a dead body infect him, he can be called a poor bandaged one that needs the divine empire in order to melt the bandages of his passions from him. But if the empire of my Power invests him and wants it, his corruption won't have life anymore, and he will re-arise healthy and more beautiful than before. Therefore it can be doubted that at the most my Divine Will might not want it, because they might not be able to merit such a good, but that my Power might not be able to do it, this not ever."

* * *

April 9, 1932

How Jesus goes molding the creation in order to make it re-arise in the new life of his truth. How only Jesus can manifest so many truths upon the Divine Will, because he possesses the source of him.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, I feel (as) the little baby that sip by sip becomes fed with this celestial food, which produces in my soul strength, light, indescribable suaveness; and then every truth that my beloved Jesus manifests to his little newborn is one of the most moving and delicious scenes and the most beautiful, that puts in my mind as bearer of the beatitude of the Celestial Country. Hence I felt immersed in the so many truths of the Supreme Fiat, and my always amiable Jesus visiting his little baby said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that if our Supreme Being might give to the creature the whole sky, the Sun, the earth, the sea, he would he not give as much as when he communicates the truths upon the Divine Will, because all the other things would remain to the exterior of creatures, while truths penetrates into the most intimate fibers of her soul, and I go molding the heartbeats, the affections and desires, the intellect, the memory, the will, in order to transform it all into the life of truth. And while I go molding them, I go repeating the prodigies of the creation of man, and with the touch of my hands I destroy the germs/seeds of evil and I make the germs/seeds of new life re-arise. The creature feels my touch and as I go molding her, the new life than becomes re-given to her. While the sky, the sun, the sea they don’t have the transforming virtue to form for the creature a sky, a sun, a sea; all the good reduces itself to the exterior and nothing more. Do you see therefore how many goods you enclose with having manifested to you so many truths? Therefore be attentive in corresponding to a good so great.”

Whence I continued to think on the so many truths on the Divine Will. How many joys, how many divine transformations. They have truly been the revealers of the Supreme Being. I would never have known my Creator, my Celestial Father, if the holy truths might not have done as messengers, bringing me so much beautiful news of their adorable Majesty. And while the so many truths were crowded in my mind, a doubt arose in me: has it really been Jesus who has manifested to me so many truths, or else the enemy or my fantasy? And Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My good daughter, how do you doubt it? The multiplicity alone of the so many truths on my Divine Will himself is sure proof that only your Jesus could have spoken so long on the subject itself, with strong and various themes, because possessing the source of him it is no wonder that I have manifested to you, and in so many ways; I could say, the little drops of light of the knowledges on my adorable Will; I say drops for me, comparing them to the great and the infinite sea that (there) remains for me to be able to say, because if I might want to speak all the Eternity, that which I have so much to say on the knowledges that regards my Supreme Fiat, I would never finish. But for you that which I have manifested have been seas, because that which is drops for me, because I am (an) infinite Being, it is sea for you because you are (a) finite creature. Hence only the prolixity and my saying so much is the most certain and most convincing proof that only your Jesus could hold so many reasons, and that only he can know so much of that which regards my Volition himself. The enemy doesn’t possess the source, and then for him to touch a taste would burn him more, because the thing that he hates more and that torments him more is my Divine Will. And if it might be in his power he would put the earth upside down, he would use all the arts and craftiness in order to make that no one might know and do my Will. Much less your fantasy, so limited and little; oh, how immediately the light of reason would remain extinguished, and how much would you have said, two or three reasons, you would have done as those that want to speak and feel struck dumb and don't know how to go ahead anymore, hence confused you would be reduced to silence. Therefore only your Jesus holds the word always new, penetrating, flood of divine freshness, of admirable suaveness, of surprising truths, which the human intellect is constrained to bow before and to say: 'Here there is the finger of God.' Therefore recognize such a good, and (let) your point of center in all things be my Will alone."

* * *

April 13, 1932

The human nature that let's itself be dominated by the Divine Will: field of his action and earth in bloom. How the Divine Will possesses inseparability.

I am always between the arms of the Divine Will like a baby pressed between the arms of the mama, who holds me so very pressed between his arms of light, that he doesn't let me see, feel and touch but the Divine Will alone. And I thought to myself: "Oh, if I might be free from the prison of my body, my flights would have been more rapid in the Fiat, I would have known more, I would have done one single act with Him! But it seems to me that my nature makes me make interruptions, as if it might put up obstacles, and it makes it difficult for me to always race in the Divine Will."

But while I thought this, my divine Teacher Jesus visiting my little soul said to me:

"Blessed daughter, you should know that one who lives in my Divine Will, holds the virtue to hold ordered the nature of the creature, and instead of being an obstacle it is her help in order to be able to complete more acts of Divine Will. Indeed it serves as earth to the flowers, that lends itself to form the beautiful flowerings that almost hides and covers it with a variety of their beauty, [to] which the Sun communicates the variety of the most beautiful colors and goes making them brilliant with its light. If it might not be for the earth, the flowers would lack the place in order to form life, in order to be able to be born and to make their beautiful appearance, and the Sun would not find where [and] to whom to communicate the display of its beautiful colors and of its pure sweetnesses.

"Such is the human nature for the soul that lives in my Divine Will. It is as fertile and pure earth that lends itself to give the field of action and to let her form not only the beautiful flowerings, but to make so many suns emerge for how many acts she goes doing. My daughter, it is an enchantment of beauty to see the human nature that lives in my Divine Will, covered and hidden as under of a meadow of flowers all invested with the most brilliant light. The soul alone would not have been able to produce so many varieties of beauty, while united she finds the little crosses, the necessities of life, the various circumstances, now sorrowful, now cheerful, that as seeds serve as to sow in the earth of the human nature, as to form its field in bloom. The soul doesn't hold earth and could not produce any flowering; instead united with the body, oh, how many more beautiful things she can do. More so that this human nature was formed by me, I molded it part by part giving it the most beautiful form; I can say that I did (as) the divine Craftsman and I put there such mastery that no one else can reach me. So that I loved her, I still see the touch of my creative hands impressed upon human nature; hence she is also mine, she belongs to me. Everything is in complete accord: nature, [soul], will human and Divine. When this is, that the nature lends itself as earth, the human will is in (the) act of receiving the life of the Divine Will in her acts, she lets herself be dominated in everything, nor does she know other in all her things than my Will alone as life, actor, bearer, conservator of everything. Oh, then everything is holy, everything is pure and beautiful! My Fiat is over her with his brush of light in order to perfect her, to divinize her, to spiritualize her. Therefore her nature can not be an obstacle to the flights in my Will. At the most it can be for you an obstacle to your volition, which you must always hold the aim of not giving it life, so that of your earth there is not to fear: that if it has, it receives and gives that which it has received. Indeed it gives more and changes the seeds into flowers, into plants, into fruits; and if not, it remains in its mute silence and remains as sterile earth.”

Whence I thanked Jesus for his beautiful lesson and I felt all content that my human nature could not harm me. Rather it could help me in making the life of the Divine Will grow in my soul, and I continued my rounds, the flights in his acts and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, my Divine Will possesses the inseparability from all his acts and effects, as much as if he works alone in himself and outside of himself, as if he works in the creature; or (if) the creature works in Him or else in order to execute that which my Divine Will wants. In this way of working, [my Will] puts forth of his, and he retains them as his acts and his properties, inseparable from Him. Now if the creature lives in my Divine Will, these acts make themselves common property with the one and the other. If then she makes some exits, she loses her first rights, that had been made in our house, and then the substance, the life of the act, the sanctity, the beauty, the prerogatives that are needed in order to be able to form one act of ours and [that] has been put forth by our Divine Volition. The creature has not done other than to assist and to concur with her will, to work together with ours. But of substance there has been put forth nothing of hers. Hence if she persists to live in our Volition, she masters together; if she goes out, with justice she touches nothing, but if she reenters she acquires anew the right of mastery.

“But there is great difference between one who lives in my Divine Will and works together and between one who not living in Him follows and completes in the circumstances that which my Fiat wants. This one takes in her act my limited Will, and as she finishes the act thus it remains, it doesn’t go ahead anymore; and although these acts are also inseparable from Him, however one sees these acts have not worked continuously: limited they take my Divine Will and limited they remain. Instead one who lives and works in Him, her act acquires the incessant act to work continually. These [acts] will always be agents in my Fiat, they will never lose the attitude; that the work of my Volition never ceases, as such they become the acts of the creature. Therefore I want you always in my Fiat, if you want to take him not limited and as drops, but (as) seas, in a way as to remain so very filled that you won’t touch and see other than my Divine Will.”

* * *

April 23, 1932

How the creature becomes called by the Divine Will. How many times she does her acts in Him, so many times she is reborn in his acts. Competition between Creator and creature.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues. I feel his call in all his acts, which are in the sky, in the sun, in the sea, in the wind, in the acts that he did in the Redemption, because there is nothing that exists that did not come forth from the Divine Volition. And he calls me in order to say to me:

“I have done everything for you, come to enjoy and possess all that which with so much love I have created for you, do not make yourself estranged from all that which belongs to you nor make ours and your possessions isolated and deserted. Come and make your voice echoed, so that it resounds in all our created things. Make us feel the sweet stamping of your steps. Solitude grieves us, company puts us in feast and gives us the sweet surprises of the joys that our beloved creature can give us.”

But while my mind turned in his works, my always amiable Jesus, visiting my poor soul, all tenderness said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Volition, since all created things were made for creatures, my Divine Will remained in each one of them to call the creature, because he didn’t want to remain alone, but he wanted she for whom things were made, in order to give her the rights over them and thus not remain defrauded in his purpose for which he had created them. Now who hears this call? One who possesses my Will as life. The echo of my Will that is in created things forms the same echo in the soul that possesses him, and between his arms himself he carries her where my Volition himself calls her. And since she holds her rights given by me, if she loves, all created things say love; if she adores they say adoration; if she thanks they say thanks, in a way that one sees flutter in the sky, in the sun, in the sea, in the wind, in everything, even in the little birdie that sings, the love, the adoration, the thanksgiving of the creature that possesses my Divine Will. How vast [is] the love and all that which she can do and say, heavens and earth are in her power. But this is still nothing.

“You should know that the soul that possesses my Divine Will, his divine omnipotence enters in her work, and true power means to diffuse oneself in everyone and everything, to recall everyone in that act. With his empire making himself felt by everyone, he calls the attention of everyone, in a way that they feel the working power of my Fiat in the act of the creature, because I can call it not her act but mine; and one who finds themselves in possession of Him, those are the Angels, the Saints; the Creation, they feel a vein of his power flow and everyone puts themselves at attention in order to receive it, and bending down they adore, thank, love the working Divine Will. One act of Him is the greatest thing, the most beautiful for all (of) heaven and for all the earth. One act of his, since it possesses complete power, so much so if he works in the human act, as much as alone, he can bring innovation, transformation over everything and make new things re-arise, that didn’t exist before. So that one act in my Divine Will takes the post in the divine order and with his powerful empire reigns over everyone, reigns with his enticing love, with his enrapturing beauty, with his joys and infinite sweetness; it is an act that encloses everything together. And those that don’t feel the beauty of him are constrained to feel the weight of divine justice over them. But everyone will feel the touch of the power of an act of my Will, no one will be excluded. And only these acts line themselves up in continuous homage toward God himself, because those that give more glory to God and continuous homage are the acts done in the Fiat, because they are acts reproduced by God himself and they take part in their incessant act.”

After this I was doing my acts in the Divine Will, and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, the soul that lives in my Will is in the continuous act of being reborn in the acts that she does in Him. If she loves, she is in the continuous act of being reborn in the divine love, and while born forms the life of love in her, [that] as life takes the primacy in all her being, by way (of) her heartbeat, her breath, the motion, the glance, the step, the will and all the rest becomes love; and how many times reborn, so many times more the love grows, this love as life. And in (the) act of always being born and grown, holds the enrapturing and wounding strength, that while it wounds us, it enraptures us, but with our same divine power, and we feeling ourselves wounded we pour forth love from our wounds, and we wound our beloved creature, and in every rebirth we double our love for her. Thus if she repairs, and how many times she repairs in our Will, so many times is she reborn in the divine reparation and it forms the life of reparation in her soul, so that the breath, the motion, the will and all her being acquires the life of reparation.

“And since it is not with one act alone that she repairs to us, but with an entire life, as life she holds the disarming power, and disarming us she converts the scourges into graces. Thus with all the rest that the creature can do in our Divine Will. They are lives that she acquires, which are fed by our divine sources. Thus if she praises us in our Divine Will, thanks us, blesses us, she forms an entire life of thanksgiving, of praise and of benediction toward her Creator, and every time that she does it, while she is reborn in these acts and grows, she forms the fullness of the life, in a way that the breath, the heartbeat, if she thinks, if she speaks, if she moves the step, if blood circulates in (her) veins, of the creature all together, there is no particle of her being that doesn't say ‘I thank you’, ‘I praise you’, ‘I bless you’. Oh, how beautiful it is to see her, that possessing so many lives for how many times she is reborn in her same acts done in our Divine Fiat, that for how many lives she possesses we feel in her heartbeat so many heartbeats in one, so many breaths, motions and steps in one, and of each some say love, some reparation, some thanksgiving, some praise and some benediction. These rebirths and lives form the most beautiful harmony in the fortunate creature that has had the good of acquiring them. And so much is our satisfaction that our look is always fixed in looking at her, our ears always intent to listen to her, the power of our Volition calls our continuous attention. And as she says to us ‘I love you’, thus we repeat to her: ‘We love you, O daughter.’ As she repairs to us, thus we press her to (our) heart; as she thanks us, praises and blesses us, thus we go repeating to her: ‘We thank you because you thank us, we praise you because you praise us, we bless you because you bless us.’ We can say that we put ourselves in competition with her. Heavens and earth are stupefied because the Creator puts himself in competition with his beloved creature. Therefore always in my Will I want you, because in Him you give us to do and to say and form our outlet of love.”

* * *

April 30, 1932

How living in the Divine Will is a gift. Example of the poor one and example of the king. How the gift is (an) excess of the love and magnanimity of God, which neither minds nor wants to keep accounts of the great value that he gives.

I felt myself all immersed in the Divine Volition. A crowd of thoughts preoccupied my mind, but always on the Fiat himself, because in Him one can not think of other; his sweet enchantment, his light that invests everything, his so many truths that as (a) formidable army take sides (all) around, they remove all that which doesn't belong to Him. The happy creature that finds herself in the Divine Will, finds herself as in a celestial atmosphere: all happy, in the fullness of the peace of the saints and if she wants something it is only that everyone might know a Volition so amiable, so holy, she would like that everyone might come to enjoy her happiness.

But I thought to myself: "But how can it be that creatures can come to live in the Divine Will in order to be able to form his holy kingdom?" And my beloved Jesus surprising me said to me:

"My daughter, how little you are! One sees that your littleness doesn't know how to elevate itself in the power, immensity, goodness and magnanimity of your Creator, and from its littleness it measures our greatness and our liberality. Poor tiny one, you disperse yourself in our interminable powers and you don't know how to give the just weight to our divine and infinite ways. It is true that humanly speaking, [for] the creature, surrounded by the evils as she is, to live in my Volition, he forms his kingdom in the midst of them, it is as if she might want to touch Heaven with (her) finger, that which is impossible, but that which is impossible to men is possible to God.

"You should know that living in our Will is a gift that our magnanimity wants to give to creatures, and with this gift the creature will feel transformed: from poor, rich, from weak, strong, from ignorant, learned, from slave of vile passions, sweet and voluntary prisoner of a Will all holy that won't hold her imprisoned, but king of herself, of the divine dominions and of all created things. It will happen as to a poor one that dresses in miserable rags, lives in a hovel without doors, hence he is exposed to thieves and enemies. He doesn't have sufficient bread to satisfy his hunger and is constrained to beg for it. If a king might give him a gift (of) a million, the poor one would change his fate and he would no longer make the figure of a poor beggar, but of a lord that possesses palaces, villas, he dresses with decency, holds abundant foods and is put in the condition to be able to help others. Who has changed the fate of this poor one? The million received in gift. Now if a vile coin holds the virtue to change the fate of an poor unhappy one, much more so the great gift of our Will, given as gift, He will change the unhappy fate of the human generations, except one who voluntarily wants to remain in his unhappiness. More so that this gift was given to man in the beginning of his creation, and ungrateful he rejected him with doing his will, removing himself from Ours.

"Now one who disposes herself to do our Volition prepares the post, the decency, the nobility where to be able to put this gift so great and infinite. Our knowledges on the Fiat will help and will prepare her in a surprising way to receive this gift, and that which they have not obtained even today, they can obtain tomorrow. Therefore I am doing as a king would do, who would like to elevate a family with bonds of relatives with his real family; in order to do this he first takes one member of them, he keeps her in his palace, raises her, feeds her together (with him), accustoms her with his noble ways, he entrusts her with his secrets, and in order to make her worthy of him he makes her live of his will, and in order to be more secure, and in order to not make her descend to the baseness of her family he makes for her the gift of his volition, so that she might hold it in her power. That which the king can not do, but I can do it with bilocating my Will in order to make him a gift to the creature.

"Whence the king holds his eyes fixed over her, he goes always embellishing her, dresses her with precious and beautiful attire in a way that he feels enamored; and not being able to endure her at length anymore, he binds her with the lasting bond of marriage, in a way that the one becomes the gift of the other. With this, both parts hold the right to reign, and that family acquires the bond of relatives with the king, and the king for love of she who has given herself to him, and that he himself is gifted to her, calls that family to live in his palace giving them the same gift that he has given to she whom he loves so much. Thus have we done. First, we have called one of the human family to live in the palace of our Volition; as soon as we made for her the gift of his knowledges, of his most intimate secrets. In doing this we experience contentments and indescribable joys and we feel how sweet and dear [it is] to have the creature live in our Volition, and our love pushes us, indeed it coerces/rapes us to make her the gift of our omnipotent Fiat. More so that [she] made for us the gift of hers, she already was in our power, and our Divine Will was able to be secure and at his post of honor in the creature. Now after we have made the gift of our Fiat to a member of this human family, she acquires the bond and the right of this gift, because we never do works and make gifts for one alone, but when we do works and make gifts we always do them in a universal way; hence this gift will be ready for everyone, provided that they want it and dispose themselves. Therefore the living in my Will is not property of the creature nor is it in her power, but it is a gift, and I do when I want, to whom I want, and in the times that I want. He is a gift of heaven made by our great magnanimity and by our inextinguishable love.

“Now with this gift the human family will feel so bound with their Creator, that they won’t feel distant anymore from Him, but so near as if they might be of his same family and might cohabitate in his same palace. With this gift they will feel so rich that they will no longer feel the miseries, the weaknesses, the riotous passions, but everything will be strength, peace, abundance of grace, and recognizing the gift they will say: ‘In the house of my celestial Father there lacks nothing, I have everything at my disposition, always in virtue of the gift that I have received.’ We always give gifts by effect of our great love and from our highest magnanimity; if this might not be, or we might want to mind if the creature merits it or not, if she has made some sacrifices, then it would not be a gift anymore, but payment, and our gift would be rendered as right and slave of the creature. While we and our gifts are not slaves of anyone. In fact man didn’t exist yet, and before he was we already created the sky, the sun, the wind, the sea, the earth in bloom and all the rest in order to make a gift of it to man. What had he done in order to merit gifts so great and perennial? Nothing, and in the act of creating him we gave him the great gift that exceeded all the others, our omnipotent Fiat. And although He rejected him, we however didn’t discontinue from giving him anymore. No, but we hold Him on reserve in order to give Him to the children, the same gift that the father rejected from us. The gift becomes given in the excess of our love, which is so much that he doesn’t know what to do, he doesn’t mind the accounts, while he gives the payment if the creature does good works, sacrifices herself, he gives with just measure and according to what she merits; not so in the gift. Therefore one who will be able to doubt what it means does not understand our Divine Being nor our breadth, nor where our love can arrive. However we want the correspondence of the creature, the gratitude and her little love.”

* * *

May 8, 1932

The creature with doing her will impedes the course to the gifts of God and if she might be able to would put him into immobility. How God in all his works gives the first post to the creature.

I continued to think on the Divine Will and of the grave evils of the human volition, and how this without the life of the Fiat is without guide, without light, without strength, without food, ignorant, because she doesn't hold the teacher that teaches her the divine science. So that without Him the creature knows nothing of her Creator. One can say that she is illiterate, and if she knows something, they are hardly the shadows or some vowel, but not with clarity, because without the Divine Will, there is no light, but always night. Behold the reason that God is so little known; the celestial language, the divine truths are not understood, because the Divine Will doesn't reign as life as first act. It seemed to me (that I) saw the human will, before my mind, as dying of hunger, ragged, cretin, all stained, limping and enveloped in dense darkness; and since she is not accustomed to live of light and to look at it, every little light of truth eclipses her sight, confounds her and blinds her more. Oh, how there is to cry over the great misfortune of the human will! Without the Divine it seems that she lacks the life of good and the necessary foods in order to live.

But while I thought this, my Celestial Teacher Jesus, making me his brief little visit, said to me:

"My blessed daughter, doing one's own will is so very grave, that it would be a minor evil if the creature might impede the course of the sun, of the sky, of the wind, of the air, of the water. And yet this course would cause such disorder and terror that man could live no more. And yet this great evil would be nothing in comparison to the grave evil of doing one's own will, because with this she doesn't impede the course to created things, but to her Creator himself. Adam with removing himself from our Will stopped the course of the gifts that (He) should give to his beloved creature. If he might have been able to he would have constrained God to immobility. Our Supreme Being with creating the creature wanted to remain in continuous correspondence with her, he wanted to give her now one gift and now another. He wanted to make her so many beautiful surprises not ever interrupted. Now as [the creature] does her will, thus silently she says to her Creator: 'Withdraw, I don't have anywhere to put your gifts. If you speak to me I don't understand you, your surprises are not for me, I am enough by myself', and with reason she says this, because without my Will that is her primary life, she has lost the life and the capacity where to put my gifts, to understand our celestial language, and she makes herself (a) stranger to our most beautiful surprises. The creature with not doing our Will loses the divine life, the most beautiful acts, most interesting, more necessary than her creation and of how she was created by God.

"Behold therefore, as man removed himself from our Fiat, he disarranged himself in a way that every step vacillated, because he detached himself, rejected the vital act of his life, and from the stable and permanent act that He should live with him as one life alone, that (is) our Divine Will. In a way that we feel immobilized by man, because we want to give and we can not. We want to speak and he doesn't mind us; it is as if from a distant we make our sorrowful laments heard by saying to him: 'Oh, man, finish it, recall in yourself that Will that you rejected! He doesn't mind your evils, and if you call Him He is ready to take possession of you and form his kingdom in you, of dominion, of peace, of happiness, of glory, of victory for me and for you. Oh, don't want to be enslaved anymore nor live in the labyrinth of your evils and miseries! (For) such I didn't create you, but I created you king of yourself, king of all. Therefore call my Will as life, and he will make you know your nobility and the heights of your post in which you were put by God. Oh, how content you will be, and you will content your Creator!"

After this he added:

“My daughter, one then feels the true life in herself, when she enters in my Divine Will, because in Him the creature sees with clarity her nothing(ness) and how this nothing feels the need of the All, that is of He who drew her from the nothing in order to live; and as she recognizes herself, the All fills her with himself. This nothing feels the true life, she finds in him the immediate contact of sanctity, of goodness, power, love and divine wisdom; she recognizes in herself the power of the creative work, his palpating life and the extreme need of this divine life, otherwise she feels as if in herself there might not be life. It is only my Will that makes her true nothing(ness) recognized by the creature and [my Will] goes continually blowing on this nothing in order to maintain the divine life always inflamed in her, in order to make her grow as a worthy work of our creative hands. Instead without our Will the creature feels as if she might be something and the All remains outside of the nothing.”

Whence I followed my acts in the Divine Will, and my poor mind was lost in the multiplicity of his works, which raced in search of man in order to embrace her and take sides around her in order to defend her, to lend her all helps, to felicitate her and to make her feel his loving laments, his sorrowful notes even in the depth of the heart, that while the Divine Fiat in all that which he does searches man out, wants to find her, love her and she in her acts doesn't search him out, doesn't surround him nor does she make him feel her loving notes nor her sweet laments that she wants He who so very loves her and whom she should love. Now while I lost myself in his divine works, my sweet Jesus resumed speaking:

“My daughter, all our works ad extra have been done and will be done only for creatures, our purpose is only for them, because we don't have need. Therefore in the work that we do the creature shimmers in our act, she flows in them as purpose of our work. And since every act has its purpose, thus the reason that moves us to work is the creature. Therefore in all our works the first post is occupied by her; she shimmers and flows in our act. Therefore we can say: ‘You were with us when we extended the sky and we formed the sun; in that azure(ness) and in that light we gave you the post of honor and you flowed in them. In every act of the Word done upon the earth, in every suffering, in every word you had your post of center and you flowed in them as your property.’ Now we did not give the creature the post in our act in order to make her be useless and in order to make her flow in them (as) almost idling; no, no, the idleness has not made anyone holy. We put her inside our acts because inside of ours we might put her acts. Ours should serve as model, as space in order to be able to put her acts inside with more security. We also work. To love is work. It is our work because love is working, vivifying, creating, sustaining everything and everyone. Hence in spite that the creature holds her post in our works, oh, how many of our works are seen empty of the acts of creatures! Indeed she doesn't even know them and lives as if we might have given her nothing. Whence our works have a [sorrow] and incessantly ask of her because while she holds her post [in them] she doesn't make use of them, nor with her love does she work together with the work of her Creator. And yet the centuries won't finish, because our works don't have the purpose for which they were made, that is the creature inside of them to work as center of the their acts. And these will be those that will let my Divine Will reign as life in their souls.”

* * *

May 15, 1932

How the knowledges on the Divine Will will form the eye and the capacity in order to look at and receive the gift of the Divine Fiat, and to accustom creatures to live as children. Disarrangement of the human will.

I am always returning in the Supreme Fiat, and feeling in myself the sweet enchantment of his light, of his peace, of his happiness, oh, how I would like that the whole entire world might know such a good, so that everyone might pray that his kingdom might come upon the earth! But while I said this, I thought to myself: "If living in the Divine Volition is a gift that [Jesus] must make to the human generations - Jesus loves so much, wants, longs for, that this Divine Will be known in order to make him reign - and why doesn't he hasten to give this gift?"

And my highest good Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

"My daughter, you should know that although I burn from the desire to see my Divine Will reign, I can not yet give this gift, first the truths that I have manifested, (with) creatures knowing them, they will have the great good to form the sight in order to be capable of understanding him and hence dispose themselves in order to receive a gift so great. One can say that now (they) lack their eye in order to see and the capacity in order to understand him. And therefore first I have manifested so many truths on my Divine Will, and as creatures will know these truths of mine, thus will they form the orbit where to put the pupil inside and animate it with sufficient light in order to be able to look at and understand the gift, that more than sun will be given and entrusted to them. If I might want to give it today, I would do as if I might want to give a sun to a blind one; poor little one, with the whole sun given she would be always blind, nor would her fate change nor would she receive any good, rather she would have a sorrow to hold a sun for gift and to not even see it nor receive the beneficial effects of it. Instead one who might not be blind, how many goods would she not receive [with] holding a sun for gift at her disposition! It would be her perennial feast and would put her in the condition of giving light to the others, and she would be surrounded and loved by everyone in order to obtain the good of the light that she possesses. Whence to give the great gift of my Divine Will, that more than sun will change the fate of the human generations, today it would be to give him to the blind, and to give him to the blind would be to give them useless gifts, and I don't know how to give useless things. Therefore I wait with divine patience and delirious that my truths make (their) way, prepare souls, enter in them and form the eye animated with sufficient light, that [creatures] can not only look at the gift of my Fiat, but [have] the capacity in order to enclose him in themselves, so that he forms there his kingdom and extends his dominion. Therefore patience and time make things done as is appropriate and as our Sovereignty merits in the work.

"We, our Supreme Being, do as a father would do who wants to give a great gift to his little child. The father calls the child and lets him see the gift. He says: 'This gift is prepared for you, already it will be yours', but he does not give it to him. The child remains amazed, enraptured in seeing the gift that his father want to give him, and remaining around the Father he prays him that he give him the gift, and he doesn't know how to detach himself, he prays and re-prays that he wants the gift. Meanwhile the father seeing him around profits in instructing the child, to make him understand the nature of the gift, the good, the happiness that he will receive from this gift. The child becomes mature with the manifestations of the Father and capable not only of receiving the gift, but of understanding what the gift that he should receive encloses of good, of greatness. Hence he presses himself more around the father, prays and re-prays, longs for the gift, arrives to cry and doesn't know how to remain anymore without the gift. One can say that he has formed in himself, with his prayers and sighs, with acquiring the knowledges of the gift that his father has made for him, the life, the space where to receive the gift as in sacred deposit. This delaying of the father to give the gift to his child has been a greater love; he burned, longed to give the gift to his child, but he wanted him capable and that he might understand the gift that she received, and no sooner than he sees him mature in order to receive such a good, he immediately gives it to him. Thus we do, more than a Father we long to give the great gift of our Will to our children, but we want that they know that which they should receive; the knowledges of Him mature and make our children capable to receive such a good. The so many manifestations that I have made will be the true eyes of the soul, in order to be able to look at and understand that which our Paternal goodness wants to give to creatures for so many centuries.

“More so that the knowledges that I have manifested on my Divine Will, as they will be known by creatures, they will cast in them the seed to make the love of progeny germinate toward their Celestial Father, they will feel our Paternity, and if [the Celestial Father] wants that (they) do his Will, it is because he loves them and wants to love them as children in order to participate in his divine goods. Hence our knowledges on the Divine Fiat will make them accustomed to live as children, and then every astonishment will cease that our Supreme Being gives the great gift of our Will to his children. It is a right of the children to receive the properties of the Father, it is a duty of the father to give his goods to the children. One who wants to live as a stranger doesn't merit the possessions of the Father. More so that our Paternity craves, longs for, burns from the desire of wanting to give this gift, so that one be the Will with his children. Then yes, our Paternal love will rest when we will see the work gone forth from our creative hands in the womb of our Volition, in our house, and our kingdom populated by our dear children.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will, it seems to me that I don't know how to remain if I don't think there. And my Celestial Teacher added:

“Blessed daughter, all the acts that my Divine Will does are so tied between themselves, that they are inseparable, in a way that if they want to be found, at first appearance one finds one act alone, but entering more within so many distinct acts are found the one from the other, but fused and tied together, that they can not be distinguished. This strength of union and inseparability forms the nature of the divine work. The creation itself says it, if one single star might be able to detach itself from its post in which it is connected together with all the other created things, it would already fall, and would cast (a) general confusion in all the other created things, such is the inseparability and union that they hold. All together, all have life, although distinct between themselves, and they form the beautiful harmony of all the Creation; separate it can be said that they lose life and cast confusion everywhere. Such is the human will separated from the Will of her Creator. Not only does she herself fall, but she goes casting confusion everywhere and if she might be able to she would disarrange everything and the order itself of her Creator, nor is there any wonder. The human will, created by us and separated from ours, it would be as a star detached from its post, where it possessed the divine strength, the union of common accord and of all the goods with its Creator. Detaching itself it loses the strength, the union and the goods in order to live. Hence by necessity it touches the fate to precipitate and to cast confusion everywhere.

“Now [with] living in my Divine Will, as the soul does her first act thus she feels the strength and the union of all the acts of the Divine Fiat. So that one act includes and encloses all the other acts, and he feels the need to continue his acts in order to connect himself together, in order to develop the strength of the Divine Will that he feels in himself, as life he doesn’t know to be without making himself be felt, he wants to breathe, to palpate, to work. One act calls the other, and thus it forms the sequence of the acts with the union of the acts of my Will. In order to form a life one act is not enough, one breath, one heartbeat, no, but there is needed the continuation (act) to breathe, to palpate and to work, and as the soul lives in my Divine Will thus he makes her breathe and palpate, and my Fiat forms his entire life of work, for how much it is possible for a creature to enclose in herself. Therefore if you want his life in you, let your acts be continuous in Him.”

* * *

May 22, 1932

Delightful scenes that the soul forms for her Creator. The Divine Will will give the gift of infused science to the creature, which will be as divine eye.

My poor mind swims in the immense sea of the Divine Will. In this sea it murmurs continually, but what does it murmur? Love, praise, thanksgiving, and the Supreme Being makes his murmur met with that of the creature, and gives love in order to receive love. What sweet meeting between the Creator and the creature that they give love to each other, and in this exchange of love are formed the waves of love, of light, of indescribable beauties, [in] which the poor creature not being capable of enclosing all in herself, feels drown, and while she has taken who knows how much, the drowning that she feels impedes her from being able to repeat that which she feels in herself of the ineffable secrets of love, of light, of divine knowledges, that the murmur of the Eternal has enclosed in her soul. But while I lost myself in so many knowledges as to not know how to repeat them, I felt myself stutter, I lacked suitable vocabulary, and in order not to blunder I pass on.

And my amiable Jesus, compassionating my incapacity and littleness, squeezed me to himself between his arms and said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you have reason that your littleness feels drown under the immensity of my light, of my love and of the innumerable truths that our adorable and holy Being contains. But our Power and immensity delights itself to fill the creature so much with light, with love, with our various knowledges, with sanctity, even to drown her, and one of the most beautiful scenes is to see the creature as drowned in our immensity, that she wants to speak and she is drown with light, with love, with surprising truths. Oh, how beautiful it is that she wants to speak of that which she feels, and our waves invest her and reduce her to silence! However we with this way make a display of ourselves with our beloved creature, and we do as a Teacher that wants to make a display of his science with his little disciple. He puts forth all of that which he knows, and the disciple listens, it fills the mind, the heart. But since they’re so many things that [the teacher] has said, [the disciple] doesn’t know how to repeat anything, but however it serves to make her appreciate and love the teacher, and to hope for the heights where she can arrive of his science. Being under his direction, it serves the teacher in order to make himself known and to receive the attention and affection and fidelity of the disciple. Thus do we: in order to make ourselves known and in order to make ourselves loved, when we see the creature empty of everything, that she doesn't want other than our Divine Will, we delight so much even to drown her with light, with love and with our truths that pertain to us, and then we go cutting it up for her little by little of that which we have infused all together, and thus we delight in adapting ourselves to her little capacity.

“Now you should know that one who lives in the Divine Will will reacquire, between so many prerogatives, the gift of infused science, a gift that will be a guide for her in order to know our Divine Being, that will facilitate her carrying out of the Kingdom of the Divine Fiat in her soul. It will be (a) guide for her in the order of natural things, it will be as the hand that guides her in everything and it will make known the palpating life of the Divine Volition in all created things and the good that it continually brings her. This gift was given to Adam in the beginning of his creation, together with our Divine Will he possessed the gift of infused science, in a way that he knew with clarity our divine truths. Not alone, but all the beneficial virtues that all created things possessed to (the) good of the creature, from the greatest thing, even to the littlest blade of grass. Now as he rejected our Divine Will with doing his, our Fiat withdrew his life and the gift with which he had been bearer of. Hence [Adam] remained in the dark, without the true and pure light of the knowledge of all things. Whence with the life of my Will returning in the creature, his gift of the infused science will return.

“This gift is inseparable from my Divine Will as light from the heat is inseparable, and where He reigns he forms the eye full of light in the depth of the soul, which by looking with this divine eye she acquires the knowledge of God and of created things, for how much it is possible for a creature. Now my Will withdrawing himself, the eye remains blind, because He who animates the life has departed, that is he is no longer the working life of the creature. It happens as to the body: even to such that the eye is healthy she sees, she distinguishes the colors, the objects, the people. But if the pupil becomes dark and she loses the light she remains blind. Hence she doesn't know how to distinguish anything anymore. At the most she will be helped by way of feeling in order to know and understand something. But her light is spent and is finished. Perhaps she will have eyes, but no longer full of the life of light, but of dense darkness that are bearers of sorrow to the lost sight. Such is my Will. Where He reigns he centralizes in the soul this gift of infused science, that more than eye sees and understands, but without effort: divine truths, the most difficult knowledges of our Supreme Being, but with a marvelous facility, without artifice and without study. More so [for] the natural things, [of which] no one can know the substance, the good that there is within, if not he who has created them. Hence no wonder if our Divine Volition makes himself revealer of our Divine Being and of the things that He himself has created in the soul where he reigns and not reigning, everything is darkness for the poor creature. Our children are blind and don't know nor do they love He who has created them, who more than Father loves them and longs for the love of his children. My Divine Will where he reigns he doesn't go with empty hands, but brings all the goods that he possesses. And if ungrateful they constrain him to withdraw, he brings everything with himself, because he is inseparable from his goods. He does as the sun: as the morning rises, thus it gifts the earth with its light and its beneficial effects, and as the evening withdraws, it brings all the light with itself, nothing remains, not even a drop of light for the night. And why? Because it can not nor is it able to detach one single particle of light, because it is inseparable from its light, and where it goes with the fullness of light that it possesses it forms the full day. Therefore be attentive, because where my Will reigns he wants to do great things, he wants to give everything, nor does he adapt himself to do little things, but he wants to form the full day and to show off in gifts and with magnificence.”

* * *

May 30, 1932

How the Divine Will searches the act of the creature in order to form his life in her. Difference between the Sacraments and the Divine Will. How He is life and those are the effects of Him.

My little mind continues to cross over the immense sea of the Divine Fiat. It seems to me that he in all things, and also over the Supreme Being holds the first post of dominion and of command, and says: “In vain you escape me”, and in all things can say: “I am here. I am, I am here for you in order to give you life. I am the Insuperable, no one can exceed me, neither in love, nor in light, nor in my immensity, in which I form so many lives of myself for how many lives I want to give to creatures.” Oh! power of the Divine Volition that in your immensity searches the act of the creature in order to form so many lives of You, in every single act of them, and how many [of] these acts they don’t receive and reject, and your life remains suffocated in you, in your immensity. Ah, you without ever tiring, with (a) love that conquers all, continue your searches of the human acts, in order to give your life and bilocate him in every instant!

But while my mind dispersed itself in the sea of the Fiat, my Celestial Teacher Jesus, visiting his little daughter, said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Volition, every act of the creature done in my Will is a step that she makes in order to draw near to God and God in his turn makes a step in order draw near to her. One can say that the Creator and the creature are always walking, they never stop, the one towards the other, and my Will descends in the act of the creature in order to form his step of divine life, and she climbs in the Fiat, in the divine regions in order to make herself conqueror of light, of love, of sanctity and celestial knowledges. So that every act, word, breath, heartbeat in my Will are so many steps of divine life that the creature makes, and He, the one who longs for these acts in order to have his field of action, in order to be able to form so many divine lives in the creature. This was the purpose of the Creation: to form our life in the creature, to have our field of divine action in her, and therefore we love so much that she does our Divine Will, in order to put our life in safety, not in us, we don’t have need of anyone, we are more than sufficient to ourselves, but in the creature. This was the great portent that we wanted and we want to do in virtue of our Will: to form our life in the life of the creature. Therefore if we don’t do this, the creation would remain without our first purpose, an impediment to our love, a continuous bitterness to look at her and to see a work so great work, and of such magnificence, and not realized and our purpose failed. And if there was not in us the certainty that our Will might have to reign in the creature in order to form our life in her, our love would burn all the creation and would reduce it into nothing. And if he supports and tolerates so much, it is because we see our realized purpose beyond the times.

“Now as the creature does her will, thus she steps backwards, and makes a step back from her Creator, and God steps backwards and it forms an infinite distance between the one and the other. You see therefore the necessity to persevere in a continuous way, to work in my Divine Will, in order to diminish the great distance between God and the creature produced by the human will, and do not believe that is (a) personal distance. I am as through everything, in everyone, in Heaven and in earth.

The distance that the human volition forms without mine is (a) distance of sanctity, of beauty, of goodness, of power, of love, they are infinite distances that only my working Volition in the creature can reunite and conjoin together and make inseparable the one from the other.

“This happened in the Redemption, every manifestation that was made by us on the descent of the Word upon the earth, it was a step that we made toward mankind, and as they longed and prayed for it, and they manifested to the people our manifestations, prophecies and revelations, thus they made so many steps toward the Supreme Being. So that they remained walking toward us, and we toward them, and as the time of having to descend from Heaven in earth drew near, thus we augmented the Prophets in order to be able to make more revelations, in order to be able to expedite the walk on both parts, so very true that in the first times of the world there was not any prophet, and our manifestations [were] so scarce that it can be said that one step was made every century. This slowness of walk cast coldness on the part of creatures, and almost held her from all in a way to say, my descent upon the earth (was) an absurd thing, not a reality, like one thinks today on the Kingdom of my Will: a way of saying and almost a thing that can not be. Hence the Prophets came after Moses, almost in the last times, near to my descent upon the earth, which behind our manifestations the walk on both was expedited, and then the Sovereign Lady of Heaven came, whom not only walked, but raced in order to expedite the meeting with her Creator, in order to make him descend and make him complete the Redemption. You see therefore how my manifestations on my Divine Will are certain proofs that He walks in order to come to reign upon the earth, and that the creature to which they have been made with an iron constancy walks and races in order to receive the first meeting, in order to give her soul in order to make him reign, and thus give him the step to make him reign in the midst of creatures. Therefore your acts are continuous, because only continuous acts are those that expedite the walk, overcome every obstacle, and alone are the conquerors that conquer God and the creature.”

After this the crowd of my thoughts continued on the Divine Will, and having made Holy Communion I thought to myself: “What difference is there between the Sacraments and the Divine Will?” And my Sovereign Jesus breaking his eucharistic veils made himself seen, and giving a sorrowful sigh said to me:

“My blessed daughter, the difference is great between the one and the other. The sacraments are the effects of my Will; instead He is life, and as life with his creative power he forms and gives life to the Sacraments. The sacraments don’t hold the virtue to give life to my Will, because He is eternal, neither does he have beginning, nor end. Instead my adorable Will always occupies the first post in all things, and possessing the creative virtue in his nature he creates things and his life itself where he wants, when and how he wants. One can tell the difference an image of which is between the sun and the effects that the sun produces. These don’t give life to the sun, but they receive the life of the sun and must remain at its disposition, because the life of the effects become produced by the sun. And then the Sacraments are received in time, in places and by circumstances. Baptism is given one time and no more. The sacrament of Penitence is given when one falls into sin. My sacramental life itself is given one single time a day. And the poor creature in this distance of time doesn’t feel over herself the strength, the help of the baptismal waters that regenerate her continually, nor the sacramental words of the Priest that strengthen her in a continuous way with saying: ‘I absolve you from your sins’; nor does she find, in her weaknesses and tests of life, not even her Sacramental Jesus that she can take in all the hours of the day. Instead my Divine Will, possessing the primary act of life and being able to give life, with his empire he holds the continuous act over the creature, in every instant he gives as life, life of light, of sanctity, of love, life of fortitude. In short he as life, times, circumstances, places, hours don't exist. There are neither restrictions, nor laws, especially because he must give life, and life is formed with continuous acts, not at intervals. And therefore in the vent of his love, with his continuous empire it can said that it is (a) continuous baptism, absolution not ever interrupted and (a) communion of every instant.

“More so that this Will of ours was given to man in the beginning of his creation as perennial life living in him. This was the substance, the fruit of the creation: our Will that should form our life in the creature. With this life we gave everything; there was nothing that she might have been able to have need of, that she might not be able to find in this Will of ours. It can be said that she would have held at her disposition all that which she might have wanted: help, fortitude, sanctity, light, everything became put in her power; and my Will took the pledge to give her all that which she wanted, provided that she might give the him dominion and let him live in her soul. Therefore the Sacraments were not necessary to institute when man was created. Because in my Will, possessing the beginning and the life of all the goods, the Sacraments, as means of helps, of medicines, as pardon, didn't have any reason to exist.

“But when man rejected this Will of ours, by which withdrawing himself he remained without divine life, hence without nourishing virtue, without the continuous act of receiving new and growing life - and if he didn't die entirely, they were the effects that according to his dispositions, circumstances and times my Divine Will gave them to him. Now seeing our paternal goodness that man goes always more and more precipitating himself, in order to give him a support, a help, He gave him the law as norm of his life; because in the Creation He didn't give him either the law or other, if not that my Divine Will, which with giving him life continuously gave him our divine law in nature, in a way that he should feel Him in himself as proper life, without having need that we might tell and command him. More so that where my Will reigns there are neither laws nor commands, laws are for the servants, for the rebels, not for the children. Between us and those that live in our Volition all is resolved in love. But with all the law, man did not re-make himself, and since our ideal of the creation had been man, and only for him was everything done, therefore I wanted to come upon the earth in the midst of them, and in order to give him more valid support, medicines more wholesome, means more secure, helps more powerful, I instituted the Holy Sacraments, and these act in times and circumstances, according to the dispositions of creatures, as effects and works of my Divine Will, but if with all this great good the soul doesn't let the Divine Will enter in her as life, she will always have her miseries, a life in the middle, she will feel her passions alive. The sanctity, the salvation itself, will always be precarious, because only my Will who gives himself as continuous life forms the sweet enchantment to the passions, to the miseries and forms there the opposite acts, of sanctity, of fortitude, of light, of love, in the evils of creatures, in a way that the human volition feeling the sweet enchantment, she feels flow in her evils the beauty, the good, the sanctity of the continuous act of life that my Will gives under his suave and sweet empire, and she lets him do that which He wants. Because a continuous act that gives perennial life can never be reached [by] other acts, helps and means for however strong and holy, to do the good that a continuous act can do.

“Therefore there is no greater evil that the creature can do, nor greater wrong that she can do to our Paternal goodness, than to not let our Will reign in her. The same in her power would induce us to destroy all the Creation, because the creature was made that she should be our residence, and not her alone, but all created things, skies, sun, earth, everything, being works gone forth from our Supreme Heights, we hold the right to live (in) her, and with living (in) her we conserve her with beautiful decorum and always new, as in the act in which we brought her forth to the light. Now the creature with not doing our Will puts us outside of our residence, and it happens to us as would happen to a rich Lord, that wanting to build a great and beautiful palace, when he has finished; he goes in order to live in it and they close the doors in (his) face, they throw stones at him, in a way that he is constrained to not put a foot inside, and to not be able to live in the same residence built by him, wouldn't it merit that it be destroyed by he who has formed it? But he doesn't do it because he loves his work, but waits and re-awaits, who knows [that] he can conquer in love, and by herself she opens the doors to him in order to let him enter with giving him the liberty to let him live (there). In such conditions the creature puts us with not letting our Will reign in her soul: she closes the doors in our face and throws the stones of her faults against us. And we with unconquered and divine patience wait, and she not wanting our Will in herself as life, with Paternal goodness we give her the effects of Him, that is the laws, the Sacraments, the Gospel, the helps of my examples and prayers to her, but for all this great good, not one can equal the great good that my Will can do as perennial life of the creature, because He is all (the) laws, Sacraments, Gospel, life together, he signifies all: able to give everything, possesses everything, this is enough in order to be able to understand the great difference that there is between my Will as continuous life in the creature, and between his effects that he can not produce in a perennial way, but by circumstances, in time, in the Sacraments themselves. And although the effects can do great goods, but they can never arrive to produce all the goods that the life of my Divine Will reigning and dominant in the creature can produce. Therefore be attentive my daughter, and give him the holy liberty to do that which he wants in your soul."

* * *

June 12, 1932

For one who lives in our Will, she finds all our works all in act and done for her. One who lives in the Divine Will forms the office of breeze to the divine works.

My little soul always turns in the Divine Fiat. It feels the irresistible need to live in Him, because in Him I find everything at my disposition, everything is mine: indeed I feel it as a secret invitation that all created things make me in the depth of my heart, that with mute voices they say to me: "Come in the midst of us, come to possess us and to enjoy the so many beautiful works that our Creator has done for you, and in order to give ourselves to you." Oh, what sweet enchantment all the creation holds looked at through the veils of the Divine Will! But while my little soul was as involved in the sweet enchantment of all the creation, my beloved Jesus repeating his dear little visit with me said to me:

"My blessed daughter, for one who lives in my Divine Will everything is present, the past and the future don't exist for her. Everything is in act. Since she enters in the divine order, our Paternal goodness doesn't want to give a past love that was held in the Creation, nor a love that should occur. This would not breach the heart of the creature, because to her it would seem that the love that issued forth from our bosom in the Creation would be as a love and work directed not for her, and those of the future as love and work to hope for. More so that in us past and future don't even exist. Past and future is for one who lives outside of our Will, because she only looks at the appearance of our works, not inside of them, while one who lives in Him looks at our works inside of us and looks at our continuous Creation and for every single creature. So that for the happy creature that lives in our Volition, we make her see and touch with (her) hand our act of extending the sky, of creating the sun, the wind, the air, the sea, and so on, all for her, which she sees and understands with clarity our intense love in every created thing for her, our power and wisdom in ordering them for her love, in a way that she feels involved and as drowned under the waves of our love, power, wisdom and goodness of every created thing. And while she feels drowned, she sees that he doesn't indicate (the) finish of the creation for her, he never says enough, but continues, always continues the creative act, and she, seeing that our creative and working act never ceases, makes an echo to our love and never stops loving us. Oh, how beautiful it is to find in the creature a continuous love that never ceases, as ours doesn't cease! Indeed seeing herself drown by our continuous love, with sustaining the creative act for her love, in order to reciprocate she makes use of his stratagems in order to imitate us, and says to us: 'Supreme Majesty, oh, if I might have the power I also would make so many skies, suns and all that which you know how to do, for your love, but since I am not able to give you sky and sun and all that which you have given me, in order to tell you that I want to love you a great, great deal.' And oh, how content, repaid we remain, that the creature makes use of and gives us our love, her deed, in order to love us."

"Therefore in our Will there are no things dissimilar between Creator and creature. If she loves, she makes use of our love in order to love us; if she works, she works in our works, neither does she love, nor work outside of our love and of our works. We can say [that] our love is hers and hers is ours, and we have done our works together.

"Behold, therefore this living in our Volition felicitates us and the creature, because we created her for us because we want to have something to do with her, to be together, to work together, to felicitate each other and to love each other together. Our purpose was not to hold her distant; no, no, but together and fused with us. And in order to hold her absorbed we gave her our creative and working act, which as he created things thus he formed his waves of love and opened veins of happiness in the creature, in a way that [she] should not only feel inside of herself our Will, our palpating and working life, but the open sea of our joys and our happiness, as to feel Paradise in her soul. And not only is the Creation always in act, but also the Redemption is always in act, and one who lives in my Divine Will feels the continuous act of my descent from Heaven to the earth, and really for her, for her love I descend, am conceived, am born, suffer and die, everything is for her and in order to make me the pair, I descend and she receives me, is conceived in me, reborn with me, makes life together with me and dies with me in order to re-arise with me. There is nothing that I have done, that she doesn't want to do together with me. So that I feel her inseparable from the creation, inseparable from the Redemption and from all that which I did, and if she is inseparable from all our works, from my life itself, what shouldn't I give to one who lives in our Will? How shouldn't I centralize everything in her? My love would not support it if I might not do this. Therefore if you want all alive in my Will, I don't know how to give things in half, but all, and you will have the great good to feel in yourself our work in continuous act, and oh, how you will understand how much you have been loved by your Creator and how very obliged you are to love him!"

After this I all abandoned myself in the arms of the Divine Will, but my mind was uneasy for certain sorrowful memories, and my sweet Jesus having compassion on me came and blessed me. His benediction was as beneficent dew, which put me in perfect calm, and I felt as a little child all timid, gone forth and freed from a tempest, and my beloved Jesus all goodness said to me:

“My good daughter, courage, do not fear, because courage is the powerful weapon that kills timidity and puts in flight every dread, put everything, everything aside, and come into my Divine Will to form your breeze to all our works. They are all ordered in our Fiat, but they don’t move themselves. They want the breeze of the creature in order to move (their) step toward them, and if the breeze is strong they race, they fly, in order to be bearers of the good that every single work of ours possesses. So that the soul that enters in our Will, as she enters she unites herself with our acts in order to do hers in ours, and as she unites herself, thus she forms the breeze and with the same strength of our Will moves, calls, enraptures, strengthens with her sweet and penetrating breeze all our works and puts them en route toward creatures. Oh, how content we remain, how we long for this sweet and refreshing breeze that the creature brings us in our Volition! Therefore be attentive, nor want to lose peace, otherwise you can not come into our Will to form your breeze, the sweet refreshments, the freshness to our ardent love and the motion to our works, because they don’t enter if not that (is those) pacific souls in our Volition, for the others there is no post; and not feeling you follow his steps and his works not [being] courted by your breeze, with sorrow he says: ‘Oh, the daughter of my Will remains behind and leaves me alone without her company.’

“Now my daughter, you should know that our Divine Being as he created man, thus he remained over him in the act of raining sanctity, light, love, goodness, beauty, and so on from us. Whence [man] with removing himself from our Divine Will he removed himself from under our rain.

“Hence the soul that comes in our Will, since with her acts in ours she forms for us the breeze and moves all our works, we form the rain and we re-pour ourselves first over the fortunate creature and then over everyone. And as the favorable breeze in our Fiat calls the rain, invokes it, longs for it from our Supreme Being, thus the work of the human will outside of ours forms the contrary wind and drives off our beneficent rain and makes it remain in (the) air; behold therefore many creatures see themselves as arid earths, without flowering and without fruits. But this does no harm for one who lives in our Divine Volition. She withdraws herself from everyone and comes to live with her Divine Family, and feels over herself our continuous rain that our Divinity forms over her.”

* * *

June 17, 1932

How one who lives in the Divine Will encloses and works and weaves her acts with those of the Virgin and those of Our Lord, and how it forms a marriage between all things that belong to the Divine Will.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues. I feel his omnipotent strength that invests all of me, and my little soul as undone in a way that I don’t want, I don’t feel, I don’t touch, but the Divine Will alone, and if some little cloud invests my mind, immediately his divine light, almost without giving me time inundates me and puts me in flight, and I, now cast myself into the arms of my Celestial Mama as to my refuge, or else in the arms of my sweetest Jesus in order to re-find my dear Life, and I pray now to the one (and) now the other that they enclose me in the midst of the their acts in order to be able to remain secure and defended from everything and from everyone.

But while I thought this and other, my Highest Good Jesus squeezing me between his arms said to me:

“Blessed daughter, my acts and those of my Queen Mamma, our love, our sanctities, they are in (the) act of continuous expectation to enclose your acts in the midst of ours, in order to give them the form of our acts and to put there the seal of ours over [the] acts of the Sovereign Lady of Heaven, they are woven with my acts, therefore they are inseparable, and one who lives in our Divine Volition comes to work in the midst of our interlacement, and [her acts] remain enclosed in the midst of our acts, which holds them in custody as triumph and work of the Divine Fiat. Nothing enters in our acts, if they are not birth of Him. You see therefore where sanctity becomes formed for one who lives in our Will, in the midst of our sanctity, she loves in the midst of our love and works in the midst of our works. So that one who works in our Volition will feel as in nature the inseparability she from our acts and we from hers, as the light [is] inseparable from the heat, the heat from the light, and therefore [these souls] are our continuous triumph, our glory, our victory over the human will. They are our divine properties that we form in her and she forms in us. The human volition and the Divine Volition kiss continually, they fuse together, and God develops his life in the creature and she develops her life in God.

“Beyond this, (for) one who lives in my Will there is no thing that pertains to my Fiat in which the creature doesn’t acquire her rights. Right over our Divine Being, right over her Celestial Mama, over the Angels, the Saints, right over the sky, the sun, all the creation. And God, the Virgin and everyone, acquires the right over her. It happens as when two young espoused ones unite together with an indissoluble bond, that on both parts they acquire the right over the same persons and over all that which pertains to both. It is a right that no one can take away from them.

“Thus for one who lives in our Volition it forms the new, true, real wedding with the Supreme Being, and with this becomes formed a marriage with all that which belongs to Him. Oh! how beautiful it is to see this creature married with everyone; the dear, the darling, the beloved by everyone, and with right everyone loves her, they long to enjoy her and to hold her together with themselves. And she loves everyone, gives everyone the right over her and she gives to everyone. And the new and long relationship that she has acquired with her Creator, oh, if it might be able to be seen from earth, they would see that God carries her between his arms, the Sovereign Queen feeds her with the dainty food of the Divine Volition, Angels and Saints court her, the sky extends itself over her in order to cover her and to protect her, and troubles one who touches her. The sun fixes her with his light and kisses her with his heat, the wind caresses her; there is nothing created by us that doesn’t lend itself to make its office around her. My Will moves all around her, so that everyone and everything might serve her and love her. Therefore one who lives in Him gives everyone to do, and everyone feels the happiness of being able to extend their field of action inside and outside of the fortunate creature. Oh, if all creatures might understand what it means to live in my Divine Will, oh, how everyone would aspire and would make competition to make their celestial sojourn in Him!”

Whence I more than ever felt all abandoned in the immensity of the light of the Divine Volition, and I saw and I felt within, my sweet Jesus all attentive over the littleness of my poor soul. He took care of everything, he wanted to give me everything, to do everything in a way that one saw that with the touch of his fingers he formed in me the heartbeat, animated the breath, the motion, held in order the thoughts, the words and everything, but with so much love and tenderness that it enraptured. And blessed Jesus in seeing me amazed said to me:

“My little daughter, do not marvel of my so many attentions and loving tendernesses that I do inside and outside of you. You should know that in the soul where my Divine Will reigns I myself serve, hence for (the) decorum of my Divinity and sanctity I lend my acts as if they might be for my same life, therefore I put there the intensity of my love, the order of my thoughts, the sanctity of my works, and in seeing the docility of the creature, that lends herself as daughter to receive the offices of her Father, his loving tendernesses, the life of the Father in his daughter, oh, how happy and honored I feel in order to serve her! More so that I serve myself in my daughter, and [for] one who serves himself it is not servitude, but it is honor, glory, it is knowing how to guard in dignity, in sanctity, in the order of his state without descending into the baseness. Servitude commences when other persons are used, but to serve oneself maintains the heights of ones state. On the other hand where my Divine Will reigns it is my interest that all that which the creature does are worthy acts of Him and that they are birthed of my acts; the Divine Will and human acts would be unsuitable, therefore I perform to make everything serve my same Will.”

Other than this, while I followed my abandonment in the arms of Jesus, He added:

“Blessed daughter, my Humanity so very loves the human family, that I carried them and I still carry them in my Heart; they are pressed between my arms and every suffering, work, prayer that I did, were new bonds of union between me and them. So that all my Being and all that which I did, raced, raced as impetuous torrent toward every creature, that dissolving in love they constituted themselves bond of union, of love, of sanctity, of defense, that forming arcane voices of wheedling, wooing, delirious love, said to each one of them: ‘I love you, my children, I love you a great deal and I want to be loved.’ My Humanity reordered and established the true union between Creator and creature, and bound everyone between them as members united with the head. And it was really I who made myself head of the whole human family. Hence virtue holds by itself binding strength to bind with God, not alone, but to bind with creatures, in a way that [if] one exercises patience, well then her patience binds itself with all those that have patience and disposes the others to have patience. Thus one who is obedient, humble, benevolent, they form the different categories in my Church. What to tell you then of the extensive bonds that one forms who does and lives in my Divine Will. Since this one finds herself in Heaven and in earth, she puts her bonds everywhere; with her acts she binds heaven and earth and calls everyone to live of Divine Will.”

* * *

June 26, 1932

Sublimity and power of the sacrifice. How God when he wants to give a great good asks the sacrifice from the creature; example of Noah and Abraham.

I was making my round in the Divine Will in order to re-trace all that which he has done, in order to make his acts mine, in order to be able to say: I was and am with you, and I do that which you do, so that that which is mine is yours. And that which the saints have done in your virtue is also mine, because you are the source that circulates everywhere and produces all goods. And while I turned I arrived at the point of the story of the world when God asked from Noah the sacrifice to build the ark. And I offered that sacrifice as if it might be mine, in order to ask the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth. But while I did this, blessed Jesus detaining me in that point of the story said to me:

“My daughter, all the good of the story of the world is founded in the sacrifice needed by creatures, by my Supreme Will, and how much greater is the sacrifice that we ask from her, so much more good do we enclose within. And we ask these great sacrifices when [creatures] with their sins merit that the world might be destroyed, making [us] bring forth from within the sacrifice, instead of the destruction, the new life of creatures.

“Now you should know that in this point of the story of the world they merited that creatures might not exist anymore. Everyone should perish. Noah with accepting our mandate and presenting himself to the great sacrifice, and for so (many) long years, building the ark, he repurchased the world and all the future generations. As he sacrificed himself in a time so prolix, with difficulties, with labors, with sweat, thus he disbursed the coins, not of gold or of silver, but of all his being in the act of following our Volition. Thus he put forth enough coins to repurchase that which was about to be destroyed. So that if the world still exists they owe it to Noah, that with his sacrifices and with doing our Will as we wanted that he might do it, he saved man and all that which should serve man. A prolix sacrifice wanted by God says great things, universal goods, sweet chain that ties God and men. We ourselves don’t feel ourselves escape from the labyrinth of this chain so long that the creature forms for us with a prolix sacrifice, rather it is so very sweet and dear that we let ourselves be tied by her as it seems and pleases her.

“Now Noah with his prolix sacrifice repurchased the continuation of the human generations. After another distance of time of the story of the world came Abraham, and our Volition commanded him that he sacrifice his child. It was a hard sacrifice for a poor father; it can be said [that] God tested man and demanded an inhuman proof and almost impossible to execute, but God holds the right to ask that which he wants and whatever sacrifice that he wants. Poor Abraham, he was put to such straights that his heart bled and he felt death in himself, the fatal blow that he should deal upon his only child. The sacrifice was exuberant, so much so that our Paternal goodness wanted the execution of it but not the completion, knowing that he would not have been able to live. He would have died of sorrow after an act so excruciating of killing his own child, because it was an act that exceeded the strengths of nature, but Abraham accepted everything, he didn’t mind to anything, neither to the child, nor to himself, because he felt consumed with sorrow in his own child. If our Volition, as he commanded him, might not have impeded the fatal act, in spite that he would have died together with his beloved child, he would have already made the sacrifice wanted by us. Now this sacrifice was great, exuberant and uniquely wanted by us in the story of the world. Well this sacrifice elevated him so much, that he was constituted by us Head and Father of the human generations. And with the sacrifice of sacrificing his child, he disbursed coins of blood and of intense sorrow in order to repurchase the future Messiah, for the Hebrew people and for everyone. In fact after the sacrifice of Abraham, that which we didn’t do before, we made ourselves often felt in the midst of creatures. The sacrifice held the virtue to approach ourselves to them, we formed the Prophets, even to such that the longed for Messiah came.

“Now after another distance of long time, wanting to give the Kingdom of our Will we wanted the sacrifice where to lean it, and that while the earth is inundated by sins and merits to be destroyed, the sacrifice of the creature repurchases it. And with her and in her sacrifice she recalls the Divine Will to reign and make the new life of my Volition reborn in the world in the midst of creatures. Behold, therefore I asked the prolix sacrifice of your life sacrificed within a bed of sorrow. It was the new cross that I have not asked and given to anyone, that should form your daily martyrdom, and you know that it is, because so many times you have moved me to lament. Daughter, when I want to give a great good, a new good to creatures, I give a new cross and I want a new and unique sacrifice(;) cross that the human one doesn't know how to give reason to, but there is my divine reason which man is obligated not to investigate (but) to bend his brow and adore it. And then it concerned the Kingdom of my Will, and my love had to invent and wanted new crosses and sacrifices not ever received in order to be able to find pretexts, support, strength, sufficient coins and the longest chain in order to make him tied by the creature. And the certain sign when we want to give a great and universal good in the world, is asking from a creature a great sacrifice and the prolixity in it. They are insurances and certainties of the good that we want to give, and when we find one who accepts, we make for her a portent of grace and in her sacrifice we form the life of that good that we want to give.

“So that my Will wants to form his kingdom in the sacrifice of creatures, surrounding himself with it in order to be secure and with her sacrifice to undo the human will and to erect his; and with this so many coins of divine light becomes formed before our Divinity, in order to repurchase the Kingdom of our Divine Will and to give it to the human generations. Therefore do not wonder over your long sacrifice nor of that which we have disposed and do in you. It was necessary to our Will, nor give thought that you don't see and feel in the others the effects of your sacrifice. It is necessary that with your sacrifice you make the purchase with our Divinity. And when you have negotiated with God the purchase is secure, in his time the Kingdom of the Divine Volition will have life with certainty, because the purchase was made by the sacrifice of one belonging to the human family.”

* * *

June 19, 1932

Prodigies and secrets that living in the Divine Will encloses; moving scenes. Generation of the divine acts in the creature, custody and divine jealousy.

I am between the arms of the Divine Fiat, his dominion extends itself over my littleness in everything, but his empire is not slavery, no, but union, transformation, in a way that the creature feels that she dominates together, and letting herself be dominated she acquires the virtue to dominate the Supreme Will himself. But while my mind swam in the sea of the Divine Fiat in a way that I felt as drowned by his waves, my celestial Jesus visiting my poor soul, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, the living in my Volition encloses so many prodigies and secrets as to make heaven and earth astounded. You should know that as the littleness of the creature enters in Him she disperses herself in his immensity, and the Divine Will receives her in his arms in order to make a conquest of her, and the human volition makes herself conqueror of the Divine. Now in these conquests on both parts, the Divine Will celebrates the conquest of the human, making use of her as he wants. The human will celebrates the great conquest made by the Divine and wanting to make use of him she sends him to heaven, as her conquest and bearer of the new joys and happiness that she possesses. My Will conquered by the soul doesn't give himself back, bilocating himself he remains and departs for his Celestial Country only in order to comply with she who has conquered him, and he carries the new conquest that he has made of the human volition and the joys and happiness that the conquering Divine Will encloses(.) My felicitating and beatifying Will that is in heaven and my conquering one that is in earth they plunge themselves together and inundate the celestial regions with the new joys that my conqueror Divine Will possesses. Because you should know that the joys of my conqueror Will are very distinct and different from those of my felicitating one. The conquering one doesn't remain in the power of the blessed, but in the power of the creature that she must send him from the earth, and they become formed in the midst of the fire of sorrow and of love, and upon the annihilation of one's own volition. Instead the felicitating joys remain in their power and they are the fruits and effects of the Celestial sojourn in which they find themselves. There is a great difference between the joys of my conquering Will and those of my felicitating. I can say that my conquering joys don't exist in heaven, but only in earth. And oh, how beautiful it is to see the creature that, (for) how many times she does her acts in my Volition, so many times she makes herself conqueror of Him and makes him depart for heaven, for Purgatory, into the midst of the terrestrial creatures, wherever she wants. More so that my Will being everywhere and anywhere, he should not do other than to bilocate himself in order to give the fruit, the joys of the new conquest that the creature has done with Him.

“My daughter there is no more moving scene, more delicious, more useful, than to see the littleness of the creature come into our Divine Will, to do her little acts and make her sweet conquest of an immense, holy, powerful, eternal Will, that encloses all, can do all and possesses all. The littleness of the creature in seeing herself conqueror of a Divine Fiat so interminable remains stupefied, she doesn't know where to put him, she would like to enclose him all in herself, but she lacks the space. Therefore she takes for how much she is able, even to fill all of herself. But she sees that there still remains immense seas, and doing as (the) brave one she would like that everyone might be able to take such a good. Behold therefore she sends him to heaven as sacred right of the Celestial Country, and to whomever wants him, and with anxiety sets herself about to do other acts in Him in order to reacquire him so many times for how many acts she goes doing. It is the true divine commerce that God and the creature forms between heaven and earth.”

Whence my mind continues to lose itself in that Fiat, which always wants to give himself to the creature and that while he gives he never finishes to give. And my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, the human will is the font and substance of the life of the creature. From it she draws the life of the works, the thoughts of her mind, the variety and multiplicity of her words. If the human life might not have a free will, it would be a life without font and without substance. So that it would lose all the beauty, the speciousness, the admirable interlacement that the human life can weave.

“Thus the Divine Will where he reigns makes himself font, substance and life of the acts done in Him. Whence as she thinks, speaks, works, walks, this font diffuses himself in the acts of her, he always does new acts and forms the harmony of the divine work in the creature. Now you should know that all our solicitude is for these acts, because in them is formed the generation of our divine acts in the depth of the creature. And oh, our contentment that we can continue the generation of our acts. And in this generation we feel ourselves working God, not the impeded God, in which we can not develop the generation of our acts, because there is not our Will in her. Hence to our solicitude is added our custody and jealousy of these acts. Your Jesus remains inside and around the creature in order to guard her, my jealousy has a fixed gaze in order to watch them, in order to felicitate me and take up for me all the gusto that the generation of his acts worked in her possess. After all our Will possesses an infinite value, and not guarding one single act of Him would be to go against ourselves. Indeed you should know that being the font and substance of our Supreme Being, our power, sanctity, goodness and all our attributes make themselves crown around our Will and all his acts, in order to depend on Him and to make for him homage and custody of all his acts that he does, as much in us as in the creature. Therefore be attentive and allow yourself to be dominated by my Volition, if you don't want to ever lose your Jesus, whom you so very long for, love and want."

* * *

July 9, 1932

Hunger that the Divine Will produces. Life sentence of love. How God forms the persecution of love to the creature.

I feel under the empire of the Divine Will, and if (for) some minute I don't feel his empire I feel without life, without food, without heat, I feel that the divine life finishes, because there is neither one who forms it nor who feeds it, and in my sorrow I go repeating: "Jesus help me, without your Volition I die of hunger. Oh, make me feel his sweet rule, so that, feeding me, your life lives in me and I live of You." And my beloved Jesus, having pity on me, all love and tenderness has pressed me between his arms and said to me:

"My little daughter of my Volition, courage, do not batter yourself, the divine life formed and fed by my Volition can not die, and if you feel hunger, it is rather that you do not always hear my speaking on the other wonders and novelties that my Will possesses. This interrupted speaking of mine makes you feel the hunger always new for the food that He possesses. But this prepares you to receive the new food of his knowledges in order to make you grow and be fed only of Divine Volition, neither would you submit to take other food, you would shun it and would content yourself with dying of hunger, because one who has tasted him so many times doesn't know how to adapt to take other foods. But this hunger is also a fortune, because it can serve you as access into the Celestial Country, and you should know that the only food of these divine regions is the new act not ever interrupted of my Divine Will. This food that possesses all tastes, all delights, is the daily food and of all instants in the Celestial Jerusalem. And then feeling hunger says life, not death, therefore wait with unconquered patience (for) the food of my Will, which will re-make you anew from the hunger suffered, with such abundance that you won't be capable of taking it all."

And interrupting the speaking of Jesus I said: "My love, my heart bleeds in telling you it, it seems to me rather that you don't have that continued love for me anymore, that made you always speak, and making for me so many new enchanting surprises of your Being and of your Volition, I felt and touched with (my) hand your palpating love for me, so much so that I was constrained to say: 'How much you love me Jesus.' Now [because of] this interrupted speaking of yours it seems to me that I am not always loved by you, and passing from a continuous love to an interrupted love is the cruelest of torments, and I go repeating: 'I am not loved! I am not loved by He whom I love so much!'" And Jesus breaking my speaking added:

“My daughter, what do you say? You should know that when the creature loves us, not to love her we would act against (the) nature of our Divine Being, to be loved and not to love is not of the Supreme Being, and if this might be able to (happen), and we might be capable of suffering, the love of the creature would put us in a life sentence of torments and it would become our persecutor, nor would it give us peace such that until the love of the one and the other were fused together, they would kiss each other and would rest together. Ah, you don’t know what it means to love and to not be loved by him and she whom she loves! All the suffering, the restlessness carries her off who doesn’t love, because one who loves remains at her post, she carries out the most sacrosanct of duties. In such a state our Divine Being finds himself because we love too much and man doesn’t love us, our love pursues she whom we love, it puts her in a life sentence, torments her, doesn’t give her peace. Restlessness is the certain sign that the creature has been targeted by our love, that he wants to conquer the love of the creature by way of persecution. Therefore be quiet. If you love us, our love loves you before you, and so much is the inseparability of ours and of your love, that yours forms the little heat, and ours, feeding yours, forms the immensity of the light, in a way that the one and the other lose the separative virtue, it is as if they were one nature alone, they always live together in order to form the one the life of the other. Therefore if my saying is not continuous, it doesn’t mean broken love. No, it would be interrupted if you might not feel (that you) want to do, even at the cost of your life, my Will. This would be to not have him anymore in your power, and if my goodness has arrived to so much as to give him into your power, this assures you that my love is continuous for you. Because you should know that one who does and lives in my Divine Volition is none other than the working life of God himself in the creature. Our love is so much for one who lets herself be dominated by our Divine Volition, that he lets himself be sweetly imprisoned by her; restricts himself, reduces himself and takes high pleasure to love, to work in her soul. But while he restricts himself he remains immense and works with infinite ways, as we love and work in ourselves. Because our nature is that: immensity, infinity, and all that which we do remains immense and infinite that we are, and oh, our contentment, that while we restrict ourselves in her littleness we give course to the love and to our works, and she remains filled, it flows out, it fills heaven and earth, and we have the great glory and honor to love and to work as God in her littleness, and if you might know what one single act means of love, one single work done by us in you, you would die of joy from it and all of eternity would not be enough for you in order to thank us for such a good. Therefore leave me to do, let me do that which I want with you, and be certain that we will remain content you and I.”

* * *

July 14, 1932

Celestial atmosphere, Jesus at watch of the act of the creature; labor of the one and of the other. How the acts done in the Divine Will watch and embrace the centuries and are the watchmen and the sentinels of creatures.

I am always occupied with and in the Divine Volition. In Him there is always work to do, but it is not a labor that tires. No, rather it gives strength, makes divine life grow and inundates one with joy, with peace, one feels a celestial atmosphere inside and outside. But while I swam in the eternal waves of the Divine Volition, my Highest Good Jesus visiting my little soul said to me:

“Blessed daughter, it is I who forms the celestial atmosphere inside and outside of the creature, because no sooner than she enters into my Divine Volition than I put myself to watch of the act that she goes doing, and she forms the ground with her acts, and I form the divine seed in order to cast in the act of the creature. So that her acts serve as earth, and I, Celestial Farmer, by filling her with my seeds I make use of it to gather the harvest of the works that are done in my Will. Do you see therefore what the continuations of the acts done in the Divine Will serve to? They serve to give me the labor and the occasions to never leave the creature, because she always gives Me to do. And I don't want nor can I leave empty a ground so precious, formed in my Will and exposed to the vivifying rays of the Divine Sun. Hence He calls you to the work in my Volition and you call me, and oh, how very sweet it is to work together in my Fiat! It is a labor that doesn't tire; rather it is bearer of rest and of the most beautiful conquests."

Then he added:

"My daughter, you should know that our acts that we do in the creature contain three acts in one: the conservative act, the nourishing act and the prime, the creative act. With these three acts in one we give the perennial life to our acts and the creature that possesses them feels in herself the creative strength, which takes away all the weaknesses of the human nature from her. The nourishing one holds her always busy to give her his food, in order to impede that she might take other food, and it preserves her from all evils. This food is like the embalming that impedes the corruption; and the conservative act reconfirms and conserves the good pure and beautiful. These three acts of ours in one are as an impregnable fortresses, that we give to the creature that lets our Will reign in her, that renders her so very strengthened that no one can harm her."

After this my little mind continued my round in the Divine Will, searching out his acts in order to enclose my acts in his and make of them one alone. All this is the contentment of my long exile, to be able to work together with the Supreme Volition, to make my acts disappear in his. I feel that I take as in fist heaven, [I feel] flow in them the eternal beatitudes, in a way that I feel neither distant nor estranged from my dear Celestial Country. Whence while my mind was as crowded by thoughts on the Divine Will, my Highest Good Jesus repeating his brief little visit said to me:

"My little daughter of my Will, I want that you know that your every act in Him regenerates so many times, and you grow in a way all new in our Fiat, so that you feel heaven, and the Supreme Being has the great contentment to regenerate in the act of the creature. Forming our life in her act is our feast, our longings; we unite all our stratagems of love and we receive the complete glory that the creature can give us. Now you should know that the sacrifice calls God with powerful voices, and doing our Will makes him descend in the soul in order to make him work as that God that he is."

And I: "My love, in spite that I seek to always work in your Volition and I pray and re-pray that his kingdom comes upon the earth, yet nothing is seen."

And Jesus:

"Good daughter, this says nothing, because you should know that the prayers, the acts done in our Volition, since they enter into our divine act, they have such power that they must bring to creatures the good that they contain. They put themselves to watch the centuries and they look at them with so much love, and with unconquered patience they wait and re-await and with the light that they possess they knock at hearts, they make themselves light to minds, and without ever tiring, because they are not subject neither to tire nor to diminish in power. They do as watchmen, (as) faithful sentinels that don't depart not until they have given the good that they possess. These acts are the possessors of my Volition, and in an absolute way they want to give to creatures, and if one escapes them, they take aim at another. If one century doesn't receive them, they do not stop nor do they depart, because we have given the centuries in their power, and they form and will form our divine army in the midst of the human generations, in order to form the Kingdom of our Will. In these acts there is the human crowned by the divine power, and they give the right to creatures to possess such a kingdom. There is our Will working in these acts and it gives the right to God to reign and dominate with our omnipotent Fiat (in) the creature. They are as deposit and capital that pay God for creatures and they hold the right to give to the human generations that which they have paid; and as the sun that neither withdraws itself nor ever becomes tired of beating the earth with its light, in order to give the goods that it possesses, thus they more than suns turn for every heart, they turn (in) the centuries, they are always in motion nor do they ever give in to be defeated, even to such that they have not given my working Will that they possess. More so that they know with certainty (they will) obtain the intent and victory.

“Therefore if you see nothing, do not give it thought; continue your life and your acts in my Will. This is more necessary than anything: to form the money in order to pay for a kingdom so holy for your brothers. And then you should know that my life itself passed on the earth and my acts themselves are found in same conditions. I paid for everyone and my life and that which I did remains at the disposition of everyone and wants to give itself to everyone in order to give the good that they possess. And although I departed for Heaven, I departed and remained in order to turn (in) the hearts, the centuries, in order to give the good of my Redemption to everyone. They are around twenty centuries, and my life and my acts continue to turn, but not all has been taken by creatures so much so that various regions don't know me yet. So that my life, the fullness of my goods and my acts do not withdraw. They race and always turn, they embrace the centuries as one alone in order to give to everyone the good that they possess. Therefore it is necessary to do, to pay, to form the capital; the rest will come by itself. Hence be attentive and your flight in my Fiat be continuous.”

[Deo Gratias]/Thanks be to God

*The Kingdom of the Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 31

Contents

July 24, 1932 .....	p. 1
How Jesus with his word generates his sanctity, goodness etc. in the creature.
Follies of love in order to make her equal and in competition with Him.
August 7, 1932 .....	p. 2
How the light of the Divine Will makes one lose life to all the other things, it gives the divine freshness. And one who lives in Him is confirmed in the good and acquires the right of Citizen of Heaven.
August 14, 1932 .....	p. 4
For one who doesn't live in the Divine Will she finds herself in the conditions of the idle before the light of the sun. One who lives Him possesses the Most Holy Trinity in act.
August 21, 1932 .....	p. 5
Desire and need of Jesus that he feel the "I love you" of the creature.
How his love remains failed, love blood of the soul.
Anemia that exists in the world.
August 28, 1932 .....	p. 7
Divine Alternations, work and rest.
How God always takes the creature by way of love.
Universal Love and special love.
September 4, 1932 .....	p. 8
The exchange, the need of Divine love.
The Divine Will working (the) continuation of Creation.
September 8, 1932 .....	p. 9
Prodigy of the birth of the Queen of Heaven, ways of communication between Creator and creature.
Who forms the nobility.
September 18, 1932 .....	p. 11
The page written in the Divine Will, story of the creature.
How God doesn't want us servants, but princeling of his kingdom.
The Divine love in search of all creatures in order to love them.
September 25, 1932 .....	p. 13
The Divine Will calls the life of Our Lord in the soul, the abandonment calls his works.
Right that the Divine Will gives to one who lives in him.

October 9, 1932 .....	p. 14
God created man in an ecstasy of love.
The Creation outfit of man.
The sweet sound of the bell, each other's ecstasy of the Creator and of the creature.
Prodigy of the Conception of the Virgin.
October 16, 1932 .....	p. 15
The Divine Will forms of all the centuries one alone.
He simplifies, forms the void and forms the divine nature and his walk in the human will.
October 21, 1932 .....	p. 16
The creature, Sky bombarded with stars.
The Creation enclosed in her.
How the practice of good forms the life of good in the creature.
Sign if Jesus resides in the soul.
October 30, 1932 .....	p. 17
One who lives in our Divine Will emits three acts: concurrent, assistant and receiving. All the Divine qualities continually call one who lives in his Will in order to form her and to raise her similar to them.
November 6, 1932 .....	p. 19
How God does deeds and not words.
One who works in the Divine Will works in eternity, one who works outside of Him works in time.
The words of Jesus are works.
November 13, 1932 .....	p. 22
Industries and traffics of Jesus in (the) Sacrament.
Who forms his Paradise and who forms his purgatory.
November 20, 1932 .....	p. 24
God in his works put there the happiness in order to make the creature happy.
Every act done in the Divine Will is a work, a step, a love that God surrenders to the creature.
November 27, 1932 .....	p. 26
The human will is as paper in which the divine image is coined, and God puts there the value of the number that he wants. Example, God enclosed in the act of the creature.
December 6, 1932 .....	p. 27
Value of an act done in the Divine Will. How it becomes powerful over everyone and is the only busybody that moves everything in order to make her Creator loved.

December 16, 1932 .....	p. 28
How the good makes the glory arise in nature and makes itself the narrator of He who has done it.
How in every 'I love You' it is a Triumph of Jesus, and how in order to be loved he puts there his hidden love.
December 21, 1932 .....	p. 30
Exchange of gifts of will between God and the soul, continuous rebirth in the Divine life, bond of wedding, feast of everyone. How the Divine Will holds the creature besieged.
December 25, 1932 .....	p. 32
The birth of the Baby Jesus was universal, he was born in all and in each one.
How in order to hold us secure, he came to cover us with the attire of his Humanity.
Example of the sun.
January 6, 1933 .....	p. 34
He hides himself in the creature who works in the Divine Will with all his acts, thankfulness that one feels for one who lets him produce his life. Rights on both parts, the little craft.
January 14, 1933 .....	p. 35
The page of life. The creation, Celestial page, the 'I love you' punctuation of these pages, the craftsman and the Divine writer.
January 18, 1933 .....	p. 37
Solitude in which Jesus becomes put by those who receive Him Sacramentally, his tears, his sorrows. The mute species and the living species, continuation of the life of Jesus in the creature.
January 22, 1933 .....	p. 38
How Jesus doesn't want to keep accounts with the creature. The Celestial Gardener, the human will field of Jesus, dowry and outfit that God gives to the creature.
January 29, 1933 .....	p. 39
Power of the truth, steps on both parts God and the creature.
Unusual aspect of the Supreme Being.
February 12, 1933 .....	p. 41
God possesses in nature the creative strength, necessity of love.
God voluntary prisoner of the creature, the Divine Fisherman, daily fishing.
February 24, 1933 .....	p. 42
The truth seed, the Celestial Farmer and human Sower.
Immobility of the Divine ways, to what the sufferings and contradictions serve.

March 5, 1933 .....	p. 45
How the human will reduces the soul to shreds and forms the little citadels without king and without defense. Cries of Jesus.

Volume 31

Fiat!!!

In the Will of God/[In Voluntate Dei!]

July 24, 1932

How Jesus with his word generates his sanctity, goodness etc. in the creature. Follies of love in order to make her equal and in competition with Him.

My sweetest life Jesus, my Celestial Teacher, take my little soul in your hands, and if you want continue your divine lessons on your Will. I feel the extreme need to be fed by your word, after all you yourself have thus accustomed me, you yourself have given me this form of life, you have made me live for you and for your sweet word. Certainly I have not formed this way of living, but you, oh Jesus, so much so that I feel more you than me, and as you keep silent, I feel this life break and although it is the hardest of my martyrdoms, yet I am ready if you want to discontinue your speaking, (I'll) say: Fiat!... Fiat!... Fiat!... But have pity on me and do not leave me alone and abandoned.

Whence I felt all abandoned in the arms of the Divine Will, and I didn't long for other than Heaven, it seems to me that there doesn't remain anything more to do, if not but to end my life in the Divine Will in earth, in order to recommence it in Heaven. And my Celestial Jesus, visiting my little soul said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, you oppresses yourself too much and I don't want it. To see you oppressed in the midst of my goods, it makes seen that you have (your) eye more on yourself than on the goods that your Jesus has given you, and from this is seen, that you have not yet understood well the gifts and the goods that your Jesus has given you. You should know that every word of mine is (a) gift, and hence it encloses a great good because my word holds (the) creative, communicative, strengthening virtue, and as it becomes pronounced by (us), thus it forms the new good to give to the creature. You see how many words I have said to you, and how many truths I have made you know, so many gifts have I given you, and such gifts enclose divine goods, distinct, the one from the other, and everything is in that the word went forth from us, in which becomes formed the good that we want to bring forth from us, when this good has gone forth, with certainty it will have its life in the midst of creatures. Because these gifts are animated and formed by our creative and conservative power inside of our same word in order to assure the good that we want to give, and our word will move Heaven and earth in order to give the fruit of the good that it possesses.

“Now my daughter, you should know another surprise of our speaking, suppose that I speak to you on my sanctity, this word of mine contains the gift of divine sanctity to give to the creature, always for how much it is possible to a creature. If I speak of divine goodness my word contains the gift of goodness, if I speak of the Divine Will, it contains the gift of our Will, in short what our word says, of beauty, of goodness, of greatness, of sanctity, that gift contains. Now hear a line of our loving stratagems, it is as if we are never content with forming new inventions of love as to give to the creature. Hence if our word says sanctity, it is because we want to give the gift of our divine sanctity, so that she makes herself equal with our sanctity and can be in competition with us. And oh! our contentment when we see our divine sanctity working in the creature, and if we feel that she says:

‘I feel impressed in myself the sanctity of my Creator, oh! how happy I feel, to be able to love with his same sanctity.’ Oh! then our love goes into follies, and re-pours itself over her in a way so exuberant that we arrive to excesses, and thus if our word says goodness, Divine Will, it is because we want to give the gift of our goodness and Divine Will, so that she can be equal with our goodness, and Will, and she can sustain the competition with her Supreme Being. You can not understand what is our contentment, to see the creature gifted with these Divine qualities of ours of which our word is bearer. And since it is our usual way to address our word to one creature, but so much is his fecundity, power and fullness of light that he does as the Sun, formed by one of our words, that with one blow of light he illuminates everyone and gives the good that the light possesses. Now why do you oppress yourself if you see that your Jesus often makes use of his word in order to add on gifts upon gifts and these gifts will not only have life in you, but in so many other creatures, because they possess the generative strength, they give and generate, in order to give and generate anew. Our word is (a) birth of our bosom, hence he is our child, and as child they carry the good that they have generated in their Father. Whence instead of oppressing yourself think rather than your Jesus wants to make new surprises for you with his divine words, so that he disposes you to receive such a good.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will, and my sweetest Jesus added:

“My daughter, when the soul lets herself be dominated, invested, subjugated by my Divine Will in a way that not one particle of her being, as much in the soul, as in the body, all possess my working Will. So that the mind, possesses him animated by his science, the voice, possesses him speaking, the hands possess him working, the feet possess his divine steps, the heart possesses him loving, and how my Will knows how to love. Now all this united together, forms the Divine sanctity in the creature, and then we find all our rights in the creature, rights of Creation, because everything is ours, we find the rights of our sanctity, of our works, rights of our Divine Fiat of our goodness, of our love. In short there is nothing of ours that we don’t find in her, as our right, and the creature finds in exchange her rights in her Creator, because being one the will on both parts, the rights of the one are rights of the other. Behold therefore what it means to live in our Volition, to receive our sanctity, the love, the science, our goodness with right, because less can not be done than to give to her, because they are her properties, as they are of our Fiat, because her life lives already in Him. More so that one who lives in my Will, she always grows in the sanctity, in the love, in the beauty of ours and so on. This continuous growth forms in the creature a new act to give to her Creator, we give to her the new act, that we possess in nature and she gives it to us in virtue of our Will. And oh! the contentment on both parts, the happiness that is felt, to be able to receive from the creature and we to be able to give, to give and to receive, it maintains the food of correspondence, conserves the always growing union and is as the puff that always maintains to enflame the fire and the flame of love lives, without peril of being able to extinguish itself. Therefore always ahead in my Will and everything will go well.”

* * *

August 7, 1932

How the light of the Divine Will makes one lose life to all the other things, it gives the divine freshness. And one who lives in Him is confirmed in the good and acquires the right of Citizen of Heaven.

I am between the arms of the Divine Will, although under the press of the privations of my sweetest Jesus. Without Him the hours are centuries, the days are interminable, and oh! how I lament his sweet and amiable presence and I feel all the hardness of my long exile. But while I groan and sigh, the Divine Fiat makes his light flow over my sorrow, and reducing it, makes me flow in the eternal waves of his acts in order to unite mine with his and to make of it one alone. Ah! It seems to me that he doesn't even give me the time to grieve over being deprived of He who so very loves me, and (whom) I love. His light imposes itself over everything, it eclipses and absorbs everything, he wants everything for himself, nor does he permit any lost time even over holy things, that is the privation of Jesus. But while I swam in the sea of sorrow, the dear of my Life hardly as lightning that flees, visiting my little soul, said to me:

“My good daughter, courage. Allow yourself to be guided by the light of my Divine Will, which will know how to convert sorrows, sufferings, my privations themselves into perennial peace, and into divine conquests. The nature of his light is eclipsed, strengthened, fortified; and where his light arrives, sorrow loses strength; he is life, and changes it into conquests and into joys, because the strength of his light excels, and where he takes his post all other things lose life. And if before the light of my Divine Will are felt other effects and desires, it means that the fullness of his light is not full in the soul, nor does he reign in an absolute way. His kingdom is absolute kingdom, not conditional, therefore he holds the supreme right to absorb everything, to make the life lost of all other things and of converting all into Divine Will. You should know that every time the creature does her acts in my Will, a beneficent dew rains on her, which conserves the divine freshness and gives the opium to all that which doesn't belong to Him. And oh, how beautiful it is to always see her fresh in her acts, fresh in her love, in her sorrow, in (the) act of expectation of receiving his dew, in order to receive the opium in order to convert it into sweet conquest of Divine Volition. Freshness renders amiable, attractive as much a person, as an object; old things don't please anyone. And therefore I love so much one who lives in my Divine Will, because I feel in her our Divine freshness, our suave perfumes, in short she gives forth of our stuff, and your Jesus encloses in my Divine Heart this beloved creature, and I go forming her, raising all with my Will. So that this noble team of the children of my Volition will be formed in my Most Holy Heart as so many little queens, as daughters of the great King.”

Whence continuing my state of oppression for the privations of my sweet Jesus, I thought to myself: and yet, in spite that I am deprived of He who is more than my life itself for me, yet I feel a profound peace, nor do I fear anything, nor do I have any fear if it is through my fault that the Celestial Jesus deprived me of Himself, nor have I any fear that he might be able lose me, I don't feel other in my little soul, than a placid sea, that although it murmurs, but its murmur is none other than “I love you“, and this my little “I love you” doesn't ask for other than that the kingdom of your Will comes upon the earth, and without ever ceasing to murmur, I make my little waves very often in order to free me from my exile and take Heaven by assault in order to enclose myself in my Celestial Country, but what, in vain my waves fall in my sea, and I continue placidly to murmur “I love you! love you!” and I pledge Heaven and earth to ask of you your Fiat!

But while my mind blundered, my Highest Good Jesus squeezing me between his arms, all tenderness said to me:

“My newborn of my Will it seems that you go searching how to upset yourself, but I don’t want it. I don’t want the tempests in the sea of your soul, but perennial peace. The tempests, that is the dreads, the fears, the doubts, they are the tempests, and these would impede your continuous murmur of you placid ‘I love you’, that must always race and murmur in order to conquer your Creator, so that he sends his Volition to descend upon the earth in order to make him reign.

“Now you should know that one who lets herself be dominated by my Will and lives in Him, the evils loose life, the dreads offend me, the fears, the disturbances lose the seed in order to be reborn, the soul and the body remain confirmed in good. She finds herself in the conditions of the Blessed, in which evil doesn’t have life anymore for them, because in those Celestial Regions, in my Will, evil absolutely can not enter. So that one who lives in Him can be called and acquires the right of Citizen of Heaven, and if she finds herself upon the earth it is as a Citizen mislaid from the Celestial Country, in which my Divine Will holds her for his great designs and for (the) good of miserable humanity. But in spite that she remains upon the earth, she doesn’t lose the rights of being a Citizen of Heaven, nor of living with the same properties of the Celestial Country, and although she feels as mislaid, but by right she must possess Heaven in her soul in order to live not of earth, but of Heaven.

“Ah! the living in my Will calls Heaven in earth, and his light writes upon her forehead with indelible characters, perennial love, imperturbable peace, confirmation of all goods, daughter of the Supreme Being. Therefore I want you always in my Will so that you enjoy the properties of your Celestial Country that are, continuous love, highest peace and Divine Will as life of all the blessed.”

* * *

August 14, 1932

For one who doesn’t live in the Divine Will she finds herself in the conditions of the idle before the light of the sun. One who lives Him possesses the Most Holy Trinity in act.

I was thinking of the Divine Will and how one who lets herself be dominated by Him, giving him full dominion, all rights are hers and all that which the others obtain through piety, through mercy, through goodness of God, she obtains through right. Through right she obtains sanctity, because that which dominates her is holy and holds the virtue to transform soul and body in sanctity, in goodness, in love. So that all the victories, the conquests, the rights are hers and as mistress she takes Heaven by assault. What great difference between one who lives in the Divine Will and between one who lives of human will; but while I thought this my adorable Jesus repeating his brief little visit, said to me:

“Blessed daughter, the difference between the one and the other is great and incalculable for one who doesn’t live in my Will. He is as the Sun for the idle, for how much he invests them with his light and darts them with his heat, they do nothing, learn nothing, and earn nothing, and they make the light of the Sun sterile for themselves. And since they are without doing anything, they get tired, they are annoyed with the light itself, and they seek obscurity as rest for their unhappy idleness. Instead for one who works, the light is working, it is light to the eye in order to let her look at that which she does, because for how much light she has on the outside, if she doesn’t have the life of the light (in) her eye, the light that surrounds her will serve to nothing, and if she doesn’t have the external light it will serve her for nothing to have the life of the light in her eye.

“My Paternal goodness has put such union of accord between external light that the creature can have and that of her eye, that the one can not work without the other. Light to the hands if she wants to work, if she wants to write, if she wants to read and so on. So that the first part works in the creature, she takes the light, without it it would prove almost difficult to be able to do some good and to be able to earn a piece of bread in order to live. Now such is the light of my Will for one who doesn't live in Him, He invests and exists for everyone, but does not work nor dominate in the act of the creature, this one, with all his light remains idle, she doesn't learn anything of the Divine, nor does she make any conquest and the most beautiful things tire her and annoy her. The will that wants to live in mine is like the eye full of light, that becomes capable of uniting herself with the light of my Will, that putting themselves in accord between themselves, they do and form prodigious labors and works as to make the Heavens and earth astounded. You see therefore what it means to live in my Will, to not be idle, the little light of the soul to agree with the light of the eternal Fiat, in order to make it working in her acts, and thus form the inseparability between the one and the other.”

Whence a crowd of thoughts followed in my mind on the Divine Will and my Celestial Jesus added:

“My blessed daughter, my Will produces the light in the soul, the light generates the knowledge, light and knowledge love each other and generate love. So that where my Supreme Will reigns the Sacrosanct Trinity reigns in act. Our adorable Divinity is carried in nature, in an irresistible way, without ever interrupting to generate continually, and the first generating act we do (is) in ourselves. The Father generates me continually, and I his Son, feel myself generated in Him continually, the Celestial Father generates me and loves me, I am generated and I love him, and from the one and the other proceeds the love. In this generative act without ever ceasing it encloses all our admirable knowledges, our secrets, our beatitudes, the times, our dispositions, our Power and wisdom all as much the Eternity, enclosed in one single generating act, which forms all the whole of our Divine Being. Hence this reciprocal Love of ours that forms the third Person of our inseparable Supreme Being from us, it seems that he is not content with our generating act in ourselves, but he wants to generate outside of ourselves, in souls, and behold we entrust the assignment to our Will animated by our Love, that descends in souls and goes to form with his light our divine generation, indeed he can do this in one who lives in our Volition, outside of Him, there is no post in order to form our Divine Life, our word would not find the hearing in order to make himself listened to and lacking our knowledges, the love would not find the substance in order to generate, and behold our Most Holy Trinity disarranged in the creature. Therefore only our Will is that which can form this divine generation of ours. Hence be attentive to listen to that which this light wants to say to you, in order to give him the field to his generating act.”

* * *

August 21, 1932

Desire and need of Jesus that he feel the “I love you” of the creature. How his love remains failed, love blood of the soul. Anemia that exists in the world.

I was turning in the acts of the Divine Will and oh! how I would like to put the exchange of my acts with his acts, and being too little and incapable to be able to do equivalent acts in order to exchange his, I go forth with my little “I love you“, but in spite that it is little, Jesus wants it, he awaits it in order to say to me: “the newborn of my Will has put forth of hers in our acts, so that they are alone no more, but they have the company of she for who's cause, they were created", and this was, and is our Will, in order to give the field of action to the creature in our same acts, in order to be able to say her: "we love and work inside of one single field", but I thought to myself: what great thing (is) my little "I love you" that Jesus wants and loves it so much? And my beloved Jesus, all goodness said to me:

"Little daughter of my Volition, you should know that I love your 'I love you' and I always remain in the act of awaiting it. I always love you, nor do I ever cease loving you, and if you make standstills in loving me, I feel that I give you my continuous love and you do not give it to me, and my love feels as stolen by you. Instead when my 'I love you' races, and yours makes itself found ready in order to give to me and to receive my 'I love you', mine feels repaid, and it happens that your 'I love you' does not give time to mine, and mine does not give time to yours, a race happens, a competition of love between Creator and creature. More so when I see that you are about to tell me 'I love you', my Will invests your 'I love you' in order to make it from little (to) great, and I find my love in yours, as mine, should I love it and want it? Daughter, they are my usual stratagems, my industries, because I give in order to receive, this is my commerce: I love, I give love in order to receive love, and when I am not loved my commerce remains failed, and since my passion is love, I don't get tired, nor do I (draw) back: I commence afresh, I repeat, I repeat the industries, I abound with stratagems and with tenderness in order to re-do my failed love in the creature. Oh! if you might know how my Heart remains wounded and sorrowful when I say 'I love you' and she doesn't feel the call that mine makes her in order to have hers.

"Beyond this, you should know that love is the blood of the soul. As my Will is the life, and as in the natural order life can not function without blood, and blood can not circulate if it doesn't have a life, and according to the abundance of the Blood, thus one enjoys health, thus in the supernatural order, the soul, my Divine Will can not function without the blood of love, how much more love so much more will one feel strong, robust, active in working. Otherwise she will suffer from anemia and could finish in consumption, so that when there is not the sufficient blood of the love of my Will himself for how much (there) is life, she becomes sick in the soul, and inoperative, because she lacks the blood of love in order to function. All the virtues are made anemic, and instead of patience, of fortitude, of sanctity, all these virtues will be seen to fade, changing into defects. Therefore there is much anemia in the world, because there lacks the pure blood of my love, and accordingly they go toward a terrible consumption, that brings them to ruin in the soul and in the body. Behold therefore I so very love your 'I love you' and I want it in all my acts, in all created things, in every act of (the) creature, in order to be able to form much blood as antidote and remedy to the anemia that exists, and this will be (the) preparation to the kingdom of my Will. Therefore I feel the need of your love, it is true that it is little, but I don't look at whether it is little or great, rather I look at whether it has been done in the power of my Will, that the littlest acts are done for me it makes them great and it invests her with such beauty as to feel myself enraptured. Hence it is enough for you to know that I want it, it pleases me, it makes me content in order to do it, whether I see it is little or great, and this 'I love you' of yours I want it in the heartbeat of your heart, in the air that you breath, in the Sky, in the sun, in short in everything. Oh! how I would like to see that your 'I love you' invests Heaven and earth, creatures and Creator."

* * *

August 28, 1932

Divine Alternations, work and rest. How God always takes the creature by way of love. Universal Love and special love.

My little mind continues to disperse itself in the Divine Volition. It seems to me that I don't know how to be if I don't plunge myself in his waves in order to find in act that which he has done for our love, but in the midst of so much immensity of love my heart made sorrowful groans for the privations of my sweet Jesus. I feel his profound silence in my soul that although there is a pure air, a clear Sky bombarded with sparkling stars of all colors, a most brilliant Sun that with its light continually beats upon my littleness in order to make that all in me might be Divine Will. Everything is peace and serenity, there is not even a light puff of wind that can make a rumor, this however is all and effect and property of the eternal Fiat, and yet I said to myself: it seems to me that I lack the King, I lack He who with a love that I don't know how to say, has worked and ordered everything in me, and I lacking Him, I feel alone; but tell me why you have left me? Why don't you speak? And my dear Jesus, being wounded by my groans and sustaining me in his arms, said to me:

“My daughter, do not marvel. It is my usual way, after labor I want to find rest, in my same labor in the midst of my same works, that more than soft bed they lend themselves in the act of profound adoration and in mute silence to give me rest. The rest after the labor is the exchange of the labor, it is the gusto and contentment that sacrifice knows how to give. Didn't I do the same in the Creation? First I created it with my Fiat, because our word is work, it is step, it is everything, and after all ordered and worked, I found the most beautiful and sweet rest. These are the alternations of our Supreme Being, labor and rest. The labor calls us to rest, and the rest calls us to labor. Hence don't you want that I rest in your soul? All that which you see in yourself is none other than work of your Jesus. Every word that I said to you, was a work that I did, and from inside of my word I formed the new Creation in you, more beautiful than the Creation itself, because that should serve to the bodies, this should serve to the souls in order to give the life of my Will to her. If I might not make the alternations of labor and rest, it would be a sign that you would not have given me liberty to work with my creative strength my labor in your soul, so that I would have continued my labor even to such that (I) might have the intent in order to then rest. If I don't finish, I don't rest, and if after the rest I resume the labor, it is because I resume new labors. Don't you want that I rest beneath this Sky so serene, these stars and sun that rain on me as sweet refreshments, that making for me the most beautiful songs they invite me to rest, and in mute silence they say to me: 'how beautiful are your works, your working Will, your creative power that, has given us life. We are your works, rest in us, and we will form your glory, your perennial adoration.' To a saying so sweet I take rest and at the same time, I keep vigil and conserve my labor, and I prepare other labors to do. And might you (want) to know what is the first labor that I do after resting? I open my labor with saying to the creature one of my sweet 'I love you's, I want to begin my labor with my love, so that the creature feeling wounded and enraptured by the irresistible force of my love, allows me to do and gives me the field of action in her soul. I always start there beginning my works, I ask for the sacrifice by way and by force of love. My love felicitates her, invests her, absorbs her, inebriates her, and before my love inebriated as she is, she lets me do that which I want and arrives to sacrifice her own life to me, because one 'I love you' of mine going forth from the depth of my Divinity, that contains the immensity, that finds itself as through everything, the infinity that never finishes, the power that can do all, the wisdom that disposes everything, so that all that which exists feels the strength of my 'I love you', and everyone says it together with me. Heaven with the whole celestial court says it to her, the stars say it and their twinkling changes into 'I love you'. The Sun, the wind, the air, water say 'I love you', because I having said it, my 'I love you' has resounded in everything and as through everything, and everyone says it together with me. And the creature feels under the rain of an immense 'I love you', and feeling drown by my love, she allows me to do, she does not breathe a word and she lends herself to let me complete my most beautiful works. And although she also feels the need to tell me 'I love you', but she sees that hers is too little before mine, because she doesn't hold the weapons of immensity, power and infinity, yet she doesn't want to remain behind, and she uses the industry of saying it in the power of my Will. And Oh! how much I enjoy it, and it not only pushes me to labor, but to repeat my 'I love you' direct, and special. Because it is true that I love everyone, my love never ceases for anyone, but when I want to (do) special labors, new works, designs more distinct I am not content with my general love; but I add on there a special and distinct love, that while it serves to fascinate the creature, it serves as material as ground where to form my labor and to extend my works. Therefore leave me to do, I know when the work, the word, the silence, and the rest is necessary."

* * *

September 4, 1932

The exchange, the need of Divine love. The Divine Will working (the) continuation of Creation.

I am always in the sea of the Divine Volition, which makes present to me all the Creation. That immense theater, in which there are scenes so moving, that in clear notes they reveal the great love of God toward creatures, and that enrapture the heart to love him, and I thought of the great human ingratitude, which does not let itself be enraptured to love him. And my sweet Jesus, surprising me with his Heart swollen with love said to me:

"My good daughter, the Creation was made by our Supreme Being in order give love and in order to receive the exchange of the love of creatures. There is nothing created by us in which this was not our purpose, to make it in order receive the exchange of it, otherwise our works would not have been communicative, fruit bearing, nourishing works and full of life in order to felicitate man. They would have been as painted works that at most entice the sight, but that would not do good to anyone. Instead with wanting the exchange, we put as en route the communication of the light in order to give her the life of light, the air in order to give her the life of respiration, water, food, fire in order to give her life and the good that they possess, and thus with all the rest. How many acts of life did we put around the creature in order to raise, feed and sustain her life?

"Now with wanting their exchange it was a need of our love. Works without exchange are works without cortege, without appreciation, and for how much one makes use of them, they remain isolated works, as if they might not be appreciated. The exchange doesn't take the work only in order to make use of it; but it enters inside of it in order to recognize He who for her love creates it. The exchange give life to gratitude, to thanksgiving; one can say that the exchange maintains the conversation, the friendship, the correspondence between the giver and between one who receives the gift.

"Now hear my daughter another line of our intense love toward man. In order to have this exchange, in creating her we put in her our working Will, united with his, so that as our Will in the work of the Creation made so many works for her love, thus in her soul, possessing our Divine Will in virtue of Him, she can hold equal strength and power to give us the exchange wanted by us. Our Fiat agent in the Creation and agent in the creature, should put in play the human volition in order to make use of all her acts, little and great, in order to form the just exchange of all his works that he had done in the Creation. More so that he knew the number, the variety, the beauty, the weight of all his works. Working in the creature he shouldn't do less than work with the same multiplicity, sumptuousness and beauty with which he had worked in the universe, and thus exchange his external works, and his internal works done in the depth of the soul. The Divine Will should make use of the human will as material in his hands, to continue his Creation. Behold therefore that man, with rejecting our Will made his working life cease in her acts, in which he could make use of them to create and transform them into Heavens, into stars, into Suns, into seas et cetera. She impeded our work, stopped it, threw into confusion our sweet harmonies, the dear exchanges that only in virtue of our Volition could all exist (that) we could do in her if our Will might have his working life in Her. Behold therefore our solitudes, our sighs, insistences, our sorrows that the human earth might be able to become our field of action, in which our Volition might have full liberty to do that which he wants. And do you believe that only the Supreme Being wants the exchange in his works, also the creature, the first purpose in her works is the exchange. If there is this, or at least the hope for it, she has hands and feet in order to move, mouth in order to speak, strength in order to sacrifice herself, time in order to work, but if there is not the exchange, it seems that she doesn't have hands, nor feet, nor mouth, nor strength, nor time, she feels that life dies for that work, it seems that the exchange is nothing, but it is not true, rather it is the beginning and the life of every work. Therefore the exchange is a need of my love and it makes me continue the work of the Creation."

After this I continued my abandonment in the Divine Fiat and a crowd of thoughts, doubts, difficulties rose in my mind. And my Celestial Teacher added:

"My daughter, my Will holds the virtue to make the centralization of all the human being into one single act. If she works with his unitive virtue, he centralizes in her the thoughts, the heart, the steps and everything in a way that the creature feels that it is not the work alone but all her being invested by his working strength, that feels the empire of my working Will, and everything does one thing alone. This unitive strength makes the creature dominant and ordered, because the first dowry that my Fiat knows how to give is the dominion of oneself and the order, and then taking his divine dominion she becomes practicable material in his hands, that lends herself to his marvelous works. Instead without my Will, the creature doesn't even possess the unitive strength in her acts, and hence she sees herself all scattered and without order and hard material that doesn't surrender to the forms that our Volition wants to give."

* * *

September 8, 1932

Prodigy of the birth of the Queen of Heaven, ways of communication between Creator and creature. Who forms the nobility.

My little mind always does (as) the swift inside and outside of the Divine Volition and for how much I turn around I am never tired. I feel a mysterious strength that enticing me never says enough to me; but it says: “race, search out his acts, love them, adore them, kiss them and transform yours to his, and form all your life of Divine Will” and if I don’t know how to say anything, in my courses and rounds I say my little tale, “I love you“, “I love you“, “I adore you“, “I bless you“ oh adorable Will, in all your works. And today being the Nativity of the Queen of Heaven, I stopped to think of the great portent of her birth, in which it seemed that Heavens and earth put themselves at attention in order to adore this Divine prodigy. And my Highest Good Jesus, with love and indescribable tenderness said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Will, the birth of my Celestial Mama encloses all wonders, all prodigies united together, but do you know why She was not born alone, the pure one, the holy one, the beautiful one, the Immaculate one, no, but together with the Celestial little child was born in Her my Divine Will already conceived, and enclosed in Her, in order to form his working and growing life in the gracious child. My Will enclosed himself in order to be born together, to make use of the organ of the celestial creature in order to work and form his Divine Life. This was a prodigy that only the Eternal Love, the divine Wisdom and Power could work, it was not the life alone that he gave or the gift alone of freeing her from the stain of original sin. This would have been nothing to our Power, that which stupefied and called the attention of everyone, was (that) my Will was born together with Her in the world. So much so that the Heavens and earth, remained shaken by it, they put themselves at attention, they felt a mysterious force that same force that dominated them and conserved all the Creation. It was our same Will that moved everything and put himself and all the Creation at the service and disposition of this little newborn child. Hence this being born by my Will together with Her was the origin that called all the other prodigies to center themselves in Her. Where my Fiat reigns, there is no good that isn’t enclosed, no prodigy that isn’t completed, he wants to make a display of his Love and Power with forming his working Life and putting forth his for how much it is possible for a creature to contain. Therefore admire and thank our Supreme Being that arrives to so much love toward this newborn child as to make our unborn Will be reborn in Her, which has neither beginning, nor end, nor limits in his confinements.”

Whence I followed the work of the Divine Will in all the created things, and my amiable Jesus added:

“My daughter, created things were made by us in order to form so many ways (so that) man might be able to make use of them in order to come to us, because we left them all open, so that when he wanted to come he might not have need of knocking to open them in order to come to us. He was our child, it was just and reasonable that he might hold all the ways open in order to go to his Celestial Father and stay together in order to love him and to be loved, and as child to ask graces and favors. But do you know what the ungrateful child did? He himself closed the ways, formed the bars, and with sin formed the doors, closing the correspondences with whom had given him life. Now do you want to know who returns to open the doors, to burn the bars? One who loves me and lives in my Divine Will, love and my Fiat are powerful forces that burn and empty everything, and they open all the ways in order to put the distant child again in the arms of his Celestial Father.

“Now you should know that all the virtues, the good works, the love, the doing my Divine Will it forms the nobility of man, but the substance of this nobility is the riches of my grace. All the good becomes leaned upon Him, of which he makes himself font and conservator of all the good that one can work. Otherwise one can say noble of origin, that is man; but since he lacks the riches, he finds himself almost by necessity doing acts not worthy of his nobility. In fact if one is noble and is not rich, he can not dress as noble, nor live in palaces, so that his nobility is reduced only to the memory that he was noble. Thus one who doesn't possess the riches of my grace, all the good is reduced to squalid virtue that very often make seen that he is not rich with patience, with prayer, with charity and so on. Now the good forms the nobility, the riches of my grace, the conservation, my Will forms the King that dominates and with Divine mastery rules and orders all."

* * *

September 18, 1932

The page written in the Divine Will, story of the creature. How God doesn't want us servants, but princeling of his kingdom. The Divine love in search of all creatures in order to love them.

My abandonment continues in the Divine Volition I feel hidden by his eternal waves, in which he hides everything, nothing escapes from his immensity, so that one who wants to find everything, embrace everything, hearing the story of each one, must enter in this sea of the Supreme Fiat. But while my mind was lost in Him, my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul said to me:

"Blessed daughter, my Will encloses everything, rather for every creature he holds there his written page, of how her story should develop and form her life, and this written page was 'ab eterno' written in the light of our Will. So that the life of every creature in time had its beginning, but in our Supreme Being she didn't have beginning and she was loved by us with love without beginning and without end. Now all the Creation, didn't yet exist and we loved her, because she was already within us: we held the great birth of all creatures enclosed within the Sanctuary of our Divinity, we looked in each one of them (at) our written page, her circumstances, her little tale, and according to this, what was more or less written, what should be completed and glorified our Most Holy Will thus we loved her more intensely. You didn't exist, but our Will enclosed you and loving you we gave you the place, the rest on our Paternal knees, we gave you the various lessons on our Fiat, and oh! how much pleasure we took in seeing you listen and write in your soul as copying, that which was written in our eternal page. Because you should know, that which we want that the creature does of our Will, first becomes done by us, formed by us in our same Volition, and then overflowing from us, he wants to do it and form it in the creature making his field of divine action with her. So much is our love that we don't want other than that she does that which we have done, giving her the model of our act, so that she makes the copy of it, and how much help, assistance don't we give, while she makes the copy, giving her our same Will as her act, as prime material, so that the copy succeeds according to our design.

"Now every act of one who does her will does none other than spoil our design, forming some erasures on our written page. Our every written word, contained a special and eternal love, it contained the development of her life according to our likeness in which it should enclose his story of love and the completion of his Divine Will toward her Creator. The human volition doesn't do other than counterfeit this page, throw into confusion our likeness. And instead of forming the copy of our page, written with so much love for her, she has formed her page written with notes of sorrow, of confusion and with a story so vile and base that the centuries won't make a memory of it, and the Eternal One will not find in her the echo of the written story in her page in which his divine story should be praised in the creature.

“My daughter, there is a mistaken knowledge in the base world, and they believe that the creature can live as removed from us: what mistake! What mistake! All the creation is none other than an inheritance gone forth, gone forth from us, hence it is ours; she belongs to us, so much so that although she went forth, but we have brought her forth inseparable from us, and we want the honor, the glory of our inheritance, and that creatures be not our vile servants, but children and as so many princelings of our kingdom. And this principality is given by the inseparability of our Will, so much so that the creature can not do less of it than with Him, nor can she live, nor separate herself, not even in hell itself. At the most, some hold him working and some hold him conservative of her being, without giving him the ease to let him work good. To live without my Will would be like the body living without the soul, that which would be impossible, and one sees that when a member is truncated from the body it doesn’t have motion, it loses the heat and rots because there lacks the soul. Thus would it be if she might lack my Will, everything would be changed into nothing.

“Now living in my Will is really this, to feel flow in (one’s) whole being, in all the acts, the light, the divine strength, the life of my Will; because where there is not his working life, that act remains without life, without heat, without strength and divine light. It is as dead for good, and when there is no good inside, it forms evil and finishes with putrefying. Oh! if the creature might be able to see herself without the working life of my Volition, she would see herself so counterfeit, that she herself would be horrified to look at herself. Therefore allow yourself to be always overwhelmed by the eternal waves of my Volition in which you will find your written page, your story woven with so much love on you, and thus you will not make an appearance anymore (of) that which we have disposed for you. You will find everything as things that belong to you and that of absolute necessity must form your life, to fill your story, and to satisfy our need of love, that ‘ab eterno’ we wanted to make our Will known. Be faithful and do not impede our love, and leave us free to develop our admirable designs formed over you.”

After this I followed my abandonment in the Divine Fiat and my sweet Jesus added:

“Good daughter, one who does and lives in my Volition, rises in the unity of my Will, and there she descends in Him in all things in order to give me her love in all things, in all creatures and (the) acts of them.”

And I: “My love, for how much I go to love you in all creatures, and in all the acts of them, wanting to cover them all with my love, so that you, not (receiving) might receive that love from everyone, yet I see that not all love you. This is a sorrow for me, because I think that my love doesn’t have vital strength, and therefore I don’t know how to make you loved by everyone.”

And Jesus: “My daughter it is the strength of the unity of my Volition that throws you over everyone and over everything in order to love in everything and to give me the exchange of love of everyone. And if they don’t love me, I can not say that I don’t receive yours, rather in your love I feel the notes of the love that everyone should give me. And oh, how content I am from it! You should know that this is our divine office: from the heights of our unique and single act that we never interrupt, our light, love, power and goodness descends and goes retracing all the acts, the heartbeats, the steps, the words, the thoughts in order to mold them, invest them, to seal them with our love. We feel the irresistible need of love to go in search of everything and everyone, and we don’t let anything escape us, not even a heartbeat, if we don't give her our 'I love you', and yet they don't love us, rather there are some who escape from under the rain of our love. But with all this we continue, we don't stop, because our divine nature is love and must love. And we feel the contentment, the happiness that our love gives us to love her, that it holds the virtue to love everyone, to extend itself to everyone and everywhere; nor would it be full happiness in us if our love could suffer with the impotence of not being able to love everything or else stop if it wasn't seen (to be) repaid. Thus you, continue to love us for everyone, and to overwhelm everyone in our love, and in spite that all your intent isn't obtained, you will feel the notes of our felicitating love that you want to love us for everyone."

* * *

September 25, 1932

The Divine Will calls the life of Our Lord in the soul, the abandonment calls his works. Right that the Divine Will gives to one who lives in him.

I am always in the arms of the Divine Volition like a little baby that wants to be cradled in the arms of the Mama in order to take her sweet sleep. And if the mama does not cradle her, the poor tiny one does not feel secure, she is overwhelmed and cries, and implores the arms of the mother for bed and rest, and then she calms down when she obtains the intent. Such am I, I am the little baby hardly newborn, and I feel the great need in order to be secure with the arms of the Fiat in order to be cradled and defended. And being inexperienced in his Divine sea, because I am hardly newborn, I feel the need to be guided and of that which I must do in his same Will. And since I felt oppressed for the privations of my sweet Jesus and for other incidental happenings, my Highest Good Jesus, all goodness said to me:

"My little newborn of my Volition, come between my arms. You have reason that only in my arms can you be secure, nor are there perils in my Will who more than Mama holds you to his bosom, feeds you with his light and with his love. There are no oppressions, nor sadness, nor fear, these are stuffs outside of my Will, not inside of Him, where there is none other than peace, joy, continuous aptitude. There is so much to do that the soul doesn't find neither time, nor place in order to oppress herself, and then oppression is (the) lack of total abandonment in my arms. The abandonment produces the sweet sleep, and in the same sleep she dreams (of) He whom she loves, and who loves her so much that he holds her pressed to his bosom. Instead the oppression, the fear produces the vigil and she becomes all eyes in order to look at herself, not He who loves her and is all eyes for her. You should know that the doing and the living in my Will, calls my Life to form himself in you, and the total abandonment calls my works, and one who doesn't live abandoned impedes in herself my life and my works, and I would feel badly if I might not be able to develop that which I want to do in the creature. Therefore abandon yourself totally in me and I will think of everything."

After this I was doing my round in the Creation in order to put there my exchange of love for all that which he has created and conserves for singular and pure love. And my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, the great massive structure of the world, attached to the great massive Divine structure turns continually, animated by our incessant motion, it turns around us in order to re-give us the glory, the honor, the love which went forth from us. So that we are in the midst of our works that while they turn (around) us, they praise our Supreme Being with secret and arcane voices.

Whence we feel in created things our scattered life in them, and we feel re-given to us the heartbeat of our love, the profundity of our adoration, the cortege of our glory, the areola of our brilliant beauty, the life of our light. Now one who turns in our works unites herself to give us all that which the Creation gives us. My Divine Will gives her the place in all created things in order to do that which they do, also done (for) her. And it happens that as she turns, thus she takes more love, more light of knowledge, embellishes herself more. It is an enchantment to see her that as she turns, thus she takes in herself the life of her Creator and copies it, and my Divine Fiat gives her the right to hold her post of honor in his works. One who lives in our Will is inseparable from us, and from the greatest to the littlest work created by us, his creative and unitive strength unites her with all, with (an) indissoluble and perennial bond.”

* * *

October 9, 1932

God created man in an ecstasy of love. The Creation outfit of man. The sweet sound of the bell, each other's ecstasy of the Creator and of the creature. Prodigy of the Conception of the Virgin.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues, and how much more I abandon myself, so much more I feel his strength that strengthens me, his life that animates mine, his light that comforts me, illuminates me and making himself revealer he reveals to me He in whose arms I am all abandoned. And with powerful attraction he makes me turn in his works, he loves and wants that his little daughter is spectator of that which he has done for love of creatures. Whence while I turned, my Divine and Sovereign Jesus, detaining me in the act of the Creation of man, said to me:

“My daughter, what sweet memory (is) the Creation of man. He was created in an ecstasy of our love; so much was our love that we remained enraptured before our own work that we put forth to the light. The beauty enraptured us with which we had invested him, the sanctity enraptured us with which we had filled him, the form, the harmony enraptured us with which we had formed him. His prerogatives, every quality of his was an ecstasy of love that we felt and it enraptured us to love him. So that our love remained shaken, subjugated and putting us in ecstasy, it made arise in us the working, and imperishable love toward man. And in this ecstasy of love, enraptured as we were, (we) didn't mind to anything, no limits were put forth, (we) showed off so much in loving him and in enriching him with all the goods that there didn't remain any void, so that his love might be full for us and thus be able to enrapture us to love him continually. Whence only the memory of how man was created repeats for us our loving ecstasy toward him. Now one who turns in our Will, as she finds our works that were as prepared in order to then create man, it sounds the bell in order to call all creatures to recognize this love of God toward man. And its sweet sound calls our attention, reawakens our love, and makes arise in us our ecstasy of love toward him. Ecstasy signifies total re-pouring toward whom one loves, and one who comes into our Will, holds (the) strength to make us undergo our ecstasy of love so that we flow in her, and with our power we put the creature in ecstasy for us, so that nothing remains for her and all flows into our Supreme Being. A re-pouring of oneself into each other happens, the one into the other. Therefore there is nothing that pleases us more than to see the creature in that same Will in which she was created. To contemplate our works, to know them, to feel the pulsations of our love that every created thing possesses it was the outfit, that we prepared and gave to man in creating so many things and all the Creation. Now who receives the life of the good that created things contain? Who makes use of this outfit so splendid and with right?

One who knows them, knowing them she finds our palpating love, our working Will, and she loves them and loves in them that Supreme Being who so very loves her. Therefore be attentive and constant in turning in our works, so that we give each other the hand in loving each other. We put one another in ecstasy, and with utility you will make use of the great outfit that with so much love your Creator has given you.”

After this, my little mind wandered in the acts done by the Divine Will, and passing from one act to the other I arrived at the Conception of the Most Holy Virgin. Oh God! the Heavens remain mute before this act completed by the Divine Will; the Angels seem to stutter and for how much they say, it seems that they don’t know everything of this prodigy so great. Ah! only God can speak of it, because (he is the) Author of the prodigy of that which he worked in this Conception. And while I remained stupefied, my amiable Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My daughter, the Conception of the Immaculate Virgin was a new act of our Will, that is in time, new in the way, new in the time, new in the grace; in Her was renewed all the Creation. In our omniscience and immensity, we called all creatures, all their good acts present, past and future as if they might be one alone, so that over everyone and over everything this Conception might be formed in order to give the right to everyone and not give the right to them with words, but with deeds over everything. When our Will does an act that must serve the universal good of everyone, no one is put aside, and making use of his omnipotence he gathers creatures and the acts of them all together, outside of sin, because evil doesn’t enter into our acts, and he completes the act that he wants to do. You see your acts also contributed, you put forth your part; therefore with right you are her daughter and the Queen Virgin with right is your Mama.

“But do you know why we held this way in bringing forth to the light this Holy Creature? In order to renew all the Creation, in order to love her with new love and in order to put to security everyone and everything beneath the wings of this creature and Celestial Mother. We don’t ever do our works isolated; but we always start from our unique and single act and while it is unique, it unites everything and does everything as if they might be one alone. It is this our omnipotence, our creative strength to do everything in one single act, to find everything and to do good to everyone.”

* * *

October 16, 1932

The Divine Will forms of all the centuries one alone. He simplifies, forms the void and forms the divine nature and his walk in the human will.

The Divine Volition always goes weaving in my soul his divine life with his sweet enchantment. He makes it grow, molds it, feeds it and with his wings of light covers it, hides it, so that not one breath of wind can harm it and might be able to impede the growth of his life in my soul. Oh! if it were not for the Divine Will that more than a tender and loving Mother holds me in his arms covered with his light in the circumstances of my life, alas! too sorrowful, I don’t know what I would do, but his light calms me, strengthens me and draws me ahead. Oh! Adorable Will, how much I should thank you for such a good and I offer you the infinity of your same Volition in order to thank you as you merit. Whence while my mind felt all of his light, my beloved Jesus repeating his brief little visit to my soul, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, how beautiful it is to see the creature grow under the wings of the light of my Will. Enveloped in this light she doesn’t see, doesn’t feel, doesn’t touch (anything) but her Mother’s light, that holds her enveloped, and if creatures wound her, beat her, embitter her, she feels herself penetrated and squeezed more by his arms of light, and she responds with the smile of light to whomever wants to embitter and wound and tease her with them, she confounds the human perfidy of them. Oh! power of my working Will, He slips away from all, triumphs over all, and with his light forms his throne of imperishable glory in the soul that gives him the liberty to work.

“You should know that such is his power that he forms of all the centuries one alone, and his empire extends itself everywhere and of all the acts he forms one act alone of them. The centuries disappear before his power, and all the good acts of creatures are none other than so many atoms that unite together they form one act alone, in which they recognize his power and prostrate at his feet they form the glory, the adoration of the human generations to this Supreme Will. Symbol (is) the Sun, that is none other than so many atoms of light, that united together form the Sun that gives light to all the earth; but those atoms are armed with a divine power, and each one contains a marvelous power, so much so that with only touching the earth, the plants, they communicate marvelous goods and effects as to form a distinct life in every single plant and flower. Thus the acts of creatures, although they are atoms, they contain the marvelous power of my Will, hence they are pregnant with admirable effects. You should know that when the creature disposes herself to do an act in my Will, he arms his power and simplifies, he forms the void and forms the divine nature in the human will, and as victorious he forms his way in the will of the creature, and walks, always walks, and then he stops and his step is impeded, when the human volition puts forth the bars with not doing mine but her will. What a crime to impede the walk, the step of my Volition in the will of the creature. Therefore I created creatures in order to form so many ways in human wills, in order to be able to have my continuous walk, and hence my operative act in them and one who impedes my walk would like to impede in me the continuation of my Creation, to impede my steps, and tie my hands, so that I might not work. Oh! not to do my Will it seems that it is nothing yet it is the greatest of crimes that cries out vengeance before the Divine Majesty for poor creatures. Especially when my Will is known that he does a work, that he wants a sacrifice, and not doing it it is as if one might want to seize the truth and this is the sin against the Holy Spirit and cries vengeance before God. To know my Will and not do it closes Heaven, breaks the divine relations, and not recognizing the Divine Mastery that every creature is obliged to know and to submit themselves to that which my Volition wants, although it might cost (her) life. Therefore be attentive, adore my Will and that which I have disposed for you, if you want to content your Jesus.”

* * *

October 21, 1932

The creature, Sky bombarded with stars. The Creation enclosed in her. How the practice of good forms the life of good in the creature. Sign if Jesus resides in the soul.

I am always prey of the Divine Fiat. He awaits me in all created things in order to double the love that he had in creating so many things for me. It seems that the Divine Volition longs for the love of his beloved creature in order to be able to find the little support of love, where to lean his great love. Whence skies, suns, winds, are none other than wheedling and continuous calls in order to say to us: “I have preceded you with my love, and you do not leave me without yours.” But while I felt that everyone called me to love my Creator, my beloved Jesus, surprising me said to me:

“My daughter, as I created a Sky that extended itself over your head bombarded with stars, thus I created a sky inside of you. And this sky is your soul that extends itself everywhere, from the summit of the head, even to the extremity of the feet; there is no part of you where this sky does not extend itself. So that you have a Sky on the outside, and a sky on the inside more beautiful still. And all that which this sky does, through means of your nature, that is if you think, if you speak, if you work, if you suffer, they are none other than most brilliant stars with which he goes adorning this sky of the soul. The sun that shines inside of her is my Will; the sea that flows is my grace; the wind, my sublime truths that form the blooming meadows with the most beautiful virtues; the Creation is all enclosed in the creature. It was neither of our wisdom, nor of our powerful love to create the Creation only on the outside of the creature, and of the inside(,) the vital and substantial part of her (to be) without sky, stars and suns. No, no, when we do a work, we fill it inside and outside with our works and with our life itself but so much so, that there should not be a particle of her being that should not feel our life and the strength of our creative works. Therefore we love the creature so much, because (of) our work and we leave our life in her in order to conserve that which we have done.

“Behold therefore, that one who doesn’t feel in herself the life of my Divine Will, it means that she knows it theoretically, but not in practice because when one knows a good and practices it, she holds the virtue to form the substance of the life of the good that she knows. Otherwise she would remain without practice like a painted picture, that not having life, doesn’t hold the virtue to form her life in one who looks at her. My Will is life, our works are alive works not dead, and yet for one who doesn’t know them, or doesn’t seek to know them, or doesn’t put them into practice, they can be for her (as) dead works and without life. Hence it is to the practice that I await the creature in order to realize, to form and to raise the life of my Volition, and to make our works alive for her.”

After this I felt a fear, a doubt in my soul if my sweet Jesus remained or else withdrew himself leaving me alone and abandoned. Alas what a cruel thorn that stings and makes the most merciless death felt, but my always amiable Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My daughter, do not fear, and in order to reassure you I want to tell you the sign when I reside and when I depart. Hence if the soul submits herself to my Will, loves him, gives him the first post, it is a sign that I reside there, because my presence holds the virtue to hold the human will submitted to mine. Instead if she feels rebellious to my Will, then it is a certain sign that I have withdrawn. Therefore quiet yourself and do not fear.”

* * *

October 30, 1932

One who lives in our Divine Will emits three acts: concurrent, assistant and receiving. All the Divine qualities continually call one who lives in his Will in order to form her and to raise her similar to them.

The sea of the Divine Volition continues to murmur in my soul. Oh! how sweet, penetrating and overwhelming is his murmur. He overwhelms me so much that I murmur together with him as if this divine sea might be mine, and fused together I don't know how to do other than that which the Supreme Will himself does. But while I murmured love, adoration, joys, happiness, beauty, which entered in me as so many veins, my sweet Jesus visiting his little daughter, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, your littleness in the interminable sea of our Volition is our greatest joy. You should know that one who lives in Him emits concurrent, assistant and receiving acts. In the first (place) she concurs with the same acts of her Creator, being the one the will of the other. There is no thing that this Divine Will does in which he doesn't put the creature to concur together in his work. And here my Volition is alone no more, he feels the inseparability of one who lives in Him; in her acts I feel a finite will, in the infinite, that loves together and concurs to the multiplicity and incessant work of our works. So that one who lives in our Will breaks our solitude and, as connatural, we feel her concurrent in our Divine sea; and with a continuous re-pouring of her littleness in us, she acquires the rights of our Volition in order to do that which He does. Ah! you can not understand what our contentment is, our joy in feeling the creature concurring together in order to not do other, but only that which we do. The concurrent act (makes) arise the assistant act, it concurs and assists. There is nothing that we do that she doesn't know (of) and assist (in). How to hide ourselves from one who is already with us, concurs and holds her post in our Volition? But will she concur and assist only? Ah no! another act arises and it receives the infinity of our love and of our works as hers and ours, so much so that her littleness doesn't have anywhere to put a love and work so great, and therefore she leaves it in our Volition with all the deposit of the goods that she has received, and this with right because she holds of his. You should know that all that which one does in our Will is so very great that the creature is incapable of being able to possess it and to restrict it in herself, therefore she feels the need to make use of the same Will in which she has worked in order keep the deposit. More so that all that which the creature does in our Volition, even the little ‘I love you’, the little offering of her actions, her littleness in the power of our Will, they are none other than posts that she takes in our Will. And how many more posts she takes, so many more rights she acquires and she feels in herself the divine strength that continually enraptures her, gives her flight in order to let her life become formed all in the Divine Will. And since this way of living should be for all creatures, this was the purpose of our Creation, but with our highest bitterness we see that almost everyone lives in the depths of their human will. Now one who lives in the height of our Volition, she sees the great evil of one who lives in the depths, and having at her disposition our receiving act, that is the infinity of our love and the multiplicity of our works, she puts them at our and the creatures disposition so that we remain reciprocated with the love of everyone, and they receive graces, light, love for how much it lies within the competence (of) their littleness. So that between Heaven and earth we hold the intermediary near us and near creatures, that with the power of our Divine Fiat she wants to bind Heaven and earth, and how not to content one who lives in our Will? It would be as if we might want to displease ourselves.”

Whence I continued my abandonment in the Supreme Volition, and oh! how happy I felt in thinking that in the Fiat, I concurred with all that which the Supreme Being did. My will fused in Theirs was the great secret, and the portentous prodigy that my littleness was taken as in the snare of doing and concurring in all that which the Divine Majesty does. Nor can I put myself apart, nor can they undo me, because it was their same Will that had taken me in (their) midst, which was so very immense that I didn't find the way in order to go out from him, and anywhere I might be able to go, I found the Divine Will working, that enclosed me in his same work to concur, nor was I an intruder. He himself had extended his arms to me in order to hold me as his conquest, more so that on both sides there was highest happiness, I to remain and the Divine Volition to hold my littleness bound to himself. Hence I don't know how to say with clarity how I wandered in this interminable light, and while I remained all surprised, my dear Life, my Sovereign Jesus, added:

“My little daughter of my Volition, living in my Will is a continuous recall that we make the creature in our divine qualities. Our Being is always in motion, but since our Volition is that which forms the work and the motion inside of our Being, hence one who lives in Him feels that our Volition now calls her in (our) power, now in our wisdom, now in our love, now in mercy, now in justice, goodness and divine beauty. In short all our attributes with powerful voices call the creature inside of them, so that it forms and raises her according to their qualities. They would feel dishonored if they might not be able to give (to) one who lives with that same Volition, with which they are animated, she would not conform to them, nor would she enjoy their prerogatives. That they tolerate the littleness, this doesn't bother them, because one knows that the finite can never reach the infinite, but that the littleness, indeed the littleness makes them more honor, because all the beauty and the good that they see in her is all their work, but that she is dissimilar from them, this not ever. Behold therefore the whispering and the continuous shout that one feels who lives in our Will, they are the continuous calls that our Supreme Being makes to his beloved creature through his qualities. Firstly he doesn't want and doesn't know how to be and can not be, because our Will being one holds such virtue of union and inseparability that all that which freely enters in Him loses the separative virtue, and our highest goodness feels the need of love to hold with himself that which is his and that (which) forms a particle of his same Will. Behold therefore our divine qualities demand she who is animated by their same Will in the motion and work of them in order to make life together. They would feel a tear and a broken will if they might not have her with them. Was it not a tear that the first man made from within our Will with removing himself from Him? And this tear was so very grave that it turned the whole order of the Creation upside-down for him and he arrived to reject his Creator with the whole tide of his divine graces. Therefore one who lives in our Volition is the repairer of this tear so sorrowful that it cost us so much and our Divine Being armed all our attributes around (us), around her, so that the same trick is not repeated. And living together with us, she and we remain happy, and if you might want to doubt that which I say, it is sign that you have not understood well how much I love the creature and in order to have her with me and all mine, my love makes me arrive to excesses, to delirium, and to follies. After all I have all the rights to love her, because she is mine and made by me. And if you are mine, I am yours, and therefore you also hold the rights to love me, and if you might not love me you would lack a most holy sacred duty toward whom has given you being and loves you so much. Hence both sides, love each other always and a great deal, and love won't remain quiet it will make arise new contrivances of love.”

* * *

November 6, 1932

How God does deeds and not words. One who works in the Divine Will works in eternity, one who works outside of Him works in time. The words of Jesus are works.

My little mind felt filled with the sweet lessons of my amiable Jesus. And worried I wanted to arouse doubts and fears in me and although I know that when Jesus wants to, he makes the soul arrive where he wants and how he wants. Nor are there laws for Him, nor does anyone dictate law to him, nor does he give charge to human views, rather he always does new (ways) in order to confound them, nor does one put the step ahead of the power of his love whoever it may be, for how many doubts and difficulties they can say and do, rather if one makes a joke of them, he makes them remain in their chatters and he does the deeds with the soul that he has elected. But with all this my frailty remembered my sorrowful circumstances and I felt myself shake and I said: “who knows how many doubts they will make on this way of saying by Jesus”, and I felt all afflicted and oppressed. But Jesus who watches over my poor soul, repeating his little visit all goodness said to me:

“Blessed daughter, do not give thought to anything. My Will holds the virtue to make all that which doesn’t belong to Him die and to change into life of light the same weaknesses and miseries of the creature. All that which I say to you is not (in) virtue of her, but is virtue and power of my Will that can do all. My Will symbolizes the sun, that as it rises it puts the darkness into flight, it makes it disappear and die, and as it invests the earth, thus it gives its life of light to all things. Thus my Volition as the creature lets herself be invested by the power of his light, thus the darkness leaves her, her evils die and become exchanged into life of light. And who doesn’t understand what this means that one is illiterate, and therefore doesn’t understand neither what my Will is, nor what he can do, nor where one can arrive who lives in Him and lets themselves be invested by his light. Hence leave them to say. I will do the deeds and they will remain with words. If they have not made a profound study of it, why do you want that they understand? Perhaps they will be learned, doctors of other things, but of my Will they will always be ignorant. Therefore put them aside and we (will) think of doing not words but true deeds.

“You should know that one who works in my Divine Will, her works, her acts, her adorations, her love toward God they become deeds and formed in the ambient of eternity. Because my Divine Will is eternal, and all that which one can do in Him doesn’t go out from within eternity and they remain confirmed always in works, adorations, divine and perennial love. One can call them works of the creature transfused in God, in which God himself has worked, the human doesn’t enter neither in the Divine Volition nor in eternity, and if she enters she must lose (her) life in order to reacquire the life and the works of God himself. Therefore one who lives in our Volition becomes looked at by us not in time, but in eternity, and for our decorum and honor, her acts must be our acts, her love, our love. We feel that the creature comes into our Volition in order to give us the occasion to let us work and to give our love to her in order to let her love with our same love. Everything must be ours and all that which she does must be coined with the image of her Creator. Instead one who works outside of my Divine Will works in time, loves, adores in time, becomes looked at in time. And all that which one does in time, are works without confirmation, rather they must await the judgment in order to be confirmed or condemned, or else purified by the fire of purgatory, and they are looked at as works of creatures in which there can lack (the) fullness of sanctity, fullness of love and fullness of infinite value. All to the contrary (for) one who lives and works in our Will being our acts all is fullness of sanctity, of love, of beauty, of grace, of light and of infinite value. There is such distance between the one and the other that if everyone might be able to understand it, oh! how attentive they would be to live in our Volition, so that they might remain emptied of the human act and filled with the working act of a Divine Will. Hence be attentive and do not do anything that is not drawn and emptied by the light of my Will, and you will give me the highest contentment of putting me to work and to let me work as that God that I am. Therefore in Him I always await you, in order to move the step in order to come to meet you, in order to extend to you (my) arms, so that he may work in you, in order to open the mouth and to keep me with you in sweet conversation in order to manifest the arcane secrets of my Supreme Fiat.”

After this I was thinking of all that which my Highest Jesus had said to me, as if (there) might want to arise in me doubts and difficulties and He with an indescribable mastery said to me:

“My good daughter, do not wonder of that which I say to you, everything is possible to my Will, the impossible doesn’t exist provided that the creature lets herself be conducted by Him everything is done. You should know that all that which I tell you serves in order to form, to order to harmonize the kingdom of my Divine Will. I am repeating the way that I held in the Creation, I pronounced the Fiat and I kept silent, and although they say days, in that time days didn’t exist. Hence they can also be (called) epochs in which I formed the great machine of the universe. I spoke and I worked, and so much was my satisfaction with the work that my word produced, that with one “Fiat” of mine I disposed myself and enraptured myself with another Fiat of mine, and then another still, even to such that my “Fiat” then stopped when I saw that nothing lacked to his work, rather everything was sumptuousness, beauty, order and harmony, and in order to enjoy my works I remained as life and at watch my Fiat himself. The same Fiat of mine with his power tied me in my works and made me seen inseparable from them. Everything is (in) pronouncing my first “Fiat”, to give first my lessons, to deposit in the soul the power and the work of my “Fiat”, and when I have commenced I can say I won’t quit anymore, until (it’s) a completed work. What would you have said if the Creation might be done at half? It would not have been a worthy work of me, nor an exuberant love of mine. Therefore one “Fiat” pulls me and the other enraptures me, he forms the void in the creature where to put the order, the harmony of my working “Fiat”, he disposes her and imposes himself on me to make me give other lessons to be able to form so many acts together which united between themselves, they form the new more beautiful creation, more artful than the machine of the universe, which must serve for the kingdom of my same Will. Hence my every word is a work, it is one more outlet of love, it is to put an end to my first Fiat commenced. Which giving each other the hand, the first and last that will be pronounced, they will form the interlacement of the new creation of my kingdom in the depth of the soul, which transmitted to the descendents will be bearer of more than the universe itself, of goods, of sanctity, of graces to the human generations. You see therefore what one word more, one word less, one lesson more, one lesson less means. They are works, which if they do not become received, nor met with hunger, my “Fiat” isn’t pulled and enraptured to pronounce other “Fiats”, and hence won’t be complete. And I will wait and will repeat my lessons, and if he repeats them it is a sign that you have not kept track of that which I have told you, and I don’t want that anything lack, because it is established all that which I should say to you of my Will. Therefore be attentive and leave me to do that which I want.”

After this, I was thinking of that which is written in the beginning of this chapter, that is that one who works in the Divine Will works in Eternity, one who works outside of Him works in time, and I thought to myself, and why this great difference? And my Highest Love Jesus added:

“My daughter, it is easy to understand. Suppose that you might be given a metal of gold in which working it you would form so many beautiful gold objects, but if instead of the gold you might be given a metal of copper, of iron, you could not change the copper and the iron into gold metal, hence you would make copper objects or else of iron. Now comparing the iron objects with those of gold, what is the difference of the value? And yet you have employed the same time in working them, you have made similar objects, but for the diversity of metal, those of gold, exceed in a surprising way in value, in beauty, in finesse those of iron. Now one who works even good with her human will, since she finds herself in time to cross over her way, one can say that all that which she does are temporary works subject to a thousand miseries, they will always be human works of minimum value, because she lacks the gold thread, of light of my Will. Instead one who works in Him will have the gold thread in her power, not only, but she will have her Creator working in her act, she will not have time but eternity in her power. Hence only the difference alone between Divine and human Will, there is no comparison that holds up, between the one and the other. It is really this the living in my Will, He holds the first and working act in the creature, he does as a teacher that wants to develop the theme that he has given to his pupil. He himself gives her paper, he puts the pen in her hand, he puts his hand over the same hand of the disciple, and writing he develops the theme, the hand of the teacher and that of the disciple together. Now should one not say that the teacher has been working and has put in that theme his science, his beautiful calligraphy in a way that no one can find a shadow of defect? But however the pupil has not moved, she has undergone the work of the teacher, she has let him conduct her hand, without any resistance, rather happy in seeing the beautiful ideas, the precious concepts in which she felt herself enraptured. Now shouldn't that fortunate disciple possess the value, the merit of the work of her teacher? Thus it happens to one who lives in my Will, the creature must undergo the act that my Volition wants to do, he must not be put aside, and He must put forth the material that is worthwhile to his divine act. And so much is our goodness that we make her possessor of ours same acts.

“Instead (for) one who doesn't live in our Volition it happens as when the teacher gives the theme to his disciple, but doesn't make himself actor of the theme of the disciple, he leaves her to her liberty, in a way that she can make some errors, and she does it according to her little capacity, because she doesn't feel him over and inside of her, nor the capacity, nor the working act of her teacher. And the theme is none other than our grace. He doesn't ever leave the creature even in the little good that she does, and according to the dispositions of the creature, he lends himself now as working act, now as (an) assistant act, because there is no good that one does in which she is not helped and sustained by Divine grace.”

* * *

November 13, 1932

Industries and traffics of Jesus in (the) Sacrament. Who forms his Paradise and who forms his purgatory.

I felt all sunk in my nothing(ness), and feeling deprived of my sweetest Jesus I felt my nothing emptied of his life, without support and without strength; and having made Holy Communion, I felt that I didn't have anything to offer Jesus and I felt oppressed and embittered. And He compassionating me said to me:

“My daughter courage, your nothingness with your Jesus is everything and you can give me everything, because you should know that I don't descend only when you receive me in (the) Sacrament, but I descend with all my works, and as I make you mistress of my Sacramental Life thus I make you mistress of all my works. Hence, if you want, you hold much to give me, because you hold my works in your power. More so that my Sacramental Life that you receive in the holy Host is surrounded by all the acts that my Humanity did when I received myself in instituting the Most Holy Sacrament, and surrounded by the all the acts that my Celestial Mama did for me when she received me Sacramentally and surrounded by all the acts of those that live of my Will, because these acts are inseparable from me and they remain incorporated with me as part of my same life. Hence you can give me everything, because they serve in order cover your misery, to make up for your love, almost in order to not make you ashamed, that coming in you, you would not have anything to give me, rather as you make use of them in order to give me them, and to be able to delight and love me through means of these acts, they bilocate and become your acts and my acts, acts of the Sovereign Queen and of the souls that live of my Will, in a way that I instead of having one, have two, and my Sacramental Life remains surrounded by double acts, as double love, as greater glory. These are my traffics that I do when I communicate myself to souls. I give of mine in order to have double from them, and thus my industry puts in traffic my same Sacramental Life in order to have the exchange of it. But alas! how many don't make use of it, and they remain not having, nor do they know what to give me, and I remain without new cortege, fasting of their acts, and with the sorrow of not even be able to put my loving traffics to industry. You will not do this to me, because if I come, it is not only in order to come, but it is also because I want to give. And to receive for how much the creature can, she forms my satisfaction, my contentment and my Paradise in the Most Holy Sacrament; (for) me to give and to receive nothing from them, forms my purgatory in my little prison of the Sacramental host, purgatory that human ingratitude forms for me. Therefore be attentive and with courage and without any reserve give me mine and all yourself to me, so that I can say: 'I have given her all, and she has given me all. Thus you will form my contentment and my traffic of love.'

After this I was doing my round in the acts of the Divine Will, and it seemed to me that all created things invited me one after the other to make known how the omnipotent Fiat works, in which awaited my little exchange of love and for how very little (it was) he wanted it, claimed it in order to obtain his purpose, for having put forth all the Creation. And while I sought to follow the Divine Will, my amiable Jesus repeating his brief little visit, said to me:

"My blessed daughter, all that which our Paternal goodness has worked in the Creation and Redemption has not yet received the exchange from creatures. And the reason is because our purpose for which the Creation was created was that man might complete our Will in everything, that same Will working in the Creation had to obtain his continuous working act in the creature, in a way that the echo of the one should form the same echo in the other, in a way as to form one alone. But my working virtue of my Will remains alone with all his magnificence, power, wisdom and beauty, he remains in the Celestial spheres. But in man he is repressed and since he/(man) doesn't hold my working Will in himself, he doesn't hold hearing in order to listen to the echo of his/(Divine Will) operative virtue in the Creation. Therefore not having obtained the purpose, our works are without exchange, the purpose forms the exchange of any little or great work that he does. And you should be convinced that no one, as much in the Divine order, as in the human one, works without purpose and in order to obtain his exchange. One can call the purpose the beginning and the life of a work, the exchange, the completion. Oh! how many works would not have beginning if there might not be the purpose and they would leave it at half if there might not be the certainty of the exchange. The exchange makes one sustain unheard of sacrifices and gives the excessive heroism to God and creatures. Now if my Divine Will doesn't form his kingdom in souls, and they don't give him the liberty to make himself dominate with his creative and operative virtue, true exchange won't be given to us, and hence we will always remain in expectation and we will see our most beautiful works as at half and without the completion of our purpose. So that there lacks the most beautiful thing, the most important act, lacking the purpose for which all things were created. You see therefore how necessary it is that the kingdom of my Divine Will comes. More so that not having had the true exchange, our creative work has remained as suspended, and has not been able to go ahead in the work of the Creation. Because it is established that from the externalized Creation that they possess he should continue the interior Creation in the depth of souls. And this my Will could do if he might have the first post, the liberty to work in the human will, and not having it he can not go ahead in his creative work. He remains impeded, not being able to create the new heavens, stars, suns and so on in order to exchange himself with those that he gave them in the Creation of all things, and not only in being able to go ahead in our works, but in being able to continue that which we have established to do in creatures in virtue of our Will. How can we exchange ourselves if we have still not finished doing that which we want, and have not completed the work of the Creation begun so many centuries (ago)? Because the work of the Creation goes including all together that which my 'Fiat' must do in all creatures in order to be able to say our work is completed. And if our Volition has not yet done all that which he wants to do, how can he say that I have completed my work, much less exchanged himself of all that which he has done? Whence when we will obtain the purpose that the creature does our Will in everything and live in Him, and she will have for purpose to live of our Will and to let him reign in order to give him the field to the magnificence of his works, then when the purpose of the one will be that of the other, then we can receive the true exchange of all that which we have done for love of creatures. Therefore be attentive and always ahead in my Will."

* * *

November 20, 1932

God in his works put there the happiness in order to make the creature happy. Every act done in the Divine Will is a work, a step, a love that God surrenders to the creature.

I am always afresh in turning in the acts of the Divine Will, and while it seems I have turned in his works and understood all the beauty, the sanctity, the infinite goods that they contain, in turning anew, I feel illiterate, the little ignorant one and I see that there is still much to understand and to take and learn from the works of the Supreme Will. But while my little intelligence remained as enraptured in looking at the magnificence of his works, my Celestial King Jesus, visiting my poor soul, said to me:

"My blessed daughter, all my works contain value and infinite goods. Therefore while it seems to you that you have understood everything, returning anew in the midst of our works, you find that there remains much and much to understand, and this now occurs because the infinite can not be enclosed in the finite, at most it can be filled, but enclosing all the infinite will be impossible for her. And being (that) your intelligence is finite, it exhausts itself before the infinite, it fills itself and it seems that it has understood everything; but it is not true. It is rather that being filled, it doesn't have any place to put the other divine knowledges; but then chewing them and reconsidering them she forms the new little post in her intelligence and finding herself again in the midst of our works she finds new things to take and to learn. Behold therefore, you always feel illiterate every time you turn you find yourself before the magnificence of our divine works.

“You should know that as much the works of the Creation as those of the Redemption, we put there in each one the fullness of happiness, of light, of grace, of goodness and so on with all the divine qualities and all these prerogatives in the act of pouring themselves out on the creature in order to make her happy. The happiness of our works, as celestial air, carry the perfume, the divine embalming to whoever approaches in order to understand them and overflowing from them, they communicate the infinite goods that they possess. We put the creature under the rain of our happiness, through means of our works, in order to make them happy, but since they don’t drawn near in order to understand them, they are unhappy and they feel the poisonous air of their human will. No one works with the purpose of becoming unhappy or of being bearers of unhappiness and of not taking the profit, the good of his work. More so that the Supreme Being has made everything in order to form the staircase of happiness to the creature. Now, it is our unique contentment to see the creature in the midst of our works in order to unite herself, to enjoy them and to understand them and to form the standard, how one should work in his works. And since our Will doesn’t know to do dissimilar works, he repeats in the creature the similar (act) of our works.”

After this I continued to feel all immersed in the Divine Will, and my amiable Jesus added:

“My daughter, do not wonder. Everything is possible in my Will; with Him, the creature holds the All in her power, and can do all. Rather she feels his empire over all of her being and not one act escapes from her, if not invested by a divine act, power and strength. The human dies in our Will, but a happy and glorious death, it dies in order to re-arise with the life of the acts of a divine power, and of a Will that is not hers. And so much is the empire that she feels over herself, that if it might be given her to do other things of her own volition, even holy and good, she would never do them. She would be content to remain even centuries without doing anything, rather than do one single act in which she doesn’t feel over her act, the empire of the working act of my Will. Because in Him the creature understands with clarity what one single act of my Will working in her act means, that compared to a thousand of her acts, without the Divine act, they would be almost nothing.

“You should know that as the creature enters in our Volition our goodness is so much and we enjoy so much to hold her with us, that we surrender to her our works, our steps, our love for how much it is possible to a creature. So that every time that she does an act in the Divine Will, thus she acquires now a step of ours, now a work, now she takes our love, our goodness in her power, and all happy she says to us: ‘In your Volition I have your love in my power, hence I can love you a great deal, my love is not dissimilar from yours hence I can love you how much you love yourselves. I have your works in my power in order to glorify you and your steps in mine in order to beat the same way that you beat looking for all creatures, in order to conduct them all before your adorable Majesty.’ And since our Supreme Being with his immensity finds himself through everything, hence he is life of every work and step of every foot and heartbeat of every heart, the creature that lives in our Will having surrendered hers to ours, we feel her walk together with us in the steps of everyone, in the works of each one, and she loves us in the heartbeat of every heart. And when she sees that creatures offend us, ah! she as our faithful one would like to hide us in her littleness and to put forth her life for ours, for our defense. Oh! how not to love this creature? In our Will there are unheard of prodigies, and since (they are) not known, it is no wonder that they don’t believe that which I say to you, but do not stop, follow his light and let yourself be his happy prey.”

* * *

November 27, 1932

The human will is as paper in which the divine image is coined, and God puts there the value of the number that he wants. Example, God enclosed in the act of the creature.

I am always prey of the Divine Fiat. My littleness does not tire to turn around and inside of Him, with the certain hope of consuming myself in his light, and with the appetite to penetrate always more and more in his knowledges in order to be able to taste new divine tastes. Because every knowledge more is one more taste that one receives, and it whets the appetite to want to taste other. Often times one feels an insatiable hunger, that is never satiated and one would like to always remain with open mouth in order to receive this celestial food. Hence my mind was crowded with so many things that regarded the Divine Will, that if I might want to write everything, I don't know where I would go to get the paper, therefore I limit myself for how much I can and since some doubt winded through my mind, my Celestial teacher Jesus, visiting his little newborn said to me:

“Blessed daughter, one act then has more value when one knows the good that there is within, and how much more one knows, so much more one acquires. Because the creature does that act, on the basis of the value that she knows, and our Paternal goodness doesn't know how to deceive, nor tease any one if we make known that there is that value in that act and because we want to give the value manifested by us, and the certain sign is the knowledge itself that it already possesses that value by itself. We do as a king that takes a paper that has no value and put there one hundred, there one thousand, there one million. The paper is the same quality, the same form, but according to the number thus it possesses its value. Hence one gives the value to the paper, the number and the image of the king, which serves for that money of the kingdom. Now thus do we: the paper is the act of the creature, the knowledge is our divine Image, the value is the number that we put (there). Therefore what wonder if we say that one act alone in our Will exceeds in value all the acts of all the other creatures together done outside of Him? It is our image that coins itself as upon paper in the human act, and the value of our knowledge that puts there the number. Are we not proprietors to put the number that we want on the paper of the human volition? If the king is proprietor to put the number that he wants upon a most vile paper, more so we in order to form the money that must race in our azure Country. Beyond this, our Will was a gratuitous gift that we gave to man, he paid us nothing in order to have it, nor did He have money or sufficient means in order to pay us, if not but the most vile paper of his human will, that for his misfortune, he didn't even want to lend in order to hold our great gift. And then we were his most tender and most loving Father and between Father and children accounts are not made, because one knows that the Father must give to the children, and they are obligated with the duty of justice, to love and hold with esteem that which the Father gives them. Behold therefore the necessity of the knowledges on the Divine Will, and we make them degree by degree, so that the creature appreciates this gift so great, that we want to gratuitously give them. The knowledge generates the appetite, the desire to know more, and the human volition is disposed little by little to undergo the transformation, the unification of the Divine Will and we without making accounts, neither mind if she can pay us or not, we will put there our image and the incalculable number of a divine value, and we will be content to see our children rich and happy with our same divine happiness and riches.”

Beyond this, my sweetest added:

“My daughter, you should know that as the creature works in our Will in her act it undergoes the divine fecundity, which forms the divine germ/seed in all her acts, that circulating in all (her) soul, it forms the divine germ in the thought, in the word in everything, in a way that one sees in her little act the sweet enchantment of her Creator, happy to give (his) life with his amiable presence to the act of the creature. Oh, if everyone might be able to see, the sweet surprise, the unheard of prodigy, the Supreme Being enclosed in the brief round of the human act, they would remain so stupefied that the whole prodigy of the universe would be a beautiful nothing in comparison to this.

“Therefore there is great difference between one who works in my Will, and between one who works without Him. The first one is (the) source of which the font can be boasted of that its water never finishes, and that it can give water to whom it wants without ever drying out; the second is the font that doesn’t rise up and is dried up. The first one is fertile earth and its meadows always bloom, the second is sterile earth that hardly produces some wild plant. The first one holds the Sun at her disposition, which makes them drink large sips of light, of sweetness, of sanctity, of unconquered patience, of heroism, of sacrifices. The second holds the night that gives sips in order to maintain her passions, to weaken her and to make her lose the sight of Heaven. The difference between the one and the other one is great. Therefore be attentive and make that my Divine Will consumes you and transforms you all in his light.”

* * *

December 6, 1932

Value of an act done in the Divine Will. How it becomes powerful over everyone and is the only busybody that moves everything in order to make her Creator loved.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues, his enrapturing strength, sweetly enraptures, invests and absorbs, and my little soul feels little, little, hardly an atom, yet it feels also his immensity that is not given to enclose it in its little circle. But in spite of my littleness it doesn’t want to remain idle, it wants to love, to bless, to glorify, to thank He who loves so much, that he has given his own Divine Will to her at her disposition. But while my mind was lost in Him, my Celestial Sovereign Jesus, visiting my little soul said to me:

“My daughter, you can not understand the whole value that an act done in my Divine Will contains. So much is its value, its greatness that the same creature that has done it, can not enclose it all inside of herself. It fills her and not being able to contain it it overflows outside, and races in the same immensity of the eternal Fiat. And all that which He involves and that he encloses in his immensity, the same act of the creature repeats. So that if you love, adore, bless me, thank me, you give the wide field to all created things to repeat your act, in a way that Heavens and earth, Sun and wind, seas and rivers, plants and outside, all in chorus say: ‘we love you, we adore you, we pray you’ and so on. It is as an echo, that resounds in everything and in everyone, and with his investing strength, that my Will possesses, he absorbs and makes all things undergo the same act that the creature has done in my Will. And oh, what sweet surprise, what marvelous enchantment, that an act reigns over everything and makes its act repeated by everyone. This little atom that enters in our Volition makes itself powerful over everyone and sweetly feeds its same act to everyone in order to make its Creator loved. Therefore our Supreme Being feels that the creature that enters in our Volition, moves everything, she makes her voice flow in all things, and not wanting to be alone, invests, reigns and makes all things that are invested by the Fiat say, that which she wants. Does she want love? And she makes all things say love. Does she want to adore, to bless? And all lend themselves to adore and to bless. In short, she is the commander over all the Creation, and we make her do it. It is our same Volition that wants that which she does and his same power, his empire with which she has been invested. And we delight so much in seeing the littleness of the creature flow in our immensity, and we feel the company of the creature. Because holding each other company means to recognize each other, that we are already together with her, to recognize the act that she does, its value so that she can tell us when she loves us, because when she knows more that her act is great, she gives us more, and we feel more loved, and we love her more. So that it is she alone that comes from the earth to break our solitude, and she alone the busybody that wants to move all things in order to make us loved, blessed, thanked. It is true that the other creatures are in our Divine Will, but not knowing that we are with them and for whom they work, and the value of their works, they live as strangers and as distant from us. And this is a great sorrow for us, to have children to hold them in our house, that is in our Will as if we might not have them, and not recognizing He who gives them life and loves them so much. This doesn't happen for one who already knows that she lives in our Will. We know each other, we live as between children and Father, rather she lives in us, and we in her, and we form one Will alone."

* * *

December 16, 1932

How the good makes the glory arise in nature and makes itself the narrator of He who has done it. How in every 'I love You' it is a Triumph of Jesus, and how in order to be loved he puts there his hidden love.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, although under the nightmare of the repeated privations of my beloved Jesus, in spite that the light of the eternal Fiat never leaves me, his waves of light invest me inside and outside and they make themselves heartbeat, breath, motion, food of my little soul. Ah! if it weren't for the Divine Will, that as life substitutes for everything, and also Jesus himself inside of a blow finishes the life and that same light would bring me to Heaven. But alas! I said to myself, how long my exile is. What is the good that I do, and although I might do something great what is the good that I could do? But while I thought this, the dear one of my Life, sweet Jesus, repeating his brief little visit said to me:

"My daughter, courage, my Will is consuming you in his light in order to form in you his divine copy. And so much is his jealousy, that he doesn't cease one instant to send you light, in order not to give you the time to do your will, but always mine. And then what great thing (is) that good? And yet everything is in working the good, it is the substance of the sanctity and the Sun that shines through means of his holy words, works and steps in the midst of creatures, that while it gives light to oneself and warms oneself, it gives light and warms one who is around her. The good produces the imperishable glory in earth and in Heaven. Who can ever take away the glory of a good that one has done? No one, neither God, nor creatures, rather in the good act the glory arises from inside of itself, as in nature that the act itself contains. So much so that many times creatures are forgotten but the good work, remains as life in the midst of them and is not easily forgotten. Therefore every good done sings the glory and makes itself narrator of whom has done it. Hence if one might do even one good act alone, while being in life, all Eternity would sing for the great glory."

Whence I continued my round in the Divine Volition according to my usual way; I animated all created things with my little “I love You”, and I wanted to leave it impressed in all things so that it might voice and ask for the kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth. And blessed Jesus, surprising me again, added:

“My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that so much is the yearning, the delirium that I want to love, and to be loved by creatures that hidden without making me noticed, I put in the depth of their souls a dose of my love. According to their dispositions, thus I augment the dose, and they feel in themselves my love, they say with the heart ‘I love You, I love You’. I, in feeling myself loved, triumph in the love of the creature. So that in her every ‘I love You’ it is a triumph that I make, and although I have put it as hidden, I don’t mind that it has been one artifice of mine in order to make me loved, rather I mind that it has passed from the channel of them that is from her will, from her voice, and feeling myself wounded, I look at it as love that comes to me from the creature. Whence your every ‘I love You’ is one triumph more that you make your Jesus, and since you seek to cover Heaven and earth, animate and inanimate things with your ‘I love You’, I see everything dusted by the beauty of the love of the creature and remaining enraptured I say with all the emphasis of my love: ‘Ah yes! How content I am already I am loved’, and while I triumph in her love, she triumphs in my love.”

He said this, (and) became silent, and so much was the vent of his love that he swooned (and) sought rest in my arms. And afterwards as reassured, he repeated with a stronger emphasis:

“My dearest daughter, you should know that which I want, and that more interests me is that I want to make known that I love the creature. I want to say to the ear of every heart, ‘child I love you’, and I would be content if I might hear answered with my same little refrain: ‘Jesus I love You’. I feel the irresistible need to love and to be loved. Oh! how many times I remain suffocated in my love, because while I love, not feeling that they love me, my love doesn’t find its vent, and I remain drowned in my own love. Behold therefore I love so much your ‘I love You’. As you say it, it takes the form of a refreshing tongue of flame, which coming into the great fire of my love, it brings me refreshment. And scattering it as beneficent dew on the flames that burn me, it carries the quiet to my love, to my deliriums, to my loving yearnings, because if I have been loved, I can give mine and being able to give mine, my love is vented. My daughter, Heavens and earth are full and swollen with my love, there is no point where my love doesn’t feel the need to overflow, in order to go down and to race, and race in search of hearts in order to tell them his little word: ‘My daughter I love you, I love you so much, and do you tell me that you love me?’ And he is all ears in order to hear if the creature says to him that she loves him, if this becomes affirmed he feels his love reassured in her, and he takes his sweet rest. Instead if he does not become affirmed, he races, tours Heaven and earth nor does he stop, if he doesn’t find one who says that she loves him. Now, every ‘I love you’ of the creature is an outlet to my love, which entering into mine, incorporates itself in my same love, and it holds the virtue to defend it while it remains all entire that which it is, and forming as the cracks, it forms the ways in order to let my love vent. But this love then is pure, when it is animated by my Will. Do you see therefore what is your long sing-song of your ‘I love You’? They are so many vents that you give to your Jesus, and they call me to rest in your soul. Therefore I want that you always tell me your ‘I love You’, I want to see it in all the things that I have done for you, I love to hear it always, always and when you don’t say it to me, I longing for it say: ‘alas! Not even the little daughter of my Volition gives me the continuous outlet in order to be able to vent in her little love', and I remain all afflicted and I wait for your dear little refrain 'I love You, I love You'. Love my daughter, love me, have pity on my wounded heart that is racked with spasms. Restless, delirious and lover I ask love of you, and eagerly I embrace you, I clasp you strongly, strongly to my heart in order to make you feel how I burn with love, so that feeling my flames, it moves you to pity me and you love me. Oh! Make me content, love me, when I am not loved, I feel unfortunate in my love, and therefore I arrive to deliriums, and when a compassionate heart is moved to pity me, and she loves me, I feel the misfortune change into happiness. And then your every 'I love You' is none other than a little piece of wood that cast in the immense ocean of my love, converts itself into a tongue of flame, increasing love one degree more for your lover Jesus."

* * *

December 21, 1932

Exchange of gifts of will between God and the soul, continuous rebirth in the Divine life, bond of wedding, feast of everyone. How the Divine Will holds the creature besieged.

I feel like a little baby in the arms of the Divine Will, oh, how true it seems to me that I am the little newborn that while I am about to be born, another act of his Divine Will pours itself on me, or else another knowledge of his is manifested to me, I am reborn anew in that act and in that knowledge, as to a new life in his Divine Will that I didn't have in my power before, I didn't even know it and in the act of receiving it, I feel I have been reborn anew. But while I am about to be reborn, he gives me another of his acts, he invests me with another knowledge of his, and I am always in the act of being reborn. Oh! Power of the Supreme Fiat, you don't know how to ever leave the creature, rather it seems to me that you put me in the labyrinth of your immense light, in the act of always giving me new life, and I feel the need to receive from You your continuous life, hence to remain lost in you but a happy loss because it is not loss, but conquest of new Divine life that he makes the creature.

But while my mind was lost in the Divine Fiat, my Celestial Teacher, visiting his little newborn, all goodness said to me:

"My little daughter, my love is so much that I always remain in the act of making a gift of my Will, in all the acts that the creature does, in order to receive the gift of hers, I am the first one to surrender my gift to her. I spy to see when the creature is about to do an act, in order to give her the gift of my Will in her act, so that in sight of the great gift that I make her, she gives Me the little gift of her volition. Now with this gift of my Volition that I go giving in all the acts of the creature, she receives a new act of Divine life, and I make her be reborn in that new act that I give her, and she feels the new Divine life that she acquires and while she is about to form herself in that Divine life, I don't wait for it, but I immediately make anew for her the gift of my Volition and thus I go alternating (with) the life of the creature, with giving my gift and with wanting to receive hers, so that she feels the growth and the continuous rebirth of her life in the Divine. Now this gift that I make is so great, that while I am about to do it the Heavens stupefied and reverent abase themselves in order to adore a gift so great, and they magnify their Creator with so much liberality and all put themselves at attention, in order to be spectators of how he develops this gift in the act of the creature, and when they see the new rebirth that he does in the Divine Life they tremble, in seeing the great portent that she is reborn to new Divine life. How many times this gift of my Will becomes given to her, and oh, how they thank Me for so much of my goodness, because everyone feels happier in seeing this gift of my working Volition in the act of the creature. One can say that in this exchange of will, in these reciprocal gifts on both parts, a wedding happens between the soul and God, an always repeated new wedding, and when there is a wedding everyone makes feast to the newly espoused and they extol their Creator. Because with this gift of my Fiat, it is not only a gift that I make, but together with the gift I give my life, that forms the bond of inseparability in which consists the substance of the true wedding between the human and the Divine. And I (receive) the highest ingratitude from one who doesn't receive the gift of my Volition in her act, especially in seeing my solitudes that I want to give her, I pray and I beg that they receive him and many times My industry procures new accidents, circumstances not expected, in order to have new occasions in order to be able to give my gift of the Fiat more often to them, and when I see that they don't accept him, I feel my industries of love change into sorrow and I could say that the Heavens cry together with Me, because when this gift of my Will acts in the act of the creature, the Heavens are compromised together with Him and all feel now the feast if he becomes accepted, or the sorrow if he is rejected. Therefore be attentive, don't want other than that the exchange be continuous, that you take the gift of my Will and give Me yours in your little acts, in all that which you do, if you pray, if you suffer, if you work, in everything. Oh! How happy you will make Me, I will be all eyes over your act, so that everyone has the requisite of a act worthy of my Divine Will."

Whence I felt all invested with Divine Volition, I felt him palpating in my little soul, his Celestial and balsamic air formed Heaven in me and I experienced the happiness of up there, indeed I felt more happy than the celestial citizens, because they don't have a gift of act of Divine Will as conquest, as a new rebirth in God, but they have the gift of Him, only as to felicitate and to beatify themselves, but as conquest no, I instead can make new conquests and I can enclose in my act a working Divine Will. But while my mind blundered sweet Jesus surprising me added:

"My blessed daughter, I want to tell you the reason why the creature receives the gift of my Will in all her acts, and gives Me hers time after time, because if to an act there is this exchange and to another no, in the act where there is not the exchange it forms the void in the soul and this void becomes filled with miseries, with weaknesses, with passions, with this the Divine life remains broken and as detached in her, hence the true rebirths can not happen because he would lack the food, the prime material of the continuous act of my Fiat, that forms these new rebirths in God, more so that only He possess and forms the continuous act, hence without his continuous act it is impossible to receive such great gifts and goods as to make Heavens and earth stupefied."

Whence in hearing this I said: "tell me my Love, why do you take such interest, that you want the will of the creature, and you want to give yours? And Jesus:

"Do you want to know the reason? Because with taking her will I put the creature in security, and with giving her mine I take her from all sides and I put my life in security in her, and since (in) my Divine Will, there is no thing or person (in) which he doesn't have his bonds of dominion and conservation, I feel the fortunate creature together with Me in everything and in everyone, and then I can say with facts, not with words that which is mine is yours and I have done everything for you. With this my purpose is realized, my work created with so much love, that is the creature, she doesn't worry Me anymore, there is no peril because my Divine Will holds her besieged in his infinite confines, so that (there) doesn't remain other than for me to enjoy her and to make each other happy, with a happiness not ever interrupted on both parts. Behold therefore that even to such (that) I don't see the creature gifted with the gift of my Fiat, it doesn't give Me peace, I am at continuous watch, because I know that her volition can betray her and Me, hence I must use stratagems, loving industries, I must always work, for Me there is no rest. Instead when her volition is in my power and mine in her power, I rest over her fate, there is no more peril and if I want I exchange it continuously between Me and her, it is in order to have occasion for us to do, to say and to stop in tender conversation and since I want to always give her of mine, I use the pretext of wanting the exchange of hers, in order to give my Will anew to her, but already mine was hers and hers was already mine, only that with giving her anew, I increase new Divine life and surprising graces. Therefore I want you always in my Volition and thus we can be secure, you to always be with Me and I with you."

* * *

December 25, 1932

The birth of the Baby Jesus was universal, he was born in all and in each one. How in order to hold us secure, he came to cover us with the attire of his Humanity. Example of the sun.

My abandonment of the Fiat continues, and being today the day of the Holy Birth, I have passed the whole night without seeing my Celestial Child, and I felt a breaking in my heart without He who forms my life and my all. Oh! To live without Him is to live as if one might not have life, tortured, without strength, without supports, that forms the most terrible of deaths for my poor and little soul, and between the anxieties and the fear, I prayed the Supreme Volition that he might reveal to me He who loved me and formed my hard martyrdom. Whence in the meanwhile, my mind remained as enraptured by an immense light that filled Heavens and earth and oh, wonder, I saw the little Divine Child reborn in every created thing, in every heart, in everything, the little Baby Jesus multiplied, bilocated, was reborn in an infinite way, in all and in each one, so that everyone had the good to feel the Celestial Child be born in them. Oh! How beautiful it was to see him tiny, tiny in the sun, in the stars, in all the elements, in all creatures, that all extolled and had the great honor, the immense good to have be reborn in each and to possess as one's own the sweet pledge of the little Child Jesus. Whence between the wonder and the stupor I saw that also in me Jesus had been born, that with so many sighs and anxieties I searched and I squeezed Him very strongly between my arms and He left me to do it, rather he enjoyed that I might do this, and all tenderness he said to me:

"My daughter, love me, love me, I am born in order to love and to be loved, and in order to do it as God my birth is universal, I would not have done as God if I might not had been reborn in a universal way, in a way that everyone can say with facts the Celestial Infant was born for me, he is mine and it is so very true that I already possess Him. My love would remain impeded if I might not had been able to be reborn in everyone, my Power limited, my immensity restricted if my rebirth might not be universal and it is no wonder, as my Divinity filled Heavens and earth, thus incorporating himself in my little Humanity, he multiplied it and bilocated it in a way to make me be reborn in everyone and in each one. The ways of ours are Divine and infinite that we hold, that everyone should take the good that we do and be pregnant with our works. More so that I descended from Heaven in earth I wanted to take human flesh in order to completely glorify the Celestial Father's glory to supply for all that which man had not done, behold therefore my little Humanity wanted to be reborn also in created things, because man had not given Us the glory, the exchange of love (with) which we had created a Sky, a sun and so many other things, and my Humanity being reborn in them, glorified my Celestial Father completely for the whole work of the Creation. Man with rejecting my Divine Will had become impotent to everything and I came in order to be his Savior, repairer, glorifier, defender and I covered him within the attire of my Humanity, in order to hold him secure and to answer for him in every thing to my Celestial Father. So much was my love that my Divinity in order to give an outlet to my love, he brought Me to be born in every heart and in all things, so very true that, the first ones to recognize me and to extol me were created things, because feeling my birth in them they exulted with joy and made a feast for Me. But do you know who are those people who make a feast for Me in being born in their hearts? Those people that possess my Divine Will, these immediately notice that the I have been born in their hearts and they make for Me a perennial feast, instead the others make Me cry, they give me sorrow and with sin they prepare for Me the knife in order to wound me or in order to kill me.”

After this I remained all immersed in his love, the moving scene of the birth of the Celestial Child so universal and in each one it made me understand who knows how many things, but I believe that I am better to pass on in silence because not knowing how to say them well I would blunder. Whence in order to make the Celestial Infant a feast I all abandoned myself in the Divine Will and He returning again, was so very attractive, with a rare beauty, that one doesn't find another one similar, and enclosing him in my heart, all love, as a place of his birth and he repeated in me his infantile weepings, his loving groans, his repeated hiccups. Oh! How moving it was to see him now crying, now hiccupping, now wailing, he made the first entry of rebirth in each one and in all, with the weapons of his tears, with the stratagems of his hiccups, with the prayers of his whimpers, with this he made himself enrapturer and by way of enrapturing with the strength possessed by a God, he entered into hearts in order to form his rebirth anew. Oh! Heavens bow down and together with me, love and adore the Celestial infant. But while my mind lost itself in a mystery so great, the sweet Little Child between the tears and the hiccups, mixed with a celestial attitude of appeal added:

“Blessed daughter, not only was my birth universal, because as God I can not do otherwise, I found myself in the condition of the sun, that whether they want, or don't want, all created things, all the Creation and all creatures must receive its light, its heat, from the heights where it descends with my empire of light and with my supremacy that it possesses over everyone and over everything it seems that the sun says with his muteness but stronger than if he might speak: ‘whether you receive me with love or I invest you with the rights that I possess to give you light and if you don't want to receive me I will surround you from all sides in a way that you can not escape from my light and I will have the great glory that I have given my light to everyone.’ The sun is symbol of my birth that also is reborn in all days for everything and for each and I am not only reborn in a universal way but I make an invasion while I am reborn, I am not only reborn in the heart but I invade the mind with my thoughts, the eyes with my tears, the voice with my whimpers, in a way that I make the universal invasion of all creatures, I take her from all sides so that she can not escape Me, if they receive Me with love, my life is not only born in them, but it grows in a surprising way, if then they don't receive Me with love, I am reborn in them with the rights of mine of God that I possess, but I don't grow in them, I remain tiny and I remain only to reserve waiting that who knows with my whimpers and tears they are induced to love me and if I don't succeed with this my life changes for them into justice. And oh, how it tears my little heart to pieces, to see my birth all love, changed into justice for poor creatures. Hence since I am already born in you give me the good to make me grow thus you will change my tears and my whimpers into joys.”

* * *

January 6, 1933

He hides himself in the creature who works in the Divine Will with all his acts, thankfulness that one feels for one who lets him produce his life. Rights on both parts, the little craft.

I was making my round in the Creation in order to follow the acts the Divine Will had done in It, and it seemed to me that every created thing gave me entrance in order to receive my act and put it in cortege and (gave) the exchange to the Divine Will that created things possessed as actress and conservator. Now while I did this the Celestial little Child made me his brief little visit and said to me:

“My daughter, one who does the Divine Will in doing her acts re-pours herself into Him there is no particle of her being that doesn’t take post in the Supreme Volition. And then all that which God has created, all that which he has done and will do being all enclosed in my Volition, as one act alone re-pours everything in the act of the creature in a way that her act remains filled, embellished, surrounded with all that which my Will has done and will do, so much so that one sees impressed, fused, surrounded in the act of creatures, all the Divine acts. When my Will works, as much in our Divinity, as in the human act, he doesn’t know if he wants to detach one act of his from the other act, but unites them all together and forms the new act that he wants to do, one can say that all our Divine Being with all our acts, We pour them over the creature, we hide ourselves in her, we wall ourselves up, while we leave in our immensity and interminable power that which we are. However our happiness is doubled by the creature, because she has given Us the occasion to bilocate our Life together with our acts and we receive the glory, the honor, the love of our own life and of all our acts on the part of one who lets themselves be possessed by our Will. It happens to Us as to the sun that when from the heights of its sphere it gives itself to the earth, it seems that it gives only its light, but it is not true, together with its light it gives all that which it possesses, so very true that one sees the earth in bloom with so many varieties of colors, varieties of sweetness, of flavors that the light has given so much beauty, so many substances, so many colors. Ah no! It is because the light has given the substances, the properties that the light possesses. One can say that the earth is rich, embellished by the properties that the sun possesses, but while the sun gives, it loses nothing of that which it possesses. Oh! If the sun might have reason, how happier it would feel, more glorified for the great good that it does to the earth. To reproduce our life, our acts in our beloved creature for Us is happiness and we feel as thankful toward she who has given Us the field to make use of our communicative powers, to reproduce ourselves in her.”

Whence I in this hearing this thought to myself: and if there might be sin, passions, how can the creature receive this great good? And Jesus added:

“Blessed daughter, when the soul gives herself into the authority of my Will she holds the virtue to make the life of evil be lost, there is no sin or passion that she not feeling, gives it death more than by deadly force, rather by themselves they die as my Will reigns in the soul, thus they feel themselves lose life. He is as the frost to the plants that withers them for evil, dries them and makes them die.

He is as the light to the darkness, which as the light appears, the darkness disappears and dies, rather one does not even know where it has gone. My Will is as the heat to the cold, the cold dies under the virtue of the heat. If the frost, the light, the heat hold the virtue to make plants, darkness, cold die. More so my Divine Will holds the virtue to make all the evils die together, at the most if the soul does not let herself be always dominated by my Will where He doesn't always reign he can not always communicate all the goods and convert into Divine life the whole of the creature and where the Divine life is lacking evil arises and it can happen as to the plants, if the force of the frost retires, the plants(,) although with difficulty(,) commence to be renewed, if the light retires the darkness arises again and if the heat retires the cold acquires its life again. Behold therefore the great necessity to always do my Will and live in Him, if you want to scatter all the evils and also eradicate the roots of the passions. More so that my Divine Volition wants to always give to the creature, but in order to give he is on the look-out in order to see how much she works in his will, because every act that she does in Him, acquires a Divine right, so that how many acts she does, so many rights she acquires in the sea of my Fiat. And he acquires so many rights over the creature, these rights on both parts make God and the poor creature Proprietor. And my Will bilocates and encloses (himself) in the soul for how much she is capable to enclose, since he wants to always carry her to navigate in the immense sea of his volition that reigns in God himself and making her more capable she takes from his sea and enlarges the little sea of his Volition in the depth of (her) soul. One can say that he makes of her his little craft, in order to go vacationing in his immense sea of his Volition and according that she disposes herself and works, thus he encloses new doses of Divine Will. Therefore I want you always in Him, thus you will give Me the right to always be able to give to you and you to receive always."

* * *

January 14, 1933

The page of life. The creation, Celestial page, the 'I love you' punctuation of these pages, the craftsman and the Divine writer.

I was continuing my usual turning for all the Creation, in order to meet with the Divine Will dominant in It and to reciprocate him with my love for so much love for me, in creating so many things for my love and it seemed to me that every single created thing was in the expectation of receiving the seal of my 'I love you', this was a right, a tribute, a little sign that they demanded from the earth, to that Will that had given so much to all creatures, that formed their actor and conservator; but while I did this, it seemed that my sweet Jesus with his own hands took my 'I love you' and put it as a seal to those created things, to which I directed it and putting them aside I awaited that it might follow the work of the 'I love you', to all the other created things, and I was amazed in seeing the interest of Jesus, his waiting, I thought to myself: "but what great thing is my little 'I love you', that arrives to form the occupation and the interest of Jesus?" And He stopping himself in order to speak to me said to me:

"My blessed daughter, do you know what thing is your 'I love you'? It is as the punctuation to the character, a character without punctuation is seen as confusion without just ideas, without expressions formed in a way that one who reads them does not find the true sense, it can have those ideas that she wants, beautiful and ugly as it pleases her. Hence lacking the punctuation, one can call it a writing without true value and in clear notes it speaks of the ignorance and the little value of whom has written it. And yet how great is a point, a comma, a question mark and all the rest of the punctuation? One can say it is nothing in comparison to the work of the extension of a character. Such is her 'I love you' and the punctuation to the character of your life, of your words, works, steps and even of your heart, the punctuation of your 'I love you' casts the order in all your acts, it puts forth the just ideas, gives the most beautiful expressions and makes known to you He for who's love the page and the character of your life becomes formed. But this is nothing yet, this point, this little comma of your 'I love you', rises on high and punctuates our Divine pages, our Celestial characters of all the Creation. What is all the Creation? If not but our Divine page put forth by Us and our Celestial characters impressed in the whole page of the Creation punctuated with such order and harmony, with most just ideas, with the most beautiful and moving expressions, made with such value of art that no other craftsman can imitate. Now your 'I love you' unites itself to the Divine punctuation and punctuating it it knows the value of our characters, it learns to read our page, understands with just ideas how much we have done for her love and she receives the most beautiful and moving expression of her Creator and she gives Us the little tribute, she pays Us the little wealth that We with love of justice await from creatures. Not only, since the 'I love you' holds the virtue by nature to convert itself into good. I with all love take these points and commas of your 'I love you' and I put your little light on our Divine punctuation and looking at all the Creation, I feel such straightness of love that I see the punctuation of the little daughter of my Volition in our Celestial punctuation. But tell me my daughter, why do you say to Me 'I love you' and want to invest all created things, my own acts, with your 'I love you'?"

And I: "because I love you and want to be loved by You."

And He: "Therefore because you love Me, you say to Me 'I love you' and is this not the greatest of my contentments, my sighs, my anxieties, my deliriums, to be loved by the creature? Now know that your 'I love you', to your every 'I love you', I whisper to the ear of your heart 'I love you' and I put my Celestial punctuation to the page and characters of your life, are you not content with it?"

And I: "My love, it is not enough for me, no, your punctuation alone, I am not content with it, my punctuations alone can be enough for You because being little and good for nothing I don't know how to do other, but You who know how to do everything, in order to make me content I want that You yourself form for me the page and the characters of my life."

And Jesus: "Yes, yes, I will content you and I could say to you that I am doing it. Now know that in order to have a page written there is needed the paper, the ink, the pen, all things of material beforehand in order to form a written page, if (there) lacked one of them the writing could not have life. Now the paper is my Divine Will, which as foundation of everything must form the page of life. You see, I can say that my Will extended himself as foundations of all the Creation, more than paper in order to receive the distinct characters of ours, of our incessant love, in which we re-pour more than indelible characters our qualities and Divine works, our characters become formed with works and incessant love. Thus the soul must possess as base of everything, my Divine Will but it is not enough(,) there is needed the incessant love in order to form the ink, in order to write on this paper of light, but paper and ink are not sufficient in order to form the characters, therefore there is needed the pen of holy works, the diversity of sacrifices, the circumstances of life, in order to form the pen and thus write the ordered characters, the most beautiful and moving expressions that now makes one cry, and now fills the heart with joy, in a way that one who can read them, will feel transformed and re-given the life of good that that page possesses and I, Craftsman and Divine Writer, when I find paper, ink and pen, as I formed and I wrote the page of the Creation, thus I occupy myself with my highest delight to form and write the page of this creature, perhaps more beautiful than the same page of the Creation. Therefore always have ready paper, ink and pen, and I promise you to write the page of your life in which one will see that I alone have been He who have formed and written it and thus you will be content and I (will be) content.”

* * *

January 18, 1933

Solitude in which Jesus becomes put by those who receive Him Sacramentally, his tears, his sorrows. The mute species and the living species, continuation of the life of Jesus in the creature.

Having made Holy Communion I was making my usual thanksgivings and my Highest Good Jesus made himself seen afflicted and taciturn, as if he might feel the need of company, and squeezing myself to Him I sought to console him with showing myself to always remain united with Him, in order to not leave him alone, and Jesus seemed all content and in order to vent his sorrow he said to me:

“My daughter, be faithful to me do not leave me ever alone, because the suffering of solitude is the most oppressive, because company is the food of relief for one who suffers, instead without company one suffers sorrow and is constrained to feel hunger, because he lacks one who gives the relief of food, he lacks everything, and perhaps he lacks one who can offer him relief, might it yet be a bitter medicine. My daughter, how many souls receive Me Sacramentally in their hearts and they put Me in solitude, I feel in them as within a desert, as if I might not pertain to them, they deal with Me as extraneous, but do you know why they don’t take part in my life, in my virtues, in my sanctity, in my joys and in my sorrows, company means to take part in all that which the person does and suffers that remains near, hence to receive me and not take part in my life, it is for Me the most bitter solitude, and remaining alone I can not say to them how much I burn with love for them, and therefore my love, my sanctity, my virtue, my life remains isolated, in short everything is solitude inside of Me and outside of Me. Oh! How many times I descend into hearts and cry, because I see Myself alone, and when I descend, seeing myself alone I feel not cared for, nor appreciated, nor loved, so much so that I am constrained by their carelessness, to reduce myself to silence and melancholy, and since they don’t take part in my Sacramental Life, I feel set apart in their hearts, and seeing that I don’t have anything to do, with Divine and unconquered patience, I await the consummation of the Sacramental species, inside of which my eternal Fiat had imprisoned Me, leaving hardly the traces of my descent, because I could leave nothing of my Sacramental Life, perhaps only my tears, because not having taken part in my life, (there) lacked the void where to be able to leave the things that belong to Me, and that I wanted to put in common with them. Therefore one sees so many souls that receive Me Sacramentally and they don’t give forth of Me, they are sterile of virtue, sterile of love, of sacrifice, poor little ones, they feed themselves with Me, but since they don’t keep Me company they remain fasting. Ah! To what straights of sorrow and cruel martyrdom my Sacramental Life is put. Many times I feel drowned with love, I would like to free myself and I long to descend into hearts, but alas! I am constrained to go forth from it more drowned than before, how can I vent if they have not even made attention to the flames that burned Me? Other times the flood of sorrow inundates Me, I long for a heart in order to have a relief to my sufferings, not a bit! They would like that I might take their part, not them to mine, and I do it, I hide my sorrows, my tears, in order to console them and the I remain without the longed for relief. But who can tell you the so many sorrows of my Sacramental Life and how there are more of those that receive Me and put Me in solitude in their hearts, but bitter solitude, than those that keep Me company? And when I find a heart that keeps Me company, I put my Life in communication with her, leaving her the deposit of my virtues, the fruit of my sacrifices, the participation of my Life, and I choose her for my abode, for (the) hideaway of my sufferings and as (a) place of my refuge, and I feel as repaid for the sacrifice of my Eucharistic Life, because I found one who breaks my solitude for Me, who dries my tears, who gives Me liberty to let me vent my love and my sorrows, it is they who serve Me as living species, not like the Sacramental species that gives Me nothing, only that they hide Me, the rest I do by myself all alone, they don't tell Me a word that breaks my solitude, they are mute species. Instead in the souls that serve Me as living species, we develop life together, we beat with one heartbeat alone, and if I see her disposed, I communicate my sufferings to her and my continuous passion, I can say that from the Sacramental species I pass into the living species in order to continue my Life upon the earth, not alone but together with her. You should know that the sufferings are not in my power anymore, and I go asking for love from these living species of souls, that make up for Me that which I lack. Therefore my daughter, when I find a heart that loves Me and keeps Me company, giving me liberty to do that which I want, I arrive to excesses, I don't mind to anything I give so much that the poor creature feels drown by my love and by my graces, and then my Sacramental Life doesn't remain sterile anymore when I descend into hearts, no, but it reproduces itself, bilocating and continuing my Life in her, and these are my conquerors that administer their life to this needy poor man of sufferings and they say to Me: 'My love, you had your turn of sufferings and it ended, it is now my turn, therefore leave it to me that I might make up for You and that I suffer in your place.' And oh, how content I remain from it! My Sacramental Life remains at its post of honor because it reproduces other of its lives in creatures. Therefore I want you always together with Me, so that we have life together, and you take to breast/heart my life and I take up yours."

* * *

January 22, 1933

How Jesus doesn't want to keep accounts with the creature. The Celestial Gardener, the human will field of Jesus, dowry and outfit that God gives to the creature.

I was thinking of the Divine Volition and a thousand thoughts crowded in my mind and I said to myself: "but why does Jesus so very love to want my Will? If he loves to give his to me I gain the profit, to have a Divine Will in my power, I possess everything, enclose everything, even God himself, but He to want mine, nothing less than in order to exchange his, there is more to astonish one, what can it serve him, a will so weak and insignificant to be of profit to him, that it knows how to produce more evil than good? One sees that Jesus does not understand accounts, nor does he know how to give, nor better (still) does he want to give the just value to that which he gives, to the exchange that he receives, provided that he obtains his intent he doesn't mind if he obtains little or nothing, to the comparison of the much that he has given, however here one sees that his love is true love because he is disinterested." But while my mind blundered, my sweetest Jesus, made himself seen that he was all attentive to listen to my blunders, and all delighted he said:

"My blessed daughter, if I might want to make accounts, to the creature I would never have anything to give, because before that which she can give Me, everything has been from me, hence not giving Me other than mine, and therefore my love makes Me always put aside the accounts; to keep accounts with creatures would impede my love and make him lose the liberty of letting him give that which he wants to give to the creature, and it would be awkward. Other than this in order to give you my Divine Will it is necessary that you give yours, because two wills can not reign inside of one heart, they would cause war with each other, and yours would be an obstacle to mine, and hence he would not be free to do that which he wants, and I in order to make mine free, with so many insinuations I ask yours of you. But this is not everything yet, you should know that your will being in you is weak, insignificant, but as it arrives in my creative hands and transforming it it changes aspect, I make it powerful, I revive it and enclose in it the productive value of good, and I make use of it not in order to remain in idleness, and making myself Celestial Gardener, I work in this field of your will and I make of it a beautiful meadow in bloom and a garden of my delights. So that which in your hands is insignificant and perhaps also harmful, in mine changes nature and serves Me in order to entertain me and hold a little earth at my disposition, in order to form the most beautiful flowerings. And then to be able to give, I want the little, the insignificant, even as a pretext to be able to give the great and thus to say she has given Me and I have given (her), it is true that she has given Me little, but that held and stripping herself even of the little for Me it is the greatest gift, and I entrust to her to the exuberance of my love, I make up for that which the creature lacks.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will and while I sought to follow his acts, my beloved Jesus said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you should know that as you seek to follow the acts of my Divine Will, you put yourself en route with Him, and my Fiat comes to meet you in order to receive you, in order to offer you his acts so that you make them one with yours, and I receive the sweet surprises of your attentions, the enchantment of your love. And I never lose sight of you and I assist in the most moving scenes of yours in the All, of your little being in the great one, of the finite in the infinite, for an alteration with each other between God and the creature, and in this alteration the one dotes the other with pure love. Now you should know that when we put forth the creature to the light of day, We gave her the dowry, the outfit of our Divine particles. The dowry is our Will, nor did we put forth a limit, rather we gave her the liberty to augment her dowry. Now the acts that you do in our Will, they are new properties that she acquires, besides those that your Creator has given you, and we in the emphasis of love tell her: ‘how many more acts you will do in our Volition, so much more Divine field we will give you, in order to give you the post where to put your acts’, thus you will work in our Celestial field, and We will give you how much more field you want, enough that you don’t hold it empty, and be attentive to put it in traffic, rather we will have the great contentment to see your properties more extensive. We do as a father when he gives his dowry to the child, this child works, sacrifices herself so much, in a way that augments her dowry, extends her properties, and the father enjoys it more than if they might be his properties and the fortune of the child. Thus do We, indeed more so, when we see her all attention, ready to whatever sacrifice, We don’t leave her, but we work together, we lend her all that which she needs, will, sanctity, our acts, everything, in order to have the contentment to see our daughter possessor of many properties.”

* * *

January 29, 1933

Power of the truth, steps on both parts God and the creature. Unusual aspect of the Supreme Being.

I was thinking of the so many truths that my adorable Jesus has manifested to me on the Divine Will, and oh, how many thoughts crowded in my mind of surprise, of joys, of emotion, on these truths, it seemed to me that they descended from Heaven all ordered, in order to fill the earth, and their work was to form the way in themselves, in order to make us reenter in these truths, and they walled themselves up around creatures, in order to not let them go out. And my Celestial Jesus, visiting my little soul said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that every truth that I have manifested on my Divine Will, is none other than one approach more toward creatures, our Supreme Being, as he spoke thus he made one step more toward them, he put one Divine particle more at their disposition for them and cast new bonds of union and of love. Our word is always our birth, it is our Word that we put en route from Heaven in order to search for our longed for creature, and our Sacrosanct Trinity pulled by the power of the Word, because inseparable from Us, we make our steps afterwards, and step by step we approach where our word arrives. Now you should know that when we decide to manifest a truth through means of our Word, since it is a part of ourselves that we brought forth, our Supreme Being takes an unusual aspect, one new joy invests Us, a communicative force goes forth from Us of new beatitudes, all of Heaven in seeing our unusual aspect, already realizes that we are about to bring forth one of our words of truth, because the first ones to celebrate truths that go forth are the Three Divine Persons, and then all of Heaven together with Us. They are the gifts of the great King, that knows how to move everything, invest everything and our word that holds the creative, vivifying, transforming virtue, and knocks down, grinds the times, he puts everything into splinters, and over the ruins he makes the life of our word arise and forms there the most beautiful things, the new creation, the works of magnificence as to make Heaven and earth stupefied, what can't one Fiat of ours do, everything, and what won't the chains of so many of our Fiats do! Our Fiat transformed into word of truth possesses invincible virtue, inarrivable power, immovable firmness of good that he wants to form in the power of my speaking Fiat. You don't want to understand the great gift and the great good that one single word of mine of Divine truth encloses, but you will understand with time, when you will see the deeds, the works, that my truth has produced, because my truths not only have the power to pull our Divine Being afterwards, to make us take steps, and many times also it makes Us race in order to approach creatures, but they give graces to them to make them take steps, and make them race to meet He who is already coming in order to meet them and give them the great good that our Fiat pronounced. So that our truths act powerfully when we bring them forth over our Divine Being, because if they go forth they want to give the life and the good that they possess, and at the same time they want to dispose creatures to draw near to the font from where they have departed, in order to transform them in the good of same truth. Everything is if a new truth goes forth from us, at the most times, centuries can pass, this says nothing, since they are armed not only with power, but with unconquered and Divine patience and they don't become tired in waiting, they are tireless, they are inflexible, first they must give that which they have of the good, the life that they possess, and then triumphant and victorious, they re-send the fruits that have conquered to Heaven. Therefore my daughter, be attentive to listen to my truths, first you must think from where they come, who hands them to you, the good that they want to do, the steps on both parts drawing near, nor want to put (them) in doubt, because you don't see in the world the effects, the good, the life, that my truths possess, the time will make and will say everything, for now (do) your part, to the rest your Jesus will think to it.

“Other than this, you should know that first we form the knoll, the place, the soul where our truths should descend, and then We decide to bring them forth from within our Paternal bosom, because our Supreme Being in bringing forth the truths from Us, that change themselves into works for creatures, in bringing them forth they don’t remain in (the) air and idle, no, our wisdom never does useless things, if we bring them forth they must be bearers of the good that they enclose. Behold therefore the necessity of the knoll where our goodness directs them, in order to immediately commence their work of participation and of transformation of the goods that they possess, it might yet be beginning (with) one single soul, and then they diffuse themselves so much, as to form armies of creatures of the good that our truths possess, and when they have formed these noble armies, our truths bring them in their womb into our Celestial Country. They are the conquerors that populate Heaven, they do as messengers, they flow (over) the earth, they cast the seed, work it, gather it, and triumphant in order to put it in security, they bring it into the Celestial regions, they are untiring, nor do they ever stop if they do not obtain their intent. Therefore be attentive and do not disobey anything of that which your Jesus has taught you.”

* * *

February 12, 1933

God possesses in nature the creative strength, necessity of love. God voluntary prisoner of the creature, the Divine Fisherman, daily fishing.

I was following my acts in the Divine Volition and I felt a powerful strength that swept me away, unified me, identified me in the same Divine works. I could say that my being was so very diminished that it dispersed itself in the immense sea, that I felt his eternal waves regurgitate inside and outside of me, which raised me and sunk me and I felt the Divine life more than mine. And my always amiable Jesus who knocks down and raises up, who gives death and in the same instant re-arises to new life, visiting his little daughter, he said to me:

“Blessed daughter, our love is exuberant, and how much more we give more we want to give to creatures, indeed in giving our love overflows from Us from every part and would like to drown her with love, with sanctity, with beauty, with light, with our goodness, how much more we give, more the passion grows in Us to love her and to make her love us.

“You should know that our Supreme Being possesses in nature creative strength, the redeeming virtue and the life that revives and sanctifies all. Now in creating the Creation we did it as alone, without the creature, but after created, our love is so much toward her that we wanted to continue and to develop the creative strength together with her, and while with the conservation the creation is as if in the act (in which) we were creating it, this creative strength unifies and invests souls and it continues the Creation in the interior of each one. And what do we create? New Heavens of love, new suns of knowledge, new seas of grace, new air of sanctity, new winds of refreshment that embalm the creature, new life always growing with our Divine Will, new flowers of beauty, of holy desires. In short, our creative virtue makes echo in souls the echo of the Creation of all things, and with a Wisdom and goodness all ours, we always create, without ever stopping. If we might ever stop, that which can not be, we should restrict this creative nature of ours, that holds the virtue of always creating. But with all this, our Divine Heights abased ourselves so much, we descended into the depth of creatures, and we develop there together our creative virtue, as we don't want to do it alone, solitude would break Our arms, and it would put a limit to our creative strength and virtue. We, in order to be able to love more, We form ourselves with laws of love and we have created in Us the need to love. So that to love in Us is necessity, but a wanted necessity not forced by anyone, and it is this necessity to love that makes Us do so many unheard of things, it makes Us give into excesses and into follies toward creatures. It would have been absurd and not ways of a perfect Being that is ours, to create things and beings to live and not to love them, rather first we love them, we make our love as first act race and then we bring them forth to the light as birth, outlet and triumph of our love, if this might not be the creation would have been an unbearable weight and not of glory and of honor, things that don't love each other flee each other. Instead We love them so much that we enclose Ourselves in them, making ourselves voluntary Prisoners, in order to form our Divine Life in the creature and fill her with Us, for how capable they are. And in order to make that we might love her more and in order to be more loved, we want that she know it and we want her in our company, in order to make that she herself sees and touches with (her) hand that which we are working, and how we want our Divine life in her soul. Our love does not give itself pause, and according to the dispositions and cooperation of the creature, now we develop the creative strength, now the redemptive, and now the sanctifying, according to her needs and the correspondence that she lends Us. But all this always together with her, never alone, we want to use the creative virtue, but we want that she knows and receives it, we want to use the redeeming virtue, if sin tyrannizes her, but we want that she feels the good that we want to make her, and she receive it with love and gratitude. We want to use the sanctifying virtue, but we want that she lends herself to receive the transformation of our holy acts in hers, in order to receive our sanctifying virtue. If the soul doesn't remain together with us and doesn't unite her little work, to our great work, for Us it would be as if we might want to develop our work of love over inanimate things, that don't feel and don't know anything of the good that they receive and for them it would be as the distant God that they neither know, nor love. You should know that our love is so much, that all creatures swim and are inside of this immense sea of our love, it is as if we might not be content with so much immensity of this love of ours, our Supreme Being makes himself Fisherman and goes fishing the little drops of love of creatures, their little acts, their little sacrifices, the sufferings suffered for our love, an 'I love you' with heart that she has said to Us. We fish all from within our same sea in order to take the contentment, the happiness of the exchange of the love of the creature and we crave it so much that we make our daily fishing and prepare our Celestial table. True love has the virtue of transforming things, it puts forth the sweet enchantment to our Divine pupils and makes the little loving acts of creatures beautiful, attractive, likable to Us, in a way that enraptures Us, wounds Us, felicitates Us. In (that) We make ourselves enrapturers, making of her our most pleasant conquest. Therefore if you want to make us happy and be (the) bearer to your God of joys and happiness, love, love always, don't ever stop loving us and in order to be more secure enclose all yourself in the Divine Fiat, which will let nothing escape of you that is not love for your Creator."

* * *

February 24, 1933

The truth seed, the Celestial Farmer and human Sower. Immobility of the Divine ways, to what the sufferings and contradictions serve.

My little mind was all occupied by the so many truths that blessed Jesus had manifested to me on the Divine Will and each one of them presented themselves to me as a distinct portent the one from the other; but Divine portent not human, not of earth, but of Heaven and they remained as all in act of wanting to assail the creature in order to communicate to her and transform her in their portentous virtue all Celestial and Divine. But while my mind was thus occupied, I thought to myself: “and yet before truth so Celestial and Divine of which the shadow of the human doesn’t exist, so amiable, so penetrating, holy, full of lights. Each one of which encloses the life, the love, the sanctity of He who has manifested them. There is still some (who) reading something of these truths put themselves in doubt, they have difficulty and You know it O Jesus, to You everything is known”; I felt all oppressed and I longed (for) my sweet Jesus in order to tell him my suffering and He surprising me said to me:

“My good daughter do not afflict yourself for this, you should know that a truth in order to know it it is necessary to love it. Love makes the appetite arise, the appetite forms the taste, the taste makes arise the hunger to eat of it to satiate, and chewing very well the substance of a food, or rather my truths. The chewing produces the easy digestion in a way that one feels the possession of the great good that my truth possesses and produces. Then the doubts quit, difficulties melt as snow before the rays of a scorching sun. Now if hardly they have grazed them without eating them, with a profound study, with a love that generates the appetite what wonder! What makes doubts and difficulty? Oh, how they would have done better to say: ‘it is not food for us, we don’t have (the) will to eat it’, rather than to give judgments. But one knows, that my truths find post more in the simple hearts than in the learned hearts. This happened in my Redemption, with my sorrow not one learned one followed Me; but all the poor, ignorant and simple ones. You should know that my truths are seeds that I the Celestial Farmer continue to sow in souls, and if I make my seeding(,) with certainty I must gather the fruit. Many times it happens to Me as to the poor sower that casts his seed in the earth, which for lack of moisture the earth doesn’t hold the strength to eat the seed in order to digest it and to convert it in earth and give the substance that it has absorbed from the seed and give the ten, the twenty, the one hundred of the seed that it has eaten. Other times while he casts the seed, for lack of rain the earth is made hard over the seed and the substance of the seed that it encloses doesn’t find the way in order to make life go forth, and the poor farmer must have patience to receive the harvest of his seeds. However with having sowed the seed he has already done a thing and can have hope of who knows that a rain might give moisture to the earth, which possessing the substance of his seeds, it will put forth that which he has sowed, or else taking away the hardness and shifting it forms the ways in order to let his seed reproduce. So that the sower in spite that the earth doesn’t produce immediately, the multiplicity of the seed that it received, the time, the circumstances, the rain, can produce a most abundant harvest that he didn’t expect. Now if the farmer in spite of all the difficulties of the earth, can hope to receive an abundant harvest, more so I, Celestial Farmer, having put forth from my Divine bosom, so many seeds of Celestial truths, in order to sow them in the depth of your soul, and from the harvest I will fill the whole world. Do you want to believe that for doubts and difficulties of some, that as earth without moisture, and as hard and inveterate earth, I should not make my superabundant harvest? My daughter is wrong! The time, the persons, the circumstances change, and that which today can be seen black, tomorrow can be seen white, because many times one sees according to the predispositions that they have, and according to the long or short sightedness that the intellect possesses. Poor little ones one needs to be sorry for them. But everything is in that I have already made the seeding to her, the most necessary thing, most substantial, most interesting, that (is) to manifest my truths. If I have done my work, the principal part has been put forth in work I have found your earth in order to cast my seed the rest will come from itself. The doubts, the difficulties, the sufferings, will serve as if to the poor farmer he might be able to use wood, the fire, in order to cook the gathered seed and make his food of it. Thus they can serve Me and you as suns in order to make them mature in the seas, as firewood and fire in order to give them not with words alone, but with the practice, the sacrifice of the fire of one's own life, in order to cook it and in order to convert it into (the) sweetest food and feed creatures. My daughter, if I might have wanted to listen to that which was said of Me and to the contradictions to my truths that I manifested when I came upon the earth, I would not have formed neither the Redemption, nor manifested my Gospel. And yet they were the most learned, the noblest part, those people that had studied the scriptures and that taught the people the religion, I left them to speak and I supported their continuous contradictions with love and unconquered patience and of the sufferings that they gave me I made use of them as firewood in order to burn me and consume me on the cross for their love and of everyone. Thus today, if I might want to listen to that which they say on the truths of my Divine Will I would have had to put an end to the manifestations on Him, and to the designs that I want to complete with manifesting them; but no, we don't suffer mutability, the Divine work is immutable, human work holds this weakness that acts according to the appreciation that the others make her but Us no. When we decide there is not (one) who moves us, nor all creatures, nor all hell, however our inextinguishable love awaits, the times, the circumstances, the persons, that should serve us to that which we have established. Therefore do not want to worry yourself and making yours our Divine ways, if needs be, put forth the sacrifice of your life in order to obtain that my Divine Will be known and reign in all the world."

My sweet Jesus became silent and I continued to think of the impossibility (of) how the Divine Will could reign as in Heaven so in earth. Jesus sighing added:

"My blessed daughter, that which is impossible to men, everything is possible to God. And if it might be impossible that my Will could reign as in Heaven so in earth, my goodness all paternal would not have taught the prayer of the Our Father, because to have (one) pray for impossible things first I would have neither recited it with so much love, putting myself at the head of everyone, nor would I have taught it to the Apostles so that they might teach it to all the world as the most beautiful prayer and the most substantial of my Church. I don't want impossible things, nor do I demand them from the creature, nor do I myself do impossible things. Hence if it might have been impossible that my Divine Will could reign as in Heaven so in earth I would have taught a useless prayer and without effect, and I don't know how to do useless things, at the most I wait more even centuries but I must have the fruit of my taught prayer arise, more so that gratuitously, without anyone having told Me(.) I gave this great good that my Will might be done as in Heaven so in earth. I myself as according to Creation, without anyone having prayed Me, I extended the Heavens, I created the sun and all the rest. Thus with my Will all spontaneous I said: 'pray, that my Will be done as in Heaven so in earth.' And when spontaneously it says pray that this happens, without anyone having troubled Me it means that first I looked (at) all in my omniscience, I pondered things very well and when I saw that this was possible then I decided to teach the Our Father, wanting the will united to ours that it might yearn and that he might come to reign as in Heaven so in earth. So that all that which I have manifested on my Will is enclosed in those words alone: 'be done your Will as in Heaven so in earth.' In these few words are enclosed abysses of graces, of sanctity, of light and abysses of communications and Divine transformations between the Creator and creatures. My daughter, it was the regal gift that your Jesus made to the human generations, as completion of my Redemption. My love was not yet content, my sufferings had not brought Me full satisfaction. I wanted, I wanted to give still, I wanted to see my Heaven in earth in the midst of my children, therefore a few days before departing for Heaven, first I decided to give my Will as in Heaven so in earth and afterwards I taught the Our Father in which I remained promised to give this gift. Your Jesus when he promises it never comes to less, therefore do not put forth doubts, and if the others doubt leave them to do it, that they know as I should develop things, I have power and volition in my hands and this is enough for Me. And you remain in peace and always follow my flight, trust your Jesus and you will see.”

* * *

March 5, 1933

How the human will reduces the soul to shreds and forms the little citadels without king and without defense. Cries of Jesus.

My poor mind while it crossed over the sea of the Divine Fiat, according to my little capacity I understood his value, his sanctity, and the great prodigy that the creature living in Him can enclose in herself a Will so holy and interminable, making herself bearer and possessor of this Volition so holy, that involves and encloses all. That the great encloses the little, there is nothing to wonder over, but that the little encloses the great, it gives of the incredible, and only God can do these prodigies. Divine goodness how very admirable you are and more than (a) tender and loving mother who wants to enclose herself in the child in order to put him in security and make herself repeater of the life of her same birth, in order to have the glory to be able to say: the child is all similar to his mother. But while my mind felicitated in the pure joys of the Divine Fiat, a whirlwind sadness devastated my joys, and I understood the great evil and the terrible affront that one makes to God when arbitrating ourselves we do our will. And beloved Jesus repeating his brief little visit all embittered said to me:

“My good daughter, aye, the human will wages war on God and war on herself, the weapons that she moves against her Creator wounds herself and her soul remains as a tattered body before God, every act of human will divides her from her Creator, from his sanctity, from his fortitude and power, from his love and immutability. Without my Divine Will the creature becomes as a besieged city, in which the enemies constrain her to die of hunger, and torture her in all (her) members, with this difference, that the executioners that tear (her) members are her own will, they are not enemies that torment her, but she herself makes herself enemy of herself. If you might know the sorrow that I feel when I see souls torn to shreds, every act of her will is a division that she forms between God and her, it is a move away from the beauty of her Creation, it is chilling herself from the true and pure love, it is losing herself from her origin, it is preparing herself, if the will precipitates into grave evil, or an anticipated hell, or a purgatory if the evil is slight. The human will is as gangrene to the body that holds (the) virtue of making the flesh fall in shreds and of deforming the beauty of the creature. Poor souls without my Divine Will, because He alone holds the unitive virtue that uniting everything together, the thought, the desire, the affection, the love, the human will, he gives the beautiful form united to the soul of the creature. Instead without my Will the thought wants one thing, the will another, the desire wants another, the affection another, in a way that they struggle among themselves, they become entangled, they are divided. Ah! There is no peace, nor union without my Will, she lacks one who puts the cement there, in order to reunite the divided parts and render her strong against all the evils, that can rise up. Therefore your Jesus does none other than cry over the ruins of these, more than Jerusalem thrown into confusion, that instead of knowing their Messiah they refused to acknowledge Him and they gave Him death. Thus my Will, they refused to acknowledged him, while he is in the midst of them and in them, and they form of their souls little cities thrown into confusion that constrain Me to make me repeat the threat that there won't remain stone upon stone for them. Because without my Will they are citadels without king, hence they don't have neither one who protects them, nor one who defends them, nor one who administers the necessary foods in order to do good and to not let them entangle themselves in the evil. And I cry over their fate, and I pray that they recognize my Will, love him and let him reign and you pray together with Me."

After this I followed the acts that my sweet Jesus did being on this earth, and I prayed Him with heart that in virtue of his acts he might make his Will known to everyone, and following in the ways that he crossed, my mind stopped in the act when my Eternal Love Jesus crossed the fields and He delighted in looking at the flowers and gathering them with his creative hands, and I wanted to put my "I love you" over every flower, so that they might change into voices and speaking flowers that might ask that his Volition be known and loved. And Jesus making himself felt, all goodness added:

"Blessed daughter, I want to tell you my sorrows and the secret of my Heart, you should know that the human will was the most transfixing nail of my Heart, I in crossing the ways, the fields, I looked at the fields in bloom, the trees loaded with fruits and I felt the joys of my Creation and those fields in bloom, they symbolized to Me more than flowers, the beauties, the vivacities, the freshness and the beautiful complexion of the creature, and I rejoiced, but immediately the nail of the human volition made Me see them transformed into faded flowers, bleached, dried, declining on itself in the act of dying, that instead of perfume it changed into bad odor, and the fruits of the trees, bitter and rotten, symbol of the evil in which the human will reduces the creature, the most beautiful work of our creative hands. I had a sorrow and those flowers tore the tears from my eyes, because I felt the nail of the human volition penetrate more strongly. And my sorrow is very strong that I await your 'I love you', that asks Me that the good of my Will, and the evil of the human will be known, so that one does mine and abhors theirs. Many times, I looked at the azure Sky bombarded with stars, and the sun with its majesty glaring light, that dominated all the earth, symbol of the Sky of the soul, and the sun of my Will that should glare within this Sky, so enchanting, that it should dominate with his light the Sky of the soul and the beautiful blooming earth of their bodies, and my Heart had some wincings of joy, but they were brief instances, immediately the nail of the human volition, went out in field and forming black clouds, loaded with thunder, lightning, hail, obstructing the sun, it took away the beautiful sight of the serene Sky and unloading itself on the poor creature it devastated the Sky of the soul and the earth of their bodies throwing everywhere desolation and horror. I can say that I didn't make one step when I lived down here, in which the nail of the human volition didn't transfix Me, from when I was born until I died, it was really (this) that formed the hardest and my continuous martyrdom, because for Me it transformed from beautiful into ugly my most beautiful creative work, and I in all that which I did and suffered, I always had the goal to put the human volition in safety. And oh! How I love one who calls my acts, unites herself together with Me, and on the fire of my sacrifice itself and with my love she sacrifices herself, in order to obtain the great good that my Will might be known and dominate the human volition, font of all the evils of the poor creature. Therefore I want you always together with Me, do not leave Me ever alone in order to be able to repeat my Life in you....."

Thanks be to God!/ [Deo gratias!]

*The Kingdom of the Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 32

Contents

March 12, 1933 .....	p. 1
How created things are the rags that cover the Divine Will. Example of a disguised king.
How the Creation and the Redemption are always in act in order to call the creature to work together.
March 19, 1933 .....	p. 3
Food that the Supreme Being gives to the creature, that serves to make the soul grow, and to make the Divine life grow in the soul. The Divine Will depositary of everyone and everything.
March 26, 1933 .....	p. 5
The littleness in the Divine Will. How God does the greatest works gratuitously.
Example, the Creation and Redemption, thus the Kingdom of the Divine Will.
In the Incarnation the Heavens abased themselves.
April 2, 1933 .....	p. 7
How the breath and the heartbeat of God is the 'I love you'; his generative and working love.
The greatest prodigy is enclosing his life in the creature.
April 9, 1933 .....	p. 8
The divine love is so much that it arrives to exhaust itself in its work.
Jealousy of the Divine Will. The little way of the creature in Him.
April 16, 1933 .....	p. 10
How God in all things created always holds to tell us 'I love you'.
How Jesus in all the acts of his life enclosed love, conquests, triumphs.
April 23, 1933 .....	p. 12
How the life of Jesus was a continuous abandonment in the hands of the Father.
One who lives in the Divine Will never interrupts her walk. Example of the clock.
She takes Heaven in fist and with assault.
April 29, 1933 .....	p. 13
One who does the human volition takes earth, and one who does the Divine takes Heaven.
How Jesus knows how to do all the arts. Gusto that he takes in working.
How the creature is the noble Princess that descends from the heights of Heaven.
May 7, 1933 .....	p. 15
Will symbol of the puff, that now inflames, now extinguishes.
The Divine Will provider of his acts in the act of the creature.
May 14, 1933 .....	p. 16

*Little post of love that the soul holds in her Creator, and little post that God holds in the soul.
How sanctity becomes formed by the degrees of love.
Seed that Jesus casts, how first he does deeds and then words.*

May 25, 1933 ..... p. 18

How the Divine Will is permanent miracle. One who lives in Him is the bearer of the divine works, and his fields are the Creation and the Redemption.

May 28, 1933 ..... p. 20

*Precipice, doors and living hell of the human volition.
Doors, staircases and living Paradise of the Divine Will.
Necessity of his knowledges, royalty that she acquires.
The daughter of the great King.*

June 4, 1933 ..... p. 21

*How one who lives in the Divine Will receives the creative strength of the continuous creation.
Harmony with the Divine Will.*

June 15, 1933 ..... p. 22

*The intention forms the life of the action, it forms the veil in order to hide the divine action.
The hidden Actor.*

June 25, 1933 ..... p. 23

If the Divine Will reigns in the soul, God searches (for) himself and finds himself in the creature, she searches (for) herself in God, and finds herself in his Divine center.

June 29, 1933 ..... p. 24

*How in the Divine Will there are no stops, making oneself repeater of our Life.
Assignment that becomes entrusted to her. How God adapts himself to the human littleness.*

July 8, 1933 ..... p. 25

*Every act done in the Divine Will is a ring of union, bond of stability, perennial fecundity.
What a completed act in the Divine Will means.*

July 30, 1933 ..... p. 27

One who does the Divine Will, forms her residence, which serves as custody, as defense and as comfort to the Divine Will himself. His knowledges form his life.

August 6, 1933 ..... p. 28

How the Celestial Queen grew together with the Divine Will and how she possessed the speaking Sun. Joys of God in the Creation of man. Power that he gave him.

August 13, 1933 ..... p. 30

Divine delirium and passion of the Divine Volition of wanting to live together with the creature.

His new act and the Divine Painter. What it means to live in the Supreme Volition.

August 20, 1933 .....	p. 32
How the Divine Majesty inclines himself toward the creature when he sees her disposed to do an act of his Will. Difference that passes between one who lives in the Divine Will. How she remains kneaded in the Fiat.
September 2, 1933 .....	p. 33
Channels, commerce between Heaven and earth, traffic of the soul that lives in the Divine Will. Competition of love between creature and Creator.
September 10, 1933 .....	p. 35
How Our Lord disburses the price in order to buy his Divine Will in order to give him to creatures. The bath in the Divine Volition. The little sea of the soul and the great sea of God.
September 17, 1933 .....	p. 37
How the Divine Will is the engine and the assailant, he gives life, he recalls to life and makes arise the memory of all. Divine encampment. How the motion of the Divine Will forms his life in the creature.
September 24, 1933 .....	p. 39
Our Lord's humanity, sanctuary and custodian of all the works of creatures. How love never says enough.
October 1, 1933 .....	p. 40
Enchanting scenes that Jesus enjoys in the soul that lives in his Will. Continuous call that they make (to) God and the creature.
October 15, 1933 .....	p. 41
Mastery and Divine art. The little Paradise of God. Labyrinth of love, generative virtue of the Fiat. God in the power of the creature.
October 22, 1933 .....	p. 42
Jesus finds his Heaven in the creature; his Celestial Mama and everyone in the All and the All in everyone. The Divine Will makes himself revealer and surrenders his Divine Being to the creature.
October 30, 1933 .....	p. 44
The Divine Will guide of the soul and she the gatherer of the works of her Creator. How one who lives in the Divine Will receives the transmission of that which has been done first in God and then communicated to her.
November 10, 1933 .....	p. 45
How the Divine Will doesn't change neither action, nor way, that which he does in Heaven, he does in earth, his act is universal and unique. One who doesn't live of my Will, reduces the Divine

craftsman into idleness, and escapes from his creative hands.

Volume 32

J.M.J.

Fiat!!!

[In Voluntate Dei! Deo Gratias]

In the Will of God! Thanks be to God

March 12, 1933

How created things are the rags that cover the Divine Will. Example of a disguised king. How the Creation and the Redemption are always in act in order to call the creature to work together.

My Celestial Sovereign Jesus, hide me inside of your Divine Heart so that not outside of You, but inside of the sanctuary of Your Heart I give beginning to the present Volume, the pen will be the light of your Divine Volition dipped in the furnace of your love and dictating to me that which you want to say to me, I will do as a simple listener and I will lend you the paper of my little soul, so that you yourself write that which you want, how you want and how much you want; mind my amiable Teacher, to not let me write anything by myself, otherwise I will make a thousand blunders. And you Sovereign Queen, hide me under your mantle, keep me defended from everything, do not ever leave me alone so that I can complete the Divine Will in everything.

Whence I continued to think of the adorable Fiat, and I felt surrounded by all created things, of which each one said: I am the Divine Will, that which you see of us on the outside, they are his rags, the attire that covers him, but inside of us there is his palpating and working life, and oh, how glorious, honored we feel, that we form the attire to the Divine Will; the Sun forms (for) him the attire of light, the Sky azure attire, the stars gold attire, the earth the attire of flowers, in short all things had the honor of forming the attire to the Divine Will and all in chorus they made feast.

I remained amazed, stupified and said to myself: oh, (if) I also might be able to say, I am the attire of the Divine Will, how happy I would feel. And my Great King Jesus visiting his little daughter said to me:

“My good daughter, King, Creator, Divine Will, it means to dominate, to invest and to hold our life inside of every single thing created by us; to create means to extend one’s own life, to hide our creative Will in the same thing created by us. This is to create, to call things from the nothing, to enclose there the All, in order to conserve them in the integrity of beauty as we have created them. Now you should know that my Will is as a King disguised in every single created thing, if creatures know him beneath those attires, he reveals himself and abounds in giving his divine acts and his regal gifts, that only this Celestial Emperor can give, if then he does not become known, he remains unobserved, hidden, without making shout, nor pomp of his regal person, nor does he abound in giving his gifts, that only a Volition so holy can give, and creatures touch the attire, but of Him and of his gifts they don’t know anything and they receive nothing, and my Fiat remains with the sorrow of not having been recognized and with the nightmare of not having given his divine gifts, because not knowing him one lacks the capacity and will to receive regal gifts. I do as a king, that disguising himself he passes in the midst of the peoples, if they pay attention, in spite that he doesn’t carry the regal attires, they will know him from the ways, from the face, and coming around they will give him the honors of king and they will ask gifts and favors, and the king will reward the attention of those that recognize him disguised and he will give them more of that which they want, and to those that don't recognize him he will pass unobserved without giving anything. More so that they themselves don't ask anything of him, believing him (to be) any one of the people. Thus my Will does when he is recognized under the attire of created things, he reveals himself but doesn't wait as the king to be asked gifts and favors of, He himself says: I am here, what do you want? and he super-abounds with giving gifts and celestial favors; but he passes on more beyond the king, bilocating himself he gives his life itself to the creature that has known him, that which a king does not do. Now you also can say, I am Will of God, and make of yourself the rags, the attire that hides my Divine Will, not only if you recognize him in all created things, but if you recognize him in yourself, you give him the dominion in all your acts, and all that which the rags of your being does you put it at his service, in order to make his life grow in you, He will fill you so much that there won't remain of you but only the attire that will be used only for covering, and all created things will be more happy, because you will be the living rag, that you will divide together with Him, his joys, his happiness, and also his infinite sorrows, that he wants to be life of every single creature, but ungrateful they don't give him full dominion. In short you will always have life together, holding perennial company, forming one life alone."

After this I continued to follow the acts done by the Divine Will in the Creation, and since he is always in (the) act of creating it, in virtue of the conservation that he incessantly exercises in every single created thing, so that I find him always in the creative act, in order to say with deeds to everyone and to each one: 'how much I love you, really for you I am creating all this machine of the universe. Oh! recognize how much I love you.' But that which surprised me more was that the eternal Fiat awaited me, wanted me together in the creative act in order to say to me: 'come into my act, lets do together that which I am doing.' I felt all confused and my Eternal Love Jesus, surprising me said to me:

"Little daughter of my Volition, courage, why are you confused? In my Will there is no yours and mine, the act of the one must unite itself with the other, and make of it one alone, rather as the creature enters in our Volition she remains confirmed in the act that my Fiat is doing. So much is his love, his loving industries that he wants to say to the creature: 'we have done it together. Hence the extended Sky, the Sun glaring light, and all the rest, it is yours and mine, we have common rights.' Therefore I always have the act present, because I want the creature together with me, she for whom her love alone I am always working, in order to hear said to me in the same act that I work: 'I love you, I love you, I love you'; not to have an 'I love you' in (a) work so great and marvelous, not to be recognized, would be as if our love remained defeated, but no! but no! in so many we must find someone that is together with us, loving and working, that gives us the little exchange, in order to make that our love finds its vent and its happiness from the part of the creature. And as she enters in our Fiat, she remains confirmed and bound in his Divine acts, in a way that his binding virtue binds God and the creature.

"And as in the Creation, thus in the Redemption, there are no past acts, but all acts in act and present; for the Supreme Being the past and the future doesn't exist. So that your Jesus is always in act of being conceived, of being born, of crying, of suffering, and of dying and re-aring, all these acts of mine in continuous act, they besiege every single creature without ever ceasing, they drown her with love, and for vent of my ardent love I go repeating: ‘you see only for you I descend from Heaven and am conceived and born, and you come to conceive (yourself) together with me, in order to be reborn together with me to the new life that your Jesus brings to you, look at me, I cry for you, I suffer for you, have pity on my tears and my sufferings, let's suffer together, so that you repeat that which I did and you model your life with mine, in order to be able to say to you: “that which is mine is yours, you are the repeater of my Life”’; and thus if I die I call her to die together with me, but not in order to have her die, but [in order to have her] re-arise with the same life of He who loves her so much. Hence my Life is continually repeated, a past or future love would not satisfy me, nor would it be love and Redemption of a God, it is the present act that holds the virtue to wound, to conquer and to dispose one to put forth the life for love of whom in act is putting it forth for her. But however there is a great difference on the part of creatures, some listen to me (and) take all that which we have done as much in the Creation as in the Redemption, in the act of doing it, she forms her life together with us, she feels flow in her acts our divine acts, everything speaks of God for her. Instead some look at them as past things, it is only the memory that she holds, and the memory has not formed neither divine life, nor heroism of sanctity. Therefore take the things as they really are, always in act, in order to always love you and to always love me.”

* * *

March 19, 1933

Food that the Supreme Being gives to the creature, that serves to make the soul grow, and to make the Divine life grow in the soul. The Divine Will depositary of everyone and everything.

I am always prey of the Divine Fiat, his love is so much that he doesn't leave me one instant without feeding my poor soul, but in order to feed me he wants me with himself in the power of his acts, in order to prepare together the food that he wants to give me. Whence following his acts I stopped in the act when God created man, and my Highest Good Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, our supreme goodness was not content with loving man, with giving him the whole universe at his disposition, but in order to give vent to our intense love, we put forth our divine qualities in order to feed his soul. So that we put forth our Power, Wisdom, goodness, love, sanctity, fortitude as his celestial and divine food. Hence every time that he came to us, we announced our Celestial table, in order to feed him and satiate him; there is no thing that more unites us, identifies us with the creature than food, which arrives to form itself (as) blood, heat, strength, growth and life of her. Thus our Divinity wanting to feed (her) with our divine qualities made itself heat, strength, growth and life of the creature. But this was not enough, this food digested not only makes the creature grow all beautiful and holy, with the virtue of the foods that she took, but it served to make the Divine life grow, whom does not adapt himself to human foods, but wants his same divine foods, in order to grow and form his same life in the depth of the interior of the soul. Do you see, can one give greater love, more intimate and inseparable union, than to expose our Divine Being, our immense and infinite qualities for food, in order to make her grow with our likenesses? and then to make use of them in order to administer the foods in order to not let us be fasting in her soul, and thus to be able to say: God feeds the soul, and I with the food that he gives me, feed his life and I make him grow in me; love then is content when it can say: ‘you have loved me and I have loved you, that which you have done for me, I have done for you’; and since we know that the creature can never arrive to us, we give of ours and thus we equal each other on both parts, and we remain content and happy, she and us. Because true love feels happy and satisfied when it can say: 'that which is yours is mine.' And don't you believe that this was (so) for the first man, that which we do one time we continue always, now we are all at (the) disposition of creatures, every time that she unites herself to our Will, she disperses hers in ours, she lets him dominate, they are as so many visits that she comes to make to our Supreme Being, and we, will we send her away fasting? Ah no, we not only feed her but we give her of ours, so that she holds sufficient foods in order to grow how our Volition wants, and so that there lacks no necessary means in order to make our life grow always more in her. More so, that on our part we don't ever let anything be lacking, rather we always give in a superabundant way, if anything is lacking it will be always on the part of the creature, but from us not ever."

After this, my poor mind continued to disperse itself in the Divine Volition and my always amiable Jesus added:

"My blessed daughter, my Divine Will is depositary of all that which has been done by us, and of all that which creatures have done, not even a thought, a word, the greatest works as (well as) the littlest works, the steps, the heartbeat, the breaths, the sufferings, everything is held deposited in Him, nothing escapes. So that all that which you do takes post in my Will, nor can you hide anything, because with his immensity he involves you, with his power he is actor of all that which you do and with his divine rights he is Master of possessing, of knowing and of conserving all the work of the human generations, and of rewarding them and chastising them, according to what they merit. So much is his goodness and power together, that as he doesn't disperse neither one star, nor one bead of light that the Sun possesses, nor one drop of water of the sea, thus he doesn't disperse not even one thought of the creature, and even to want to disperse it he can not do it, his omniscience finds it in act in his Will. Oh! if creatures might understand that a Divine Will receives in deposit all that which they do and think, oh! how attentive they would be that everything might be holy and upright, and they would call this Supreme Will as life of all that which they do, so that they might not receive one sinister judgment in their acts, so that they would remain in deposit in the same Divine Volition as his acts and effects, which no one can have the boldness to judge them and they would be winning acts of a Divine Volition working in the creature.

"Beyond this, as the Divine Will is depositary of everyone and everything, thus the human will is depositary of all her thoughts, words, works and steps, et cetera, it loses nothing of all that which she does, rather they form one thing alone with her and with indelible characters every thought, word, suffering suffered, everything remains written and sealed, it can be given that the memory doesn't keep count of everything, it has forgotten many things, but the will hides everything and loses nothing, so that it is the depositary and bearer of all her acts. Hence the Divine Volition (is) depositary and bearer of everyone and everything, the human volition (is) depositary and bearer of itself. What triumph will it be eternally, what honor and glory for one who has piously thought and worked? And what confusion for one who has deposited in the human volition sins, passions, unworthy works, and rendered herself bearer of her own evils? And if the evils are very grave she will be pasture of the infernal flames, and if less grave, she will be pasture of the purgative flames, that by way of fire and sufferings will purify that dirtied human will, but she can not retribute the good, the holy works that she has not done. Therefore be attentive that everything becomes numbered and written, you don't lose, neither you, nor us anything, even one thought, one word will have its perennial life, and they will be as faithful friends and inseparable of the creature. Hence it is necessary that you form your holy and good friends, so that they can give you peace, happiness and perennial glory.”

* * *

March 26, 1933

The littleness in the Divine Will. How God does the greatest works gratuitously. Example, the Creation and Redemption, thus the Kingdom of the Divine Will. In the Incarnation the Heavens abased themselves.

I feel as besieged, invested with the light of the Eternal Volition. My littleness is so much, that fearing myself, I don't do other than hide myself always more in this Celestial sojourn. Oh! how I would love to destroy this littleness of mine, so that I might not feel other than the Divine Volition alone, but I understand that I can not, nor does Jesus want that it be entirely destroyed, but he wants it little but alive, in order to be able to work inside of a live volition, not dead, in order to be able to have his little field of action in my littleness, which being little, incapable, weak, with reason it must lend itself to receive the great work of the Divine Fiat. Now in this sojourn of times everything is silence, pacific, with a serenity that not even a breathe of wind is felt. Other times a light breeze blows, that refreshes and fortifies, and the Celestial Dweller Jesus moves himself, reveals himself, and with all love he speaks of his Palace and of that which he has done and (what) his amiable and adorable Volition does. Hence the dear (of) my Life, revealing himself said to me:

“My little daughter of my Will, you should know that the littleness of the creature serves us as space where to be able to form our works, the nothing serves us as the Creation, and because nothing, we call to life inside of it our most beautiful works; we want this littleness to be void of all that which doesn't belong to us, but alive, so that she might feel how much we love her and the life of the works of our Will that develops in her, therefore you should content yourself to remain alive without you being the mistress of it, that this is the great sacrifice and heroism of one who lives of Divine Will, feeling herself alive in order to undergo the divine mastery, so that she does that which he wants, how he wants, how much he wants, this is the sacrifice of sacrifices, the heroism of heroisms. Does it seem little to you, to feel the life of one's own volition, so that it might not serve oneself, as if it might not have the right, to lose one's own liberty voluntarily, so that it might serve my Will, giving him his just rights?”

Jesus became silent, then as if he might read in my soul, certain doubts of mine (that) passed in me on the Divine Will he added:

“My daughter, the greatest works done by our Supreme Being, all have been done gratuitously, without minding if the creature might merit it or might say to us, if we might mind to this, it (would have) been necessary to tie our arms, and work no more, and if ungrateful creatures don't glorify us, not even to have the good of making us gloried and praised by our own works, no! no! one single work of ours glorifies us more than all the works together gone forth from all the human generations, one completed act of our Will, fills Heaven and earth and with his virtue and regenerative power and communicativeness it regenerates so much glory for us that never finishes, and that hardy is it given creatures the drops to understand it.

“In fact what merit did man have, that we created the Sky, the Sun and all the rest? He didn’t exist yet, nothing could speak to us. So that the Creation was a great work of marvelous magnificence, all gratuitous of God, and the Redemption, do you believe that man merited it? Quite, it was all gratuitous and if he prayed to us it was because we made him the promise of the future Redeemer, he was not the first one to tell us, but we, it was our decree all gratuitous that the Word might take human flesh, and it was completed when sin, human ingratitude galloped and inundated all the earth, and if it seems that they did something, they were hardly drops that could not be enough to merit a work so great, it gives of the incredible, that a God made himself similar to man in order to put him in safety, and that he arrived to offend him so very much. Now the greatest work of making my Will known, so that he might reign in the midst of creatures, it will be a work all gratuitous of ours, and this is the deception, that they believe that there will be the merit and the part of creatures; Ah! yes there will be, as the drops of the Hebrews, when I came to redeem them, but the creature is always the creature. Hence it will be our part all gratuitous, that abounding her with light, with grace, with love, it will sweep her away in a way that she will feel strength not ever felt, love not ever experienced, she will feel our palpating life alive in her soul, so much so that it will be sweet for her to let our Will dominate. This life of ours still exists in the soul, it was given to her by us from the beginning of Creation, but he is so very repressed and hidden that it is as if she might not hold him, he is under as the fire under the ash, that covered and as crushed under her, she doesn’t feel the benefit of the life of his heat. But suppose a strong wind, the ash flees from over the fire and its life is seen and felt. Thus the strong wind of the light of my Fiat will put in flight the evils, the passions, that as ash hide the divine life in them and feeling him alive, they will be ashamed to have not let our Will dominate. My daughter, time will say all, and those that don’t believe will remain confused.”

After this I followed the Divine Will in the Incarnation of the Word, in order to make my love, my adoration and thanksgiving race in this act so solemn and full of tenderness and with excessive love, that Heaven and earth trembled and remained mute, not finding worthy words (of) how to extol an excessive love so amazing, and my sweet Jesus with a tenderness as to break (my) heart said to me:

“Dearest daughter, in my Incarnation the love was so much, that the Heavens abased themselves and the earth elevated itself, if the Heavens didn’t abase themselves, the earth had no virtue to elevated itself, it was the Heaven of our Supreme Being, that taken by an excess of love, the greatest not ever heard of, abased himself, kissed the earth elevating it to himself and formed for himself the attire of my Humanity in order to cover himself, hide himself, unite himself together, in order to have common life with Her, and forming not only one excess of love but a chain of continuous excesses, he restricted my immensity in the little circle of my Humanity, for me the power, the immensity, the strength was nature, and to use it would not have cost me anything, that which cost me was that in my Humanity I had to restrict my immensity, and remain as if I might not have either power, nor strength, while they were already with me and inseparable from me, and I had to adapt myself to the little acts of my Humanity, and only for love, not because I couldn’t. Hence he descended in all the human acts in order to elevate them and give the form and the divine order to him. Man with doing his will destroyed in himself the way and the divine order, and my Divinity covered by my Humanity, came to re-do that which in himself he had destroyed; can one give greater love, toward a creature so ungrateful?”

April 2, 1933

How the breath and the heartbeat of God is the 'I love you'; his generative and working love. The greatest prodigy is enclosing his life in the creature.

My little soul feels the extreme need to live between the arms of the Divine Fiat, and since I am hardly newborn, I am weak and I don't know how to give forth one step alone, and if I might want to try to do it, I would put myself in error, and I pass in peril of doing some evil to myself. Hence fearing myself I abandon myself more in his arms saying to him: if you want something done, let's do it together, because I don't know how to do anything by myself; and then I feel in myself a continuous love, a motion, a breath that is not mine, but so very fused together because I don't know how to say well if it is mine or not mine, and while I remained worried, my Sovereign Jesus surprising me, all goodness said to me:

"My blessed daughter, you should know that our Divine Being is none other than a substance all of love, so that as a consequence everything, inside and outside of us, everything is love, hence our breath is love and the air that we breathe is love, our heartbeat is love, and while we palpate love it forms the circulation of pure love in our Divine Being, with a course that is not ever stopped, and this circulation while it conserves our life, in the pure and perfect equilibrium of love, it gives love to everyone, and would like love from everyone, and all that which is not love, it doesn't enter into us, nor can it enter, nor will it find the post where to put itself, the fullness of our love would burn all that which might not be pure and holy love. But who directs this life of ours all of love? the light, the sanctity, the power, the omniscience, the immensity of our Will that fills Heaven and earth with our Supreme Being, in a way that there is no point where he doesn't find himself, that he doesn't know how to do other than love and to give love, but he is not a sterile love and Will, no, no, he is fecundity and generates continually, he is working and inside of one single breath of love, he forms the most beautiful and marvelous work, the unheard of prodigies, so much so that all the human sciences feel ignorant before our littlest work, and confused they are struck dumb. Now listen to me my good daughter, the great prodigy of our life in the creature, that no one else for love and power that has (existed) can give the boast of saying: 'I can bilocate myself, and while I remain that which I am, I can form another life of mine inside of a person that I love;' it would be madness and absurd to say it, neither Angel, nor saint hold this power, only your God, your Jesus, holds this power, because our Being is fullness, he is totality, he is everything and fills everything, and in the immensity in which he finds himself, that involves everything, he breathes, and with a simple breath we form our Divine life in the creature, and our Will dominates her, feeds her, makes her grow, and forms the great prodigy of enclosing our Divine life in the little circle of the soul of the creature. Behold therefore your continuous 'I love you' is ours, it is the breath of our life, it is our heartbeat that doesn't know how to palpate other than 'I love you, I love you, I love you', this serves to the maintenance of our life, that doesn't know how to do other than love, to give love and to want love, hence while this 'I love you' is ours, it is our breath and also yours, that while we give you love, you give us love, and fused together ours is woven with your 'I love you', it meets itself, unites itself and feels itself one single 'I love you', while they are two, that enrapturing each other they form one alone. But who feels this divine and palpating life in her? One who lives in our Will, she feels ours, and we feel hers, and we have life together, all the other creatures hold him suffocated and they live as if they might not have him, and my love gives and doesn't receive, and I live in them with a sorrowful and delirious love, without (them) even knowing that I am in them, therefore be attentive and your 'I love you' be continuous, because it is none other than the outlet of mine."

After this I was making my round in the Creation and in virtue of his Divine immensity, I felt his palpating life in created things, that with indescribable love he awaits the heartbeat of the 'I love you' of my littleness. Whence I thought to myself: what will be the difference that passes between the way in which God is in the Creation, and the way with which he is in the soul of the creature? And my always amiable Jesus all goodness added:

"My daughter, there is great difference in the one and the other, in created things our Divinity is in (the) creative and conservative act, nor does he add on nor take away anything of that which he has done, because every single created thing possesses the fullness of the good that it encloses, the Sun possesses the fullness of the light, the Sky, the totality of the extension of its azure mantle, the sea the fullness of the waters, and so on, they can say: we have no need of anything, such is the abundance that we possess that we can give without exhausting ourselves, and therefore we give perfect glory to our Creator. Instead in the human creature our divine act is creative, conservative, operative and growing, our love didn't say enough for her, no, but always wants to give and work new things, and if she corresponds to us, our working virtue is always in motion, now we give her new love, now new light, now new science, new sanctity, new beauty, our operative virtue never ceases, we always want to give, and with giving we work. With creating the creature we open the commerce between Heaven and earth and we put in traffic our working way, we to give and she to receive, and that which is more, we want her together to work, we don't want to do it alone, if we might be capable of sorrow, it would embitter our happiness if we might not hold her together with us, and from our love and working act, our always growing act rises. So that the creature, is under the rain of our love and creative, conservative, working and growing act."

* * *

April 9, 1933

The divine love is so much that it arrives to exhaust itself in its work. Jealousy of the Divine Will. The little way of the creature in Him.

The Divine Volition always extends itself around me and inside of me, the jealousy of his marvelous light is so much that he doesn't want anything to enter in me if not that which pertains to him in order to make me complete and to raise the life of the Divine Will, and in order to make me see his divine ways, so that he might be able to copy them, to content himself with administering to me that which is needed, in order to be able to say to me: 'the works of our daughter will be little, because the creature can never reach us, but they are model of and resemble ours'; but while my mind followed the light of the Divine Will, my sweet Jesus visiting my little soul, all love said to me:

"My daughter, one act then says it's finished when one who works exhausts in it all that which was necessary in order to complete it, if it lacks anything, or something can be added, it can never be called (a) completed work. This has always been our way of working, we have exhausted everything, love, power, mastery, beauty, in order to make the work gone forth from us full, perfect, complete. Not that we exhaust ourselves, because the Supreme Being is never exhausted, but in that work that we have done nothing more enters in order to make it complete, and if we wanted to put forth more, the more that we could put forth would have been useless, and not advantageous. And we have done this in the work of the Creation, of the Redemption, and with the designs that we do with the sanctity of every single creature. Who can say that there lacked something to the Creation? who can (say) that our working love did not exhaust itself in the Redemption, that it was so much that there are yet interminable seas, that creatures can take and that they have not taken, and these seas regurgitate around them, because they want to bring forth their fruit, to hide them in their waves, in order to make that the love, the works, the infinite sufferings of the Humanized God might take life in them? If we don't exhaust ourselves we are not content, exhausted love brings us rest and happiness, but if we have other to give, to do in our works, it makes us as awake, we are all eye, our Divine Being is in all motion over that which we are doing, in order to give so much, even to such that he doesn't find the completed act with the fullness of our exhaustion. Now in the Creation and in the Redemption, there were no struggles to our love nor impediments of exhausting ourselves in order to make our works complete, because we work independent from everyone, not one human will entered in midst, in order to impede us from being able to exhaust ourselves as we wanted, the whole struggle comes from the part of creatures, for every single design of sanctity that we want to complete with them, and oh to what straight they put us, if the human will is not united with ours, if she doesn't give herself into our hands, in a way that we can handle her as we want, in order to give her the form established by us, in order to complete our designs and thus exhaust ourselves, with forming our completed act Ah! we can not give that which we want, hardly the crumbs, the sparks of our love, because the human volition is always in (the) act of rejecting us and of moving us (to) struggle. Therefore when we find a will that lends herself, we abound, we super-abound so much in giving, that we put ourselves over her more than (a) mother over her baby, in order to raise him beautiful and attractive, in order to be able to form of him her glory, the honor of the baby and the good of the entire world, thus we, we don't leave her one instant, we give always, in order to not only hold her busy, but in order to not give her time to be able to occupy herself with other, in a way that we can say: 'everything is ours', we can exhaust ourselves over this creature, and since our love is suitor, it is with justice, he wants that he, in all his acts puts forth all that which he can, his love, all his life, in order to be able to say: 'you have exhausted yourself for me, so much so that I can not contain that which you have given me, I also exhaust myself for you'; and thus she goes modeling herself with our works, and she copies our divine acts. Behold therefore the jealousy of the Divine Will, the light that always beats upon you inside and out, because he wants everything for himself, and that your will while you feel it alive, it must not have life, so that mine forms his life in her and completes his divine acts. Thus being able to give the boast that all that which he wanted to give he has given, I have exhausted myself in this creature, and she has exhausted herself for me. There is no happiness more pleasant, or greater fortune, than the exhaustion on both parts, of God and of the creature. But who produces all this? One act of our working and completed Will."

Whence after this I continued my acts in the Divine Fiat and following his, I arrived in Eden where the Divine love had stopped me, and Sovereign Jesus added:

"My blessed daughter, our Divine Being is most pure light, and our Attributes so many distinct Suns the one from the other, but united together and inseparable, that make themselves crown for us. Now in creating the creature she became put in these immense Suns in order to form her little way. Now who comes to form this little way? one who lives of our Will, our divine attributes line themselves up to the right and to left of her, they make for her the breadth in order to give her the step and make her walk, in order to make her form her little way, and while she walks she doesn't do other than collect drops of light, with which she remains all impearled, that it is an enchantment to see her, hence she feeds herself with light, the light embellishes her, and she does not understand, nor does she know how to speak other than light. My Attributes shut themselves around, and they love this creature as the pupil of their eyes, they feel the life of her in them, and their life in her, and they give themselves the assignment to raise her how much more beautiful they can, and to not let her put one step from the way that they have formed in their interminable light. So that one who lives in our Will one can call the little way in our Divine Will, this in time. But in Eternity it won't be the little way, but long, rather they will never stop, because this light doesn't have (an) end, and they will always hold (a) way in order to walk, in order to take new beauties, new joys, new knowledges, of this light that never ends. Our love more than ever, showed off in this Eden in creating man, and for conclusion of our show and to hold him more secure we formed the way by beating him in the light of our Attributes; but he went out, because he didn't want to do our Will; but our goodness was so much, that it didn't close this way, but left it open to one who wants to live only of Divine Will."

* * *

April 16, 1933

How God in all things created always holds to tell us 'I love you'. How Jesus in all the acts of his life enclosed love, conquests, triumphs.

I was making my round in the Divine Volition; I feel that I am the little tiny butterfly, that always turns around and within his light, and his ardent love, hoping so much that I should turn even to such, that I might remain burnt and consumed by his divine light, as to feel myself one sole thing with his Most Holy Will, and since the first point of departure is the Creation, upon which while I turn, I always find new surprises of love, whence I remain amazed by it, and my Highest Jesus, in order to make me understand all the more said to me:

"My daughter, as you appreciate your sojourn in the acts that our Supreme Being did in the Creation, and therefore I feel as enraptured and constrained by my love to narrate our story of love that we had in the Creation, and in all the rest that we have done for singular and pure love toward creatures, with coming in our acts it is the same as coming into our house and to not say anything of the so many things that we hold to say, it would be as to send you away fasting, that which our love doesn't know how to do and neither wants to do. Hence you should know that our Fiat pronounced itself and extended this azure vault, and our love embroidered it with stars, putting in every star an act of continuous love toward creatures, so that every star says: 'your Creator loves you, nor can he ever cease loving you, we are here nor do we move ourselves a little bit in order to always hold to give you 'I love you, I love you' ... but pass ahead, our Fiat created the Sun, he filled it with so much light as to be able to give light to all the earth, and our love, putting itself in competition with the Sun, filled it with so many effects that are innumerable; effects of sweetness, variety of beauty, of colors, of tastes which the earth only because touched by this light receives these admirable effects as life. It says its admirable and incessant little song, I love you with my love of sweetness, I love you and I want to make you beautiful, I want to embellish you with my divine colors and if I embellish the plants for you, I want you more beautiful yet. Know in this light I descend even to you in order to tell you I love with gusto, I take gusto to love you, and I am all ears in order to hear said to me by you 'I love you'. I can say that the Sun is filled with my continuous and repeated 'I love you'. But alas! The creature does not give it any thought, nor does she pay attention to receive this incessant love of ours in so many ways and various forms, that it would be enough to drown her and to consume her with love, but we don't stop, we go ahead (with) our Fiat, I created the wind, and our love fills it with effects, so that the freshness, the billows, the whistle, the groans, the shouts of the wind are repeated 'I love you', that we say to the creature and in the freshness we give her our refreshing love, in the billows we breathe (on) her with our love, even to groan and to howl with our ruling and incessant love, and so on. The sea, the earth was created by our Fiat, the fishes, the plants that the sea and the earth produce are the effects of our love that powerfully and repeatedly says I love you in all things. I love you as through everything, I love you in you, and so much (is) my love oh! Don't deny me your love. And yet it seems that they don't have ears in order to listen to us, nor heart in order to love us, and therefore when we find one who listens to us we hold her as vent of our love and as little secretary of the story of the Creation."

He said this (and) became silent, and I continued in the acts of the Divine Will and arrived to those of the Redemption, my beloved Jesus added:

"My blessed daughter, listen still to my long story of love, I could say that it is an interminable chain of incessant love, not ever interrupted, after all I created the creature in order to love her, in order to hold her united with me, and not loving her I would go against my own Will, I would act against my own nature that is all love, and then I created her because I felt the need to express my love, and to make her feel the sweet continuous whisper, 'I love you, I love you, I love you'. Now, you should know that since I was conceived, and in the whole course of my life, in all the acts that I did, I enclosed within love, conquest, triumph, my work was very different from that of creatures, the doing and not to do, the suffering and not to suffer, it was in my power, my omniscience didn't hide anything from me, and I first put my Will in my acts, I enclosed (the) fullness of sanctity, (the) fullness of love, (the) fullness of all goods, and then with all knowledge I exhibited myself to work or suffer, according to what I myself wanted, and with this I became conqueror and triumphator of my acts, but do you know for whom I made these conquests and these triumphs? for creatures, I loved them too much, and I wanted to give, I wanted to be the conquering Jesus, to give them my conquests and my triumphs myself in order to conquer them. So that my life down here, was none other than a continuous act of heroic love, that never says enough to conquests and triumphs, in order to make my children happy, and I did this in everything, if I put myself to walk, I held the virtue to be able to find myself from one city to the other without making use of my steps, but I wanted to walk, in order to put in every step my love, in every step that raced, raced, and I made myself conqueror and triumphator of my steps, oh! if creatures might pay attention to me, they would have felt in my steps the continuous cry: I race, I race in search of creatures, in order to love them and to be loved. Thus if I worked with St. Joseph in order to procure the necessities of life, it was love that raced, they were conquests and triumphs that I made, because one Fiat was enough for me in order to have everything at my disposition, and making use of my hands for a little profit, the Heavens were stupefied, the Angels remained enraptured and mute in seeing me abase myself to the humblest actions of life, but my love had its outlet, it filled, overflowed in my acts, and I was always the divine conqueror and triumphator. For me taking food was not necessary, but I took it in order to make love race more and make new conquests and triumphs. So that I gave course to the most humble and base things of life, that was not necessary for me, but I did it in order to form so many distinct ways in order to make my love race, and form new conquests and triumphs over my Humanity, in order to make a gift of them to whom I loved so much, and therefore, one who doesn't receive my love, and doesn't love me, forms my hardest martyrdom, and puts my love on (the) cross. But I pass ahead, in order to form the Redemption one tear of mine, one sigh was enough, but my love would not have remained content, being able to give and to do more, my love would have remained impeded in itself and would not have been able to give the boast of saying: 'I have done everything, I have suffered everything, I have given you everything, my conquests are superabundant, my triumph is complete'; I can say that I arrived even to confound human ingratitude with my love, with my excesses and with unheard of sufferings, hence I myself in every suffering put the intensity of the most intense and bitter sorrow, the most humiliating confusions, the cruelest barbarities and afterwards I equipped it for me with all the most sorrowful effects, that only a man and God could suffer, I exhibited myself to suffer it, and oh, the admirable conquests in my sufferings and the full triumph that my love made, no one would have been able to touch me if I might not want it, and here there is the whole secret, my sufferings were voluntarily wanted by me, and therefore they contain the miraculous secret, the conquering strength, the love that moves one to remorse, and they hold the virtue to sweep away the whole world and change the face of the earth."

* * *

April 23, 1933

How the life of Jesus was a continuous abandonment in the hands of the Father. One who lives in the Divine Will never interrupts her walk. Example of the clock. She takes Heaven in fist and with assault.

I continue to think on the sufferings of my impassioned Jesus, and arriving at the last gasp of his life, I felt resound in the depth of my heart: "into your hands Father I commend my spirit"; it was the most sublime lesson for me, the recall of all my being into the hands of God, the full abandonment in his Paternal arms, and while my mind was lost in so many reflections, my suffering Jesus visiting my little soul said to me:

"My blessed daughter, my life down here as it commenced, thus it finished, from the first instant of my conception my one act was continuous, I can say that in every instant it put me in the hands of my Celestial Father, it was the most beautiful homage that his Son gave him, the most profound adoration, the most heroic and complete sacrifice, the most intense love of progeny that my full abandonment into his hands gave him, it rendered my Humanity speaking, and with commanding voice, that asked all, and obtained all that which I wanted, to his one Son abandoned in his arms, my Celestial Father can deny nothing, my abandonment in every instant, it was the most pleasant act, so much so that I wanted to crown the last gasp of my life with the words, 'Father, into your hands I commend my spirit.' The virtue of abandonment is the greatest virtue, it is (a) pledge (to) God that he takes care of the abandoned one in his arms, abandonment says to God: 'I don't want to know anything of myself, this life of mine is yours, not mine, and yours is mine.' Therefore if you want to obtain all, if you want to love me indeed, live abandoned in my arms, let me feel the echo of my life in every instant: in your hands abandon all to me; and I will carry you in my arms as the dearest of my daughters."

After this I was following all that which the Divine Will had done and I felt in myself an order, one after the other, and I had to follow them. Whence I remained surprised and my sweet Jesus added:

“My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that one who does my Divine Will and lives in Him, can not do less than to always hold present all the acts done by the same. Because He holds all in himself, and always in act, all that which he has done, hence there is no wonder that in the soul where He reigns he holds all his acts with the whole order that he held in creating them, and the creature with all facility, one by one, she follows them in order to unite herself together, as if she might want to do that which my same Will has done; if one is found together, how can she abstain herself from doing that which He does? and of putting in (a) field of action, united with Him her little love, her adoration, her graces, her attentions and marvels, for works so great? Rather you should know that my Will gives the cord to the soul and she lends herself to receive it, in this cord becomes taken all our works, and she following the cord, follows and puts herself to light of all our works. It happens as to the clock, if one gives the cord the little wheels move, it marks the minutes, the hours, and one who possesses it has the good to know all the hours of the day, but if one doesn't give the cord, the clock marks nothing, it is as if it might not have life, and one who possesses it doesn't have the good to know the distinct hours of the day. Now one who lets our Will reign, we can call her our clock, that giving her the cord she marks the minutes and the hours of our works, and she has the good to know the hours of the day of our Divine Will. Now, if one gives the cord, the clock (ticks) even to (the) end (of the) cord, nor does it interrupt its march, thus the soul if she receives the cord of my Will she must make her walk, and if she wants to stop she can not do it, because the cord moves the small wheels of her soul and makes them go ahead in the great day of the hours of our works. Therefore be attentive to receive the good of this Divine cord, if you want to know the hours of the day of the Supreme Fiat.

“More so that when the soul disposes herself to do my Will and follow him, all that which He has done makes competition to enter into that act, because being one act alone, he doesn't have detached acts, and therefore all that which he has done in the order of the Creation, of the Redemption, in the Angels, in the Saints, it encloses all in the work of the creature that works in Him, because if he gives, he doesn't give half, but all entire, and as the Sun if it gives itself to the earth, it doesn't give half but all entire, with the fullness of its light, and therefore marvels happen upon the face of the earth. Thus my Will, if the creature calls him as life in her acts, He gives himself with the whole fullness of his light, sanctity, power and his works, if he might not bring everything, he would enter in the creature and in her acts as a King without cortege, without army, without creative power, and hence hold our wonders that we can do inoperative, Ah no! no! One who works in our Will must be able to say: I take Heaven in fist, I take Heaven with assault and I enclose it in my act.”

* * *

April 29, 1933

One who does the human volition takes earth, and one who does the Divine takes Heaven. How Jesus knows how to do all the arts. Gusto that he takes in working. How the creature is the noble Princess that descends from the heights of Heaven.

My abandonment in the Divine Fiat continues, I feel that living in Him is an extreme necessity for me, and if I might not do this, I would feel (that) I lack the earth beneath (my) feet, the Sky over (my) head, the air in order to breathe, the Sun that illuminates and warms me, the food that feeds me, hence how could I live? and if I might live, what (an) unhappy life would be mine? My God, free me from living one single instant outside of your Will. But while I thought this my always amiable Jesus, making his brief little visit with me, said to me:

“My daughter, living outside of my Divine Will is to live without the connection with the Divine Life, set apart from Heaven, as if she might not have friendship, knowledge, relations with her Celestial Father, one can say that while she knows that she has her Father, but she doesn’t know him, she lives as distant, and therefore she doesn’t participate in his divine goods, much more so that every act of human will that she does always takes earth, and she knows, and loves this, and participates in the unhappiness that produces the ground, that she goes acquiring with her human acts. So that the human will without the connection with the Divine, knows how to produce much earth, that sows the passions, the thorns, the sins, and gathers miseries, sadnesses, that embitter her life. So every act of human will, does none other than to take a little earth. Instead every act that she does of my Will, the creature loses the human ground, and acquires the ground of Heaven, therefore every act that she goes doing of Divine Volition takes Heaven and goes enlarging her celestial properties and I myself administer to her the seed, making myself Celestial Farmer, I sow together with her the most beautiful virtues and I form there my sojourn, my refuge, my delights, and I don’t find much difference in being in Heaven together with the Saints in the Celestial regions, as in being in the Heaven of this creature. Rather I experience more pleasure in being in the Heaven of the human will in earth, for the reason that in her I have work to do, in order to be able to magnify this Heaven more, hence I can make new acquisitions, receive new love and although the work is sacrifice, it holds however the virtue to produce new inventions, new beauties, new arts, it is from work that the most amazing things arise, the highest and most profound sciences, and I who understand all the arts, all the sciences, I work in this Heaven and form there the most beautiful works, the most artistic and new inventions, and I communicate the highest and most profound sciences. So that now I make myself Teacher and I teach the most sublime sciences, now Craftsman and I form the living statues in this Heaven, now I do as Farmer and my creative hands change, transform the little earth of the creature into Heaven, I experience so much pleasure in using all the arts, and I entertain myself so that now I do one work and now another, and now invent new things, and the novelties always bring more pleasure, more gusto and more glory, and these terrestrial heavens will also serve as new surprises and contentments to the whole Celestial Court; where my Divine Will reigns as life in the creature, I can do everything, she becomes in my hands prime matter in order to be able to develop my Divine works, and for me to be able to work is the most pleasing thing, it is the sweetest rest, it seems that work and rest alternate together. Now in Heaven, in my Celestial Country there are no works, neither on my behalf, nor on the part of creatures, one who enters in those Celestial regions, puts there her enough, and says to herself: ‘my work is finished, that which I have done is done, nor can I add on not even one more comma to my work, to my sanctity; and I can not make new conquests in their souls, because death says confirmation, nor can they make one more step ahead, therefore there are no works in the Celestial Country, but everything is triumph and glory, I can say that I show off (in) everything because I give new joys, new happiness and continuous beatitudes, that I hold all Heaven enraptured, everything is on my part, but in them it is not given to me to acquire anything more. Behold therefore they please me more, because the conquests, the works, the tastes that I find in these terrestrial Heavens of the human volition, they can not be there where everything is triumph and glory, even in the regions of my Divine Country. Therefore be attentive and never go out from my Will, and I promise you to never stop my Divine works in your soul.”

Whence I continued to think of the great good that the Divine Will brings to the creature, and my

Sovereign Jesus added:

“My blessed daughter, you should know that our love is so much, and the ardent desire to hold the creature together with us, that hardly created (and) we assign them the regal post in our Divine Will. So that every creature holds her post of honor in our Divine Palace, hence her beginning, her first act of life, as much in eternity as in time, is in our Fiat, she was not in the world, and we loved her and not only contemplating her with pleasure we gave her the post, but we put at her cortege our love, our sanctity, our power, light and beauty, she is the noble princess that descends from the heights of the Heavens in order to cross over the exile, but our Volition doesn't leave her, he descends there together, he shuts (himself) there around, he crosses over the exile together with her, in every act that she does, sufferings or joys, or meetings, he puts there his divine act first, so that she maintains her nobility and her state of princess, and when he has filled her with all goods, so much so that she doesn't have anymore space where to put other goods, she re-ascends to Heaven, in the heights of the spheres, and as triumphator he shows her off to the whole Celestial Court. Behold that which my Divine Will wants to do and knows how to do with the creature. But with our sorrow we see, that as she descends in the exile, she doesn't think anymore of her regal post, nor to the nobility of her origin, and she would like to slip away from our Will, that more than tender Mother carries her between his arms, and making use of the doors of the senses that we have given her, she descends into the depths of her human will, these doors we had given her to re-ascend to us, so that from the exile she might be able to make her little escapes into the bosom of her Creator, instead she makes use of them in order to make her little escapes into miseries, into weaknesses, into the passions that ignoble her, she recognizes herself no more as the princess of Heaven, but the servant of the earth. But in spite of this, we don't close our doors, those are our love, our Paternal goodness, our compassionate mercy, the expectations that we make, and no sooner than we see that she closes her doors in order to come into our Will, (than) we go toward her, we open wide our [doors] and looking at her as beautiful brute, with the dresses of Princess, torn, dirty, we don't make a reproach of her, but with compassion all Paternal we say to her: 'where have you been? poor daughter, how you have been reduced, have you seen how much evil you have done with living in the depths of your human will, disunited from ours? you have walked without guide, without light, without food, without defense, therefore do not do it anymore, so that re-tracing yourself you redo the lost good.' We know that the creature without our Divine Will can not do any good, it is as if she might want to see without eye, walk without feet, live without food. Therefore be attentive and never go out from my Divine Volition if you want to find the strength, the light, the support and your Jesus himself at your disposition.”

* * *

May 7, 1933

Will symbol of the puff, that now inflames, now extinguishes. The Divine Will provider of his acts in the act of the creature.

My abandonment continues in the Divine Volition and many times my poor mind is under the empire of two currents, that is the great good of the Divine Will, that elevates the soul over everything and carries her in the arms of her Dear Celestial Father, where everything is joy, feast and divine smiles, with which the inebriated soul forgets everything, the earth, the miseries, because in the Divine Will not even the memory can have of evil, otherwise happiness would not be full; and in the other current the abyss of the human volition, that casts the soul into all miseries and almost carries her in arm to the demons, so that they tyrannize her as it pleases them. But while I thought this, my Sovereign Jesus, making himself felt nearby, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, as the soul enters into my Volition, He with his empire says to her: ‘forget everything, even the house of your mother earth, herein live of Heaven’, nor is there post for the miseries and for unhappiness, my light destroys everything and the evils transform into good. You should know that the will is symbol of the puff, which holds the virtue to inflame and to extinguish; if the will is to inflame, blowing over a little spark, it can inflame a great fire, if then the will is to extinguish it, blowing on it it steals the life from it, and reduces it into ash; such is the human will, if it wants mine, it blows in all her acts, my Will with his power animates this puff, and her little acts, as little sparks are changed into flames, and as she repeats the acts, thus she repeats the puff, in a way as to form the little creature all (into) one flame of light of Divine Will. Instead if she wants to do her will, as she does it she blows and extinguishes everything, and remains in a profound night, without even the good of the little sparks. So that one who lives in my Will acquires the light in (her) nature, and in all her acts she sees light and they speak to her of light. Instead one who does hers, acquires the darkness and the night in (her) nature, and darkness springs forth from all her acts, that speak to her of miseries, of fear, of apprehensions, that make life unbearable.”

Whence my mind continued to think of the Divine Will, and I felt him inside and outside of me, all attention, so much so that he wanted to give me everything, and do everything together with me, and my sweet Jesus added:

“Little daughter of my Will, you should know that as the soul decides to live in my Will, so much is his love toward her, that as she is about to do an act, thus my Fiat offers his [act] in that act, in a way that the human volition remains as field, and my act as life. So that as she palpates, he offers his divine heartbeat, as she breathes he offers his breath, as she is about to speak he offers his word in the voice of the creature, as she thinks he offers his thought, and thus if she works, if she walks, he offers his motion and his steps. Hence my Divine Will is the provider of his acts in the acts of the creature. Behold therefore his incessant love, his untiring attentions, because he wants to form his entire life for how much it is possible to (a) creature, he wants to find in her his sanctity, his heartbeat, his breath, his word and so on, and how can he find it if she doesn’t give it and he offer it continually? Therefore (there) passes such identification between the Divine Will and the creature that wants to live in Him, that it renders them inseparable the one and the other, neither would my Volition tolerate the least separation in one who lends herself to let him form his life. Whence be attentive, and your flight be continuous in my Divine Will.”

* * *

May 14, 1933

Little post of love that the soul holds in her Creator, and little post that God holds in the soul. How sanctity becomes formed by the degrees of love. Seed that Jesus casts, how first he does deeds and then words.

I felt all immersed in the Supreme Fiat and repeating my round in Him, as I united myself to his acts, thus I felt his waves of love come that pouring themselves over me, they brought me the love of my Creator. Oh! how happy I felt [in] feeling myself loved by God, I believe that there is no greater happiness, neither in Heaven, nor in earth, than the creature occupying a post in the bosom of the Celestial Father, whom makes his waves of love arise in order to love her. But while I felt under these waves, my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, turning in our acts that we have done, as much in the Creation as in the Redemption for love of creatures, it makes arise new love from within our Divine Being, and invests she who is united with our divine acts; she with uniting herself with our works, prepares the little post where to receive our waves of love, and as she receives them she also loves us with new love, and forms her waves of love to her Creator, in a way that she holds her little post of love in our Divine Being, and we hold our post in the creature. You should know that true sanctity becomes formed by the degrees of love with which you are loved by God, and this love, the creature then takes possession of when she loves; when she receives his divine love and she loves, God disposes himself to love her more with new love, to be loved by God with new love is the greatest act that God does toward the creature, and all the sanctity, the glory becomes constituted by how many times she has been loved by God, and by how many times she has loved him. Because you should know that our Supreme Being loves everyone and always, in a universal and general way, to this is added on a special and direct love, toward one who loving us gives us her love. Whence if the creature has been loved by God with special love, one time, three, ten, one hundred, according to the number, she acquires so many degrees of sanctity, and hence glory. You see therefore turning in my Will, uniting yourself to his acts, it calls us to love you with special and new love, and God calls you in order to make himself loved with your new and special love, and God himself will be your witness who will say to all, to Heaven and to earth: it is true I have loved her, but she has loved me, I can say that my love called hers and hers called mine to love each other. Therefore one who lives in our Will puts our love in security, nor do we have the sorrow that we can be rejected, rather in (a) sign that she has received him she responds to us with giving us her love.”

Whence I was thinking of the Divine Will and a thousand thoughts crowded in my mind, of doubts, of anxieties, of certainties, of longings, of wanting the Divine Will as primary life of my life, I wanted his sweet empire inside and outside of me. Now while I did this, always amiable Jesus added:

“My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that when I manifest a good, a truth, it is the most certain sign that I want to give that good or the gift of a truth of mine, as property of the creature, if this might not be so I would deceive her, I would seduce her, I would make her waste time in a thousand useless desires, without the possession of the good that I have made her know. I don’t know how to deceive anyone, nor do I do useless things, rather first I decide to give that good, and then I manifest the nature of that good, and while I manifest it I already put the seed in the depth of the soul, so that she starts to feel the beginning of the new life of the good that I have made her know, and the succession of my manifestations that I make her know serves to make the seed germinate, to bedew it and water it in order to form the entire life of the gift that I want to give her, and the sign that the soul has accepted and appreciated the new life of the gift that I want to give her is that I continue to manifest the different qualities, the beautiful prerogatives, the immense value that my gift possesses, and after that it is certain that she already possesses the whole entire life of the gift that I wanted to give her, then I make her know my aims, the work that I have done in her and the gift that she already possesses; my Wisdom is infinite, my industries of love are innumerable, first I do the deeds and then the words, which serves to teach the creature, how to receive, to conserve and to make use of the good that has been given to her and made known to her. To give a good without making it known is as if one might want to give food to corpses, and I have never had (anything) to do with corpses, but with (the) living, to make her know it and not give it would be it a joke, nor would it be a way of our divine nature. Hence if I have manifested to you so many truths on my Divine Will it is because I want to give you the gift of his working life in you, if this might not be so, I would never have told you so much, my speaking alone is messenger and carrier and depositary of the great gift of my Divine Will, not only to you, but to the whole entire world. Therefore be attentive so that my seed is dusted in you, even to change into nature, and then you will feel with deeds the good of my Will reigning in your soul.

“In fact didn’t I do thus with my Celestial Mother? First I formed her, prepared her, endowed her, prepared the post, extended my Sky in the depth of her soul, I made her know so many things, and as she knew them, thus it was made a gift, I could say, Mother and Son we did the deeds first; when nothing lacked to my sanctity, to my divine decency, to the new Heaven that she came to inhabit upon the earth, then I manifested the secret, that I had already elected her for my Mother, and as I manifested the secret, thus she felt herself Mother of her Creator. You see therefore, the necessity to manifest that which I want to do with the creature, so that God and the creature want the same thing, that my incarnation itself happened not before, but in the act itself that she knew that I already wanted her for my Mother, and She accepted to be it. Therefore there is needed great attention when I make known a good that I want to make the creature, she doesn’t know my aims where they go to finish, I don’t make everything known in the beginning, but I go hand in hand, manifesting and working in order to arrive to the point where I want, and if she is not attentive and doesn’t follow me, she can be left in the middle of the road and I will have the sorrow to not being able to give my gifts and of not being able to complete my designs.”

* * *

May 25, 1933

How the Divine Will is permanent miracle. One who lives in Him is the bearer of the divine works, and his fields are the Creation and the Redemption.

I am always around the Supreme Fiat, his sweet empire, his powerful attractions, his kiss of light, with which he makes all my acts met in order to depose in them and enclose himself within in order to form his life, it is the sweetest enchantment to my little soul, and between the wonder and the amazement I exclaim: Oh! Divine Will, how much you love me even to abase yourself in my little act, in order to enclose there your working life, and while my mind was lost in Him, my sweet Jesus, whom also enjoyed the charm, the admirable ways of his Volition, all tenderness and goodness said to me:

“Dearest daughter of my Divine Will, my Divine Volition is by himself a continuous miracle, to descend into the baseness of the act of the creature in order to form there his act, his life, it is the greatest of miracles, that has been given to no one to be able to do, his investing virtue penetrates everywhere, with his kiss of light he enraptures the act of the creature, moves it, transforms it, conforms it and with his miraculous virtue forms there his act in that of the creature and without destroying that of the creature, rather he makes use of the space, as to install there his act, and he makes use of the void, as to form there his life, so much so that from outside one sees the human act, from inside the wonders, the sanctity, the great miracle of the divine act. Therefore one who does my Will and lives in Him, she doesn't have need of miracles, she lives under the rain of the miracles of my Volition, and she possesses in herself the font, the source that transforms the creature in the miraculous virtue of my Divine Will, in a way that one sees in her (the) miracle of unconquered patience, miracle of perennial love toward God, miracle of continuous prayer without ever getting tired, and if one sees sufferings, they are miracles of conquests, of triumphs, of glory that he encloses in her sufferings. For one who lives in my Will, He wants to give to the soul the miracle of divine heroism, and in the sufferings he puts the infinite weight and value, he puts the imprint, the seal of the sufferings of your Jesus.

“You should know my daughter, that our love is so much towards one who lives in the Divine Will, that we make her (a) gift of all that which we do in the Creation and Redemption, and she makes hers all that which is ours, and since it is hers and ours, as a thing connatural in her acts, and she seeks the Divine Will, now she finds herself in the Sky, in the Sun, in the sea, and so on, she feels in herself all the sanctity of our works, that are also hers, and feeling herself identify with them, she understands what it means to hold a Sky always extended, a Sun that always gives light, a sea that always murmurs, a wind that with its billows carries to everyone the caresses of her Creator, and she feels herself Sky, stars, Sun, sea, wind, and oh! how she loves us, and with the enrapturing forces of her love that is our love, she comes to depose everything before our Divine Throne and oh! how we feel enraptured by her notes and currents of love that she makes us, we can say that if we keep this creature in earth, we keep her in order to make her bearer of our works, we have scattered them in the Creation and it seems that she collects them in order to come to us to say how much you have loved me, and how much she loves us. But it is more beautiful when she passes into the kingdom of my acts of the Redemption. With how much love she passes from one act to the other, as she kisses them, she embraces them, she adores them, thanks them, encloses them in her heart and all love she says to me: ‘Jesus, your life ended upon the earth, your works, your words, your sufferings remained, now touch me to continue your life, therefore all that which you did should serve to my life, otherwise I can not form another Jesus of myself, if you don't give me everything I am not able neither to form, nor to continue your life in earth.’ And I all love say to her: ‘My daughter, everything is yours, take of me that which you want, rather how much more you take, more content I will be and more I will love you.’ But the most beautiful (thing) of this happy creature [is] that while she wants everything, she takes everything, she feels that she can not contain that which she has received, she comes to her Jesus, gives me everything, pours herself into me, even her littleness, her little volition, and oh, how content I am with it, I can say that they are continuous exchanges of life that we do, I to her and she to me. It is so much the strength of the union of one who lives in our Will between her and us, that neither can we put her apart from us in all our works, nor can she put herself apart, if this could be, it would happen as if she might want to divide the light of the Sun into two, that which is impossible, to divide the unity of its light, and if one might want to try to divide it, she would remain humiliated, and the light with the strength of its unity would laugh at her, or yet to split the Sky, to separate the strength of the wind, the unity of the air, all impossible things, because all their life, the strength that they possess is in the unity, in such conditions one finds one who lives in our Will, all her strength, her merit, her beauty, her sanctity, is in the unique and united strength with her Creator. Therefore be attentive and your life be in us, with us and with our works.”

* * *

May 28, 1933

Precipice, doors and living hell of the human volition. Doors, staircases and living Paradise of the Divine Will. Necessity of his knowledges, royalty that she acquires. The daughter of the great King.

My poor mind debates many times between infinite beauty, Power, value and innumerable prerogatives of the Eternal Volition, and between the precipices, ugliness and evils of the human volition. My God, what contrast, if everyone might be able to see it they would put forth (their) life rather than do their own will, and while I felt all trembling for the serious evils in which my will could precipitate me, my beloved Jesus, surprising me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, courage, it is necessary that you know where one can arrive with holding my Divine Will for life, and into what an abyss is fallen one who lets oneself be dominated by ones own volition, indeed every evil that I make you know on it, it is a door that I make you close to the human will, it is a watch that I give you, so that if you might want to enter again, and descend in the precipice of the human volition, the watch rejects you and holds the door closed to you and every time that I add on to make you know other evils of the human volition, they are none other than defenses and watches that I add on so that they might not let you descend into the depths of its abyss. Because you should know, that every evil of human will, is none other than so many distinct doors that she possesses in order to descend into the kingdom of evils, of vices, of the gruesome terrors of the living hell, even to render one nauseated, unbearable to God and to oneself, and I with making its evils known, I do none other than wall up the doors and put there my seal and say: this door can not open anymore. Now as the human will holds its doors, its staircases in order to descend into the abyss of evil, not in order to ascend, thus my Divine Will holds his doors, his staircases in order to ascend, his Heavens, his immense goods and it forms the living Paradise for one who possesses him, and every knowledge that regards him is as a door that is opened, it is a staircase that is formed, it is a way that opens before you, that you should cross, in order to possess with facts that which you have known. You see therefore the great good of so many knowledges that I have manifested to you, they are so many doors that facilitate your entrance into his kingdom, and in every door I have put an Angel at guard, so that he might give you a hand and might conduct you securely into the regions of the Divine Will, every knowledge is an invitation, it is a Divine strength that I surrender to you, and it makes you feel the extreme need, the absolute necessity, to live of Divine Will. As He makes himself known, thus he extends in you the arms in order to take you up, and conducts you between his arms in that same knowledge that has been manifested to you, he adapts it to your capacity, moulds your soul, so that it enters in you as vital humor, as blood, as air, and he produces in you the life, the goods that his knowledge possesses, and making himself conductor, more than (a) Mother at watch, in order to see when his daughter has absorbed the last drop of good that he has made her know, in order to open his bosom again to her and to pour himself out into his daughter and make her know other values, other effects that the life of my Volition contains, and he repeats his work, because he wants to see in her the value of his life, the effects, the substance of his goods. Now the knowledges on my Divine Will instruct the human volition and she acquires science and reason, that not only is it justice to let him reign and dominate as primary life in her soul, but it is the highest good that she receives, honor and great glory that this Holy Volition, with dominating, arrives to give her the state of divine royalty, because she feels herself daughter of the Great King, hence the royalty is also her property. When the creature has arrived to understand all this by way of knowledges and lessons that my Divine Volition has made for her, everything is done. My Will has conquered the human volition, and the human volition has conquered the Divine Will. The knowledges on Him are so very necessary, that they serve to desiccate the bad humors, and they substitute (it with) the holy humors, they are as Sun that darts the human volition, and they communicate his life, his sanctity and the ardent desire to possess the good that he knows. Therefore be attentive to listen to his lessons and correspond to such good.”

* * *

June 4, 1933

How one who lives in the Divine Will receives the creative strength of the continuous creation. Harmony with the Divine Will.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues, I am hardly newborn and I feel the need to remain in his arms, in order to drink in long sips the milk of his truths, in order to receive the waves of his light, the sweet refreshment of his heat. I feel that the Divine Volition also wants to hold me in his arms, pressed to his bosom of light, in order to be able to infuse in me the continuous act of his working life, because life means to have acts that never cease, otherwise it could not be called life. Hence if I might not want to remain in his arms, in order to receive these continuous reflections of his life or he would not like to hold me, I could not form his life in me, so that the word life, would be reduced into words, not in reality, or even into a painted picture. My Jesus, oh! do not permit it, and make that you form the reality of his life in my soul. But while I sought to remain in the arms of the Divine Will, my Sovereign Jesus, visiting my littleness said to me:

“Daughter of my Heart, you have reason that you feel the extreme need to remain in the arms of the Divine Will, because remaining in his arms means to put herself at his disposition and to pledge to her to form his life in the creature, if she does not put herself in his arms, she puts herself as at a far distance, and life doesn’t form itself from afar, but from nearby, rather united with the same life that one wants to receive, not one mother conceives her baby from afar, but inside of her same bosom, not one seed germinates and forms its plant if it doesn’t unite itself and hide beneath the earth. Thus, to say, I want him to form the life of the Divine Will in me and to not remain united in his arms, in harmony with Him, in order to live with his same omnipotent breath, is impossible. You should know that our Supreme Being, uses the same creative power that he used in the Creation, he continues to use it in the acts that the creature does in the Divine Will. Every act that she does in Him undergoes a new creation, and my Fiat, in virtue of his creative power, remains conceived in the act of the creature. A continuous alternating happens, she lends the act, and my Divine Will creates and conceives himself in her act, and while he conceives he forms his life and raises it with the food of his light and his love. The heavens are astonished, and such is the wonder that they are struck dumb before a single act of the creature that contains within itself the creative strength of the conception of the Divine Fiat; and she with remaining in his arms, puts herself at our disposition, thus with holding her in our arms we put ourselves at her disposition and she gives us her sweet pledge, in order to do that which we want with her. So that her life, her acts, are so many pledges that she gives us, and we holding her pledges, we feel secure to be able to put forth our creative virtue, and to work as God in the act of the creature. You should know that when our Will works, as much in ourselves, as in the human act, he doesn’t ever put aside his creative virtue, nor can he put it (aside), because it is in (his) nature that he possesses it, hence his doing is always creation, hence one who lives in ours, undergoes in her acts, his creative act, and oh how many wonders happen. Therefore be attentive and reverent and grateful, receive this creative virtue in yourself, in your acts, that wants to do great things, not little, and worthy only of our adorable Will.”

* * *

June 15, 1933

The intention forms the life of the action, it forms the veil in order to hide the divine action. The hidden Actor.

My poor mind is always occupied by the Divine Fiat, that not only wants to make himself life, but also food, because life is not enough without having something to satisfy the hunger, one would die of hunger. Behold therefore often, very often, he gives me the delicious and celestial food of some other truths that require the Divine Volition, so that he not only feeds me, but he raises this life of his in me, and oh, how many times I feel the need that blessed Jesus says something to me that regards his Volition, because I feel myself die of hunger and my amiable Jesus, because He himself wants and gives me this hunger, in visiting my little soul he said to me:

“My daughter, your desire of being fed by my nourishing word, it wounds my heart, and I wounded, race forth from you, in order to give you my divine food that I alone can give you. My word is life and forms in you Divine life, it is light and illuminates you, and the illuminative virtue remains in you that always gives you light, it is fire that makes the heat arise in you, it is food and feeds you.

“Now, you should know that I don’t look at the external action of the creature but the intention that forms the life of the action, it is as the soul of the action, this becomes as the veil of the intention. It happens as the soul to the body, that it is not the body that thinks, that speaks, that beats, that works and walks, but the soul that gives life to the thought, to the word, to the motion, so that the body is veil of the soul, that while it covers it and makes itself bearer of it, but the vital part, the action, the step is of the soul. Such is the intention, true life of the actions. Now if you call my Divine Will as life of your mind, as beat of your heart, as action of your hands and so on, you will form the life of the intelligence of my Will in your mind, the life of his actions in your hands, his divine step in your feet, in a way that all that which you will do, will serve as veil to the Divine life, that with your intention you have formed in the interior of your acts. But what is this intention? It is your will that appealing to mine, empties itself of itself, and forms the void in its act, in order to give the post to the action of my Will, and she making herself veil, hides even in the most ordinary and natural actions, the extraordinary action of a God, so much so that from outside one sees common actions, but if one takes away the veil of the human volition one finds enclosed the operative virtue of the divine action, and this forms the sanctity of the creature, not the diversity of actions, not the works that make noise, no, but common life, the necessary actions of life, of which the creature can do no less, they are all veils that can hide our Will, and make itself field, where God himself abases himself, in order to make himself (the) hidden actor of his divine actions. And as the body veils the soul, thus the will veils God, it hides him and forms through means of ordinary actions the chain of the extraordinary actions of God in her soul. Therefore be attentive, call in all that which you do my Will and He will never deny you his act, in order to form in you, for how much it is possible, the fullness of his sanctity.”

* * *

June 25, 1933

If the Divine Will reigns in the soul, God searches (for) himself and finds himself in the creature, she searches (for) herself in God, and finds herself in his Divine center.

My poor and little intelligence I felt it as crowded by so many thoughts that regarded the Divine Will, and I thought to myself: and why does Jesus have such interest, he insists, yearns, prays and wants that one prays that his Divine Will come to reign? It is true that for the creature it will be the greatest acquisition, to have in (her) power an immense Volition, a power that is never exhausted, a love that always burns, a light that never extinguishes itself, a sanctity that gives of the incredible and always grows, one can say that other doesn't remain for her to desire, nor to possess, because she possesses everything, but for God, what can be his profit, his glory, his honor? Whence while I thought this and other, my Sovereign Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My daughter, dearest daughter of my Will, the reason, the cause, the purpose that, I long so much that my Divine Will takes his post, his dominion and does as Sovereign in the creature, it is because our Supreme Being goes in search of finding himself in the human littleness. Think well (of) what it means that a God goes in search of himself, but where? maybe in the extensions of the Heavens? no; in the breadth of the light, that occupies all the earth? no; maybe in the multiplicity of the waters of the sea? no, but in the little human heart, we want to hide our immensity, our power, our wisdom and all our Divine Being in the creature; hiding ourselves in great things is not great, but in the little ones we show off more in love, power, et cetera, and since we are able to do all, and do all, it delights us more and we take more gusto, in hiding ourselves in the human littleness, rather than in great things, and if we don't find our Will in her, we are not able neither to search for ourselves, nor find ourselves in her, we would lack the post where to put ourselves, all our Divine Attributes would feel impotent to hide our Divine Life where there is not our Will. You see therefore the reason why we want, long for, and that the creature longs for and prays that she live of Divine Volition, it is because we go in search of ourselves in her, and we want to find ourselves as in our own center; and it seems little to you the great profit that we make, the glory, the honor that we receive, that the little human heart hides our Will and our same life, in order to give us double love, double power, wisdom, goodness, in order to put ourselves in competition with ourselves? If you don't understand this it means that you are still blind, in the interminable ways of my Divine Will. Now if we with wanting that our Fiat reigns in creatures, we search and we find ourselves in her, the creature with wanting it, searches (for) herself in God, and finds herself in Him. You see therefore what exchanges, what work on both parts, what stratagems and loving genius, God who continually searches for himself in the creature, but where does he find himself? in the center of her, so that he searches and re-searches (for) himself, calls and recalls, where his same love calls him, where his same life resides, the creature imitates her God, turns and re-turns, searches and re-searches, calls and recalls, but where does she find herself? in the Divine center. This speaks of the exchange of life between the one and the other, the same Will that dominates the creature and God, the same love with which they are animated, hence it is no wonder that that which the one does, the other does. And only our Will knows how to do these prodigies, without Him everything is sterile, everything is impeded on the part of God and on the part of creatures, we feel that we are prisoners of ourselves, and she feels imprisoned by her human will, without flight and all impeded in herself, and without Divine Life. Therefore being all this, is it not therefore just that we don't want other than that our Will be dominant and reign?”

* * *

June 29, 1933

How in the Divine Will there are no stops, making oneself repeater of our Life. Assignment that becomes entrusted to her. How God adapts himself to the human littleness.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues, I feel that if I might not continue I would lack life in order to live, food in order to satisfy my hunger, light in order to see, feet in order to walk, alas! I would remain immobilized, wrapped up in a profound night, I would lose the way and I would remain in the middle of the road. My God, my Jesus, Holy Mama, free me, and when you see me in peril of stopping, come to my help, give me (your) hand, so that I don't stop; or else carry me to Heaven, where these perils of stopping are not there, and I can give the boast to say: I never stopped, and therefore I never lacked, neither food, nor light, nor He who while he conducted me, with his sweet sayings he instructed me and enraptured me. But while my mind was all sunk in the Divine Will, my Wise Teacher Jesus, surprising me with his brief little visit, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, one who lives in my Divine Will feels the need to never interrupt her walk, nor are there perils of stopping herself, neither in earth, nor in Heaven, because He being eternal, his ways and his steps are interminable, and one who lives in Him receives in nature the good of being always able to walk. To stop oneself in my Will it would make our divine life lack an act of life, which he goes forming in her soul. Because you should know, that one who lives in my Divine Will arrives to such, and is able to do such, even to repeat our Divine life, our Fiat gives all the necessary materials to the creature that lives in Him, that with her acts she makes herself repeater of the same life of God, and if you might know what it means to repeat our Life, the glory, the honor, the love that she gives us, the good that she makes descend on all the generations, it is incalculable that which she does, and only our Will holds this power, to make this prodigy so great, that to no one is it given to make herself repeater of our same Divine Life in the creature.”

Whence I in hearing this said: “My love, what are you saying? How can one arrive to so much? It seems to me that it gives of the incredible”, and Jesus interrupting me added:

“My daughter, do not wonder, everything is possible to my Will, even to repeat our life. You should know that our Supreme Being, holds the virtue in his nature, to be able to repeat how many times he wants, as in fact we repeat our Divine life all entire for every individual, for every created thing, wherever, in each place and everywhere, our immensity carries us, our power forms us, and of our single life that we possess he repeats, bilocates, multiplies our Divine lives, (so) that only one who doesn't want it doesn't take it. Otherwise that which one says, where is God? in Heaven, in earth and everywhere, it would be reduced into words, but not with deeds. Now one who lives in our Will, with her acts she concurrently does with our life, that which is repeated continually for love of creatures and therefore we feel it repeated by her littleness. And oh, the contentment, the happiness that we feel, and how our love finds his vent, his exchange in feeling his same life repeated, by his beloved creature and in his emphasis of love and indescribable joy, that we experience we say: we have given her everything, and she has given us everything, nor can she give us more, because we feel that she carries our immensity everywhere to us, she emerges from all sides, there is no point where she is not felt, and oh! how sweet and pleasant to feel her everywhere in our life that she possesses, ‘I love you, I adore you, I thank you, I bless you.’ So that the assignment that we entrust to one who lives in our Volition is to repeat our same Divine Life. Therefore be attentive and let your walk be continuous.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will and my always amiable Jesus added:

“My daughter, if you might know the sweet and pleasant surprises that the creature makes for us in our Will, she is tiny and finding herself in our Fiat, she finds herself surrounded by an immensity that doesn’t have an end, by a power that doesn’t have limits, by a love that not only involves all of her, but she feels that she herself is none other than love, our beauty invests her and she remains enraptured. So that the little one moves (her) little feet and looks (at) the immensity that surrounds her, and while she moves the step, she wants to take who knows how much of our immensity, but that, it doesn’t succeed her to take but a few drops of our power, our love and beauty, which although drops, but they are enough to fill her so much, even to overflow outside, even to form around her little rivers of our love, power and beauty, and the little one gets embarrassed, she becomes tired, because she wants to take more, but she can not, because she lacks the space where to be able to enclose that which she wants to take, and our Supreme Being, we make her do it, rather we enjoy her efforts and her embarrassments, it delights us, we smile at her and the little one looks at us asking us for help, because she feels the need to extend herself more in our immensity, power and love, but do you know why? She wants to give us more, she wants the contentment that she wants to say to us: my efforts, my embarrassments are, that I want that I say that I love you more, oh! if I might be able to possess all your love, how content I would be, in order to be able to say I love you how much you love me. This tiny one with her efforts, with her embarrassments, with her sayings, she wounds us, enraptures us, enchains us, and then do you know what we do? We take up the little one and we adapt ourselves to her, with a prodigy of our omnipotence, we make flow our immensity, our power, sanctity, love, beauty, goodness, in a way that our Divine Being remains inside and outside of her, inseparable from her, and she sees that everything is hers and the little one in her emphasis of love says to us: how content and happy I am, I can say that your immensity is yours and mine, and I love you with immense love, with powerful love, to my love there lacks nothing, neither your sanctity, nor your goodness, nor your beauty that enraptures, conquers and obtains all; not to content the human littleness in our Will, proves impossible to us, and since with her littleness she can not adapt herself to us, God adapts himself to her, and it proves easy to us, because there are not extraneous elements to us, but everything is ours, at the most she will be little, but this says nothing, she will be more to our care to make her how much more beautiful we can. Instead one who doesn’t live in our Divine Will, in the human littleness there are so many extraneous elements to us, will, desires, affections, thoughts, that are not ours, and it can be said that she should adapt herself to us with removing that which is not ours, otherwise she could not understand our Will, much less could she climb and enter into his celestial spheres, and hence she will remain empty of God, full of miseries in the straights of human life. How many human lives will be found without growth of Divine life, because they have not done my Will, nor are they occupied with understanding what it means to live of Him, and the great good that they can receive. Therefore they will be so many little ignorant ones and illiterate of their Creator...”

* * *

July 8, 1933

Every act done in the Divine Will is a ring of union, bond of stability, perennial fecundity. What a completed act in the Divine Will means.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, I am always little and I have need of my Eternal Mama, that is the Divine Will, that carries me always in his arms, that makes use of all cares for me, defends me, assists me, feeds me, and with his sweet empire holds my human volition repressed, I live but without life, receiving in his acts the attitude of the Supreme Will. But while I rested in his arms I felt arcane delights and the repose of the Celestial Country. And my Sovereign Jesus, making his brief little visit with me, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, how content I am to find you in the arms of my Divine Will. I am secure and you also, when you are in his arms, and while you rest He works on your account, and his works are divine and of infinite value, and I in seeing you possessor of his works, I rejoice and I make festive saying: oh! how rich is my family. You should know that every act of Divine Will that the creature undergoes and voluntarily lends herself to receive, is a ring of union that she forms and acquires with her Creator, one can say that this ring encloses within, God and the soul, it connects them together, it makes them live with one single life and forms the inseparability of the one and the other. So that how many acts of my Will, so many rings, in a way that one sees a long chain in which they remain on both parts linked and joined together, and not only is she linked but she is bound with Divine stability and immutability, so that the creature is not subject to change anymore, so that she feels firm and stable in the bosom of her Celestial Father. So that she can say with all security: my sojourn is in God, neither do I know anything, nor do I know another, if not my Creator. Now this ring of union and this bond of stability produces perennial fecundity. The creature with this fecundity generates continual love, goodness, fortitude, grace, patience, sanctity, all the divine virtues, which possess the bilocative virtue, in a way that while the creature possesses them, she is able to bilocate them giving them to whom she wants, and to whom wants them. Instead one who doesn't let my Divine Will work, her acts are as broken rings, which don't have the virtue to enclose God and the creature, and since they are broken, they escape from inside of her, and hence they can not form neither bond of stability, nor fecundity, but they are sterile acts that don't produce generations of good.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will, but thought to myself: but how does one complete an act of complete Divine Volition and what does it mean? And my beloved Jesus, always good with this little tiny ignorant one added:

“My daughter, how does one complete a complete act of the Divine Volition[?] You should know that in order to form this complete act, there is needed the power of my Will, the creature alone can not do it, therefore, it happens that my Will invests the human littleness, and the human one lends itself to let itself be invested, making itself the one prey of the other. Now in this investment the power of my Fiat empties the creature of all that which doesn't belong to Him, and fills her up even to the brim with the Divine Being, in a way that she feels the fullness of the Life of her Creator, there is no particle, even the slightest that doesn't remain filled, in a way that she feels flow as in torrents, the Divine Life in all her being, so that she feels in herself the fullness and totality of the Supreme Being, for how much a creature is capable. Whence holding in herself this fullness and totality, she doesn't have neither something to add, nor something to remove from her act, because from all sides she possesses God, whom doesn't know how to do incomplete acts, and the creature possessing him puts herself in the divine conditions of not being able to do if not completed acts. You see therefore what it means and how one can do a complete act, one must possess God with all fullness, and God works in her act. These complete acts, have such power that they call the attention of everyone, and the Heavens bend themselves, in order to see what their Creator works of greatness in the act of the creature. Now possessing this Divine fullness and totality, it happens that all that which she does, going forth from a depth that she possesses all and lacks nothing, if she prays, her prayer possesses the fullness of the Divine Value, her virtues are complete and fed by the life that she possesses, so that if she wants to give her acts now to God as homage, now to creatures as help, God himself will give it in her acts. Imagine yourself what will be the great good that these complete acts in my Volition will produce.”

* * *

July 30, 1933

One who does the Divine Will, forms her residence, which serves as custody, as defense and as comfort to the Divine Will himself. His knowledges form his life.

I am always in prey of the Divine Volition, I feel his palpating life in me, as bearer of goodness, of speaking light, that while he is mute he speaks with deeds, speaks with always loving me, speaks with forming his Life, speaks with making him grow, speaks with making himself be felt, oh! blessed muteness that knows how to convert into arcane voices your motion, your sanctity, your love, all your Being into working voice, but while my mind lost itself in the Fiat, my sweet Jesus, surprising me with his brief little visit said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you should know that one who does my Divine Will forms the residence to my Supreme Volition, and as a residence does not have right, nor is it mistress to do that which it wants, and only serves as custody, as defense and as comfort to one who lives there, thus the soul loses her right in the Divine right, she surrenders the rights of command voluntarily to my Divine Will and remains as custody, as defense and comfort to my Divine Volition, which develops his life as it more pleases him. Now the human will with doing mine, not only changes into the residence for mine, but she will be an honorable residence, which my Fiat will decorate with divine friezes, this residence of his will form his Palace by which the Angels themselves will remain astonished, there he will make a display of his love, of his sanctity, of his light, of his uncreated beauty, he will form there his life and his working life in the will of the creature; to work great things in us, they are rights that we hold in our nature, our power has no limits, it can do all, and can arrive everywhere, and if we don’t do so many things it is because we don’t want them, not because we are not able to, but to arm our power with making us work in the brief circle of the human will, we can say that we put forth more love, more divine art, more power, because in her we must restrict that which in us is immense, therefore our love shows off more in making us work in the creature, and She will feel my Will living in her, in a way that she will feel his Divine life flow everywhere, in her works, in her steps, in her heart, in her mind even in her voice, he will form of her being so many rooms in order to give ease to my Divine Will now to let him speak, now to work, now to walk, now to love, in short that which he wants.”

Whence I continued to think of the so many truths that Jesus had said to me on his Divine Will, and my beloved Good Jesus added:

“My daughter, every life has need of food, not only, but of suitable adaptable matter to form that life, it must hold its beginning, its growth; only in us things don’t have beginning, in the creature every thing has its beginning. Hence in order to have the beginning of the working life of my Divine Will in the creature, he must administer the prime materials in order to form it, but do you know what these prime materials have been? the first knowledges and truth that I have manifested to you on my Divine Will, they have formed the humor, the heat and the first act of life in order to give beginning to his life. Now after having formed the beginning of this life, it was necessary to form it, to raise it and to feed it. So that as you have followed my manifestations on my Volition, some have served to form him, some to raise him and some to feed him. If I might not have continued my speaking on Him, he could be suffocated, or yet a life without growth, because he is not fed with other, but only with truth and knowledges that pertain to him. You see therefore the necessity of my long speaking on my Fiat, it was necessary in order to make him known to the creature, it was necessary in order to form his life and to not let him lack the divine food of his own truths that alone can serve in order to feed him, because outside of the creature, my Will doesn’t have need of anything or anyone, by himself in his nature he is life, food, nourishment and everything, instead in the creature wanting her part concurrent, by way of knowledges and truth that pertain to him, he forms his life more or less (of) what she knows, and these knowledges form an indissoluble marriage between the one and the other, the substance, the heat, the growth, the food of the life of my Will in the creature. Behold therefore I return to my speaking, because it serves to my same Will in you, and to you in order to make you know, love and appreciate him more.

“Hence, when creatures will hear that my long speaking, my almost continuous visits, my so many graces, will serve to form the life of my Divine Will in you, won’t they marvel of the ways that I have held, of the graces that I have done, of the so many truths that I have said, it was life that had to be formed, and life has need of continuous acts, what life can say that it doesn’t need continuous acts? not one, works don’t have need of continuous acts but life, it requires the breath, the heartbeat, the continuous motion, a food that sustains it every day, an attire that covers it, a residence that holds it secure. You see therefore what all that which I have done and will do was necessary for me, in order to form this Life of my Divine Will, it was necessary for you in order to receive it and to possess it, and to not let him lack anything of that which is appropriate to a Divine life. When I act, I act with wisdom, order and divine harmony, should I say to you that he wanted to form this life of my Divine Will in you without making you know him, without giving you the divine materials in order to form him and the continuous food in order to make him grow? I don’t know how to do these things, if I say that I want it, I must give all that which is needed, and in a superabundant way, in order to make that the creature might be able to do that which I want. And since creatures don’t know my way of acting, some marvel, they doubt it, and certain ones arrive to condemn my work and the creature that I have made the aim in order to complete my great designs, that will serve to the whole entire world, because the life of my Divine Will working in the creature, is not subject neither to die, nor to finish, but he will have his perpetuity in the midst of the human generations. Therefore leave me to do it and you always follow your flight in my Divine Will.”

* * *

August 6, 1933

How the Celestial Queen grew together with the Divine Will and how she possessed the speaking Sun. Joys of God in the Creation of man. Power that he gave him.

I am always in the arms of the Divine Fiat, which now stops me in one work of his, and now in another, it seems that he wants to make me understand well that which he has done for our love, therefore while I turned in his works, he stopped me in the act of the conception of the Virgin, how the Divine Will had his first post and grew, and diffused himself in those little members, as the little Queen herself grew they grew together on both parts, what happy growth, what great prodigy, the Divine Will abasing himself, to enclose himself in the littleness of the Holy Virgin, in order to grow together, but while I remained astonished, my Dear Divine Teacher surprising me said to me:

“My good daughter, making the Celestial Queen live in the Divine Fiat was the greatest act, most heroic, most intense that our Supreme Being did of love, and for as much as our goods are immense and innumerable, giving our Will to live in Him, we can not give more, nor add on other, because with Him we gave her everything, and it formed in herself the font and the source of all the divine goods, for as much as it is possible for the creature. Now the Sovereign Tiny One, with growing together with our Will, as she grew, thus formed in her soul, in her heart, in her works and steps, so many speaking Suns, that with voices of light and irresistible love spoke to us, they spoke to us so much, they spoke to us of love, they spoke to us of our own Divine Being they spoke of mankind, her steps spoke to us, her little hands, the heartbeat of her heart, that with voices of light arrived even in our Divine bosom and spoke even inside of ourselves. Her speaking never ceased, because our Volition living in the Celestial Queen, she had all his speaking being, that not with human voices, but with arcane and divine voices always holds to say, never becomes exhausted, much more so that the Divine Fiat is word, is working word, creative word, how could she stop his speaking if she had him in her power? Hence her speaking held us besieged, enraptured, surrounded on all sides, occupied, in a way that rendered herself irresistible and invincible, as to give her that which she wanted, her word was power and made our power surrender, it was suave and sweet and subdued our justice, it was light and so imposed itself over our Supreme Being, over our love, over our goodness, in short there was nothing of ours that was not subdued tenderly to the powerful voices of this Celestial Creature.”

But while my sweet Jesus said this, he made me see the Celestial Queen, that from within her Heart went forth a Sun, that invaded the whole Celestial Court, all the earth, and its rays were formed with the most refulgent light, with speaking voices, that spoke to God, to the Saints and Angels, to all the creatures of earth. So that my Celestial Mama still possesses her continuous speaking, her speaking Sun that with voices of light she speaks to her God, and loves and glorifies him divinely, she speaks to the Saints and does as Mother beatifier and bearer of joy to all the Celestial Court, she speaks to the earth and as Mother makes for us the road in order to conduct us to Heaven; and my beloved Jesus added:

“You see therefore what it means to live of Divine Will, she acquires the doing, the speaking, the continuous love, that goes forth from within my Will she holds operative, illuminative and continuing virtue, and therefore they are triumphant acts that conquer God.”

After this I continued my round in the acts of the Divine Fiat and I stopped in the Creation of man, and offered the same divine acts that he did in creating man, and those of innocent Adam, in order to impetrate the Kingdom of the Divine Will, my Highest Good Jesus followed to say to me:

“My blessed daughter, as you offered our acts in creating man, and those of innocent Adam, in order to impetrate the kingdom of my Divine Will, thus you have repeated joys that we experienced in creating man, and you have formed new bonds of union between the Divine Will and man, they are our same acts that formed the place where to create man and they administered life to him in order to animate him, thus our same acts will form the way to make him reenter into our Will. Therefore the offering of our acts are armed with power, that make us decide to give that which the creature asks, more so that they are carriers of joys, but so much so that it put us in feast, and who does not know that in feasts one abounds in giving gifts not ever given? Now you should know that in not one other thing created by us did we experience such joy as in creating man, but do you know why[?] we gave power to be able to give our heartbeat, our life, our love, if we gave, we gave ourselves, but neither the Sky, nor the Sun, nor the stars, nor the wind nor all the rest had any power to give us anything, therefore the joy of receiving, no, it didn't exist in the other created things, at most the joy of giving, that (there) not being the exchange, the joy remain isolated and without company. Instead in creating man we gave him the power of giving us our life, our eternal heartbeat, that beats and gives love, such was our joy to give this power to man, to feel our heartbeat in him and to give our life at his disposition in order to be able to love us with a Divine life, so that man could felicitate us and exchange us with his joys, and joys that can remain equal with ours. Now in seeing our life in him, in feeling our heartbeat beat in him, we felt such joy that we remained ecstatic before a portent so great as the creation of man, and now offering us these our acts we feel repeated the joys and the sweet memory of his creation. Therefore repeat your offerings if you want to give us joys and to incline us to give our reigning Will upon the earth.”

* * *

August 13, 1933

Divine delirium and passion of the Divine Volition of wanting to live together with the creature. His new act and the Divine Painter. What it means to live in the Supreme Volition.

I am always returning in the arms of the Divine Will, it seems that He longs to always have me with himself, in order to give me his continuous life, and I long in order to receive it, I would feel myself lacking life under (my) feet without Him, the heartbeat in my heart and I would suffer a tremendous hunger, without which not one other thing could even give me a crumb in order to satisfy my hunger. Oh! Divine Will, live together if you want to make me happy, and find in me the happiness of your same life. But while my mind was lost in the Fiat, my beloved Jesus making his brief little visit with me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you could say that it is a delirium, a divine passion of my Will, that wants to have life together with the creature surrendering hers, in order to have the human littleness. But do you know why? you should know that my Divine Volition always holds ready a new act to give to the creature, but if she doesn't live together, has not become accustomed to do her acts united with my Volition, in order form one alone, I can not give it, because first she would not be worthy to receive it, second she would not understand the value of the great gift that she receives, and she would not have the virtue to absorb it in herself as proper life. With living together with my Divine Will, she acquires new life, divine ways, celestial science, penetration of the most profound things, in short, since my Fiat is the Teacher of teachers, it is He who creates the highest science, makes known things not veiled, but as they really are. Hence living together with the creature he doesn't want to keep her ignorant, he instructs her, makes for her his surprises, recounts to her his divine story, and this transforms [her] and makes her capable to receive his new act that my Volition wants to give her, and in every act that the soul does united with Him, she acquires a new prerogative of Divine likeness. With living together with my Volition, the soul becomes refined, embellished and becomes in our creative hands as suitable cloth in the hands of the painter, that how much more beautiful, more fine is the cloth, so much more beautiful the image becomes that he wants to paint on that cloth, it seems that his brush strokes and his colors acquire more art, they are more capable, more so that they make the colors (come) alive over a most thin cloth. So that the cloth changes in image that it becomes alive and acquires such value, as to become admired by who knows how many people. Now my Will is more than a Divine Painter and he is never tired of giving new beauty, sanctity and new science and is waiting (for) an act to be done together with Him, in order to enrich it, in order to make himself more known and to make use of his divine brush strokes, in order to elevate her to such height and rare beauty as to make her be admired by who knows how many generations, in a way that everyone will call her blessed, and one will feel happy who has the good to look at her, (at) all the new acts received by God, in virtue (of) what she has worked in my Volition, they will praise her and extolling her they will make her known as the most beautiful work of my Divine Fiat; his wanting to abase himself to live with the creature, his divine delirium is (a) sign that he wants to do great things with her and worthy of his creative power. Therefore living together with my Fiat is the greatest fortune and should be the delirium, the vehement passion and the ambition of everyone.”

After this I felt inside and outside of myself the murmuring sea of the Divine Fiat, oh! how sweet it is, suave, his murmur, he murmurs and speaks, murmurs and caresses his beloved creature, murmurs and kisses her, and squeezing her between his arms says to her: “I love you and I ask love”; there is no thing more beautiful, more pleasant than the “I love you” being said by a Volition so holy, and he asks for exchange the little love of the creature, and I felt this Divine murmur flow as life in all my being and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, do you want to know what it means to do and live in my Divine Will, to know where she finds herself, what she has to do with us, what she can receive, not to forget the good that she has received, these are all signs that the soul lives in my Divine Will. Because to say that she lives in Him, and to not know where the divine Palace is that lends itself to make her a residence, would not be to appreciate it, because things, persons, places when they don’t know each other they don’t appreciate each other, to say I live in the Divine Volition and to not know him is absurd, and if one doesn’t know him it is not a reality, but a way of saying, while the first thing that my Will does is reveal himself, to make himself known to one who wants to live together with Him. Hence knowing where she finds herself, she knows what she has to do with a Volition so holy, that wants all, in order to give her all. Whence she puts herself in act to receive his sanctity, his light, and she puts herself in act to live of the goods of He who cohabitates together, because knowing him, she does not feel that she abases herself in her human will anymore, more so that it is hers no more. With this knowledge the creature acquires the hearing in order to listen to him, the voice in order to speak of him, the mind in order to understand him, the trust in divine ways in order to ask (for) all and to receive all. So that she doesn’t ignore the goods that she possesses, rather she is all eyes in order to guard them and thanks He who abases himself so much to live with her. Now if someone will read these lines that I have made you write, not understanding that which is written, and wondering she will put in doubt truth so sacrosanct, and where the creature can arrive with living together with my Volition, it is a sign that she doesn't live with Him, how can she understand him if she doesn't hold in herself this life so holy, she has never tried his delights, she has never listened to his beautiful lessons, her palate has never tasted this celestial food that my Will knows how to give? Therefore they ignore that which my Fiat knows how to do and give, and if they ignore him, how can one understand him, when one doesn't know a good, if one don't feel at least the dispositions of wanting to believe, one carries the blindness of the mind and the hardness of the heart, and one can arrive to also despise that good but for one who knows him and possesses him it forms her fortune and her glory, and she would give her human life in order to possess the life of my Fiat and his goods that she has known, and knowing him she is all ears in order to listen to him, she is all eyes in order to look at him, she is all heart in order to love him, she is all tongue in order to speak of him, indeed she would like to have who knows how many tongues in order to say the good that she knows, the prerogatives of He who she possesses as life, because hers is not enough to be able to say all that which she knows. Therefore when I want to give a good, a gift, especially the great gift of my Will as life in the creature, the first thing that I do is that of making her know, I don't want to give the light and to put it under the bushel as if she might not have it, nor my gifts in order to hide them and as in order to bury them in her, to what profit in order to give them? and if she doesn't know them how could the poor creature correspond with me, to love them and appreciate them? If I give it is because I want that we might have life together and united we enjoy the good that I have given her. Rather your Jesus makes himself vigilant sentinel in order to guard that which I have given to my beloved creature. Whence to know means to possess, to possess means to know, for one who doesn't know the truths they make themselves difficult and without life. Hence be attentive and enjoy that which your Jesus has given you and made you know."

* * *

August 20, 1933

How the Divine Majesty inclines himself toward the creature when he sees her disposed to do an act of his Will. Difference that passes between one who lives in the Divine Will. How she remains kneaded in the Fiat.

My poor mind continues to cross over the sea of the Fiat, it seems that I am always inside, but embracing it all is not given to me, I am too little (and) incapable and while I walk, oh! how much there remains for me to walk and to understand, all Eternity won't be sufficient to cross over it all, but while my mind lost itself in his immensity, my beloved Good Jesus surprising me said to me:

"My blessed daughter, (it is) certain that all the Eternity won't be enough for you to cross over the immense sea of my Volition, much less however the few hours of your life, it's enough for you to be within us in order to make you happy, and you will be all attentive to take the drops that your little capacity can take. Because you should know, that so much is our contentment when we see our creature who is within our sea of the Fiat, and who more so wants to understand and to enclose in herself another (of) his knowledges, in order to be able to form one more act of life of our Will, that our Adorable Majesty inclines himself even into the depths of the creature and touching her little intelligence with our creative hands, we makes her capable, and with our power we form the space where she should enclose the new act of our Will, because there [is] no greater act that more glorifies us and loves us than a completed act of our Will in the creature, so much so that the Heavens abase themselves, the Creation is all inclined and they adore my completed Will in the little creature. He himself invades all, and there is no point where one doesn't find him, he calls everything, sky and earth to do honor to his completed acts in the human littleness."

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Will and I thought to myself: but what difference passes between one who does the Divine Will and between one who lives in Him? and my amiable Jesus all goodness added:

"My daughter there is great difference between the one and the other, one who lives in my Will possesses the life of Him and receives continuous life from God in order to conserve, feed and make this life of my Will grow in the creature, life possesses and life receives. Instead one who does my Divine Will receives the effects of Him, and there is such distance, that there is no comparison that stands up between life and effects, is there not difference between life and work? Life palpates, thinks, speaks, loves, walks and repeats how many times it wants (for who) possesses it as life. Instead work being an effect of life, it doesn't palpate, doesn't think, doesn't speak, doesn't love, doesn't walk, nor is it capable of repeating itself, and it can happen that the work itself with time is consumed, and one doesn't find it anymore, how many works done who knows with how many rumors they don't exist anymore, instead life is not consumed, and if the body is consumed through death it is for a little time, but the soul doesn't die, nor can it be consumed although one might want it to. You see therefore what great difference there is between life and effects that he can produce life, effects are produced by time, by circumstances, by places, instead life is not ever interrupted, it always palpates and holds in its power to be able to produce different effects according to the circumstances. Now one who lives in my Will possessing the life of him, holds in her power and always, not at interval, sanctity, grace, wisdom, goodness, everything and since it is life that she possesses, as much in the soul as in the body, in a way that all the littlest particles of her being contain the omnipotent Fiat, and he flows more than blood in all the creature, so much so that if she palpates, (the) Fiat palpates, if she thinks, in her thoughts is impressed the Fiat, if she speaks, she feels in her voice flow my Fiat and she speaks of Him, if she works her works are kneaded with my Fiat, and if she walks her steps say Fiat, he is life my daughter, and as life she must feel him in all her being, nor can she do less than to not feel him; not so for one who does my Will, in order to feel him she must invoke him, pray, but when does she invoke him? in the sorrowful circumstances of life, in the needs, when she sees herself pressed by enemies, almost as those that call the physician when they are sickened, but if they are well the physician is always a stranger for them, hence the perennial life of my Divine Volition doesn't exist in them, and therefore they are mutable in good, patience, prayer, they don't feel the light as life in them, and hence they don't feel the need to possess him as one's own property, nor do they love him with true love, because when the acts are not continuous, he doesn't have the dominion over them, nor have they in their own power, hence the love remains broken. Therefore the difference is great between life and effects, life makes felt the need to live of Divine Will, instead the effects no, if they have, they have each other, if they don't have each other, they remain indifferent. Whence always wanting my Will means that one possesses the life of him."

* * *

September 2, 1993

Channels, commerce between Heaven and earth, traffic of the soul that lives in the Divine Will.
Competition of love between creature and Creator.

I am always the little atom in the Divine Volition, hardly newborn, and I feel the extreme need to be fed and raised in his Paternal arms, otherwise the human volition rises in me in order to form its unhappy life. My God have pity on me and do not permit that I know nor acquire other life, if not that of your Divine Will, and feeling afflicted, oppressed for the almost continuous privations of my sweet Jesus, that hold me sacrificed on the stake of a sorrow that only God is witness to a martyrdom so hard, hence I had fear that my unhappy human volition might make some draw for me, and my beloved Jesus in order to infuse courage in me, sustaining me in his arms because I could not endure anymore, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, courage, banish every fear from your heart, this is the weapon that now kills, now wounds love, and makes familiarity lost with your Jesus and I neither know how to remain, nor do I want to remain, without intimacy with one who wants to live of my Will, it is as if she might not be one sole thing with me, if this were so, I could not say that the Will is one that animates us, and that forms your life and mine, but I would have to say: you hold your will and I hold mine; and I don’t want this, because living in my Volition would not exist anymore in you. Rather I want that in every suffering that you suffer, be it even my privation, every thing that you do of all your being, you always call my Will, so that all your acts form the channel, where He can find the way, the place, where to enclose his goods and to make them flow in abundance according to the channel that you have prepared, every act that you do can be a channel of graces, of light, of sanctity that you lend to my Will, which will make you proprietor of the goods that he encloses in your acts, and he will make them flow to (the) good of everyone. You see therefore to what your being, your sufferings, your acts should serve me, as so many little channels in which I can always put of mine, depositing mine is for me happiness, it is giving me to do, it is feeling myself loved and known. And therefore it so much my desire to deposit my divine properties in the acts of the creature in order to make her mistress, that I remain to spy, I do as a vigilant sentinel, I use all my loving attentions, in order to see if her acts are void of human volition, and if she makes the call to my Divine Will, which finding the void in the human acts, makes use of them as channels in order to deposit in them the greatest graces, the most sublime knowledges, the sanctity that more resembles him, and with this he forms the divine dowry for his beloved creature.”

After this he became silent, and then he added with a more tender accent:

“My daughter, you should know that for one who lives in my Divine Will, there is no time to lose, nor can she mind to certain trifles, to fears, to oppressions, to agitations, to doubts, one who holds the most to do, must put aside the lesser, (for) one who must take the Sun and enjoy herself with it, it is necessary that she doesn’t mind the little lights, and one who possesses the day, must not mind the night, because the Sun is more than the little lights and the day holds more value than the night, and if she wants to mind the one and the other, (there) passes (the) peril that she doesn’t enjoy the whole fullness of the light of the Sun, nor does all that which the day can do, and it can be that by minding the lesser she loses the most. More so, that my Divine Will for one who lives in Him, wants to always be in the act of giving, and the creature must be always in the act of receiving and if she wants to mind to other, my Will is constrained to pause in giving, because he doesn’t find her attentive in receiving that which he wants to give, and this breaks the Divine current, and if you might know what it means, how attentive you would remain.

“Beyond this, you should know that as the creature does her acts in my Divine Will she enters into the divine banks, and there makes her traffics/(transactions) of infinite value, since she comes in our Volition, although she is little, but she comes as mistress and makes herself mistress of that which our divine banks possess, and she takes how much more she can take, and since she can not enclose within herself that which she takes, she leaves them in deposit, together with our own treasures, and we let her do it, we enjoy her traffics/(transactions), and such is our goodness that we give her the interest of the acquisitions that she has made. So that every time that she does her acts in our Volition, she opens the commerce between Heaven and earth, and puts in traffic our sanctity, power, goodness, love, and we in order not to remain behind our beloved creature, she climbs and we descend into the depths of the human volition, and opening our commerce we make the acquisition of the human volition, traffic so very wanted and pleasant to us, and thus we make competition and we conquer each other. Good daughter, to live in our Volition and to not have she who works with us and we with her, nor to have to say, nor to make ourselves felt, proves impossible to us; if this might be, it would not be our life anymore that we develop in the creature, but a way of saying, not a reality, life feels the absolute need to move itself, to make itself be felt, to breathe, to palpate, to speak, to give heat, how can a life be suffocated, to be, to live, and to not make itself be felt? This is impossible to God and the creature. Therefore do not alarm yourself when you feel that everything is silence in you, they are brief incidents, because it is I myself that feels the need to make myself felt, that my life exists in you. To be and not to make myself felt, it would be my cruelest martyrdom, I can do it for a little, but not always, hence do not give thought to yourself, live all abandoned in me and I will think to everything.”

* * *

September 10, 1933

How Our Lord disburses the price in order to buy his Divine Will in order to give him to creatures. The bath in the Divine Volition. The little sea of the soul and the great sea of God.

I was following the Divine Will in his acts, as much the Creation, as the Redemption, how everyone had a connection with the human will for the Divine one to have his post and since many human acts escaped receiving the sanctity of the divine act, not giving the first post to him, I thought to myself: how difficult it is that the Supreme Fiat extends his kingdom in the human acts of creatures because it seems that they don't even recognize the divine act that races in them, hence they don't appreciate him, nor do they give him the due supremacy, rather it seems that the human acts are as a people without king, without order and many, enemies of the divine acts who want to give life, that while he races in them, they don't recognize him. My God, I said to myself, how can it be that your Will will form his kingdom? And my always amiable Jesus surprising me all tenderness, drowned with love, as if he might need of an outlet, said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Will, and yet there is no doubt, it is more certain that my Volition will have his kingdom in the midst of creatures, as my descent from Heaven in earth was certain. Doing as king he had to constitute the kingdom to my Fiat, which man had rejected. Hence my Divinity united to my Humanity, descended from Heaven in order to buy my Divine Will for creatures; every act that I did, was a disbursement of the price that was needed, and that it gave to the Divine Majesty, in order to repurchase that which man had rejected and lost. So that my every act, suffering, tear and the death itself of (the) cross was none other than to disburse the sufficient price, in order to buy my Divine Will and to give it to creatures. Hence if the purchase was made, the price disbursed, the Divinity accepted it, the payment concluded with the sacrifice of my life, how shouldn't his kingdom come? Rather you should know that as my Humanity worked, suffered, prayed, thus my Divine Fiat descended in the depths of my human acts and formed his kingdom, and since I was the head, the greatest brother of all the human generations, the kingdom passed to my members and my smaller brothers. However first the Redemption was necessary, because this had to serve to till the ground of the human wills, to purify them, to prepare them, to embellish them, and to make them know how much they have cost this Man and God, the purchase that this divine Will has made in order to give him to creatures, so that they can receive the grace to be able to receive the great gift of being dominated by my Will; if there might not have been the Redemption first, it would lack the disbursement of the price, and the preparatory act for a good so great. Rather I say to you that first the Divinity had decreed the Redemption, that I might descend from Heaven, and the kingdom of my Will, the one having to serve to the disbursement of the other, because He being Divine and of infinite value, there was needed a Man God that might be able to pay and to acquire a Divine Volition, in order to give him again to whom had lost him, and if this were not so, I would not have moved from Heaven in order to come only to redeem, more so I took an interest to restitute the rights to our offended and rejected Will, than to the Redemption itself, and then I would not have done as God if I put in safety my creatures, and put my Will aside not giving him the rights due him and of restituting to him his kingdom in the midst of creatures. Therefore be certain, you suffer and pray for a purpose so holy."

After this I continued to immerse myself in the Divine Fiat, I felt the need to enter in his sea, in order to take the necessary foods in order to feed and conserve his same Will in my soul, the new act that He holds, and that also in me feels the need to have his continued new act, his infinite refreshments. Hence while I bathed in his divine sea my Dear Jesus added:

"Blessed daughter, your little tiny river of my Volition enclosed in you, feels the need to plunge itself in the great and immense sea of my Will. So that for one who lives in my Volition she holds for her littleness the little sea of my Volition inside of herself and the immense sea outside of herself, and the little one feels the need to plunge herself into the great one, in order to always enlarge her little sea more, and she does this every time that she wants to do acts in my Will, she comes to make her bath in the great one, and while she baths she takes the foods, the divine refreshments, our freshness, in a way that she feels all renewed to new divine life, and since my Will holds the communicative virtue, he doesn't let the creature go out from his great sea, if he has not filled her up even to the brim with new acts of his Will. You see therefore He is awaiting your acts in order to give you his bath and to communicate to you his new prerogatives that you didn't possess. And if you might know what it means to take a new bath in the sea of my Divine Volition; every time that one feels reborn to new life, she acquires new knowledge of He who has created her, she feels more re-loved by her Celestial Father, and arises in her new love for He whom she loves, in short it is the daughter that knows and wants to know her Father more and doesn't want to do anything without his Will, it is the Divine Father that calls his daughter in order to hold her together with Him, in order to form one (of) his models. Therefore be attentive and do not let any act escape that does not take possession in my Supreme Fiat."

September 17, 1933

How the Divine Will is the engine and the assailant, he gives life, he recalls to life and makes arise the memory of all. Divine encampment. How the motion of the Divine Will forms his life in the creature.

I am under the eternal waves of the Divine Volition and it seems to me that he wants that I might pay attention to these waves, recognize them, receive them in myself, love them, in order to say to me: I am the eternal Volition I am over you, I surround you everywhere, I invest your motion, your breath, your heartbeat, in order to make it mine, in order to make for me the breadth and thus be able to extend my life in you, I am the immense one that wants to restrict myself in the human littleness, I am the powerful one that delights to form my life of created weakness, I am the Holy one, that wants to sanctify everything, pay attention to me and you will see what I know how to do, and what I will do in your soul; but while my mind was all occupied with the Divine Volition, my always amiable Jesus, repeating his brief little visit, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, my Will is the engine that with iron constancy assails the creature from all sides, inside and outside in order to have her to himself, and to form the great prodigy of forming his divine life in the creature; It can be said that He has created her, in order to form and to repeat his life in her, and at whatever cost he wants the intent of it. And in all things he turns around her, and it seems that he says to her: ‘look at me it is I, know me, I come in order to form my life in you’; and doing as (an) assailant to her he assails her inside and outside, in a way that one who pays attention, feels my Divine Will regurgitate inside and outside of herself, that is forming the prodigy of his divine life which is not given to them to resist his power, and do you know what this Divine Will of mine does? he re-gives life, recalls everything to life, makes arise in this life all that which he has done, and what has been done of good by all creatures, he arouses the sweet remembrance of his works, as present and in act, as if he might repeat them, nothing escapes from this life, she feels the fullness of everything, and oh! how the creature feels happy, rich, powerful, holy, she feels outfitted with all the good acts of the others, and she loves for all, glorifies the Divine Fiat as if they might be hers, and my Volition feels his works re-given to him by her, hence the love, the glory of his divine works, and repeats with the memory the glory and the love of the other creatures. Oh! how many works put in oblivion, how many sacrifices, how many forgotten heroic acts, that have been done by the human generations, that they don’t think of anymore and hence there is neither the continuous repetition of the glory, nor one who renews the love of those acts, and my Divine Will forming his life in the human littleness, makes arise the memory of everything, in order to give and in order to receive everything, centralizes everything in her and forms his divine encampment. Therefore be attentive to receive these waves of my Volition, they re-pour themselves over you in order to change your fate, and if you receive them, you will be his fortunate creature.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will and I thought to myself: but how can this divine life be formed in the soul? and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, human life is composed of soul, of body, of distinct members the one from the other, but who is the primary motion of this life? the will, so that without it she could not do beautiful works, nor acquire science, nor be capable to teach them, therefore all the beauty of life would disappear from the creature, and if she possesses beauty, dowry, value, talent, it must be attributed to the motion of order that the will holds over human life. Now if my Divine Will takes this motion of order over the creature, he forms there inside of her divine life. So that provided that the creature submits herself to receive the motion of the order of my Will inside and outside of herself, as first motion of all her acts, already this divine life of mine becomes formed, and takes his regal post in the depth of the soul. Motion says life, and if the motion has beginning from a human will, one can call it human life, if instead the beginning is of my Will, one can call it divine life. You see how easy it is to form this life, provided that the creature wants it, I not to want it, nor do I ever ask impossible things from the creature, rather first I facilitate it, make it adaptable, practicable, and then I ask (for) it; and while I ask (for) it, in order to be more secure that she can do that which I want, I offer myself, to do together with her that which I want that she might do, I can say that I put myself at her disposition, so that she finds strength, light, grace, sanctity not human but divine, I don't go there, nor (give) that which I (can) give, nor (do) that which I (can) do, (but) when the creature does that which I want, I abound her so much, as to make her feel not the weight, but the happiness of the sacrifice, that my Divine Will knows how to give.

“And as the human life holds its life, its distinct members, its qualities, thus our Supreme Being, holds his most pure qualities, not material, because in us there doesn't exist matter that forms our life; united together sanctity, power, love, light, goodness, wisdom, omniscience of everything, immensity, et cetera, they form our Divine life, but who constitutes the motion, who rules, who develops with an incessant and eternal motion all our Divine qualities? our Will, He is the engine, the manager, that gives to each one of our qualities working life. So that if it were not for our Will, our power would be without exercise, our love without loving, and so on with all the rest. You see therefore how everything is in the Will, and therefore with giving it to the creature we give everything, and since they are our little images created by us, our breaths/[fiati], the little tiny flames of love scattered by us in all the creation, behold therefore we gave them a free will united to ours, in order to form our facsimiles wanted by us, there is no thing that glorifies us more, that loves us more, that makes us content, than to find our life, our image, our Will in our work created by us. Therefore we entrust all to the power of our Fiat, in order to obtain the intent.

“My daughter, you should know that as much in our Divinity, in the supernatural order, as in the natural order of creatures, there is a virtue in nature, an innate prerogative to want to produce life, images that resemble it, and hence a yearning of love, an ardent desire, to re-pour oneself into life and work that produces itself, in all the Creation there is no thing that doesn't resemble us, the Sky resembles us in the immensity, the stars in the multiplicity of our joys and infinite beatitudes, in the Sun there is the likeness of our light, in the air the likeness of our life, that gives itself to everyone, is of everyone, and no one can escape it, although they might want to, in the wind that while it makes itself felt now with vehemence, now as sweetly caressing creatures and all things, but they don't see it, our power and omniscience that we see all, we hear all and as in fist we enclose all, yet they don't see it, in short there is no thing (in) which there is not a similarity of ours, all our works give of us, they praise us, and each one holds the office to make known each quality of their Creator. Now in man, it was not only work that we made, but human life and divine life that we created in him, therefore we yearn, we want, we long to reproduce in him our life and image, we arrive even to drown him with love, and when he does not let himself be drown, because he is free by himself, we arrive to persecute him with love, not letting him find peace in all that which escapes from us, not finding ourselves in him, we stir them (to) incessant war, because we want our beautiful image, our life reproduced in him. And since all things are made and grafted by us, also in the natural order there is this virtue of wanting to produce things and similar life, you see a mother generates a child, all her anxieties and desires is that she wants it similar to herself, and she longs to see it in the light, similar to its parents, and if the child is similar to them, oh how content they are, they make a boast of it, they want to make it seen by everyone, they raise it with their customs, in their ways, in short this child becomes their preoccupation and their glory, but if instead it is dissimilar from the parents, ugly, deformed, oh how they remain embittered, tormented, and they arrive to say with highest sorrow: it seems that he is not our child, of our blood; they would almost like to hide it in order to not to let him be seen by anyone, feeling humiliated and confused, and this baby will be the torture of their parents for all life. All things possess the virtue to reproduce similar things, the seed produces other seeds, the flower other flowers, the bird other little birds, and so on with the rest, not producing similar things is to go against divine and human nature. Therefore not having the creature similar to us, is one of our greatest sorrows, and only one who lives of our Will, can be joy, and bearer of glory and of triumph for our creative work.”

* * *

September 24, 1933

Our Lord’s humanity, sanctuary and custodian of all the works of creatures. How love never says enough.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues, nor can I do less than to feel the murmur of his life, it would be to not have life anymore, not feeling his murmur, that murmurs and gives light, murmurs and strengthens, murmurs and makes you feel his Life, that warms and transforms you in his. Divine Will how very amiable, admirable you are, how not to love you? Whence I followed his works, which as I followed them thus they re-flowed over me in order to give me love, and in order to say to me we are your works, done for you, take us, possess us and make them yours, so that in that which you do you hold ready the model of ours; and while I followed the works of the Redemption, my sweet Jesus detaining me, said to me:

“My good daughter, in all our works there was always an excess of love toward man, and an excess gave me the push to make another of it. Hence it was not enough to me to descend from Heaven in earth, in order to do it again; every act that I did, every suffering, I can say also every breath, it was directed to her, I called her in my omniscience, I squeezed her in my arms, I molded her again in order to renew her, and giving them the new life that I had brought from Heaven, I united her with me, in order to put her in the progeny of my Celestial Father. But this was not enough for me, in order to hold her more secure I made of my Humanity the depositary of all the works, sacrifices, and steps of man. Look at me how I hold everything enclosed in me, and this brings me to love them doubly in every act that she does. With incarnating myself in the bosom of the Immaculate Queen, I formed this Humanity of mine and constituted myself head of the human family, in order to unite all creatures with me, and to make them my members, hence all that which they do is mine, in the sanctuary of my Holy Humanity I enclose everything, I guard the little goods as well as the great, but do you know why? passing through me, I give them the value as if they might be my works, prayers and sacrifices, the virtue of the Head descends in the members, it makes a mixture of everything, and I give the value to them of my merits. So that the creature finds herself in me, and I as head find myself in them. But do you believe that my love said or says enough, Ah! no, it will never say enough, the nature of the Divine love is to always form new inventions of love, in order to give love and receive love, if this might be it would put forth a limit, and enclose in our divine circle our love; but no, ours is immense, and by his nature he must always love, behold therefore to my Humanity I want to make followed the large field of my Divine Will, which will do incredible things for love of creatures. Behold therefore his knowledges, his volition to reign, if he doesn't reign, how can he lavish, show off in his surprises of love. Therefore be attentive and you will see what my Will knows how to do."

* * *

October 1, 1933

Enchanting scenes that Jesus enjoys in the soul that lives in his Will. Continuous call that they make (to) God and the creature.

The Divine Volition never leaves me, it seems to me that he is always inside and outside of me, as in (the) act of surprising me, that he wants to put his act in all that which I do, if I pray, if I suffer, if I work and even if I sleep, he wants to give me his divine rest in my sleep, he wants to always give himself (something) to do, and in every thing he calls me with saying to me: make me descend into the depths of your acts, and I will make you climb into the heights of my acts, we will make competition, you to climb and I to descend; but who can say that which the Divine Will makes felt in my soul? his excessive love, his condescension, his continuous occupying himself over my poor soul; but while I was under the empire of the Divine Volition, re-pouring himself over me, my Highest Good Jesus, surprising me said to me:

"My good daughter, there is no scene that more moves me and enraptures me than to see the human littleness under the empire of my Will, the Divine in the human, the great in the littleness, the strong in the weak, that hiding themselves the one in the other, to conquer each other, it is so beautiful, so enchanting, that I find the pure joys, the divine happiness that the creature can give me, although I see that underhandedly, she hands me my same Will, and she hands me it through means of the channel of the human will, if you might know how much I delight myself, in order to make me pleased you would make yourself conquered always by my Will, I can say that I leave Heaven, while I remain in order to come to enjoy the pure joys that my Divine Will in the little circle of the creature in earth knows how to give me. You should know that one who does my Divine Will, and lets him flow his Life in her acts, continually calls God and all his attributes, God feels himself called always by the creature, now she calls him because she wants his power, now because she wants his love, now because she wants his sanctity, his light, his goodness, his imperturbable peace, in short she always calls him because she wants of his, and God is always waiting in order to give that which she asks for, and in order to repay her, he feels called and calls her in order to entrust her and say to her: 'what else do you want of my Divine Being, take that which you want, rather as you call me already I prepare (for) you my power, my love, my light, my sanctity, what is needed in your act.' So that God calls the soul and the soul calls God, and this always calling each other in order to ask and receive and God in order to give, it forms the life of my Will in the creature, matures her, makes her grow and forms the sweet enchantment of her Creator himself. A continued act encloses such power that God doesn't know how to release himself from the creature, nor she from God, rather they feel the irresistible need to remain bound the one with the other, and only my Will knows how to produce these continuous acts that never cease, and they form the true character of the living in my Will.

Instead a mutable character, a broken work, it is the true sign of living of human volition, which doesn't know how to give neither firmness, nor peace, and doesn't know how to produce anything other than thorns and bitterness."

* * *

October 15, 1933

Mastery and Divine art. The little Paradise of God. Labyrinth of love, generative virtue of the Fiat. God in the power of the creature.

My abandonment in the Fiat continues, I feel his omnipotent puff that blowing (on) me wants to make his life in me grow, magnify, he wants to fill me so much as to not let my human being (be) but only the veil that covers him. Whence I thought to myself: but what comes to this Holy Volition, that has such interest to form his life in the creature, that he moves Heaven and earth in order to obtain the intent, and what difference is there between the Divine Will as life, and between Divine Will as effect? And my always amiable Jesus, squeezing me between his arms, with an indescribable goodness said to me:

"My blessed daughter, there is nothing more beautiful, more holy, more pleasant and that more pleases and glorifies us, than forming the life of our Divine Volition in the creature; in her becomes formed a little Paradise, where our Supreme Being is delighted to descend in order to make his sojourn there. You see, instead of one Paradise we hold two, in which we find our harmonies, beauty that enraptures us, pure joys that double our happiness because of having formed one more of our lives in the little circle of the creature. In this Paradise for how ever little, for how much (a) creature can be capable, we find everything, everything is ours, indeed we find the littleness that enamors us more, and we contemplate our Divine art, that in the little one, we have with the virtue of our power, enclosed the great one, we can say that with our labyrinth of love we have transmuted things, the great in the little and the little in the great, without a divine prodigy of ours we could not form, neither our life, nor our Paradise in the creature, and does it seem little to you to have one life more of ours, and a Paradise doubled at our disposition in order to felicitate us all the more? You should know that neither the Sky, nor the Sun, nor all the Creation costs us so much, nor have we put forth neither so much mastery and art, nor so much love, as much as we put forth in forming our life all of our Will in the creature, in order to form for us one Paradise more, where to master our beautiful ease, and to enjoy our delights. The Sky, the Sun, the sea, the wind and everything, narrate He who has created them, they show us, they make us known, they glorify us, but they don't give us one of our lives, nor do they form for us another Paradise of ours, rather they serve she or he, that our Paternal goodness has taken the pledge to form our life in her, and it costs us so much, that our Fiat uses his working and repetitive virtue of his continuous Fiat over his fortunate creature in order to overshadow her with his power, in a way that one Fiat doesn't await the other, in a way that if he blows on her he says Fiat, if he touches her he repeats Fiat, if he embraces her he uses his working Fiat and goes molding her and as kneading in her his divine life. One can say that with his breath he forms his life in the creature and with his creative virtue regenerates her and forms there his Little Paradise, and what don't we find in Her? It is enough to tell you that we find all that which we want, and this is everything for us. You see therefore the great difference that there is between the Divine Will as life, and that as effect; as life all the goods, the virtues, the prayer, the love, the sanctity, they convert themselves in the creature into nature, they are risings that form in her, that always rise in a way that she feels in herself the nature of love, of patience, of sanctity, as she naturally feels the mind that thinks, the eye that sees, the mouth that speaks, (with) not one effort in this, because God has given them in (her) nature, and she feels herself mistress to do with them whatever use she wants. Thus with possessing the Divine Will as life, everything is holy, everything is sacred, the difficulties finish, the inclinations to evil don't exist anymore, and in spite that she changes action, and now does one thing, and now another, the unitive virtue of my Will unites them together and they form one act alone, with the distinction of so many varied beauties for how many acts she has done, and she arrives to feel that her God is all hers, even to feel that in the excess of his love he has given himself into the power of the creature, in virtue of the Divine Will that she possesses as life, she feels him as her birth and raises him with such finesse of love and profound adoration, that she remains as naturally absorbed in her Creator, that is already all hers, and such is the fullness of love, the happiness that she feels, that not being able to contain it she would like to give the Divine Will to everyone as life in order to render everyone happy and holy.

“Not so, for one who doesn't possess him as life, but only as virtue and effect, everything is difficulty and she feels the good by time and circumstances, the circumstance ceases and she feels the void of the good, and this void produces inconstancy, variety of character, tiredness, she feels the unhappiness of the human volition, she neither enjoys peace, nor does she know how to give peace to anyone, she feels in herself the good as if she might feel dislocated limbs or partly detached that she is not mistress with them serving her, and she must be subject to the others in order to make herself serve, not living of my Will is making oneself enslaved and to feel the whole weight of slavery.”

* * *

October 22, 1933

Jesus finds his Heaven in the creature; his Celestial Mama and everyone in the All and the All in everyone. The Divine Will makes himself revealer and surrenders his Divine Being to the creature.

I felt little, little, so much so as to not know how to move a step, and having made holy Communion, I felt the need as child to shelter myself in the arms of Jesus, in order to tell him “I love you, I love you a great deal”, not knowing how to say other, because too little an ignorant one but my sweet Jesus waited that I might say other, and I added: “Jesus I love you together with the love of our Celestial Mama”. And Jesus said to me:

“How sweet, refreshing it is to me, to feel myself loved together with the love of the daughter and our Mama, I feel her maternal tenderness, her enthusiasms of love, her chaste embraces, her ardent kisses, that pouring themselves in the daughter, Mama and daughter love me, they kiss me and they squeeze me between their arms with one single embrace, to find the daughter together with my Celestial Mama, that wants to love me, and she loves me as my Mama loves me, they are my most dear delights, my outlets of love, and I find the most pleasant exchange to the so many excesses of my love. But tell me, together with whom else do you want to love me?”

And he became silent, waiting that I might tell him together with whom else I would like to love him. And I, almost a little embarrassed added: “My divine Jesus, I want to love you together with the Father and with the Holy Spirit”; but it seemed that he was not yet content, and I: “I want to love you together with all the Angels and Saints”; and He: “and with whom else?” “With all the wayfarers and even up to the last creature that will exist upon the earth, I want to bring everyone and everything to you, even the Sky, the Sun, the wind, the sea in order to love you together with everyone.” And Jesus all love, that it seemed that he could not contain the flames, added:

“My daughter, behold my Heaven in the creature, the Sacrosanct Trinity, who surrenders his love in order to love me together with her, the Angels and Saints, who make competition to surrender their love in order to love me together with her, this is the great act, to bring everyone in the All that is God and the All in everyone. Your littleness, your infantile ways in my Divine Will, embrace everything and everyone, (and) you want to give me everything, even the same adorable Trinity, and since you are little, no one wants to deny you anything, rather they unite themselves with you and they love together with the tiny little one. And with bringing me everyone in the All and with loving me, you diffuse the All in everyone, my love being bond of union and of inseparability, I find everything in the soul, my Paradise, my works and everyone, and I can say nothing lacks to me, neither Heaven, nor my Celestial Mama, nor the cortege of the Angels and Saints, all are with me, and all love me. These are (the) stratagems and loving industries of one who loves me, that calls everyone, to ask love from everyone, in order to love me and make me loved by everyone.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Volition and my sweet Jesus added:

“My blessed daughter, one who possesses my Will as Life, feels in herself the Divine motion, God moves in the Sky, and she feels his motion, our motion is work, is step, is word, is everything, and since our Will is one with that which the creature possesses, she feels flow inside of herself the same motion with which God moves himself, and hence divine the work, the step, the word, that which my same Will does in ourselves, he does in the creature. In a way that she not only feels inside of herself the life, but the nobility and the way of He who has created her, so that she doesn’t feel the need of asking him, because she feels herself possessor, our Will occupies her so much that he gives her his love in order to make her love, his word in order to make her speak, his motion in order to make her move and work, and oh how easy it is that she knows that which he wants from her, there are no secrets, nor curtains for one who lives in our Will, but everything is revealed, we can say that we can not hide ourselves from her, because our same Will already reveals us, who can hide themselves from themselves? not to know his secrets and that which he wants to do? no one, from the others he can hide himself, but from himself, it will be impossible (with) them. Such is our Will, he makes himself revealer and puts to light the creature of that which he does, of that which he wants to do, and he makes for her the great surprises of our Divine Being. But who can tell you where the creature can arrive, and what she can do with possessing our Will as life? The true transformation and consummation happens with the creature in God, and God takes the active part, and says: ‘everything is mine and I do everything in this creature.’ It is the true Divine wedding in which God surrenders his Divine Being to his beloved creature. Instead one who lives of human will it happens as (to) one who descending from the nobility of his family takes for a bride a rude, rough, badly brought up one, this one little by little will lose his noble and polite ways, and will acquire boorish and rough ways, as not to recognize himself anymore. What distance between one who lives of Divine Will and between one who lives of human will, the first ones form the celestial kingdom upon the earth, enriched with goodness, with peace, with graces, they can be called the noble part. The second ones form the kingdom of revolutions, of discords, of vices, that don't have peace, and they don't know how to give peace."

* * *

October 30, 1933

The Divine Will guide of the soul and she the gatherer of the works of her Creator. How one who lives in the Divine Will receives the transmission of that which has been done first in God and then communicated to her.

I was doing my round in the Creation and it seemed to me that all created things wanted the great honor of being offered as homage and glory to their Creator, and I passed from one thing to the other and I felt so rich, that I had so many things to give to He who so very loves me, and that while he had done everything for me, I could give everything to God, in order to be able to say to him: 'I love you through means of your works, which are pregnant with your love and they teach me to love you'; but while I did this my Highest Good Jesus surprising me, all goodness said to me:

"How beautiful it is to find our daughter in the midst of our works, we feel that she wants to put herself in competition with us, we have created everything for her in order to love her, and we have given her everything, so that she might possess them and might enjoy them and they might be the narrators of our power and the bearers of our love, and therefore she in every created thing, feels our love that embraces her, kisses her and that molding her tells her strongly and tenderly 'I love you', she feels our embraces of love that we (take) her to our Divine bosom, and she in the midst of so much love loses herself, is confounded and in order to make competition does our same way, that we do in creating so many things in order to descend to her, and putting herself en route in every created thing, she feels what we do for her and how we love her, and she repeats for us that which we do for her, she repeats our loving embraces for us, our ardent kisses, our enthusiasms of love, and oh, our contentment in seeing that the creature climbs to us, and brings us that which we gave her and give her with so much love. Our Will does for her (as) guide and carries her even to us, in order to make the exchange given of that which we have given her. So that one who lives in our Will is the gatherer of all our works and she carries them to us in our womb in order to say to us: 'I love you with your same love, I glorify you through means of your power, you have given me everything and I give you everything.'"

Whence I continued my round in the Divine Will and arrived in Eden I thought to myself: oh how I would like the love, the adoration of innocent Adam, in order to be able to also love my God with his same love with which the first creature created by Him loved him; and my sweet Jesus surprising me said to me:

"My blessed daughter, for one who lives in my Divine Will, she finds in Him that which she wants, because all that which one does in Him, nothing goes forth outside, but everything remains inside together with Him, inseparable from Him rather they form his same life. Hence all that which Adam did in my Divine Will, he could carry nothing with himself, at the most the happy memory of how he had loved, of the seas of love that inundated him, also of the pure joys that he had enjoyed, and of that which he had done in our Fiat, that served to embitter him more; one act done in our Will, one love, one adoration formed in Him, is so very great that the creature doesn't hold the capacity, nor

(the) post where to put it, therefore only in my Will can these acts be done and possessed. Whence one who enters in Him, finds in act all that which innocent Adam did in Him, his love, his tenderness of son toward his Celestial Father, the Divine Paternity that overshadowed his son from all sides in order to love him, she makes everything hers and loves, adores and repeats that which innocent Adam did, my Divine Will does not change, nor does he mutate, what was, such it is and will be, provided that the creature enters in Him and has life together with Him, he doesn't put forth limits, nor does he assess the confinements, rather he says: 'take that which you want, love me as you want, in my Fiat that which is yours is mine', only outside of Him begins the divisions, the separations, the distances and the beginning of life of yours, and mine. Rather you should know that all that which the creature should do in our Will becomes done first in God, and she in the act of doing them receives the transmission of the love and of the divine acts in her, and continues to do that which has been done in our Supreme Being. How beautiful are these lives that receive the transmission of that which is done first in us, they are our most beautiful works, the magnificences of the Creation, the Sky, the Sun remains behind them, they surpass all, they are absolute sanctities decided by us, that can not escape us, we give them so much of ours, that we drown them with our goods, in a way that one doesn't find the void to think if she should correspond or not, because the current of Divine light and love hold her besieged and as fused in her Creator, and we give her such knowledge of things, that serves the free will so that she does nothing forced but of spontaneous and resolved will. Therefore these celestial creatures are our occupation, our continuous work, they hold us always occupied because our Will doesn't know how to be in idleness, because He is Life, work and perennial motion. Hence one who lives in Him always holds to do, and always gives her Creator to do."

* * *

November 10, 1933

How the Divine Will doesn't change neither action, nor way, that which he does in Heaven, he does in earth, his act is universal and unique. One who doesn't live of my Will, reduces the Divine craftsman into idleness, and escapes from his creative hands.

My poor mind it seems that it doesn't know how to do other than to think of the Divine Will, I feel a powerful strength over me, that doesn't give me time to think and to want other, than only that Fiat that is everything for me. Whence I thought to myself: oh how I would like to do and live of Divine Will, as one does and lives in Heaven; and my sweet Jesus surprising me with his brief little visit said to me:

"My blessed daughter, in my Celestial Country (there) reigns the unique and universal act, one is the will of everyone, that which the one wants the other wants, no one changes action nor will, every blessed feels my Volition as their own life and with everyone having one will alone it forms the substance of the happiness of all Heaven. More so that my Divine Will doesn't know how to do, nor can he do, broken, but continuous and universal acts, and since in Heaven He reigns with his full triumph and with the totality of his dominion, everyone feels as in nature his universal life, and they are full even to the brim with all the goods that He possesses, at most there can be according to the capacity of each one, and of the good that they have done in life, but no one can change, neither will, nor action, nor love. The power of my Divine Will holds all the blessed absorbed, unified, fused in himself, as if they were one alone. But do you believe that the universal act of him and his palpating life and communicativeness to every creature extends itself only in Heaven? no, no, that which he does in Heaven, he does in earth, he neither changes action, nor way, his universal act extends itself to every wayfarer, and one who lives in Him feels his Divine life, his sanctity, his uncreated heartbeat, that while he constitutes himself life of the creature, with his incessant motion he re-pours himself always in her, without ever ceasing, and the happy creature that lets him reign, she feels him everywhere, inside and outside, his universal act holds her surrounded from all sides, in a way that she can not go outside of my Will, and his continuous giving holds her always occupied to receive, so that wanting him she also doesn't have time to do and think of other. Hence the creature can say and can be convinced, that as one lives in Heaven thus she lives in earth, only there is the difference of place, but one is the love, one is the will, one the action. But do you know who doesn't feel the life of Heaven in her soul, and doesn't feel the universal act, the unique strength of my Will? One who does not let themselves be dominated by Him, not giving him liberty to let him reign, this so that action, love, will, change every moment; but it is not my Will that changes, He can not change, but it is the creature that changes, because living of human will she doesn't hold the virtue, nor the capacity to receive the universal and unique act of my Will, and (the) poor little one feels mutable, without firmness in the good, always an empty reed that doesn't hold strength to resist every little puff of wind, the circumstances, the meetings, creatures serve as wind in order to turn her around, now to do one action, now another, now to love one thing, now another, and therefore one sees her now sad, now happy, now all fervor, and now all coldness, now inclined to virtues, now to the passions, in short, as the circumstance ceases thus ceases the act in them. Oh! human will, how weak, changeable, poor you are, without my Will, because there is lacking to you the life of the good that should animate your will, therefore the life of Heaven is distant from you. My daughter, there is no greater disgrace, nor evil that merits more weeping, than doing one's own volition."

Whence I followed to think: but why does God have such interest that one does the Divine Will? and my always amiable Jesus added:

"My daughter, do you want to know why I have such interest that one does my Will? because this was the purpose why I created the creature, and her not doing it destroys for me the purpose for which I created her, she takes away from me my rights that with all reason and Divine wisdom I have over her, and she puts herself against me, doesn't it seem grave to you that the children put themselves against the Father? and then I created the creature so that she might be and might form the prime material in my hands, in order to be able to delight and form of this material my greatest works and my most beautiful works, so that they might serve me in order to adorn my Celestial Country and to receive from them my greatest glory, now this material of the creature escapes from my hands, she put herself against me and with so many materials that I have formed, I can not do my established works, and they reduce me into idleness, because my Will not being in them, they do not lend themselves to receive my works, they become as hard stones, that for how many blows can be given, they don't have the softness to receive the form that one wants to give, they are shattered, they are reduced into dust under the blows, but it is not given me to form the littlest object, and I remain as that poor craftsman, that having formed so many prime materials, gold, iron, stone, takes them in his hands, in order to form the most beautiful statues that he had established, and these materials don't lend themselves, rather they put themselves against him, and is it not given him to develop his beautiful art, so that the materials serve only to encumber the space, but not to complete his great designs, and oh, how the idleness weighs on this poor craftsman. Such am I, because my Will not being in them, she is not capable of receiving my works, there is no one who makes them soft, nor one who cooks them well in order to receive my creative and operative virtue, and if you might know what it means to know how to do, to be able to do, to have materials in order to do, without being able to do anything, you would you cry with me for a such sorrow, and for an affront so grave, does it seem little to you to see so many creatures that encumber the earth, and because lacking in them the working life of my Will, it is not given me to develop my art and to do that which I want? Therefore take to heart to make only my Divine Will live in your soul, because He alone knows how to dispose souls to receive the whole ability of my art, and thus you won't put your Jesus in idleness, but I will be the diligent worker, in order to form of you that which I want."

Thanks be to God always and forever

*The Kingdom of the Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 33

Contents

November 19, 1933 .....	p. 1
How one who disposes herself to do the Divine Will forms the passport, the way, the train/retinue, how Jesus wants to re-make himself in the creature. The Signer and the Celestial motor.
November 26, 1933 .....	p. 2
How the works of God prepare the table to the creature and living in his Divine Volition she does as (a) queen in the seas of the Supreme Being. How one who does her volition is set apart by everyone and remains alone, and remains the (abandoned one)[delelitta] and the (lost one) of the Creation.
December 10, 1933 .....	p. 4
The first word that Adam pronounced, that was the first lesson that God gave him. The Divine Will working in man.
December 18, 1933 .....	p. 5
How the creature has been formed by God ab eterno, beloved with eternal love. How the human will is the deranged one of the works of her Creator.
January 2, 1934 .....	p. 6
When the soul does the Divine Will, God can freely do that which he wants in her, work the greatest things, because he finds capacity, space to that which he wants to give to creatures.
January 14, 1934 .....	p. 7
Sweet, enchantment, on both parts of God and of the creature. How she acquires the power to make hers the Divine Will. The sufferings smile before the glory, the triumphs, the conquests. Jesus hidden by the sufferings.
January 28, 1934 .....	p. 8
Fraternization between the Supreme Being and the creature in earth, fraternization in the glory. Power over Jesus himself. How one who works in the Divine Will acquires the united, communicative and diffusive strength.
February 4, 1934 .....	p. 10
Love of God hidden in the Virgin. The Divine Paternity gives her the Divine Maternity and generates in Her the human generations as her children. How the Divine immensity renders all his works inseparable.
February 10, 1934 .....	p. 12
One who lives in my Divine Will becomes raised in his arms, which with his fortitude forms her the little victor. She is the little Queen, that repeats his life with her Jesus in (her) heart.
February 24, 1934 .....	p. 14

*The creature with doing her will loses the head, the divine reason, the order, the regime.
Jesus is head of the creature.*

March 4, 1934 ..... p. 14

The acts done in the Divine Will form the ways, they embrace the centuries.

Who forms the prison. The Divine Engineer and the insuperable Craftsman.

March 11, 1934 ..... p. 15

How one who doesn't live in the Divine Will it puts him in solitude and reduces him into silence.

Who is the Temple of God. The Divine Will Temple of the soul. The little Host.

Sign in order to know if one lives in the Divine Will.

March 25, 1934 ..... p. 17

How prayer in the Divine Will makes itself spokesman of the acts of the Divine Fiat.

How the humanity of Our Lord possesses the generative virtue.

How Divine Love consists in this to be reproduced in everyone and in each one.

April 28, 1934 ..... p. 19

How the Divine Will in every act that he does, calls all creatures in order to give the good that his act contains. Example: the sun.

May 6, 1934 ..... p. 20

First purpose of the Redemption, to restore the life of the Divine Will in the creature.

How God does the minor things before giving the post to his greater works.

May 12, 1934 ..... p. 22

Extreme need of the abandonment in the Divine Volition, virtue of It. How everyone turns around God; only the human will goes wandering and is the disturber of everyone.

May 20, 1934 ..... p. 23

How the Divine Will devours everything as within a single breath/[fiato] all the acts done in Him and of it he forms one alone. How the Divine Will forms the cast-offs of the Humanity of Our Lord, and makes it present to creatures.

June 16, 1934 ..... p. 25

The human will (was) created Queen in the midst of Creation.

How all flows between the fingers of our Creator.

June 24, 1934 ..... p. 26

One who lives in our Will feels the Divine heartbeat in her works, knows his designs, works together and is the welcome one in our Fiat.

June 29, 1934 ..... p. 27

The attention, eye of the soul. How in the Divine Will there are no blind ones.

The magnet, the mintage of the Divine image in our acts.

How God, makes himself Prisoner of the creature.

July 8, 1934 ..... p. 28

What is needed in order to form the life of the Divine Will in the creature.

Veil that hides him, exchange of life.

July 15, 1934 ..... p. 29

One who lives in the Divine Will puts herself in (the) condition of receiving and of being able to always give to her Creator. How one who prays disburses the coin, forms the void, and acquires the capacity to possess that which she asks.

July 20, 1934 ..... p. 31

All that which goes forth from God is all innocent and holy.

How the Creation is one single act of Divine Will.

Who is the triumphant one in the space of the universe.

July 24, 1934 ..... p. 32

How it is established, by God the truths that must be manifested on the Divine Will.

How He bilocates, repeats, traps Divine life.

How the Creation didn't finish, but continues.

August 5, 1934 ..... p. 33

Story of the love of God, the Creation enclosed in man. Sorrowful notes in the Divine love.

September 24, 1934 ..... p. 35

How one who lives in the Divine Will becomes members of Him and acquires the inseparability of all the works of her Creator.

October 7, 1934 ..... p. 36

Reciprocal love between God and the creature exchange of action, labyrinth of love, in which one becomes put who lives in my Fiat. God sower of the field of souls.

October 21, 1934 ..... p. 37

How the characteristic and property of the Divine Will is spontaneity.

How all the beauty, the sanctity, the greatness is in It.

November 5, 1934 ..... p. 39

True love in the creature forms the little post in the Divine works, in order to be able to enclose the life of the Divine Will.

November 18, 1934 ..... p. 40

Love of God, in the Creation, the glory that it would have given if it might have reason.

Sacrifice that love makes of his glory, his continuous cry.

The army, armed with love, exchanges of love between God and the creature.

November 25, 1934 .....	p. 41
Living in the Divine Will is as one might live between Father and child.
Her acts are visits to the Celestial Father.
Divine abyss in which one who lives in the Divine Will is put.
January 20, 1935 .....	p. 42
Living in the Divine Volition makes the Paternity of her Creator felt and she feels the right to be his daughter. Three prerogatives that one acquires who lives in Him.
February 24, 1935 .....	p. 43
The reason, the eye of the soul, and light that makes known the beauty of her good works. What are the rights of the Divine Will, how in Him, there are not intentions but acts.
March 10, 1935 .....	p. 46
That which one does in the Divine Will doesn't remain in the depths of the earth, but departs for Heaven, in order to take the regal place in the Celestial Country.
March 19, 1935 .....	p. 47
The Divine Will and the human volition, two spiritual powers, facility of whom wants to possess as life; how Jesus doesn't teach, nor wants impossible things.
April 12, 1935 .....	p. 48
One who lives in the Divine Will leaves her cast-offs, reduces herself into nothing, and the All forms her life in the nothing. How the Celestial Queen loves us in her conception, prodigies that the Divine Volition did in Her.
May 14, 1935 .....	p. 50
One who does the Divine Will doesn't have need of laws, one who lives in Him gives work to everyone, to the Celestial Father, to the Celestial Mother, and to Jesus himself.
May 26, 1935 .....	p. 51
Fear(,) human virtue, love (,) Divine virtue. How trust enraptures Jesus.
Who does the Divine Will is found with all the Divine works and remains confirmed in Him.
May 31, 1935 .....	p. 53
How the Divine Power has no limits. Certainty that the Kingdom of the Divine Will must come.
How the Redemption and his kingdom are inseparable.
June 6, 1935 .....	p. 54
How who lives in the Volition of God holds God himself in her power.
The Queen of Heaven turns through all the nations in order to put in safety her children.
June 10, 1935 .....	p. 55
Rain of love that Our Lord pours from within created things over creatures, and how he bilocates

himself in her and sees himself equaled in his love.

June 17, 1935 ..... p. 57

How God, with giving us free human will put himself at our disposition, to feel him to her, to adapt himself with her, as if he might have need of the creature. Loving conditions in which God put himself for love of creatures.

July 8, 1935 ..... p. 58

Inseparability of one who lives in the Divine Will with her Creator. The Queen of Heaven together with Jesus in instituting the Most Holy Sacrament, the children of the Divine Will will be suns and stars that will crown the Sovereign Celestial Lady.

July 14, 1935 ..... p. 60

*Certainty of the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth.
Impetuous wind in order to purify the generations.
The Queen of Heaven put at (the) head of this Kingdom.*

July 21, 1935 ..... p. 61

The most intimate and most sorrowful sufferings of Jesus are the anticipations, his inventions, deliriums, contrivances of love.

September 28, 1935 ..... p. 62

*The Divine love invests every act of the creature.
How God, in all his works calls everyone and does good to everyone.
How one forms the Divine life in the creature, how one feeds him and makes him grow.*

October 4, 1935 ..... p. 64

All the glory, the love, is in the power to say with facts: I am a continuous act of Will of my Creator. Necessity of diversity of offices and action.

October 7, 1935 ..... p. 65

*One who doesn't live of Will of God forms his living Purgatory upon the earth, and in prison.
The Divine love. An impetuous tempest, excruciating scenes.*

October 13, 1935 ..... p. 66

So much is the love of Jesus that he feels the need to relieve himself with the creature. He in the middle between his Celestial Father and creatures and he remains stricken with love for them.

October 20, 1935 ..... p. 68

Love and the Divine Will go equal steps, the love forms the prime adaptable material in order to form the Life of God in the Creature.

October 27, 1935 ..... p. 68

*How the Divine Will descends in the human act and creates his palpating life in it.
How he anticipates the purgatory of one who lives in his Will.*

November 4, 1935 .....	p. 70
Who lives in the Divine Will possesses her Jesus in a perennial way and He repeats the miracle that he worked in instituting the Most Holy Sacrament of receiving Himself.
November 17, 1935 .....	p. 71
All that which one does in the Divine Will takes its post in God.
November 24, 1935 .....	p. 71
True love always calls He whom it loves and encloses Him within.
How all is veiled without the Divine Will. Example.

Volume 33

J.M.J.

Fiat!!!

In the Will of God! Thanks be to God

[In Voluntate Dei! D. Gratias]

November 19, 1933

How one who disposes herself to do the Divine Will forms the passport, the way, the train/retinue, how Jesus wants to re-make himself in the creature. The Signer and the Celestial motor.

My Sovereign Celestial Jesus and my great Lady Queen of Heaven, come to my help, put this tiny little ignorant one in the midst of your Most Holy Hearts and while I write, my dear Jesus do as (a) prompter to me and my Celestial Mama as her daughter, carry my hand on the paper, in a way that while I write, I will be in the midst of Jesus and my Mama, so that, not even one word more will I write, of that which they say to me and want.

With this trust in heart, I give beginning to write in (the) thirty-third volume, perhaps it will be the last, but I don't know, although I have all hope, that all of Heaven might have compassion on the little exiled one, and that soon they will repatriate her with them, but of the rest Fiat! Fiat!

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Will, life and center of my poor existence and my sweet Jesus repeating his fugitive little visit, said to me:

“My good daughter, you should know, that as the soul is disposed to do my Divine Will, it forms the passport in order to enter into the interminable confines of the kingdom of the Fiat; but do you know, who lends you the material in order to form it, and who lends himself to sign it and to give it the value of passage into my kingdom?

“My daughter, the act of disposing oneself to do my Will is so very great, that my life itself, my merits, form the paper, the characters, and your Jesus makes the signature in order to make it known, and to give her free entrance. One can say that all Heaven races in help of whom wants to do my Will, and I feel such love that I take (the) post in the fortunate creature and I feel loved by her, by my same Will. Now seeing myself loved by her, by my same Will, my love makes itself jealous, and not wanting to lose not even one breath, one heartbeat of (the) love of this creature. Imagine yourself my (solicitude)[premuta], the defenses that I take, the helps that I give, the loving stratagems, who uses them, in a word I want to remake myself with her, and in order to remake myself I expose Myself, in order to form another Jesus in the creature, therefore I put forth all my Divine art, in order to obtain the intent; I don't spare anything, I will do everything, give everything, where my Will reigns, I can not deny anything, because I would deny it to myself.

“Now disposing oneself to do my Will, forms the passport, the beginning act forms the way, that one must cross in Him, way of Heaven, holy, divine, therefore to one who enters in Him I whisper to the ear of (her) heart: forget the earth, already it is yours no more, from now on you will see (none) other than Heaven, my kingdom has no confines, hence your walk will be long, therefore it is appropriate that with your acts you expedite the step, in order to form (for) you many ways and thus take many of the goods that are in my kingdom. Whence the beginning act, it forms the way, performing it forms the train/retinue and when I see the train/retinue formed, I do as (a) motor in order to put her in (a) fast walk, and oh how beautiful it is, delightful to walk in these ways, that the creature has done in my Will. These acts done in my Will are centuries that contain merits and incalculable goods, because there is the Divine motor that walks, which has so much speed that in the minutes it encloses the centuries, and renders the creature so rich, beautiful and holy, as to give boast to us, before the whole Celestial Court, showing her as the greatest prodigy of his creative art.

“Beyond this as the creature goes forming her act in my Divine Will, thus the veins of the soul are emptied of that which is human and I could say there flows a Divine blood, which makes felt in substance, the Divine virtues in the creature that hold (the) virtue to flow almost as blood in the same life that animates her Creator that renders them inseparable the one from the other, so much so that who wants to find God, can find him in his post of honor in the creature and who wants to find the creature, will find her in the Divine center.”

* * *

November 26, 1933

How the works of God prepare the table to the creature and living in his Divine Volition she does as (a) queen in the seas of the Supreme Being. How one who does her volition is set apart by everyone and remains alone, and remains the (abandoned one)[deleritta] and the (lost one) of the Creation.

I was doing my round in the works of the Divine Fiat, and since I am too little, I feel the need to be carried between his arms. Otherwise now I lose myself in his immensity and the multiplicity of his works, now I don't know how to go forward, but since he wants to make his works known to me, where one finds his speaking and working love, and it says how much and how he has loved me, therefore he carries me between his arms, and conducts me through the interminable ways of his Holy Will, but this is not enough. In his every work he encloses it in me, for how much I can contain of it, the love of every single work, he wants to hear in me the sound of the love that every work contains, I am also a work of his, an act of his Will, and having done everything for my love, he wants that I enclose in myself all the sounds and keys of love that his works contain.

Whence while I turned in his works, beloved Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you can not understand how much pleasure it gives me to see you turn in the works created by us, they are pregnant with love and as you turn in the midst of them, they pour forth love, and give you the love with which they are filled, and this is one of the reasons for which I want you to turn in our works. They prepare the table of our love to creatures, and they felt honored that they have one little sister of theirs in their midst, that she feeds on it, and that it forms in her so many sounds of love to their Creator, for how many works were created. But this is not everything, my Divine Will is not content to make her turn in our works, but after he has made her turn, making so many things of the Creation known and filling her to the brim with love, he conducts her between his arms into the bosom of the Supreme Being, which casts her as a little pebble into the interminable seas of his attributes, and the little daughter of our Volition what does she do? As a little pebble cast in the sea, she makes all the waters of the sea rippled, thus she moves the whole sea of our Divine Being, and while she swims in Him she drowns with love, with light, with sanctity, with wisdom, with goodness, and so on. And oh! How beautiful it is to see her, to hear her, what she says while she feels drowned: all your love is mine, and I put it in act to pray (to) you that you make the kingdom of your Will come upon the earth, your sanctity is mine, your light, your goodness, your mercy is mine, it is not my littleness that prays (to) you no, but your seas of power, of goodness, that pray (to) you, that press you, that assail you, and want your ruling Will upon the earth. So that one sees the littleness of the creature do as queen in our Divine Being, to reunite our immensity and power together and she makes us ask of ourselves, that which she wants and we want, she understands well that there is no other good than our Will alone, and in order to obtain the intent, she makes asked through the infinities of our Divine qualities and one sees the tiny little one, little and powerful, enriched with the prerogatives of our Divine qualities, as if they might be hers, that gives such charm of beauty as to enrapture us, weaken us, in order to make us do that which she wants, and we want, she becomes our echo, and she doesn't know how to say other to us, nor to ask for other than (that) our Will might invade everything and might form one Will alone with all creatures. So that, when the creature has understood what Divine Will means and she feels his life flow in her, she doesn't feel the need of anything anymore, because possessing my Volition, she possesses all the possible and imaginable goods, (there) remains for her only the delirium, the yearnings, the sighs that she wants that my Will embraces everyone and (that) he constitutes himself life of everything and this is because she sees that my Will wants this, and her littleness wants this."

Whence I followed to think of the Divine Will and the great evil that doing the human will brings, and my beloved Jesus sighing added:

"My daughter, one who does their own will sets themselves apart from everyone and works alone, there is no one who helps her, nor one who gives her strength, nor one who gives her light, in order to do the best of that which she does, so that everyone leaves her in the power of herself, isolated, without support, and without defense. One can call her the (abandoned one)[deleritta], the lost one in the Creation, just suffering for one who wants to do her will, to feel all the weight of solitude, in which she has put herself, and the lack of all the helps, and oh the sorrow that I feel in seeing so many creatures set apart also by Me, and I in order to make them touch with (their) hand, what it means to do without my Will, I am as far away, making them feel the whole weight of the human volition, which never gives her rest and becomes her most cruel tyrant. All to the contrary for one who does my Will, all are with her, Heaven, the Saints, the Angels, because for honor and respect of my Divine Volition everyone is obligated to help that creature and sustain her in those acts where my Will enters. He himself puts her in communication with everyone, and commands everyone that they help, defend, and make her the cortege of their company, the grace, the shimmering light already smiles at her in her soul, and he administers the best to her, the most beautiful in her act, I myself remain busy in one who does my Will and I will make flow in her acts, mine, in order to have the honor, the love, the glory, of my acts in the act of the creature, that has worked in my Will, behold therefore she feels the connection with everyone, the strength, the support, the company, the defense of everyone. So that one who does my Will and lives in Him can be called the re-found one of the Creation, the daughter, the sister, the friend of everyone. She does as the sun that from the heights of its sphere rains light, and enlarging itself encloses all in its light, gives itself to everyone, doesn't deny itself to anyone, and as faithful sister embraces all things, and gives as pledge of its love to every created thing, its beneficent effect, constituting itself life of the effect that it gives. In some it forms the life of sweetness, in other created things the life of perfume, in others the life of the colors and so on. Thus my Will, from the heights of his throne, rains his light, and where he finds the creature that wants to receive him in order to let him dominate, he surrounds her, embraces her, warms her, moulds her in order to make her mature, and thus encloses his admirable life as if he might be life of the creature and with this life everything and everyone are with her, as everything is of my adorable Will.”

* * *

December 10, 1933

The first word that Adam pronounced, that was the first lesson that God gave him. The Divine Will working in man.

I am always the little tiny ignorant one of the Supreme Being, and when the Divine Will plunges me in his seas, I see that hardly the vowels, if yet, I know of his adorable Majesty, my littleness is so much, that hardly some drop I know how to swallow of so much that the Creator possesses.

Whence turning in the works of the Divine Fiat I detained myself in Eden, in which was made present to me the Creation of man and I thought to myself: what could be the first word that Adam said when he was created by God, and my Highest Good Jesus, visiting me with his brief little visit, all goodness, as if He himself wanted to tell me it said to me:

“My daughter, I also feel the desire to tell you what was the first word pronounced from the lips of the first creature created by Us. You should know that no sooner than Adam felt life, motion, reason, he saw his God before himself and understood that He had formed him, he felt in himself, in all his yet fresh being the impressions, the touch of his created and thankful hands, in an impetus of love he pronounced his first word: ‘I love you my God, my Father, author of this my life’, but it was not only the word, but the breath, the heartbeat, the drops of his blood, that raced in his veins, the motion, all his being, united together they said as in chorus: ‘I love you, I love you, I love you.’ So that the first lesson that he learned from his Creator, the first word that he learned to say, the first thought that had life in his mind, the first beat that formed in his heart, it was I love you, I love you, he felt himself loved, and he loved. I could say that his I love you never ended, it was so long that then it was interrupted when he had the misfortune to fall into sin. Whence our Divinity felt wounded in hearing on the lips of man I love you, I love you, it was the same word that we had created in the organ of his voice, that said to us I love you, it was our love created by us in the creature, that said to us I love you, how not to be wounded? How not to repay him with a larger love, stronger(,) worthy of our magnificence, as we heard said I love you, thus We repeated to them I love you, but in our I love you, we made it flow in all, his being, the working life of our Divine Will. So that we enclosed in man, as within one of our Temples, our Will, so that he was enclosed in the human circle, while he remained in us, so that he might work great things and He might be the thought, the word, the heartbeat, the step and the work of man, our I love you could not give a thing more holy, more beautiful, more powerful, that alone could form the life of the Creator in the creature, than our Will working in Him, and oh how pleasant it proved to us to see that our Will held his post of actress, and the human volition dazzled by his light, enjoyed his Paradise, and giving him full liberty, let him do that which he wanted, giving him supremacy in everything, and the post of honor that is appropriate to a Volition so holy.

“You see therefore the beginning of the life of Adam was an act full of love toward God with all his being, what sublime lesson, as the beginning of love should race in all the work of the creature. The first lesson that he received from our Supreme Being, in the exchange of his I love you, was that while he loved tenderly responding to him I love you, he gave him the first lesson on our Divine Will and while he instructed him he communicated the life to him of Him and the infused science of what our Divine Fiat means and every time that turn he said to us I love you, our love prepared for him other more beautiful lessons on our Volition. He remained enraptured and we delighted ourselves in conversing with him and we made flow over him rivers of love and perennial joys, so that the human life became enclosed by Us in love and in our Will.

“Therefore my daughter, there is no greater sorrow for Us, than to see our love as broken in the creature and our Will impeded, smothered, without his working life and as subject to the human volition. Hence be attentive and in all things have for beginning love and my Divine Will.”

* * *

December 18, 1933

How the creature has been formed by God ab eterno, beloved with eternal love. How the human will is the deranged one of the works of her Creator.

My poor mind continues to cross the infinite sea of the Fiat and for how much one walks one never finishes, the soul in this sea feels her God, whom fills her up even to the brim all with his Divine Being in a way that one can say: God has given me all of himself and if he has not given me his immensity by enclosing it in me, it is because I am little. Now in this sea I found in act the order, the harmony, the arcane mysteries of how God has created man and the prodigies are unheard of, the love is exuberant, the mastery is insuperable, there is so much of the mysterious, that man himself nor the sciences can repeat with clarity on the formation of man. Whence I remained surprised by the magnificence and prerogatives that the human nature possesses. And my beloved Jesus in seeing me so surprised said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you will cease your wondering if looking well in this sea of my Volition you will see where, who, how and when every creature was fully formed. Hence where? In the Eternal bosom of God. Who? God himself gave them origin. How? The Supreme Being himself formed the series of her thoughts, the number of her words, the order of her works, the motion of her steps, and the continuous palpation of her heart. So that God gave such beauty, order and harmony as to be able to find Himself in the creature with such fullness that she would not find place where to put some of hers, that had not been put (there) by God(.) We in looking at her remained enraptured in seeing that in the little human circle, our power had enclosed our Divine work, and in our emphasis of love we said to her: how very beautiful you are, you are our work, you will be our glory, the stornello/sonnet of our love, the reflection of our wisdom, the echo of our power, the bearer of our Eternal love, and we loved her with eternal love, without beginning and without end, and when was this creature formed in us? Ab eterno, therefore she didn't exist in time, but in eternity she always existed, she had her post in us, her palpating life, her Creator's love. So that the creature has always been for us our ideal, the little space where to develop our creative work, the knoll of our life, the vent of our eternal love. Behold therefore so many things humans don't understand, they don't know how to explain, because it is the work of the Divine incomprehensibility, they are our arcane celestial mysteries, our Divine fibers, for which we alone know the mysterious secrets, the keys that we must touch when we want to do new and unusual things in the creature and since they don't know our secrets, nor can they understand our incomprehensible ways that we have put in the human nature, they arrive to judge by their ways and they don't know how to give reason of that which We go working in the creature, while she is obliged to bow before that which she doesn't understand.

“Now who doesn't have our Will puts in disorder all our acts, ordered ab eterno in the creature, therefore she disfigures herself and forms the void of our Divine acts, formed and ordered by Us in the human creature. We loved ourselves in her, the series of our acts formed by our pure love and putting her forth in time we wanted her as concurrent to that which we had done, but in order to have this ability the creature needed our Will, that giving her his Divine virtue it made them do in time that which had been done by us, without her, in eternity, nor is there any wonder if the Divine Being had formed her in eternity, the same Divine Volition confirmed and repeated it in time, that is I continued his creative work in the creature. But without my Divine Will how can she ever elevate herself, conform herself, unite herself, resemble herself to those same acts, that we with so much love have formed and ordered in her? Hence the human will doesn't do other than to derange our most beautiful works, break our love, empty our works, which remain in Us because We lose nothing of that which we have done, all the evil remains for the poor creature, because she feels the abyss of the Divine void, her works are without strength and without light, her footsteps are shaky, her mind confused. So that she remains without my Will, as a food without substance, as a paralyzed body, as a ground without cultivation, as a tree without fruit, as a flower that sends forth a bad odor. Oh! If our Divinity might be subject to tears we would regret bitterly she who does not let herself be dominated by our Will.”

* * *

January 2, 1934

When the soul does the Divine Will, God can freely do that which he wants in her, work the greatest things, because he finds capacity, space to that which he wants to give to creatures.

My little soul, although it swims in the sea of the Divine Will yet I feel the transfixing nail of the privation of my sweet Jesus. My God what agonizing suffering, what torture (is) my sorrowful existence! Oh! How I would like to pour forth rivers of tears, I would like it if it might be possible to transform the immensity of the Divine Will himself into bitter weeping, in order to move my sweet Jesus to pity, that he steals away from me, without even telling me the place of his abode, nor lets me see the way, the imprint of his steps, in order to be able catch up. My God! My Jesus! How aren't you moved to compassion for this little exiled one heartbroken only for you, and for your cause? But while I was delirious for his privation, I thought to myself of the Divine Will and I feared that his dominion, his life might not be in me, and therefore my Eternal Love Jesus, leaves me, hiding himself and does not take care of me and I asked heart felt pardon of him and my beloved Jesus, after much difficulty having compassion on me that I could endure no more, he returned for a little and looking at me with love, all goodness he said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, one sees that you are little and it is enough that I make a little standstill, that you lose yourself, you fear, you doubt, you oppress yourself, but do you know where you lose yourself? In my Will and seeing you in Him, I don't rush in coming, because I know that you are in a secure place. Now you should know that when the soul does my Divine Will I can freely do in the soul that which I want, to work the greatest things, my Volition empties her for me of everything and forms (for) me the space where I can put the sanctity of my one infinite act, and the soul puts herself at our disposition, our Will has matured her and has made her adaptable and it feasible (for her) to receive the creative and operative virtue of our Supreme Being. Instead when my Divine Will is not done, we must adapt ourselves, restrict ourselves, nor can we be lake/sea according to our Divine way, we must give sip by sip our graces, while we can give rivers. Oh! How it weighs on us to work in one who doesn't have our Will, if we want to make ourselves known she makes us incapable, because the human intelligence, without our Will is like a cloudy Sky, that obscuring the beautiful light of reason is as blind before the light of our knowledges, so that she will be in the midst of the light, but incapable of understanding anything, she will be always illiterate before the light of our truths, if we want to give her our sanctity, goodness, and love we must give them in little doses, as minced, because the human volition is encumbered with miseries, with weaknesses and defects, hence it makes her incapable, and also unworthy to receive our gifts, and that which we want to give, poor human volition, without our Will she doesn't know how to adapt herself to receive the virtue of our creative works, the strong embraces of her Creator, our loving stratagems, the wounds of our love and many times she tires our Divine patience and constrains us to not be able to give her anything, and if our love constrains us to give something, it is for her as a food that she doesn't know how to digest because not being united with our Will, she lacks the strength and digestive virtue, to digest that which pertains to us. Therefore one immediately sees when there is not our Will in the soul, true good is not for her, before the light of my truths, she has gone blind and becomes more stupid, nor does she love to know them, rather she looks at them as if they didn't belong to her. All the opposite for one who does and lives in my Will."

* * *

January 14, 1934

Sweet, enchantment, on both parts of God and of the creature. How she acquires the power to make hers the Divine Will. The sufferings smile before the glory, the triumphs, the conquests. Jesus hidden by the sufferings.

I am under the rain of the Divine Fiat, that bathing all of me, inside and outside and penetrating even in the marrow of the bones, it says to all my poor being, Fiat, Fiat, Fiat. I feel between his arms and as I call him with my incessant saying that he might form his life in my acts, his heartbeat in my heart, his breath in mine, his thought in my mind, thus a flash of light emitted itself from me and would have wanted to tie the Holy Divine Volition in order to make him all mine, so that (he) himself might have been in my power, to form his life in me, all of Divine Will. Whence I felt worried by my this way of doing and my Highest Good Jesus repeating his brief little visit said to me:

"My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that as the creature invokes, calls my Fiat, imploring his Life in order to form it in hers, thus she emits light and forms there the enchantment to God that enraptures his Divine pupil, which enraptured, looks at the creature and forms there the exchange of his sweet enchantment and the void in the act of the creature, in order to be able to give and enclose in her act the Divine Will, which while he forms it, he develops his life, the happy creature acquires the power to make it hers, and since it is hers, she loves it powerfully more than her own life. My daughter, even to such that my Will is not kept as (one's) own life, exclusively hers, that no one can take away, in spite that she knows that it is a gift received by God, but in spite that it is already received she is fortunate and victorious to hold the possession of it, never can she love as is appropriate (to) my Divine Will, nor feel the need of his life, nor can He fully develop with all liberty his Divine life in the creature. Therefore calling him disposes you, making him yours makes him known and you will feel the great good of possessing his life and you will love him as he merits to be loved, and you will be jealous to guard him with such attention, as to not lose even a breath of Him.”

Whence finding myself suffering a little more than usual, I thought to myself: oh, how I would love that my sufferings might form wings in order to make me fly to my Celestial Country, and instead of afflicting me my little sufferings would make for me a feast, and I felt worried by this, and my beloved Jesus added:

“My daughter, do not marvel, sufferings before the glory smile, they feel triumphant in seeing the conquests that they have acquired, the sufferings confirm and establish the greater or lesser glory in the creature, and according to the sufferings, thus one feels painted the most beautiful and varied shades of beauty, and seeing themselves transformed into the rarest beauty, they celebrate. So that the sufferings in earth cry, at the doors of Heaven they commence their eternal smile, that doesn’t end anymore; the sufferings in earth are bearers of humiliation, at the eternal doors they are bearers of glory. In earth they make the poor creature unhappy, but with the miraculous secret that they possess, they work in the most intimate fibers, and in the whole human being, the eternal kingdom, in a way that every suffering takes its distinct office, some make themselves chisel, some hammer, some files, some brush, some color, and then they leave the creature entrusted to them, when every suffering has completed its work and triumphant they conduct her to Heaven, and then they leave when they see exchanged every suffering into distinct joys, and into perennial happiness, however provided that the creature receives them with love and they feel and receive in every suffering the kiss, the embraces and the strong holds of my Divine Will the sufferings then possess this miraculous virtue. Otherwise they become as if they might not have proper tools in order to complete their work. But do you want to know who the suffering is? The suffering am I, that hiding me inside of it in order to form the dark/deep works for my Celestial Country and exchange to usury the brief abode that they have given me upon the earth. I am imprisoned in the poor jail of the creature in order to continue my life of sufferings down here, it is just that this life of mine receives its joys, its happinesses, its exchange of glory in the Celestial Region, therefore cease your wondering in feeling that your sufferings smile before the victories, the triumphs and the conquests.”

* * *

January 28, 1934

Fraternization between the Supreme Being and the creature in earth, fraternization in the glory. Power over Jesus himself. How one who works in the Divine Will acquires the united, communicative and diffusive strength.

I was making my round in the Divine Fiat and my poor mind, now it stopped at one point of his Divine acts(,) now at another, in order to look at in some the beauty, in some the power, in some the interminability and other, of the creative Divine Will. There seemed (to be) all the Supreme qualities exposed in all the Creation, in order to love creatures, in order to make himself known, to unite themselves with them and take them up as in womb and bring them into the bosom of the Creator, from where everything had gone forth. So that all the acts of the Divine Will are powerful helps, revealers and who lets himself be dominated by Them, they make themselves carriers of souls to the Celestial Country. Whence I came to stop when the Divine Fiat made the solemn act of the creation of man and my beloved Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, stop together with us to look at with how much mastery, sumptuousness, nobility, power and beauty man was created, all our Divine qualities flowed over man, each one of them wanted to show off and to flow more than dense rain over him, that wanted to unite themselves with them. Everyone put themselves to the work, our light poured itself over him in order to form his brother of light, goodness poured itself out in order to form his brother all goodness, love poured itself out in order to fill him with love and form his brother all love, power, wisdom, beauty, justice, poured itself over him, in order to form his powerful brother, wise, just and with an enchanting beauty, and our Supreme Being rejoiced in seeing our Divine qualities all at work, in order to unite themselves with man. And our Will, that taking life in man, maintained the order of our same Divine qualities in order to make him how much more graced and more beautiful they could. So that our occupation was man, our look was fixed over him in order to let us imitate, copy and unite him with Us, and this not only in creating him, but for the whole course of his life, our qualities exhibited themselves to the continuous work of maintaining the fraternization with he, whom they so very loved, and after having him united in earth they prepared the great feast of the fraternization to the glory in the Celestial Country, fraternization of joy, of beatitude, of perennial happiness. Therefore I love him so much, because he was created by Us, hence he is all ours, I love him because our Divine Being always races over him and re-pours itself out over him, more than (an) impetuous torrent, and to leave of ours, and to re-take the new course in order to always give, hence because he possesses of mine, therefore I love myself in him, I love him because he is destined to populate Heaven and being my brother of glory we will glorify each other. I will be his glory as life, and he will be my glory as my work. Behold therefore I love so much that one does and lives in my Will, because with Him my Divine qualities find their place of honor and they can maintain the fraternization with the creature, without Him they don't find the post, nor do they know where to put themselves, the fraternization remains broken and my life remains smothered. My daughter, what deadly change, when the creature withdrew from my Will, I don't find my image anymore, nor my life growing in her, my qualities are ashamed to be united with her, because the human volition disunited from the Divine one, everything has been upset and becomes numbed. Therefore take to heart to not go out from my Will, with Him you will be united with all that which is holy, you will be the sister of all our works, and you will hold in (your) power your Jesus himself.”

After this I continued my acts in the Divine Volition and my Sovereign Jesus added:

“My daughter, all that which one does in my Will, remains identified with Him, she acquires the united, communicative and diffusive strength, and since our Divine acts extend themselves to everyone, there is no creature that becomes put aside, thus one who works in our Volition, together with our act, extends themselves to everyone, she wants to do good to everyone and remains honored and glorified to have been (the) universal carrier of good to everything and everyone.”

And I: My love, and yet one doesn't see in creatures the fruit of such a universal good, oh if everyone might receive it, how many transformations there would be in the base world. And Jesus repeated:

“This means that they don’t receive it with love, and their hearts are as sterile earth, that they don’t have any generative seed (with) which our light can bring forth the fecundity. It happens as to the Sun, that in spite that it illuminates and heats all earths, but if it doesn’t find the seed in order to fecundate it it can not communicate its generative and productive virtue and in spite that with its light and heat it has shaped that earth, not one good have they received, they remained what they were, in their sterility, but with this the Sun has remained honored and glorified, that to all it has given its light, no one has been able to escape, and it remains triumphant only because, it has given its light in a universal way to everyone and over everything. Such are our works, our acts, only because they possess extensible virtues to be able to give themselves in a universal way to everyone, and to do good to everyone, it is the greatest honor, it is the greatest glory for us. There is no greater honor, greater glory, to be able to say I am the Carrier of good to everyone, in my act I take everyone in fist, I embrace everyone and I hold (the) virtue to generate good over everything. And since my ideal is the creature, therefore I call her in my Will, so that together with Him, she becomes extended to everyone and knows with how much love and how my Will works.”

* * *

February 4, 1934

Love of God hidden in the Virgin. The Divine Paternity gives her the Divine Maternity and generates in Her the human generations as her children. How the Divine immensity renders all his works inseparable.

My abandonment continues in the Divine Volition and finding all that which had been done in Him, the little atom of my soul turns and returns in order to also give my little I love you, for all that which in the turn of Eternity he had done for love of all creatures, and my beloved Jesus stopped me, in the waves of the interminable love of the Conception of my Celestial Mama and all goodness he said to me:

“Little daughter of my Volition, your I love you, for how very little wounds our love and from those wounds that it makes us, it gives us the occasion to make our hidden love go forth and to make himself revealing of our intimate secrets and how we have loved creatures. Now you should know that We loved all mankind, but we were constrained to hold hidden in our Divine Being all the immense enthusiasm of our love, because we didn’t find in him neither beauty that enraptured our love, nor love that wounding us might make our love emerge in order to flood them in order to make himself known, to love them, and to make himself loved. Rather they were immersed in the lethargy of the faults as to make us horrified only to look at them. But our love burned, we loved him and we wanted to make our love arrive to everyone. How to do it? We had to use a great contrivance of our love in order to arrive to this and behold how. We called to life the Little Tiny Virgin Maria, and creating her all pure, all holy, all beautiful, all love, without stain of original sin, and making our own Divine Will conceived together with Her so that between Her and Us there might be free access, perennial union and inseparability. Now the Celestial Queen with her beauty enraptured us and our love raced, raced, with her love she wounded us and our love overflowing hid itself in Her, and looking through her beauty, and with her love (of) all creatures our love vented itself, and I loved all creatures with hidden love in this Celestial Queen. So that we loved everyone in Her, through her beauty they don't seem ugly to us anymore, our love was not restrained in Us anymore, but diffused in the heart of a creature so holy, that communicating our Divine Paternity to her, and loving everyone in Her, she acquired the Divine Maternity in order to be able to love everyone as her children, generated by her Celestial Father, as she felt that we loved all creatures in Her, thus she felt that our love, formed the new generation of mankind in her Maternal heart. Can one say greater contrivance of love, stratagems more loving, than our Paternal goodness in order to love creatures, and even those that offended us, to elect from this same stock a creature, to form her how much more beautiful we were able to, so that our love might not be able to find obstacles in order to be able to love everyone in Her and to make her love everyone? In this Celestial Queen everyone can find our hidden love in Her, much more so that possessing our Divine Will she dominated us, to make us love everyone and We with our sweet empire we dominated Her to be the most affectionate Mother of everyone. True love doesn't know how to be without loving, and uses all the arts, takes (the) occasion from the littlest things, as (well as) from the greatest in order to love, our love now is hidden, now it is made clear, now direct, and now in an indirect way, in order to make itself known that we love with incessant love She whom we brought forth from the depth of our love. Greater gift we could not give to all the generations, (than) in giving this inimitable creature as Mother of everyone, and as bearer of our hidden love in Her, in order to take it to all her children."

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will, the thought that my Celestial Mama possessed in her Maternal Heart the hidden love with which my Creator loved me, it filled me with joy, and to think that I was looked at by God, from inside my dear Celestial Mother, through her Sanctity and with her enrapturing beauty, oh! How happy I felt with all trust that I no more had to be loved and looked at alone, but loved and looked at together with my Mama. Oh! She in order to make me loved more by my Jesus, will cover me with her virtues, will dress me with her beauty and will hide my miseries and my weaknesses, but a thought wanted to devastate my joy, that Our Lord might do this as long as the Queen of Heaven lived upon the earth, but when she was carried into Heaven, this contrivance of Divine love ended, and my sweet Jesus returning added:

"My blessed daughter, our works always continue and they are inseparable from Us, so that our hidden love continues in the Queen of Heaven and will always continue, it would not be (a) work from God, if all that which we do might be able to separate from Us, and not have perennial life. Therefore We love, we flow over creatures, it seems that our love departs from Us, but no, it departs and remains with Us and the love that flows over creatures is inseparable from Us, and renders inseparable She who has received our love. So that all our works, Heaven and earth, creatures that went forth to the light of day, it seems that they depart from Us, but no, they are all inseparable from Us, and this in virtue of our immensity, that involving everything, there is no point where he doesn't find himself and he renders inseparable all that which We do, hence neither our works can be separated from Us, nor We from them, one can say that they form one single body for Us, and our immensity and power it is as circulation of blood that maintains everyone and all life, at the most there can be distinct works the one from the other, but separable not ever."

Whence I in hearing this was amazed I said: "And yet my Love there are the reprobates already separated from you, they are also works gone forth from you, how is it therefore that they don't belong to you anymore?" And Jesus:

“You are wrong my daughter, they don’t belong to me by way of love, but by way of justice, my immensity that involves them holds his power over them, and if they might not belong to my punitive justice it would not have to punish (them), because if things might not belong to me at the instant they lose life, but if this life exists there is one who conserves it and who justly punishes it. Therefore our hidden love toward every single creature in Heaven, the Sovereign Lady possesses it still, rather it is her greatest triumph and contentment that she feels all creatures loved by her Creator in her Maternal Heart, and doing as true Mother how many times she hides them (from) me in her love, in order to make them loved, in her sorrows in order to make them forgiven, in her prayers in order to make given to them the greatest graces. Oh! She is the copier who knows how to cover and to excuse her children near the throne of our Majesty, therefore let your Celestial Mama cover (you) who will think to the needs of her daughter.”

* * *

February 10, 1934

One who lives in my Divine Will becomes raised in his arms, which with his fortitude forms her the little victor. She is the little Queen, that repeats his life with her Jesus in (her) heart.

I feel (as) the little daughter, but so very little that I feel the extreme need that the Divine Will more than my Mother, carries me between his arms, feeds me the words, administers to me the motion to my hands, sustains my step, forms for me the heartbeat in (my) heart and the thought in my mind. Oh! Divine Will how much you love me, I feel your life re-pour in me, in order to give me life, and how he remains in expectation to want the atoms of my acts, in order to invest them with his creative strength and say to me: the atoms of my daughter equalize me, because they possess my invincible strength. But while my mind remained surprised in seeing the loving and maternal contrivances of the Divine Will, my always amiable Jesus, who always remains at watch in order to be spectator of that which the Divine Volition does in me, said to me:

“My little daughter, you should know that my Supreme Volition looks (for) who wants to live in Him as his birth, who wants to grow in his arms, with his maternal cares, and as he sees that his little one wants to give of herself, with her little works in order to say to him that she loves him, this Divine Mother presses his daughter to breast, and strengthens with his fortitude the motion, the word, the step of his daughter, this fortitude, it invests everything, transforms her, and although little she sees herself little and strong, little and victor, and this Mother takes gusto to make himself won over by his little daughter. So that this creature sees herself strong in love, strong in suffering, strong in the work, the fortitude and the aureole, she is the invincible one near God, over herself, her weaknesses and passions tremble before this little victor, God himself smiles and changes justice into love, into pardon before the infantile fortitude of this creature, and the fortitude of her Mama, his perennial care, that they render her strong and invincible.

“Therefore if you want to be the victor over everything grow in the arms of my Will. He will pour himself in you and you will feel his palpating life in you and he will raise you to his likeness, and you will be his honor, his triumph and his glory.”

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Will and before my mind was made the most beautiful scenes of the Divine work, as all in act of giving itself to me, in order to make itself known, in order to receive my little love, my gratitude and my thanksgiving, and my beloved Jesus added:

“My blessed daughter, for one who lives in my Will all times are hers, and I love to hear repeated to me by her, that which creatures have not done for me, because with so much love I have worked for them, and that which they have done to me, therefore one who lives in my Will finds the Creation in act, and she in the azure Sky, in the radiant Sun, in the twinkling stars, gives me her kisses, her filial love, and oh, how content I feel that in so many created things, I find the love, the kisses, the thankful act of my daughter and I convert all things for her, into joy, into defense, into her property. Oh! How beautiful it is to be recognized, loved in those same works, because we have done them, and we have loved. She finds the little epoch of innocent Adam and she together with Him, gives me his innocent embraces, his chaste kisses, his love as child, and I oh, how happy I feel that I see my Paternity recognized, loved, honored, oh, how beautiful it is to feel myself Father and as such to feel myself loved by my children, and I reciprocate my kisses, my paternal embraces and I give them as right of her property, the infinite joy of my Paternity. What won't I give to my children after I have been loved and recognized as Father? Everything, I won't deny them anything, and they give me the right, the joy of my children. For one who lives in my Will, I don't know how to deny her anything, if I might do this I would deny it to myself, therefore I give everything, and she repeats the scenes to me to give me everything. Therefore in Him there are exchanges of works, reciprocal love, which forms such moving scenes as to form the Paradise of God and of the soul. Oh! Thousands and thousands of times blessed (is) one who comes to live in the Celestial sojourn of my Will.

“You should know that one who does the Divine Will, enters in Him as Queen, and as such comes before Us, courted by all our works. So that she makes hers the conception of the Virgin and uniting herself with Her, and with Us, she gives Us that which We give to Her, and that which She gave Us, and we feel given to us the love, the glory, of the immense seas with which we endowed this Virgin, and to re-move/(re-do) all her acts, as if in act she was repeating them, and oh, what abysses of grace are renewed between Heaven and earth. The soul in our Will puts him in (the) condition of letting him do (as) the repeater of his works, and while he repeats them he endows she who has given him the occasion. And since the creature is incapable of giving us everything in one act, that which by Us is formed in one act alone, her littleness goes spacing in our Will, and she now takes one work of ours, and now another, and with the dominion that our Will gives her, she descends in the Incarnation of the Word, and oh how beautiful it is to see her invested with his love, pearled with his tears, adorned with his wounds, possessor of his prayers, all the works of the Word surround her inside and outside, and that which is more, it converts for her, into joys, into beatitude, into fortitude with the inseparability of her Jesus as in (a) sacred temple held in her heart in order to make her the repeater of his Life. And oh, what moving scenes she does before God, with her Jesus in (her) heart, she prays, suffers, loves together with Jesus, and in her infantile littleness she says: I possess Jesus, He dominates me and I Him, indeed I give him that which He doesn't hold, my sufferings in order to form his complete life in me. He is poor of sufferings because glorious, he can not have any, and I supply him in that which he doesn't hold, and He supplies me in that which I lack. So that in our Will the creature is the true queen, everything is hers, and she makes us such surprises with our works, that it enraptures us, and forms our happiness, that the creature can give to us in our Most Holy Will.”

* * *

February 24, 1934

The creature with doing her will loses the head, the divine reason, the order, the regime. Jesus is head of the creature.

While I continued my round in the Divine Will, his sweet empire, his irresistible strength, his love and his inextinguishable light, it re-poured over my littleness, which as enraptured found itself in the sea of the Divine Will, and oh the sweet surprises, his always new ways, his enrapturing beauty, his immensity that carries as in his womb everyone and everything; but that which more strikes one is his love for the creature, it seems that he is all eye in order to watch her, all heart in order to love her, all hands and feet in order to carry her pressed to his bosom, and in order to give her the step. Oh! How he longs to give his life to the creature, so that she might be able to live of his, it seems that it is a delirium that he holds, a pledge that he has taken, a victory that at whatever cost he wants to do, that his life might form the life of the creature. Hence my mind was lost in the midst of this spectacle of love of the Divine Will, and my sweet Jesus all tenderness said to me:

“My daughter, man with doing his will lost the head, the divine reason, the regime, the order of his Creator, and since he lost the head, all the members wanted to do as head, but it not being (the) office of the members to hold (the) virtue and ability to do as head, they didn’t know how to hold the regime, nor the order between themselves and one member put itself against the other, and they were divided between themselves, so that they remained as scattered members, because they didn’t possess the unity of the head. But our Supreme Being loved man and seeing him without (a) head, it made us suffer and it was the greatest of dishonors to our creative work, nor could we tolerate a torment so great, in he whom we so very loved. Behold therefore our Divine Will dominated us, and our love conquered us and making me descend from Heaven in earth he constituted Me Head of man and reunited all the scattered members under my Head, and the members acquired the regime, the order, the union and the nobility of the head. So that my Incarnation, all that which I did and suffered and my death itself, was none other than (the) way that I made in order to search out these scattered members, and in order to make flow by virtue of my divine Head, the life, the heat and the resurrection of the dead members, in order to form of all the human generations one single body, under my divine Head; how much it cost Me, but my love made me overcome everything, to face all the sufferings and to triumph over everything. Now my daughter you see therefore what it means to not do my Will, to lose the head, to divide oneself from my body and as detached members, with difficulty and gropingly, to walk down here as so many monsters, as to make one pity. All the good of the creature is centralized in my Divine Will and it forms our glory and that of the human generations. Behold therefore our delirium, our pledge, and we want to conquer by way of love and unheard of sacrifices, that the creature live in our Will. Hence be attentive and content your Jesus.”

* * *

March 4, 1934

The acts done in the Divine Will form the ways, they embrace the centuries. Who forms the prison. The Divine Engineer and the insuperable Craftsman.

My poor intelligence always turns in the Divine Fiat in order to meet me with his acts, uniting myself with Them, to court them, love them, and to be able to say to him: I have the love of your acts in my power, therefore I love You, as You love me, and that which You do I do. Oh! How beautiful to be able to say(:) I have disappeared in the Divine Will and therefore his strength, his love, his sanctity, his work is mine, we make one step alone, we have one motion alone and one love alone, and the Divine Will all in feast it seems that he says(:) how content I am, I am not alone anymore, I feel in myself one heartbeat, one motion, one will that races in me, and fused together, she never leaves me alone, and does that which I do. Whence while my mind was lost in the Divine Volition I thought to myself: but what do these acts of mine do in the Divine Will, while I don't do anything, He does everything and since I am together, inside of Him, he tells me I do that which He does, and says it with reason, because being in Him, and to not do that which He does is impossible, because his power is so much, that he invests my nothing and does that which the All does, nor can he do, nor does he know how to do otherwise.

Hence my sweet Jesus surprising me with his brief little visit said to me:

“My little daughter of my Will, how beautiful it is, the creature can not receive greater honor than to become admitted inside of Him, the instances, the littlest acts done in Him, they embrace centuries, and since they are Divine they are invested with such power, that that which one wants to do with them, one can do everything, and obtain everything, the Divine Being remains tied in these acts, because they are his acts, and he must give them the value that they merit. Beyond this you should know that the acts done in my Will, form the ways that must serve souls, in order to let them enter in Him, and they are so very necessary that if first heroic souls don't go forth that live in Him, in order to form the principal ways of his kingdom, the generations not finding the ways, won't know how to do it, in order to enter into my Will. My daughter, in order to form a city first the ways are formed that form the order that must hold a city, and then the foundations are cast in order to construct it; if the ways are not formed, the exits, the communications, that it must hold, (there) passes (the) danger that instead of a city, the citizens could form a prison, because not being equipped with ways they don't know from where to go out. You see how very necessary are the ways. Now the city without way(s) is the human will, that in its prison has closed all the ways in order to enter into the celestial city of my Divine Will. Now the soul that enters in Him, breaks the prison, knocks down the unhappy city without ways, without exits and united with the power of my Volition, the Divine Engineer forms the plan of the city, orders the ways, the communications, and doing as (an) insuperable Craftsman, he forms the new citadel of the soul, with such mastery, as to form the ways of communication in order to make the other souls enter and to form so many citadels, in order to be able to form a kingdom, the first one will be the model of the others. You see, therefore what the acts done in my Will will serve (to do), they are so very necessary that without them, I would lack the way in order to make him reign. Therefore I want you always in my Will, do not go out ever, if you want to make your Jesus content.”

* * *

March 11, 1934

How one who doesn't live in the Divine Will it puts him in solitude and reduces him into silence. Who is the Temple of God. The Divine Will Temple of the soul. The little Host. Sign in order to know if one lives in the Divine Will.

It seems to me (I) feel the continuous echo of the Divine Fiat, that booms in my soul, that with his invincible power, calls my little acts, in his acts to make of them one alone, and it seems he delights himself with his creature, he doesn't feel alone, he holds someone to tell his joys and his sorrows, in short he doesn't feel, neither solitude, nor reduced to silence. Instead for one who doesn't live in the Divine Volition he feels the weight of the solitude and if he wants to speak and entrust his secrets, he is not understood, because there lacks the light of his Will, that makes her understand his Celestial language, and oh, how he remains sorrowful from it, that while he is all voice and all word, he doesn't have one to whom to say a word.

Oh! Adorable Will, make me always live in You, so that you break your solitude and I might give you the field to let you speak. But while my mind was lost in the vast horizons of the Divine Fiat my sweet Jesus, repeating his little visit, all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, it is really true that one who doesn't live in our Will, it puts him in solitude and reduces him to silence; you should know that every creature is a new and distinct work that we hold to do, and hence new things to say; if she doesn't live in our Volition we feel that that creature is distant from Us because her will is not in ours, therefore apart from her, we feel alone, impeded in our work, and if we want to speak, it is as if we might want to speak to the deaf, to the mute. Therefore one who doesn't live in our Volition is our cross, impedes our step, ties our arms, knocks down our most beautiful works, and I who am the Word am reduced to silence. Now you should know that the soul in grace is the Temple of God. However when the soul lives in our Will, God makes himself Temple of the soul, and oh, the great difference between the creature Temple of God and between God Temple of the soul; the first one is a temple exposed to perils, to enemies, subject to passions, many times our Supreme Being, finds himself in these temples as in temples of stone, not cared for, not loved as is appropriate, and the little lamp of her continuous love, that she should hold as homage to her God that resides in her, without pure oil is extinguished, and if ever she were to fall into grave sin, our temple collapses and she becomes occupied by thieves, ours and her enemies, that profane her and they make her foolish.

“The second Temple, that is God Temple of the soul, is not exposed to dangers, enemies can not draw near, the passions lose life, the soul in this Divine Temple of ours is like the little Host that holds consecrated in Herself her Jesus, which with the perennial love that she draws, she receives and is fed, forms the little living lamp, that always burns, without ever going out, this Temple of ours occupies its regal post, his complete Volition and she is our glory and our triumph. And the little Host what does she do in this Temple of ours? She prays, loves, lives of Divine Will, substitutes for my Humanity upon the earth, takes my post of sufferings, calls the whole army of our works to make cortege, the Creation, the Redemption, she holds it as hers, and does (as) the commander above, and now puts it as army around in act of prayer, of adoration, now as army in act of loving us and glorifying us, but she (is) always at (the) head, to do that which she wants that our works do, and she always finishes with her little refrain so very appreciated by Us: your Volition be known, loved and reign and dominate in the entire world. So that all the anxieties, the sighs, the interests, the solitudes, the prayers of this little Host, that lives in our Divine Temple, that our Fiat embraces everyone, puts apart all the evils of creatures, and with his almighty puff he makes his the post in the hearts of everyone, in order to make himself life of every creature.

“Can one ever do (a) more beautiful office, more holy, more important, more useful to Heaven and earth, (than) this little Host that lives in our Temple? Beyond this our love, our power makes all the shows, all the industries, all the stratagems, with one who lives in our Will, he makes himself little and encloses himself in the soul, in order to form his life, and of this remains only the castoffs in order to remain covered, he makes himself immense that is, and he forms (of) himself (a) sumptuous Temple, in order to hold her secure within, and to enjoy her company. For one who does our Will she is always occupied with Us, and We are always occupied with her, therefore watch well to make yourself found always in our Will.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Volition and my beloved Jesus added:

“The sign if the soul lives in my Will is if all things interior and external are bearers of my Will, because to say that they bear his life and to not feel him is impossible, hence she will feel him in the heartbeat, in the breath, in the blood that circulates in her veins, in the thought that formulates in her mind, in the voice that gives life to her word, and so on. Whence the interior act making echo to the exterior, makes my Will found in the air that she breathes, in the water that she drinks, in the food that she takes, in the sun that gives her light and heat, in short the interior and the exterior give (a) hand and they form so many acts, in order to form the life of my Will in them, one act alone doesn’t form life, but continuous and repeated acts form life. Then in my will everything is present as in act of doing all that which has been done by Us, and the creature in Him enters in the power of our present acts and does that which We do, she remains invested by our creative strength, by our love that always rises, she understands that it is really for her that he does everything and oh, how she loves, and how she wants to do everything for her Creator. Instead outside of our Fiat, that which We have done they are seen as past things, done for everyone, not for her alone, hence the love doesn’t awaken (in) her, she sleeps, remains as in lethargy and they think (as) to a distant love, not in act.

“Therefore there is such difference between one who lives in my Will and between one who lives outside of Him that there is no comparison that holds up. Therefore be attentive and thank me for the great good that I have done (for) you (in) making you know what it means to live in my Volition.”

* * *

March 25, 1934

How prayer in the Divine Will makes itself spokesman of the acts of the Divine Fiat. How the humanity of Our Lord possesses the generative virtue. How Divine Love consists in this to be reproduced in everyone and in each one.

My poor mind, it seems that it doesn’t know how to be without going in search of the acts done in the Divine Will, if it might do this it seems to me that it lacks the palace where to reside, the food in order to feed me, the air in order to breathe, the step in order to be able to place me in his interminable confines. Ah! They are the acts of the Divine Will that while I search, they call me, and uniting themselves with me, it seems that they whisper to (my) ear: we are in your power and with the power of these acts you have sufficient coins in order to ask and to impetrate the Kingdom of our Supreme Fiat, in order to obtain a Divine Volition there is needed divine acts, and the creature as she comes in Him, our acts extend themselves around hers, and our act takes, as in triumph the act of them, and asks together with them the triumph, the dominion of our Will upon the earth.

But while my mind enjoyed the enchanting sight of my little acts surrounded by the seas of the divine acts, my little love surrounded by the sea of the Divine Love that with (an) arcane and incessant voice, didn't know how to ask for other than the Fiat Voluntas Tua, as in Heaven so in earth, my Sovereign Jesus surprising me all love said to me:

“My blessed daughter, how sweet, comforting, powerful it is, to hear my Will with all his acts, in the little act, love, adoration of the creature to ask the reigning Fiat upon the earth. He makes use of the little love of the creature, as spokesman in order to make it resound in all her acts, in order to make her ask for his kingdom, he doesn't want to do it alone, but wants the intermediary of her in order to do this. But do you want to know to what this prayer serves that contains power, value and divine weapons that wage war on us with incessant ways? It serves to call God upon the earth, to make life in every single creature, it serves to make my same Divine Will, and all his works pray, that he comes to reign upon the earth, it serves to prepare the post in God himself for the creature, it is a divine prayer, prodigious, that knows how to obtain everything.”

After this I continued my abandonment in the arms of Jesus, his Divine Heart jumped so very strongly with love, with joys, with happiness and with sorrow and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, all the acts of my Humanity (possessed) the generative virtue, hence the mind thinks and generates holy thoughts, thinks and generates light, science, wisdom, divine knowledges, new truth, and while it generates, it flows as (a) torrent in the mind of creatures, without ever ceasing to generate. So that every creature holds in her mind the storeroom of these my children generated by my mind, with the difference that some hold them honored, courted, giving them the liberty to let him produce the good that they possess, and some hold them without taking care of them and as suffocated. My looks generate looks of love, of compassion, of tenderness, of mercy, I never lose sight of anyone, my looks multiply themselves for everyone, and oh, the power of my looks, with how much pity is re-poured over the human miseries, it is so much that in order to put them in safety, he encloses the creature in my pupil in order to hold her defended and surrounded with affection and with inexpressible tenderness as to make all of Heaven stupefied. My tongue speaks and generates words that give life, sublime teachings, it generates prayers, speaks and generates hurts and arrows of love in order to give the generation of my ardent love to everyone and to make me loved by everyone. My hands generate works, wounds, nails, blood, embraces, in order to make me work of each one, balm in order to sweeten their wounds, nails in order to wound them and to purge them, blood in order to wash them, embraces in order to embrace them and bring them as in triumph in my arms. All my Humanity continually generates in order to reproduce him in every single creature, our Divine Love consists really in this, to reproduce himself in everyone and in each one and if we might not have the generative virtue it could not be a reality but a way of speaking, while in Us first we do the deeds and if we use the speech, it is in order to confirm the deeds. Much more so that my Humanity is inseparable from the Divinity, which possesses in nature the generative virtue and is over creatures as a Mother with open arms and he generates in an admirable way his life in them. But do you know who receives the effects, the complete fruit of this my continuous generation? In one in whom my Will reigns, which not only receives the generation of my acts, but reproduces them in an admirable way.”

April 28, 1934

How the Divine Will in every act that he does, calls all creatures in order to give the good that his act contains. Example: the sun.

I am always in my dear inheritance of the Fiat, I feel his sweet empire that holds me absorbed and so very invested, that he doesn't leave me time to sorrow for the privations of my beloved Jesus, for me, alas, too sorrowful. The multiplicity and infinity of his continuous acts impose themselves over me, in order to make present to me and participate me (in) the good that they contain and to say to me how much he loves me. And you how much do you love us? Whence my mind was lost and remained enraptured in seeing that he always wanted to give me of his, and therefore he wanted to present his acts to me. What goodness! What love! Hence my Sovereign Jesus, surprising me said to me:

"My little daughter of my Volition, your Jesus holds the assignment to manifest the secrets of my Divine Will, his love that arrives that he doesn't know how to be, nor can he be, if he doesn't give of his, in a continuous way, to the creature. You should know that when my Will does an act, he calls in his act all creatures, he wants her all to himself, in order to give to each one the good that that act possesses. So that everyone is contained in his act, and they receive the good of the divine inheritance, with this difference, that one who is in our Will voluntarily and for love, remains possessor of it, and (for) one who is not the good doesn't remain lost, but awaits its heiress, one who knows how to decide to have life in our Will, in order to give the possession of it and for liberality all Divine, we give her the interest of the good assigned to them, that is the effects, in order to have that she might not die of hunger of the goods of her Creator. Therefore our Will possesses in nature the universal virtue, and therefore in his every act, he calls everyone, embraces everyone, involves everyone, and hands to everyone his divine goods.

"Symbol and image the Sun, that having been created by my Fiat with his universal virtue, it hands its light to everyone, it doesn't deny it to anyone, and if someone might not want to take the good of its light, the Sun doesn't destroy the light that belongs to that one, nor can it destroy it, but it awaits when that one decides to take the good of the light, it doesn't deny it, immediately it gives itself and even to such that one doesn't directly decide to take the good of the light, it gives the interest by means of the other created things, in which the Sun holds its first act, in all created things, to some it gives, the fecundity and the maturation, to some the development and the sweetness, there is no created thing which the Sun does not give of its (own), hence the creature taking the food, making use of the plants, takes the effects and the interests that the light gives that belongs to it and that voluntarily she doesn't take.

"More than Sun is my Will in all the acts that he does, he calls and holds present all creatures and hands his divine goods to everyone.

"Now one who lives in our Will, since she possesses as her property, the good that my Volition has given her in every act, she feels in herself the nature of the good, since the good is in her power. The goodness, the patience, the love, the light, the heroism, of sacrifice, is at her disposition, and if she has the occasion to practice them without effort she practices them, and if she doesn't have the occasion to practice them, she possesses them always, as so many noble princesses, that form the honor, the glory, of the property that my Will has given her. It happens as to the eye that possesses the sight, if it is necessary that it must look, that it must help with the sight it does it, if it is not necessary she doesn't lose the sight, but keeps her eye, as glory and honor that she possesses her eye that sees. To possess my Will and to not possess the virtues, as in her nature is almost impossible, it would be as a sun without heat, as a food without substance, as a life without heartbeat. Therefore one who possesses my Will possesses everything, as gifts and property that my Divine Volition brings with himself!"

* * *

May 6, 1934

First purpose of the Redemption, to restore the life of the Divine Will in the creature. How God does the minor things before giving the post to his greater works.

I am beneath the highest waves of the Divine Fiat, which makes seen and touched with (the) hand that things and all his Divine acts everyone has origin of the Divine Volition and all are bearers of a Volition so holy. So that (the) primary aim of God, as much in the Creation, as in the Redemption, his purpose was none other than to form his palpating life of Divine Will in every creature, and in everything, he wanted his regal post and transfusion of all things and every act in his Will, and with justice and with reason, being He the Author of everything, and of everyone, what wonder that he wants his post with right in everything?

Whence following the Divine Will in his acts, I arrived at the Redemption, and my beloved Jesus detaining me and sighing said to me:

"My daughter, and yet (the) primary aim of the Redemption, in our mind, was reviving the kingdom of the Divine Will in the creature, it was this of (the) Divine, our working Will, that we had put in her, the most noble act, most beautiful, and that in virtue of this we loved the creature even to folly, because she had of ours, we loved Ourselves in her, and therefore our love was perfect, full and incessant, and as if we might not be able to undo ourselves of her, we felt our same Will that from within the creature imposed himself to love her, and if I descended from Heaven in earth, it was the empire, the power of my Fiat, that called me, because he wanted his rights, and to revive and to put in safety, his noble and Divine act. There would have lacked the order and we would have acted against nature, if descending from Heaven, I might have put creatures in safety and our Will; that which of Divine, our most beautiful act put in them, beginning, origin and aim of everything, not to put him in safety, and restore to him his kingdom, in them. But who is it that doesn't think of saving oneself first, and then the others? No one, and if he can not save himself, it is a sign that he wouldn't hold neither virtue, nor power to be able to save the others. With restoring the kingdom of my Will in the creature I did the greatest act, act that only a God can do, that is to put in safety my life itself in the creature, and saving myself, everyone was put in safety, no more dangers, because they held a Divine life in their power, in which they would have found all the goods that they needed. Hence my Redemption, my life, my sufferings, my death, it will serve to dispose creatures to such a good, and as preparation to the great portent of the kingdom of my Will in the human generations, and if they don't yet see the fruits, the life of Him, this says nothing, because in my Humanity there is the germ/seed, the life of my Fiat, hence this germ/seed possesses the virtue to form the long generation of so many other germs/seeds in hearts, in order to regenerate in them, the revival of the life of my

Will in creatures. Therefore there is no act done by the Supreme Being, that doesn't go forth from our Will, and so much is his love, that he puts himself as life in our act and as life, he demands his rights, that he wants to develop his life; hence how could I come to redeem if I didn't restore these rights to my Will? These rights in order to come to redeem they were restored in my Celestial Mother, in my Humanity, and only because he had these rights first could I come to redeem, otherwise I would not find neither the way, nor the place where to descend, and my Humanity was compromised with Him, by way of sufferings, to restore to him these rights, to make him reign in his time in the human family. Therefore pray, and united with me, do not spare the sacrifice of your life, for a cause so holy and divine, and for love more heroic and great towards all creatures."

Whence I remained worried of that which is written above and I thought to myself: how can it be, that while he says that his primary aim with his coming upon the earth, was in order to establish the kingdom of the Divine Will, although the Redemption might be connected together, while the fruits of the Redemption are seen abundantly, and those of his reigning Fiat one sees almost nothing yet?

And Jesus added:

"My daughter, it would be absurd and against the Divine order, to not give the primacy to our Will, as in fact we gave it. I can say that first commenced the kingdom of the Divine Will in my Celestial Mother, then in my Humanity itself, which possessed the whole fullness of the Supreme Will, and then the Redemption came, and since I and the Queen of Heaven, we represented the whole human family, in virtue of this kingdom that we possessed in his full vigor, as heads in order to reunite all the scattered members, therefore the Redemption could come. It was truly from within the kingdom of my Will that the Redemption went forth, if I and my Mother might not have possessed him, it would have been a dream and remained in our Divine mind. Now being the Head, the King, the Savior and the true sacrificiary of mankind, that which there is in the Head, the members have the right to, that which the Mother possesses, the children have the right to inherit, behold therefore the Redemption; the Head wants to heal the members and bind them by way of sufferings and death in order to enjoy in them the virtues of the Head. The Mother wants to reunite the children, to make herself known, in order to constitute them heirs of that which she possesses, behold the necessity of time, in a way that from the kingdom of my Will went forth the Redemption as first act, and the Redemption will serve as (a) powerful means in order to communicate to the members the kingdom that the Head possesses, the one and the other will give the hand/(assistance). And then if I love so much, want, insist, that creatures in all things have for sole beginning my Will alone. I then who possesses the life of him and that I should descend from Heaven in earth, and that it should cost me so much, should I not give the primacy to my Will? Oh! My daughter, this says, that one doesn't thoroughly know in depth, while an act of my Will has more value, than all creatures united together, and it is so very certain, that the Redemption had life from my Will, while the Redemption didn't hold the virtue of giving life to my Will. My Fiat is eternal, he didn't have beginning neither in eternity, nor in time, while the Redemption had its origin in time, and since my Volition doesn't have beginning and is the only one that can give life to everything hence he possesses in his nature his primacy over everything and there is nothing that we do that we don't have our primary aim that our Will doesn't have his dominant, working and reigning life; but you say that the fruits of the Redemption are seen, while those of the Kingdom of the Divine Will one doesn't see anything, this says that they don't understand our divine ways, we do the minor things in order to give the post to our greater works and in order to effect our primary aim. Listen to me my daughter, in the Creation our primary purpose was man, but instead of creating man first, we created Heavens, sun, sea, earth, air, winds as habitation where to put this man, and making him find all that which was necessary in order to let him live, in the creation of man himself first we made the body and then infused in him the soul, more precious, more noble and that contains more value than the body; many times it is necessary to do the minor works first, in order to prepare with decency the post to our greater works. What wonder, therefore, that in descending from Heaven in earth, in our divine mind, our primary aim was to constitute the kingdom of our Will in the midst of the human family? Much more so that the first offense that man did to us, was really direct to our Will, hence with justice, our first aim, should be directed to consolidate the offended part of our Will and to restitute to him his regal post, and then the Redemption came, and the Redemption came in a superabundant way with such excesses of love as to make Heaven and earth astounded. But why first? Because it had to serve to prepare with decency, with decorum, with sumptuousness, with the outfit of my sufferings and my death itself, as kingdom, as army, as habitation and as cortege to make my Will reign. In order to heal man there was needed my sufferings, in order to give him life there was needed my death, and yet one tear of mine, one sigh of mine, one single drop of my blood would have been enough in order to save everyone, because all that which I did was animated by my Supreme Will. I can say that it was Him in my Humanity that raced in all my acts, in my most excruciating sufferings, in order to search (out) man and to put him in safety; how therefore can one deny the first purpose to a Volition so holy, so powerful, that embraces everything and in which there is no life, nor good without Him? Therefore it is absurd to even think it. Hence I want that in all things you recognize him as (the) first act of everything, thus you will put yourself in our Divine order, that there is nothing in which we don't give the primacy to our Will."

* * *

May 12, 1934

Extreme need of the abandonment in the Divine Volition, virtue of It. How everyone turns around God; only the human will goes wandering and is the disturber of everyone.

My abandonment in the Fiat is for me an extreme need of my poor heart, because I feel his Divine Paternity and Maternity, that with his arms of light, he holds me pressed to his bosom, in order to pour himself into me, as a most tender Mother, that loves his daughter with inseparable love, but so much so that he wants to generate his life in his daughter. It seems that it is a delirium, a Divine passion of this Holy Mother, that makes him all eyes, all attention and solicitude, all heart, and in (the) continuous act of working, in order to conceive, to (make) born and raise his life in his daughter, all abandoned in his arms. So that the abandonment in the Divine Will facilitates the cares, and makes practicable the solitudes of this Celestial Mother to form his life all of Divine Will in the creature.

My beautiful mama, oh! Don't detach me from your bosom of light so that I can feel your life in me, that brushing me continually makes me know how much you love me, who you are and how very beautiful, amiable and adorable you are.

But while my mind was lost in the total abandonment of the Divine Volition, my sweet Jesus, repeating his brief little visit, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, how much more one understands of my Volition, so much more one enjoys his beauty and sanctity, and so much more one participates in his goods, and the abandonment in Him destroys all the obstacles and keeps the soul so very pressed in his arms, that without effort, my Fiat, can regenerate his Divine life in the creature. True and full abandonment says with deeds: do with me that which you want, my life is yours, and of mine I don’t want to know anything more of it. So that the abandonment holds (the) virtue to put the creature in the power of my Divine Will. Because you should know that all things and the human nature itself takes from the Eternal motion of God, in a way that everything turns around him, all the Creation, the breath, the heartbeat, the circulation of blood, they are under the empire of the Eternal motion, and since everyone and everything, have life from this motion, they are inseparable from God and as they have life, thus with an unanimous course, they turn around the Supreme Being. So that the breath, the heartbeat, the human motion it is not in their power to breathe, to palpitate, to move themselves, if they want, or don’t want, being incessant the motion of the Eternal they also feel the incessant act of the breath, of the heartbeat and of the motion, one can say they have life together with God, and with all created things, that they turn around him without ever stopping. Only the human will, having created it with the great gift of free liberty/will, so that she might be able to say to us that freely she loved us, not because she is constrained as is constrained the breath to breathe, the heart to palpitate and to receive the motion of her Creator, but with wanted will, not forced she can love us and be together with Us in order to receive the working life in our Volition, it was the honor and the greatest gift that we gave to the creature and she ungrateful drew away from our union and inseparability, and hence from the union of everyone and everything, and therefore lost herself, degraded herself, weakened herself, lost the unique strength, and is the only one that in all the Creation, who lost her course, her post of honor, her beauty, her glory, and she goes wandering moved from her post, that she holds in our Will, that calls her, longs for her to her post of honor, so that everyone has a post, also the breath and the human heartbeat, and since everyone and everything have a post, they never lose the life and their incessant motion, no one feels poor, weak, but rich in the Eternal motion of their Creator. Only the human will, because she doesn’t want to be in the regal post of our Divine Volition she is the lost one and the poorest of everyone, and since she feels poor, she feels unhappy, and is the disturber of the human family. Therefore if you want to be rich, happy, never descend from your post of honor, that is inside of our Will, then you will have everything in your power, strength, light, and also my Will himself.”

* * *

May 20, 1934

How the Divine Will devours everything as within a single breath/[fiato] all the acts done in Him and of it he forms one alone. How the Divine Will forms the cast-offs of the Humanity of Our Lord, and makes it present to creatures.

I felt very poor of love, but with the will of wanting to love him a great deal, a great deal, I had received sweet Jesus Sacramentally and He was as drowned with love and I as hardly some little drop, and yet he asked me (for) love, in order to give me love, but how to be able to equalize him in some way? Then I thought to myself: my Celestial Mama, she wants that I love my and her Jesus a great deal, hence these drops of my of love, I want to pour them into her seas of love and thus I will give to him and I will tell him: I love you so much that I love you as your Mama loves you. Now it seemed to me that the Sovereign Lady rejoiced and felt happy that her daughter loved Jesus with her love, and He still more content, that he felt himself loved by me with the love of his Mama. And all content, he said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that one who lives in my Fiat is never alone in her acts, she is incorporated in all that which he has done, does and will do, as much in herself, as in all creatures. So that I felt in the love of my Mother the love of my daughter, and in the love of the daughter, the love of my Divine Mother. Oh! How beautiful were your little drops of love, invested by the seas of love of my Mama. For one who lives in my Volition I feel Heaven flow in her acts, in her love, in her will, and I feel the creature in Heaven and her acts, her love, her will invests the Empyrean, to invade everyone and forms one act alone, one love alone and one will alone, and all Heaven feels itself loved, glorified in the creature, and she feels herself loved by all Heaven. In my Will everything is unity, inseparability doesn’t exist, nor exists distance of places, or of times, the centuries disappear in my Volition and with his power he devours everything in one single breath/[fiato], and forms one single continuous act of everything. What fortune for the one that lives in my Volition that can say: I do that which one does in Heaven, and my love is not dissimilar from their love. Only for one who doesn’t live in my Volition, her acts are separable, they suffer solitude, and are dissimilar from our acts, because not being invested by his power, that holds (the) virtue to convert into light that which one does in Him, hence not being light, they can not incorporate themselves with the acts of our Will, that being inaccessible light knows how to convert everything into light, and no wonder that light and light incorporate themselves together.”

Whence I abandoned myself in the arms of the Baby Jesus, thus he made himself seen, and He, drowned with love abandoned himself in mine, in order to enjoy the love that I gave him of his and my Mama and then he added:

“My daughter, if you see me (a) little Baby, it is (in) virtue of my Divine Will that possesses in himself all the periods of my life down here, my tears, my sufferings, and all that which I did; hence He in every instant repeats different periods of my life, in order to give his admirable effects to creatures, and now he forms Me (as) Baby in order to give her the fruits of my infancy, my most tender love that I arrive to cry in order to have love from them, and to let me receive the tenderness, the compassion for my tears. He now forms me (as) little boy, with an enchanting beauty in order to make me known and to enrapture her to love me. Now young, in order to enchain her with inseparable union, now Crucified, in order to have me repair and sympathize and thus with all the rest, of the life of my Humanity down here. Oh! Power and insuperable love of my Will, that which I did in the little round of thirty-three years, and settling Myself I went to Heaven, He will do it for centuries and centuries, holding my Life ready in order to give it to every single creature.

“Now you should know that if the Holy Church has the great honor to have souls that have the good of seeing me, of hearing me speak, as if I was again living together with them, everything owes itself to my Divine Will, it is He that forms my castoffs and makes Me as present to creatures. My Humanity is enclosed in his immensity and holds in virtue of Him the present act as if in act I am born and he gives Me the castoffs of Baby, I grow and he gives Me the castoffs of little boy, all my Life is in his power, and forms it because he wants to give it to Me, in whatever age he wants to show Me, he forms the castoffs for Me and maintains all my life as present act in the midst of creatures. My Will holds your Jesus living, and according to their dispositions thus gives Me the castoffs and I give them and it makes them feel that I cry, suffer, I continue, to be born and to die, and I burn with love because I want to be loved. What doesn't my Will do? He does everything, there is nothing that doesn't hold his supremacy, the conservative virtue and the perfect and continuous equilibrium without ever ceasing all our works. My daughter, with my sorrow I say that that which lacks is the knowledge of that which my adorable Will does, the great good that he continually hands to creatures and therefore he wants to be known. And because not known, he is neither appreciated, nor loved, and she doesn't give the supremacy to all our works. While my Will is the primary font and all our works they are like so many little fonts that receive and draw the life and the goods that they give to creatures. Oh! If one might know what it means Will of God, the good that he offers to creatures, the earth would remain transformed and so very attracted, that one would remain with one's gaze fixed to look at him and to receive his perennial goods, but since he is not known, they don't even think of it and they partly lose his goods, because now they want it, now they don't want it, now they know(,) now they don't know, now they believe(,) now they don't believe, it is my Divine Fiat that gives life, motion and everything, he is the motive of all the Creation. And therefore he loves so much that he be known (in) that which He does and can do, all his Divine story in order to be able to lavish with new gifts, and to show off in love with more abundance toward creatures, that in order to do this I have wanted the sacrifice of your life, sacrifice that I have not asked of anyone, sacrifice that costs you so much, although you calculate this sacrifice when the obstacles, the circumstances arise, but I calculate it all days, I measure the intensity, the hardness and the loss of daily life to which you submit yourself from it. Good daughter, your sacrifice was necessary to my Will in order to make himself known, in order to give his knowledges he needed to make use of you as (a) channel in order to make himself known, and your sacrifice as powerful arms in order to conquer, in order to reveal himself, to open his bosom of light and to manifest who He is. More so that the creature with doing her human will rejected and lost the life of the Divine Will, hence it was necessary that a creature might submit herself to the sacrifice of losing her life, losing the mastery of herself, in order to have that my Volition might move himself to make himself known, in order to restore his Divine life. It is always so in our work, when we want to superabound more toward the creature, we ask the sacrifice of one creature, as pretext, and then we make known the good that we want to do, and the good becomes given according to the knowledges that they acquire. Therefore be attentive, and do not want to occupy yourself with useless thoughts of the reason for your state, it was necessary to our Will and (that is) enough, and you should be content and thank him."

* * *

June 16, 1934

The human will (was) created Queen in the midst of Creation. How all flows between the fingers of our Creator.

I continue my abandonment in the Divine Fiat, his acts are for me as so many foods that feeding me I feel the growth of his life in me, his strength that imposing itself over my human will conquers it and enraptures it in his in order to say to it: we live together and you will be happy with my same happiness, you have gone out to the light of day, not in order to hold you distant, but together with Me, in my same Will, if I have created you it is because I felt the need to love you and to be loved, so that your creation was necessary to my love, the knoll of my Will, as my little tiny field. I want to make a show of my works, of my mastery, and this in order to form and give vent to my love.

Oh! Adorable Will, how very amiable and admirable you are, so that you want me in You, in order to give life to your vent of love and you so very love that the creature lives in your Divine Volition because you didn't create us as the Sky, the sun, without will, so that you might be able to do that which you want. But while I thought this my sweet Jesus surprising me, all goodness said to me:

“Blessed daughter, you should know that the most beautiful thing created by Us was the human will, among all created things it is the most beautiful, that which resembles Us more, therefore one can call it the queen among everyone, as in fact it is. All things are beautiful, beautiful is the sun that with its vivifying light gladdens, smiles at everyone, with its light it makes itself eye, hand and step of everyone, beautiful is the Sky that covers everyone with its starry mantle. But for how very beautiful all created things are, no one can boast of having made for us the littlest act of really loving us, there is not one vent of exchange, everything is mute silence and all that which we do, we do it alone, no one echoes Us to respond to the so many seas of love that there are, in all created things not even the littlest vent becomes given to Us, because the vent becomes formed between two wills that have reason and know if they do good or bad. Therefore the human will was created queen in the midst of the Creation, queen of herself, outlet of love with her Creator, queen of all the created things, freely she can do a world of goods, prodigies of valor, heroism of sacrifices, if she puts herself on the side of good, but if she puts herself on the side of evil, as queen she can do a world of ruin and can precipitate from the highest place even into the base of the greatest miseries. Behold therefore among all things we love the human will, because we made her queen, she can say that she loves Us, she can feed our outlet of love, she can put herself in competition with Us, We to love her and she to love us, therefore we endowed her with such prerogatives, even to give her our similarity, she is none other than a simple act, and yet she is the hand, the foot, the voice of her human being. If the creature might not have will she would be similar to the beasts, slave of everyone, without the imprint of Divine nobility, our Divinity most pure spirit, there is no shadow in Us of material, and yet we invest everyone and everything and we are the life, the motion, the foot, the hand, the eye of everyone, the human life flows in the midst of our fingers as actor and spectator, breath and heartbeat of every heart and that which We are for everything and for everyone, the human will is for herself; one can say that for the prerogatives that she possesses, she can mirror herself in Us, and We find our little mirror in her, our power, wisdom, goodness, love, can form its reflections in the simple act of the human will. Oh! Human will, how beautiful you have been created by your Creator, beautiful is the Sky, the sun, but you surpass it, and even if you might not have other beauty, only because you alone can say to us that you love Us, you possess the greatest glory, the enchantment that you can enrapture your Creator.”

* * *

June 24, 1934

One who lives in our Will feels the Divine heartbeat in her works, knows his designs, works together and is the welcome one in our Fiat.

I feel between the arms of the Divine Will, which with an insuperable goodness makes present to me all that which he has done for love of creatures, in order to receive the pleasure of making me know them and in order to renew the glory, of all that which he has done for our love, and since he has done everything for pure love, it seems that he is not content if he does not feel himself known and re-loved by whom was (the) cause of making him work, work so great and of indescribable magnificence. But while my mind was lost in the multiplicity of so many Divine works, my always amiable Jesus, repeating his brief little visit said to me:

“My little daughter, our love, our works, they want to have life in the creature, they want to make themselves be felt palpating, in order to give her the love and the fruits that our works contain, which as giving birth in them they also produce love and Divine fruits.

“All that which We have done is always in act, and We call the creature in the act proper that we are working, in order to make her know our works, how much love they contain, with how much wisdom and power they have been formed, and how in all that which we do our aim is always toward them. We have brought forth nothing of us, if It didn't palpitate love and called the heartbeat of the creature and to make her love us, We have no need of anything, because we possess in Ourselves, in our own Divine Being, all possible and imaginable goods, and possessing the creative virtue, how many goods we want to create, they are in our power. Therefore all our external works were done for them, in order to give them love, in order to make known who it is that has loved them so much, and as staircases in order to have them climb to Us and give us their little love, who doesn't know Us we feel Ourselves robbed, and who doesn't love Us, We feel Ourselves betrayed. Now my daughter, do you want to know who receives our heartbeat of created things, our design, the knowledges, and (who) gives Us her heartbeat, her exchange of love? One who lives in our Will. As the creature enters into Him, with his wings of light as arms, he presses her to his bosom and since she possesses his incessant act he says: watch me how I am working, rather lets do it together so that you know that which I do, my love (is) distinct one created thing from the other, and you receive all these degrees of my ardent love, in a way as to cover yourself and to make you drowned with love but so much so that you won't know how to say to me but you love Me, you love Me, you love Me, if you don't know, you won't be able to receive the fullness of the love, nor taste the fruits of our works. Now I want to tell you another surprise, as the creature enters into our Will not only to that which we have done in the Creation, in the Redemption, in everything, and she remains in an admirable way enriched by the works of her Creator, but she gives Us the new glory, as if our works might be repeated anew. All that which we have done passes through the channel of the creature, that is our Will, that which might happen, and We feel Ourselves repeat in virtue of Him the glory as if we might extend a new Heaven, we might work a new creation. And as we feel her come into our Volition we welcome her, and overflowing with new love we say to her: come, touch with (your) hand that which we have done, our works are alive for you, not dead, and with knowing them you will repeat the new glory and the new exchange of love. It is true that our works praise Us and glorify Us by themselves, indeed it is We ourselves that praise and glorify Ourselves continually. But the creature in our Will gives Us something more, she gives Us her working will in our works, her intelligence in order to know them, and her love in order to love us, hence we feel the glory that a human will repeats the glory for Us, as if our works might be repeated. Therefore I want you always in my Divine Fiat, in order to receive his secrets and to drink in large sips his admirable knowledges. With being known the life is communicated, the works are repeated, and one obtains the purpose.”

* * *

June 29, 1934

The attention, eye of the soul. How in the Divine Will there are no blind ones. The magnet, the mintage of the Divine image in our acts. How God, makes himself Prisoner of the creature.

The Divine Volition never leaves me alone, it seems to me that he always watches me in order to invest my thought, my word, the littlest of my acts, but he wants my attention, he wants that I know that he wants to invest my acts, and that watching each other, He gives and I receive and if I don't keep attention he reproaches me, but with such a sweet way as to feel (my) heart break and he says to me:

“The attention is the eye of the soul that knows the gift that I want to make, and she disposes the action to receive my investment. I don't want to give my goods to the blind, I want that you see and know it, but do you know why? With seeing it you appreciate my gift, and with knowing it you know and love it, and I make you feel my light, my power alive, my love and I feel repeated in your little thought, word and action that which he knows how to do, as my same Divine Will knows how to love. Therefore the first thing that he does to one who wants to live in Him is give the eye in order to look at us and know us, when we are known everything is done, the living in my Divine Will is assured with his full rigor.”

Whence my mind was lost in a sea of light and thoughts and my sweet Jesus surprising me said to me:

“Ah! My daughter, the living in my Will is the living of Heaven, it is to feel in the soul the life of the light, of the love, the life of the Divine action, the life of the prayer, that which she does, for her everything is palpating life in her acts. You should know that one who does the Divine Will and lives in Him becomes the magnet of the Divine acts, her little motion, thought and works are magnetic, with such a powerful magnet, as to magnetize her Creator, in a way that, this magnet attracts Him so much that he can not move himself away from the creature. Our Supreme Being feels the look magnetized and he is always fixed in looking at her, he feels the arms magnetized and tightly holds her to his bosom, the magnet to our love and we pour forth so much that we arrive to feel that she loves Us as we Ourselves love.

“Now, when the creature has formed for Us this magnet, our love arrives to the excesses, as she forms her acts, even the least, she impresses our Divine mintage and we make them pass as our acts, with the imprint of our supreme image and we put them in our Divine treasures as our coins, that the creature has given Us; and if you might know what it means to be able to say that our Supreme Being has received our coins from creatures, has our image coined by ourselves, they ensure them, it would burst your heart with pure love. To give Ourselves to creatures is power that we hold, that possessing everything, to give is none other than an outlet of our love, but to put the creature in (the) condition to be able to give Us and to give us our acts not hers, coins coined with our image, and the love that overcomes everything that not being able to contain it in our emphasis of love we say: you have wounded Us, the magnet of your acts has enraptured Us, and has made Us sweet prisoners in your soul and we will make for you the equivalent to wound you, to enrapture you and to imprison you in Us. Therefore, my daughter I want you all eyes, so that you look and you know well that which my Divine Will wants to do in you.”

* * *

July 8, 1934

What is needed in order to form the life of the Divine Will in the creature. Veil that hides him, exchange of life.

The Divine Volition it seems to me that with inquiring eye he goes always watching me, if in all my interior flows as first act his adorable Will, and with an admirable and Divine jealousy invests all, surrounds all, watches the act whether it is little or great, but watches, if there races the life of his Will, because all the value and the greatness of an act, becomes confirmed if there is his Will within, all the rest reduces itself for when it might be great, to a most thin veil, that it is enough to cover and to hide the great treasure, the inimitable life of the Divine Will. Now while my mind was all occupied by the Divine Will, my Highest Good Jesus that it seems that he takes inexpressible gusto, when he wants to speak of his Will, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, in order to have that an act might be pleasant to Me and my Will might be able to form entire life in it, the whole interior of the creature must be centralized in my Fiat! The will must want it, the desire must ardently desire that which the volition wants, the affections, the tendencies, must desire it and be inclined only in order to receive the life of my Will in their act, the heart to love and to enclose in her heartbeat, the life of my Will, the memory to remember him, the intelligence to understand him. So that everything must be centralized in the act in which my Will wants to form his life. Since in order to form a life there is needed will, desire, heart, affections, tendencies, memory, intelligence, otherwise one could not call it whole and perfect life, thus my Divine Will wanting to form life in the act of the creature, centralizes in her act, now life, that he wants to form, otherwise one could not say whole and perfect life. Behold therefore my Will voids everything, in order to be able to reciprocate the life of his love in the love of the creature, his desires and Divine tendencies, in those of them, his uncreated heartbeat in the created heartbeat, his eternal memory in the finite memory, in short everything, he wants to be free with everything, in order to be able to form whole life not half, and as the creature surrenders hers, thus my Divine Will makes exchange of his. And then his life is fecund and generates in the veil of the creature that covers him, love, desires, tendencies, memory all his, and forms there the great prodigy of his life in her. Otherwise one could not say life, but simple adherence to my Will, not yet in everything, but partly, hence it would not bring either the effects, or the goods that He possesses. (An) image would be the sun if its light might not possess heat, sweetnesses, tastes, perfumes, heats, it could not form the beautiful tints of the colors, the variety of sweetnesses, the softness of the tastes and perfumes, if it gives them to the earth it is because it possesses them, and if it might not possess them, it would not be true life of light, but sterile light without fecundity. Thus the creature, if she doesn't surrender the post of all her interior to my Will, she could not possess his love that never extinguishes itself, the sweetnesses and Divine tastes, and all that which composes the life of my Will. Therefore do not keep anything of you and for you, and you will give Us the great glory to have a life of our Will upon the earth veiled by your mortal castoffs, and you the great good of possessing him, you will feel flow in your castoffs, as rapid sea, the happiness, the joys, the firmness of good, the love that always loves, the sweetness, the tastes, the conquests of your Jesus will also be yours. Your castoffs will continue the office of sufferings down here, but they will have a life of Divine Will that will sustain him, and he will make use of them to develop the life of his conquests and Divine victories in the human castoffs. Hence always ahead in my Will.”

* * *

July 15, 1934

One who lives in the Divine Will puts herself in (the) condition of receiving and of being able to always give to her Creator. How one who prays disburses the coin, forms the void, and acquires

the capacity to possess that which she asks.

I was making my round in the Divine Will and my little human volition, lost in Him, burned from the desire to weave all his acts, in order to make them mine, in order to be able to master over everything, and have in my power an infinite glory, an eternal love, innumerable acts, distinct the one from the other, that never finishes in order to be able to always give love, glory, works to my Creator. As daughter of his Will I feel the need to possess everything, in order to hold the love, that never says enough, and Divine acts worthy of the Supreme Majesty. And my always adorable Jesus, almost in order to confirm that which I thought he said to me.

“My daughter, for one who does my Will and lives in Him everything is hers, if He gives to the Creature He doesn’t give as alone, but brings all his works, because they are inseparable from Him, and he makes use of them in order to make space, to feed, to felicitate, to enrich, with his immense riches, she that lives in Him, and he puts the creature in (the) condition to be able to always receive. If my Divine Volition might not be able to give all, and always give and always receive from one who lives in his Volition, it would not be (a) true happy life in him, because the substance of happiness becomes formed by new surprises, by the exchanges of gifts, by the various and manifold works, possessing every source of various joys that the one makes gift to the other, and to each other they attest their love, the one flows into the other, and in this pouring of themselves they communicate the secrets and the creature makes new discoveries of the Divinity and acquires other knowledges of the Supreme Being. Life in my Will is not a joke, but working life and continuous activity. Rather you should know that there is no thing that has been done by God, by the Saints and by everyone that is not given to one who lives in my Volition, because there is nothing of good that to Him doesn’t belong, and as you feel the need to possess everything, thus everyone feels the need to give themselves to you. But do you know why they want to pass through the channel of the human volition? To order to give the good that they possess and to duplicate the good, the glory of the their acts to their Creator. So that as you desire to re-trace them, thus our works and those of all Heaven, they desire to be re-traced, it seems that they say the one behind the other: to me it is not given to go ahead, take me up in your power, unite everyone together, so that one is the love of everyone, the glory to that Supreme Will that has given birth to us in his womb and has given life to us. Therefore the living in my Will is the prodigy of prodigies, it is the unity of everything, it is to possess everything, to receive and to give everything, and since I always want to give to the creature, ardently I long for her in my Fiat, in order to give that which I want and to make my desires completed.”

After this I thought to myself: but what good comes to me, what glory do I give to my God, with always asking that his Will be known, and take his regal post that awaits him in creatures? It seems to me that I don’t know how to ask for other, it seems to me that Jesus himself is tired of hearing me say the same story, I want your Fiat as life, for me and for everyone, but while I thought this my sweet Jesus added:

“My blessed daughter, you should know that when the creature prays incessantly to obtain a good, she acquires the capacity to possess that good, and possessing it she will hold (the) virtue to make it possessed by the others. The prayer is as disbursement of the coin in order to buy the good that she wants, the prayer forms the respect, the appreciation, the love that is needed in order to be able possess it. The prayer forms the void in the soul where to be able to enclose the wanted good, otherwise if I wanted to give it to her, she will not have where to put it, and then you can not give me greater glory, than to ask me that my Will be known and reigns. This is my same prayer, it is the longing and the heartbeat of my Heart, they are my ardent anxieties, and you should know that my love is so much, that I want to make my Will known, that not being able to hold it back it flows over you, and I make you say: your Fiat come, your Will be known. So that it is I that prays in you, it is not you, they are my outlets of love, my loving vents, that feel the need to unite me with the creature in order to not be alone to pray for such a good, and in order to give more value to this prayer, I put in your power my works, all the Creation, my life, my tears, my sufferings, so that it not be a prayer of words alone, but (a) prayer confirmed by my works, life, sufferings and my tears. Oh! How sweetly your refrain sounds to my hearing, your loving sing-songs in which is made my echo: come your Fiat, your Will be known, and if you might not do this, you would suffocate my prayer in you, and I would remain embittered and I would remain alone, alone to pray. But I must still tell you, you should know that I feel the need to re-trace all my works and sufferings in order to ask me that my Will be known and reign; who has known him and loves him in sight of the great good, can not abstain from asking repeatedly that everyone knows and possesses him, therefore think that I am with you and I pray together with you, when you feel that you can not do less than to pray for the triumph of my Will.”

* * *

July 20, 1934

All that which goes forth from God is all innocent and holy. How the Creation is one single act of Divine Will. Who is the triumphant one in the space of the universe.

My little intelligence feels the irresistible strength of the Divine Volition that calls it, he wants her in the midst of all the Creation, in order to make them see and understand the harmony, the order, of all created things and how each one gives its tribute to its Creator. Not one created thing, for however little or great, destined to occupy the great space of the atmosphere, it doesn't give its distinct tribute to He who has created it, and in spite that they have no reason they are mute, yet with never changing action, with never moving from the post in which God has put it, it is perennial glory.

Whence I thought to myself: I also occupy space in the great void of the Creation and can I say that I am at my post wanted by God? Does my will always do one act alone of Will of God as all the Creation does? But while I thought this my beloved Jesus surprising me, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, all that which goes forth from our Supreme Being, everything is innocent and holy, nor can go forth from our Sanctity and infinite Wisdom beings or things with (a) shadow of stain and that don't contain the utility of a good, all created things feel in their nature creative virtue, and hence the continuous tribute and the glory that is due Us, because we have put them forth to the light of day, nor do We know how to do things in the least stained, nor useless things. So that all that which became created by Us is all holy, pure and beautiful, and we receive from everyone the tribute and our Will his completed act. My daughter there is no created thing animate and inanimate that doesn't commence life with completing our Will and giving us their tribute, already all the Creation is none other than one act alone of our Will, already it is at its regal post, and although unconscious, yet He holds his working life of light in the Sun, his working life of fortitude and empire in the wind, working life of immensity, in the immensity of the space, in every created thing he develops his life, and holds in his womb everyone and everything, in a way that no one can move themselves, nor make a motion, if he doesn't want it, and the veils of created things give Us the continuous tribute and the great glory of the great honor, that they are dominated by our Will. Now the creature remains, one can say (that with) original sin taken away that the newborn is not innocent and holy? And if one adds Baptism, a period of the life of the baby, even to such that the actual sin doesn't enter in her soul, is not the baby an act of my Will? And if she moves the step, if she speaks, if she thinks, if she makes her little hands act, all these little acts wanted and disposed by my Will, are they not tributes and glory that we receive? Perhaps they will be unconscious, but my Will receives from that little nature, that which He wants, it is only sin that makes one lose the Sanctity and puts the working life of my Will outside of the creature, because if there is no sin, We carry her in womb, we surround her with our Sanctity, and hence she can do no less than feel in herself the working life of my Will. You see therefore everyone and everything have beginning and are born together with my Will, innocent, holy and worthy of He who has created them, but who conserves this innocence and sanctity, one who is always at her post in my Will, she alone is the triumphant one in the space of the universe, she is the standard-bearer and she gathers the whole army of the Creation, in order to bring it to God with speaking voice and with full knowledge, the glory, the honor and the tribute of everything and everyone. Therefore one can say that my Will is everything for the creature, and her first act of being born is the continuation of his conservation, nor does he ever leave her not by way of love, nor by way of grace, nor by way of operative work, as who lives by will and know(ledge) to live in Him, and if the sin sweeps her away, he doesn't even leave her, he involves her with his dominion in his punitive justice, so that the creature and all things are inseparable from my Will. Therefore be to your heart my Will alone, recognize him as life, as Mother that raises you and feeds and wants to form of you his greatest glory and honor."

* * *

July 24, 1934

How it is established, by God the truths that must be manifested on the Divine Will. How He bilocates, repeats, traps Divine life. How the Creation didn't finish, but continues.

I felt myself all immersed in the Divine Volition, all the truths manifested to me that regard him crowded in my mind and they wanted to say and to re-say, in order to make themselves known. But alas! Their saying was of Heaven, too high, there lacked many words in order to be able to repeat their Celestial lessons, only that I felt that they were bearers of the sanctity of Heaven and of Divine joys. But while I felt all immersed in the Fiat my always amiable Jesus with an indescribable love said to me:

"My little daughter of my Will, as his daughter, I feel the need of love that the daughter knows his secrets, if I might not do this often, I would remain suffocated by the highest waves of love that issues forth from Me, so that speaking to you of my Will is for Me refreshment, it is relief, it is balm, that mitigates my flames, in order not to make me remain suffocated and burnt by my love. I am Jesus all love and I manifest my greatest love in speaking of my Divine Volition. But do you know why? The essence of our Life becomes recognized with speaking of Him and my Fiat in my word bilocates and repeats our life, in the midst of creatures, nor is there greater glory for Us, nor fullness of vent of our excessive love, than to see our life bilocated in order to give himself, to install himself, to make him our place of center, for how much the creature is capable it is a kingdom more of love and of our

Will that we acquire. Hence our creative work didn't finish, but continues, but not with creating new skies and suns in the universe, no, no, but our Divine Fiat is reserved to continue the Creation in virtue of his creative power, that as he pronounces his Fiat to create, to bilocate, to repeat our Divine Life in the midst of creatures, there can not be (the) continuation of (a) more beautiful Creation, therefore pay attention to me and listen to me. Our Supreme Majesty holds established ab eterno, all the truths of the Divine Will, that he must manifest, which are as so many queens in our Divine Being, waiting with unconquered love to make the way for earth, in order to bring as queens the great good to creatures, of these knowledges of our Fiat, which will bring the office of teacher in order to form her according to the truths that they announce. These queens of my truths will give the first kiss of the life of the Fiat and will be endowed with the virtue of transformers and of transforming into truth itself those people that will listen and will remain with them, ready to their needs, in order to help them and instruct them, we will be all love for them, disposed to give them that which they want, provided that they listen to them and let themselves be conducted and managed by them. Now all the truths on our Will, have not all gone forth yet, and those that remain wait with anxiety to depart from within our Divinity, in order to complete their office and be bearers and transformers of the good that they possess, and when all the truths that we have disposed to go forth will be manifested, all together these noble queens, they will give the assault to Us to our Divine Being and as (an) invincible army with our same Divine weapons, they will conquer Us and obtain the triumph of the kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth, resisting them will be impossible to Us and with conquering God, they will also conquer creatures. Behold the reason my speaking continues yet, because all the queens have not gone forth from our Divinity, in order to complete their office and since the speaking of my Will is (the) continuation of the Creation of the Fiat that created the universe, and as then the Creation of the universe, it was preparation to the creation of man, thus today my speaking on my Fiat is none other than (the) continuation of Creation, in order to prepare the sumptuousness, the decency to my kingdom and those that will possess it. Hence be attentive and do not let anything escape, otherwise you would suffocate an act of my Will and you would constrain Me to repeat my lessons."

* * *

August 5, 1934

Story of the love of God, the Creation enclosed in man. Sorrowful notes in the Divine love.

I was doing my round in the acts of the Divine Will, and passing from one work to the other, I arrived at the Creation of man and my sweet Jesus detaining me with an inexpressible love, that he could not contain, said to me:

"My daughter, my love makes Me feel the need to speak of the Creation of man, already all the Creation is pregnant with our love and speaks, although in mute language, and if it doesn't speak, it says with deeds and it is the greatest narrator of our love toward man, and when our love was extended in everything, in a way that she should find no point (in) which our love might not cover her, and might race toward her and more than Sun might dart her. When in everything the Creation was completed, we created man, but before creating him listen to the story of our love toward Him. Our adorable Majesty had established to construct man king of all the Creation, to give him the dominion over everything and to make him master over all our works, but in order to say true king with deeds, not with words, he had to possess in him(self) all that which we had scattered in the Creation. So that in order to be king of the sky, of the sun, of the wind, of the sea and of everything, he had to possess inside of himself a Sky, a sun, and so on, in a way that the Creation should reflect in him, and he should possess the same qualities, to reflect in the Creation and to master it. In fact, if he might not have an eye full of sight, how could he enjoy the light of the Sun and take of it when he might want some? If he might not have feet and hands in order to cross the earth and take that which the earth produces, how could he call himself king of the earth? If he might not have the respiratory organ in order to breathe the air, how could he make use of it? And thus with all the rest. Hence before creating man we looked at the whole Creation in our emphasis of love and we exclaimed: how very beautiful are our works, but among all the most beautiful we will make man, we will centralize everything in him, in a way that we will find the Creation outside and inside of him. And as we went molding him, thus we enclosed in him the Sky of reason, the sun of intelligence, the rapidity of the wind in the thought, the extension of the space, the fortitude, the empire in the will, the motion in the soul in which we contained the sea of graces, the celestial air of our love and all the senses of the body, as the most beautiful flowering. Oh! Man how very beautiful you are, but not content with this we put in him the great Sun of our Will, and giving him the great gift of the word, so that he might with deeds and with words be the eloquent narrator of his Creator, it was our image with which We delighted ourselves to enrich him with our most beautiful qualities.

“But not content with of all this, we were taken with love so exuberant toward him, that our immensity involved him anywhere, everywhere, and in every instant, our omniscience looked at him in every thing and even in the fibers of his heart our Power sustained him, bringing him everywhere in our Paternal arms; our life, our motion, palpated in his heartbeat, breathed in his breath, worked in his hands, walked in his feet, and arrived to make himself footstool even under his steps; our Fatherly goodness in order to hold this dear son of ours secure, put forth (the) conditions that he could not be separated from Us, nor We from him. What else couldn't we do and didn't we do? Behold therefore we love him so much, because he cost us much, we disbursed for him our love, our power, our Will and we put in attitude our infinite Wisdom, and we didn't want other than he might love Us, and that freely he might live in all in our Will and might recognize how much we have loved him and done for him. These our loving pretensions, who (so) cruel will want to deny them? But alas! There is unfortunately some who denies them and forms there his sorrowful notes in our love. Therefore be attentive and your flight in our Will be continuous.”

After this I continued my round in the Creation, and not knowing how to do other I offered the extension of the Sky to God in order to adore him, the twinkling of the stars for profound genuflections, the light of the sun in order to love him, but while I did this I thought to myself: but the Sky, the stars, the sun, they are not animate beings, they have no reason, how can they do that which I want? And my beloved Jesus always benign added:

“My daughter, in order to create the Creation first there was needed our wanted and decided Will to create it, and when this Will of ours wanted, then he converted into work that which he wanted. So that in every created thing is our wanted and working Will, which always remained in act to want and to work. Hence offering, to our Supreme Majesty, the Sky, the sun, and other, one offers not the material and superficial thing that one sees but the same wanted and working Will of God that there is inside of every created thing, and if they don't have reason there is inside a Divine reason, and a wanted and working Will of God that animates everything, and offering them one offers us the greatest act, the most holy Will, the most beautiful works, and not interrupted, but continuous, in which there are the most profound adorations, the most perfect love, the greatest glory that the creature can give us through means of our wanted and working Will in all the Creation, and if the Sky, the stars, the sun, the wind, don't intend anything, my Will and yours intends that we want to make use of them, and it is enough."

* * *

September 24, 1934

How one who lives in the Divine Will becomes members of Him and acquires the inseparability of all the works of her Creator.

I feel as if I might swim in the immense abyss of the Divine Will, and since I am too little, I go in order to take and it doesn't succeed me other than to take some little drops of Him, and that little that I take, they remain in me, and inseparable from the Supreme Fiat, and they make me feel the inseparability of Him and all his acts. Oh! Divine Will you love so much one who lives in You, that you don't want to do anything, nor do you know how to do anything, if you don't put in part She who already lives in you, it is so much your enthusiasm of love that says: that which I do you who lives in me must do, it seems to me that you would become unhappy if you might not be able to do and say that which the creature does I do, that which I do she does.

But while my mind was lost in Him and I felt the strong ties of his inseparability, my sweet Jesus repeating his little visit to my soul, said to me:

"My little daughter of my Volition, you should know that the inseparability from Him is such and so much for one who lives in my Will, that there is no thing that he does in Heaven and in all the Creation that he doesn't make one who lives in Him part of. As the body possesses the inseparability of its members, and that which one member does, all the other members centralize themselves in the member that works, they are to light of everything, and all take part, thus one who lives in my Will becomes (a) member of Him, and as connatural on both parts they feel such inseparability, and that which one does the other does. Whence my Volition in Heaven felicitates, beatifies, with his smiles of love he enchants the whole Celestial court and makes one experience unheard of joys, in earth to one who lives in his Volition, he develops his working, sanctifying, strengthening life and doing as (a) conqueror he makes so many conquests for how many acts, heartbeats, words, thoughts, footsteps, she does in Him. Now (in) Heaven, the blessed feel and take part in the working and conquering life that my Will does upon the earth in the souls that live in Him, they feel the inseparability of their acts, breaths and heartbeats, and the happiness of my conquering Will, through which they feel new joys, the beautiful surprises that my conquering Fiat knows how to give in creatures, and since they are conquests of a Divine Will the blessed that already live of Him feel them, conquerors of his goods and his works, and oh, how many new seas of happiness they enjoy. And behold Heaven feels itself inseparable even from the breaths of the creature that lives in my Will upon the earth, and the creature feels in virtue of Him, the inseparability of the joys and happiness of Heaven, the peace of the Saints and his, the firmness and confirmation in the good are converted into nature, the life of Heaven one feels flow in her members, more than blood in her veins. Everything is inseparable for one who lives in my Will, from the sky, from the sun, from all the Creation, there is no thing that can separate itself from her, it seems that everyone and everything says to her: we are inseparable from you, my same sufferings suffered upon the earth, my life, my works, they say to her: we are yours, they surround her, invest her, and take the post of honor and they bind themselves with inseparable ways (to) her. Behold therefore that the creature who lives in my Volition always feels little, because feeling the inseparability from my so many works, great and innumerable of my love, of my light and sanctity she is the true tiny one in the midst of all my works, but tiny fortunate one, loved by everyone, that she arrives even to give beauties, new conquests, new joys to Heaven. Therefore if you want everything, live always in my Volition and you will feel yourself (to be) the happiest creature.”

* * *

October 7, 1934

Reciprocal love between God and the creature exchange of action, labyrinth of love, in which one becomes put who lives in my Fiat. God sower of the field of souls.

I am beneath the eternal waves of the Divine Fiat and my poor mind feels his sweet enchantment, his Power and operative virtue, that investing me makes me do that which He does, it seems to me that with his eye of light, he gives life and makes everything rise, and with his empire, he reigns over everything, keeps track of everything, not even a breath escapes, he gives everything, and wants everything, but with so much love that it gives of the incredible, and what stupefies one more is that he wants that the creature knows that which he does, in order to have her inseparable with himself, and have her do that which the Divine Will himself does. I remained spellbound and my littleness lost itself and if it were not that my sweet Jesus shook me making me his little visit, I would have remained there, who knows how long, and all goodness and love he said to me:

“My good daughter, do not wonder, everything is possible to one who lives in my Will. There is a reciprocal love on both parts, between God and the creature, but so much so that the human littleness arrives to want and to do her acts of God, and as hers she loves them so much, that she would she put forth (her) life in order to defend, love and give him all the glory, the first place of honor, to one of these Divine acts alone. God for exchange, makes his the acts of the creature, he finds in these acts himself, the vent of his love, the height of his sanctity, and oh, how he loves them, and in this reciprocal love, they love each other so much, that they remain imprisoned the one in the other, but voluntary imprisonment, that while it makes them inseparable, they feel happy that God feels loved and he finds his post in the creature, and she feels loved by God and holds her post in the Supreme Being. There is no greater happiness for the creature to be able to say, and to be certain of being loved by God, and there is no greater happiness for Us, (than) to be loved by one who was created by Us, only in order to love us and to complete our Will. Now the creature, while she finds herself in her Creator, she would like that everyone might love him, that they might recognize him, and in virtue of the Divine Fiat with which she is animated, she wants to make arise and recalls all the acts of creatures in God, in order to tell him(,) I give you everything, and for everyone(,) I love you, hence she makes herself together with the Divine Volition thought for every intelligence, look for every eye, word for every voice, heartbeat for every heart, motion for every work, step for every foot, what thing doesn't one want to give Me who lives in my Will? Everyone and everything. Therefore she says to my Will: I feel the need to possess your love, your power, in order to be able to have a love that says to you for everyone I love you. So that in her our Will makes us find the love and the exchange of all the acts of creatures. Oh! My Will, in what power you cast the soul, and a labyrinth of love, one who lives in you, and such and so much that the human littleness feels drowned by love and as refreshment she feels the need of retracing everything, in order to say her continuous little refrain, I love you, I love you, as vent, of the great love that my Divine Will gives her. This is our life, all of love, our story woven ab eterno all of love, such must be one who lives in our Will, there must be such accord between her and Us, as to form one act alone and one love alone. Now my blessed daughter I want to make you know how we love creatures and our continuous outlets of love that we pour over them, our first act of our happiness, is love and to give love, if we don't give love there lacks us the breath, the motion and the food to our Supreme Being, if we don't give love, and with deeds we love, we would halt the course to our Divine life, that which can not be. Behold therefore our contrivances, the industries, the stratagems of love, they are innumerable, and to love not only with words, but with deeds and works working without ever ceasing. Now as in the Creation we created a sun that with its working light and heat it gives light to everyone, it transforms the face of the earth and goes sowing in every single plant to some the color, to some the perfume, to some the sweetness there is no thing in which the Sun doesn't cast its effect, almost as seed of maturation, in order to make all plants suitable in order to feed man and give him pleasure with so many tastes, almost innumerable. Thus our Supreme Being keeping for himself the noblest part of man, that is the soul, more than sun, we fix his interior, we dart it, mould it, and as we touch it more than solar light, we cast the seed of the thought in the intelligence, the seed of our memory in the memory, the seed of our Will in his, the seed of the word in the voice, the seed of the motion in the works, the seed of our love in the heart, and so on with all the rest. Now if she is attentive to Us working the field of her soul together with Us, because we never withdraw our Divine sun, at night and in the daytime we are above her, more than (a) tender mother, now to feed her, now to warm her, now to defend her, now to work together, and to cover her and hide her in our love. Hence we will make a beautiful harvest that will serve to feed them with Us, and to praise our love, our infinite power and wisdom and if she doesn't stay attentive to Us, our Divine seed remains suffocated, without producing the good that it possesses and she remains fasting, without the Divine foods, and We remain fasting of her love. How sorrowful it is to sow without harvesting, but with everything our love is so much, that we don't leave, we continue to dart her, to warm her, almost as sun that is not tired of making its little pass of light, in spite that it doesn't find neither plant, nor flowers, where to cast the seed of its effects. Oh! How many more goods would the sun do if it might not find so many sterile earths, stones and abandonment by man. Thus We, if we might find more souls that might give Us attention, we would give so many goods as to transform creatures into living saints and our faithful copies. However in our Divine Will there is no danger that she doesn't receive our daily sowing, and that she doesn't work together with her Creator in the field of her soul. Therefore always in my Fiat I want you, nor give thought of other, thus we will make a beautiful harvest, and you and I we will have abundant foods, to be able to furnish the others, and we will be happy with one sole happiness."

* * *

October 21, 1934

How the characteristic and property of the Divine Will is spontaneity. How all the beauty, the sanctity, the greatness is in It.

I am always en route in the Divine Fiat, my little intelligence never stops, it races, races always in order to be able to find myself, for how much it is possible for me, together with the course of the incessant acts that the Divine Will does for love of creatures, to think that He always loves me, nor does he ever cease loving me, and I not to race in his love, in order to love him, I can not do it, I feel that I do him a wrong, indeed I feel myself in the labyrinth of his love, and without effort I love him and I want to investigate his love in order to see how much more he loves me(.) And I remained surprised in seeing his immense seas of love, and my love, hardly (a) little drop and what is more, drawn from his same sea.

Hence it is worthwhile to me to remain in his same sea and say to him: your love is mine, therefore we love each other with one love alone, thus I calm down, and the Divine Volition is content, it is necessary to take his, to be bold, otherwise one remains without giving anything, with a love so tiny that it dies on the lips. But while my mind blundered, my sweet Jesus, the dear (of) my Life, making his brief little visit, that it seemed that he took gusto to listen to me, said to me:

“My little daughter, the love, the acts, the spontaneous sacrifices, without force, that the creature does for Me are so pleasant to Me, that in order to enjoy Myself more I enclose them in my Heart and so much is my contentment that I go always repeating: how beautiful they are, how sweet is her love. Aye! I find in them my Divine way, my spontaneous sufferings, my love that, always loves, without anyone forcing Me, (or) praying Me. You should know that one of the most beautiful characteristics, and as his legitimate property is that my Divine Will possesses in nature the virtue spontaneity. Everything is spontaneous in Him, if he loves, if he works, if with one single act he gives life and conserves everything, he doesn’t put forth not one effort, nor is he prayed by anyone, his motto is I want and I do, because effort says necessity and We don’t have (to) neither by any need, nor by anyone. Effort says lack of power, while we are powerful by nature and everyone hangs from our power and in one instant we can do everything, and in another instant if we want we can knock down everything, force says lack of love, while our love is such and so much that it gives of the incredible. Behold therefore we created everything without anyone praying to us, or saying anything to Us, and in the Redemption itself, not one law was over Me, no one could obligate me to suffer so much even to die, but my law was love and the operative virtue of my Divine spontaneity, so much so that the sufferings were first formed in Me, I gave them life, and then investing creatures they re-gave them to me, and with that spontaneous love with which I had given them life, thus I received them, no one could have been able to touch me, if I might not have wanted it. So that all the beauty, the good, the sanctity, the greatness, is in working with spontaneous ways, while one who works and loves forced, loses the most beautiful (thing), and they can be called and are works and love without life, and accordingly subject to a mutable way, while spontaneity produces the firmness in the good.

“Now my daughter, the sign that the soul lives in my Divine Will is to love, to work and also to suffer spontaneously, force doesn’t exist. My Will that she holds with herself communicates his spontaneity to her, in order to have her with himself, in his love, that races, in his works that never ceases, otherwise it would be (an) annoyance to hold her in his womb of light without the characteristic of his spontaneous way; rather the creature is all eyes in order to look at my Divine Fiat that she doesn’t want to remain behind, but she wants to race together, in order to love with his love and in order to find herself in his works, in order to repay them and to praise his power and creative magnificence. Hence race, race always, and make that your soul without force plunges itself into my Divine Volition in order to cross together his loving ways and floods of stratagems for love of creatures.”

* * *

November 5, 1934

True love in the creature forms the little post in the Divine works, in order to be able to enclose the life of the Divine Will.

I feel an irresistible force that never allows me to stop, and it seems that every created thing, all that which my sweet Jesus has done, has done and suffered, says to me: “For you I have created it, for your love, and you nothing, you want to put forth for my love, nothing of yours in that which I have done for you? I have cried for you, I have suffered, I am dead for you, and you want to put nothing in my tears, in my sufferings, in my death, my whole Being searches you, and don’t you want to invest and search all my things in order to invest them and enclose in them your I love you? I am all love, and don’t you want to be all love for Me.”

I remained confused and my poor mind took the course of the acts done by the Divine Will in order to be able to say: I also have put there mine in your acts, it might be a little I love you of mine, but in my I love you I put all (of) myself. But while I made my course, my sweet Jesus surprising me with his brief little visit, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you should know that true love in the creature puts Me in the conditions of making me forget everything and disposing myself to concede that my Will comes to reign upon the earth, not that I suffer forgetfulness, this can not be in Me, it would be (a) defect, but rather I experience so much gusto in the true love of the creature, when I find that all the particles of her being says to Me that they love Me, and this love of hers for me flowing outside, invests Me and races in all my Being, in my works, and as kneading itself with Me, it makes Me feel her love anywhere and everywhere. In order to enjoy this love of the creature I put everything aside, and as if I might forget she inclines Me so much that she disposes Me and imposes herself over Me, to give her surprising things and that which she wants, and finish the kingdom of my Will. True love holds such power that it calls my Will as life in the human being. You should know that when I extended the Heavens, I created the sun, since from them in my omniclairvoyance, I saw your love race in the Sky, investing the light of the sun, and in all created things you formed a little post in order to love me, and oh, how I rejoiced and my Will even from then raced toward you and of those that would have loved Me, in order to give himself as life, in that little post of love. You see therefore, my Will crossed the centuries, assembled them into one single point, all in act, and I found the post of love where to put his life, in order to continue it with all his majesty and Divine decorum. I came upon the earth, but do you know in whom I found the little post to enclose my life? In the true love of the creature, even from then I already saw your love, that crowning me invested all my Humanity and flowed in my blood, in all my particles, almost kneading itself with Me. Everything was in act for Me and as present, and my tears found the little place where to pour itself out, my love, my sufferings, my life, the refuge where to be able to be in a secure place, and my death found even the resurrection in the true love of the creature, and my Divine Will found his kingdom where to reign. Therefore if you want that my Divine Will comes to reign as life in creatures, make me find your love everywhere, anywhere and in every thing, make me feel it always, with this you will form the fire where to burn everything, which consuming all that which is not of my Will, you will form the post where to be able to enclose my Will, and then all my works will find (their) post, their hideaway where to be able to continue the good and the working virtue that they possess, and thus we will do it on both parts (the) exchange of post, you will find your little post in Me and in all my works, and I will find it in you and in all your acts. Hence always ahead in my Divine Will in order to form the fire of love where you will burn yourself and all the impediments that impede his reign in the midst of creatures.”

* * *

November 18, 1934

Love of God, in the Creation, the glory that it would have given if it might have reason. Sacrifice that love makes of his glory, his continuous cry. The army, armed with love, exchanges of love between God and the creature.

I am always in search of the acts that the Divine Will continually does, and since he is not ever found without doing anything, but always in (the) working act, oh, how beautiful it is to be able to say to my Creator that his Divine Fiat loves me so much that he is extending the Sky, creating the sun, giving life to the wind and to all the other things, because he loves me, and so much is his love that he says to me with deeds and with words: for you I do this, I didn't do but I do for Us, as much as it costs Us creating so much conserving our works. Whence I turned in the Creation, and the Sky, the stars, the sun and it seemed that everything came to meet me with their little refrain: for you our Creator has created us, because he loves you, therefore come to love (He) who so very has loved you. I dispersed myself in the created things and my always amiable Jesus making himself met, detaining me said to me:

“My little daughter of my Divine Volition, our love was so much and is still in the Creation, that if the creature might pay attention she would remain drowned by our love, and she would not know how to do other than love us. Do you feel my daughter, where our love for the creature arrives, We created all the Creation without reason, oh, if we might have endowed it with reason what glory wouldn't it have given Us, a Sky always extended without ever moving from its post, because such was our Will? A sun that does faithfully without ever changing itself (as) the administrator of our light, of our love, of our sweetness, of our perfumes and of all our goods, without ever changing (the) action and only because we wanted it thus? If it might have reason what glory wouldn't be given Us? A wind that always blows ruling in the great void of the universe, a sea that always murmurs, if they might have reason what glory wouldn't they have given Us? But no, the cry of our love cried out more strongly than our glory and almost impeded Us from giving reason to the Creation, and crying out strongly said to Us: it is for love of the creature that we have created everything, hence to her the reason, so that she comes in the Sky, in order to reciprocate us in incessant love and in perennial glory, because we extended a Sky over her head, and in every star we feel her cry of love that loves Us with immovable love. She comes in the sun and transforming herself in it as if it were hers, she reciprocates Us with love of light, with love of sweetness and gives Us the exchange of love of the administration of our goods that the sun gives her. Therefore we want the creature in all created things with right of justice, because she gives Us the exchange that they would have given Us if all the Creation might have reason. Behold therefore we endowed her with reason, and we want that our Will might dominate her and might have his regal post as he holds it in the Creation, so that uniting her with all created things she might understand all our notes of love toward her, and she might exchange Us with her notes of incessant love and of perennial glory. We never stop loving her with deeds and with words, and she is obligated to always love us and to not remain behind, but to come to meet us and to put her love over our same loving notes.

“Beyond this, our love that never says enough, always wants to give to the creature, nor does he remain content, if he doesn’t find new inventions of love in order to tell her I have always loved you and with working love, hence in every single created thing our Fiat put within and invested them with a distinct love the one from the other, in order to tell her I love you powerfully, in another it put the sweetness of our love and there the amiability and there the gentleness and there our love that enraptures, that binds, that conquers, in a way that the creature would not have been able to resist Us, in short in every created thing we put the weapon of our distinct love. We can say that our Fiat put in the Creation an army armed with love, with weapons one more powerful than the other, and endowing the creature with reason she should understand and receive all these weapons of love through means of created things, and she remaining invested by these specialties of weapons of love, should be able to say to us, not only with words, but with deeds, as we do: I love you with powerful love, my love is sweet, is amiable and gentle for you, so much so that I feel myself languish, I come to less, I feel the need of your arms in order to sustain me, and supported by you, I feel that my love enraptures you, binds you, conquers you, they are your same weapons of love, with which you have armed me that love you, that move to battle to love each other. My daughter, how much hidden love the Creation contains and since the creature does not elevate herself in our Will, she doesn’t come to live in Him, with all that she has her reason, she doesn’t understand anything, and We remain without the exchange to Us with owed justice. And our love does what? With unconquered patience he waits and continues his cry, that he wants to be loved by the creature, because for her love he would have sacrificed an interminable glory, if he had given reason to all the Creation, for love of creatures. Hence be attentive to live in our Divine Volition, so that making himself revealer of our love he surrenders the weapons to you in order to let us each other love, with the quality of our same love, and oh, how I will be content and also you will be content from it.”

* * *

November 25, 1934

Living in the Divine Will is as one might live between Father and child. Her acts are visits to the Celestial Father. Divine abyss in which one who lives in the Divine Will is put.

I am always returning in the celestial inheritance of the Divine Fiat, every act that I do it seems to me that I return in the arms of my Celestial Father, but in order to do what? In order to receive a look, a kiss, a caress, a little word of love, one knowledge more of his Supreme Being, in order to be able love him more, and not only in order to receive, but also in order to give the exchange of his Paternal tenderness to him. In the Divine Volition none other is done than, God develops his Paternity with a tender and indescribable love, as if he himself awaits the creature in order to cradle her in his arms, in order to say to her: know that I am your Father, and you are my daughter. Oh! How I love the crown of my children around Me, with them around Me I feel more happy, I feel myself Father, and there is no greater contentment than to possess numerous offspring, that attest the love, the progeny to their Father. And the creature with entering in the Divine Volition doesn’t do other than do (as) daughter to her Father. Instead outside of the Divine Volition the rights of Paternity and progeny cease. But while my mind was lost in the crowd of so many thoughts on the Divine Fiat, the Sovereign Celestial Jesus, the dear (of) my Life, surprising me with a love more than Paternal in (the) act of taking me up between his arms, said to me:

“My daughter, my daughter, if you might know what are my anxieties, my sighs, and how I await and re-await to see you return in my Will, you would be more attentive to return there more often, my love arrives to render me restless, when I don't see you jump into my arms, in order to give you my love, my Paternal tenderness and to receive yours, but do you know when you jump into my arms? When seeing you tiny, tiny you want to love me and you don't know how to love me, you tell Me an I love You, and your I love You forms the jump in order to fling you into my arms, and since you see that your I love You is little, boldly you take my love and you tell Me an I love You, great, great, and I enjoy that my daughter loves Me with my love, and I delight so much to exchange my acts with that creature, in my Will after all; it is not to strangers that I give, that I must use the weights, the measure, but I give to my children, therefore I let them take that which they want. So that every time that you remember to make your acts flow in my Will, your prayer, your sufferings, your I love you, your work, they are little visits that you make your Father, in order to ask whatever thing, and He in order to say to you: tell me what you want? And be certain that you will always obtain other gifts and favors."

Jesus became silent, and I felt the extreme need to rest between his arms, in order to reassure myself from his so many privations, but with my surprise, I saw sweet Jesus with a brush in hand, and with an admirable mastery he painted in my soul alive, the acts of the Divine Will done in the Creation and Redemption and then taking up the word he added:

"My Will encloses everything, inside and outside of oneself, and where He reigns he doesn't know how to be, nor can he be without the life of his acts, because one can call his acts the arms, the step, the word of my Will, hence (for) my Will to be in the creature, without his works, it would be as a broken life, that which can not be, therefore I don't do other than paint his works, so that where there is the life his works becomes centralized, you see therefore in what (a) Divine abyss one finds the creature that possesses my Will, inside of herself she feels his life, with all his works, centralized in her littleness, for how much it is possible for a creature, outside of herself she feels his interminability of which one doesn't see the confinements, which possessing the communicative strength, one feels as under a copious rain that rains on her his works, his love, the multiplicity of his Divine goods. My Divine Will encloses everything and wants to give everything to the creature. He wants to be able to say I have denied her nothing, I have given everything to one who lives in my Will."

* * *

January 20, 1935

Living in the Divine Volition makes the Paternity of her Creator felt and she feels the right to be his daughter. Three prerogatives that one acquires who lives in Him.

My poor mind loses itself in the Divine Volition, but so much so that I don't know how to repeat that which it understands, nor that which I experience in that celestial sojourn of the Divine Fiat, I know how to say only that I feel the Divine Paternity, that awaits me between his arms in order to say to me with all love: we are as children and Father, come to enjoy my Paternal tenderness, my loving traits, my infinite sweetness, allow me to do for you as Father, there is no greater gusto that I experience, than to be able to develop my Paternity, and you come, without fear, come to give me your progeny/(daughterhood), give me the love, the tenderness of daughter. Being my Will (is) one with yours, to Me is given the Paternity toward you, and to you is given the right of daughter. Oh! Divine will how very admirable and powerful you are, you alone have the virtue to unite whatever distance and dissimilarity with our Celestial Father, it seems to me that this living in You is truly, to feel the Divine Paternity and to feel oneself daughter of the Supreme Being. But while my mind was crowded by so many thoughts over Him, my sweet Jesus making me his brief little visit said to me:

“My blessed daughter, it is really this to live in my Will, to acquire the right of daughter, and God acquires the supremacy, the command, the right of Father, only He knows how to unite together the one and the other, and form one life alone. Now you should know that one who lives in my Divine Volition acquires three prerogatives. First: the right of Divine life. All that which she does is life that she feels, if she loves she feels the life of love, and as life she feels it flow in the mind, in the breath, in the heart, in everything she feels the vital virtue that forms in herself not the act that is subject to cease, but the continuation of an act that forms life, if she prays, if she adores, if she repairs, she feels the incessant life of the Divine prayer, adoration, reparation, not human, that is not subject to interruption. So that every act done in my Will is a vital act, that the soul acquires, in Him everything is life and the soul acquires the life of the good that she does in Him, what great difference between a good that possesses life and a good or act that as she does it, the life of that act finishes, as life she holds it in her power, and feels the continuation of the life of that good, instead as act, she won't hold it in her power, nor will she feel the continuation of it, and that which is not continuous, can not be called life. And only in my Will are these acts found full of life, because they have for beginning the Divine life which is not subject to finish, and therefore can give life to everything and everyone, instead outside of Him all things, even the greatest works, find the end, and oh, what (a) beautiful prerogative that only my Will can give, to feel her acts changed in the soul into perennial Divine life.

“Now to the first prerogative goes out in field the second, that is the right of property. But who is it who endows her? Who constitutes her proprietor? My Will himself, because in Him there is not poverty, everything is abundance, abundance of sanctity, of light, of graces, of love, and since he possesses these as life, it is just that she possesses as hers these Divine properties, so that she feels herself mistress of the sanctity, mistress of the light, of the grace, of the love and of all the Divine goods, and only in my Will there is this Mastery outside of Him, (the human) one gives everything by measure and without making them owners, what difference between the one and the other. From the second is born the third prerogative: the right of glory. There is no thing that she does, little or great, natural or supernatural, that is not given the right of glory to her, right to glorify their Creator in every thing, even in the breath, in the heartbeat, right to be glorified themselves, in the glory of He from whom there is no glory that doesn't come forth. Therefore in my Will you will find all and all at your disposition and with right, not human but Divine, of which my Will himself loves to surrender these Divine rights of his to you, loving the creature as his true daughter.”

* * *

February 24, 1935

The reason, the eye of the soul, and light that makes known the beauty of her good works. What are the rights of the Divine Will, how in Him, there are not intentions but acts.

I am always between the arms of the Divine Will and although between the intense bitterness of the privations of my sweet Jesus, that more than sea inundates my poor soul, his light is inaccessible and it is not given me neither to enclose it all in my soul, nor to understand it, he doesn't leave me ever, rather overcoming the sea of my bitteresses, he makes use of it as victory and conquest that which he does over my poor human will. Whence I thought to myself that the whole value, the whole good it seems to me that it is all of the Divine Will, and to me (there) remains nothing (else), but while I thought this my sweet Jesus, the dear (of) my life, making for me his brief little visit, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you should know that We endowed the creature with reason, so that she might know the good and the evil that she might do, and in every act that she might do, if good she might be endowed with new merit, new grace, new beauty and greater union with her Creator, if bad, she might undergo a suffering from it, which (as) she suffers, it makes her feel the weakness and distance from He who had created her. The reason is the eye of the soul and light that while it makes (its) way to the creature, it makes known the beauty of her good works, the fruits of her sacrifices, and when she does evil she knows how to tear it to pieces. The reason holds this virtue, if the creature works good she feels herself at her post of honor and as king of herself, she holds the order, and in virtue of the merit that she acquires she feels the strength and the peace, and if she does evil she feels all thrown into confusion and enslaved by her same evils. Now if the creature does good acts in my Divine Will in virtue of the reason that she holds, we give her the merit of Divine acts, the merit becomes given to her according to what she knows and according to whether the human volition wants to work, if in ours, she elevates herself so much that she doesn't remain in the depths of human actions although good but she comes into our Divine Volition, as sponge she plunges herself within and impregnates her acts with light, with sanctity, with love, in a way that her act disappears in ours and our Divine act reappears, hence with justice the Divine merit should race, and since in our Divine Will she loses the human prestige, one believes that the creature doesn't do anything, but this is not true. If He works it is in virtue of the thread of the human volition that he has received in his hands, that forms his triumph and conquests over the act of the creature, and the human reason that voluntarily comes to surrender her received rights, as homage and mastery to He who has received her, and this is more than to do, because God has received the exchange of the most beautiful gifts that he gave to the creature, that is the reason and the will, with this she gives Us all that which she can give us, she recognizes Us, she strips herself of herself, she loves Us with pure love, and our love is so much, that we dress her with Ourselves, we give her our works, in a way that We and she we can say that we do it together, we will put Ourselves in the conditions that the creature can not do anything without our Will. And so much is our goodness, that even when the creature does good humanly, since in the good always races the reason, we give her the human merit, because it is our usual way to not leave without reward not one good act of the creature. One can say that we remain all eyes over her in order to see in what we should credit her?”

After this he became silent, and I continued to think how this Divine Will is all eyes over us, he loves us so much, and doesn't leave us one instant and my sweet Jesus resumed to speak:

“My daughter, my Divine Will is everything for the creature, without Him, she could not even live not even a minute, all her acts, motions and steps can be called fed (to her), parts that my Volition makes them and the creature receives them, she feels them in herself and doesn't know neither who feeds her, nor who gives the life to her life, therefore for many it is as if my Will isn't for them, and she doesn't give Him the owed rights that is appropriate to give him. Hence it is necessary to know what these rights of my Divine Volition are in order to have that she knowing them, she might be able to exchange it and know who He is that is life of their life, and that they are not other than the naked ones, the animated statues animated by Him. Now, the rights are innumerable, right of creation, right of conservation, of continuous animation, all that which he had created and that serves to the well-being of man, constitutes one of his rights over her, therefore the sun, the air, the wind, the water, the earth and everything, have been created and given to man by my Will, hence for how many things he has given her so many rights more he holds over man, my Redemption, the pardon after sin, my grace, the good to work, they are greater rights that he acquires over her. One can say that she is as kneaded in my Will, and yet not known. What sorrow to not be recognized! Now in order to have the triumph, the life of my Will in the creature, it is necessary that she knows what he has done, what he does for love of them, and what are (his) just rights and, when she will have known this she will put herself in order with my Volition, she will feel who it is that forms her life, who moves in her motion, who beats in her heart, and while she will receive from Him the life that forms her life, she will re-give to Him as homage, love and glory that same life that he forms in her, and my Will will receive his rights, and she will return in his bosom of light, all that which is his, that he had given her with so much love, in short he will feel reborn anew in his arms she who with so much love he had created. Oh! If everyone might know the rights of my Will, his ardent and constant love, that is so much that while he gives her life, he puts her forth to the light of day, more than Mother, his jealousy of love is so much, that he doesn't leave her an instant, he invests her inside and outside, above and below, to the right and to left, and although the creature might not know Him, nor love Him, He with Divine heroism continues to love her and makes himself life and provider of the acts of the creature. Oh! My will, You alone know how to love with heroic, strong, incredible and infinite love, she whom you created and doesn't even recognize you. Human ingratitude how very great you are."

Whence I felt that I touched with (my) hand the great love of the Divine Fiat and I thought to myself: how can one live in Him, perhaps (by) always putting forth the intention to live in Him? And my amiable Jesus added:

"My good daughter, living in my Will, there are no intentions, the intention serves when the acts can not be done, because it lacks one who holds the virtue to give life to all the good that the creature wants to do, and this is outside of living in my Volition, and I give the merit to them not as acts, but as holy intentions. Instead in my Will there is the vivifying, active and operative virtue, in a way that all that which the creature wants to do, she finds one who forms the life to her acts, she feels the vivifying strength that vivifies her act and converts it into work. Therefore in my Will all things change, all things possess the life, the love, the prayer, the adoration, the good that one wants to do, all the virtues are full of life, hence not subject to finish, to change, because who administers life to her, holds them with himself because they have life together and I give her the merit of works animated by my Will. What difference between the intention and the works, the intention symbolizes the poor, the sick, that not being able to they would like, at least with good will, to exercise charity, to propagate good, to do who knows how many beautiful things, but the poverty, the infirmity, impedes them and renders them almost prisoners without being able to effect the good that they want. Instead working in my Divine Will symbolizes the rich, that holding the riches at his disposition, the intention doesn't have value, because if he wants he can do charity, he can go where he wants, he can do good to everyone, help everyone. They are such and so many the riches of my Volition, that the creature loses herself in Him, and with full hands she can take that which she wants in order to help everyone, and much more so without making neither shout, nor rumor, almost as tacit light, she offers the help and withdraws."

* * *

March 10, 1935

That which one does in the Divine Will doesn't remain in the depths of the earth, but departs for Heaven, in order to take the regal place in the Celestial Country.

I am always returning in the interminable sea of the Divine Will, in order to take his drops, that feed, conserve and make the life of the Divine Will grow that I feel in me. So that every truth that regards Him, is a lunch that Jesus gives me all Celestial and Divine, in order to feed me and the Supreme Fiat, every truth is an edge of Heaven that descends in me, and surrounding me awaits until I complete my acts in order to carry them to the Celestial Country. Whence while I dispersed myself in his Divine light my beloved Good Jesus repeating his brief little visit said to me:

“My blessed daughter, Heaven is always opened for one who lives in my Will, He abases himself and does together with the creature that which she does, loves together, works, prays, suffers, adores, repairs, and loves so much these acts done together with Him, that he doesn't leave them in the depths of the earth, but brings them into the Celestial sojourn, in order to have them take up their regal post, as conquests done in the base world, that belong to Him and to his beloved creature. That which one does in my Volition belongs to Heaven, the earth is not worthy of possessing it, and oh, the security, the happiness, that the creature acquires, thinking that her acts are in (the) power of the Divine Fiat and they find themselves in Heaven as her property not human but Divine, that they await she who they want to court and form her throne of glory. So much is the love, his jealousy, the identification that he feels with these acts done in his Volition, that he doesn't even leave them in the creature, but holds them with himself, as parts of his life and parts of the creature, in order to enjoy them and to feel the gusto of being loved, and as an advance that he should give her of glory in the Celestial Country. These acts done in my Volition do as narrators of the story of love that passes between the Creator and the creature, and there is no greater gusto than to feel narrated how much I have loved, how my love arrives to the excesses, even to abase myself, to want to do together that which the creature does, not only but it narrates to Me her love, that she has received my act in hers, therefore a reciprocal love forms between the one and the other, that felicitates each other. Oh! How beautiful it is to see that while she yet crosses the exile, her acts are in Heaven as my conquests, that I have done in the human will, and they each taking their office, some love Me, as I know how to love, some adore Me, with Divine adorations, and some form for Me celestial music, in order to extol me, praise me and thank me for the great portent of the work of my Will. Therefore be attentive and do not let anything escape, in which you don't call mine, so that that which you do remains animated by my Divine Will.”

Whence I continued to think of the Supreme Fiat, (a) thousand thoughts crowded in my mind and my amiable Jesus added:

“My daughter, the creature was created by Us, all in order to Us, hence it is her sacrosanct duty, that in her every act that she does, with calling He who has created her, in order to give him the dominion and the regal post, in her act, that he is by right due them, and thus the act of the creature would receive the honor, that in her act she possesses a strength, a light, a Divine act, it is our Will that it should be all filled with the Divine Being and if this isn't done she denies us a right of ours, she puts Us outside of her acts, and her acts remain human acts emptied of strength and of Divine light, with a darkness so dense, that her intelligence sees so many black shadows, that gropingly she makes some step, just suffering for whom can turn on the light and doesn't turn it on, for whom can call the strength and doesn't call it, and while she makes use of the act and conservative and active work of God, she puts it outside of her act. Now it is our decree that no one enters into Heaven, if her soul is not filled even to the brim, all with our Will and with our love, it is enough a little void of this, that Heaven is not opened for her, behold therefore the necessity of Purgatory, in order to empty herself by way of sufferings and fire, of all that which is human and to fill herself by ways of anxieties, longings and martyrdoms, with pure love and with Divine Will, in order to be able to enter into the Celestial Country and without acquiring with so many sufferings, neither merit, nor great glory, but only for the conditions that they want to be admitted to the Celestial sojourn. Instead if they might have done in earth with calling our life in their acts, every act (would) be one greater glory, one beauty more sealed by the works of her Creator. Oh! With how much love these souls are received that in them they have given the post to the Divine act with Us, We recognize Ourselves in her, and she recognizes herself in Us and recognizing each other, the happiness is such and so much on both parts that all Heaven remains surprised in seeing the joys, the glory, the beatitudes that the Supreme Being pours over this fortunate creature. Therefore I want you always in my Will and in my love, so that the love burns that which doesn't belong to Me, and my Will with his brush of light forms there our act, in your act."

* * *

March 19, 1935

The Divine Will and the human volition, two spiritual powers, facility of whom wants to possess as life; how Jesus doesn't teach, nor wants impossible things.

I feel as swept away in the eternal waves of the Divine Volition, I feel his continuous motion that as life murmurs continually, but what does he murmur? He murmurs love and gives love to everyone, he murmurs and felicitates, he murmurs and strengthens, he murmurs and gives light, he murmurs and gives life to everyone, conserves everyone, and forms the act of everyone, invests everything, involves and hides everything in himself in order to give himself to everyone and to receive everything. Oh! Power of the Divine Volition, oh, how I would like to possess you as life in the soul, to live of you, in order to not know other life than yours, but oh, how very distant you are, too much is needed in order to arrive to live of Divine Will. But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus, my dear Life, surprising me all goodness said to me:

"My blessed daughter, tell me what you want? Do you want that my Will reign and live in you as life. If you truly want it, everything is done, because so much is our love and the ardent desire that the creature possesses our Will as life, in order to have her live of him, that as her human will truly wants it, thus ours fills the human volition with our Supreme Volition in order to form there his life and live in her as, in his own center. You should know the Divine Will and the human one are two spiritual powers, the Divine one, immense with an inarrivable power, the human one, little power, but for however little, it has its power, and both being spiritual, the one can pour itself into the other and form one life alone, all the power is in the volition, and being spiritual power, it holds (the) space to be able to put inside of its will, the good that she wants, and also the evil. So that that which the will wants she will find within herself, if she wants self-esteem, glory, the love of pleasures, riches she will find within her volition the life of self-esteem, of glory, the life of the pleasures, of the riches and if she wants sin, also sin will form its life. More so if she wants the life of our Will in hers, wanted, commanded by Us, with so many sighs, if indeed she wants it, she will have the great good to possess our Will as life, and if this were not so, the sanctity of living in my Volition, it would be a difficult sanctity and almost impossible, and I don't know how to teach neither difficult things, nor do I want impossible things, rather it is my usual way to facilitate, for how much it is possible to the creature, the most arduous things and the hardest sacrifices, and if needs be I put there of mine, in order to make that the little power of her volition, becomes sustained, helped, animated by the invincible power of mine, and thus render easy the good, of the life of my Volition, that the creature wants to possess, and so much is my love, that in order to facilitate it all the more I whisper to the ear of her heart: if you indeed want this good, I will do it together with you, I won't leave you alone, I will put at your disposition my grace, my strength, my light, my sanctity, we will be two to do the good that you want to possess. Therefore there is not needed much to live of my Will, the too much is in the volition, if this is decided and she wants it firmly and perseveringly, already she has conquered mine and has made him hers. Oh, how many things the human volition can enclose being (a) spiritual power that more so gathers and loses nothing, it resembles the light of the Sun, how many things doesn't the Sun enclose while one doesn't see other than light and heat, and yet the goods that it encloses are almost innumerable, and one sees that as it touches the earth, thus it communicates admirable goods, and yet one doesn't see other than light; such is the human will, how many goods can't she enclose if she wants, she can enclose love, sanctity, light, reparation, patience, all the virtues and also her Creator himself. Being (a) spiritual power she holds (the) virtue and capacity to enclose all that which she wants and not only, she holds the power to enclose the good that she wants, but of transmutating herself into the good that she encloses. So that the human will changes into the nature of good that which she wants, and although many things that she truly wants, she doesn't do them, in the will they remain as done and one sees that at the occasion to do that good that she wanted, possessing the life of it, with promptness, with all love, without a point of hesitating, she does that good that from so much time (ago) she wanted to do, symbol of the sun that not finding neither the seed, nor the flower, it does not give neither the good of maturing the seed, nor the good of the color to the flowers, but no sooner than it is given it to touch them with its light, possessing the life of it, immediately it gives maturation to the seed, color to the flowers. The human will possesses with indelible characters all that which it does and that which it wants to do, and if the memory forgets, but the will loses nothing, it contains the deposit of all her acts without losing anything. Therefore one can say that all (of) man is in the will, if this is holy, also the most indifferent things are holy for him, if then he is bad, perhaps also the good is changed for him into perverse act, hence if you truly want my Divine Will as life there is not needed much, more so that united to yours there is mine that wants it, there is a power that can do everything, and on your behalf one will see with facts, if in all things you will be involved as possessor of a Divine Will. Therefore be attentive my daughter, and your flight be always continuous in the Supreme Fiat."

* * *

April 12, 1935

One who lives in the Divine Will leaves her cast-offs, reduces herself into nothing, and the All forms her life in the nothing. How the Celestial Queen loves us in her conception, prodigies that the Divine Volition did in Her.

I feel my little atom, rather the nothing is lost in the All of the Divine Volition. Oh, how I feel this

All in the nothing of the creature, his Life frees his working Power, his creative virtue that can do all that which he wants inside of this nothing. One can say that this nothing is the game of the Divine Fiat that with his dominion, he entices her, enraptures her, fills her and the nothing lets him do everything, and she loses nothing of the good that she receives. Now while I thought this my sweet Jesus, making his brief little visit with me, said to me:

“My daughter, when the soul lives in my Divine Will, she leaves her cast-offs, she empties herself of everything, in a way that she remains the pure nothing, and my Volition invests her, fills her with the All, dominates her and forms there prodigies of sanctity, of grace, of beauty, worthy of his creative power. But what is more, in this void of the nothing, he generates his love and forms there his Divine life and rendering himself dominator of the nothing and of his same Divine Life formed in her, and oh, his love for this nothing, arrives to so much that it renders her in the meanwhile dominant together with the Supreme Fiat, and since her dominion comes from the All that she possesses, she feels his same dominating virtue and, dominates the Divine Will himself. So that they are both dominant, but with highest accord, possessing one love alone and one Will alone. The human volition feels her life in mine and does nothing, if she didn't feel my working act that wants to work in order to do it together, and mine, feels my life in hers and, with his dominion, imposes himself over the nothing, in order to make her work in the All. So that as the creature is decided with a firm will to live in mine, my Volition gives the beginning to form his life in her, there is no will that not possessing his life, through means of which, he develops his goodness, his power, his sanctity, the fullness of his love. The life is the manifestation of the will that she possesses, it is the attire that covers him, it is the sound of his voice, it is the narrator of his wonders, of his infinity, of his power, hence my Divine Will is not content to have the creature live in Him, the nothing in the All, no, no, he is then content when he encloses the All in the nothing and forms there his working and dominate life and gives in the nothing that which he wants. Behold therefore when I speak to you of my Will, it is your Jesus that speaks to you, because I am his life, his representative, the narrator of my Fiat, that hides in me. Whence the greatest prodigy is to form my Divine Life in the nothing of the creature, that only my Volition holds this virtue, because possessing the creative strength, he can create himself, his life in whom wants to receive him. Now, possessing my life, the soul takes part in my sanctity, in my love, and oh, how beautiful it is to hear that the nothing says together with the All, love, glory, and with the dominating strength that she feels, diffuses herself in the Divine acts and dominates together with my Will. For Us there is no greater contentment, (than) to feel the nothing working and dominant in our Divine Being. Therefore be attentive to always live in my Will.”

After this I continued with my round in the Divine Will and arrived at the Immaculate Conception, my sweet Jesus, stopped me saying to me:

“My daughter, I want to make you penetrate more within the Immaculate Conception of my Most Holy Mother, her prodigies, how she loved her Creator and how for our love she loved all creatures. The Little Queen, in the act of (the) conception commenced her life together with the Divine Will, and hence together with her Creator, whence she felt all the strength, the immensity, the enthusiasm of the Divine love, and it was so much that she felt lost, drowned with love, that she didn't know how to do other than love He who loved her so much, she felt loved, but so much so even to give her Will in his power to hold as proper life, that one can call the greatest love of God, the most heroic love, the love that alone can say: I have nothing more that I can give you, I have given you everything.

And the little Queen made use of this life in order to love him for how much she was loved, she didn't lose an instant without loving him and sought to equal him in loving him. Now our Divine Will that possesses the omniscience of everything, nothing was hidden to her, it made present to this Holy creature all the human generations, every fault that they had done and that they should do, and even from the first instant of her conception the little Celestial one that didn't know other life than the Divine Will alone commenced to sorrow with Divine sorrow, for every fault of the creature, so much so that she formed around every fault of them a sea of Divine love and sorrow. My Will that doesn't know how to do little things, formed in her beautiful soul seas of sorrow and of love for every single fault and for every single creature. Therefore the Holy Little Virgin even from the first instant of her life was Queen of sorrow and of love, because our Will that can do all gave Her such sorrow and love that if he might not have sustained her with his power, she would have died for every fault and so many times consumed with love for how many creatures should exist. And our Divinity commenced to have, in virtue of our Will Divine sorrow and Divine love for everyone and for each one. Oh! How We feel Ourselves satisfied and repaid for everyone, and in virtue of this sorrow and Divine love we feel ourselves inclined toward everyone. Her love was so much that mastering us she made Us love those people that she loved, so much so that the Eternal Word, as this Sublime Creature came to the light, races in order to come to search out man and save him. Who can resist the working power of our Will in the creature, and what thing can't she do and obtain when she wants [? pg.200]? Oh if everyone might know the great good that we do to the human generations with giving them this Celestial Queen, it was She who prepared the Redemption, who conquered her Creator and who was the bearer of the Eternal Word upon the earth. Oh! Everyone would press themselves around her Maternal knees, in order to implore from Her that Divine Will, of which she possesses the life."

* * *

May 14, 1935

One who does the Divine Will doesn't have need of laws, one who lives in Him gives work to everyone, to the Celestial Father, to the Celestial Mother, and to Jesus himself.

I am in the arms of my adorable Divine Volition although immersed in the sorrow of the privation of my blessed Jesus, the hours are centuries without Him, what suffering, what continuous death, without piety and mercy, justly he punishes me because I have been too ungrateful and incorrespondent. But ah! My love, hide my miseries in your wounds, cover me with your blood, my sufferings I unite them to your sufferings, so that they cry out together pity, pardon, for this poor creature, but without You I am not able to endure anymore. But while I vented my sorrow, my sweet Jesus moved to compassion over my long martyrdom, as (a) lightning flash that flees me he made his brief little visit and said to me:

"My blessed daughter, courage, do not alarm yourself, my Divine Will gives everything in your power, in a way that you can say everything is mine, my sufferings, my wounds, my Blood, everything is yours, so that you don't need to ask them of me, but take them in order to make use of them for your needs, so very true that in whom my Divine Will reigns she doesn't have need of laws, but feels in herself the nature changed into Divine law, as in nature she feels the strength of the breath, of the heartbeat, thus she feels the strength of the law as substantial of her life. And since my law, is law of love, of sanctity, of order, therefore she feels in herself the nature of love, of sanctity, of order. Where my Will reigns so much is his love that it transforms into nature the goods that he wants to give to the creature, so that she be proprietor of it, no one can take them away and I myself make Myself the custodian of the gifts in nature conceded to this creature.”

Sweet Jesus became silent and my mind swam in the sea of the Divine Will, and resuming his speaking he added:

“My daughter, you should know that one who lives in my Will gives work to everyone, my Celestial Father seeing the creature in his Divine Volition puts himself around in order to form the work of his image and likeness, more so that finding his Will in her he finds the adaptable material that lends itself to receive his work, in order to form the most beautiful image that resembles him. And oh, his contentment that with his work he can produce his images, give work to the Celestial Mother, because finding my Divine Will in the creature, She finds one who keeps her company, who receives her Maternity as daughter, She finds one to whom she can communicate her fecundity, her acts done in my Volition, She finds one in whom she can make her model and her faithful copy, and oh, the contentment of this Celestial Mother, her diligent work, her cares, her Maternal solitudes, that She can do as true Mother and that She can give her inheritance, and the Will being one of the Mother and the daughter, She can make herself understood and put in common her graces, her love, her sanctity, in her work she feels happy because she finds one who courts her, who resembles her and lives with her same Divine Will. Who lives in Him they are her favorite daughters, her darlings, her secretaries, one can say that in virtue of my Divine Volition they possess a powerful magnet that so attracts this Celestial Mother that she can not remove her gaze from over them. And the great Lady in order to hold them secure, works with putting around them her virtues, her sorrows, her love and the life itself of her Son. But this is not everything, your Jesus(.) as I see that the soul has put her will aside in order to live of mine, I put Myself to work in order to form my members, my Head is Holy and I feel the need of holy members in order to lean my Head on and thus be able to communicate his virtue in them and who can ever form for me Holy members if not my Will? Hence my work is incessant for one who lives in Him, one can say that I put Myself to watch inside and outside of her, so that no one enters there in order to interrupt my work and in order form these members, I repeat the work of completing again, in order to regenerate them, I am reborn in order to make them be reborn, I cry, I suffer, I preach, I die, in order to communicate my vital and Divine humors in these members, so that they are strengthened and divinized worthy of my Most Holy Head. And oh, my contentment, that although I work, I repeat my life and form the repeaters of It, but what thing wouldn't I do and wouldn't I give in one who lives in my Will? He encloses me in the creature in order to make me work and make me form worthy members with my creative hands and as the soul receives my work thus I feel happy and repaid for the work of the Creation and Redemption. Now the Angels, the Saints, seeing the Celestial Father, the Sovereign Queen and their King, all intent working in this creature, they also want to help us in the work and lining up around the fortunate creature, they work with defending her, they remove the enemies, they free her from the perils and form walls of fortitude, so that no one can molest her. You see therefore how one who lives in my Divine Volition gives work to everyone, and everyone occupies themselves with her.”

* * *

May 26, 1935

Fear(.) human virtue, love (.) Divine virtue. How trust enraptures Jesus. Who does the Divine Will is found with all the Divine works and remains confirmed in Him.

Although I feel abandoned in the arms of the Divine Volition, I feel my mind flooded with apprehension and with fears, but I offered them to my sweet Jesus so that he might invest them with his Fiat and might change them for me into peace and love and He making his brief little visit with me all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, fear although it might be holy is always human virtue, it breaks the flight to love and dread and difficulty becomes born, in walking in the way by making one always look to the right and to the left and one arrives to fear He who so very loves her, it removes the sweet enchantment of trust that lets one live in the arms of her Jesus and if she fears too much, she loses Jesus and lives by herself. Instead love is Divine virtue and with its fire holds the purifying virtue to purify the soul from whatever stain, it unites her and transforms her in her Jesus, and gives her such trust as to make her enraptured by her Jesus, the sweet enchantment of trust is such and so much that they enrapture each other that the one can not remain without the other, and if she looks, she looks only if she loves He who so very loves her. So that all her being becomes enclosed in the love and since love is the inseparable child of the Divine Volition, therefore it gives the first post of dominion to my Divine Will. He extends himself in all the acts of the creature human and spiritual, ennoble everything, and although the human acts remain in the form and material with which they are formed, they don't undergo any external change, all the change remains in the depth of the human will, all that which she does remains, even the most indifferent things, to change into Divine and confirmed by the Divine Will. His work is incessant and over all that which the creature does he extends his sojourn of peace, and as true Mother he doesn't do other than to enrich with Divine conquests his dear daughter. Therefore scatter every fear, in my Volition neither dread, nor fears, nor mistrust have any right to exist, they are not things that belong to Us, and you should not do other than to live of love and of my Will. You should know that one of the purest joys that the creature can give Me is trust in Me, I feel her (as) my daughter to Me and I do that that I want with her, I can say that trust in Me makes known who I am, that I am the immense Being, my goodness without end, my mercy without limits, and when I find more trust, I love her more and I abound more toward creatures.”

Whence I followed my abandonment in the Divine Volition and I prayed Him that he might pour himself into my little soul and might make Me re-arise all in the Divine Fiat. Oh, how I would like to be one act alone of Divine Will and my sweet Jesus resuming to speak said to me:

“My daughter, you should know that all created things and all that which I did and suffered in the Redemption, they race after the creature in order to say to her: we bring you the love of your Creator in order to receive yours, we are his messengers that while we descend into the baseness of the earth, we re-arise on high, in order to bring as in triumph your little love to our Creator. But do you know the great good that comes to you? You remain confirmed in love and in his works, in his life, in his sufferings, in his tears, in everything. So that my daughter, you find yourself and race in all our works, our Will carries you everywhere and We find Ourselves confirmed in you, an exchange of acts and life happens, the creature in the Creator and the Creator in the creature, she makes herself repeater of the Divine acts. Greater grace I could not do, nor the creature receive, this confirmation in our works reproduces in her all our goods. Our Sanctity, goodness, love, our attributes become transmitted in her, and We enraptured contemplate her and in our emphasis of love we say: beautiful, holy, perfect is our Being in our immensity, light, power, wisdom, love, interminable goodness, but beautiful yet to see enclosed in the creature this immensity of our attributes. Oh, how she glorifies

Us and loves Us, it seems that she says to Us: I am little nor is it given me to enclose and to contain all your immensity, but what You are, such am I, your Divine Will has enclosed you in me and I love You with your same love, I glorify You with your light, I adore you with your sanctity, I can give you everything because I possess my Creator. What thing can not my Divine Will do in the creature, when she lets herself be dominated by Him? Everything. Therefore be attentive, if you want everything and to give everything.”

* * *

May 31, 1935

How the Divine Power has no limits. Certainty that the Kingdom of the Divine Will must come. How the Redemption and his kingdom are inseparable.

I am between the arms of my amiable Jesus, whom surrounds me so much with his Holy Volition that I would not know how to live without Him, I feel Him inside of me, that with his sweet empire dominates over all my interior, and with an indescribable love, makes himself life of my thought, of my heartbeat and breath, and he thinks, palpates, breathes together with me, and it seems that he says to me: “How happy I am that you feel, know that the life of your thought, of your heartbeat, of all of you, am I, you feel Me in you, and I feel you in Me, we are both happy to do with one sole thing all and two. This is my Will that the creature feels, she knows that I am together with her, I abase myself to all her acts and I do them together with her, in order to give her the simile of my life, and of my Divine acts, how much I grieve when they put Me aside and don’t recognize my dominion and that I am really He who forms their life.”

In this while I thought to myself: it seems impossible to me that the Kingdom of the Divine Will can come, how can it come if evils abound in a horrifying way? And my sweet Jesus being displeased said to me:

“My blessed daughter, if you doubt this, you don’t believe and recognize my power that doesn’t have limits and when I want I can (do) everything. You should know that in creating man, our life was put in him, and he was our residence, now if we don’t put in safety this Life of ours, with his decorum, with his dominion, with our full triumph, making ourselves known that we are in this residence, and that she feels honored to be dominated and lived (in) by a God. If we don’t do this it means that our power is limited, it is not infinite power, who doesn’t have (the) power to save oneself, even less can save the others, rather the true good, the power that has no limits, first it serves and puts in safety oneself and then it flows into the others. Now, with coming upon the earth, to suffer and die, I came to put man in safety, that is my residence, does it not also seem strange to you, if while I put in safety the residence, the Proprietor, the dweller of it, without his rights, without dominion and without power to put himself in safety? Ah, no, no, my daughter, it would have been absurd and without the order of our infinite wisdom. The Redemption and the kingdom of my Will are all one, inseparable between themselves. My coming upon the earth I came to form the Redemption of man and at the same time I came to form the Kingdom of my Will in order to save myself, in order to retake my rights that with justice are due to Me as Creator. And as in the Redemption I exhibited Myself to so many humiliations, to unheard of suffering, even to die Crucified, I underwent everything, in order to put in safety my residence and to restitute her with all the sumptuousness, beauty, magnificence with which I had formed her, so that she again might be worthy of Me. Now, when it seemed that everything was finished and my enemies satisfied that they had taken away (my) life, my power that has no limits, it recalled to life my Humanity and with re-aring, everything re-rose together with Me, creatures, my sufferings, the goods acquired for them, and as the Humanity triumphed over death, so my Will re-rose and triumphed in creatures, awaiting his Kingdom. If my Humanity might not have re-arisen, if I might not have had this power, the Redemption would be bankrupt and it could be doubted that it might not be work of a God, it was my Resurrection that made Me known who I was, and it put the seal to all the goods that I came to bring upon the earth. Thus my Divine Will will be the double seal, the transmission in creatures of his Kingdom, which my Humanity possessed, more so that for creatures I formed this Kingdom of my Divine Will in my Humanity, why then should you doubt I give it? At the most it will be a question of time and for Us the times are one single point, our power will make such prodigies, he will abound man with new graces, new love, new light, that our residences will recognize Us, and they themselves with spontaneous will, will give Us the dominion and our life will be secure, with its full rights in the creature. With time you will see that which my power knows how to do and can do, how he knows how to conquer everything and knock down the most obstinate rebellious ones, who ever can resist my power, that with one single breath I knock down, I will destroy and I remake everything, as pleases Me more. Therefore pray and your cry be continuous: come the Kingdom of your Fiat and your Will be done, as in Heaven so in earth.”

* * *

June 6, 1935

How who lives in the Volition of God holds God himself in her power. The Queen of Heaven turns through all the nations in order to put in safety her children.

My poor mind continues its flight in the interminable light of the Divine Volition, there is no thing, neither in Heaven, nor in earth, that is not his birth, and everything and everyone have that to say of He who has generated them. Rather they are never tired of narrating his eternal origin, his inarrivable Sanctity, his love that always generates, without ever ceasing, his Fiat that always speaks, speaks to the mind, speaks in the heart, speaks on the tongue, and now speaks with articulate voices, now with groans, now suppliant, now with rule, now with such sweetness as to move the hardest and most obstinate hearts. My God what power your Volition contains. Oh! Make it that I always live of Him, but while I thought this my sweet Jesus making for me his brief little visit with an indescribable goodness said to me:

“My daughter, my Will! My Will! He is everything, does everything, gives (to) everyone. Who can ever say that she has not received everything from Him? You should know that the creature herself possesses so much sanctity for how much she is in order, in rapport with my Will, so much more she elevates herself to the union with God, for how much more she is united with Him, her value, her merits without measure by the relations that she has held with my Will. So that the whole foundation, the base, the substance, the origin of the goods in the creature, depends on how many acts she has done of my Will, by how much she knows of Him. So that if in all her acts she has made my Volition enter, she can say everything is holy, everything is pure and Divine in me, we can give her everything, even our life in her power. Instead if she has done nothing of my Will and knows nothing, we have nothing to give her, because she merits nothing, because she lacks the seed to generate the good that belongs to Us. Hence she doesn’t receive one right of the pay from her Celestial Father, if she has not worked in our field, we can say: I don't know you. Therefore if in everything, or at least partly, she has not done anything of my Will, Heaven is closed for the creature, she doesn't have any right to the Celestial Country. Behold the cause why we insist so much that one always does our Will, that he be known, because we want to populate Heaven with our beloved children, and since everything has gone forth from Us, we want that everything returns in our Divine womb."

Whence after this, I continued to think of the Divine Will and I prayed that it might be expedited, and that with his omnipotence that can do all, he might conquer all the obstacles and might make his Kingdom come and that his Will might reign as in Heaven so in earth. But while I thought this, before my mind, my sweet Jesus made seen so many deadly and horrifying things before which the hardest hearts were shaken, and the most obstinate were knocked down, everything was terror and fright, I remained so afflicted as to feel myself die and I prayed that he might spare so many scourges. And my beloved Jesus as if he had pity on my affliction said to me:

"My daughter courage, everything will serve to the triumph of my Will, if I strike it is because I want to restore health, my love is so much, that when I can not conquer by way of love and graces, I seek to conquer by way of terror and fright, human weakness is so much that many times she doesn't care for my graces, she is deaf to my voices, laughs at my love, but it is enough to touch (her) skin, to take away the necessary things to natural life, that she abases her arrogance, feels so humiliated that she makes herself a rag, and I do that which I want with her, especially if they don't have a perfidious and obstinate will, it is enough one chastisement, to see herself on the edge of the sepulcher, that they return in my arms. You should know that I always love my children, my beloved creatures, I would eviscerate Myself in order not to see them stricken, so much so that in the deadly times to come, I have put them all in the hands of my Celestial Mama, to Her I have entrusted them, so that she holds them for Me under her secure mantle, I will give (to Her) all those that She will want, death itself won't have power over those that will be in (the) custody of my Mama."

Now while he said this, my dear Jesus made me see with facts that the Sovereign Queen descended from Heaven with an indescribable Majesty, and a tenderness all Maternal, and turned in the midst of creatures, in all the nations and marked her dear children and those that should not be touched by the scourges, whomever my Celestial Mama touched, the scourges didn't have power to touch the creatures. Sweet Jesus gave the right to his Mama to put in safety whom She pleased. How moving it was to see the Celestial Empress turn in all the parts of the world that she took between (her) Maternal hands, she assembled them to her breast, hid them under her mantle, so that not one evil might be able to harm those people that her Maternal goodness held in her custody, guarded and defended. Oh! If everyone might be able to see with how much love and tenderness the Celestial Queen did this office, they would cry from consolation and would love She who so very loves us.

* * *

June 10, 1935

Rain of love that Our Lord pours from within created things over creatures, and how he bilocates himself in her and sees himself equaled in his love.

I was doing my round in the acts of the Divine Will, but while I did this I felt rain on me a rain of acts of love that my sweet Jesus made me. So that as the Sun turned in the Sky, in the wind and in all the other created things, thus rained on me a multiplicity of acts of love. To be loved by God is the greatest of happinesses, it is the most beautiful glory that can be found in Heaven and in earth and I also felt the extreme need of loving him, and oh, how I would like to be Jesus himself in order to also make for him my rain of love. But alas, I felt the great distance, because in Him were done real works, but me poor little one I had to make use of his works in order to tell him that I loved Him, so that all my love was reduced into will and hence I felt afflicted because I didn't love Him as Jesus could love me.

But while I thought this my Highest Good Jesus with an indescribable love and goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, do not afflict yourself, don't you know that I have the power to make up for everything and to make myself equalized by the love of the creature? When one deals with her wanting to love, I don't ever render her discontent, because love is one of my passions, and do you know what I do in order to make one who loves Me content? I bilocate Myself and I take (the) post in every created thing and I rain love, then I take (the) post in the creature and I give her (the) virtue to make her love rain over Me, the love that I give her I make it hers and with right she can give it to me as if it were hers, and I feel the contentment that she loves Me as I have loved her and although I know that it is mine, I don't mind to this, I am not stingy, but I mind if in her will she wants to love me as I love her and if she might be able to do that which I have done for her, this is enough for me and I am content to be able to say to her: You have loved Me as I have loved you. Beyond this you should know that I created the entire universe in order to make it (a) gift to the creature and I remained in every created thing to rain love over them. Now who recognizes this gift as a great love that her Creator does for her, the gift is hers, the rain of our love is hers, hence re-giving it to Us, with all her being she loves Us, We feel Ourselves equalized by the love of the creature and conquered by her love, we re-give it again to her in order to find the continuous exchange of our love and hers. And if you might know how very content I am with it and my love remains wounded in feeling you repeat that you want to love me and you love Me in every created thing, you love Me in my conception, in my birth, in every infantile tear, I feel it pearled for Me with your love, every suffering, every drop of Blood, I feel the life of your love, and in order to exchange you in every thing that I did in my life down here, I don't do other than to form rain of love. Oh! If you might be able to see how much love I pour on you, it is such and so much that taken by the enthusiasm of my love itself, I embrace and kiss my love in you, and in seeing that you feel my embraces and my kisses, how content I am and I await yours as in order to be paid and reciprocated for such a love.”

Whence I followed my abandonment in the Supreme Volition and turning in the extension of the Sky that serves as floor and footstool of the Celestial Country and as vault to the wayfarers down here, that blue vault seemed to me that it made (a) double office, it served as (a) sumptuous floor to the comprehenders and as regal vault to the wayfarers, uniting the one and the other together in order to make that one might be the will and the love of everyone. Therefore prostrating myself together with the Sky, I called those of up there and those of the earth to adore my Creator prostrating ourselves all together, so that one might be the adoration, the will, the love of everyone. Whence, while I did this my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, the first duty of the creature is to adore He who has created her, the first act that says sanctity is duty; duty calls the order and the order makes arise the most beautiful harmony between the Creator and the creature, harmony of will, harmony of love, of ways and of imitation, duty is the substance of sanctity, and since all created things possess and hold as in nature the imprint of true adoration, the creature united with them can lend the most perfect adoration to He who has created her. Whence every created thing is a profound adoration that they send to He who has created them and the creature uniting herself together, in virtue of our Volition, puts them all in adoration, giving to God the duty of each one, and elevating herself over everyone brings Us everyone and comes to palpate in our heartbeat and breathe in our breath. Oh! How sweet and pleasant (is) this heartbeat and breath in ours and We in order to exchange it we palpate in her heart and breathe in her breath, giving her Divine heartbeat and breath, as life, heritage and growth of our Supreme Being in her. And behold that to the duty of adoration rises the first duty of the act of the (creature) of giving life to her Creator in her own soul, giving him the dominion, the liberty of forming himself, to palpate and breathe, to fill her with love, in order to be able to say with facts: this creature is the bearer of her Creator and she lets Me do that which I want, so very true that I possess her heartbeat, nothing she holds is hers, that which is hers is mine and that which is mine is hers, I hold my post of love in her and she holds the post of honor in mine. So that Heaven and earth give the kiss of peace and permanent union.”

* * *

June 17, 1935

How God, with giving us free human will put himself at our disposition, to feel him to her, to adapt himself with her, as if he might have need of the creature. Loving conditions in which God put himself for love of creatures.

I was doing my round in the Divine Volition and I stopped in all that which my Celestial Mama had done in the Divine Will; my God what surprise this Divine Fiat bilocated, multiplied, worked, that formed such enchantment of beauty, of grace, of works, as to make not only Heaven and earth stupefied, but God himself, seeing himself enclosed in the Sovereign Queen and work as God in Her as he worked in Himself. And oh, how I would have liked to give, on my part, to give to my God, all that glory that the Sovereign Lady gave Him of all those acts that the Divine Will had done in the sanctuary, in the hide-a-way, within the veils of the Immaculate Lady. But while I thought this my Highest Good Jesus surprising me with his brief little visit said to me:

“My little daughter of my Divine Volition, there is no greater prodigy, nor goodness and love more great, nor magnanimity on our part that has no limits, than to descend into the depths in the human will and work as (the) God that we are in her, as if we might work in ourselves. Behold therefore our infinite Wisdom, taken by (an) excess of love toward the creature, we gave her little free human will, independent from everyone; with giving her this free will we put Ourselves at her disposition, if she might want that we might descend in her littleness and baseness and work as God, and our Will to do in her that which he can do in our Supreme Being. This was the greatest prodigy and the love that no other love can equalize, to give the human will to the creature, almost in order to remain subject to her, as to want to depend on her, the good that we want to work in her, the works that we should develop, is this not a finesse of insuperable love and then to give this will at her free arbitration, so that the creature might be able to say to Us: you have come into my house and I must come into your house, therefore You do that which you want in me, and to me you will let me do that which I want in You. It was the accord that we put between her and Us, and giving her free will, she could say to us that she gave Us some thing that she held in her power, is this not a magnanimity, a love that exceeds everything, that only our Supreme Being could and wanted to do? But this is not everything, our love contemplated this free will of the creature with pleasure and formed so many centers in order to bilocate himself in them and form so many kingdoms of dominions where we should show off in our Divine works, multiplying them to the infinite, without restriction, without limits, working in these centers as God, as if we might work in ourselves. More so that in the little human wills our love showed off more, he used more power, because it needs more art to restrict our immensity in the little circle of the human wills, almost to put a limit to our Power, in order to abase ourselves in the depths of the human volition, and then to feel her to us with her, in that which we should do, because we want it worked together with Us, as if she adapts herself to Us, and We must adapt ourselves to her, and our love is so much that it also adapted to her human ways, this gave Us more to do, our love is discharged more and loves even to the excesses this human will that gives him his regal post, his free dominion. Instead working outside of the human circle, who knows what we can do and we have an immensity that can arrive to everything, a power without limits, and if needs be can do everything, a wisdom that can dispose everything, a love that loves everyone, involves everything and although he might not be loved. Our Supreme Being is free, he doesn't have need of anyone and can do that which he wants, and since we are capable of everything we don't work in doing the greatest works, but it is enough that we want it, that in an instant we do everything. Instead when we want to work in the creature, almost that we have need of her, we must entice her, we must tell her the good that we want (for) her and that which we want to work, we don't want a forced will, therefore we want that she know it and spontaneous opens the doors to Us, feeling herself honored to give us the working post in her will. In these conditions our love put Us in the creation of man, it loved him so much that it arrived to give him free will so that he might be able to say: I can give to my Creator; he could love him more. Therefore the glory, the honor, that the creature gives Me when she lets Me work in her will is so very great that no one can understand it, it is our same glory and honor that she gives Us, in all her acts our life races, our love can say: I give God to God; it is the highest point where the creature can arrive, it is the most excessive love where a God can arrive. Oh! If creatures might understand the love, the great gift that we gave them with giving them a free will, it elevated her above the Sky, the sun, the entire universe, I can do over all that which I want, without anyone knowing anything, instead with the creature I abase Myself, I ask them with love a little spot in their will, in order to be able to work in them and to do some good for her. But alas! Many deny it to Me and render my Will inoperative in the human will, my sorrow is infinite to so much of their ingratitude. Now what would you admire more a king that works in his palace where he holds everything in his power, commands over everyone, does good to everyone, his palace lends itself to all that which the king wants, or else a king that descends into the depths of a hovel and does the same action that he would do in his palace? Would not one admire more, would it not be more sacrifice, more intensity of love, to work as king in the little hovel than in the palace? In the palace all things lend themselves to let him work as king, instead in the hovel the king must adapt himself to the hovel and strive so much to do the same actions that he would do in his palace. Such are We, to work in the Palace of our Divinity, to do great things, in Us it is nature; but to do them in the hovel of the human volition, it gives of the incredible, it is the excess of our greatest love."

* * *

July 8, 1935

Inseparability of one who lives in the Divine Will with her Creator. The Queen of Heaven together with Jesus in instituting the Most Holy Sacrament, the children of the Divine Will will be suns and stars that will crown the Sovereign Celestial Lady.

It seems to me that I don't know how to find rest if I don't abandon myself in the arms of the Divine Will, which flings me in his interminable sea where I find that which he has done for love of creatures, and I now stop at one point and now at another of his manifold works, and I admire them, love them, kiss them and thank Him for so much magnificence and so many loving industries toward us, miserable creatures. But while I turned, with my surprise I found myself before the Great Queen Lady and our Mama, the most beautiful work of the Sacrosanct Trinity, I remained to contemplate her, but I don't have words in order to say that which I understood, and my amiable Jesus with a sweetness and indescribable love said to me:

“My daughter, how beautiful is my Mama, her empire extends itself everywhere, her beauty enraptures and enchains everyone, there is no being that doesn't fall on its knees in order to venerate her. My Divine Will made her such for Me, he made her inseparable from Me, in a way that there was no act that I did that the Sovereign Queen didn't do it together with Me. The power of that Divine Fiat pronounced by Me and by Her, that made Me conceived in her Virginal Bosom, giving me life to my Humanity, that Fiat always [identical? pag.236], and every time that I worked, the Divine Fiat of my Mother hold the right in my Divine Fiat to do that which I did. Now you should know that when I instituted the Sacrament of the Eucharist, her Divine Fiat was together with mine, and together we pronounced the Fiat that the bread and wine might be transubstantiated into my Body, Blood, soul and Divinity. Ah! As in the conception I wanted her Fiat, thus I wanted it in this solemn act that gave beginning to my Sacramental Life; who would have had the heart to put my Mama aside, in an act in which my love showed off with excesses so exuberant that it gives of the incredible! Rather, not only was she together with Me, (but) I constituted Her Queen of love of my Sacramental Life, and She with (the) love of my true Mother, offered her bosom again to Me, her beautiful soul in order to hold me defended and repaired from the horrendous ingratitude and enormous sacrileges that I unfortunately would have received in this Sacrament of love. My daughter, this is my purpose, I want that my Will be life of the creature, in order to hold her together with me, in order to make her love with my love, work in my works, in short the company that I want in my acts, I don't want to be alone, and if this might not be to what advantage to call the creature in my Will if I should remain as (the) isolated God and she alone, without taking part in our Divine works? And not only in instituting the Most Holy Sacrament, but in all the acts that I did the whole course of my Life, in virtue of the unique Volition with which we were animated, that which I did, my Mama did, if I did miracles, she was together with Me to work the prodigy, I felt in the power of my Will the Sovereign Lady of Heaven, that together with me, we called to life the corpses, if I suffered she was together with Me to suffer, there was no thing in which I didn't have the company of Her, and her and my work fused together. This was the greatest honor that my Fiat gave Her, the inseparability with her Son, the unity with his works. And the Virgin, the greatest glory that attested to Me, so much so that I deposited it and She received the deposit of the completed works, in her Maternal heart, jealous of guarding even the breath. This unity of Will and of works, ignited such love between the one and the other than it was enough to set afire the whole entire world and to consume it with pure love.”

Jesus became silent and I remained in the seas of the Celestial Sovereign Lady, but who can say that which I understood? And my Highest Good Jesus resumed his speech:

“My daughter, how beautiful is my Mama, her Majesty is enchanting, before her Sanctity the Heavens abased themselves, her riches are interminable and incalculable, no one can say themselves (to be) similar to Her, therefore She is Lady, Mother and Queen; but do you know what are her riches? Souls. Every soul is worth more than an entire world, no one enters in Heaven if not through her means and in virtue of her Maternity and of her sorrows, so that every soul is a property of hers, therefore one can give (Her) with fact the name of true Lady. You see therefore how rich she is, her riches are special, they are full of speaking lives, lovers that extol the Celestial Lady. As Mother she holds her innumerable children, as Queen she will hold her people of the Kingdom of the Divine Will. These children and this people will form her most radiant crown, some as sun and some as stars they will crown her august Head with such beauty as to enrapture all Heaven. So that the children of the Kingdom of my Divine Will will be those that will render Her the honors of Queen and transforming themselves into suns they will form for Her the most beautiful crown. Therefore yearn so much that this Kingdom comes, because to her radiant crown with which the Most Holy Trinity crowned Her, she awaits the crown of her people, that extolling her as Queen, they offer Her their lives transformed into Suns as testament of love and of glory. Oh! If one might understand what it means to live in my Volition, how many Divine secrets would be revealed, how many discoveries they would make of their Creator. Therefore be content to die rather than to not live of my Will.”

* * *

July 14, 1935

Certainty of the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth. Impetuous wind in order to purify the generations. The Queen of Heaven put at (the) head of this Kingdom.

My mind is always returning in the interminable sea of the Divine Volition, which as it murmurs smiles with love at the creature and wants her smiles of love, he does not want that she remains behind and doesn't make her pairing. Not to do that which the Divine Will does while one lives in Him, is almost impossible, but who can say what the creature feels in this Divine sea? The purity of his kisses, his chaste embraces that infuse Celestial peace, Divine life, such fortitude as to conquer God himself. Oh! How I would love that everyone might experience, might come to live in this sea, certainly they would never go out anymore. But while I thought this I said to myself: but who knows who will see when this Kingdom of the Divine Fiat will come? Oh! How difficult it seems, and my beloved Jesus, making his brief little visit with me said to me:

“My daughter, and yet it will come, you measure the human one, the sad times that involve the present generations and therefore it seems difficult to you, but the Supreme Being holds the Divine measures, which are so very long that that which to the human is impossible to Us it is easy. We should not do other than (as) an impetuous wind which will be so very strong that they will make carried by the currents of the wind, that will purify the unhealthy air of the human will and of all the sad things of these times, it will make of it a heap and will disperse it as dust invested by an impetuous wind. Our wind will be so very strong, impetuous and working that it will not prove easy to resist him, more so that his waves will be stuffed full of graces, of light, of love that will drown the human generations and they will feel themselves transformed. How many times doesn't a strong wind remove (an) entire city and transports men, trees, earth, water, to other places and perhaps also distant, without them being able to oppose it? More so our Divine wind, wanted, decreed by Us with our creative strength. And then there is the Queen of Heaven that prays continually with her empire that the Kingdom of the Divine Will comes upon the earth, and when ever have we denied Her anything? Her prayers are impetuous winds for Us, that we can not resist her and the same strength that She possesses of our Will is for Us empire, command, She holds the whole right to impetrate it, because she possessed him in earth and possesses him in Heaven, hence as possessor she can give that which is hers, so much so that this Kingdom will be called the Kingdom of the Celestial Empress, she will do as Queen in the midst of her children in earth, she will put at their disposition her seas of graces, of sanctity, of power, she will put in flight all enemies, she will raise them in her womb, she will hide them in her light, covering them with her love, feeding them with her own hands, with the food of the Divine Will. What won't this Mother and Queen do in the midst of this her Kingdom, as her children and as her people? She will give unheard of graces, surprises never seen, miracles that will shake Heavens and earth, we will give Her the whole field free, because she will form for Us the Kingdom of our Will upon the earth, she will be the guide, the true model, the Kingdom of the Sovereign Celestial Queen will be pure. Therefore you also pray together with Her and in her time you will obtain the intent."

* * *

July 21, 1935

The most intimate and most sorrowful sufferings of Jesus are the anticipations, his inventions, deliriums, contrivances of love.

I am between the arms of the Divine Will but with (a) nail in (my) heart for the privation of my sweet Jesus, I wait and re-await and only to wait it is the suffering that most tortures me, the hours seem centuries to me, the days interminable and if may it never be the doubt presents itself that my dear Life, sweet Jesus won't come anymore, oh, then I don't know what happens to me, I want to undo myself of me, of the Divine Will himself that holds me imprisoned on this earth, and with enraptured flight go myself from it to Heaven but even this is not given me, because his chains are so very strong that they are not subject to break and I feel myself tied more strongly, so much so that as soon as it is given me to think it I finish with a most intense abandonment in the Supreme Fiat. But while I was delirious, not being able to endure anymore, my always amiable Jesus returned to his little daughter making himself seen with a wound in the Heart that poured forth Blood and flames, as if he might want to cover all souls with his Blood and burn them with his love and all goodness he said to me:

"My daughter, courage, your Jesus also suffers and the more sorrowful sufferings that they give Me are the intimate sufferings, that make Me pour forth Blood and flames, but my greater suffering is the continuous anticipation, my looks are always fixed on souls and (as) I see that one creature is fallen in sin and I await and re-await her return to my Heart, in order to pardon her and not seeing her come, I wait with pardon in my hands, that waiting (makes) the suffering renewed for Me and forms for Me such a torment, as to make me pour forth Blood and flames from my transfixed Heart, the hours, the days that I wait seem years to Me, oh, how hard it is to wait. We pass ahead, my love so very loves the creature that in putting her forth to the light of day, I established how many acts of love she should do (for) me, how many prayers, how many good works she should do and this in order to give her the right that I might always love her, that I might concede her the graces, the helps in order to work good, but creatures make use of it in order to form for me the suffering of waiting. Oh, how many anticipations from one act of love to the other, even if they do it for Me, how much slowness in working good, in praying, even if they do it, and I wait for it, re-await, I feel the restlessness of my love that gives Me delirium, yearnings and forms for Me such (an) intimate suffering that if I might be subject to die, I would have died so many times, for how many times I am not loved by creatures. Beyond this there is the long anticipation in the Sacrament of my love, I await everyone, I arrive to count the minutes, not at all, I await many of them in vain, others come with a glacial coldness, as to put me (on) the height of the hard martyrdom of my waiting, few are those that we await each other and only in these that I feel encouraged, I feel as repatriated in their hearts, I vent my love and I find a refreshment to the hard martyrdom of my continuous waiting, to some it seems that is nothing this suffering, instead it is the maximum which constitutes the hardest martyrdom, and you can say how much it costs you to wait for me, so much so that if I might not come to put (an) end to it and sustain you, you would not have been able to last. And then there is another anticipation more sorrowful yet, the longing, the ardent desire, the long anxieties of the Kingdom of my Divine Will, it is around six thousand years that I await that the creature reenters into Him, I love her so much that I want, I long to see her happy, but in order to obtain this we must live with one Will alone, so that every act opposite to mine is a nail that transfixes Me. But do you know why? Because it renders her all the more unhappy and dissimilar from Me, and seeing myself in the immense sea of my happiness, and my children unhappy, oh, how I suffer, and while I wait and re-await, I am around them, I abound them with graces, with light, in a way that they themselves can race, in order to have life together with Me, and with one Volition alone, it will change their fate, we will have common goods, happiness without end, the other sufferings they give me some respite, but the suffering of waiting never ceases, it always holds Me in sentinel, it makes Me use the most excessive contrivances, it makes Me form the inventions of love, to make Heavens and earth astounded, it makes Me arrive to pray to the creature, to beg her that she might not make Me wait anymore, that I can do no more, it weighs on Me too much. Therefore my daughter, unite yourself together with Me, to await the Kingdom of my Will and to all the anticipations that creatures make Me suffer, at least we will be two, and your company will give Me a refreshment to a suffering so hard.”

* * *

September 28, 1935

The Divine love invests every act of the creature. How God, in all his works calls everyone and does good to everyone. How one forms the Divine life in the creature, how one feeds him and makes him grow.

I was following the acts of the Divine Will, which transported me into a sea of interminable light in which he made present to me with how much love God had loved the creature, and so great that if one might be able to understand, her heart would burst of pure love, not being able to resist beneath the enthusiasm, the stratagems, the industries, the finesses of this love of God. Being too little, these flames devour me, and my beloved Jesus visiting my little soul, in order to sustain me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, let me relieve my love, listen to me, you should know that the creature has been always with Us in our Divine mind, she has always held her post in the bosom of her Creator, and ab eterno her every act, thought, word, work and step was decorated with a special love of ours. So that in every act of hers there is the chain of so many of our acts of love that, involves the act, the thought, et cetera, of the creature, and this love of ours gives life, feeds the repetitions of all her acts, and oh, how beautiful she is in our Divine mind, because she becomes formed by the continuous puff of our love, wanted love, not forced, love not of necessity, but rather generative virtue of our Supreme Being, which always generates and puts there its continuous love over her works, virtue of our omnipotent Fiat that if he might not generate new works and might not hold the continuous act of love, he would feel as suffocated in his flames and paralyzed in his continuous motion. Now wanting the creature to go forth from our Divine bosom, we make her do her little way in time, and our love doesn't leave from assailing, investing, courting, all her acts with his special love, if she might lack this, she would lack the generative, vivifying strength and engine of the human being. Oh! If creatures might know that in their every thought races a distinct love of ours, words and works, also in their breath and heartbeat, oh, how they would love Us and would not profane with unworthy acts our love so great. You see therefore how I love you and (how) your Jesus knows how to love, therefore learn from Me to love me. This is the prerogative of our love, to always love all that which has gone forth from Us, to make all the acts of the creature rise from within our love."

Jesus became silent, and I remained to think of the excesses of the Divine love and my beloved Jesus added:

"My daughter, listen still to me, so much is our love that in every single work that we do we call everyone, as if they might be one alone, in order to give to each one the good of the work that we do, we would not work as God if our acts might not have (the) virtue to be able to give itself to everyone in order to give the good that they contain. You feel therefore, my conception in the bosom of a Virgin was the greatest work of the whole story of the world, only that our Fiat wanted it and it become incarnate, without anyone forcing Us, meriting it, without Us having need (of) anyone, the need was our love, and only because he wanted it, it was such a great act that enclosed and embraced everyone and contained so much love that it gives of the incredible, so much so that Heavens and earth are stupefied by it and still enraptured and everyone feels invaded by so much love, as to be able to feel my Life conceived in everyone. You see therefore, where my love carries Me to conceive in every single soul, in every instant, it is always conceived one time, conceived always. Is it not as if I might be conceived in the consecrated Host, in every act of creature that loves Me and does my Divine Will? Now it is not yet everything, if my love does not give in excesses to be able to say: 'you see how much I have loved you, I have nothing more to do and give you in order to love you', it is not content. You feel where I arrive, as in the bosom of the Holy Virgin I breathed through her breath, warmed by her heat, fed by her Blood, thus I await from the creature that possesses Me the breath, the heat, the growth in order to develop my Life. But do you know in what straits my love puts Me? When the creature loves Me, gives Me the breath, gives Me the heat, every good that she does, if she prays, if she suffers for Me, she adores and glorifies Me, she makes Me grow, gives Me the motion, contributes to form me in her soul, so that if she does not love Me she gives me nothing, I feel I lack the breath, the heat, the food, and I don't grow; alas, in what conditions my love puts Me and the ingratitude of the creature. Now if she gives Me the good of making me grow, in a way as to have me fill all her soul with my Life, then my Life develops in her, I walk in her feet, I work in her hands, I speak in her voice, I think in her mind, I love in her heart, and I have my contentment. How happy I am with the creature, she doesn't remain other than a veil that covers Me, I am the Proprietor, the Actor, I form my field of action, I can do that which I want, my Divine Will repeats his omnipotent Fiat, continually, my love has received its conception, it goes into follies, that it has formed its life in the creature. Hence there is nothing that I do as much in the Creation, in the Redemption, in the Sanctification, in my Sacramental Life, in Heaven, and in earth, (in) which my love with rapid flight, (doesn't) race in order to give to everyone the good that I do, the sanctity of my works, whence no one can say he has not done this for me, I have not received this good, that then ungrateful they don't receive it, the fault is all theirs, on my part it lacked to no one. But do you see where my love arrives, in spite that they don't let Me grow, making me lack the breath of their love, the food of my Will, they make Me numb with cold because their wills are not with Me, I arrive to remain without attire, as the most perverse and abject, because their works are not upright, holy, and distant from pleasing Me alone, that they should serve Me in order to cover me, yet I don't depart, supporting so much human ingratitude and awaiting with unconquered patience and preparing a surprise of love, a grace that strikes her more, in order to make me give that which is necessary, in order to make me grow in her soul, because at whatever cost I want to form my life in the creature, use all the arts in order to obtain my intent and many times I am constrained to put (my) hand to the scourges, in order to make myself known that I am in her soul. My daughter, compassionate me and repair me (for) so much human ingratitude, that I am everything for them, I give them the breath and continuous heartbeat, the motion, the heat, the food and they ingrates deny Me that which I give them, after having given them the great honor of forming them, my living temple, my palace upon the earth. What suffering, what pain. Therefore I recommend to you not to let Me lack the breath of your love, give me at least that which is necessary to Me in order to let me grow, make that my Will be your life, in order to have me remain in your palace with decorum and with the sumptuousness that your Jesus merits."

* * *

October 4, 1935

All the glory, the love, is in the power to say with facts: I am a continuous act of Will of my Creator. Necessity of diversity of offices and action.

I was doing my round in the Divine Will in order to trace all his acts done in the Creation, in order to put my little I love you and to unite myself with all created things, in order to glorify my Creator and to be able to say: I am at my post of honor, I do my office, I am a continuous act of Divine Will, I can say that I am nothing, I do nothing, but I do everything, because I do the Divine Will. But while I thought this my Highest Good Jesus, making me his brief little visit, all goodness said to me:

"My blessed daughter, every created thing is a distinct office that it occupies, and although the will of all is one, not all however do the same thing, it would not be order, nor virtue of Divine Wisdom, that one created thing might repeat that which the other does, but since one is the Will that dominates them, the glory that one receives, I give the other, because all the substance that they possess and the good and the value with which they are invested, is that they can say: I am one continuous act of Will of my Creator, glory, honor, virtue more great he could not give me, than to be one single act of Divine Will, so much so that the little blade of grass, with its littleness, the little space that it occupies of the earth, it seems that it does nothing, no one looks at it, and yet, because thus my Will wanted it, nor does it seek to do more than that which a blade of grass can do, in order to do my Will equals the glory that the sun gives Me, that rules with so much majesty over the earth, that one can call it continuous miracle of all the Creation. And since all created things are united between themselves, the sun with all its majesty, with its light kisses and warms, the little blade of grass, the wind caress it, the water waters it, the earth gives the little spot where to form its little life, and yet what thing does a blade of grass do? One can say nothing, but since it possess my Will, it will hold its virtue of doing good to the human generations, because having created everything for love, and in order to do good to creatures, all hold a secret virtue to give the good that they possess.

“You see therefore that everything is in doing my Will, to never go out from his Divine and interminable enclosures; already with doing my Will, although it seems that one does nothing, it is not true, already one finds oneself together with the Divine work and one can say: that which God does, I do. And to you it seems little? God does everything and the soul takes part in everything. So that it is not the diversity of the actions or of the offices that the creature can say that she does great things, but my Will that confirms, annuls them, puts them in the Divine order and puts there his image, as seal of his works.

“In regards to the diversity of offices and of action instead it is order, harmony of my infinite Wisdom, also in Heaven there is diversity of choirs of Angels, diversity of Saints, one is martyr, one is virgin, one is confessor. Upon the earth my providence maintains so many diverse offices, one is king, one is judge, one priest, one is people, one commands, one is under, if everyone might do one single office, what would be of the earth? A complete disorder. Oh! If everyone might understand that only my Divine Will knows how to do great things, and although they might be little and insignificant, oh, how content everyone would be, and each one would love the little spot, the office in which God has put her, but since they let themselves be controlled by the human volition, they would like to give of themselves, to make great actions, that they can not do, therefore they are always discontent with the conditions or posts in which the Divine Providence has put them for their good. Therefore content yourself to do the little united with my Will, and not the great without Him, more so than being immense you will find yourself in all his acts, and you will find yourself in his love, in his power, in his works, in a way that you can not do anything without Him, and He can not do anything without you. Behold therefore that with living in my Volition such prodigies race together that it gives of the incredible, the nothing of the creature in the power of the all, the nothing in prey of a Will that can do everything. What thing wouldn't this nothing do? She will do works worthy of a Supreme Fiat. Hence the most beautiful act, most solemn, most pleasant for Us is the nothing of the creature, giving us freely in order to let us do that which we want.”

* * *

October 7, 1935

One who doesn't live of Will of God forms his living Purgatory upon the earth, and in prison. The Divine love. An impetuous tempest, excruciating scenes.

My poor mind, feels the need to flow in the Divine Volition as its center, in which flinging itself it feels the breath, the heartbeat, the love, the Divine life as its own. Who can say who can live without breath, without heartbeat, no one, thus the poor soul would form the most excruciating Purgatory without the Fiat and my human will would cast me in the abyss of all evils. But while I thought this my beloved Jesus surprising me all tenderness said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Volition, how happy I feel that you have understood that you can not live without my Fiat, for the one who doesn't live in Him, it not only forms her living Purgatory, but impedes all my prepared goods for her, she closes them for Me in my Heart and makes me racked with spasms of pain, she forms the Purgatory to my love, suppresses my flames without the relief of being able to communicate my breath, my life, hence I feel my breath suffocated, my Life impeded, without the good of being able to communicate myself to the creature. Now you should know that there is no thing done by me in which there is not my primary purpose of making her live of my Will. The Creation truly serves to this, to make the creature live of my Will and not living she suffocates this life of mine in created things and my coming upon the earth was the life of Him that I came to give her. Rather you should know that no sooner than the soul decides to want to live in my Volition, my Most Holy Humanity takes post in her, my Blood as copious rain rains on her, my sufferings as impregnable wall surround her, strengthen her, embellish her in an admirable way as to enrapture this Divine Will of mine to live in her, my death itself forms the continuous resurrection of the soul to live in Him. So that the creature feels continually regenerated in my Blood, in my sufferings, in my love, even in my breath, in which she finds sufficient grace in order to live of my Divine Will, because I put all at her disposition, as my Most Holy Humanity held my Divine Volition at its disposition, thus I put him inside and outside of the creature, in order to give life to my Will in her. Now, even to such that she doesn't decide to live in Him, my Blood doesn't rain, because it doesn't have whom to regenerate into Divine, my sufferings don't form the wall of defense, because the human volition forms the continuous collapse to my works and renders my death as impotent, so that all might re-arise in my Volition. Now my Life, my sufferings, my Blood, if the soul does not live of Him, they remain at the door of the human volition, waiting with unconquered patience in order to enter, to assail her from all sides, in order to give her grace to live of my Volition, and everything not entering it remains as suffocated in Me, my Blood, my sufferings, my Life, and oh, how I suffer in seeing that she does not give Me liberty to give her the good that I want, my love tortures Me, my sufferings, my wounds, my blood, my works, as so many compassionate voices say continually to Me: this creature impedes Us, renders Us useless and as without life for her, because she doesn't want to live of Divine Will. My daughter, how sorrowful it is to want to do good, to be able to do it and not do it."

After this I continued my abandonment in the Divine Volition, which had transported me outside of myself, and oh, how horrifying it was to look at the earth, I would have liked to withdraw into myself in order to not see anything, but my sweet Jesus, as if he wanted that I might see scenes so excruciating, stopped me and said to me:

"My daughter, how sorrowful it is to see so much human perfidy, one nation that deceives the other, and they drag by circumstances the poor people into the torment and into the fire, my poor children. You should know that the tempest will be so very strong that it will happen as when an impetuous wind transports with its strength stones, earth, trees, in a way that it remains emptied by everyone, so much so that with more ease new plants can place themselves. Thus this tempest will serve to purify the peoples and to make arise the serene day of peace and brotherly union. Pray so that all serves to my glory, to the triumph of my Will and to the good of everyone."

* * *

October 13, 1935

So much is the love of Jesus that he feels the need to relieve himself with the creature. He in the middle between his Celestial Father and creatures and he remains stricken with love for them.

I felt accordingly the usual all abandoned in the arms of my sweet Jesus, whom felt the need to relieve his ardent love; to speak of his love is a relief, to make understood in what sufferings, straights, impediments his love puts Him, it is for Him the greatest relief. And oh, how excruciating it is to hear him with a suffocated voice weeping, toiled, at half voice: love me, love me, I don't want other than love, it is the greatest of my sorrows not to be loved..., it is because I am not loved, because my Will is not done. He is bearer of my love, and makes Me loved by the creature with Divine love, and feeling my love, I feel freed from the intensities of my flames and I feel the sweet refreshment, rest, relief in my own love, that the creature gives Me.

Now, while I thought this my Highest Good Jesus visiting my little soul, made himself seen involved in his flames, he said to me:

“My daughter, if you might know in what straights my love puts Me. Listen to me, my Celestial Father was mine, I loved him with such intensity of love that I would consider Myself happy to put forth (my) life, so that no one might be able to offend Him, I was one sole thing with Him, my same Life, and not to love him I could not do it, nor wanted to, our Divine virtue, forms one sole love with my Celestial Father, hence inseparable, creatures departed from my Humanity, they were mine, incorporated in Me, I could say that they formed my Humanity itself, how (then) not to love them? It would be as not to love one's own life, and oh, in what conditions, intrigues, impediments, my love puts Me, I loved my Father, to see him offended was the greatest of my martyrdoms, I loved creatures, they were already mine, I felt them in Me, and (of) these there were no offences that they didn't do, ingratitude that they didn't commit. My dear Celestial Father justly wanted to strike them, to unmake them, and in the middle between the one and the other I remained struck by He whom I so very loved, and underwent the sufferings of those people, suffering myself for them, and while with the Father I remained offended I also, loved them even to folly, and I put forth (my) life in order to save every single creature, I could not, nor did I want to remove myself from my Celestial Father, because he was mine and I loved him, rather it was my duty as his true Son, to re-give him all the glory, the love, the satisfaction, that all creatures owed Him and although struck by indescribable sufferings, I wanted the same to make me struck, because I loved him, and I loved those people for which I was stricken. Ah! Only my love, because Divine, knows how to form such loving inventions, such impediments that it gives of the incredible, and forms the heroism of true love, so much so that one finishes with remaining burnt, consumed over the fire of love, for the one loved and holds them as incorporated in oneself, that forms one's same life. Aye! In what straights my love puts Me, it fills Me so much that I feel the need of an outlet to go forth from Me(,) works, sufferings, light, surprising graces in order to give vent to my love, and it is such and so much that I am always inside and outside of her to serve her, and now I serve her with light in the sun, in order to be able to continue this outlet of love, now I serve her in the air in order to make her breathe, now I serve her in the water in order to quench her, now in the plants in order to feed her, now in the wind in order to caress her, in the fire in order to warm her, there is no thing done by Me, as much in the Creation, as in the Redemption, (in) which my love not being able to contain itself inside of itself it went forth in order to give vent of love toward creatures. Now who can tell you how much I suffer in not seeing myself loved, how my love remains tortured by human ingratitude. I arrive even to make her faults mine in order to grieve as if they might be mine, even to do the penitence of it owed to her, I take upon my shoulders all her evils, in order to exchange them into goods, I make it mine, all mine, even to give her the post in my Humanity as a most dear member to Me, I go inventing always new contrivances of love, in order to make them feel how much I love her, and not seeing myself loved what pain, what sorrow. Therefore, my daughter, love me! Love me! When I feel loved my love finds its rest and its loving tortures are changed into sweets refreshments.”

* * *

October 20, 1935

Love and the Divine Will go equal steps, the love forms the prime adaptable material in order to form the Life of God in the Creature.

My poor mind feels the need to rest in the Divine Volition, to feel loved only by whom knows how to love it, it feels life in Him and the greatest happiness with his sweet company, but while it feels the need to be loved, it feels the ardent fever to love him, and would like to be consumed with love, to go forth from the exile, in order to be able to love with more perfect love in Heaven. My Jesus! When will you have compassion on me(?)

But while I thought this my beloved Jesus, repeating his brief little visit said to me:

“My daughter, love and Will of God go equal steps, they are never separated, and form one life alone. So that my Will created, worked so many things, but created and worked loving, nor would it have been worthy work of our infinite wisdom, if we might not love that which was created by Us, therefore every created thing, even the littlest, possesses the source of our love and has a sigh, a heartbeat, a continuous voice: love, I am Divine Will and am holy, pure, powerful, beautiful, I am love and I love, nor will I ever cease loving, even to such that I don’t convert everything into love.

“You see therefore my daughter, my Divine Will loved and then created that which he loved, love is our breath, our heartbeat, our air and since the air is communicative and there is no person or thing that can escape from the air, thus our love, true air, invests everyone, adorns everyone and everything, with right it wants to master over everything and wants to be loved by everyone, and it feels the breath, the heartbeat, the air, the life taken away, when it is not loved and they impede it, its virtue is not communicative. Now if the creature does my Will and doesn’t love, it can not be said with facts that she does my Will, it will be perhaps Will of God by circumstance, by necessity, by time, because only the Divine love holds unitive virtue, that unites and centralizes everything in my Divine Will in order to form the life, then lacking my love, that alone knows how to render and transmute the creature into adaptable material, in order to form of her the life of Divine Will, would she be as (a) hard object, that can not receive any impression of the Supreme Being my love that, as cement can fill all the lesions of the human volition, renders it soft in a way that can give it the form that is wanted, and engraves as seal Divine Life. Therefore, Will of God and love are inseparable, if you will do my Will you will love, and if you love you put in security my Will in you, the one and the other go hand in hand, my Will creates, love lends itself as material in order to undergo the creative act, in order to put forth our most beautiful works. Therefore when we are not loved, we go into delirium, We feel our arms broken, our creative hands don’t find the material in order to form our life in the creature. Hence we race together in loving each other, we always love and we will be happy on both parts, rather if you will live in my Volition, I will put at your disposition my love, and you will have in your power the heroic and incessant love that never says enough.”

* * *

October 27, 1935

How the Divine Will descends in the human act and creates his palpating life in it. How he anticipates the purgatory of one who lives in his Will.

I feel in myself the power of the Supreme Volition, but so much so that he wants that I undergo in my little acts the power of his Divine act, and while he wants it, he wants to be called by the creature, he doesn't want to be an intruder, nor to enter through force, but he wants that she knows it, and the human volition giving the kiss to the Divine Volition surrenders the post to his work, and puts herself in cortege to the Divine act, feeling honored that a Divine Volition has worked in her act. My mind lost itself, and oh, how many things it understood, but incapable of being able to repeat them with words, and my beloved Jesus all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you have not yet understood what it means my Will working in the human act of the creature. He descends in the human act with his creative power, with his Majesty, with his light and with his luxury of innumerable graces, and pouring himself out again in the human act he makes use of his power and creates his act in it, and the human act remains as material with which he has made use of it in order to create his act, and to create means that he creates so many acts as many acts as he wants to create and of the times he creates so many of it, for how many creatures are disposed that can receive that act of his, in which contains unheard of prodigies of graces, of light, of love, it contains the palpating and creative life of a Divine Volition. Behold therefore, having to do an act so great, he doesn't want to do it if the creature doesn't know it and that she herself doesn't long for and want it, she calls him to undergo in the act his creative Will of a Volition so Holy and Powerful. What difference, my daughter, between one who works the good, prays because she feels the duty to do it, or that necessity imposes itself on her, or else she suffers, because she can not free herself, for however good, they are always human acts without the virtue of multiplying themselves how much they want, not possessing the fullness of goods, nor of sanctity, nor of love, and at times they are mingled with the most vile passions, because there lacks the creative strength which creates the good and knows and can undo by itself all that which doesn't belong to his sanctity. So that the soul that lets my Divine Will work in her act, gives the field to the continuous creation, and oh, how glorified, loved he feels, because he can create that which he wants in the act of her, she feels the Sovereignty, his dominion, the royalty recognized, beloved and respected. Therefore the Heavens are trembling and everyone is attentive and in the act of profound adoration when they see my Divine Will create in the act of the creature.

“Oh! If creatures might know what it means to live in my Divine Volition they would make competition in order to live in Him, and he would be populated with children of my Will, and since in mine, the human will feels incapable of working it would do none other than to undergo the continuity of the acts of Divine Volition and it is the continuation of the acts of a good that forms the order, the harmony, the diversity of beauties that forms the enchantment and the formation of the life and of the good that one needs to acquire, is not our own life perhaps continuous repetition? We love always, we repeat the conservation of the universe and with this we maintain the order, the harmony, the life of the universe. Oh, if we might not always repeat even an instant one would see the disarrangement in all things, therefore always in my Will repeat your continuous little refrains, always undergo my Will in your acts, so that you repeat in yourself his creative act, thus he will be able to form not only the act, but the fullness of his life.”

After this I thought of all that which regards the Divine Will and I said to myself: possible that the creature can arrive to so much and my sweet Jesus repeating to speak said to me:

“My daughter, you should know that no sooner than the creature truly decides to want to live in my Divine Will, and at whatever cost to not ever do hers, my Fiat, with an indescribable love, forms the germ/seed of his life in the depth of the soul, this with such power, with such sanctity, that he doesn’t grow if first he doesn’t put the soul at post, freeing her from her weaknesses, miseries and stains if there are (some), one can say that he forms the anticipated purgatory, purging her of all that which might impede that a life of Divine Will might be formed in her, because my Will and sins can not exist, nor remain together, at the most some apparent weakness could belong, that with his light and heat becomes immediately purified. He always holds the purificatory act in his hands, so that no obstacle might be in the soul, that might impede not only growth, but development of his acts in the acts of the creature. Hence the first thing that my Will does is to take away the purgatory beforehand, making it done anticipated, in order to be more free to make her live in Him and to form his life as pleases him more. Whence if the creature might die after a definite and willed act to live in my Volition, she will take the flight toward Heaven, rather my same Will will carry her in his arms of light as triumph, as his birth, and as his dear child, and if this were not so, it could not be said: be done your Will as in Heaven so in earth; it would be a way of saying, not a reality, in Heaven because He reigns there are neither sins, nor purgatory, thus in earth if he reigns in the soul, there can be neither sin, nor fear of purgatory. He knows how to clear everything, because he wants to be alone in his post regent and dominant.”

* * *

November 4, 1935

Who lives in the Divine Will possesses her Jesus in a perennial way and He repeats the miracle that he worked in instituting the Most Holy Sacrament of receiving Himself.

My abandonment continues in the Divine Volition but how much more I walk in his sea, so much more I feel the need of his life in order to continue to live, and having made Holy Communion, I felt the need to love him. But my poor nothing, didn’t have sufficient love in order to love He who loves me so much, my love was so scarce, that I felt shame before the love of Jesus whom had so much, that the confines of it weren’t seen, and yet I wanted to love him. And my beloved Jesus giving me courage said to me:

“My blessed daughter, do not batter yourself, for one who lives in my Will, the nothing holds it in the all, and wanting to love me, she loves Me with my same love, I find in her my powerful, wise, attractive, immense love, in a way that this nothing of the creature takes Me from all sides, and I feel myself tied by her love that is my same love, in a way that I can not escape her, and now she wounds Me, now controls Me even to make me come to less and I feel the need to rest in the arms of her love. But this is not everything, one who lives in my Will possesses her Jesus in perennial way, because He holds the virtue to form, to raise and to feed my Life in the creature, and receiving me in the Sacrament I find another Jesus, that is myself, that she loves Me, adores Me, thanks Me, repairs Me, I can say that I repeat the great miracle that I did in instituting the Sacrament of the Eucharist, (in) which I communicated myself, that is your Jesus received Jesus, it was the greatest honor, the most complete satisfaction, the exchange of the heroism of my love to receive myself, I lacked nothing of all that which was owed Me to my Sacramental Life, a God equalized God himself, I could say that that which I gave Myself she re-gives. Now for one who lives in my Will, not possessing her Jesus is impossible, hence receiving me in (the) Sacrament I can say: I go to find myself in the creature and I find that which I want, my Life that uniting us together forms one alone, I find my palace, I find the love that always loves Me, I find the compensation of the great sacrifice of all that which I do and suffer in my Sacramental Life. My excessive love brings Me with an irresistible strength to repeat the miracle of receiving myself, but it is given Me to do it only in the creature where my Divine Will reigns.”

* * *

November 17, 1935

All that which one does in the Divine Will takes its post in God.

I feel in the arms of the Divine Will, it seems to Me that he awaits Me in order to work in the my little act, in order to give me rest in his works, and for Him to rest also, and my sweet Jesus surprising me with his brief little visit said to Me:

“My daughter, as the creature works in my Will, thus her acts take their post in our Divine Being, our goodness is so much that it holds so many voids in order to receive all the human acts, that possess the creative virtue in our Volition, they come to their Creator all festive and fill these voids that our love holds at beautiful post formed in Us in order to be able to say with facts: they are our acts, that which We do the creature does, that which one does in our Will nothing remains outside of Us, nor can they remain (so), it would be this if one might be able to give, as if our Life might be subject to separate itself, that which can not be, because we not only possess the inseparability of our Supreme Being, but of all our acts and of one who lives in our Volition we hold posts for everyone and of everything we form one act alone. Now these acts find in Us, not only their place of honor, (but) the perennial life and their rest, and We feel the happiness, the joy, that the creature enclosed in her act with doing it in our Will, we feel that our Fiat loves Us, glorifies Us, felicitates Us, beatifies Us in the act of the creature, as We merit. Oh! How happy we feel, to feel happiness in Us is nature, to feel the happiness that the creature can give us, we feel the exchange of the work of the Creation and does it seem little to you that we give the virtue to the creature to be able to felicitate her Creator? It is such and so much the joy that we experience that we abandon Ourselves in the arms of the creature and pressing her in ours, we rest in her, and she rests in Us, and then our rest becomes broken, when she surprises Us with her other acts, in order to enjoy the happiness that she brings Us. So that we don’t do other than to pass from happiness to rest, from rest to happiness, blessed creature that living in our Divine Will can felicitate He who possesses the sea of infinite joys and happiness without end.”

* * *

November 24, 1935

True love always calls He whom it loves and encloses Him within. How all is veiled without the Divine Will. Example.

My poor mind found itself under the impetuous waves of the Divine Volition impetuous but pacific with happiness, so much so that the poor creature feels pressed and incapable of being able to receive everything and while I followed the acts of the Fiat, I arrived at the point of the Creation of man, and I thought to myself with how much love could the Lord love innocent Adam, before sinning. And my beloved Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My daughter, love Me for how much it is possible for a creature. He was a complex of love, not even a fiber was empty of love toward his Creator, he felt the life of his Creator alive palpating in his heart, indeed true love calls in every instant He whom it loves and giving him with its love its life, it re-takes for its own life He whom it loves. Now my Divine Will loving found in the creature himself, he facilitates his regime, nothing opposes itself to his dominion, his noble post is as dominant King, he forms his longed for kingdom in her. When the creature loves Me how much more she can, not one void of God can one find in her, rather with her love she encloses Me in the center of her soul, in a way that I can not go out, nor can I free myself from her, and if I might be able to go out, that which I can never do, she would come after Me, without being able neither I, nor she to separate from each other, because the love is (the) same. Therefore who loves Me indeed can say: I have conquered He who has created Me, I have Him inside me, I possess Him, He is all mine, no one can take Him away from me. Now, my daughter, the love in Adam before sinning was perfect, total, my Will held his life in a way that he felt Him more than his own life, as he sinned, the life of my Fiat withdrew himself and the light remained (to) him, because He without Him could not live, he would have returned into the nothing. In creating him we did as a Father that puts his goods and his life itself in common with (his) own child. Now this disobedience, to rebel (against) one's own Father, the Father with sorrow is constrained to put him outside of his residence, not letting him possess in common anymore neither his goods, nor his life, but so much is his love that although distant he doesn't let him lack the necessary things, the means of strict necessity, because he knows that if the Father withdraws himself, the life of the child is finished. Thus my Divine Will did, he withdrew his Life but left his light, as help, support and as necessary means so that his child might not perish entirely. Now with withdrawing his Life, all things and works of God remained, veiled for man. He himself, veiled the intelligence, the memory, the will, he remained as those poor unhappy dying ones, that covering the pupil of the eye with a thin veil, they don't see clearly anymore the life of the light. My Divinity itself in descending from Heaven in earth, veiled itself with my Humanity. Oh! If creatures might possess as Life my Will, immediately they would have known Me, because He himself would have revealed who I was, my Volition in her and that same Divine Volition in Me they would have immediately known, loved each other, they would have made crowds around Me, nor would they have been able to separate from Me, recognizing me under the likeness of their cast offs as Word Eternal, He who loved them so much, that he had dressed himself as one of them. So that I would have had no need to manifest myself, my Will residing in them, would have revealed Me, nor would I have been able to hide myself instead I had to tell them who I was, and how many did not believe Me? Therefore even to such that my Will doesn't reign in creatures everything is veiled, the Sacraments themselves, that more than (a) new Creation with so much love I left in my Church, are veiled for them, how many surprises, how many beautiful secrets, and marvelous things a veiled pupil impedes (one) from understanding, from seeing, from tasting, more so that this veil is the human volition that forms and impedes her from seeing the things that are in herself. Whence my Will reigning in creatures as life will take away this veil and all things will be revealed, and then they will see the caresses that we make them through means of created things, the kisses, the loving embraces, in every single created thing they will feel our ardent heartbeat that loves them, they will see in the Sacraments our Life flow, in order to give itself continually to them and they will feel the need of giving themselves to Us. This will be the great prodigy that my Divine Will will do, to break all the veils, to abound with unheard of graces, to take possession of souls as proper life, in a way that no one will be able to resist him and thus he will have his kingdom upon the earth.”

Jesus expedite and complete that which You say and want and your Will be done as in Heaven so in earth.

Deo Gratias!/Thanks be to God!

*The Kingdom of the Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 34

Contents

December 2, 1935 .....	p. 1
How the Divine Will darts the creature and forms there the Divine nobility, and doing as Actor renders God and the creature inseparable. Example, the Sun.
December 8, 1935 .....	p. 2
Prodigies of the Immaculate conception. Communication of the divine rights. How God doesn't want to do anything without his Celestial Mother.
December 15, 1935 .....	p. 3
How true love wants to make itself known, spread itself out and race and fly in search of whom it loves, because it feels the need to be re-loved. Power that the creative act that it receives when it turns in the Creation.
December 29, 1935 .....	p. 4
The Regal post of the creature in the union of the Divine Unity, how she remains enclosed in him and how she can form the rarest beauties and the enchantment to her own Creator.
January 5, 1936 .....	p. 5
Who lives in the Divine Volition forms the little life of the Divine Will in the creature. How she becomes loved with new and doubled love by God.
January 22, 1936 .....	p. 6
Who lives in the Divine Will forms the theater of the works of her Creator and repeats in her the moving scene of the Redemption.
March 1, 1926 .....	p. 7
Prodigies of the Incarnation of the Divine Word. How the Heavens are astonished and the Angels remain mute from it. Prodigies when the Divine Will works in the creature. The Divine Trinity called in counsel. How God in creating puts forth a dose of his love in the creature.
April 21, 1936 .....	p. 9
Divine display for who lives in his Will; how he renders her participant of his works. How he always holds to give and to work together with the creature.
May 20, 1936 .....	p. 11
Difference that passes between who calls the Divine Will in her acts, and between who does good works without Him. The Ascension; how he departed for Heaven and remained upon the earth.
May 31, 1936 .....	p. 13
How the Divine Will contains all the acts of the life of Jesus as in act to always repeat them for love of creatures. The life of Jesus symbolizes the call of the kingdom, of the Divine Will upon the earth.
June 14, 1936 .....	p. 15
God and his Will, his Will with the Creation, his Will with the Celestial beings, his Will in discord with the human family.
July 4, 1936 .....	p. 17
How an act of human will can spoil the Divine order and his most beautiful works. The first thing that God wants is absolute liberty. How the Divine Will will form so many Jesuses where He reigns.
August 23, 1936 .....	p. 19
The tiny little field assigned to creatures in the immensity of the Divine Will. Jesus puts his life at (the) disposition of creatures, enough that he obtains that they live in the Divine Volition. The great prodigy, of the Creation of the Virgin.

November 3, 1936 .....	p. 22
Reflections between the Creator and the creature. Inseparability of both.
How in every instant God asks that she might receive the life of his Will.
How who decides to live of Him God covers all that which she has done, with his Divine Will.
December 8, 1936 .....	p. 24
How the Queen of Heaven in her Conception (was) conceived in the merits, in the life, in the love and sufferings of the future Redeemer, in order to be able to then conceive the Divine Word in Her in order to come to save creatures.
December 20, 1936 .....	p. 25
The Divine Fiat made the Virgin conceived in every creature so that everyone might have a Mother all hers. Dowry that God gave to the Virgin. Triumphs and victories of God, victories and triumphs of the Virgin, in which all creatures are endowed.
December 24, 1936 .....	p. 28
The Celestial and Divine Mother and the human Mother. Fast race of love of God in which lets this Mother generate her Jesus in every single creature in virtue of the Fiat.
December 28, 1936 .....	p. 30
The Celestial Heiress; how she calls her children to inherit her goods.
How she arrives to endow souls with her Maternal love, in order to form other Mamas to Jesus.
January 1, 1937 .....	p. 31
The feast that the Queen of Heaven prepared for her Son Jesus in his birth.
How love is magnet, transforms and embellishes.
January 4, 1937 .....	p. 32
How every creature holds even from the beginning of her existence an act wanted and decided by the Divine Will, which creates her, raises her, forms her. Feast of Jesus in every act of the creature that does his Will.
January 10, 1937 .....	p. 34
Weaving between the Divine Volition and the human, tenderness of Jesus for who lives in his Volition even to feel happy to have cried and suffered. The refuge of the works of God.
January 24, 1937 .....	p. 36
The Divine Will, for who lives in Him, he forms the repeater of his life and of his love, and forms and extends in her all the Creation, and all that which Jesus did. How he will give her a new name calling her: My Fiat.
February 10, 1937 .....	p. 38
The Kingdom of the Divine Volition will be the kingdom of the Queen of Heaven; her ardent desires and incessant prayers; assaults of love that she gives to the Divinity in order to obtain it. How she will put her life at (the) disposition of creatures, in order to give them the grace to make them live of Divine Will.
February 26, 1837 .....	p. 39
What one act more is that the creature does in the Divine Will, it is the harmony, the music, it is the sweeping away Heavens and earth, it is the installation that she forms in God and God in her.
March 6, 1937 .....	p. 41
The Creation first means of help in order to form the life of the Divine Will in us; second, God directly; third, the circumstances of life.
March 14, 1937 .....	p. 42

The Divine Will is life, and as life forms the generation of his life in the acts of the creature that will live in Him and forms there the long generation of the children of his Divine Fiat.

March 18, 1937 .....	p. 43
The Divine Will makes (a) gift of all his works to whom lives in Him. The breath of God in his works and in all the holy works of creatures. The Divine Will makes himself supplier of that which the creature lacks.
March 22, 1937 .....	p. 45
Need of love that the Divine Fiat feels to be re-loved. How who lives in Him he gives so much love to her, as to make her love in all hearts and in all the Creation in order to be exchanged for the love of everyone. How the soul without the Fiat is as the earth without water. Evils of disturbance.
March 26, 1937 .....	p. 46
The Creation, the Humanity of Our Lord, they are the fields in which the soul develops her acts that lives in the Divine Will. How she forms Our Lord's Humanity and the Paradise for Jesus upon the earth.
April 4, 1937 .....	p. 48
As the creature gives her will to God, thus (God) acquires his Divine rights over her; how three walls of strength become formed in order to not let her go outside from within the Fiat.
April 8, 1937 .....	p. 49
All that which one does in the Divine Volition constitutes a right for everyone and everyone can do that good. These rights were given by Adam, by the Queen of Heaven, by Our Lord, whom prepared for us the regal attire.
April 18, 1937 .....	p. 51
Continuous meetings between the Divine Volition and the creature. How who lives in Him has formed the little tiny sea of the Fiat. How he always races in everything in order to give new graces and new love.
April 25, 1937 .....	p. 52
Prodigy of the working act of the Divine Will in the creature. How who lets him work in her is the longed for one, the welcomed one, the darling of the whole Celestial Court. All that which one does in Him, acquires the virtue to produce divine life.
May 6, 1937 .....	p. 54
How Jesus doesn't know what to do with a soul that doesn't possess peace. (For) who lives in the Divine Volition God makes for them (a) gift of all his works, and also of his Life itself, in order to make them see how much and how he wants to be loved.
May 10, 1937 .....	p. 56
How God makes himself food of the creature; the exchange, the harmonizing, the speaking of both parts forms the most beautiful works. How the Queen of Heaven continues the office of Mother and she raises her Son in creatures.
May 16, 1937 .....	p. 58
The truths Divine birth, and it is the greatest miracle that God can do, and the great good that it carries to creatures.
May 23, 1937 .....	p. 59
How the Divine Will is order and peace and it is the sign where He reigns. Who lives in the Divine Volition is always renewed in Divine sanctity, love and freshness and in her act races the creative and growing act of the divine goods.
May 28, 1937 .....	p. 61

*The Queen Bearer of Jesus, the great gift that was consigned to her.
Assignment that she had from the Supreme Being.*

June 6, 1937 .....	p. 62
Interest that God holds that the creature might live in his Will; dowry that he will give. Sentinel of Jesus in order to supply for that which she lacks, and if needs be he will also do miracles. Example of a king.
June 18, 1937 .....	p. 64
What one obtains and what it means (to) submit oneself to the Divine Will. Change of abandonments between the Divine Will and the soul; merit that one acquires. Outlet of love. How in every created thing there is the deposit of love for us.
June 28, 1937 .....	p. 68
That which God does to the creature when she enters in his Will. As one decides to live in the Divine Volition, her name is written in Heaven and she remains confirmed in good, in love and Divine sanctity, and she becomes enrolled in the Celestial Militia. Example.
July 4, 1937 .....	p. 69
How God wants to form so many of his divine lives in every single creature. How who lives in the Divine Volition makes himself bearer of everyone and of everything to his Creator.
July 12, 1937 .....	p. 71
How the human reflections take away the place from the Divine ones and they are rubble that makes the font of the soul turbid. How the Divine Will converts his love in nature, and that which he does (at the) point of death one (can) anticipate it who lives in Him.
July 25, 1937 .....	p. 73
How an act in the Divine Volition can be an impetuous wind, an air, a Celestial atmosphere. Three circles. God if he loves he works, if he speaks he gives.
August 2, 1937 .....	p. 75
How the Creation possesses perfect happiness, as to be able to give the terrestrial happiness to creatures. How sin stopped the happiness. The great evil of whom removes himself from the origin. Example.

Volume 34

Fiat!!!

In Voluntate Dei. Deo Gratias

In the Will of God. Thanks be to God

December 2, 1935

How the Divine Will darts the creature and forms there the Divine nobility, and doing as Actor renders God and the creature inseparable. Example, the Sun.

My King of love Jesus and my Queen Mamma my Divine one, oh! weave my Will with yours and make of it one alone, rather enclose me in your hearts, so that I write not outside of you, but rather inside of the Heart of my Jesus, (and) in the womb of my Celestial Mother, so that I can say: it is Jesus that writes, it is my Mama that feeds me the words. Therefore help me and give me grace to conquer the great repugnance that I feel in beginning another volume, you who know my poor state, I feel the need to be sustained, strengthened and all renewed by the Power of your Divine Fiat in order to be able to do in everything and always your Divine Will.

Whence I felt immersed in the Divine Volition, which took (the) aspect of Actor, in order to be able to enter in the most intimate closets of my soul, and form his working act in me, I remained surprised, and my sweet [Jesus] visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, when the creature does and lives in the Divine Will, our Supreme Being darts her continually with his light, he darts her mind and casts there in her the nobility of the divine thoughts, in a way that she feels in her intelligence, memory and will, the sanctity, the remembrance of her Creator, the love, the will of He who doing as Actor forms in her the order, the divine wisdom darting her he casts there with his kisses of light the divine substance in her mind, in a way that everything is noble, everything is holy, everything is sacred in her. This Actor of my Volition, forming his seat in the created intelligence, with his power and mastery forms there his image, darts her heart and forms there the nobility of the love, of the desires, of the affections, of the heartbeats, darts the mouth and forms the nobility of the words, darts the works and the steps and forms the holy works, the nobility of the steps, and not only darting the soul, but also the body and with his light he invests the blood and ennobles it, in a way that the creature feels flow in her blood, in her limbs the fullness, the sanctity, the substance of the Divine nobility. This actor of my Divine Will takes the office of insuperable Craftsman, to transform God in the creature, and the creature in God. When my Will has arrived to this, that is the greatest act that he can do, that is forming of God and of the creature one single life, rendering them inseparable the one from the other, he rests in his work, and feels such happiness, because he has conquered the creature, he has formed his work in her, and has completed his Will. Then it seems that he says in the emphasis of his love: I have done everything, (there) remains none other to me, than to possess her and love her.”

I remained worried in hearing this, and my amiable Jesus added:

“My daughter, why do you doubt? doesn't the Sun also do this office, as it darts the flower with its light, thus it gives the substance of the color and of the perfume to it, as it darts the fruit, thus it infuses the sweetness and the flavor to it, as it darts the plants, thus it communicates to each one the substance, the effects that they need. If the Sun does this, more so my Divine Will that can do everything, and knows how to do everything, and as the Sun goes finding the [Seed], in order to give that which it possesses, thus my Divine Will goes finding the dispositions of the creatures that want to live of my Will, that he darts immediately and communicates there the Divine substance and nobility, and forms and makes his life grow.”

* * *

December 8, 1935

Prodigies of the Immaculate conception. Communication of the divine rights. How God doesn't want to do anything without his Celestial Mother.

I was doing my round in the acts of the Divine Will and arrived in the act that the omnipotent Fiat created the Immaculate Virgin I stopped, and oh what surprise of prodigies never heard of united together, the enchantment of the Sky, of the Sun and of all the Creation, they can not compare, oh how they remain behind before the Sovereign Queen and my sweet Jesus in seeing me so surprised said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you should know that there is no beauty, nor value, nor prodigies that can compare to the Immaculate Conception of this Celestial Creature, my omnipotent Fiat made of Her a new Creation, oh how much more beautiful, more prodigious than the first, my Divine Volition in himself doesn't have neither beginning, nor end, and the greatest prodigy was as if in this creature she might be reborn, not once, but in every instant, act, prayers that she might grow, and (in) this growth my Will multiplied his prodigies in (an) infinite way. The Creation of the universe was created by us in admirable way, and is maintained by us under the empire of our creative and conservative act, without adding on other, instead in this Virgin we maintain the creative, conservative and growing act, this is the prodigy of prodigies, the life of our Volition reborn in Her, her growth continuous in every act that she did, and our Fiat in order to be reborn in Her pronounced himself in the act of her conception, and when this was pronounced our act has such sumptuousness, sublimity, height, immensity, power that she took everyone in the net of her love, not putting anyone aside, everyone can take the good that our working Fiat possesses, except someone that might not want it. Our Divinity in seeing in this Holy creature our Will as reborn, participated his divine rights to her, in a way that she was mistress of our love, power, wisdom and goodness, and Queen of our Fiat. She with her growing act of our Volition enraptured us, loved us so much so that she arrived to love us for everyone, and covered all creatures, hid them in her love and made us feel the echo of the love of everyone and of each one.

“Oh! how we feel tied and as made imprisoned by the love of this Most Holy Virgin, more so that as she loved us, adored, prayed, worked, with the growing act of our Fiat that she possessed, she enclosed in herself her Creator, as she loved us thus we felt absorbed in Her without being able to resist her, such was her power that she dominated us and enclosed in herself our Most Holy Trinity, and we loved her so much that we let her do that which she wanted, who had (the) heart to deny her anything? rather we felt more happy to content her because a soul that loves us is our happiness, because we feel the echo, the joy of our happiness in her, and who possesses our Will as life, is everything for us. This is the great prodigy of one who possesses our Will as life to feel herself participate in his same divine right, with this she feels that her love never finishes and she holds so much of it that she can love for everyone, and give love to everyone, with her growing act it never says enough to her sanctity. More so that the Sovereign Queen with possessing our Will as Life holds always to give us, always to say, she holds us always occupied and we always hold to give, and to communicate to her always our loving secrets, so much so that we do nothing without Her, first we sense it with Her, then we deposit it in her Maternal Heart and from her Heart it descends in the fortunate one who should receive that good.

“So that there is no grace that descends upon the earth, there is no sanctity that is formed, nor sinner that converts, there is no love that departs from our throne, that first is not deposited in her Heart of Mother, which forms the maturation of that good, fecundates it with her love, she enriches it with graces and if needed with the virtue of her sorrows and then she deposits it in who should receive it, in a way that who receives it, feels (the) Divine Paternity and the Maternity of her Celestial Mother. We can do it without Her, but we don’t want to, who will have (the) heart to put her aside? our love, our infinite Wisdom, our Fiat himself imposes himself on us and doesn’t let us do anything, that doesn’t descend through means of her.

“You see therefore where our love arrives for the one who lives of the Divine Will even to not want to do anything without Her, she is the harmony of our infinite Wisdom, that always turns around us like the Creation of the universe always turns around us and as they turn they fecundate the earth and maintain the natural life to all creatures, thus this new Creation of the conception of the Immaculate Lady always turns around God, and God always turns around Her, and they maintain the fecundity of the good, they form the sanctity of souls and the re-call of creatures to God.”

* * *

December 15, 1935

How true love wants to make itself known, spread itself out and race and fly in search of whom it loves, because it feels the need to be re-loved. Power that the creative act that it receives when it turns in the Creation.

My poor mind is always transported in the sea of the Divine Will, which makes present to me and holds as in act all that which he has done for love of creatures, and he longs that they recognize that which he has done, how much he has loved us, and waits for us in his acts in order to say to them: we do it together, not to work as alone, so that that which I did, you do, and thus we can say with equal love we have loved each other, how beautiful it is to be able to say next to each other you have loved me and I have loved you, it is the compensation of the greatest works and the most sorrowful sacrifices. Whence my mind turned in the Creation, in that act when the omnipotent Fiat pronouncing itself created and extended the azure Sky, and my Eternal love in order to have me together with Him in this act, and my sweet Jesus made feast that I kept him company and detaining me said to me:

“My good daughter, to love and not make oneself known is against the nature of true love, because true love as by itself spreads itself out and races, flies in search of whom it loves, and then stays when finding her if it encloses her, hides her in its love and transforming her in its own flames, it wants to find its same love in her, its same works done by whom it loves for its love. And since the creature can never do that which we do for her, our love in order to make the intent, calls the creature to himself, hides her in his own love, and makes her work together with our creative and conservative act, and thus in reality the creature can say: I have loved you, that which you have done for me, I have done for you; and we really feel re-loved by her, with our love and our same works.

“You should know, that as the creature elevates herself with her will in ours, in the things created by us, our Supreme Being renews over her the creative act, and oh the wonders that we do of graces, of sanctity, of Sky, of Suns in her soul, our act delights itself to repeat itself, and as she turns in created things our love wants to make itself known, wants to make touched with (the) hand how much he loves her, and he repeats over her our creative act that is not ever subject, to stop, in a way that she feels all the strength of our love, the power of our works and taken by stupor she loves us with our creative strength, that we have infused in her. And oh! our contentment in seeing ourselves known and loved by whom we love so much.

“Behold therefore we created so many things, because we awaited the creature in order to make ourselves known how much we love her, and in order to give her in every created thing the potentiality of our love, in order to make ourselves loved; love when it is not known becomes unhappy, and when it is not re-loved by whom it loves it feels itself lose life, impeded, the steps broken, and to put in forgetfulness its most beautiful works. Instead when it is known and loved, its life multiplies itself, behold our creative act over the creature, in order to be loved as we love her, our steps are free, rather they fly in order to take up the beloved creature, to press her to our bosom in order to love her and to make ourselves loved, our love feels the happiness of the love that she brings them.

“Therefore there is no honor greater that one can give us than to come into our Divine Will, we as we see her come we put at her disposition all the Creation, because it is hers, for her everything was done, and as she turns in every created thing, she finds our creative power that investing her communicates our love that each one possesses, and she can love us with our creative strength, that rises, and she can love us as she wants and how much she wants, and thus the love of the Creator and the creature give the kiss, the one rests in the other, and all and both feel the contentment of loving indeed. Oh! how beautiful is the company of one who loves us, so much is our contentment that our love rises and invents other more beautiful works, other loving industries in order to love and make ourselves loved...”

* * *

December 29, 1935

The Regal post of the creature in the union of the Divine Unity, how she remains enclosed in him and how she can form the rarest beauties and the enchantment to her own Creator.

I am between the arms of the Divine Fiat, which attracts one so much, that my little nothing feels lost in the All, and although lost it feels its life sustained, fed, revived by the All and if may it never be, I might want to remove myself, that which can not be, because I would not even find a hole where to be able to enclose myself that I might not find my All, oh then I would feel my little nothing without life. Whence I felt that the Divine Volition blew (on) my nothing and made me feel his life, his love, his power, but while my mind swam in the All, in his interminable light, my beloved Jesus visiting my little my soul, all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Will, how surprising, marvelous, sublime it is, to work in my Divine Volition, as the creature does her act in Him, her act remains stripped from the human and uniting itself acquires the union of the unity of the Divine act. Now the creature holds her regal post, her act in the unity of our single act, and hence if she loves, she loves in our unity, if she adores us, if she blesses us, she is inside of our unity, if she understands us it is inside of our unity, she sees, does and feels nothing outside of us, but everything inside of our Divine Being, she can say: I don’t know other, nor love, nor want but the Divine Volition alone, that his unity holds me enclosed within.

“Now the greatest fortune, the most sublime grace for the creature, the glory, the greatest honor for us is to possess the human will, her act in our unity, and do you know why? because we can give love when we want to give, and make ourselves loved when we desire, enrich her with grace, with sanctity, with beauty, as to feel ourselves enraptured by the goods and beauty that we have infused (in) her. In short we can do with the creature, love her, entrust the All to the nothing, since she holds of ours, and she will feel such power and love as to be able to defend the All, and we feel ourselves secure in this nothing, because we have surrendered our weapons to her in order to hold us secure and defended.

“But this is not everything, all that which the creature can do, the natural actions, the most indifferent acts, the words, the works, the steps, possessing her act in our unity they become effect of her act, united with ours, symbol of the Sun, that with the effects of its light forms the beauty, the flowerings, the enchantment to all the creation, thus invested by the light of my Fiat, everything becomes her effect, one is the act, one is the Will, but the effects are innumerable, that they can form the rarest beauties, and the most seductive enchantment to He who has created her, and who possesses her in his Unity.

“My daughter, our Supreme Being possesses one act alone, so that all the Creation, every single creature they are none other than effect of the unity of our act, so that the human will uniting itself becomes our continuous effect. And this effect do you know what it means? to always give to her and to always receive from the creature.”

Now I remained stupefied and fixed in the Divine Volition and I understood so many things of this union in the Divine unity, and while it was one it enclosed all the Creation and everyone was enclosed in this Unity, and lead by Him, but sustained, united, bound in this Unity, and since he is one, he is everything, he sustains and gives life to everything, in this while I looked (at), the Sky, and so many lights of varied beauty were seen that possessed all the variety of the colors, but with an admirable way that these lights enraptured, meandered, in the azure vault and while they were so many they formed one alone, they penetrated in the Heavens, they descended in the depths, they wanted to give life of light to everyone, they never stopped, they raced, they flew. And my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, these lights are the wonders of the acts done in my Divine Volition, how beautiful they are, they carry the imprint of their Creator.”

* * *

January 5, 1936

Who lives in the Divine Volition forms the little life of the Divine Will in the creature. How she becomes loved with new and doubled love by God.

My little and poor will feels the extreme need of the Divine Volition, without Him I feel fasting, without strength, without heat and without life, rather I feel death at every instant because lacking there is none who can substitute to feed his life in me. Therefore I go repeating: I am hungry, come oh Divine Will to give me your life in order to satiate me of you, otherwise I die. But while I was delirious that I wanted to feel in myself the fullness of the Divine Will, my sweet Jesus repeating his brief little visit with me, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, your deliriums, your hunger that you feel the extreme need that you want to feel in every instant the life of my Will, they are wounds to my heart, they are tears of love that violating me makes me race, fly, in order to come to make the life of my Will grow in you. You should know that as the creature wants to do my Will in order to live and emitting her acts in Him, she calls her Creator, which feels himself called by the power of his own Volition in the creature, which he is not given to resist or to put forth the least delay. Rather since we never let ourselves (be) conquered in love, as we see that she is about to call us, we don’t give her the time, we call her and she races in our Divine Being as in her own center, she casts herself in our arms and we press her to us so much so as to transform her in us, a perfect accord happens between the Creator and the creature, and so much is our emphasis of love that we love her anew, it is double love; but this is not enough, we give such communication of our Supreme Being as to make ourselves love with new love and doubled by her, and if you might know what it means to be loved by God with new and double love, and to be able love with new and double love, only in our Divine Will are there these wonders and prodigies. God loves himself in the creature, everything is his, hence there is no wonder that he puts in field his always new love, doubles it, hundred folds it how much he wants, and he gives grace to her to make her love with his same love, if this were not so, one would see great disparity between who can love and between who can not love, and the poor creature would remain humble, annihilated, without rush and union of love with her Creator, and when two beings can not love with equal love, the inequality indeed produces unhappiness, while our Will is Unity and freely gives his love to the creature in order to make her love, he gives his sanctity in order to make her holy, his wisdom in order to make her know, there is nothing that he possesses that he would not give her. More so that with living in our Fiat, as she puts aside her will in order to give life to ours in her acts, she has formed the little life of our Volition in her, which demands, longs for the growth, and it’s enough one act more in Him in order to grow, one sigh in order to satisfy the hunger, one total desire that my Volition races in all her being in order to form sufficient food in order to feel herself satisfied of all that which belongs to her Creator. Highest attention is needed and my Will will do all that which is needed in order to form his life in the creature.”

* * *

January 22, 1936

Who lives in the Divine Will forms the theater of the works of her Creator and repeats in her the moving scene of the Redemption.

I was doing the round in the acts of the Divine Will and sought to invest with my little love the Sky, the Sun and all the Creation, then I turned in the acts of the Redemption, and sweet Jesus enclosed his acts in me, and repeated the most moving scenes in order to repay me my little love, I remained surprised and my beloved Jesus, all tenderness and love said to me:

“My good daughter, daughter of my Will, you should know that my love is so much that in order to relieve myself I want to repeat my works, but in whom can I repeat them? in whom do I find (the) place in order to enclose them in order to feel myself loved? In whom lives in my Will. As the creature turns in my works, in order to know them, love them and call them in herself, they reproduce themselves in her, and it forms the theater of our works, how many moving scenes, now the Sky is extended, now the Sun rises with all its majesty, now the sea murmurs and forming its waves would like to flood its Creator with its love, and now she forms the most beautiful meadow in bloom, and to every flower she makes said her little refrain to us: I love you, I glorify you, I adore you, and your Fiat come to reign upon the earth, there is no being that she doesn't call in herself, in order to make her little story spoken, I love you, I love you. My daughter, our love is not content if it doesn't give everything, and doesn't repeat our works, in one who lives in our Will.

“But it is not everything, you feel it yet. She with turning in the acts of the Creation repeats my works and I take highest pleasure and delight in assisting in the most splendid scenes of the Creation in the creature, when she turns in the acts of the Redemption in order to make them hers, I repeat my life. So that I repeat my conception, my birth (in) which the Angels repeat the glory in the Heavens and peace to men of good will, and if human ingratitude constrains me to cry, I go to cry in her, because I know that my tears will be repaid and pearled with her I love you. Hence I pass on to repeat my life, my steps, my lessons, and when they renew to me the blows, the sufferings, the Crucifixion, the death, I don't ever suffer outside of this creature, but I go in her to suffer my sufferings, the cross, the death, because she won't leave me alone, she will take part in my sufferings, she will remain crucified with me and will give me her life for exchange of my death.

“So that in one who lives in my Will I find the theater of my life, the moving scenes of my infancy and of my passion, I find the speaking Skies, the Suns that love me, the winds that groan with love for me, in short all created things hold to tell me a little word, an I love you, a testament of thankfulness, but who is it that makes it speaking for me? who is it that takes the voice to all things? Who lives in my Will; He transforms her so much that there is no love, that does not give itself nor work that he can not repeat in her, therefore they can call them his living lives, and the repeater of the works of their Creator.”

* * *

March 1, 1926

Prodigies of the Incarnation of the Divine Word. How the Heavens are astonished and the Angels remain mute from it. Prodigies when the Divine Will works in the creature. The Divine Trinity called in counsel. How God in creating puts forth a dose of his love in the creature.

I am beneath the press of the privation of my sweet Jesus, I feel pressed, undone, as if my life might want to finish, but the Divine Volition triumphs over my little being rising in my soul, and calls me to make my day in his Will, it seems to me that while I feel myself die without dying, He forms his victory and it is his triumph, and his life re-arises over my dying will more beautiful, all full of Majesty and double love. Oh! Divine Will, how much you love me, you make me feel death in order to centralize your life all the more in me.

Whence I continued my day in his divine acts and arrived at the incarnation of the Word such love was felt, as to feel oneself burn, consumed in his Divine flames. And my Highest Good Jesus, as drowned in his flames of love said to me:

“My blessed daughter, my love was so much in incarnating myself in the bosom of my Celestial Mother that Heavens and earth could not contain it, the act of incarnating myself happened in one act of love so intense, so strong, so great, that it was more than enough to burn everything and everyone with love. You should know, before incarnating myself my Celestial Father looked in himself and in the enthusiasm of his love not being able to contain it seas of love went forth from himself in torrents, in this enthusiasm of love he looked at his Son, and I found myself in the same flames of love and I commanded myself that I might incarnate myself, I wanted this, and in an impetus of love, without my Father leaving, nor the Holy Spirit, the great portent of the incarnation happened. I remained with my Father, and at the same time descended in the bosom of my Mother. The three Divine persons we were inseparable, nor subject to separate ourselves. Therefore I can say: I remained in Heaven, and descended in earth, and the Father and the Holy Spirit, they descended with me in earth and they remained in Heaven. Hence in this act so great our Divine Being overflowed so much in love, that the Heavens were stupefied and the Angels surprised and mute, everyone wounded in our flames of love. The incarnation was none other than an act of our Divine Will, what doesn't he know how to do and can do[?] everything; with his power and with his infinite love he arrives, even to work the prodigy not ever heard of, nor done, of making us remain in Heaven and descend in the prison of the Maternal bosom. Thus our Will wanted thus it was done.

“Now my daughter, every time that the soul wants to do my Will, my Celestial Father first looks inside of himself, calls as in counsel the Sacrosanct Trinity, in order to fill that act of our Will with all the possible and imaginable goods, then he issues it forth from himself and makes it invest the creature by his working, communicating, transforming Will, and as in the incarnation the three Divine Persons they remained in Heaven, and descended in the bosom of the Immaculate Virgin, thus my Will with his power transports with himself in his operative act the Divine Trinity in the creature, while he leaves him in Heaven, and forms there in the human will his Divine act.

“Now who can tell you the wonders that become enclosed in this act of our Will? our love rises and diffuses itself so much as to not find where to put itself, and when it has filled everything, it retires into our source, our sanctity feels honored with (the) Divine act from our same working Will in the creature and diffuses itself with surprising graces, in order to communicate his sanctity to all creatures, they are unreachable prodigies that He completes, when the creature calls him to work in her. Therefore make everything disappear in my Will, and we will give you everything in your power and you will be able to give us everything, even ourselves.”

After this I felt my little intelligence so full of the Divine Will that it could not contain it, and I followed my round in his divine acts and arrived in the act when the Immaculate Queen was conceived, I understood how the Supreme Being before calling her to life they poured so much love (in) her that as she felt life she felt the need to love her Creator, she felt in herself that love that she expressed forth, I remained surprised and my beloved Jesus added:

“My daughter, do not marvel, it is our usual (way) that to every creature when we put her forth to the light of day in the act of creating her, we give a dose of love, thus giving her part of our Divine substance, and according to our designs that we make over her, thus we increase the dose of our love. So that every creature holds in herself the particle of the substance of the Divine love, otherwise how could she love us, if we ourselves didn't put forth of ours in order to make ourselves loved? it would be to ask that which one didn't hold, we already know that the creature has nothing by herself, therefore we must enclose as within a sanctuary our love, our Will, in order to ask that she loves us and does our Volition. And if we ask it is because we know that she holds in her power our love and our Volition, that we ourselves have put in the depth of her soul. Now if she loves us, this dose of our love rises, is magnified and she feels the need to love us more powerfully, and to live of the Will of her Creator, if she doesn't love us it doesn't grow and the human weaknesses, the passions form the ash on our love, in a way that she arrives to not feel any need to love us, the ash has covered and suffocated our Divine fire, and while the fire exists, she doesn't feel it, while every time that she loves us, she doesn't do other than to blow in order to put in flight the ash, thus she will feel the live fire that burns in her bosom, she will magnify it so much as to not be able to be without loving us.

“Now my daughter, the Immaculate Queen from the first instant of her conception, given that she felt in herself the love for her Creator and our working Will more than her own life, she loved us so much that she didn't lose an instant without loving us, and with loving us and re-loving us she magnified so much this dose of love, as to be able to love us for everyone, and to give love to everyone, and to love everyone always without ever ceasing; you should know that our love is so much, that with putting this dose of love in the creature we put the germ/seed of happiness inside of her, because true happiness must hold its royal place inside of the soul, happiness outside if it doesn't reside within, it can not be called true happiness, rather it embitters the poor creature and is as an impetuous wind, that immediately disperses it, no sooner leaving the traces converted into thorns that embitter her, not so the happiness within put (there) by us, it is lasting and always grows; and then to love felicitates oneself and felicitates us, who doesn't love can not ever be happy, who doesn't love doesn't have any purpose nor interest in completing work, nor feels the heroism of doing good to anyone, the sacrifice that gives the most beautiful tints to the love doesn't exist for her.

“Whence the Most Holy Virgin possessed the sea of happiness, because she possessed so many lives of love for how many creatures exist, not only, but with never doing her will, but always mine, she formed so many lives of my Will in Her, in a way that she can give to each creature a life of love and a life of Divine Volition. Behold therefore with right she is Queen of love and Queen of the Supreme Will. Therefore the Sovereign Queen loves, longs to bring forth these lives in order to deposit them in creatures and form the kingdom of pure love and the kingdom of our Will, and thus she will arrive to the maximum point of loving her Creator, and to the maximum point of loving and of doing good to creatures.”

* * *

April 21, 1936

Divine display for who lives in his Will; how he renders her participant of his works. How he always holds to give and to work together with the creature.

I am always in the sea of the Divine Volition where I find strength, peace, love, rather as I enter in Him seeing my littleness that I am good for nothing, the Divinity, that loves so much to make his Will work in my littleness, arms his sanctity, his Wisdom, goodness, strength, the divine light around me in order to have that his Will finds in me his divine qualities, in order to be able to make in me his working act. So that he puts forth his, in order to give grace to the creature to make her work in Him. Whence I followed the acts of the Divine Will and He carried me in his arms, sustained me, breathed me in order to make me receive the participation of his acts. Hence I arrived in the act of the Conception of the Virgin and I found myself in the little heart of the conceived Virgin. My God, I don't know how to say it, I don't know how to go ahead anymore, but my sweet Jesus making me understand said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Volition, you have reason, the waves of my Volition inundate you, drown you and your little capacity remains lost and needs your Jesus in order to better explain that which you see, but don't know how to say. Now know my daughter, our love is such and so much for one who wants to live and lives in our Divine Volition that we want to make them participant with all our works, for as much as (a) creature it is possible, also giving her the merit of our divine works. As the creature enters in our Will, He calls in act his Divine work as if in that instant the same (was) operating, and uniting her in his act, he makes her see the prodigies of his work, and receives and confirms her in the good, making her feel the new life of his act; you have seen the conception of the Sovereign Queen, and how you being in my Will, you have found yourself conceived in her Maternal Heart, you see the great difference for who lives in my Volition, the prodigies of the Immaculate Conception were unheard of. My Will that animated this conception, which no one can escape from Him, called present all creatures, so that they might remain conceived in her virgin Heart, and might receive her maternity, her help, her defense, they might find the refuge, the support in this Celestial Mother.

“Now who lives in our Volition, finds herself in the act that conceives, she is the daughter that spontaneous of her will, searches her Mama, and takes her place, encloses herself in her Maternal Heart, in order to let the Celestial Queen do to her as Mama. Now this one will take part in the riches of the Sovereign Queen, in her merits, in her love, she will feel in herself the nobility, the sanctity of Her, because she knows to whom it pertains, and God will make her participant of the infinite goods and the exuberant love that was in the conception of this Holy Creature. And thus with all our works, as the creature searches them, she calls them in our Will in order to know them and love them, we call in act our works, we put her in the center of them, we make her feel and experience all our love, the power of our creative strength, and the littleness of the creature undergoes it, it fills her even to not being able to contain anymore.

“My daughter, to not make one participant of our works for who lives in our Will proves impossible to us, nor would it be our true love, because we possess in nature the communicative strength, and we will want to communicate to everyone our divine goods, it is creatures that reject them, but for one who lives in our Volition we show off in communicating our goods, we don't find in her any opposition, and if this were not so we would impede our Divine Being, rather it is one happiness of ours: to love, to give, to abound to our beloved creatures.

“Now you see therefore the great difference of whom lives in our Will, the other creatures find themselves in our works, in the conception of the Holy Virgin, in the incarnation of the Word, in my sufferings, in my death and even in my Resurrection, but they find themselves (so) in virtue of our Power and immensity, I would almost say by necessity, not by love, nor because they know our goods, or love to make their sojourn in them in order to enjoy themselves of them, in fact it is because from our Divine Being no one can escape, while one who lives in our Volition it is the creature that searches our works, knows them, loves them, appreciates them, and comes to take her place inside of them, and she loves and works together with us, hence she accordingly participates, she acquires new knowledges and new love, while the other ones remain and don't know them, they don't love us, they don't have a word to say to us, one could say they are as encumbering our immensity, and many in order to offend us.

“Therefore it is our ardent sigh that the soul lives in our Volition, we always hold to give and to do always with her, and she holds to do together with us, we don't give each other the time, one act calls the other, and we quite know each other, our Will first makes her know us, makes her love us and then forms the perennial union of the creature in our Will.”

* * *

May 20, 1936

Difference that passes between who calls the Divine Will in her acts, and between who does good works without Him. The Ascension; how he departed for Heaven and remained upon the earth.

My poor mind continues to turn in the acts of the Divine Will, and I thought to myself: what is the difference (between) whom calls the Divine Will in her acts, and those that do good works and don't call him. And my sweet Jesus making for me his brief little visit said to me:

“My daughter, there is no comparison (between) the one and the other, the first one with calling my Will in her acts, strips herself of that which is human and forms the void in her human volition where to give the place to mine, mine embellishes, sanctifies, forms his light in that void, then he pronounces his Creative Fiat, and calls to life his divine work in the human one and the creature not only participates, but remains proprietor of the Divine act, which possesses the power, the immensity, the sanctity and the Divine value, that never becomes exhausted. Therefore in whom lives in our Volition, we look and we find ourselves and our acts that honor us and crown us.

“Instead those that do good works, but not animated by our Volition, we don't find ourselves, but the finite act of the creature, and since we ourselves don't know where to hold anything of whatever good that they do, we give them the merit as payment, payment is not property that she can always produce, hence they symbolize those that live to the day, that live however difficultly from the payment that they have, but they are never made rich, they always feel the need of being paid (for) their works in order to live, and if they don't work, they go through perils of dying of hunger, that is to not feel the satisfaction of the good, the life of the virtues, but the squalid misery of the passions.

“Instead who lives in our Volition everything is abundance, we ourselves tell them take that which you want and how much more you can take, rather we put at your disposition our riches, our light, our sanctity, our love, because that which is ours is yours and that which is yours is ours, there doesn't remain other than to live and to work together.”

After this I was accompanying the Ascension of Jesus to Heaven, how beautiful he was, all majesty, vested with the most refulgent light that enraptured and captivated hearts to love him, and my sweet Jesus all goodness and love said to me:

“My blessed daughter, there is not(hing) drawn from my life that doesn’t symbolize the kingdom of my Divine Will, in this day of my Ascension I felt victorious and triumphant, my sufferings were already finished, rather I left my sufferings suffered already, in the midst of my children that I left upon the earth, for help, for strength and for support, and as refuge where to hide in their sufferings, in order to draw from my heroism in their sacrifices, I can say that I left my sufferings, my examples and my Life itself, as seed that growing and maturing itself the kingdom of my Divine Will should arise. So that I departed and I remained, I remained in virtue of my sufferings, I remained in their hearts in order to be loved, afterwards my Most Holy Humanity went up to Heaven, I felt more pressed (by) the bond of the human family, hence I would not be adapted to receive the love of my children and brothers, that I left upon the earth, I remained in the Most Holy Sacrament in order to give myself continually to them and they to give themselves to me, in order to have them find the rest, the relief and the remedy to all their needs. Our works don’t suffer mutability, that which we do one time we always do.

“Beyond this in this day of my Ascension I had double crowns, the crown of my children that I brought with me into the Celestial Country, and the crown of my children that I left upon the earth, they symbolized the few that will have beginning of the kingdom of my Divine Will; all those that saw me ascend to Heaven they received so many graces, that everyone put forth (their) life in order to make the kingdom of the Redemption known, and they cast the foundations in order to form my Church, in order to make gathered in her maternal womb all the human generations, thus the first children of the kingdom of my Will, they will be few, but the graces will be such and so many with which they will be invested, that they will put forth (their) life in order to call everyone to live in this Holy kingdom. A cloud of light invested me, which took my presence away from the sight of my disciples, whom remained as statues in watching my Person, that such was the enchantment of my beauty, that it held their pupils enraptured, so much so that they didn’t know how to abase them in order to look (to) the earth, so much so that there was needed an Angel in order to shake them and to make them return to the Cenacle.

“Also this (is) symbol of the kingdom of my Volition, the light will be such and so much that it will invest his first children that will carry the beauty, the enchantment, the peace of my Divine Fiat, in a way that they will easily surrender themselves to want to know and to love a good so great. Now in the midst of the disciples there was my Mama, that assisted in my departure for Heaven, this it is the most beautiful symbol. So that She is the Queen of my Church, assists it, protects it, defends it. Thus she will sit in the midst of the children of my Will, She will be always the engine, the life, the guide, the perfect model, the Majesty of the kingdom of the Divine Fiat that is so much to her heart, they are her anxieties, her ardent desires, her deliriums of Maternal love, that she wants her children in earth in the kingdom where She lived, she is not content that she holds her children in Heaven in the kingdom of the Divine Will, but she also wants them upon the earth, she feels that the assignment given her by God as Mother and Queen she has not completed it, her mission is not finished, up to such that the Divine Will doesn’t reign upon the earth in the midst of creatures. She wants her children that resemble her and that possesses the inheritance of their Mama.

“Therefore the great Lady is all eye in order to watch, all heart in order to love, in order to help who she sees in some way disposed, that they want to live of Divine Will. Hence in the difficulties think that She is around you, supports you, strengthens you, takes your volition in her maternal hands in order to make it receive the life of the Supreme Fiat.”

* * *

May 31, 1936

How the Divine Will contains all the acts of the life of Jesus as in act to always repeat them for love of creatures. The life of Jesus symbolizes the call of the kingdom, of the Divine Will upon the earth.

My poor intelligence followed the life of my sweet Jesus in the Divine Will, in which I found him in act of continuing his life when he was on the earth, and oh how many wonders, how many surprises of love not ever thought of. So that the Divine Fiat contains all the acts of the life of Jesus as in act of always repeating them for love of creatures, in order to give to each one his entire life, his sufferings, his ardent love. Whence my sweet Jesus all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, my love wants to relieve itself, it feels the need to make known to one who wants to live of my Will that which I did and do, so that he returns to reign and to dominate in the midst of creatures; you must know that all my life was none other than the continuous call of my Will in (the) midst of them, and the re-call of creatures in my Supreme Fiat, so much so that as conceived, thus it symbolized the re-call, the return to making him conceived in creatures, that with so much enormity they had put him outside of their souls, and it recalled them to (be) conceived in Him, as born thus it recalled to revive my Volition in all human works, in all my childish tears, whimpers, prayers and sighs, it recalled with my tears and sighs my Will in the tears, sufferings and sighs of creatures, so that nothing might be that they might not feel the strength, the empire of my Will that might reign in them, whom pitying my tears and theirs, it would have given them (the) grace of the return of his kingdom.

“Also my exile symbolized as the creatures were exiled from my Volition, and I wanted to be exiled in order to re-call my Will in the midst of the poor exiled ones, so that it might recall them and might convert the exile into Homeland, where they would be no longer tyrannized by enemies, by foreign people, by vile passions, but with the fullness of the goods of my Will. And my return in Nazareth, how well it symbolizes my Divine Will. I lived in him hidden, his reign was in full vigor in the sacred family, it was the Word, the Divine Will in person, veiled by my Humanity, that same Will that reigned in me diffused himself to everyone, embraced them, was motion and life of each one, I felt in myself the motion and the life of each one, of which my Fiat was the actor, that suffers, what sorrow in not being recognized, nor receiving one thanks, one I love you, one act of thankfulness neither by the entire world, nor by Nazareth itself, that not only my Will, but also my Holy Humanity lived in the midst of them, which didn’t cease giving light to whom might be able to see me and to draw near to me, in order to make myself known, but in my sorrow I always remained the hidden God.

“Such is the fate of my Divine Volition. Man was created with the creative force of the Fiat, he was born, was kneaded, soaked in Him, he administers the continuous motion to him, the heat, the life, he will finish his life in the Fiat, and yet who knows it, who is thankful of this continuous divine act, without ever getting tired, that with so much love involves the life of the creature, in order to give her life [?] almost no one my daughter; to do good, to be (the) primary cause of conservation and to give perennial life to the creature, to maintain the order of all created things around her and only for her, and to not be recognized, it is the sorrow of sorrows, and the patience of my Will gives of the incredible, but do you know the reason this patience so unconquered and constant, because he knows that his kingdom will come, his palpating life will be recognized in the midst of creatures, and in view of the great glory that he will receive in being recognized that he is life of every single life, and while he is life, he will receive every single life in order to reign in them, he won't be hidden anymore but revealed and recognized, in view of this he supports so much refusal to recognize him and that only a Divine patience could support the prolixity of so many centuries, of so much human ingratitude.

“From Nazareth I passed to the desert where there was maximum solitude and the greatest part had ferocious animals that hardened the desert with their roars that surrounded me, symbol of my Divine Will that since he is not known it forms the desert around the creature and a solitude that makes one horror and fear, the good becomes desert and the soul becomes surrounded by more than ferocious animals, that is her brutal passions that send roars of anger, of bestial furies, of cruelty, of every sort of evil. My Holy Humanity went step-by-step retracing all the sorrows that my Divine Will had suffered in order to repair him and recall him again to reign in the midst of creatures. I can say that my every heartbeat, breath, word, footstep and suffering, was the continuous re-call of my Will in order to make himself known by creatures, in order to make him reign, and he called them in Him in order to make them know the great good, the sanctity, the happiness of living in the Fiat.

“From the desert I passed to public life, in which few were those people that believed me that I was the Messiah, the scholar types almost no one, and I wanted to use my power, seeding miracles in order to form my people so that if they might not believe my words, they might believe the power of my miracles, they were my divine and loving industries that I at whatever cost wanted to make myself known that I was their Savior, because if they didn't know me they could not receive the good of the Redemption, hence it was necessary to make myself known in order to make that my coming upon the earth might not be useless for them. Oh! how my public life symbolizes the triumph of the kingdom of my Fiat in the midst of creatures, that with surprising truths I will make him known, and in order to have the intent I will make miracles and prodigies, with the power of my Volition I will recall to life the corpses to grace, I will repeat the miracle of the resurrection of Lazarus, that in spite that they had rotted in evil, rendered (a) malodorous corpse like Lazarus, my Fiat will recall them to life, he will stop the stink of sin, he will make them re-arise in good, in short I will use all my divine industries, in order to make my Volition dominate in the midst of the people. You see therefore in every word of mine that I said, and in every miracle that I did I called my Will to reign in the midst of them, and I called the people to live in Him.

“From public life I passed to the Passion, symbol of the Passion of my Will, that for so many centuries had suffered so many rebellious wills of creatures, that with not wanting to submit themselves to Him, they had closed Heaven, broken the communications with their Creator, and they were rendered unhappy slaves of the infernal enemy. My lacerated Humanity, searched for death, crucified, it represented the unhappy humanity without my Volition before the Divine Justice, and in every suffering it called my Fiat to give the kiss of peace with creatures, in order to render them happy, and

I called them in Him, in order to make cease the sorrowful Passion of my Will.

“Finally the death, that matured my resurrection, which called everyone to re-arise in my Divine Fiat, and oh how it symbolizes the live Resurrection (of) the kingdom of my Will. My Humanity, injured, deformed, unrecognizable, re-arose healthy, with an enchanting beauty, glorious and triumphant. It prepared the triumph, the glory to my Will, calling all in Him, and impetrating that everyone might re-arise in my Volition, from corpses (to) alive, from ugly (to) beautiful, from unhappy (to) happy. My risen Humanity assures the kingdom to my Will upon the earth, it was my unique act full of triumph and of victory and this was worthwhile for me, because I didn't want to depart for Heaven if first I might not have given all the helps to creatures, in order to have her reenter in the kingdom of my Volition and all the glory, the honor, the triumph to my Supreme Fiat in order to make him dominate and reign. Therefore unite yourself with me and make that there be no act that you do, and suffering that you suffer, that you don't call my Will to take his Regal and dominant place, and as victor you will conquer everyone in order to make (him) known, loved and wanted by everyone.”

* * *

June 14, 1936

God and his Will, his Will with the Creation, his Will with the Celestial beings, his Will in discord with the human family.

The Divine Volition with powerful strength calls me in the interminable sea of his Will, and oh how one does well in Him, how many surprises, how many beautiful things one understands, which produce infinite joys, divine life, love that never says enough, but that which is (of) more happiness is to see and to feel that everything is Divine Will, all the Creation forms one act alone of Supreme Volition. But while my mind lost itself in Him, sweet Jesus making his brief little visit with me with an inexpressible love said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Volition, you should know that at (the) head of the kingdom of my Divine Will is God himself, our Divinity doesn't do other than one continuous act of his, we don't ever do (the) will of anyone, but always ours, the crown of our attributes are dominated by our Fiat, his kingdom is inside of us and extends outside of us in our immensity, in our love, power and goodness, in everything. So that for us everything is our Will.

“In second place comes the Creation, Heavens, Suns, stars, winds, waters, also the little blade of grass, they don't do other than a continuous act of the Fiat, between them and us there is a respiratory act, we emit the breath of our Will and the Creation receives it and emitting it gives us the breath that we have given them, that is all the effects that our Will has produced breathed by them, and it unites itself to our single unique act, how much glory and honor don't we receive, how our Supreme Being becomes exalted only because we make our Will breathed in all the Creation, and it knows how to re-give us the breath that we have given it, there is such unity of Will with all the Creation, that all that which goes forth and enters forms one act alone of Supreme Will, and the multiplicity and diversity of the things that are seen and happen, they are not but the effects that our unique and single act produces. Because our Fiat, never changes, nor is he subject to change, all his power is really in this, to make one act alone in order be able to produce all the possible and imaginable effects.

“In third place comes all the Angels, Saints and blessed of the Celestial Country. They turn around our Supreme Being and they breathe the strength, the sanctity, the love, the infinite joys, the happiness without number of the Divine Volition, they form one single life with Him, this life they feel it inside as proper life, they feel it outside in which he brings them the sea of divine happiness always new, but one is the act that he forms in Heaven, Divine Will, one is the breath, one single thing is needed, Divine Will, if ever in Heaven it might be able to enter (other than) one act alone, one breath alone that might not be Divine Will, the Celestial Country would lose all the enchantment, the beauty, the charm with which it is invested, but this can not be.

“You see therefore that my Fiat holds all the supremacy; the blessed with only breathing him remain filled with seas of joys and incomparable happiness, and while they emit the breath, our Divinity feels happiness that all the Saints enjoy, and we all magnify our Supreme Volition as beginning, font, origin of all goods.

“In fourth place comes the human family, it turns around us, but since their will is not one with ours, they don’t breathe our Volition that puts forth the order, the sanctity, the union, the harmony with its Creator, and therefore it remains scattered, disordered and as lost from us, they are unhappy beings, the peace, the happiness, the abundance of goods is far from them, and all the evil comes from that our Will is not theirs, we don’t breathe each other, and this prevents the communication of our goods, the perfect union with our Supreme Being. Our creative hand that should form its masterpiece and the most beautiful one in every single creature, because there lacks our Will, it becomes stopped, it doesn’t find their souls pre-arranged, adaptable in order to make our Divine art feasible, where there lacks our Volition we don’t know what to do with that creature.

“Behold the cause why we long so much that our Divine Will reigns and forms there his life in them, because our creative work is impeded, our works suspended, the work of the Creation is incomplete, and in order to obtain this one must be the Will of Heaven and of earth, one the life, one the love, one the breath, and this is the greatest good that we want for creatures, we still hold to do so many beautiful works, but the human volition impedes our step, ties our arms, and makes inactive our creative hands. Therefore who wants to do our Will and live in Him, gives us the work and we make of her that which we want.

“Now you should know, that as the creature decides to live of Divine Will, she puts to security her salvation, her sanctity, we are in her as in our house, and her will serves us as material in which we pronounce the Fiat in her every act in order to form our worthy works of He who lives in her, we do as a king that makes use of the stones, tufa and bricks and mortar in order to form a sumptuous Palace as to amaze the whole world, poor king if might not have the stones, the necessary material in order to form the palace, with all that he might have his good will and coins to spend in order to form it, yet lacking the prime material, he would remain without palace.

“Thus are we, if there lacks us the will of the soul, with all our power and will that we hold, lacking the material we can not form in the soul the beautiful worthy palace of our residence. Therefore when the creature gives us her will and takes ours, we are secure, we find everything at our disposition, little things and great things, natural things and spiritual things, everything is ours, and of everything we make use (of it) in order to make our omnipotent Fiat work. And since our Will doesn't know how to be without his work, he makes the re-call of all his works, in the palace that with so much love he has formed in the creature, he surrounds himself with all the works of the creation, Heavens, Sun, stars, they make homage, he puts in order in her all that which I did in the Redemption, my life, my birth, my infantile tears, my sufferings and prayers, everything, where my Will is nothing should lack, because everything from Him has gone forth, with right everything is his, and therefore where He reigns he forms the centralization of all his works. And oh the beauties, the order, the harmony, the divine goods that become formed in this creature, the Heavens (are) stupefied and everyone admires the love, the Power of the Divine Will and trembling they adore him. Therefore leave (the) work to Him, and He will do great things as to make you stupefied.

“Beyond this our love, our eternal Wisdom has established all the graces that we should give to the creature, the degrees of sanctity that she should acquire, the beauty with which we should pearl her, the love with which she should love us, and the acts themselves that she should do, where our Fiat reigns, everything becomes realized, the Divine order is in full vigor, not even a comma becomes moved, our work is in full harmony with the works of the creature, and oh how we delight ourselves, and when we have given her our last love in time, and she will have completed our last act of Divine Will in her mortal life, our love will give her the flight into the Celestial Country and our Will will receive her in Heaven, as triumph of His working and conquering Will that with so much love conquered upon the earth. So that her last act will be the opening that she will make in Heaven, in order to give beginning in our Will so very happy, that will never have end.

“Instead where our Volition doesn't reign, the divine order doesn't exist, how many works of ours broken and no effect, how many divine voids, and filled perhaps with passions, with sins, there is no beauty, but deformity to make one pity. Therefore be attentive and make that our Volition reigns and lives in you.”

* * *

July 4, 1936

How an act of human will can spoil the Divine order and his most beautiful works. The first thing that God wants is absolute liberty. How the Divine Will will form so many Jesuses where He reigns.

My poor mind doesn't know how to be without turning and flying in the Divine Volition, and my poor human will, felt as under the pressure of the Divine Will and I thought to myself: Ah! yes it is beautiful, victory is felt, the triumph, the dominion, the happiness, the beautiful conquests of living in the Divine Volition, but the human volition while one feels alive one must continually die, it is true that it is the greatest honor, the greatest love of God, to benign to descend in the will of the creature, and with his majesty and working power, to do that which He wants, and the human one remaining at its place, can do only that which God does, but of hers she must discontinue everything, this is the sacrifice of sacrifices, especially in certain circumstances, oh how sorrowful life feels to her and holds her as if she might not have one, because the Divine Fiat doesn't tolerate that even a fiber of human volition might act in his, and a crowd of thoughts occupied my poor mind; and my sweet Jesus, compassionating my ignorance and the sorrowful state in which I found myself, with indescribable tenderness, putting his Most Holy hand on my head said to me:

“My blessed daughter, courage, do not batter yourself, my Divine Volition wants everything, because he knows that one little act, one desire, one fiber of human volition, would spoil his most beautiful works, the divine order, his sanctity would remain impeded, his love restricted, his power limited, behold therefore he doesn’t tolerate that even a fiber of human volition might have its life, it is true that it is the sacrifice of sacrifices, no other sacrifice is able to equal the weight, the value, the intensity of the sacrifice of living without will, so much so that there is needed perennial life, the continuous miracle of my Divine Volition in order to be able to withstand this sacrifice, that before the others they can be called shadows, pictures, paintings, games of little boys, that cry for a nothing, because there is the human volition, that in the sufferings, in the sorrowful meetings, in the works one is not felt undone, without life, without satisfactions, therefore the sacrifices are felt oh how much lighter, however emptied of God, of sanctity, of love, of light, of true happiness, and perhaps not even beings/essenti from sins, because the human volition, without mine, can not ever do good and holy things.

“Then if my Fiat might not have the virtue to hold with himself the human volition without giving it life, rather to enclose its life in him, in order to make that it might not find neither place, nor time to be able to act, he could not work with that divine splendor, luxury and pomp (in) which, we usually do our works; if in the Creation there had been another will, it would have impeded the Divine sumptuousness, splendor, pomp that we held in all the Creation, it would have impeded the extension of the Sky, the multiplicity of the stars, the vastness of the light of the Sun, the variety of so many created things, it would have put a limit on us.

“Therefore our Volition wants to be alone, in order to be able to do that which he knows how to do and wants to do. Behold therefore he wants the human will with himself, concurrent, spectator, admirer, of that which he wants to do in her, but she must be convinced, if she wants to live in my Will, that hers can not act anymore, and that it must serve in order to enclose mine in hers, in order to let him do with all liberty his works, with all the sumptuousness, with the luxury of grace, and with the pomp of his divine varieties. The first thing that we want is absolute liberty, we want to be free my daughter, be it whatever the sacrifice that we want, and the works that we want to do, if this might not be, the living in my Will will be a way of speaking, but in reality doesn’t exist.”

Dear Jesus became silent, and I thought of all that which Jesus had said to me, and I said to myself: He has reason, that the human volition can not act before the sanctity and power of his, already by herself, she puts herself at her post of nothingness, there is needed too much [in order] to act before a Divine Will, already one feels incapable, and she herself would pray that she might not give the great misfortune of having formed one motion, one fiber of (her) own volition; but my cross and you know it, in what (a) labyrinth you have put me... I feel impeded and humiliated even in the dust, I had need and you know of whom... without being able to help myself and not a day, a year, oh how hard it is, I know that only your Volition gives me the strength, the grace, that by myself I would not have been able to withstand, and I felt such bitterness as to feel myself die. And my always amiable Jesus, compassionating me resumed, his speaking:

“My daughter, when my Divine Will wants to do a completed act in the creature, and do you know what it means a complete act of my Will? it means complete act, of God, in which he encloses sanctity, beauty, love, power and light to make Heavens and earth astonished, God himself must feel enraptured, but so much so as to form his seat, his throne of glory in this complete act of his, which will serve to himself and will descend as beneficent dew to the benefit of all creatures. Hence in order to do this complete act, I must dispose over you a new cross, not given to any other in order to mature you and to make rise in you the dispositions that are needed there, you in order to receive and I in order to do this complete act of his Will, without anything, one does not do anything, therefore you in order to receive and we in order to give new things, we had to dispose new crosses, that united to the continuous work of our Volition should prepare all for an act so great.

“You must know that my Fiat has never left you, therefore you feel his sweet impression and ruling over every fiber, motion, desire of your volition, jealous of you and of his own complete act that he wanted to do, he held and maintained his royal dominion, but do you know why, a sweet and dear secret, listen to me: as my Volition dominated your mind, your look, your word, thus he formed your Jesus in your mind, his look in yours, his word in yours, as he dominated the fibers, the motion, the heart, thus he formed his fibers, the motion, your Jesus’s heart in you, and as he dominated you the works, the steps, all your being, thus he formed his works, his steps, all Jesus in you. Now if my Will might have given you the liberty to do your acts, even in the most little and innocent things, he would not have been able to form your Jesus in you, and I of human will am not able to, nor do I want to live, nor would my Volition have taken the appointment of forming myself in the soul, if he might not be secure that I might find my same Will, with which my Humanity was animated; it will be really this his reign upon the earth, to form so many Jesuses, for how many creatures want to live of Divine Will, with Jesus in souls, his kingdom will have its sumptuousness, sublimity, its luxury, of unheard of things, and it will be secure. And then in the kingdom of my Divine Fiat I will have so many living Jesuses that love me, glorify me, and will give me complete glory. Therefore I so very long for this kingdom, and you also long for it, nor occupy yourself with other, leave me to do, trust me, and I will think to everything.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, the light symbol of my Divine Volition, the nature of it is to spread itself out how much more it can, and whoever it finds, it doesn’t deny its light to anyone, whether they want it or don’t want it, at the most can this happen, that one who wants it uses the light and makes use of it also in order to do great works, instead who doesn’t want it doesn’t do any good, but he can not deny that he has received the good of the light.

“Such is my Will, more than light it spreads itself everywhere, invests everyone and everything and the sign that the soul possesses him is to feel the need together with Him of giving oneself to everyone, to do good to everyone, with her acts to race to everyone and she would like to make so many Jesuses in order to give him to each one. My Will is of everyone, I am Jesus of everyone, and therefore I am then content when the creature makes my Will, my life hers, and she wants to give me to everyone, she is my joy and my continuous feast.”

* * *

August 23, 1936

The tiny little field assigned to creatures in the immensity of the Divine Will. Jesus puts his life at (the) disposition of creatures, enough that he obtains that they live in the Divine Volition. The great prodigy, of the Creation of the Virgin.

I continue my abandonment in the Fiat, my poor mind swims in his Divine sea, and understands celestial arcanum, but I don't know how to repeat them, because there are not words down here, while I am in this Divine sea I look at his immensity, there is no being or thing that can escape him, everyone and everything forms (their) life and they receive it in the Divine Volition, but what can the creature take of this immensity, hardly the drops, so much is her littleness; but while she takes the drops she can not go out from this immensity, she feels it flow inside and outside, to the right and to the left, everywhere, not being able for one single instant to get rid of Him. Oh! Divine Will, how very admirable you are, you are all mine, you raise me in you, everywhere I find you, you love me always even to form the life of my life; but while my mind was lost in this sea, my sweet Jesus, all goodness went forth from inside of this sea and approaching me he said to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, you have seen how the immensity of my Fiat is unattainable? not one created mind for however holy, can embrace him and see where his confines finish, everyone holds their place in Him, rather every creature holds her little field in the immensity of my Divine Will, but who works this little field assigned to them[?], one who lives in Him, because living in Him the first worker is made, and taking the creature in his womb, he holds her busy, united in the work that he wants to do in the little tiny field that has been given them in my Will, and since she possesses his creative strength, that which the creature could do in one century, together with Him she does it in an hour, so that in one hour she can acquire a century of love, of works, of sacrifices, of divine knowledges, of profound adorations, and after the work he calls the soul to rest, in order to felicitate each other and rest together, and then seeing the beauty of the little field, the joy that she experiences, in order to felicitate each other more they return to the work, it is an alternating of work and of rest. Because between the so many qualities that my Divine Will possesses he is continuous motion and attitude, he is not idle, rather to every created thing he has given his continuous work, in order to glorify himself and in order to do good to everyone, him idle doesn't exist, in my Will, rather in Him everything is work, if she loves it is work, if she occupies herself to know it is work, if she adores, if she suffers, if she prays, it is work and divine work, not human, that converting itself into money of infinite value, they can acquire how to greater form their little field.

“Now my daughter, you should know that it is my absolute Will that the creature does my Will, how I long to see her ruling and working in him, how I want to hear said: the Will of God is mine, that which God wants I want, that which God does, I do. Now it being my Will that lives in Her, he must give her the means, the necessary helps. And behold my Humanity that puts itself at (the) disposition of the creature in the little tiny field of the immensity of my Will assigned to them, that I exhibit my strength in order to sustain her weakness, my sufferings for help of hers, my love in order to hide hers in mine, my sanctity in order to cover her, my life for support and brace of hers, and in order to make of it the model, in short my Divine Will must find so many Jesuses for how many creatures want to live of my Will, and then He won't find obstacles anymore from them, because I will hold them hidden in me, and will have that we will do more with me than with them, and creatures will find all the necessary superabundant helps in order to live of my Will. It is usual with God that when he wants a thing, he gives all that which is needed, in order to make that that which he wants might have its conclusion.

“Hence I would like that creatures know what I put at (the) disposition of those that want to live of my Will, they will find my life that will supply for all that which is needed in order to have them live in the sea of my Divine Volition. Otherwise their little field in my immensity will remain without work and hence without fruit, without happiness and without joy they will be like those that will live under the Sun, without ever doing anything, and the Sun will serve to burn them and give them an ardent thirst, as to feel oneself die. So that all creatures, through reason of creation they find themselves in this immensity, but if their will doesn’t do it with mine, they live by themselves, they will feel all goods burn, and they will be thirsty from the passions, from the sin, from the weaknesses that will torment them. Therefore there is no greater evil than to not live of my Will.”

After this I was doing my round in the acts done by the Divine Will in the Creation and arrived at the Conception of the Most Holy Virgin, my sweet Jesus stopped me and said to me:

“My daughter, the greatest prodigy of the Creation [is] the Virgin, the Divine Volition which subdued her human volition from the first instant of her conception, and the volition of this Holy Creature which subdued the Divine Fiat, the one conquered the other, they were winners all and both, and as the Divine Volition entered as dominant King in her human volition, the chains of the great divine prodigies began in this sublime creature, the uncreated strength re-poured itself in the created strength but so much so that she could sustain as if she might be a (piece of) straw all the Creation, and all created things felt created strength in the uncreated strength that sustained them and contributed to their conservation, oh how they felt more honored and happy, that a created strength flowed in everything, as their Queen in order to sustain them and conserve them, her strength was so much that she reigned over everyone, even over her Creator, she was invincible, that with the force of the Divine Fiat she conquered everyone and everything, rather everyone let themselves be conquered by this Divine Empress, because she held a powerful and enrapturing strength, that no one could withstand her. The demons themselves felt weakened and didn’t know where to hide from this insuperable strength. All the Supreme Being flowed in this created will that had been subdued by the Divine Will, and the infinite love poured itself into the finite love and everyone and everything felt loved by this Holy creature, her love was so much that more than air she made herself breathed by everyone, in a way that this Queen of love felt the need of loving everyone, as Mother and Queen of everyone; our beauty invested her, but so much so that she possessed the strength, the love, the goodness, the enrapturing grace, that while she loves she makes herself loved by everyone, also by things that do not possess reason.

“So that there was no act, prayer, adoration, reparation, that didn’t fill the Sky and earth. She mastered everything, and her love and all that which she did flowed in Heaven, in the Sun, in the wind, in everything and our Supreme Being felt loved, prayed to, in all created things by this Holy creature, a new life flowed in everything, she loved us for everyone and made us loved by everyone. It was the uncreated Will that had had the place of honor in the created will, that she was able to do everything and give us the exchange, that we had put at her disposition all the Creation. So that with the conception of this Great Queen the true life of God began in the creature, and the life of her in God, and oh the exchanges of love, of fortitude, of beauty, of light, between the one and the other. Therefore the prodigies were continuous, and never heard of, that alternated in Her, Heavens and earth were stupefied, the Angels remained enraptured, before my working Divine Will in the creature.

“My daughter, this Great Lady with living in the Divine Volition felt Queen of everyone and everything with facts, and also Queen of the Great Divine King, but so much so that She formed the door in Heaven in order to make the Eternal Word descend, she prepared the way and the room of her bosom, where he should make his abode, and in the emphasis of her ruling love she said to me: descend oh Eternal Word, you will find in me your Heaven, your joys, that same Will that reigns in the three Divine Persons; not only, but she formed the door and the way in order to make souls climb in the Celestial Country. And only because this Virgin lived in earth of Divine Will as if she lived in Heaven, the blessed were able to enter in the Celestial regions and enjoy her delights, because this Celestial Mother, holds them covered, involved and as hidden in her glory and in all the acts that she did in the Divine Will, so that the blessed feel in their joys the love, the works, the power of this Mother and Queen, that renders them happy. What can't my Will do? all possible and imaginable goods, and in the creature where He reigns he gives such power, that arrives to say: do that which you want, command, take, give, I will never deny you anything, your strength is irresistible, your power weakens me, therefore I put everything in your hands, because she does as Mistress and as Queen.

“Now you should know that this Holy Creature even from her conception felt the palpation of my Fiat in hers, and in every heartbeat she loved me, and the Divinity re-loved her with duplicate love in her every heartbeat, in her breath she felt the breath of the Divine Volition and she loved us in every breath, and we repaid her with our duplicate love in her every breath, she felt the motion of the Fiat in her hands, in her step, in her feet, in all her Being she felt the life of the Divine Volition, and that which she did, and in everything, she loved us, for herself and for everyone, and we loved her always, always, in every instant, our love raced as (a) rapid torrent, therefore she held us always attentive and in feast, in order to receive her love and to give ours, so much so that she arrived to cover all sins and creatures themselves with our love. Therefore our justice remained disarmed by this invincible Lover, and we can say that she did with our Supreme Being that which she wanted. Oh! how I would like that, everyone might understand what it means to live in the Divine Volition to order to render everyone happy and holy.”

* * *

November 3, 1936

Reflections between the Creator and the creature. Inseparability of both. How in every instant God asks that she might receive the life of his Will. How who decides to live of Him God covers all that which she has done, with his Divine Will.

I am always between the arms of the Divine Volition, I feel his creative power inside and outside of me, that not giving me time to any other thing, I don't want, I don't ask other for me and for everyone than (that) the Divine Will comes to reign upon the earth. My God, what magnetic force he possesses, that while he gives everything, he invests you from every part, but at the same time he takes all that which belongs to the littleness of the poor creature. But while my mind was immersed in the crowd of so many thoughts that regarded the Divine Fiat, my always amiable Jesus visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, our infinite love is always excessive, and it gives of the incredible, it is enough to tell you that it is so much, that we don't do other than continually reflect in the creature, she lives under our continuous reflections, if we move our incessant motion reflects in her in order to give her life, our love reflects in her in order to say to her continually I love you, our power reflects in her in order to sustain her, in short our wisdom reflects and directs her, our light reflects and illuminates her, our goodness reflects and commiserates her, our beauty reflects and embellishes her, our Supreme Being pours itself out over the creature without ever ceasing; but this is not everything, as we reflect in her, thus she reflects in us, so that if she thinks we feel the reflection of her thoughts, if she speaks she reflects in us her word, we feel the reflection of her heartbeat even in our bosom, the motion of her works, the stamping of her steps, (there) passes such inseparability between the Divine Being and the human one that continually the one pours itself into the other. Our love is so much that we put ourselves in (the) condition as if we can not be without the creature.

“But this is nothing yet, if our love doesn’t give in excesses it is not content. Now knowing that if the creature doesn’t possess the life of our Divine Volition, there is great difference between her reflections and ours, assuming himself to suppliant love, as she thinks he prays her that she let our Will reign in her mind, if she speaks the supplication that she let him reign in her words, if she palpates, works and walks, he implores that she let my Divine Will reign in everything together, in every thing that she does she does a groan, a sigh, a prayer, that involving her continually he says to her: receive my Fiat, be invested by my Fiat, oh! possess my Fiat, let me see in you the life of my Fiat reigning, dominant and rejoicing, I pray you to not deny me your volition, and I will give you mine; and if he obtains this as if he might have obtained the most precious thing, he encloses her in his love, veils her with his light, and gives beginning to his perennial feast in the creature, he changes her groans and sighs into joys, and putting himself to watch, as triumphant he feels in her the notes of his love that both parts say: we love each other with one love alone, we hold and have the same life, your Fiat is yours and mine. So that the harmony, the order of her Creator rises in her. Our Will, our love has obtained its purpose, it doesn’t leave other than to enjoy his beloved creature.

“Therefore my daughter, there is so much to heart the making of our Will as life (a) gift, that is our long sigh of all the centuries, rather our eternal sigh, that we contemplated the creature with pleasure with the portent of our life in her, we felt the joy, the happiness of our so many lives bilocated, multiplied and formed in them. Otherwise the Creation would not have been a great (thing), and if we created and we brought forth so many things to the light of day, it was because it should serve to the portent of portents of forming in virtue of our Fiat our life in the creature, and if this might not have been for us as if we might have done nothing. Hence content your Jesus, give peace to my love that always goes in delirium and uniting yourself with me, yearn, pray, ask that my Will reign in you and in everyone.” And while he said this he took a veil of Light and covered all of me and I didn’t know how to go out from inside of it.

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will, and oh, how many sweet and dear surprises passed in my mind, oh if one might know how to tell them with words, I would have astounded all the world and everyone would love to possess the Divine Will. But ah me, the language of Heaven does not adapt itself to the language of the earth, and therefore I am constrained to pass on, and my beloved Jesus returning to his little and poor ignorant daughter, with an indescribable love said to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, listen to me, pay attention to me, I want to tell you the most beautiful act, most tender and intense love of my Fiat. Now you should know that all the acts, thoughts, words, past, present and future are all present before the Supreme Being. So that the creature didn't exist in time yet, and their acts shone before us, and because (of) this, because before the creature my Fiat does the act, there is no thought, word, work that my Fiat doesn't begin. You can say that first it is formed in God, with all his acts and then we bring it forth to the light (of day). Now the creature with doing her will removed herself from the divine acts, but she can not destroy that the life of her acts has had for origin the Fiat, all were his properties, that arbitrating himself has changed into human the divine acts, but if man refuses to acknowledge who has given life to his acts, my Volition doesn't refuse to acknowledge his acts.

"Hence you sense the greatest excess of the love of my Volition, as the creature decides with immutable firmness, to want to live of my Will, letting him reign and dominate in her, our infinite goodness is so much, our love, that doesn't know how to resist a true decision of the creature, more so that he doesn't want to see acts dissimilar from ours in her, do you sense what he does? he covers all that which she has done even then with my Will, moulds them, transforms them in his light, in a way that he sees everything transformed with the prodigy of his love, that everything is his Will in the creature, and with love all divine he follows to form his life and his acts in the creature. Is this not an excessive and astounding love of my Volition, and together to have all decide, even the most ungrateful, to make my Will live in them, knowing that he wants to put everything aside and cover and supply for that which lacks in them of my Will? This also says the absolute(ness) (of) our Will, that he wants to reign in the midst of creatures, that he doesn't want to mind anything nor to that which she lacks, wanting to give not as payment that he goes finding if she merits, oh no, but as (a) free gift of our great liberality, and as completion of our own Will . And completing our Will for us is everything."

* * *

December 8, 1936

How the Queen of Heaven in her Conception (was) conceived in the merits, in the life, in the love and sufferings of the future Redeemer, in order to be able to then conceive the Divine Word in Her in order to come to save creatures.

My poor mind immersing itself in the Divine Fiat found in act the Conception of the Immaculate Queen. He was all in feast and called everyone around himself, Angels, Saints in order to make seen the unheard of prodigy, the graces, the love with which he called from the nothing this sublime Creature, so that everyone might know and might extol her as their Queen and Mother of everyone. But while I remained surprised, and I would have remained there who knows how long, if my sweet Jesus might not have called me with saying to me:

"I want to honor my Celestial Mother, I want to narrate the story of her Immaculate Conception, only I can speak of it because Author of a prodigy so great. Now my daughter, the first act of this conception was one Fiat of ours pronounced with such solemnity and with such fullness of graces as to enclose everything and everyone, we centralized everything in this conception of the Virgin in our Divine Fiat, what doesn't exist past and future, the incarnation of the Word held present, and made her conceived and incarnated in the same incarnation of me, future Redeemer, my Blood that was in act, as if I myself was scattering it, watered her, embellished her, confirmed her, strengthened her continually in a Divine way.

“But it was not enough to my love, all her acts, words and steps were first conceived in my acts, words and steps and then they had life. My Humanity was the refuge, the hideaway, the incorporation of this Celestial Creature. So that if she loved us, her love was incarnated and conceived in my love, and oh, how her love loved us, it enclosed everything and everyone, I can say that she loved as a God knows how to love, she had our same follies of love for us, and for all creatures and that loving one time, she loves, loves always, without ever ceasing, her prayer was conceived in my prayer and therefore it had an immense value, a power over our Supreme Being, and who could deny her anything? Her sufferings, her sorrows, her martyrdoms, that were so many, first they were conceived in my Humanity and then she felt in herself the life of the sufferings and the excruciating martyrdoms, all animated by Divine strength. Whence one can say she was conceived in me, from me went forth her life, all that which I did and suffered lined up around this Holy creature in order to court her and to pour myself continually over Her and to be able to say to her: you are the Life of my Life, you are all beautiful, you are the first redeemed, my Divine Fiat has molded you, has breathed you forth and has made you conceived in my works, in my Humanity itself.

“Now my daughter conceiving this Celestial creature in the Word Incarnate, was done by us with highest Wisdom, with unreachable power, with inexhaustible love, and with decorum that is appropriate to our works. Having I(,) Word of the Father, to descend from Heaven in order to incarnate myself in the bosom of a Virgin, it was not sufficient to the sanctity of my Divinity only the Virginity, and to have made her exempt from the stain of original sin, therefore it was necessary to our love and to our sanctity, that this Virgin first be conceived in me, with all those prerogatives, virtues and beauties that the life of the Word Incarnate should possess, and therefore then [I] could be conceived, in who had been in me conceived, and I found in Her my Heaven, the sanctity of my life, my same blood, that had generated and watered her so many times, I found my same Will, that communicating his Divine fecundity to her formed the Life of hers and of the Son of God. My Divine Fiat, in order to make her worthy of being able to conceive me, held her invested and under his continuous empire, that possesses all acts, as if it might be one act alone, in order to give her everything, he called in act my anticipated merits, all my life and poured it continually within her beautiful soul.

“Therefore I alone can tell the true story of the immaculate conception and all her life, because I conceived her in me and am to light of everything, and if the Holy Church speaks of the Celestial Queen, they can say only the first letters of the alphabet of her sanctity, greatness and gifts with which she was enriched. If you might know the contentment that I experience when I speak of my Celestial Mother, who knows how many demands you would make me, in order to give me the joy of making speak of whom I love so much and (who) has loved me.”

* * *

December 20, 1936

The Divine Fiat made the Virgin conceived in every creature so that everyone might have a Mother all hers. Dowry that God gave to the Virgin. Triumphs and victories of God, victories and triumphs of the Virgin, in which all creatures are endowed.

My Highest Good Jesus holds me as immersed in the great prodigy of the Sovereign Queen and it seems that he holds (the) Will of wanting to say that which God worked in this Great Lady, and assuming a festive (appearance) and with inexpressible joy he said to me:

“Listen to me...[Hence I follow the same argument of that which is written before.] My blessed daughter, the prodigies are unheard of, the surprises that I will narrate to you they will astound everyone, I feel the need of love to make known what thing we have done with this Celestial Mother and the great good that all the generations have received. Whence you should know that in the act of conceiving this Holy Virgin, our Divine Will that possesses everything, and with his immensity embraces everything, and possesses the omniscience of all the possible and imaginable beings, and with his virtue all proper that when he works he always does universal works, hence as she was conceived, with his creative virtue he called all creatures to be conceived in the heart of this Virgin; but it was not enough to our love, giving in the most incredible excesses he made this Virgin conceived in every creature, so that each one might have a Mother all her own, they might feel her Maternity in the depth of their souls, her love, that more than children, that while she holds them conceived in herself, bilocating herself to conceive (herself) in every single creature, in order to put herself at (the) disposition of them, in order to raise them, guide them, free them from perils and with her Maternal power feeds them the milk of her love and the food with which She herself was fed, that is the Divine Fiat. Our Will having free life in Her, his total dominion, with his power, while he called everyone in this Celestial Creature, in order to have the joy of seeing everyone contained in Her, in order to hear her say; they are already all in me(,) mine and your children, therefore I love you for everyone; then she bilocated in everyone and in each one, in order to feel in every single soul, the love of this Daughter of ours, all beautiful and all love, we can say, there is no creature that She did not take the pledge of loving us for. Our Fiat elevated her so much as to give her everything, and even from the first instant of her life we constituted her Queen of our Fiat, Queen of our love, and when she loved us her Maternity was felt in her love, and it harmonized the love of all creatures, and oh how beautiful it was, that formed of everything one love alone, how it wounded us, felicitated us, even to feel ourselves languish, her love disarmed us, made us see all things, Sky, Sun, earth, seas and creatures covered and hidden in her love.

“Oh! how beautiful it was to see her, to feel her that she did as Mother in every single creature and forming in them her sea of love, she sent her notes, her arrows, her loving darts to her Creator. And doing as true Mother she carried them to us even before our Throne in the sea of her love, in order to make us look at them, in order to make us propitious, and with the force of our Divine Volition she imposed herself over us, put them in (our) arm (s), made us caress, kiss them, and made us give surprising graces, how much sanctity was formed and impetrated by this Celestial Mother, and in order to be sure her love remained to watch.

“Beyond this, you should know that even from the first instant of the life of this Celestial creature, our love was so much that we endowed her with all of our Divine qualities. So that she held for dowry our Power, Wisdom, love, goodness, light, beauty and all the rest of our Divine qualities. Already to all creatures in putting them forth to the light of day we give the dowry, no one is born if not endowed by her Creator, but since they are drawn away from our Will, one can say that they don't even know it. Instead this Holy Virgin was not drawn away ever, she made perennial life in the interminable seas of our Fiat, hence she grew together with our Attributes and as she formed her acts in our Divine qualities, thus she formed seas of Power, of wisdom, of light and other. We can say that living with our science we gave her continuous lessons, who her Creator was, she grew in our knowledges, and she knew so much of the Supreme Being, that not one Angel and Saint could arrive to her, rather they are all ignorant before Her, because not one grew and made life together with us. She entered in our divine secrets, in the most intimate hideaways of our Divine Being without beginning or end, in our joys and imperishable beatitudes, and with our Power that she held in her power she dominated and mastered us, and we made/let her do it, indeed we enjoyed ourselves with her mastery and in order to make her more happy, we gave her our chaste embraces, our loving smiles, our condescensions, saying to her: do that which you want. Our Volition has so much love toward creatures, and his great desire of having her live in Him, that if he obtains this he casts her in an abyss of graces, of love, even to drown her (so) that, the human littleness is constrained to say: enough, I am already drowned, I feel devoured by your love itself, I am not able to endure more.

“Now you should know that, our love is not content, it never says enough, how much more it gives more it wants to give and when we give it is our feast, we prepare the table to one who loves us and we press her to remain with us, in order to have life together. Now my daughter, listen to another prodigy of our Fiat in this Holy Creature, and how She loved us and made her Maternity extend to all creatures. In every act that she did, if she loved, prayed, adored, if she suffered, everything even the breath, the heartbeat, the step, being our Fiat, they were triumphs and victories that our Supreme Being made in the acts of the Virgin, the Celestial Lady triumphed and conquered in God, in every instant of her admirable and prodigious life they were triumphs and victories between God and the Virgin; but this is nothing, doing as True Mother she called all her children, and covered and hid all their acts in hers and covered them with her triumphs and with her victories, giving all her acts as dowry, with all her victories and her triumphs. And then with a tenderness and love as to break hearts and feel ourselves conquered she said to us: Adorable majesty, look at them, they are all my children, my victories and triumphs are of my children, they are my conquests that I give to them, and if the Mama has conquered and triumphed, the children have conquered and triumphed. And so many triumphs and victories she did in God, for how many acts all creatures would have done, so that everyone might be able to say: I am endowed by the acts of my Queen Mama, and for seal she has invested them with me with her triumphs and victories that she made with her Creator.

“So that who wants to make herself holy finds the dowry of her Celestial Mother and her triumphs and victories in order to arrive to the greatest sanctity, the weak one finds the strength of the sanctity of her Mama and her triumphs in order to be strong, the afflicted one, the suffering one finds the dowry of the sufferings of her Celestial Mother in order to obtain the triumph, the victory of resignation, the sinner finds the victory and the triumph of pardon, in short everyone finds in this Sovereign Queen the dowry, the support, the help to the state in which they find themselves. And oh, how beautiful it is, it is the most moving scene, enrapturing and enchanting, to see this Celestial Mother in every single creature, that she does as Mama, we feel her that she loves and prays in her children. This is the greatest prodigy between Heaven and earth, good more great we could not give to creatures.

“Now my daughter, I must tell you a sorrow of the Celestial Mother, to so much (of) her love, the ingratitude of creatures, this dowry, that with so many sacrifices even to the heroism of the sacrifice of her Son God with so many atrocious sufferings, some don't know it, some hardly take a slight interest, and they have life poor of sanctity, and oh how she suffers in seeing her children poor; to possess immense riches of love, of grace, of sanctity, because they are not material riches, but the riches of this Celestial Mother are riches that she has put forth her life in order to acquire them, and not seeing them possessed by her children and she holds them without the purpose (of) why she has acquired them it is a continuous sorrow, and therefore she wants to make this great good known to everyone, because if one doesn't know one can not possess. And how she acquired these dowries in virtue of the Divine Fiat that reigned in Her, that loved her so much that he let her do that which she wanted and anywhere she might want to arrive to (the) good of creatures. Therefore it will be my ruling Divine Volition that will put to (the light of) day these celestial dowries and will make them take possession. Therefore pray that a good so great be known and wanted by creatures."

* * *

December 24, 1936

The Celestial and Divine Mother and the human Mother. Fast race of love of God in which lets this Mother generate her Jesus in every single creature in virtue of the Fiat.

I follow the same theme on the Most Holy Virgin. A light that descends from the bosom of the Eternal invests my poor mind, but it is a speaking light that says so many things of the Sovereign Celestial Lady, that I don't know how to do it in order to say everything about her. But my beloved Jesus with his usual goodness says to me:

"Courage my daughter, I will help you, I will administer the words to you, I feel the irresistible need to make known who is this Mother of mine, the dowries, the privileges and great good that she does and that she can do to all the generations. Therefore listen to me and I will tell you things not ever thought of neither by you, nor by (the) others, in a way to as shake the most incredulous, ingrates and sinners, and even where our love arrives. Whence our love didn't give itself peace, it raced, it raced, but with such a rapidity, that compromised all our Divine Being to give in such excesses, as to make Heaven and earth astounded, as to make everyone exclaim: possible that a God has loved creatures so much?

"Hence you feel, my daughter, what our great love does; creatures held a Celestial Father, our love was not content, in its delirium and folly of love, it wanted to form for them a Celestial Mother and a terrestrial Mother, so that if the solicitudes, the love, the tenderness of the Celestial Paternity might not have been enough for them, in order to love him, the love, the indescribable tendernesses of this Celestial and human Mother, would have been the ring of conjunction, that having disbanded every distance, dread and fears, if they would have abandoned themselves into her arms in order to make themselves conquered by her love, in order to love He who had formed her for their love and in order to make oneself love.

"Therefore the most outstanding portents were needed and a love that never says enough, and that only a God can do, in order to obtain the intent. Now you feel what it does, we called from the nothing this Holy Creature and making use of the same germ/seed of the human generations, however purified, we gave her life, from the first instant of this life was united the celestial virtue of our Divine Fiat and formed together Divine life and human life, which grew divinely and humanly together, and participating her (in) the Divine fecundity, it formed in Her the great prodigy to be able to conceive a man and a God, with the human germ/seed she could form the humanity to the Word incarnate, and with the germ/seed of the Fiat she could conceive the Divine Word. With this the distance between

God and man ceased. This Virgin with being human and Celestial approached man and God and gave the brother(hood) to all her children that everyone might be able to approach him, to have life together and contemplating in Him and in Her the same features, invested by the same human nature, they would have had such trust and love as to make oneself conquered, and to love (he) who so very loved them; what love doesn't a good Mother receive from her own children? more so that she was powerful, rich, and would have put forth (her) life in order to put into safety (her) own children, and what has she not done in order to make them happy and holy?

“So that the humanity of the Word and the Celestial and human Mother are as deposits in order to entrust the love of everyone and to tell them with all love: don't fear, come to us, we resemble each other in everything, come and we will give you everything, my arms will be always ready to embrace you and in order to defend you I will enclose you in my Heart in order to give you everything, it is enough to tell you that I am your Mother and that so much is my love that I hold you conceived in my Heart.

“But all this is nothing yet, it was God, he had to work as God, our love raced, raced, and went inventing other contrivances more excessive of love, you yourself you will remain stupefied in hearing them, and when the human generations will hear it, they will love us so much, as to reciprocate us to a great part in the great course of our love. Now pay attention to me and thank me my blessed daughter, for that which I am about to say; to our love it was not enough, as said before, that in virtue of our Fiat everyone might be conceived in the Heart of this Virgin, in order to have the true Maternity, not with words but with deeds and She was conceived in every single creature, so that each one might have a Mother all her own, and have the full right and the possession that everyone might be her children, our love now passed to another excess.

“Hence first you should know that this Celestial Queen possessing all the fullness of our Divine Fiat, which possesses in nature his generative and bilocative virtue, She together with the Divine Fiat can generate and bilocate how many times she wants her Son God. Whence our love imposed itself over this Celestial creature, and giving into delirium, with the virtue of my Fiat that she possessed, it gave her the power to let her generate her Jesus in every creature, to make him be born, raise him, do all that which is appropriate to do (for) him, in order to form the life of her Dear Son, she makes up for all that which the creature can't do, if he cries she dries his tears, if he is cold she warms him, if he suffers she suffers together, and while she does as Mother and raises her Son, she does as Mother and raises the creature. So that it can be said that she raises them together, loves them with one love alone, guides them, feeds them, dresses them and with her maternal arms forms two wings of light, and covering them hides them in her Heart, in order to give them the most beautiful rest.

“Hence it was not enough to our love that the Word might incarnate himself, in order to generate a single Jesus for everyone, and give a single Mother to all the human generations, no, no, our love would not have been excessive, its course was so fast, that it didn't find one who put for them an enough, and then it quieted itself in some way when with its power it generated this Mother in every single soul, and let (her) generate Jesus, so that each one might have Mother and Son at her disposition. Oh! how beautiful it is to see this Celestial Mother, all love and all intent in every single creature to generate her Jesus, in order to form a portent of love and grace, and this is the honor and the greatest glory that her Creator has given her and the strongest love that God can give to creatures. Nor is there to marvel at, our Fiat can do all and can arrive everywhere, the everything is that he wants it, if he wants it it is already done. Rather the wonder remains in knowing to what excesses he has brought the love toward man.

* * *

December 28, 1936

The Celestial Heiress; how she calls her children to inherit her goods. How she arrives to endow souls with her Maternal love, in order to form other Mamas to Jesus.

I follow the same theme. I thought of that which is written above, and said to myself: is all this excessive chain of love possible, that it seems that it never finishes? I know that Our Lord can do everything, but to arrive to so much even to make descend from the Heights of his sanctity, this Celestial Mother into the depth of our souls and raise us as one of her most tender daughters, not only, but to generate her Son Jesus and raise us together, it gives of the incredible; and although I felt my heart burst for love and for joy, more so that I felt her in me, shadowed in his light, that with an indescribable love she raised me as her daughter and together with me raised her dear Son, yet I felt I didn't know how to say and write it also in order not to arouse difficulty and doubts. But my dear Jesus, taking an imposing aspect, as to not be able to resist said to me.

"My daughter, I want written that which I have said to you, in that which I have said to you there are seas of love, with which creatures will be invested, and I don't want to be suffocated, therefore if you don't write I retire; have you forgotten that I must conquer man by way of love, but love that will prove difficult to her to resist us?"

I immediately said Fiat, and my beloved Jesus taking his usual sweet and amiable aspect, with a love that I felt my heart break he added:

"My blessed daughter, there is nothing to be doubted, my Being is all love, and when it seems that I have given in such excesses of love as to not be able to demonstrate anymore other excesses of love, as their descendants. But (these) goods were not destroyed, they exist and will exist, and when a good is not destroyed there is always the certainty that they will come to whom will have the good of possessing them. Now the Great Queen gave beginning to her life in the inheritance of this Divine Will, indeed with such abundance that she felt drowned in the goods of her Creator, but so much so that can render Fiat she inherited the fecundity, the human and Divine maternity, she inherited the Word of the Celestial Father, she inherited all the human generations, and these inherited all the goods of this Celestial Mother.

"Hence as her heirs and as Mother, she holds the right to generate in her Maternal heart her children, but to ours and to her love it was not enough, she wanted to generate in every creature and since she was heiress of the Divine Word, she holds the power to generate him in every one of them. How (is it), if they can inherit the evils, the passions, the weaknesses, why can't they inherit the goods? Behold therefore the Celestial heiress wants to make known the inheritance that she wants to give to her children, she wants to give her Maternity to creatures, so that while she generates him, they do as Mamas and love him as She loved him, she wants to form so many Mamas to her Jesus in order to make him secure, and so that no one might offend him anymore. Because the love of Mother is well different from other loves, it is a love that always burns, it is a love that puts forth life for her Dear Son. You see, she wants to endow creatures with her Maternal love, and make them heirs of her own Son. Oh! how she will feel honored in seeing that creatures love her Jesus, with her love of Mother.

“You should know that so much is her love toward me and toward creatures, that she feels drowned and not being able to contain it anymore she has prayed to me that I might manifest that which I have said to you, her great inheritance, that she awaits her inheritors, and that which she can do for them saying to me: ‘My Son, do not wait anymore, do it soon, manifest my great inheritance and that which I can do for them, I feel more honored, more glorified, that You say that which your Mama can do, than if I might say it myself.’ However all this will have its full effect, her palpating life of this Sovereign Lady, when my Will will be known and creatures in the inheritance of their Mother will take the possession.”

Whence after this my sweet Jesus gave me a kiss saying to me:

“In the kiss is communicated the breath/[fiato] and therefore I have wanted to kiss you in to order to communicate to you with my omnipotent Breath/[Fiato], the certainty of the goods and the great prodigy that my Mother will do to the human generations, my kiss is confirmation of that which I want to do.” I remained surprised and he added: “And you give me your kiss in order to receive the deposit of all these goods and to reconfirm your will in mine. If there is not one who gives and one who receives, a good can not be neither formed, nor possessed.”

* * *

January 1, 1937

The feast that the Queen of Heaven prepared for her Son Jesus in his birth. How love is magnet, transforms and embellishes.

I was thinking of the incarnation of the Word and the excesses of love of the Divinity, that seemed seas, that involving all creatures, they wanted to make felt how much they loved them, in order to be loved and investing them inside and outside they murmur continually without ever ceasing: love, love, love, love we give, and love we want; and our Celestial Mother, feeling herself wounded by the continuous cry of the Eternal, that gave love and wanted love, she saw herself all attentive in order to reciprocate her Dear Son, the incarnate Word, with Her forming a surprise of love. Now in this while the Celestial Infant went forth from the Maternal bosom, and I longed for him, and casting himself in my arms, all festive he said to me:

“My daughter, do you know? my Mama prepared for me the feast in my birth, do you know ever how? She was to light of the seas of love, that descended from Heaven in the descent of the Eternal Word, she felt the continuous cry of God, that wanted to be re-loved, our anxieties, the ardent sighs, she felt my moans in her bosom, often she felt me cry and sob, and my every moan was a sea of love that I sent to every heart in order to be loved, and not seeing myself loved, she/I cried, even to sob, but every tear and hiccup doubled my seas of love in order to conquer creatures by way of love. But what, they converted these seas for me into sufferings, and I made use of the sufferings, in order to convert them into other seas of love for how many sufferings they gave me. Now my Mama wanted to make me smile in my birth and to prepare the feast for her Baby Son. She knew that I can not smile if I am not loved, nor take part in any Feast if love doesn't race. Therefore loving me as true Mother, and possessing in virtue of my Fiat seas of love, and being Queen of all the Creation, she involved the Sky with her love, and sealed every star with the 'I love you oh Son', for me and for everyone, she involved the Sun in her sea of love and she impressed in every drop of light, her 'I love you oh Son', and she called the Sun to invest with its light its Creator and warming him he might feel in every drop of light the 'I love you' of his Mama. She invested the wind with her love and in every breath sealed the 'I love you oh Son', and then she called it so that, with its puffs it caressed him, and he might feel in every breath of wind 'I love you, I love you oh my Son'. She involved all the air in her seas of love, so that breathing he might feel the breath of love of my Mother. She covered the whole sea with her sea of love, every wriggle of fish, and the sea murmured 'I love you oh my Son', and the fishes quivered 'I love you, I love you', there was no thing that she didn't invest with her love, and with her empire of Queen, she commanded everyone that they might receive her love, in order to re-give her Jesus the love of his Mama.

"Hence every bird, some trilled love, some chirruped, some warbled love, even every atom of earth was invested by her love, the breath/[fiato] of the beasts came with the 'I love you' of my Mother, the hay was invested by her love, therefore there was no thing that I might see or touch, that I might not feel the sweetness of the love of Her. With this she prepared for me the most beautiful feast, in my birth, the feast all of love, was the exchange of my great love, that made me find my sweet Mother, and it was her love that quieted my weeping, warmed me while in the manger I was numbed by the cold; more so that I found in her love the love of all creatures, and for every one she kissed me, squeezed me to her Heart, and loved me with (the) love of Mother for all her children, and I feeling in every one her Maternal love, I felt myself love them as her children and as my dear brothers.

"My daughter, what can not love do, animated by an Omnipotent Fiat? It makes itself magnet and attracts there in an irresistible way, removing every dissimilarity, with its heat it transforms and confirms He whom it loves. Then it embellishes in an incredible way, as to feel Heavens and earth enraptured to love. To not love a creature that loves us proves impossible, all our Power and Divine strength, are rendered impotent and weak before the winning strength of whom loves us. Therefore you also give me the feast that my Mother gave me in being born, involve Heaven and earth with your 'I love you oh Jesus', let nothing escape you if your love doesn't race, make me smile, because I was not born one single time, but I am always reborn, and many times my rebirths are without smile and without feast and I remain alone (with) my tears, the hiccups, the whimpers and a cold that makes me tremble and numbs all my members.

"Therefore squeeze me to your heart in order to warm me with your love and with the light of my Will, form for me the attire in order to dress me, thus you also will make for me the feast and I will make it for you, with giving you new love and new knowledge of my Will."

* * *

January 4, 1937

How every creature holds even from the beginning of her existence an act wanted and decided by the Divine Will, which creates her, raises her, forms her. Feast of Jesus in every act of the creature that does his Will.

I am between the arms of the Divine Fiat, which surrounds me with his light and recalls over my poor existence his continuous act of his Will, but an act that gives me life, that loves me, without which I could not live, nor find who truly loves me, therefore he wants me all intent to receive this act of life of his Will, so that I don't expose it to not complete over me that which he wants to do, and I impede his love, because Will of God and love make competition, the one can not be without the other. Now while I found myself under this act of the Fiat, my beloved Jesus with a goodness that I don't know how to say, all tenderness pressed me to his Divine Heart and said to me:

"My blessed daughter, my Will is everything for the creature, without Him, you could not even have life. You should know that every single creature holds even from the beginning of her existence an act wanted and decided by my Will, which carries with itself an intense act of love toward He, or She, that begins life. You see therefore how the creation of the creature begins under the rule of an act of love and of Divine Will wanted with the all the fullness of knowledge, so much so that these two acts, love and Divine Will, are equipped with all the graces, of power, wisdom, sanctity and beauty, of which the creature will live and perform her life.

"Now as he has formed his first wanted act, he does not move himself anymore from over her, he creates her, forms her, raises her, develops his working act in order to reconfirm her in his wanted act. So that my Will, my love races in every human act, making life, support, defense, refuge, and surrounding her with his power, they feed this life, my love embraces her and holds her pressed to his bosom, my Will surrounds her from all sides, more than residence, in order to hold his wanted act that my Fiat pronounced in order to call her to existence.

"Now this act wanted by our Fiat, is the greatest act, most powerful and that most glorifies our Divine Being, that not even the Heavens can contain and understand; to you it seems little that our Will races in every act of the creature and he does not speak to them with words, but with deeds: I am yours, at your disposition, oh! recognize me, I am your life, your act, if you recognize me you will give me your little exchange of love, and although little I want it, I claim it, in order to reassure myself of my continuous work and of the life that I put forth for you; and my love in order not to remain behind my Fiat, feels the irresistible need to race and to love every single act of the creature, which tells her in her every act, I love you and you love me.

"Beyond this, everything is (in) if she comes to recognize this wanted act of my Fiat, then he makes of her unheard of prodigies, of sanctity and of beauty that will form the most beautiful ornaments of the Celestial Country and the most refulgent lives that resemble their Creator, because our Will doesn't know how to make beings that don't resemble us, the first thing that he casts is our likeness, because he wants to find himself in the working act that develops in the creature, otherwise he could say: you don't resemble me, hence you don't belong to me. If then he does not become recognized and loved, then it forms the sorrow of my Volition, although he races in every act of the creature and if he might not race he would take away the life. Hence in his sorrow he feels his divine life rejected, the sanctity impeded that he wants to develop, enclosed in his wanted act the seas of graces that he should flood her with, the beauty that he should cover her with. Therefore my Will can say: there is no sorrow similar to my sorrow; more so that there was no good that I did (not) want to give her, there is no act of hers that I have not put there of mine.

“Hence my daughter be attentive, think that in your every act it hangs from a Divine Will that involves it, forms it and gives it life, and because he loves you he wants that you know the life that he gives you and this as confirmation of his acts in you, therefore content yourself to die rather than to impede this wanted act of my Will even from the beginning of your existence. How beautiful it is to be able to say: I am Will of God, because He has done everything in me, he has created me, he has formed me and will bring me in his arms of light into the Celestial Regions, as victory and triumph of the omnipotent Fiat and of his love.”

After this my mind continued to swim in the sea of the Fiat, and oh how beautiful it was to see it, that he was attentive, that as I breathed, palpated, loved, thus he invested my breath in order to form his Divine breath, the Divine heartbeat, and over my little love he formed his sea of love and was delighted so much that he waited with anxiety for my little human acts, in order to form his Divine work, and my beloved Jesus celebrated the triumph, the work of the Fiat in my little soul and all goodness said to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, how I enjoy seeing that my Divine Will puts forth of his in the act of the creature and since the act of her is little, he delights himself with losing it in his great act, that has no confines and as triumphant says: I have conquered, victory is mine and I in every act of my Will in her, I make my feast. Now you should know, that so much is the gratification of our Supreme Being in seeing the little human act lost, lost, identified, as if she might have lost (her) life, in order to give life to ours, that we elevate this act, that we called our act, in the height of our eternal act. All the Eternity how much it makes itself around and surrounds this act and all that which has been done and will be done in the round of her they identify themselves with this act, in a way that all the Eternity belongs to this act, this act leaves in the bosom of the Eternal and forms one feast more to our Supreme Being, hence one feast more to all Heaven, and a help, strength and defense to all the earth. The creature doing our Will, lets him live in her, it is the unique satisfaction that we experience, it is the true exchange that we receive because we have created the Creation, it is the competition of love between the Creator and the creature, it is moving (of) ourselves in order to give new surprises of graces, and she to receive them.

“Therefore if the creature races in our Fiat in order to give him free field of action, in our emphasis of love we say: the creature pays us for all that which we have done, after all didn’t we make all things and the creature herself so that she might do our Volition in everything? she does this, and this is enough for us, although she might not do anything more. If this is enough to us more so should it be enough to them the doing, the living always in our Will, with this she is ours and we are all hers and to you it seems little to be able to say: God is mine, all mine, nor can he escape me, because his omnipotent Fiat holds him bound in me.”

* * *

January 10, 1937

Weaving between the Divine Volition and the human, tenderness of Jesus for who lives in his Volition even to feel happy to have cried and suffered. The refuge of the works of God.

I feel beneath the eternal waves of the Fiat, and my poor mind races, races always in order to be invested, and the waves race in order to invest me and this investing of each other, forms the most beautiful rest on both parts. But while it raced, my Highest Good Jesus, detaining me said to me:

“My daughter, how beautiful is the course of my Fiat with the daughter of my Divine Will, a weaving happens between the one and the other, all created things in which my Volition races, one sees that the little thread of the human volition weaves everything, and my Fiat weaving it renders it extended in all her acts, it seems that he is not content, if he doesn’t see this thread of the human volition in the Sky, in the Sun, in everything it is a competition that the Divine Volition forms, he wants to invest the human one, and the human volition wants to make itself invested (by) him.”

And I surprised said: but how can it be, that the human volition so little, can be extended in all created things, and together with the Fiat embrace the great vastness of all the Creation? And my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, do not wonder, since all things were created for the creature, it was just, decorous, that the soul and human will, might be able to invest and embrace everything, might master over everything and might possess greater wonders than the Creation itself, more so united with my Will, where can’t the creature arrive? she can not embrace our immensity, because to no one is it given to be able to embrace it, but all that which has been done for her, provided that she is in our Fiat, was given her by us(,) the right to be able to enter everywhere, to embrace everything and to make hers our works. And my Fiat could not endure, would feel the purpose torn, if he might not find the human volition in his works, that wanting to have life together, recognizes in them his works, how much he has loved her, and how he wants to be loved.

“Therefore my Will is all eye, he is as spying in order to see when the creature is about to do a little act, an act of love, a breath, a heartbeat, in order to invest it with the power of his Breath/[Fiato] and to say to her: my works I have done them for you, and you must work for me, therefore that which you do is mine, it is my right, as my works are your right. These are the laws of living in my Volition, the yours and mine it ceases on both parts, they form one act alone and they possess the same goods. But this is not everything, for who lives in our Fiat, this thread of the human volition races in my conception, in my birth, in my infantile tears, in my sufferings. You feel, a most tender thing, when this thread of the human volition weaves mine and mine hers, investing all the acts and sufferings of your Jesus, I feel the joy and the purpose of being conceived and born, I feel happy to have cried for her love, rather my tears are stopped on my face, and seeing that the human volition beads mine with hers, kisses them, adores them, loves them, oh how happy and victorious I feel that my tears and sufferings have conquered the human volition, since I feel her flow in all my acts, and even in my death itself.

“Hence as there is nothing that we have not done for their love, thus there is nothing (in) which my Volition doesn’t call this human volition, in order to be more sure he weaves hers with his and with his works, there is no peril that he leaves her behind, and with an emphasis of indescribable love he says to her: my Will is yours, my works are yours, recognize them, love them, nor stop yourself, race, it escapes, let nothing escape you, you would lose a right in that which you don’t know and possess, and you would give me a sorrow, that in my Will, I don’t find yours woven in my works, and I feel the purpose torn, betrayed in the love and as a father that while he holds the children he doesn’t find them in his works, in his possessions, in his residence, they remain distant and they lead a life poor and unworthy of such a father. Therefore the anxieties, the sighs, the avidity of my Fiat are incessant, he would move Heavens and earth, he would not spare anything, provided that the creature might live in harmony with Him and she might be possessor of his own goods.

“Beyond this, all that which we have done as much in the Creation as in the Redemption, is all in act to give itself to man, they hang over his head, but they are as suspended, without being able to give, because he doesn’t know them, and he doesn’t call them, and he doesn’t love them, in order to enclose them in his soul, in order to receive such a good.

“Now who possesses our Volition, our works, all my Life that I passed down here, it finds the refuge, the space, the room where to be able to continue my life, my works, and the soul acquires the practicing act and converts into nature his works and my life. So that this creature is the refuge of our sanctity, of our love and the life of our Will. And when our love not being able to contain it, wants to give in excesses, we find refuge in her and we give vent to our love, and we pour such charismas of graces, that the Heavens stupefied and trembling adore our working Divine Will in the creature.”

* * *

January 24, 1937

The Divine Will, for who lives in Him, he forms the repeater of his life and of his love, and forms and extends in her all the Creation, and all that which Jesus did. How he will give her a new name calling her: My Fiat.

I am in the power of the Supreme Fiat, whom always wants to give me of his, in order to keep me occupied and to always have something to do together, through my poor soul, and if he perceives some small void, that is not his Will, with an admirable and inimitable activity, he sees what thing is lacking in me, of all his acts, that he has done for love of creatures and all festive he seals it in my soul, giving me a little lesson. I was surprised and my always amiable Jesus visiting his little daughter, said to me:

“My good daughter, do not wonder, the love of my Volition is exuberant, but with highest Wisdom, because he wants to do for one who lives in his Volition, worthy works of Him, the little repeaters of his Life, of his love, and to hide in them the sanctity and the multiplicity of his works. He wants to continue his creative work, he wants to form, to repeat and to extend all the Creation and even more, in one who lives in his Volition.

“You feel where his love arrives. My Fiat created the Creation, and to every created thing he put a value, a love, a distinct office, as to have to produce a distinct good to creatures, so much so that the Sky possesses a value and a love and an office all it’s own, the Sun, the wind, the sea, possesses another, and they make distinct offices, and thus with all created things. Now you feel what my Will does, for one who lives in Him, all that which she does is his, hence in an act he encloses the value, the love and the office that the Sky does, and he gives to the creature the love and the value of the Sky, in another act he pronounces his Fiat, and he encloses there the value, the love that he had in creating the Sun, and makes it do the office of the Sun, in another he encloses there the value of the wind, his ruling love, and pronouncing his Fiat makes it do the office of the wind, in another he encloses there the value of the sea and pronouncing his Fiat, he makes it do the office of the sea and gives it the virtue to always murmur love, love, love, in short there is no act that she does that he does not delight to pronounce his Fiat and there he encloses the value of the air, there the sweet song of the birds, the bleating of the lambs, there the beauty of the flowers, and if the acts of the creature don't arrive to extend the work of the Creation, he makes use of the heartbeat, of the breath, of the rapidity as the blood circulates in her veins, he animates everything with his Fiat and forms there the complete Creation.

“And when he has completed everything, of all that which he has done in the Creation for love of creatures, he extends there his dominion and with his creative strength conserves everything, maintains the order of the new Creation, that he has formed in the acts of the creature, and he feels so very loved and glorified, because he doesn't find the Creation without reason, without will and without life, but he finds the strength of a reason, of a will and life that voluntarily she has undergone the power of his Fiat in her acts, his creative virtue, his same Divine life, his ruling and untiring love, in a word she has let him do with herself even that which he wanted (to do) with her breath and with her acts.

“My blessed daughter, continue to listen to me, let me vent my love, I can not contain it anymore, I want to tell you where my love arrives and where it can arrive and can do to one who lives in my Fiat. Do you believe that my Volition has been content, has said enough because he has enclosed the value, the love and (the) different offices of all the Creation in the creature that lives as (in) harmony in Him, with one Will alone? no, no; you should know that I came upon the earth, and in the heat of my love displayed my life, my sufferings and my death itself, in order to repurchase my Divine Will for (the) benefit of creatures, that with so much ingratitude they had rejected and hence lost. So that my life served as disbursement of the price that was needed in order to reacquire it and to give it in possession of my children, therefore there was needed a God, in order to be able to hold sufficient worth to be able to buy a Divine Will, you see therefore how it is certain that the kingdom of my Volition will come, because the purchase was made by me.

“Now my Will, after having formed the order of the Creation, with all sumptuousness and sublimity of his creative work, as the creature goes repeating her acts, in one act he pronounces his Fiat and forms there my life and encloses its value, in another act he pronounces his Fiat and encloses in her sufferings the value of my sufferings, he pronounces his Fiat over her tears and puts there the value of mine, his Fiat follows in her works, in her footsteps, in her heartbeat and he encloses there the value of my works, of my footsteps and of my love, there is no prayer and even natural acts that he does not enclose the value of my acts.

“So that (in) one who lives in my Will, I feel myself repeat my life, and it doubles the worth in order to buy my Divine Will to the benefit of the human generations; one can say, that there is a competition between me and her, to whom wants to give more, in order to make that my Will might be possessed again by the human family.

“But it is not yet everything, if he doesn't do complete works he is not content, to the value of the Creation and Redemption that he has enclosed there in the soul, there he adds on with an incredible love, there he encloses the Celestial Country and makes resound his glory, his joys, the eternal beatitudes, as seal and confirmation, of the creative and redeeming work that he has formed in her. After this, being more sure, he creates there his heartbeat, his breath, he makes circulate more than blood his life, his light, and as triumphant he gives her a new name, calling her 'my Fiat', this name is the most beautiful name, that will make all (of) Heaven smile and all (of) hell tremble, that name I can not give if not to one who lives in my Volition and has let me do in her that which I want.

"My daughter, what can't my omnipotent Fiat do and give? he arrives to so much that he gives his rights over his own power, over his love, over his justice, he incorporates with himself the will of the creature and says to her: be attentive, I don't want other from you than (that) you do that which I do, therefore it is necessary that you be always together with me, and I with you.

* * *

February 10, 1937

The Kingdom of the Divine Volition will be the kingdom of the Queen of Heaven; her ardent desires and incessant prayers; assaults of love that she gives to the Divinity in order to obtain it. How she will put her life at (the) disposition of creatures, in order to give them the grace to make them live of Divine Will.

I felt all immersed in the Divine Volition, it seemed to me that Heavens and earth, they long, they pray that his kingdom comes upon the earth, so that one be the Will of everyone and he reign there as in Heaven so in earth, to this is united the Queen of Heaven, that with her ardent sighs, she moved, united everything to herself, Angels, Saints and all the Creation, in order to ask with her same sighs and with the Divine Will itself that She possess, that Fiat that descends in hearts and forms there his Life. But while I thought this my amiable Jesus, making himself all love sighed strongly, (his) heart beat so much, as if it might want to burst, he said to me:

"Daughter of my Volition, listen to me, my love is about to submerge me, I can not contain it anymore, at whatever cost, although it might have to overwhelm Heaven and earth, I want that my Will comes to reign upon the earth. To this is united my Celestial Mama, whom without ever ceasing says to me, repeats to me: Son do it soon, do not delay anymore, use your stratagems of love, do it as that powerful God that you are, make that your Volition invests everyone and with his power and Majesty, united to a love that no one can resist, take possession of everyone and reign there as in Heaven so in earth; and she says this to me with such ardent sighs, with fiery heartbeats, with her stratagems of love of Mother, that I can not resist, even to add on to me: My Son, Son of my Heart, you have made me Queen and Mother and my people and my children where are they? if I were capable of unhappiness I would be the most unhappy Queen and Mother, because I possess my kingdom and do not have my people whom live with the same Will of their Queen, and if I don't have my children to whom I can entrust the great inheritance of their Mother, where will I find the joy, the happiness of my Maternity? Therefore make that the Divine Fiat reigns and then your Mama will be happy, and she will have my people and children that will live together with me, with the same Will of the their Mother.

"Do you believe that to this speech of my Mother that she makes resound continuously to the ear and that sweetly invests my Heart, that are arrows and wounds of continuous love, I can remain indifferent? I can not, and I don't even want to. More so that She has never denied me anything, hence there lacks the strength to deny myself to Her, my Divine Heart presses me to content her; unite yourself with us and long and pray that my Will be known and comes to reign upon the earth, and in order to more greatly confirm you to this, I want to make you hear my sweet Mama.”

In this while I felt her near, that hiding me under her azure mantle and taking me up in her maternal womb, with a love that I don’t know how to say, she said to me:

“Daughter of my Maternal Heart, the kingdom of the Divine Will will be my kingdom, the Sacrosanct Trinity has entrusted it to me, as he entrusted the Eternal Word to me when he descended from Heaven in earth, thus he entrusted to me his and my kingdom, therefore my sighs are ardent, my prayers incessant, I don’t do other than assault the Most Holy Trinity with my love, with the rights of Queen and of Mother that he gave me, so that that which he entrusted to me comes to the light, forms his life, so that my kingdom triumphs upon the face of the earth; you must know that my desire is so much that it burns me, that I feel as if I might not have glory, while I have so much of it that Heavens and earth are filled, if I don’t see it fully formed, the kingdom of the Divine Will in the midst of my children, because, each one of these children that will live in it, will give me so much glory, as to double my glory that I possess, therefore seeing myself deprived, I feel as if I might not have (the) glory of Queen and (the) love of Mother from my children, therefore in my Heart I always call and go repeating, ‘my children, my children, come to your Mama, love me as Mother as I love you as children, if you won’t live with that same Will that I lived, you can not give me the love of true children, nor can it be known where my love arrives for you.’

“You must know that so much is my love and my ardent anxieties that I want that this kingdom exists upon the earth, that I descend from Heaven, turn through souls in order to see who remains more disposed to live of Divine Volition, I do for them (as a) spy, and when I see them disposed I enter in their hearts and I form my life in them, as preparation, honor and decorum of that Fiat that will take possession and will form his life in them. Therefore I will be inseparable from them, I will put my Life, my love, my virtues, my sorrows, at their disposition, as (a) wall of insurmountable fortitude, so that they can find in their Mother that which is needed in order to live in this kingdom so holy.

“And then my feast will be complete, my love will rest in my children, my Maternity will find one who loves me as child, and I will give surprising graces and I will put all Heaven and earth in feast, I will do as (a) Queen lavishing unheard of graces. Therefore my daughter, you will remain united with your Mama, so that you pray and yearn with me the kingdom of the Divine Will.”

* * *

February 26, 1837

What one act more is that the creature does in the Divine Will, it is the harmony, the music, it is the sweeping away Heavens and earth, it is the installation that she forms in God and God in her.

My little and poor soul I feel it surrounded by Divine Will inside and outside of me, to the right and to the left, he flows in me even under my feet, everywhere he races in order to say to me: it is I who forms your life, who warms you with my heat, who forms your motion, your breath, recognize me that your life is animated by mine, and I will make worthy things of me in you; but while my mind was lost in the Fiat, my sweet Jesus making me his brief little visit, as if he might feel the need of love of speaking to me of his Volition, said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, my love repressed in me feels the need to relieve itself, otherwise it gives me such deliriums, that I feel suffocated by my own flames. Therefore my speaking is a vent of love, it is a relief to my Heart, and in order to restore myself I go finding one who wants to listen to me? Now you feel where my love arrives and the great prodigy of the working life of my Will in the creature. One act more the creature does in my Will, is one harmony more that she casts between Heaven and earth, it is a new celestial music that she forms to her Creator, which is so very pleasant, more so that it comes from earth, because the things of Heaven are ours, no one can say in the Celestial Country that one gives to us, but (it is) we ourselves who give to them, who felicitates and beatifies everyone, instead the soul from the earth can say, I give to my Creator, and we feeling ourselves enraptured give our Will anew, as working life in her, so that she forms for us other new and more beautiful music. How beautiful it is to feel our Heaven in earth, to feel new celestial music, that issues forth from the wayfarer soul, all Heaven makes (a) new feast and we feel that also the earth is ours and we love her more. Every act more that she does in my Divine Will is a sweeping away (of) Heavens and earth in it, because everyone, Angels, Saints, they race in that act, also the Creation itself, in order to take their place of honor in the working act of my Will, no one wants to remain outside of the act of my Divine Fiat. The true centralization of everything and everyone happens, nor could my Will do less, as to put apart in his act, all those where He reigns.

“My Will when he works he wants to enclose everything and to give everything, because He doesn’t know how to do incomplete acts, but completed ones and with the fullness of all goods. But who can tell you my daughter, what happens in that sweeping away (of) Heaven and earth, in that working act of my Volition in the creature? That moving oneself with everyone, that each one wanting his place in that act, such wonders happen, such unheard of prodigies, such moving scenes, that the Heavens are astonished and remain ecstatic before the working power of my Will, but where? in the little circle of the creature, and they remain with the anxiety of being swept away anew in the working act of my Will in her, oh how they long for it, they feel more embellished, and they experience the beautiful happiness of the conquering act of my Will in the creature, that which they lack in Heaven, because there are no conquests for them, nor can they acquire them, that which they have done in earth, there is put an enough and no more.

“But it is still not everything, one act more that one does in my Will is an incorporating of oneself(,) God in the creature and the creature in God, it is an installation in each other, and the life of the one flows in the other, almost as blood in the veins, it is the fusion of the human heartbeat in the Eternal heartbeat, and she feels in herself as life the love, the sanctity, the life of her Creator, and the Eternal feels flow in himself the little love of the creature, that living in himself, forms one love alone and one Will alone, every breath, heartbeat and motion, are wounds, arrows, darts of love that she gives to He who has created her. And oh! all Heaven remains as stupefied, that they watch God and find the creature fused in Him, who loves with his love and with conquering love, they watch the creature in earth and they find their Creator, that while he holds his throne in her, he makes life together with her. These are the greatest excesses of our love towards whom we love so much, when we find the creature that lends herself and denies us nothing, we don’t look at her littleness, but we look rather to that which we know and can do, that we can do everything, and making (a) display of our love and of all our Divine Being, we invest the creature and we make ourselves invested, and we do great things worthy of us, but with such magnanimity, that everyone remains surprised and stupefied, it is enough to tell you that every act more than one does in my Will, as if we might have need of the creature, we give so much that we increase great bonds of union, of love, on both parts and we arrive to give new rights over our Divine Being, and we over her. So great is this working act of our Fiat in her, that there are not enough centuries to say that which happens in It, neither the Angels, nor the Saints, can say all the good that it contains. Only your Jesus can tell you all the good that is formed in this act, because being I the operator I know how to say that which I do, and the great value that I put within you. Therefore be attentive, content, love, greater glory you can not give me than to lend me your little acts, your little love, in order to make my Will descend in them in order to let my Will work, so much is his love that he feels the need to have his field of action in the little acts of the creature.”

* * *

March 6, 1937

The Creation first means of help in order to form the life of the Divine Will in us; second, God directly; third, the circumstances of life.

I continue to swim in the immense sea of the Divine Volition and I thought to myself: but how can the creature form this life of the Fiat in him? I feel so tiny that it seems impossible to me, maybe living inside of Him is more easy, because I find so much space that I can not see where the confines arrive, but enclosing him inside of me, I feel that there lacks the space in order to do this. And my always amiable Jesus with his usual goodness said to me:

“My daughter, you should know that our power is so much that we take delight in forming our life in the littleness of the creature, provided that she is not encumbered with other things that to us don't pertain, rather many times we work over the pure nothing the greatest things, and since it is our Will that this life of our Volition might be formed and possessed in her soul, all that which we have created and that exists in Heaven and in earth, holds the mandate from us that all must help and serve the creature, as means in order to form and raise this life in her. So that the first that lends itself to communicate and to make the power, the love felt of our Will is all the Creation. It holds the virtue given by us, that while it raises, feeds, helps and sustains natural life, thus penetrating in the interior of the soul through human acts, they penetrate in the soul and they do (a) double office, and if they find the little life of my Will, my same Will that finds himself in created things, kisses my same Will that he finds in her, moulds her, blows (in/on) her, enlarges the capacity and finding his little Paradise, rests and administers the helps, the means that that created thing contains, in order to make that nothing lack in order to make grow and maintain the life of my Will in the creature. Whence Heaven is always spread over her head in order to keep watch over her, that nothing might enter that might not be Will of God. The Sun approaches more, and showing off more in love makes its heat felt, fills the eye with light, invests her hands, steps and penetrating in the soul fills her with the love, with the light, with the fecundity with which my Will is filled, and he leaves the deposit of his heat, of his light, so that she might not live but love and light, things that belong to my Will, and this Sun making its course forms the beautiful flowerings, the variety of the colors and all the rest, for love of who possess my Will.

“One can say that every time the Sun invests the creature, my Will visits the creature, in order to see if she needs something, if she doesn't lack anything in order to make his life grow in her; what have I not done and would I not do in order to have the intent to form this life of my Fiat in the creature? Therefore the air while it serves in order to give the breath to the body, it serves to give the breath of my Will to the soul, the wind while it serves to purify the air to the nature, it serves to give the caresses, the kisses, the rule of my Will to my life that she possesses. So that there is no created thing, that emitting my Volition from within them, races inside the interior of the soul of them, for help, defense and in order to make her grow as I want.

"But this is not everything. My Will in created things must be veiled, in order to form this life of his in them, but how many don't receive it and he remains in his veils repressed without being able to give the goods that he possesses. Now there is the second way, more splendid, more displayed love, it is so much the love that burns us, the desire that we want that the creature possesses our Will as life, that every act, thought, word, heartbeat, work and step that she does, is a divine emanation that we make her, our Divine Being races in her every act in order to give her of ours, we surround her, vivify her, in order to make her be reborn in our Will, we can say that we put ourselves at (her) disposition to form this life. But do you know why our interest? because we want that our Will forms the beautiful generation of the Divine Will in the will of the creature, and then we will have so many lives of ours that love us, that glorify us. How beautiful will be the creation, everything will be ours, we will find our throne, our palpating life everywhere. Now there is the third way, the circumstances of life, the occasions, the order of my providence around each one, the mortifications, the sorrows, are all means in order to make grow and develop in (an) admirable way, this life of my Will in them, hence there is no thing in which He doesn't prepare his first act of life to give to creatures. Oh! if everyone might be attentive how happy, secure they would feel under the rain of a Volition so holy, that loves them so much that he arrives to the excess of wanting to form his life in the poor creature."

* * *

March 14, 1937

The Divine Will is life, and as life forms the generation of his life in the acts of the creature that will live in Him and forms there the long generation of the children of his Divine Fiat.

The Divine Volition never leaves me, it seems to me that all the more he confirms me and makes me yearn to live in Him, not only me, but all those that will want to live, he wants to say new things and what one act more means that one can do in his Most Holy Will. And my sweet [Jesus] that does as (a) spokesman to a Volition so holy, visiting my little soul, said to me:

"My blessed daughter, I want to still tell you what good one act more encloses that the creature can do in my Volition. My Will is life and doesn't know how to work, nor do anything, if it doesn't generate life, nor can he make of it less. Now every act more that one does in Him, the generative act that he possesses becomes enclosed, the creature with doing her act, lends the veil where to form and to hide this Divine birth, as the act is completed, thus my Will turns through the entire world, in order to find the more disposed souls and he deposits his generated birth, and forms there a child of his of the kingdom of his Fiat. You see therefore what one act more is, to form one child more in my kingdom, so that how many more acts are done in Him, so much more will the kingdom of my Volition be populated. My daughter, it is a delirium of our Supreme Being that we hold, that we want that the creature live in our Volition, we will use all the astuteness of love, in order to obtain the purpose. How beautiful it is to see that our first children of the Fiat will make use with their acts, to form the new generation of the life of our Will in the creature. Our love is so much that we take (the) occasion of the act of them, in order to give this great good that encloses Heaven and earth.”

While he said this, my sweet Jesus made seen that he held in his Divine Heart all the acts done in his Volition, including also those of the Celestial Mama, that were many, and inside of every act generated the life of the Divine Will, as if they might not be able to contain anymore, he moves the step, in order to turn for all the generations and where he found some soul more disposed he drew near, embraced her, spoke to her in her ear, breathed (on/in) her, as if he might want to renew the new creation and then as in feast deposited together with the act, the life of his Volition, he didn’t want to separate the act from the life of Him, because being (the) primary act where he had generated his life, he didn’t want to detach it, wanting to serve as custodian of his same life. I in seeing this remained amazed and worried, I said to myself: possible all this? it seems to me that it gives of the incredible. And my sweet Jesus resumed his speech:

“Daughter, why do you marvel? perhaps my Will can not do that which he wants? it is enough (that) he wants it that everything is done. And then the Sun does it, that one can call the shadow of my Fiat, as it finds the flower, the plants, with the touch of its light it generates the color, the perfume, matures the plants and generates the sweetness in the fruits, and so many colors and such diversity of sweetness for how many flowers and fruits it touches with its light and warms with its heat, but if the Sun doesn’t find neither flowers, nor fruits, nor invests anything with its light and with its heat, it gives nothing, it retains in itself all the goods that it possesses. Such is my Will, more than Sun as he finds the creature that wants him, he calls her in his act, descends in the depths of the human act, invests it, warms it, transforms it, and since he possesses life, he generates life and forms there a Divine portent. And as Sun if he doesn’t find one who wants to live in my Volition and there form her acts, to my so many divine lives that I could give, they remain in Him, waiting with unconquered and divine patience, one who lets me generate my life in her acts.

“My Will is as a tender mother, that feels in himself the long generation of his lives, that he wants to go forth to the light, in order to form the long generation of his children, that should form his kingdom, and therefore he goes finding one who lends her acts to him, but do you know why he goes finding the acts of the creature? Having to descend in the depths of the human acts, in order to form his life, he wants to make himself through means of them a way in order to give his same life to creatures, more so that life can not be formed outside of persons, but always within, otherwise it would lack the necessary things, the vital humors, in order to form a life. Thus my Will can not form his life from Heaven, nor outside of the creature, but must descend inside of them, and the human will must surrender the place to the Divine, must be concurrent, because we don’t want forced things. And when we have found her, who can tell you that which we do? the graces that we pour forth, the good that we want, it doesn’t deal with works but our life that we must raise, hence we don’t spare anything and one will know that which we have done only in Heaven. Therefore be attentive and live always under the rain of my Volition, thus investing all your acts he animates them with his life, and thus you will give me so many children for how many acts you will do.”

* * *

March 18, 1937

The Divine Will makes (a) gift of all his works to whom lives in Him. The breath of God in his works and in all the holy works of creatures. The Divine Will makes himself supplier of that which the creature lacks.

I was doing my round in the Divine Fiat, in order to follow his Divine acts, the Creation and all the holy acts of creatures for how much it is possible to me, not excluding neither those of my Celestial Mother, nor those of my Dear Jesus; but the great (thing) was, that as I retraced them making them mine, the Divine Volition gave them to me and I as if I might have right over everything offered them to my Creator, as the most beautiful homage, the most intense love, the most profound adoration, to He who had created me. I felt invested by the Sun, by the Sky with all the stars, by the wind, by everything, everything was mine, because everything was of the Divine Will. I remained amazed and my sweet Jesus, repeating his brief little visit said to me:

“My blessed daughter, why do you marvel? you should know that all that which is holy and good belongs to my Fiat, Whom wants to give everything to one who lives together with Him, an exchange on both parts happens, the creature doesn’t want to hold anything for herself, she wants to give everything, and my Volition wants to give everything to her, even himself. More so that the Creation, the Redemption, the Queen of Heaven, all the good and holy acts, are none other than God’s breath; he breathed and said Fiat and created all the Creation, he breathed and called the Most Holy Virgin to life, he breathed and made the Eternal Word descend upon the earth, he breathes and gives life to the good works of all creatures. Now who lives in mine, doesn’t do other than to retrace all his works, in order to find his Divine breath, in order to bring them to God, as fruits and power of the breath of her Creator. Oh! how glorified, loved he feels because he finds in the works offered to him by the creature, his breath, his same life, and how many times she turns in his works so many times he feels re-given his life, his glory, his love, and oh! how he awaits these presents, because he feels re-given that which he has given, he feels re-loved in his works, as He has loved, he feels his love, his Power recognized, and so much is the Divine satisfaction that he pours torrents of love and of graces toward who has known his works and his love.

“Behold therefore my daughter, that my Will, as the creature lives together with Him, thus with a love without equal, he makes (a) gift of all that which he possesses, he makes her mistress of everything, because if a thing is not one’s (own), one doesn’t have the right to be able to give it to the others. Therefore my Volition making her (a) gift of everything, gives her wide field to be able to give to her Creator, and to receive his exchange doubled. But then this gift becomes made when she recognizes our works, appreciates them, loves them, the love gives her the right to make hers that which belongs to my Eternal Volition, if my Volition might not make (a) gift to the creature of all that which is his, he would feel impeded in love, separated in his works, because he could not say that which is mine is yours, that which I do you do. My Will would not support this, he would say: to live together, to form life itself and to not be able to give everything to her, this is impossible to my love, it would be as if I might not be able to entrust myself to her, no, no, I want to give everything to one who lives in my Will.

“You should know that the love of my Fiat is so much toward who lives in Him, that if the creature not for will, but for weakness and impotence, doesn’t follow all the acts of my Volition, or yet through necessity of sufferings or other, her life doesn’t flow in Him, so much is his love that He does that which the creature should do, he makes up for her in everything, recalls his attitude, his order, his love, so that the soul shakes herself and resumes her life together, and this in order to have that the human life might not be neither divided, nor separated from his; if he would not do this, the Divine void would remain, but his love doesn't tolerate it, and he does as supplier to that which the creature lacks, because he wants that his Divine life, doesn't ever lack in her, but it must be continuous. Can one give greater love? that he arrives to say: courage, don't fear, comes with all trust to live with me, trust in me, and if you might lack to flow always in my Fiat, I will commiserate you and will take the working part, that you can not do and I will supply for you in everything. The kingdom of my Volition is kingdom of love, of trust, of accord on both parts."

* * *

March 22, 1937

Need of love that the Divine Fiat feels to be re-loved. How who lives in Him he gives so much love to her, as to make her love in all hearts and in all the Creation in order to be exchanged for the love of everyone. How the soul without the Fiat is as the earth without water. Evils of disturbance.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues, it seems to me that he does none other than to pour love over creatures, whom seeing themselves so intensely loved, can not contain this love so great, they feel the need to love He who so very loves them. One can say that the Divine love is so much, that it shakes, moves in an irresistible way to make itself loved. The arrows of love that He sends in order to wound creatures, serve them, in order to shoot He who has shot them. Now while I found myself under this abyss of love, my dear Jesus, the sweet (of) my Life, surprising me said to me:

"Daughter of my Will, you should know that our love is so much, that if in our Divine Being unhappiness, restlessness could enter, that which can not be, it would render the Divine Being the most unhappy and restless Being. Since we love with infinite and incessant love, that we can drown everything and everyone with our love, hence we feel the need to be re-loved, but alas, we wait in vain, and our love groans, goes into delirium, and instead of halting it races more, but do you know where our (love) goes to relieve and detain itself to rest a little, in order to immediately take its flight in order to pour out its continuous love? in the souls that live in my Will, because they are already drown in my love, they feel my groans, my need to be re-loved, and they immediately reciprocate me in love, and as we feel the need to be re-loved, thus they feel the necessity themselves, the need to be loved by He who so very loves them.

"Now my daughter, our Volition circulates as blood in all the hearts of creatures, in all the Creation, there is no point where he isn't found, his center is extensible as through everything, and with his powerful and creative love as within a single breathe/[fiato], he conserves and gives life to everything and everyone and in every thing he develops his life of love. So why does he create? because he loves; why does he conserve and circulate in everyone? because he loves. Now who lives in our Volition we want to feel that she loves us in all hearts, how beautiful is the note of love of the creature in every heart, that if these don't love us, there is one who loves us. In the Sky, in the Sun, in the wind, in the sea, in everything, we want her note of love. More so that our Volition transports her everywhere; living in Him the first gift that he makes them is love, but he gives so much as to be able to receive the exchange of the love of everyone and everything.

“So much is the delirium of love of our Divine Fiat, that he transports this note of love of the creature even in the Empyrean and he says to all the blessed: hear how beautiful is the note of love that lives in earth in my Will; and he makes this loving note resound in the Saints, in the Angels, in the Virgin, in the Sacrosanct Trinity, in a way that all feel the double glory of it and they celebrate the Divine Will working in the creature, and together they celebrate the creature that has let him work, so that she is upon the earth and becomes celebrated in Heaven. My Divine Will would not tolerate that one who lives in Him might not give her the exchange of the love of everything and everyone. My Divine Fiat in the love of the creature finds all that which he wants, he finds the life of her, as his, he finds the glory that is due him, he finds the appreciation, the esteem that is due him, he finds true filial trust in order to be able to give her everything. So that the love is generative, that generates all the divine goods. Therefore my daughter, be attentive you love, and (love) in my Will, and you will find so much love, that you can love everyone, and love for everyone He who loves you so much.”

After this, for the miserable circumstances of my life, that is not necessary to say on paper, better that they will be known in Heaven, I felt oppressed, annoyed and almost disturbed, without my usual peace and full abandonment in the Divine Fiat. And my sweet Jesus surprising me said to me:

“My daughter, what are you doing? don’t you know that the soul without the fullness of my Will and the full abandonment in Him, is as earth without water, as plants without Sun, as the body without the soul? And the poor creature as earth without water, it is not capable of producing a thread of grass, thus she dies of thirst and is incapable of doing one little good, she burns with thirst and there is not one who quenches her, and lacking the Sun of my Fiat, she will die in the darkness, which will darken her eyes and she will not see the good in order to know it, in order to do it, and she will lack the heat in order to mature the good itself. And then without my Will she will feel without Divine life and as the body without the soul it rots and hence it is buried, thus without the Life of my Volition, the passion[s] they rot her and they bury her in sins.

“Beyond this the oppressions, the disturbances, they stop the flight in my Will, she loses velocity and can not follow all his works, and hence if she has not followed all our works I can not bring her to take rest in the bosom of our Divinity.

“Hence be attentive, put in the hands of your Jesus the oppressions, the annoyances, that which disturbs you, and I will put them in the light and heat of my Fiat, so that they remain burnt, and you feeling yourself free, you will follow faster the flight in my Volition, nor do I want you worried, I will think to everything. My daughter, (stay) with peace, otherwise the life of my Will in you can not develop and grow as I want, and this will be greatest sorrow for me, I won’t feel free to breathe, palpate, I will feel impeded in continuing my Life in you.”

* * *

March 26, 1937

The Creation, the Humanity of Our Lord, they are the fields in which the soul develops her acts that lives in the Divine Will. How she forms Our Lord’s Humanity and the Paradise for Jesus upon the earth.

My flight in the Divine Fiat continues, and in Him I feel that everything is mine and I feel the need to know, to love that which belongs to me and that with so much love he has given me, and while I turned in the works of the Divine Volition, dear Jesus, the sweet (of) my Life, repeating his brief little visit with me, all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, how true it is that for love to arise one must possess that which one loves, if one doesn’t possess it the love doesn’t arise, not loving one’s own things is almost impossible, it is a connatural love and justice to love that which is one’s. Behold therefore I love creatures so much, I conserve them, I give them life, because they are my works, I have created them, I brought them forth to the light, they are mine, I am the heartbeat of their heartbeat, their breath, the life of their life, I can not do less than love them, if I might not love them, my love would give me continuous reproach, it would say to me: why have you created them when you should not love them? it is a right of love, to love that which is one’s own, my justice would condemn me, all my attributes would make war with me. Behold therefore that in order to be loved by creatures I say: I am your God, your Creator, your Celestial Father, I am all yours; as in fact I am. Behold also the cause that I say to one who wants to live in my Volition: everything is yours, the Sky, the Sun, all the Creation is yours, my Life is yours, my sufferings, also my breath is yours; behold therefore you feel the need to love as I feel it, to love that which is yours, that which your Jesus has given you in possession.

“Now you should know that the Creation, my Humanity, they are fields in which the soul develops her acts that does and lives in my Divine Will, having been given the possession of it she feels the need to circulate as blood in the veins, in the works of her Creator, she wants to know the Value, the good that they do, the office that they occupy, also in order to love them more, in order to appreciate them and also in order to feel more happy, more rich from the so many goods that she possesses. Behold therefore now she approaches the Sun in order to know the secrets of its light, the rainbow of its colors, the virtue of its heat, its continued miracle that it develops on the face of the earth, that only with touching it with its light it revives, colors, sweetens, transforms, and oh how she loves the Sun, because it is hers, and she more so loves He who has created it, thus she does with all the other created things, she wants to know the secret virtue that they contain in order to love them more, and in order to be thankful and love more He who has given her the possession. Hence it is no wonder that who lives in my Divine Fiat becomes called the heiress of all the Creation.

“Now from the field of the Creation she passes to the field of my Humanity, but to tell you then my daughter of the wonders that happen in this living field, not works alone, as in the Creation, but human and Divine life, they put themselves at my post, nor can I refuse them, because I am of them, they have the right over me, and I am happy that they possess me, because they will love me more. Now these creatures in this field, they repeat my life, they love with my same love, their acts fused with mine form so many Suns, Skies and stars oh how much more beautiful than those of the Creation that fill the field of my Humanity. Oh! how I feel loved and glorified, because these Suns, Skies and stars, are not mute like those of the Creation, but they are speaking Suns, with the fullness of reason, and how well they speak of my love, they speak and they love me, they speak and they tell me the story of souls and that of my love and hence they impose themselves on me that I must put them in safety, they speak and they cover themselves with my sufferings in order to repeat my Life, and I feel these souls flow in my tears, in my words, in my works and steps and I find in them the refreshment of my sufferings, my support, my defense, my refuge, and my love is so much for them that I arrive to call them my Life. Oh! how I love them, I possess them, and they possess me, to possess and to love even to folly is all the same.

“Now these souls that live in my Will are disposed to receive all the sufferings of my Humanity, because it being impossible (for me) to suffer, because glorious in Heaven, my Will with his omnipotent puff creates the sufferings, the sorrows, and forms there my living Humanity, that makes up for me in everything and they are the new saviors that put forth (their) life, in order to save the entire world. So that I from Heaven watch the earth and I find as many Jesuses, that taken by the same folly of my love, they put forth (their) life at the cost of sufferings and death, in order to say to me: I am your faithful copy, the sufferings make me smile because I enclose souls; and oh how I love them, I don't feel alone anymore, I feel happy, victorious, because having company in developing the same life, in suffering the same sufferings, in wanting that which I want, it is my greatest happiness and my paradise in earth.

“You see therefore how many great, portentous things my Divine Will knows how to do, provided that they live in Him, he forms my same living Humanity and procures for me the same joys of my Celestial Country. Therefore take to heart to always live in my Will, do not give thought of other, because if you do this, I feel my love broken in you, and if you might know how much it costs me not to be loved even for one moment, because in that moment I remain alone, you break the happiness with me, and in my delirium of love I go repeating: how (is it?), I always love her and she no. Hence be attentive because I don't want to remain alone ever.”

* * *

April 4, 1937

As the creature gives her will to God, thus (God) acquires his Divine rights over her; how three walls of strength become formed in order to not let her go outside from within the Fiat.

I am beneath the eternal waves of the Divine Volition and if some thought escapes me, these waves make themselves stronger and they suffocate my thought and my fears, in a way that immediately repacifies me and I race together with the Divine Fiat. Whence the thought often torments me [if] I still go out from inside of Him. My God, what suffering, I feel myself die only to think it. It seems to me that I won't be (the) sister anymore with created things, I will remove my place in the midst of them, they will not be mine anymore, and what will I give to my God then? (there) doesn't remain (of) me other than the pure nothing. I felt so bad in thinking this, that I felt myself tortured, and my sweet Jesus, having compassion on me and of the state in which I was reduced, raced in order to sustain me in his arms and all goodness said to me:

“My daughter, what are you doing? courage, you oppress yourself too much, and your Jesus doesn't want it, and then the same suffering that you feel means that you don't want to go out from my Divine Will, and your will is enough to me, it is the most certain pledge, and I hold it closed in my Divine Heart, as the most precious thing, so that no one touches it (but) me; of the feeling of the creature I don't make an account of it, it is for me as if it were not, and many times it serves to cast her in my arms, so that I free her from this enemy that makes her lose peace.

“Now you should know that when the soul has given me her will with firm decision, and with certain knowledge of that which she did, without wanting to know it anymore, she has already taken (the) place in mine, and I with right am the Proprietor of it, and she with right is of mine. Whence do you believe that these rights are easy to surrender? Indeed, I will use all the arts, I will put in field my power itself, so that which interests me might not become taken away; you should know what is the strongest bond between the Creator and the creature, the transfer of her will, and she remains inseparable as to not be able to separate anymore from us, we feel her life as ours, because one is the Will that animates us. Now do you believe that with a thought, with a feeling these bonds can be broken, to lose our inseparability and we to surrender that which is ours? without decided repeated acts that she wants her will, my daughter, you are mistaken. More so that so much is our love for her, that no sooner than she has given us her volition, (than) we wall up the creature, first with (a) wall of light, in a way, that if she might want to go out, the light eclipses her and she doesn't know where to move the step, because everywhere she finds light, and not knowing where to go she draws back and hides herself in the bosom of her Creator.

“The second wall is all that which my Humanity did being upon the earth, my tears, my works, steps and words, my sufferings, my wounds, my blood, they wall up around the happy creature, in order to impede her (from) the exit, because He contains the secret, the strength, the life in order to give life to whom lives in the Divine Volition, and do you believe that after having obtained the intent of conquering this will by way of sufferings, I let it escape from me that which cost me blood, life and death. Ah! you have not yet understood well my love, if it dealt with simple resignation it is easy, to do and to do not do my Will, because these have not surrendered to me their rights, their wills they hold it dear, and therefore they are now resigned, now impatient, they now love Heaven, and now the earth, but for the one who has given her will to me she has taken (the) place in the divine order, she wants and does that which we do, she feels herself queen hence it is almost impossible to go out from our Fiat, nor would she be adapted to be a servant, the slave, if she might go out from our Volition.

“The third wall is all the Creation, which feels in her the working virtue of the Divine Volition, of which all possess the life of him, and in order to make for him homage they wall themselves up around(,) the Sun with its light, the wind with its empire, in short all created things feel the creative strength, the working and always new virtue that works in the creature, while they can not do more than that which they do and they race around in order to enjoy the works of that Fiat by which they are animated. Therefore do not give it thought, enjoy the peace of that Volition that you possess, and your Jesus will think to everything.”

* * *

April 8, 1937

All that which one does in the Divine Volition constitutes a right for everyone and everyone can do that good. These rights were given by Adam, by the Queen of Heaven, by Our Lord, whom prepared for us the regal attire.

My poor mind doesn't do other than to plunge into the sea of the Supreme Fiat, and for how much I feel the Heaven of the Divine Volition in me, many times I lose Jesus in the immensity of this Heaven, and I don't find him, and his privation is the hardest martyrdom of my poor existence down here, and how much is needed in order to find him, even to make myself reduced into a state so pitiful as to feel myself die, and then he comes, now with a stratagem of love(,) now with a most surprising truth as to feel my life return even to forget the pains suffered. Ah! Jesus, how much you know how to do. Whence I thought: and why doesn't Jesus bring me into his Celestial regions? why does he make it so very hard for me? it seems to me that I see the doors and am about to give a jump in order to enter there, but then, a powerful strength makes me step backwards and return to be the poor exiled one. Whence while I thought this, my sweet Jesus all goodness and compassionating me: he said to me:

“My blessed daughter, courage, courage demolishes the strongest strongholds, it conquers the most trained armies, it weakens our power, rather if she appropriates it and courageous conquers that which she wants, and we seeing that she doesn't have the least doubt of obtaining that which she wants, because doubt diminishes courage, we give more than what she wants. My daughter courage, trust, insistence without ever ceasing, love, in our Will, they are the weapons that wound us, that weakening us we let her take from us that which she wants.

“Now I want to tell you the reason I still hold you back on this earth, you know that our Divine Will is immense, and the creature lacks, the capacity, the space to be able to embrace it all together, therefore it is necessary for her to take it sip by sip, (of) which you take them, now when you do your acts in my Volition, now when I manifest a truth that pertains to him, if you pray, if you desire, that my kingdom comes, if you suffer in order to obtain it, these are all sips that enlarge your capacity and they form the space where to enclose the sips of Him, and while you do this you come to enclose now one generation, now another, that must possess the kingdom of the Divine Fiat.

“Now you should know that the generations being as a family that everyone has the right to the inheritance of the Father and as members that form a single body and of which I am the Head, when one member does a good, holds it and possesses it, the other members acquire the right to do and to possess that good. Now you have not yet enclosed all those generations that must possess my Will as life, hence they still need the chain of your acts, your insistence, your sufferings in order to drink other sips, in order to form the space, in order to give the right that wanting they can possess my kingdom, no sooner than you will have made the last act that is needed, immediately I will bring you into the Celestial Country.

“Now my daughter, my Divine Will with his immensity involves everyone and everything, there is no being that doesn't swim in Him, therefore all that which one does becomes (the) right of everyone, and everyone can repeat that act, at the most some don't want to repeat it and possess it, and don't want to recognize that she lives in Him, and (that) her life is animated by the Divine Fiat, these are as blind ones, that while the Sun darts them with its light, they don't see it and lie as if it were night for them, they are as paralyzed, that while they can have the use of the members to do good, they are content to remain immobilized, they are as mute that they don't know how to speak, but however voluntarily blind, paralyzed and mute, but all the rest, as my Will is life and is in communication with everyone, thus all that which one can do in Him is life and good and right of everyone, and everyone can repeat that act in order to form the working Divine life in them. The first rights to make the kingdom of my Volition possessed by the human generations, was given by Adam, because He (in) the first epoch of his life, his acts were done in the Divine Volition, and although he sinned and voluntarily lost the working life of my Will in Him and He in us, but his acts remained, because that which one does in our Volition doesn't go out(side), because they are our winnings, our victories over the human volition, hence they are ours, and we never put outside that which is ours. Whence who enters in Him, finds the first love of Adam, his first acts, that gives her the right to possess our Fiat and to repeat the same acts that He did, his acts are still speaking, his love is still fused in ours, and incessantly loves us with our same love.

“Therefore the work in the Divine Volition makes itself eternal with us and is not subject to finish and puts itself at (the) disposition of everyone, in a way that only one who is ungrateful doesn't take it and doesn't want to make use of the life, in order to receive life. These rights of possessing my Will as life, was given by the Queen of Heaven, because she is also of the human stock, but in a larger way and with more sacrifices, because it cost her the life of her own Son and God, in order to give the possession of the kingdom of our Fiat to the human generations, and it having cost her so much it is (the thing) that she longs and prays for the most that her children enter into this kingdom so holy.

“There was then my descent from Heaven in earth, that taking human flesh, every act of mine, suffering, prayer, tear, sigh, work and step, constituted a right to make the kingdom of the Fiat possessed by the human generations. I can say my Humanity is yours and of everyone and who wants to enter in this kingdom will find in It the door, the rights and the regal attire in order to enter, my Humanity is the attire that must cover and dress with decency all those that will possess it. My love is so much that I call other creatures that with portentous graces and with the sacrifice of their life, I make them live in my Volition, whom constitute new rights, disbursing their life, in order to give the possession of my kingdom to the human family. Therefore always race your will in mine, so that your acts completed can emit the flight to the Celestial Country.”

* * *

April 18, 1937

Continuous meetings between the Divine Volition and the creature. How who lives in Him has formed the little tiny sea of the Fiat. How he always races in everything in order to give new graces and new love.

My flight in the Fiat continues, rather I feel that he comes to meet me in every instant, in everything that I touch, that I do, in the sufferings and in the joys, in every created thing, that he puts them around me in order to let me use them, it seems to me that he is as spying, in order to make himself known, in order to say to me: I am here, tell me what you want, you will make me more happy if you put me in the condition of being able to abound more (on) you, so that felicitating you, I feel more happy, for the happiness of my daughter. Now while my mind was drowned in his Divine sea, my beloved Jesus surprising me with his brief little visit, with a love that he could not contain, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, the excessive love of the Divine Will gives of the incredible, when the creature lives in Him, has formed his little sea of the Fiat in her soul, the which pulled by his same power he wants to magnify always more this little sea of his, in the circle of the soul. You feel what he does, taken with irresistible love he races, races always in every act that she does, if he sees that she must make use of the word, he races, goes to meet her, invests the word with his Fiat and increases his Divine power in the word of the creature, if he sees that she must work he races, takes her hands, squeezes them together, invests them with his Fiat, and augments his divine power in the works of her, if he sees that she is about to move the step he races, invests them and gives them such power as to race always, toward who always races toward her, if she loves he races in order to give her new love, if he sees that she desires that she wants to be always more good, he races and augments his goodness, there is no thought, heartbeat and breath, that he doesn't invest with his Fiat, in order to make his wisdom, his beauty, the heartbeat of his eternal love grow.

“But it is still not everything, do you believe that my Volition can come to a standstill, in always racing toward who possesses his Volition? Indeed, in order to race he makes use of everything, if the Sun invests her, he races in order to give her more light and since the creature is more than the Sun he gives her the properties that the light contains, rather he augments them, he gives her his Divine sweetness, his fecundity, the variety of his Celestial perfumes, the taste of his divine flavors, his supreme qualities as the most beautiful varieties of the colors, and does it in a way with the power of his Fiat, that his beloved creature, more than Sun (there) doesn't remain other for her, but Light and heat, in order to invest her and to make himself invested; if the wind blows (on) her, he races, invests her and with his Fiat, he augments the power of his ruling love, his divine groans, in order to make her groan with his same groans and sighs that his kingdom come upon the earth, he kisses her, caresses her, squeezes her strongly, in order to make her feel how much he loves her and how he wants to be re-loved, if she drinks water he races, in order to invest her with his freshness and Celestial refreshments, if she takes food he races, in order to feed her with the food of his Will, so that the divine life grows in the creature, he re-confirms himself and confirms himself all the more in her.

“In short there is nothing (in) which my Volition doesn't race and oh, the feast that he makes, when he sees that she receives this sweet meeting and receives the good that without ever ceasing he wants to give her, and if the creature also races in everything, toward who races toward her, oh then my Fiat is taken by so much love, that his interminable sea swells, forms its highest waves and discharges in the little tiny sea magnifying in a marvelous and prodigious way, the capacity and breadth of his in the little sea of the soul. My daughter, these are our Divine ways, to always love, without ever ceasing, to always give, without ever finishing to give, if this were not so we should put a limit to our power, an enough to our love, but not even we are able to do it, because our Being being infinite, by himself he races in search of who loves and wants to be re-loved, therefore limits don't have value and the enough doesn't exist for us. At the most some ungrateful ones don't want to recognize us and not recognizing us, it happens as to a blind one, that in spite that the Sun doesn't deny him its light, indeed it invests him as through everyone, he doesn't see, nor does he knows it, but he can not deny that he feels its heat.

“But this can not happen for one who lives in our Volition, already He himself holds her in sentinel, in (the) act of continuous expectation of receiving our meetings, in order to meet us, our courses in order to race to us, and if our love in order to make her race more, hides our courses, while we race the same, oh! how the poor daughter is racked with spasms, so much so that we are constrained to immediately break the veil of concealment and say to her: we are here, quiet yourself, do not fear that we will ever leave our daughter, the daughter of our Volition; and in order to quiet her we make her feel our love more alive, and we abound with greater graces.

* * *

April 25, 1937

Prodigy of the working act of the Divine Will in the creature. How who lets him work in her is the longed for one, the welcomed one, the darling of the whole Celestial Court. All that which one does in Him, acquires the virtue to produce divine life.

I was thinking of the Divine Will working in the creature. My God, how many surprises, how many moving scenes, how many wonders and prodigies, that only a God can do, and the human littleness remains stupefied, enchanted, in seeing the immensity of the Divine Fiat that while he remains immense he encloses himself in her little act and with the creative power forms there his working act, with a chain of Divine prodigies unheard of, but it such and so much that the Heavens are stupefied and the earth trembles, before the working act of the Divine Volition in the creature; but while my mind lost itself in these surprises, my Highest Good Jesus, repeating his brief little visit, all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of the Supreme Fiat, so much is our love, that no sooner than the creature calls our Volition in her act, that he races and descends in the act of her, indeed to call him is none other than to prepare the little spot where he should work, calling him means to love him and that one feels the need of the working act of my Will, so that hers doesn’t work alone, but remains as footstool and admirer of a Volition so Holy. Whence descending he carries with himself his creative virtue, his joys and celestial beatitudes, the same Sacrosanct Trinity, as spectator and actor of his work, and while in the little spot of the creature he pronounces his Fiat, forms such prodigies and wonders, that the Sky, the Sun remain behind, and it exceeds all the beauty of the Creation, he creates there his divine music, the most refulgent suns, he creates there his working Life, his new joys, it is such and so much this act that the Angels, the saints, would like to empty the Celestial regions in order to enjoy the working act of their Creator Fiat. It is such and so much the beauty, the sumptuousness, the vivifying virtue of this Divine act that my Divine Volition carries it in Heaven, as conquest and triumph of the soul in which he has worked, in order to gladden with new joys and beatitudes all the Celestial Court, it is such joy, the glory that they receive, that they don’t do other than to thank my Divine Volition that with so much love he has worked in the creature, because there is neither glory, nor greater joy than his working and conquering act in her.”

And I in hearing this surprised said: My love, if this act is carried in Heaven, the poor creature remains without, and as fasting of this act. And Jesus added:

“No, no, my daughter, the act is always hers, no one can take it away and while it gladdens the Celestial Country, it remains as base, foundation and property in the depth of the soul, the conquest is hers and while it gladdens the celestial court, she loses nothing, rather she feels in herself the creative and continuous virtue of my Fiat in act of always making new conquests, and while it remains in the soul, at the same time it is carried in Heaven, as new glory and joy of the Saints and as beneficent rain to all the wayfarers, more so that the human family is bound with Heaven, and Heaven with the earth, there is a bond between them, that everyone has the right to participate in the good that they do, they are members united between them and as connatural the good races in order to give itself to everyone. And then as my Will works in the soul, Heaven puts itself in expectation, because They, swimming in the Fiat, they feel that he is about to work, and therefore they put themselves at attention, they demand, they long to receive the new conquests and joys of the life of the Divine Will that they possess. He is primary life of the Saints in Heaven, hence in the acts that He does everyone concurs, therefore with right they want to receive the new joys and the beautiful conquests, that my Will knows how to do. Whence who lets him work in her acts, is the new joy of Heaven, the welcomed one, the darling, the longed for one of all the Celestial court, more so that there are no joys of conquests up there, and therefore they await them from the earth. Oh! if everyone might know all these secrets of my Divine Fiat, they would put forth (their) life in order to live of Him and to make him reign in the entire world.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will, nor can I do less, I feel him inside of me, that he gives me life, I feel him outside of me, that as the most tender of Mothers carries me between her arms, feeds me, raises me and defends me from everything and from everyone and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, how beautiful is my Will, no one can boast to love the creature as He loves her, so much is his love, that He wants to do everything for her, he doesn’t want to entrust it to anyone, with his Fiat he creates her, he raises her, feeds her, carries her always between his arms of light, does for her (as) Teacher teaching her the most sacred sciences, reveals to her the most concealed and hidden secrets of our Supreme Being, puts her to (light)/knowledge of our love, of the flames that burn us, in order to make her burn together with us, in every act that she does, he never leaves her alone, he races in order to put there his life. So that every act is animated by his Divine Life, and possessing the virtue to be able to produce Divine life. And my Will takes these lives from within the acts of the creature in order to give Divine life, life of grace, life of light, life of sanctity, to the other creatures and life of glory to all the Celestial court, He is the true busybody, he wants to give himself to everyone through means of one who lives in his Volition. And when he has formed the fullness of his masterpiece, he carries her to Heaven, as triumph, victory of his power and Divine art, that he knows and can do in the creature, provided that she lends herself to live with Him and lets herself be carried in his arms. Therefore be attentive and let a Volition so Holy work, that loves you so much and that wants to be loved.”

* * *

May 6, 1937

How Jesus doesn’t know what to do with a soul that doesn’t possess peace. (For) who lives in the Divine Volition God makes for them (a) gift of all his works, and also of his Life itself, in order to make them see how much and how he wants to be loved.

My abandonment in the Divine Volition continues, my poor mind, oppressed for the incidents of life, for me too sorrowful, I search my refuge in the center of the Fiat, in which I feel reborn to new life, rejuvenated, re-made from my sorrowful stages, but as I draw away from his center, my oppressions re-arise so much as to feel the just reproaches of my Dear Jesus, even to say to me: “My daughter, mind, because I don’t know what to do with a soul that it is not pacific, peace is my celestial sojourn, the bell that with its vibrating and sweet sounds calls my Volition to reign, is peace. Peace possesses voices so powerful that it calls all Heaven, puts it at attention in order to make it be spectator of the beautiful conquests of the work of the Divine Volition in the creature. Peace puts in flight the fearful tempests and makes arise the celestial smile of the Saints, the most beautiful enchantment of a Spring(time) that never finishes, therefore do not give me this sorrow to not see you in peace.” Whence I searched how much more I could to plunge myself in the Divine Volition in order not to feel myself anymore, following his acts, as much of the Creation as that of the Redemption, and my beloved Jesus, invested my intellect and with his creative voice, all love he said to me:

“My blessed daughter, leave yourself, and come into my Will, we feel the extreme need to make known where our love arrives for one who lives in Him. And so much is our love that with anxiety we await that she unite herself, identify herself, to our works in order to give the right to her as if they might be hers. And since our creative strength is always in act, as she identifies with us, as if we might renew our works, we make for her (the) gift and we tell her: they are your works, do with them that which you want, with our works in your power you can love us how much you want, you can give us glory in an infinite way, you can do good to whom you want, you take right not only over our works but over He who has created everything, and we take right over you that already you are ours. How sweet are these rights of the human littleness in our Divine Being, they are sweet and loving chains, that make us love with more intense and strong love our creative work, and in our emphasis of love we go repeating: how beautiful she is, she is ours, all ours, and we are everything for her, there doesn’t remain other than to love each other, we will love her with eternal love, and she will love us with eternal love.”

I remained surprised as if I might want to put forth a doubt. And Jesus added:

“Daughter, don’t wonder, it is the pure truth that your Jesus tells you, that wanting to be loved, he wants to make known where the creature can arrive and how much he loves her, as if he might not content her with our interminable joys, we want the contentment, that she possesses that which we possess, and she loves us as we know how to love. You see for one who lives in our Divine Volition it is almost connatural, she finds our Fiat in the act of creating the Sky, the Sun, she unites herself to that act in order to do that which He does, such is our goodness, that with the union we have formed the marriage together and in our Volition, we have formed the decided act to give the Sky, the Sun as a gift to the creature. With this gift she gives us the glory of an extended Sky, she loves us in every point of it, does the good to creatures to make them possess and enjoy a Sky, and since she holds the Sun in her power, she gives us the glory, that the terrestrial globe possesses the light, every man that remains invested by the light and heat of the Sun, is one more glory that she gives us, a little sonata of love that she makes us, that enraptures our love to love more, every plant, every fruit and flower, fecundated and warmed by its heat is one cry more of glory and love that she gives us, the little bird that sings to the rising of the Sun, the little lamb that bleats, they are all accents of glory and of love that she sends us, and the merit of so many goods that the Sun does to the earth, that are incalculable, of whom are they? of whom lives in our Volition, in Him that which is ours is hers and since we don’t need merits, having made a gift of it, we leave the meritorious part to her, and for exchange we always want her cry of love and in every thing, and thus with the good that all created things do, the wind, the air, the water and everything.”

Whence I in hearing this not only remained amazed, but wanted to make a lot of difficulties, and passing to the acts of the Redemption, I found myself immersed in his sufferings, and my always amiable Jesus, perhaps in order to convince me made himself seen in my interior in the act of suffering the sorrowful Crucifixion, I took part in his pains and died together with Him, his divine blood flowed, his wounds were opened. And He with a tender and moving accent, as to feel my heart break said to me:

“I am within you, I am yours, I am at your disposition, my wounds, my blood, all my sufferings are yours, you can do with me that which you want, rather do it as magnanimous, as valiant, as lover, as my true imitator, take my blood in order to give it to whom you want, take my wounds in order to heal the wounds of sinners, take my life in order to give life of grace, of sanctity, of love, of Divine Will, to all souls, take my death in order to make so many souls dead in sin re-arise. I give you all liberty, you do it, you know how to do it my daughter, I have given myself and it’s enough, you will think (to make) everything redound to me (in) glory and how to make me loved. My Will will give you flight in order to make you bring my blood, my wounds, my kisses, my paternal tenderness, to my children, and to your brothers. Therefore do not marvel, this is truly the divine work, to hold his works in (the) act of repeating them continually in order to give them, in order to make (them) a gift to creatures, each one can say everything is mine, also God himself is mine, and oh, how we enjoy seeing them gifted by our works, possessors of their Creator. They are the excesses of our love, that in order to be loved we want to make touched/(felt) how much we love them and the gifts that we want to give them. For who lives then in our Volition, we feel as if we might defraud the creature if we don’t make for them a gift of everything, and this we don’t know how to do. Hence be attentive, make that your soul is embalmed by our divine peace, because we don’t know what disturbance is, and all things will bring you the smile, the sweetness, the love of your Creator.”

* * *

May 10, 1937

How God makes himself food of the creature; the exchange, the harmonizing, the speaking of both parts forms the most beautiful works. How the Queen of Heaven continues the office of Mother and she raises her Son in creatures.

The sea of the Divine Volition continues to inundate me, and I being incapable and unable at everything, it seems that he is delighted as to a tiny little one to feed me with his hands, more than maternal, the food of his Fiat, and teaching me word by word, syllable by syllable, the first vowels, of the science of the Divine Will and when it seems that in some way I have understood him, oh! how he makes festive, because he feels the whole certainty of forming a soul all of Divine Will. And I in seeing his maternal cares, how content I am of it and I thank him from the heart. And my beloved Jesus as spokesman of his Volition, all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, every truth that I manifest to you on my Fiat is a growth that you make of Him, it is one mouthful more, that serves in order to fortify you, warm you and conform you all the more in Him, it is one sip more that you drink from the immense sea of my Will, it is one Divine property more that you acquire. Now you must know, that every act more that you do in Him, we prepare before you our Celestial table, and if you love, he feeds you our love, if you pass to understand us, he feeds you our Wisdom, and oh how many beautiful news and knowledges he gives you of your Creator, so that your God becomes your choice food, therefore in all that which you do, now he feeds you with our Power, now with our Goodness, now with our sweetness, now with our fortitude, light and our mercy. Hence the human littleness, with living in our Eternal Volition absorbs us sip by sip, mouthful by mouthful, because being little, also for how much it is possible for a creature to take all together that which she must take of our Divine Being, more so that this serves to delight each other, we to give, and she to receive, we to give of ours, and she to give us her littleness, we to work her as we want, and she who lends herself to let us work; it is the exchange on both parts, the harmonizing ourselves to each other, the speaking to each other, that forms our most beautiful works and we develop the life of our Will in the creature, without doing anything, she does nothing. Therefore it is necessary to work, to speak, to make ourselves understood, to work, in order to make beautiful statues, the repeaters of our life.

“Hence when we find one who wants to listen to us, to give themselves to us, in order to receive, we don’t spare anything, of that [which] we are able and know how to do for creatures. Now my daughter, when the creature is fed with our Fiat, even to not knowing other food, and having formed the chain of her acts, all sealed by the characteristics of divine virtues, God remains imprisoned in his divine virtues in the creature, and then, if she loves it is God that makes display of the power of his love, of his goodness, sanctity, et cetera, in the acts of the creature, so that the power is such that goes forth through means of these acts that God does in the creature, that it invests Heaven and earth, flutters over all souls and with his powerful love, invests them, sweeps them away, makes her give the kiss of the Divine Volition in a way that the human family will feel his power, his love, that wants to reign.

“More so, that the hidden God gives them this right, through means of a creature that belongs to their human race. Rights that they can not refuse to acknowledge, unless some perfidious, but my power will know (how) to knock down and conquer. Whence leave me to complete the work of my Will in you, do not oppose in anything, and you and I will be content to see him reign in the other creatures.”

After this I made Holy Communion and in my interior my Dear Jesus made himself seen, tiny, tiny, and the Celestial Mother extended her azure mantle over me and the Divine Child, then I don’t know how I felt her inside of me, that she kissed, caressed, took in her arms her Dear Son, she squeezed him to (her) Heart, raised him, fed him, made for him a thousand stratagems of love, I was (a) spectator and amazed. And the Sovereign Celestial Mama said to me, but with a love that made one astonish:

“My daughter there is nothing to be amazed about. I am inseparable from my dear Jesus, where there is the Son, the Mother must be, this is my assignment to raise him in souls. He is tiny, souls do not understand how they must raise him, nor do they have the milk of love in order to feed him, in order to quiet his weeping, in order to warm him when they make him numb from the cold, I who am the Mama I know the little needs of my Divine Child, nor would He know how to remain without his Mama, we are inseparable all and two, I repeat in souls that which I did in his infantile age, and while I raise my Son, lending them all the care in order to make him happy, at the same time I take care of the daughter in order to raise her according that she wants my Son. This is my mission more than Celestial, as I see my Son in souls thus I race, I descend in them and I occupy myself with his growth.

“Much more so that being one the Will of my Son with mine, (it is) as connatural where one finds Him there also am I, and accordingly my love imposes itself to develop the office of Mother, to He who loves me so much and to those people that we love so much, because I feel (them) as twins born at one birth, my Son God and the creature, how not to love them? Then with an accent more tender and moving she added:

“My daughter, how beautiful it is, great (and) prodigious the virtue of the Divine Will. He empties all that which is neither light, nor Divine, he unites the most remote distances, repeats in act, that which had been done through centuries and centuries and makes it as connatural the human act in the Divine, it is his creative strength, that arrives to bilocate, to multiply, to transform his same Life in the creature. Therefore love him a great deal and deny him nothing.”

* * *

May 16, 1937

The truths Divine birth, and it is the greatest miracle that God can do, and the great good that it carries to creatures.

I am always re-turning in the sea of the Divine Volition, the so many truths manifested to me, they crowd in my little mind as so many refulgent Suns, each one of which wants to tell the story of the Divine Fiat, but one distinct from the other, some want to tell the story of his eternal light, some of his sanctity, some of the way how he forms his life in the center of the soul, in short all have something to say of a Volition so holy, and all have a special assignment to be carrier of the good that each one encloses, that united together formed one life alone. However, in order to be able to deposit the good that they enclose, they want to be listened to, the doors of the soul opened, recognized and as if prayed to and appreciated, in order to make the life that they contain deposited, I lost myself in the midst of so many messengers, that all wanted to tell the eternal story of the Fiat. And my Highest Good Jesus, repeating his brief little visit to me, with an indescribable love said to me:

“My little Daughter of the Divine Volition, you should know that the greatest miracle, that our Divine being can do is to manifest a truth that pertains to us, because It first becomes formed, matured in our bosom and as our birth we bring it forth, as carrier of Divine Life to (the) good of creatures. And then we bring forth this birth, when our love raises its flames so much, that in order not to remain drowned, we feel the need to put forth our divine births. You see therefore what we put forth with manifesting a truth, not the Sky, the Sun, the wind, but our life, as bearer of Divine life to creatures, the other miracles, the creation itself are our works, not life, instead truths are perennial life, and if they find one who receives them, they bilocate themselves, multiply themselves in an incredible way for every creature, so much so that each one can hold it for herself as life that belongs to her. These truths as our births, they resemble us in everything to our Supreme Being, they are not voice and they speak, and they make spoken, they don't have feet and they walk, but so fast, that no one can catch up to them, nor impede (their) step, they enter in the intelligence and form the thought in order to make themselves known, they transmute the will in order to make themselves possessed, they renew the memory in order not to forget, they walk in the ways of the heart in order to make themselves loved. So that they don't have hands and they work, they don't have eyes and they look, they don't have heart and they generate love.

“The truths are none other than palpitating lives of our Divine Being in the midst of creatures, heartbeat without heart, because our heart is the creature, and we as most pure Spirit, that we find ourselves everywhere, we are the heartbeat, that while it isn't seen, it is felt and we form the life and we give it to all the human generations. Whence there [is] no miracle similar to the great miracle of when we bring forth from us a truth, it is a life of ours that we expose, which more than Sun, it will make itself light of creatures that darting them with its vital heat, will mature its life, first to whom it becomes directed and then to diffuse itself in whom wants to receive it, and if they find ungrateful ones that don't want to receive such a good, They are not subject neither to die, nor to lose life, but they wait, with unconquered patience, if needs be centuries, new generations, to which they will give the goods that they possess and they will complete the purpose why they went forth from the Divine bosom.

“We in bringing forth our truths we look at the centuries, and when we are certain that they will bilocate, will multiply our lives in the midst of creatures, then we bring it forth in order to give the good that they possess and in order to receive the Divine honor and glory, that our truths possess. We don't ever do useless things, do you believe that the so many truths that we have manifested to you on our Will with so much love they won't bring forth their fruit and they won't form the life of Themselves in souls? quite, if we brought them forth it is because we know (with) certainty that they will bring forth their fruit and they will establish the kingdom of our Volition in the midst of creatures, and if not today, because it seems to them that is not food adaptable for them, and perhaps despised, that which could form Divine life in them, (the) time will come that they will compete for whom will know these truths more, with knowing them they will love them, the love will render adaptable food for them and thus they will form the life that my truths will offer them.

“Therefore do not give it thought it is (a) question of time, I know how things will go, I will not stop, I continue to manifest my truths, and you follow your flight, and lend yourself to listen to me and to put them in practice.”

* * *

May 23, 1937

How the Divine Will is order and peace and it is the sign where He reigns. Who lives in the Divine Volition is always renewed in Divine sanctity, love and freshness and in her act races the creative and growing act of the divine goods.

The sea of the Divine Volition murmurs continually, but with such harmony, order and peace, his waves although most high, are always pacific and as they invest creatures, Heaven and earth, first they give her (an) embrace and the kiss of peace, and then they enter in her soul, if they don't receive the kiss of peace, it seems that they pass ahead of her, because where there is not peace one is not adapted (for) the Divine Volition, there is no place for Him. But while my mind was lost in this sea, my always amiable Jesus, visiting my little soul, with a Divine sweetness and peace, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, my Will is order, and the sign if he reigns in the soul is perfect order, which generates peace. So that peace is the daughter of order, order is the immediate son and generated by my Fiat. But you don't know what great good order produces, He gives dominion to the creature and renders her dominator of herself, dominator of all created things and since her dominion is divine, because generated by my Volition, she dominates over my Will himself and over everyone.

“But (this) is not everything yet, the virtue of order is admirable, he binds himself with everyone, he gives his pacifying and dominating waves, he takes and makes his the strength of the Creation, that of the Saints that are in Heaven, the Divine strength itself, he makes it his, his orderly and pacific ways are so penetrating and insinuating that everyone lets him do it, more so that he has given himself to everyone, he has retained nothing for himself, it is just that everyone gives themselves to him. Therefore one feels in oneself the peace, the joy, the happiness of the Celestial sojourn. Everyone feels united, bound with inseparable union, because that which my Will unites is not subject to separation.

“Whence true order carries the union, the accord with everyone, and has a place in everyone, and everyone will find a little place in him, that she will love with that same love, with which their Creator himself loves them. They are the prodigies that my omnipotent Fiat knows how to do, where He reigns, he doesn’t know how to do other than works that resemble him, and they generate in the soul the effects that form his Life itself, so much so that no one will be able to object to anything, and I must be able to say: no one touches me, nor can they touch her, because it is my Will and if someone might dare to, I will know how to defend myself, my love will be converted for them into fire of Justice and I will humiliate them into the dust. Therefore be attentive that everything is order and peace in you, if you feel something contrary put yourself on watch and pray to me, press me that with my dominion I knock down all that which is not order and perennial peace.”

Whence I followed to think of the Divine Will and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, as the creature calls my Will in her acts, in order to live in Him, He invests the creature, and her act, with his creative strength, and he renews his Divine life; and suppose that she calls him while she is working, do you sense what my Volition does: he calls in act how many times she has worked, unites them together, as if they might be one act alone and putting forth his creative strength, transforms into divine all that which she has done and is doing, seals there the sanctity of his works, and gives her the new merit and glory, as if she might have worked everything again, for his love, if she loves, he calls to life how many times she has loved, and makes one love alone of it, if she suffers, he calls to life how many times she has suffered, unites them together, and puts there the seal of divine pains and gives the new merit to her of how many times she has loved and suffered, in short all that which she has done and repeats, all re-turns in act, with uniting herself together in order to receive the new beauty, sanctity, grace, freshness, love and new merit; in my Will there are not separate acts, nor divisions, but highest unity, everything must give of me, with this difference alone, that in the creature, there is our creative and growing act, instead our Supreme Being, is not subject neither to grow, nor to decrease, so much is our fullness, immensity and infinity, that for vent of our love we feel the need of giving and of loving creatures, and to be loved, but without diminishing (in) anything.

“Behold therefore we are all eyes, we are on watch, in order to see when she wants to have life in our Volition, in order to have (the) occasion to love her more, and to enrich her with our love, in order to receive love. We can say, that we cover her with our Divine Being, we harmonize her with us, in order to enjoy ourselves with her and to give her of ours and when she shaken by the fibers of our love, by our burning breath, that says continually to her I love you, I love you, oh daughter, and she makes our echo and repeats to us: I love you, I love you, Life of my life, Love of my love, my Father, Creator mine, all mine, I love you; she puts us in feast and gives us the pure joys that we want because we have given her life.

“Therefore we want her in our Will, in order to hold her as we want, in order to give her that which we want to give her, and in order to receive that which we want from Her; outside of our Fiat, our love for her remains impeded, there is such separation between her and us, that she arrives to feel herself distanced from us and we distant from her, and she even arrives to fear us, and to be afraid of us: human will where it casts the creature (from) me that I love so much.”

* * *

May 28, 1937

The Queen Bearer of Jesus, the great gift that was consigned to her. Assignment that she had from the Supreme Being.

The living in the Divine Volition continues, so much is his love that he hides me in his light, so that I don't see, don't feel, don't touch but his Most Holy Will. Rather this morning my Celestial Mother, has made for me a sweet and dear surprise, having made Holy Communion, she made herself seen in my interior that she was as in harmony with the baby Jesus, she held him so tightly to her Maternal Heart, covered with her arms, that in order to look at him and recreate with my little love, I had to abandon myself between her arms in order to also be in harmony with them, so that I might be able to love, as Jesus and the Queen Mama loved. Oh! how content they were that I wanted to have life together with them. Now while I was pressed with them, the Sovereign Queen all goodness and tenderness said to me:

“My dear daughter, you should know that I am the bearer of Jesus, this was a gift that the Supreme Being entrusted to me, and when he was certain that I held grace, love, power and the Divine Will himself, in order to keep him guarded, defended, loved, then he made for me the consignment of the gift, that is the Eternal Word, that incarnated himself in my bosom saying to me: ‘Our daughter, we make for you the great gift of the Life of the Son God, so that you are proprietress of him and you give him to whom you want, however know him(,) keep him defended, do not leave him ever alone to whomever you give him to, in order to make up for if they don't love him, in order to (make) reparation to him if they offend him, you will do in a way that he lacks nothing for the decency, for the sanctity, for the purity that is appropriate to him, be attentive, it is the greatest gift that we make you, and we give you the power of bilocating him how many times you want, so that who wants him, can receive this great gift and possess him.’ Now this Son is mine, he is my gift, and as mine I know his loving secret, his anxieties, his longings but so much so, that he arrives to cry and with repeated hiccups he says to me: ‘My Mama give me to souls, I want souls;’ I want that which He wants, I can say that I sigh and cry together, because I want that everyone possesses my Son, but I must put his Life in security, the great gift that God entrusted me (with).

“Behold therefore if he descends in hearts Sacramentally, I descend together with him for guarantee of my gift, I can not leave him alone, my poor Son, if he might not have his Mama that descended together with him, how badly they deal with him, some don't tell him an I love you (from the) heart, and I must love him, some receive him distracted, without thinking of the great gift that they receive, and I pour myself over Him in order not to let him feel their distractions and coldness, some arrive to make him cry, and I must quiet his weeping, and make sweet reproaches to the creature that, they might not make him cry for me. How many moving scenes happen in the hearts that receive him Sacramentally, there are souls that do not ever content themselves with loving him, and I give them my love, and also his, in order to make one love, these are scenes of Heaven, and the Angels themselves remain enraptured by it, and we encourage ourselves from the sufferings that the other creatures have given us.

“But who can tell you everything? I am the Bearer of Jesus, nor does He want to go without me, so much so that when the Priest is about to pronounce the words of the Consecration over the Holy host, I make wings with my Maternal hands, so that he descends by means (of) my hands, in order to consecrate him, so that if unworthy hands touch him, I make (him) feel mine that defend him and cover him with my love.

“But this is not enough, I always remain to watch in order to see if they want my Son, so much so that if some sinner repents of his grave sins and the light of grace dawns in his heart, I immediately bring Jesus to them, as he confirms with pardon, and I think to everything of that which is needed in order to make him remain in that converted heart. I am the Bearer of Jesus, and I am because I possess in myself the kingdom of his Divine Will. He reveals to me who wants him, and I race, I fly in order to bring him, however without ever leaving him, and not only am I Bearer, but spectator, listener of that which he does and says to souls.

“Do you believe, that I was not present to listen to the so many lessons that my Dear Son made you on his Divine Will? I was present, I listened word by word that which he said to you, and in every word I thanked my Son and I felt myself doubly glorified, that he spoke of the reign that I already possessed, that has been all my fortune and the cause of the great gift of my Son, and in seeing him speaking I saw grafted the fortune of my children with mine, oh! how I rejoiced, all the lessons that he has given you and also more, they are already written [in] my Heart and in seeing them repeated to you, I enjoyed in every lesson one Paradise more, and how many times you were not attentive and you forgot, I asked pardon for you, and prayed that he might repeat his lessons, and He in order to content me because he doesn't know how to deny anything to his Mama, repeated his beautiful lessons to you. My daughter I am always with Jesus, however at times I hide in Him and it seems that He does everything as if he might be without me, instead I am within, I (am) concurrent together and I am to light of that which he does. Other times he is hidden in his Mama and has (things) done by me, but He is always concurrent together. Other times we reveal both of us together, and the souls see, the Mother and the Son who love them so much, according to the circumstances and the good they require and many times it is the love that we can not contain that makes us give into excesses toward them, but be certain that if my Son is (there), (so) am I, and that if I am (there), my Son is (there), it is an assignment that was given me from the Supreme Being, which I am not able, nor do I want to retract. More so that these are the joys of my Maternity, the fruits of my sorrows, the glory of the kingdom that I possess, the Will and the completion of the Sacrosanct Trinity.”

* * *

June 6, 1937

Interest that God holds that the creature might live in his Will; dowry that he will give. Sentinel of Jesus in order to supply for that which she lacks, and if needs be he will also do miracles. Example of a king.

I feel between the arms of the Divine Volition and I thought to myself: it seems difficult to me that one can live perfectly in Him, life is full of obstacles, of sufferings and of such circumstances, that one remains as absorbed, and his rapid course escapes that as breathe and heartbeat should race in that Divine Fiat, as breath and heartbeat his in ours, that always races in order to give us life without ever stopping. And my sweet Jesus commiserating my ignorance all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, you should know that the first thing of most interest, is that our Supreme Being wants that the creature do and live in our Will, being this state the unique purpose for which we have given her life. Now when we want, we give all the means, the helps, the necessary things that they need in order to have that she might be able to give us that which we want from her, and if a continuous miracle is needed on our behalf, we do it, provided that we obtain our intent.

“You don’t know what an act means wanted by us and completed in the creature, so much is its value, the glory that it gives us, that it arrives to make itself (a) crown, it embraces the Eternal and so much is the contentment that it gives us, that we put our Divine Being at (the) disposition of the creature, in order to make that our act wanted and completed might have its life in her. Now the first dowry that we give to whom wants to live in our Divine Will, the first support, the sure defense, are the truths; these open the entry, they pave the way and jealous they put themselves as faithful sentinels around whom wants to live in my Fiat, the light of our truths that belong to Him doesn’t move anymore from over the fortunate one, it invests her, caresses her, moulds her, kisses her, and gives itself sip by sip to her intelligence in order to make itself understood, and this for cortege of the life of my Volition that reigns in her. The truths when they issue forth from our bosom, they have their assignment of good that they should do, the souls that they should enclose in the light that they possess and therefore they are all eyes over them, they fix (on) them so much, that they can not escape, nor can they become tired although they might pass centuries they are always at their place.

“You see therefore what great dowry I will give to whom should live in our Eternal Volition, all the knowledges that I have manifested upon Him, the immense values, his merits, his love and the love that he has pushed me to manifest them, it will be the great dowry and the Divine dowry, that I will give to whom will want to live in my Fiat, in which they will find all the superabundant helps, in order to become rich and happy. They will find in these truths the tender Mother that taking them up in her Womb as little babies she wraps them with light, feeds them food, makes them sleep on her bosom, in order to hold them secure she walks in their steps, works in their hands, speaks in the voice, loves and beats in their hearts, and in order to hold them attentive and entertained does for them as Teacher, telling them the enchanting scenes of the Celestial Country. In these truths they will find one who cries and suffers together with them, who knows how to put to traffic/trade even their breath, the littlest things, the nothings themselves, she will change them into divine conquests and eternal values.”

And I: my Jesus you have reason, but the human weakness is so much that I fear that I make little escapes from within your Will. And Jesus resuming his speech added:

“My daughter, your fear displeases me, you should know that so much is my interest, the love that burns me that I want that the soul live in my Will, that I take the pledge of everything, I supply for her in everything, however I do this when there has been a firm and constant decision to want to live in Him, and on her part she doesn’t lack, she does how much more she can. You sense one secret of mine my daughter, and where my love makes me arrive, you sense what I do, when by straights of necessity of human life this life, [that] is also mine, for sufferings that I myself dispose, hence the creature remains as groggy and lost hence she doesn't know how to follow the acts of the Life that reigns in her, I because I want that this life doesn't remain broken because He being life, not virtue that they can do acts at intervals and to circumstances, but Life there is the whole necessity of the continuous act, I who am on watch and jealous I maintain the sentinel of her, as I see that she interrupts her course, I do that which she should do, whence my working in my Fiat shakes her and she returns in herself and follows her course in my Volition, and I without even saying anything to her of her stop, I retie from where she left and where I followed my act, in a way that the Life of my Fiat doesn't remain broken in her, because I have supplied for everything, more so that in her will she wanted to, but weakness interrupted her.

“Behold therefore so much is my love that I want that one live in my Will that at whatever cost, although there might be needed continuous miracles I will do them. But have you noticed my tenderness, my strong love? that having missed her course I don't reproach her, I don't say anything to her and if I see that she notices that she has missed it I encourage her, I commiserate her in order to not put mistrust in her and all goodness I say to her: Don't fear, I have supplied for you and you will be more attentive, isn't (this) true? And she seeing my goodness loves me more. I know what I must give of mine, in order to have that the creature might live in my Will, and therefore I will do as a king, that greatly loves that his kingdom be populated. He makes it (known) to the whole world, that whoever wants to (can) come into his kingdom and he wants it known, in order to send them money for the trip, that he will make them find a residence at their disposition, attire and abundant foods, the king promises to give to them such riches, as to make them rich and happy; so much will be the goodness of this king, that he will have life together with the people, that he loves so much that with his riches he has ransomed them from the miseries and unhappiness of life.

“Such am I, I will make known to the entire world, that I want the people of my Divine Volition, and provided that they give me their name and they will make me know that they want to come into my kingdom, I will give them all the goods, unhappinesses won't have a place in her, each one will possess her kingdom, she will be king of herself, and they will have life together with their Creator. I will show off so much in giving, that everyone will remain enraptured by it. My daughter, oh! how I long for it, this living of the creature in my Will, and pray and yearn together with me for it and it (will) be sweet for you to put forth (your) life for a kingdom so holy.”

* * *

June 18, 1937

What one obtains and what it means (to) submit oneself to the Divine Will. change of abandonments between the Divine Will and the soul; merit that one acquires. Outlet of love. How in every created thing there is the deposit of love for us.

I was following the Divine Volition in his acts and oh how many surprises, how many consoling things, one feels such love, that one remains as drowned in the Divine flames. And my sweet Jesus wanting to make me know more what it means one submission, one act more in the Divine Volition, all goodness he said to me:

“My daughter, if you might know how my love feels an extreme need to relieve itself and to make known what it pours into the creature when she submits herself to my Will and becomes as our daughter to live in Him, as she submits herself and we see her in our divine enclosures, that are interminable, we feel ourselves enraptured and we pour forth a new sea of love to her, but so very great, that she feels drowned and not being able to contain it all, she makes gifts to everyone, to all created things, to the Saints, to the Angels, to her Creator himself, and also to the hearts disposed on the poor earth, of the seas of love that she has received, we feel ourselves give to everyone in order to make ourselves loved by everyone. What traffic/trade, how many loving industries, we feel ourselves repeat our surprises of love, to exchange our divine ways. As the creature submits to our Will in order to make him reign, she forms the place for us in her, in order to let us work as God, in her little field, and the prodigies are such and so many that we do, our industries of love, that the Heavens abase themselves, are shaken and they contemplate stupefied that which we do in the creature where our Divine Fiat reigns.

“You should know that our Creation didn’t finish in man, because it was interrupted by the subtraction that he made from our Volition, not reigning in him, we could not entrust ourselves to Him, and therefore the continuation of our creative work remained as suspended; hence with anxiety we await that she returns in the arms of our Fiat, so that she lets him reign, and then we will resume the continuation of the Creation, and oh how many beautiful things we will do, we will give surprising gifts, our Wisdom will put forth all its divine art and oh how many beautiful images that resemble us will he put forth by his divine light, all beautiful, but distinct the one from the other in sanctity, in power, in beauty, in love, in gifts, our love won’t be impeded anymore, finding our Volition he can do and give that which he wants, hence he will show off so much in giving in order to re-do his repressed love. And since we will be free in giving we will call them our times, we will make known who we are, how much we love them and how they should love us, we will give them our love at their disposition, so that we might be able to love each other with one love alone.

“So that who will live in our Volition will be our triumph, our victory, our divine army, the continuation of our Creation and its completion. Do you believe that it is nothing for us wanting to give, and to not be able to give? the power to create innumerable prodigies of graces, of sanctity, and because our Will doesn’t reign in souls we are as rejected and impeded from being able to create our most beautiful works? This is the climax of our sorrow. Therefore with never doing your will you can soothe this sorrow for us and with always doing ours, you will have our power, our love in your power, thus you can enrapture our Fiat, in order to make him reign in the midst of the human generations.”

Afterwards I continued to think of the Divine Will and said to myself: is it not enough to give oneself one time into the power of the Divine Fiat, what can be the good of always giving oneself? And my always amiable Jesus added:

“My blessed daughter, you don’t know the secrets of our love, and our infinite stratagems that arrive even to the excess, one needs to love indeed in order to know how to find so many discoveries/contrivances of love, in order to be able to give and to receive from whom one loves. You should know that every time that the creature gives herself to us, in the power of our Volition, we give ourselves to her, as abandoning ourselves in the bosom of the creature, and if you might know what it means this our abandoning ourselves, the grace, the good that we leave them, the renewal of our life that we repeat, your heart would burst you with joy, with happiness and with love.

“But this is nothing, every time that she gives herself to us, we give her the merit that she has given us her life, and if she gives it ten, twenty, one hundred, one thousand times and even more, so many times we give her the merit as if she might have given so many lives for how many times she has given it, and as many times we give her our life, we renew her in ours, we repeat the good to her, rather we increase it, for how many times she has given hers to us. So much is our satisfaction, the gusto that we experience when the creature gives herself to us, that we lavish so much on her, that as many times we give her the merit to possess so many Divine lives and bilocating hers, we give her the merit of so many lives for how many times she has given hers. This is our Divine commerce, we want her to give to us (and) we give ourselves, in order to receive the life of the creature in our Supreme Being, this exchange of life maintains the conversation, we make known who we are, we make them feel the ardent heartbeats, the love that consumes us, how we love her and want to be loved.

“And then if she might not feel the need of giving herself continually to us it is a sign that she doesn’t love us, and her heart is not in possession of our irresistible love, this is the sign of true love, to want to always give oneself, almost in every instant to whom one loves; but while he gives himself, the strength of love imposes itself that he wants to receive and if he might not receive he would feel suffocated and would burst into cries of sorrow, as to deafen Heavens and earth. And therefore in order not to arrive to such straights of sorrow, my love waits that the creature gives herself to me, and I immediately give myself to Her, with the whole infinity of our Will.”

Whence I followed my round in the Creation, and oh how many beautiful surprises, every created thing said to me how much God loved me, every one of them possessed the space that contained a deposit of love, that had to say to me always he loves you, your Creator loves you; I remained surprised and my sweet Jesus returning resumed to speak:

“My daughter, you know that the Creation was an outlet of our love and while we brought forth the Creation to the light of day, we held everyone present, not one creature escaped us and we put for each one of them, in every created thing a deposit of love that should love her and tell her always he loves you, your Creator loves you. So that if created things race in order to give to them the good that they possess, it is our love that makes them race. If the Sky extends itself over the head of everyone it is our deposit of love that gives it the right. If the Sun gives its light to everyone it is the inheritance of the love that everyone holds in the Sun of its Creator. If the earth is firm under her steps, it is our deposit of love, that makes it take as in womb from mother earth the creature and assuring her step says to her beneath her plants: he loves you, He who has created you loves you. If the water quenches you, it is our cry of love, that races in the water and quenches you, washes you, gives the humor to the plants and so many other goods that it does. If the fire doesn’t burn you it is our deposit of love, that they are the properties of the creatures that cry out warm my daughter, do her no harm, and thus with all the other things.

“Now I want to tell you a consoling thing, if the creature enters into created things, recognizes this deposit of love of ours in every one of them and makes resound her love in ours, she prepares the table to her Creator. You see in the Sun alone how much diversity of foods of love you can prepare for us, in that light there is the sweetness of our love, and you loving us to the touch of ours you sweeten yours and give us the food of love that sweetens us, in that light there are the tastes of our love and loving us you give us the joys of so many tastes of our love, in that light there is our fecund love, the love that wounds, burns and consumes, and you loving us will acquire the divine fecundity in your love, the virtue to wound us, to burn yourself and consume yourself for us, there is also the variety of the colors that embellishes everything, and you loving us will acquire the virtue of the beautiful love in which you will remain as mantled with an enchanting beauty and oh how we will feel enraptured.

“Daughter if I might want to speak to you (of) the multiplicity and diversity of love that we have put in every created thing for every creature, I would not finish, and how she holds the duty to know this our manifold love, in order to find the model to love us, with so many distinct loves, as we have loved her. But alas! our love remains isolated without the company of the love of the creature and this is a sorrow for us that our love [is] not recognized in every created thing, while everything holds the mandate from us to love her with (a) distinct love, in the wind races the puffs of our kisses, the billows of our loving caresses, the groans of our suffocated love, in the impetuosity of the wind our ruling love that wants to make itself known in order to reign over everyone, and at times it arrives as to almost speak with deafening cries, in order to make that she might be able to hear no other than our love that loves her.

“Oh! if the creature might recognize our love that races in the wind, she would retribute our kisses and our caresses to us with hers, (as) with the rest, because we kiss her and we caress her because we want to be kissed and caressed by her, she would groan together with our love in order to not make us suffocate, she would love us with hers and our ruling [love], and crying out together with our love, she would deafen everyone with saying we love you, we love He who loves us so much; also in the air that everyone breathes how much love doesn’t race, but no, not in intervals as in the other created things, but in every instant, in every breath, if she sleeps, if she works, if she walks, if she eats, our love races always but with a distinct and new love, with all the other created things, in the air our love races that gives life, with an enchanting rapidity that no one can resist, it races in the heart, in the blood, in the bones, in the nerves, in everything, and constitutes itself vital act of the human being and silently says to them, I bring you the continuous love of your Creator and because (it’s) continuous, I can give you life; oh if they might recognize us in the air that they breathe, the act of life that we have put in it, the enthusiasm of our love that races, races always without ever stopping, she would give us for exchange her life in order to love us, in order to tell us our story of love and to repeat our refrain I love you, I love you always in everything, and in every thing, as You have loved me. From the greatest created thing even to the littlest there is one new and distinct love of ours for creatures, and since they don’t know it they don’t reciprocate us, rather with highest ingratitude they reciprocate our love in offenses.

“And therefore we await that our Will is known and dominant in the midst of the human generations, which will be the revealer of our love, and then we will do it again and we will love each other with one love alone. How content we will be and seeing ourselves loved we will add on other new and distinct loves, thus our love won’t be repressed anymore but will have its outlet of love and of being loved in return. Therefore pray that our kingdom comes and you recognize our love, and if you want love(,) love us, if we don’t find our love in the creature, we don’t know what to give her, nor what to do because there lacks the knoll where to put our graces and the first element that forms our life in her.”

* * *

June 28, 1937

That which God does to the creature when she enters in his Will. As one decides to live in the Divine Volition, her name is written in Heaven and she remains confirmed in good, in love and Divine sanctity, and she becomes enrolled in the Celestial Militia. Example.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues, I feel myself carried in his arms, but with such love and tenderness as to feel myself confused in seeing myself so very loved, and surrounded everywhere by his maternal goodness. And my sweet Jesus, repeating his brief little visit with me, with a love as to feel my heart burst, all goodness said to me:

“My daughter of my Volition, if you might know what our contentment is in seeing the soul enter in our Will, one can say, that she races towards us, and we towards her, and as we meet each other, our Will invests her with light, our love kisses her, our power takes her in arm, our wisdom directs her, our sanctity invests her and puts there as seal, our beauty to embellish her, in short, all our Divine Being puts itself in attitude around her, in order to give her of ours. But do you know why? because entering into our Volition, not to live of hers, but of ours, we receive that which went forth from us, we feel restituted the purpose for which we created her and therefore we make festive. There is no act more beautiful, scene more enchanting (than) of the creature entering in our Will. And every time that she enters, so many times we renew her in our divine Being, giving her new charismas of love.

“Therefore one who lives in our Volition holds us in feast, she feels the need of living in ours, in order to be fondled by her Creator, and we feel the need to be fondled by her, and to give her new heroisms of graces and of sanctity.”

Jesus became silent, and I felt sunk in the eternal Volition, and amazed in feeling how much we are loved by God if we live in his Volition and (a) thousand thoughts crowded in my mind, and my beloved Jesus, resuming to speak said to me:

“My daughter, do not wonder for that which I have said to you, rather I will tell you more surprising things yet, but how much I would like that everyone might listen, in order to make everyone decide to live in my Volition. You feel how consoling and beautiful it is of that which my love pushes me to say to you, my love is so much that I feel the need to tell you where we arrive for one who lives in our Volition.

“Now, you should know, that as the soul repeatedly and firmly decides to not live anymore of her will, but of ours, her name becomes written in Heaven, with indelible characters of Light and she becomes enrolled in the Celestial militia, as heir and daughter of the kingdom of the Divine Will; but this is not enough for our love, we confirm her in good, in a way that she will feel such horror for every slight sin, that she won’t be capable anymore of falling, not only, but she will remain confirmed in the goods, in the love, in the sanctity, et cetera, of her Creator, she will be as invested by the prerogative of the District, she will not be looked at anymore as exiled, and if she will remain on earth, she will be as officiating of the Celestial militia, not as exiled, she will hold all goods at her disposition, she can say: being that his Will is all mine, that which is of God is mine. Rather she will feel herself possessor of her Creator and since she won't work anymore with her will but with mine, all the barriers are broken that impeded her from feeling her Creator, the distances have disappeared, the dissimilarities between her and God don't exist anymore, she will feel so loved by He who has created her, as to feel (her) heart burst with love, in order to love He who loves her, and feeling herself loved by God is the joy, the honor, the greatest glory for the creature. My daughter, do not wonder, they are our goals, the purpose for which the creature was created, to find in her our life, our reigning Will, our love, in order to be loved and in order to love her, if this was not so, all the Creation would be an unworthy work of us."

I felt my heart burst with joy in hearing that which my Dear Jesus had said to me, and I said to myself: possible, possible all this great good? And sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, am I not the Proprietor to do and to give that which I want? it is enough that I want it, everything is done, and then also in the base world things happen that in some way resemble (this), if a man gives his name in writing in the army of the government, this in order to be sure of him one makes him swear fidelity to the government, this oath makes him be tied to the army, he dresses himself in the uniform of the militia in a way that he becomes recognized by everyone that he belongs to the army, and when he has demonstrated ability and fidelity he receives the salary for life, with this salary that no one can take away, he lacks nothing, he can hold servants that serve him, he can live with all the comforts of life and although with time he retires in rest. And what thing has he given to the government? it is only the external part of his life that has constituted the right to him to receive the pay during his life.

"Instead who with firm decision has given me her will, has given me the most noble, most precious part, that is her will, in her having given me all the interior and the exterior, even the breath, and with this she has merited to be written in the Divine army, in a way that everyone will know that she belongs to our militia, how can I let her lack anything, as to not love her? if this could be for your Jesus it would be the greatest sorrow, it would have taken away the peace for me that by nature I possess, not to love She who has given me everything and that with indescribable love I possess her, hold her in my Heart and I let her have my life itself."

* * *

July 4, 1937

How God wants to form so many of his divine lives in every single creature. How who lives in the Divine Volition makes himself bearer of everyone and of everything to his Creator.

I found myself all invested with the Divine Volition, anywhere and everywhere I found him in act that he wanted to give me his life, and oh! how happy I felt in feeling his empire that at whatever cost, with his loving stratagems he wanted to enclose in me his perennial life. I remained surprised by it, and my always amiable Jesus, visiting my poor and little soul, with his usual goodness and sweetness said to me:

"My blessed daughter, if you might know how I enjoy and how my love is relieved, in manifesting our Celestial arcanum to you, in that state of love is found our Supreme Being, our adorable Will, in order to give me gusto I am attentive to you to make me say in what way we find ourselves in the midst of creatures and the great good that we can do them. Now you know it, that our immensity involves everything, our power and strength is so much, that we carry as in arm everything and everyone, as if it might be a little feather. All this is nature in our Being three times Holy, so much so that if we might want to diminish ourselves, we could not do it, our immensity and power flows in every fiber of the heart, in all the breaths, in the rapidity of the blood that flows in the veins, in the velocity of the thought we are Actors and spectators and to light of everything.

“But this is nothing, they are none other than the qualities of our Supreme Being, that which astonishes more, [is] that we want to form so many of our lives in every single creature. This is (a) work of God, to hold (the) virtue to be able to form so many Divine lives for how many creatures have been put forth to the light of day. After all the creature is ours, created by us, we live together, and because we love her, our love carries us with an irresistible force and power all ours to form ourselves as life in her, and our creative art, that not content with creating creatures, in the enthusiasm of his love he wants to create himself in the created person. You see therefore in what conditions we find ourselves in the midst of the human family, in (the) act of always forming our lives in them, but our creative art remains rejected, suffocated without being able to continue our Divine Creation, while we live together with them, they live at our expense, they live because they live of us, and yet we have the great sorrow of not being able to form our life in them. While this would be our maximum contentment, the greatest glory that they would give us if they might give us the liberty of making us life of every single creature.

“But do you know where we are free to form this life of ours? in one who lives in our Will, our Divine Fiat prepares for us the prime matter in order to form our life, he puts forth in attitude his power, his sanctity, his love and calls us in the depth of the soul, and we finding the adaptable and practical matter, we form with indescribable love our Divine Life, we not only form it, but we raise it and with our highest gusto and delight, we develop our creative art around this Celestial creature, and they commence the chain of the prodigies, she possessing her Creator, our Will working in her, becomes the bearer of everyone and of everything, if she thinks she brings us the thoughts of everyone and makes herself supplier and repairer of all the human intelligences, if she speaks, if she works, if she walks, she carries the words, the works, the steps of everyone, the Creation itself makes for her (a) decorous cortege, and makes herself bearer of the Sky, of the stars, of the Sun, of the wind, of everything, she leaves nothing behind, she brings us the homage, the glory of all our created things, even the homage of the sweet song of the little birdie, possessing the life of He who has created her, she makes them all crown, indeed everything wants to be brought by she who possesses the speaking act, so that for each one she tells the speaking story of love, for which they have been created by their Creator.

“So that who possesses our Volition acquires our Jealousy of love, that we want everything for us, and this with highest justice, because there is no thing that we have not given, hence with justice we want everything. Thus she taken by our same folly of love wants everything, in order to give us everything and jealous she wants to bring us everything in order to say to us for everyone and for every single created thing her little word of love.

“Therefore who lives in our Volition, never remains alone, first she is with her Creator, with whom they always remain in competition of love, how can they love more, and all things being around her she makes herself bearer of everything to He whom she loves, that being infinite Love wants to see converted in the creature all things converted in love for his love.”

* * *

July 12, 1937

How the human reflections take away the place from the Divine ones and they are rubble that makes the font of the soul turbid. How the Divine Will converts his love in nature, and that which he does (at the) point of death one (can) anticipate it who lives in Him.

I am between the arms of the Divine Volition, Whom more than (a) vigilant sentinel, not only wants to make himself life of my every act, but penetrating in every hideaway of my heart and of my mind, he recalls me if all that which enters into me is not part of the Fiat. And my always amiable Jesus visiting my little soul and assuming to be Teacher, who wants to teach his daughter in everything, said to me.

“Blessed daughter of my Will, you should know that ones own reflections, impressions, oppressions, melancholies, doubts, little fears, they impede the divine reflections, the holy impressions, the rapid flight toward Heaven, the joys of true good, the celestial peace; they are as so much rubble thrown inside of a lake, while the person is gazing in those clear waters as inside of a mirror, and she sees all entire her person, that it is beautiful and ordered.

“Now what happens? while she is gazing in those most clear waters, (there) becomes thrown in that lake a little rubble, the water is rippled, becomes turbid and forms so many rings and more rings as to muddy all the water, and of the poor person that was gazing at herself what happened to her? as they formed the rings in the water, thus they carried away some a foot, some an arm, some a hand, some the head, in a way that she sees herself all strangled by the ripples of those waters, who has made it that she has lost the limpidity of those waters, in a way that she can not see her entire image anymore, but in a way as to make one pity, who has it been(,) a little rubble.

“Such is the soul created by God, more than (a) most clear font, in which more than (a) most clear font, God should gaze at himself in her, and she in God, now the reflections, the oppressions, the doubts, fears, et cetera, are as so much rubble cast in the depth of her soul and God gazing at himself in her, doesn’t see himself all entirely, but as divided into so many parts, hence the strength, the divine joy, the sanctity, the unity of peace is divided, this will impede her from knowing who God is, how much he loves her and what he wants from her, and himself wanting her to gaze in God, these rubbles will impede her step making her limp in the walk, impeding her flight in order to gaze at herself in He who has created her. While they seem things of nothing, and yet in this becomes formed the knowledge of God in the creature, the union, the sanctity, the gazing of God in the creature and she in God. Not if the soul is disturbed by these rubbles that can be called trifles of the soul, that lacking the solidity and substance of true love, they are always made turbid and God is not able to mirror himself in them in order to form his beautiful image, therefore be attentive and always search my Will.”

Jesus became silent and I remained to think of the great evil that reflections on oneself do and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, only in my Will can the soul arrive to the apex of highest sanctity and enclose in herself a complete act for how much it is possible for (a) creature to fill herself so much so as to not leave any void in her, so much so as to convert into (her) own nature the good that she does, if she loves in my Fiat, the wave of love rains on her everywhere, invests her most intimate fibers and while it rains on her sweeping her away in love it constitutes itself queen and converts in nature its love in the creature but so much so that she will feel the breath, the heartbeat, the motion, the step, all (her) being that she doesn’t know how to do other than to love. This wave of love raises itself up even to Heaven, without ceasing to rain on her and takes assault of her Creator and always loves him, because when good is converted into nature, one feels the need of repeating the received good as act that constitutes her life. If she adores she will feel (her) nature changed into adoration, so that in all that which she will feel issues forth profound adorations to her Creator. If she repairs she will feel the course to go tracing all the offenses, in order to put there her reparation. In short my Will with his creative strength doesn’t leave any void and knows how to convert into nature all that which the creature does in Him.

“You see what difference (there is) between one who lives in my Will and possesses him as working life and between who recognizes him as virtue, and perhaps in the most sorrowful circumstances of life and in all the rest as if he might not be for them. Now I want to tell you another consoling surprise, so much is our gratification, when the creature decides with immovable firmness to live in our Volition, that that which we should do at the point of death, of confirming her in the good, in which she finds herself, because you should know that all that which she has done in life, prayers, virtue, pains suffered, good works, these serve to form our little Divine life in her soul, not one blessed enters into Heaven if she doesn’t possess this divine life according to the good that they will have done, and if they have loved me and completed my Will more, thus they will have some a little lesser, some a little greater, because true happiness, true joys must be possessed within, so that they will have every one inside and outside of them their God, who will always give them new joys, so much so that if the souls dying are not filled up to the brim with love and with my Will, I confirm them yes, but they don’t enter into Heaven, I send them into Purgatory to fill these voids of love and of my Will, by way of pains, of anxieties and of longings, and when they are entirely filled in a way that one doesn’t see it in them(,) that they are indeed all transformed in my love and in my Will, then they take flight toward Heaven.

“Now for the one that doesn’t want to do her will anymore but only mine, we don’t want to await that point, our love brings us with an irresistible strength to anticipate the confirmation of the good and to convert in nature our love and our Will, so that she will feel that my love, my Volition is hers, she will feel more my life than hers, but with that difference of those that are confirmed at (the) point of death, they will not grow anymore in good, their merits are finished, instead (with) these, my life will always grow, the merits don’t finish, rather they will have the divine merits, as they continue to love me and to live of my Will, thus they will know me more, and I love her more, and I will augment their glory. I can say that I race in her every act in order to give her my kiss, my love, in order to recognize that it is mine, and give them the value, the merit as if I might have done it.

“Ah! you can not understand what we feel for one who lives in our Volition, how we love her, we want to make her content in everything, because in her we find realized the purpose of the Creation, we center all the glory that all things should give us, and then our completed Will is all for us.”

* * *

July 25, 1937

How an act in the Divine Volition can be an impetuous wind, an air, a Celestial atmosphere. Three circles. God if he loves he works, if he speaks he gives.

The sea of the Divine Volition murmurs always and many times forms his impetuous waves in order to assail creatures, in order to involve them in his loving waves, in order to give them his life, but with such insistence and loving astuteness as if he might have need of us poor creatures that one remains astonished. Oh! how true it is that God alone knows how to love us. Now while my mind lost itself in this sea, my sweet Jesus surprising me with his brief little visit said to me:

“My blessed daughter of my Volition, have you seen how sweet was the murmur of the sea of my Will? and the souls that live in him also don’t do other than to murmur together in this sea, they, perfect echoes of my Fiat, don’t ever cease murmuring love, glory, adoration, but in a simple way, if they breathe they murmur love, if they palpate, if blood circulates in the veins, if they think, if they move, in everything they murmur love, love, glory to our Creator, and if they call my Will in their acts they form the impetuous waves in order to involve God and creatures, so that all Heaven and earth make one Will alone. An act in my Will can be an impetuous wind as to transport, to eradicate with its strength the passions, the weaknesses, the bad habits, the putrefied air of sin and to substitute the virtues, the Divine strength, the holy habits, the sanctifying air of my Will.

“An act in my Volition can be a universal air that penetrating everywhere and in everyone, at night and in the daytime, it can make itself breathed in order to infuse its life, its sanctity and taking away the unhealthy air of the human volition, there it substitutes the healthy air of my Fiat in a way as to remain sweetened, embalmed, revived, healed by this Divine air.

“An act in my Fiat can be a Celestial atmosphere, that enclosing in itself all our works, the Creation itself, and with the force of our works assail our Divinity and impose itself on us to make us give graces and gifts as to make creatures capable to be able to receive the kingdom of our Volition. An act in our Will can contain such wonder, that the creature is incapable of being able to understand all of its value.”

Jesus became silent and I remained as soaked in this sea and I don’t know how (but) I felt myself transported in the Celestial Fatherland, in the middle of three circles of light, at (the) head of them there was the Queen of Heaven at one point, and Our Lord at the other, with an enchanting beauty and indescribable love, in the midst of these was a multitude of souls, all transformed in the light in which they lived and grew, but guarded, directed and fed by Jesus and by the Celestial Mother, how many beautiful surprises were seen, these souls possessed the likeness and the life of their Creator and my sweet Jesus and his Mother said to me:

“These circles of light that you see are symbol of the Sacrosanct Trinity and the souls are those that will form the kingdom of the Divine Will, this kingdom will be formed in the bosom of the Divinity, the rulers of this kingdom will be the Mother and the Son that will guard it with jealousy. You see therefore the certainty of this kingdom, it is already formed, because in God things are as already done. Therefore pray that that which is in Heaven is realized in earth.”

After this I found myself in myself with the highest sorrow of finding myself again in my poor prison of my body. After this my Highest Good Jesus all goodness said to me:

“My daughter, our Divine Being is all love, and this love is so much that we feel the need to bring forth out of us this love, nor do we mind if the creature merits it or not, if we might have wanted to mind to the merit, all the Creation would still remain in our bosom. We when we love we work, in fact we loved and we created the Creation, and as gift of our liberality and of the excess of our working love, we made a gift of it to man; we don’t like to give our gifts as payment, or as merit, and where could one find sufficient coins in order to pay us for our gifts, or so many acts in order to merit them? It would impede our love, repress it in us and to not give anything to the creature, and not even to love her, because if we love we must work and give. Our Supreme Being so very often finds itself, in such deliriums of love, that we feel the need to bring forth from our Divine Bosom gifts and graces in order to give them to creatures, but in order to form these gifts we must love, and manifest them in order to make them known. Hence if we love we work, if we speak our creative word consigns the gift, confirms it and endows the creature with our gifts. Our word is the bearer and puts us in the conditions to discharge our repressed love.

“But do you want to know why we don’t give our gifts as payment or as merit? because we give them to our children and when gifts are given to the children, one doesn’t mind if they merit it, one gives because they love each other, at the most they are made to understand, here is the necessity of the word, so that they appreciate them and they guard them and love He who has given them and who loves them so much. Instead one gives as payment or merit to servants, to foreigners and oh! with how many measures. Whence in the excess of our love without which no one might pray or merit, we made the Creation, in order to make a gift of it to man, in another excess we created the Virgin in order to make her a gift, in another excess I the Eternal Word descended from Heaven in order to give myself and to make myself (the) sweet prey of man. In another greater excess of love I will give the great gift of the kingdom of my Volition, the Celestial Virgin heiress of this kingdom will call creatures as her children so that they receive in gift her great inheritance.

“Now, my daughter, if the soul lets my Divine Will reign, her love won’t be sterile anymore, but fertile, nor will she be reduced into words alone or yet in works, she will feel in herself the creative strength of our love and will be put herself in our same conditions, that if we love we work, if we work we give, but what thing do we give, the great gift of our Divine Being, our love is so much that if we give we want to give everything, even ourselves into (the) power of the creature, our love would not be content if it didn’t say: I have given everything, I have nothing more to give her; more so that possessing our Will we are secure, we are in our house, with all the decorum, the honors, the decency that is appropriate to us. Thus the creature possessing our own creative strength, if she loves us, she will give us in her love in exchange for our gift, the gift of her life, so that it is life that we will give each other, to each other and every time that she will love us, our creative strength will multiply her life in order to give it to us in gift, her love won’t remain isolated, but with the fullness of her life that she gives herself into the power of her Creator, and behold equal parts between the Creator and the creature, life she receives in gift and life she gives, and if the creature has her limits, my Will makes up for her, more so that in giving us for gift her life she gives us everything, there remains nothing for herself, hence our love remains satisfied and repaid. Therefore if you want to give us everything and receive everything from us, make it that our Will reigns in you and everything will be granted you.”

* * *

August 2, 1937

How the Creation possesses perfect happiness, as to be able to give the terrestrial happiness to creatures. How sin stopped the happiness. The great evil of whom removes himself from the origin. Example.

I was making my round in the Creation, in order to follow the acts of the Divine Will done in It, and oh how many surprises, each one contained such happiness, as to be able to render everything and everyone happy and my always amiable Jesus seeing me surprised, all goodness said to me:

“My daughter, our Supreme Being possesses the font of happiness, therefore from us can not go forth things or beings that were not happy. So that all the Creation possesses such fullness of happiness as to be able to give to all the earth perfect terrestrial happiness. Whence Adam enjoyed the fullness of happiness, all things rained upon him joys and happiness and then in his interior possessing my Volition, he contained seas of contentments, of beatitudes and joys without end, for Him everything was happiness within and without. As he sinned removing himself from my Will, the joy departed from him and all created things retired the joys that they possessed in their bosom, giving to man only the necessary means, not as to (a) proprietor, but as to (an) ungrateful servant. You see therefore from us unhappiness didn’t go forth, nor can we give it, because we don’t hold any, to give that which one doesn’t hold is impossible. Hence it was sin that cast the seed in man of unhappiness, of sorrow and of all the evils that encircle him within and without.

“Whence as the Celestial Lady came upon the earth and then my Most Holy Humanity, all Creation posed to feast, smiled with joy and resumed the course of raining upon us joys and happiness, and as we went out into the open they raced, they bowed, and issued forth above us joys and happiness, the Sun gave us the joys of its light, it gladdened our sight with the variety of its colors, it gave us the joys of the kisses of love that it possessed and reverent extended itself under of our steps in order to adore us, the wind rained on us the joys of freshness and with its puffs, it removed from us the putrid air of so many sins, the birds raced around us in order to give us the joys of their trills and songs, how much beautiful music they made us, so much so that I was constrained to command them that they might remove themselves from around me, that they might take flight in the air, in order to extol their Creator, the earth bloomed for me under my steps, in order to give me the joys of so many flowerings, and I commanded them that they might not make for me such demonstration and (they) obeyed me. The air brought me the joys of our omnipotent breath, when man breathing, we gave life to him overwhelming him with joys and Divine happiness, and as I breathed thus I felt come our joys and happiness that we experienced, in the Creation of man. So that there was no created thing that didn’t want to issue forth the joys that they possessed, not only in order to felicitate me, but in order to give me the homages, the honors as to their Creator. And I offered them to my Celestial Father in order to give him the glory, the honor, the homage, the love, for so many magnificences and marvelous works that we did in the Creation for love of man.

“Now my daughter, these joys in the created things still exist. The Creation was made by us with so much splendor and sumptuousness and with the fullness of happiness, nothing was lost, because we await our children, the children of our Will, that with right they enjoy the joys, the terrestrial happiness, that all the Creation possesses, and I can say that for love of these it exists yet, and creatures enjoy if not the fullness of happiness, but at least the necessary things in order to be able to live. This Creation existing still after so many human ingratitude, sins that make one horrify, it says the certainty of the kingdom of my Will upon the earth, because the creature possessing it will be become capable of receiving the joys of the Creation, of giving us the glory, the love, the exchange of how much we have done for her and of doing all the possible and imaginable good, that the creature can do.

“Therefore everything is in possessing our Volition, because thus all the Creation had the origin, man understood, everything was our Will, everyone lived enclosed in Him and in Him they found that which they wanted, joys, peace, perfect order, everything was to their disposition. The origin removed, all things changed aspect, happiness was changed into sorrow, strength into weakness, order into disorder, peace into war. Poor man without my Will, he is truly the blind, the poor paralyzed one, that if he does some good, everything is with difficulty and bitterness.

“All things if they are guided from the origin with which they have had existence, find the way, the firm step and the resulting happiness of the works of good that they have undertaken, if they lose the origin they are turned upside-down, they vacillate, they lose the way and they finish with not knowing how to do anything and if it seems that they do something, they make one pity. Also in the human things it happens so, if the teacher would like to teach the little boy the consonants and not the vowels, since the vowels race in every word, in every letter of the lowest science even up to the highest, the poor little boy would never learn to read and if he might want to he would go mad. Who has produced all this evil? the move from the origin of the science, what the vowels are. Ah! my daughter, even to such that man doesn't return into his origin, doesn't reenter into my Divine Will, my creative work will be a broken, displaced work, poor man without the first vowels of my Divine Will, for how much (He) can give light to him, can speak to him, he won't understand me, because he lacks the origin, he lacks the first vowels in order to be able to read my lessons upon my Fiat, hence without base, without foundation, without teacher, without defense, such is his cretinism, that he doesn't know his poor state, and hence doesn't implore to reenter into my Volition in order to learn the first vowels with which he was created by God, in order to be able to follow to learn the true Celestial science and thus form all his fortune, as much in earth as in Heaven.

“Therefore I always whisper to the ear of the heart: my child reenter into my Will, come into your origin if you want to resemble me, if you want that I recognize you as my child, oh! how sorrowful it is to have some children that don't resemble me, ignoble, poor, degraded, unhappy, and why all this? because they rejected the great inheritance of the Celestial Father, and constrain me to cry over their fate. Daughter pray that everyone recognizes my Will, and you recognize him and appreciate him, love him more than your own life, and don't let escape not even one instant.”

Thanks be to God.

All for the glory of God and for completion of his Will.

*The Kingdom of the Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 35

Contents

August 9, 1937 .....	p. 1
Prodigies of love in the Divine Volition. How he duplicates his love in order to make himself loved with his own love. How the Queen will form the new hierarchy in her inheritance.
August 15, 1937 .....	p. 3
"Empire/Rule that the acts done in my Divine Will possess."
God, head of the acts of one who lives in him.
August 23, 1937 .....	p. 4
How the Divine Will wants to grow in the creature and form his fullness. How one who lives in him stays enlightened by all the works of his Creator, which makes him possessor of all the divine works.
August 29, 1937 .....	p. 6
How God wants to see his life in one who lives in his Will, (so much so) that he arrives to make himself her model. Gifts that God gives to his creature. The space of the human volition, divine room for the wonders of God.
September 6, 1937 .....	p. 8
Purpose of creation. Speaking and working life of God in the creature.
Who is his word: the Divine Will. How one who does his own will loses the Divine one.
September 12, 1937 .....	p. 10
How truths are the greatest gifts that God does for us. Divine birth.
Yearnings and deliriums of wanting to see us possessors of his Gifts.
Outlet of love, his word. The great good of an act done in his Divine Will.
September 20, 1937 .....	p. 13
How the Divine Will is never stopped and seals with his eternal love all the works of the creature.
Exchange of imitation and of life between the Creator and the creature.
September 26, 1937 .....	p. 16
How God always gives to the creature without ever ceasing. Gifts that he makes to one who lives in his Volition. The palpitating life of God. The little victor.
October 3, 1937 .....	p. 17
Prodigies of creation. Dose of power, of sanctity, et cetera, that God put forth for love of man. The acts done in the Fiat will be always new, and one more distinct and beautiful than the other. They will contain everything, and will form the seas, the works, the speaking steps of their Creator.
October 12, 1937 .....	p. 20
For one who lives in the Divine Volition, her prayers are commands and her acts are messengers between heaven and earth. One who lives in Divine Volition, all things become for her Divine Will.
October 19, 1937 .....	p. 22
How living in the Divine Will, forms the Divine Trinity in the creature. Wonders of her acts. How true love commences from oneself. The Divine Will, fecundator and sower of divine life in souls.
October 25, 1937 .....	p. 24

The Sovereign Queen heiress of the Divine Will, hence heiress of divine life. How she formed in the creative hands a precious pledge of herself. "The great good that an act in my Fiat contains."

October 31, 1937 .....	p. 26
How an act of the Divine Will contains such power, (and) love, that if God did not make a prodigy, the creature could not contain this infinite act. The passport.
November 7, 1937 .....	p. 27
How all the truths written about the Divine Will will form the day to whom must live in him. The Queen of Heaven suffers agonies of love because she wants to endow her children.
November 12, 1938 .....	p. 29
An act done in the Divine Will loves God for each one and gives him that which the creature is obliged toward God. One who lives in my Fiat gives us the occasion of repeating our works in act. How he wants to work one on one/[to you for you]. The 'I love you', jewel of God.
November 20, 1937 .....	p. 33
Follows the same argument. How the Divine Will makes love arise, in a way that anywhere and everywhere one feels loved by the creature. Where there is our Will we find the adaptable material in order to carry out, be born and grow our life.
November 29, 1937 .....	p. 35
Sufferings united with the sufferings of Jesus form his life in us. There is no good that does not arise from them. How not loving martyrs divine love.
December 6, 1937 .....	p. 37
As one works in the Divine Volition, Jesus sounds his bell in order to call the inhabitants of heaven and those of earth. How the company of the creature is urgent to divine love.
December 8, 1937 .....	p. 38
On the Conception of the Queen. Her race of love. Where she found her Creator she found herself in order to love him. How she remained conceived in each created thing, and became constituted Queen of Heaven, of the sun and of everything.
December 14, 1937 .....	p. 40
How the human nature holds its day. (For) one who lives in the Divine Volition, he forms his day in the depths of the soul. Prodigies that happen in him.
December 18, 1937 .....	p. 41
All that which one does in the Divine Will acquires life, and these lives swim and float in the seas of love in the Divine Volition.
December 21, 1937 .....	p. 44
How the Kingdom of the Divine Will is decreed in the Consistory of the adorable Trinity upon the earth. The new breath of God with which the creature will be renewed.
December 25, 1937 .....	p. 46
The descent of the Divine Word. How he departed from heaven and remained; prodigies of the incarnation. The beginning of the festival of the Divine Will. How in his divine works he puts aside human ingratitude. The graft. How the love of Jesus paid for everyone and ransomed us.

December 28, 1937 .....	p. 49
How the redemption served to put into safety the habitations, the Kingdom of my Will will serve in order to put into safety and return the habitation to him who had created it. How in every act done in the Divine Will, God creates his divine life.
January 2, 1938 .....	p. 50
In the Divine Volition, the miseries, the weaknesses, change into the most beautiful conquests. How all that which one does in the Divine Volition becomes formed first in heaven, all the Celestial Court takes part, and there it descends to the good of the earth.
January 7, 1938 .....	p. 52
One who lives in the Divine Volition forms the refuge of the life of the Divine Will. The “I love you”, refreshment of divine love. How God feels obligated toward one who lives in him.
January 10, 1938 .....	p. 54
The first sermon that the little King Jesus made to the children of Egypt; how each one held their Celestial Father in (their) own heart, that he loved them and wanted to be loved.
January 16, 1938 .....	p. 56
How the Divine Will in his acts calls the creature in order to make the gift of his works; if the creature responds, she calls God and receives the gift. Exchange of Wills between creatures and God.
January 24, 1938 .....	p. 58
How Our Lord departed to heaven and remained on earth in the tabernacles in order to complete the Kingdom of the Divine Will. One who lives in the Divine Volition can say as Jesus: “I depart and remain.”
January 30, 1938 .....	p. 60
All that which one does who lives in the Divine Volition acquires the divine nature. His prodigies in creating divine life in the human act. Festival of all heaven. The true reciprocation of creation.
February 7, 1938 .....	p. 62
How God doesn’t love force, but spontaneity. Display of magnificence, of luxury, of sumptuousness, that the Divine Volition will do in one who lives in him. How the creation is not finished.
February 14, 1938 .....	p. 63
As one lives in the Divine Will his acts extend themselves to everyone and make themselves narrators of the Supreme Being. Show of love. How, in creating the Virgin, he created pardon.
February 20, 1938 .....	p. 65
How Jesus, in the incarnation, formed of himself so many Jesus’ for how many creatures had to exist, so that each one might have a Jesus at his disposition.
February 26, 1938 .....	p. 67
As one searches to recognize God in his works, God recognizes himself in her. Happiness that (he) receives from the love of the creature. The place that man holds in creation and in the Divinity itself. How he forms the members of one who lives in the Divine Volition.

March 6, 1938 .....	p. 69
Oppressions, melancholies, have no reason to exist in the Divine Volition; they form the clouds, the bitter drops that embitter God and the creature. Prodigies of the abandonment in the Divine Volition. How all created things remain animated by one who lives in the Fiat.
March 12, 1938 .....	p. 72
How God loves himself and prays to himself in order to give the Kingdom of the Divine Will. One who lives in him her life becomes formed in God. How one is reborn continually. Seed of divine life. How it is well wanted and loved by everyone.
March 16, 1938 .....	p. 74
How the Divine Fiat arrives to count the breaths, the minutes, in order to make the creature return to live in him. The (door)knock that she makes to all created things. How he wants to be in (the) continuous act of giving and of receiving. The sufferings of Jesus kiss the sufferings of the creature.
March 20, 1938 .....	p. 75
Contrivances of love of the creature that lives in the Divine Volition. Example of a teacher that possesses the sciences and does not find one to whom to teach them; of a rich one that does not find one to whom to give his riches.
March 22, 1938 .....	p. 77
As the creature decides to live in our Volition, all things are changed for her and she becomes put in the same divine conditions. To what the children of the Divine Fiat will serve, and how they will carry in them the life of their Celestial Father. The ultimate spying of love at the point of death.
March 28, 1938 .....	p. 80
How for one who lives in our Volition creation serves as so many cities where to repatriate the creature. How the human act must begin and finish in the Divine Volition in order to be complete. Rain of light. The great sorrow of Jesus is seeing that one doesn't live in his Will.
March 30, 1938 .....	p. 83
When sacrifices are done with good will, dear Jesus puts his divine gusto there, and renders them pleasant, amiable. How God created in them the passion to love.
April 4, 1938 .....	p. 84
"How God created the necessity of our Will in the creature, how she cannot live without it; example, how he created the necessity of water and sun to the earth." How one who doesn't live in him wants to conceal God in heaven. Each further word on the Divine Will gives a new and distinct life.
April 10, 1938 .....	p. 86
How (in) one who lives in the Divine Will Jesus wants to find everything, and he wants to find her in everyone. How God wants to find in our love the knoll of his works, the hideaway of his life.

Volume 35

My Sweet Life, my supreme good, Jesus, come to my help. My littleness and misery is so much, that I feel the extreme need of feeling in myself Life throbbing, working and loving; otherwise I feel myself incapable of saying to you a little I love you. Therefore I beg you, I implore you to never leave me alone, because the assignment of writing on the Divine Will is all yours. I won't do other than to make myself bear the hand you give and pay attention to listen to your holy words. All the rest you will do; therefore take care of us oh Jesus. And then I call my Celestial Mama to my help, so that while I write she will hold me to her bosom (and) place me side by side to her Maternal Heart, in order to make me feel the sweet harmonies that it possesses of the Divine Fiat, so that I might be able to write that which Jesus wants that I write about his adorable Will.

Fiat!!!

August 9, 1937

Prodigies of love in the Divine Volition. How he duplicates his love in order to make himself loved with his own love. How the Queen will form the new hierarchy in her inheritance.

My flight continues in the Divine Volition, and he waits for me with so much love that he takes me between his arms of light and says to me:

“My daughter, I love you, I love you; and you, tell me that you love me, in order to be able to lean/rest my great I love you on your little I love you, and I, throwing it into the immensity of my Fiat, (will) make you loved by everyone and by everything, and you (will) love me for everyone and for everything. I am the immensity and I like to give and to receive my immense love from creatures (and) I give and receive, the harmonies, the manifold notes, the sweetnesses, the enchanting sounds and raptures that there are in my love.

“When my Will loves, the sky, the sun, all the creation, the angels, the saints, everyone loves together with me, and they put themselves at attention to await the I love you from (whom to which) their I love you has been directed; and therefore on the wings of my Volition I send to everyone your I love you, so as to (re)pay them because everyone has loved you together with me. If one loves it is because one wants to be loved; not to be reciprocated in love is the hardest suffering, that puts one in delirium; it is the most transfixing nail, that only the medicine, the balm of reciprocated love can remove.”

Whence I thought to myself: “My God, who can ever exchange you for so much of your love? Ah, maybe the Queen of Heaven alone can give boast to this of having exchanged her Creator in love. And I? And I...?”

And I felt oppressed.

And my always amiable Jesus, making his brief little visit with me, all goodness said to me:

“Daughter of my Will, do not fear; (for) one who lives in him there is (the) highest accord in love. Possessing his life in the creature, he duplicates his love: when he wants to love, he loves in himself and loves inside of the soul, because he possesses the life of her.

“In my Volition love is in highest accord; the joys, the felicity of pure love, are in full vigor.

“Our paternal goodness is so much for one who lives in our Volition, that we number the breaths, the heartbeats, the thoughts, the words, the movements, in order to exchange them with ours and to fill them all with love; and in our emphasis of love we say to them: ‘She loves us, and we must love her’; and while we love her we make such a show of gifts and graces as to make heaven and earth dumbfounded.

“We did this with our Queen, we showed off so much. But do you know what this means our showing off? We look at ourselves, and we want to give that which we are and that which we possess. Dissimilarity would put us in pain, and the creature, seeing itself dissimilar from us, (there) would not be with us that trust of a daughter and that command of when one possesses the same goods, the same gifts. This disparity would be an obstacle to forming only one life and to loving us with one love alone; while the living in our Divine Volition is just this, one Will alone, one love alone, common goods; and all that which could be missing from the creature we give of our own in order to supply everything for her and to be able to say: ‘That which we want, she wants; our love and hers is one alone, and as we love her she loves us.’

“My daughter, the force would be lacking to not elevate the creature to the level of our likeness and to make her possess our goods because she lives in our Will. So very true (is this), that my Celestial Mother, since she lived, she possessed the life of my Divine Fiat, we love each other with one love alone, we love souls with a twin love.

“And our love is so much for her that, as we hold the hierarchy of the angels in heaven, the diversity of the orders of the saints, with her being the Celestial Empress the heiress of the great inheritance of our Will, when this Kingdom will be formed on earth, the great Lady will call her children to possess her inheritance, and we will give the great glory to them to have them form the new hierarchy, similar to the nine choirs of the angels; so that it will have the choir of the seraphim, of the cherubim, and so on, as it will also form the order of the saints (that) lived in her inheritance; and after that (having) fully formed them on earth, she will transport them to heaven, surrounding herself with the new hierarchy, regenerated in the Divine Fiat, in her own love lived in her inheritance.

“This will be the conclusion of the work of creation, our ‘consumatum est’, because we will have had the Kingdom of our Volition in creatures, in virtue of the Celestial Heiress, who wanted to give (her) life for each in order to make him reign. And oh, how we will remain glorified, felicitated, because the Sovereign Lady holds her hierarchy as we hold ours; much more so ours will be hers and hers ours, because all that which one does in our Volition is inseparable.

“If you might know how much this Celestial Queen loves souls!

“She, faithful copy of her Creator, looks in herself and finds his seas of love, of grace, of sanctity, of beauty, of light; she looks at creatures, and wants to give all herself with all her seas, so that they might possess the Mama with all her riches. To see the children poor, while the Mother is so rich, and only because they don’t live in the inheritance of the Mother, is a sorrow. She would like to see them in her seas of love, that they might love their Creator as she loves him, hidden in his sanctity, adorned with his beauty, full of his grace; and not seeing them, if she had not been in the state of glory, where sufferings have no place, for pure sorrow she would have died for each creature that did not live in the Divine Volition.

“Therefore, she prays incessantly; she puts into prayer all her seas, in order to implore that the Divine Will be done as in heaven so on earth.

“Her love is so much that, in virtue of our Volition, she bilocates herself into each creature in order to prepare the interior of their souls, she places them side by side to her maternal Heart, she embraces them between her arms, in order to dispose them to receive the life of the Supreme Fiat, and oh, how she prays in each heart (to) our adorable majesty, saying to us: ‘Do it quickly: my love can no longer contain itself; I want to see my children living together with me in that same Divine Will that forms all my glory, my riches, my great inheritance. Entrust yourselves to me, and I will know how to defend so many children in as much as your own Will which is also mine.’

“The love of this Celestial Queen and Mother it is unsurpassable, and only in heaven will they know how much she loves creatures and what she has done for them; and her most exuberant, magnanimous and greatest act is wanting that they might possess the Kingdom of my Volition as she possessed it herself; and oh, what this Celestial Lady would do in order to obtain the intent! You also, unite yourself with her and pray for a purpose so holy.”

* * *

August 15, 1937

“Empire/Rule that the acts done in my Divine Will possess.” God, head of the acts of one who lives in him.

My flight continues in the Divine Volition, but his surprises are always new, he invests one with such love that one remains rapt and with the mind overflowing with joys such that one would like to stay hidden in him, without going out of him anymore. Oh, Adorable Will, how I should like that everyone might know you, might love you and might let you reign, might let themselves be taken in your net of love!

But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“Little Daughter of my Volition, the surprises, the novelties, the secrets, the attractions that he possesses, are without number, and one who enters into him remains renewed, magnetized so much so, that one cannot nor wants to go out of him; one feels his divine empire that invests him, the celestial balm that, changes ones nature, makes one arise again to new life.

“Now you must know that my Divine Will gives such rule/empire to the creature that lives in him, that as she makes her littlest acts, she feels his rule, if she loves, she feels the rule of his love; if she speaks, she feels his creative force; if she works, she feels the empire, the virtue of his works that crowd themselves around, and ruling (in) it with his own rule they bring it to every heart in order to make him reign and dominate over each one. He feels his empire in the act of the creature and feels himself constrained to give into that which is wanted in that act; if she wants to love, with her act she makes us love and makes us give love; if she wants that our Will reign, with her empire she makes us come to pray that they receive him.

“An act in our Volition is not stopped; it says to us: ‘I am your act; you must give me that which I want.’ It can say (that) it takes a hold (of) our power, duplicates it, multiplies it, and ruling doesn’t ask, but takes that which its act wants. Even more so in our Volition we ourselves don’t want that there are dissimilar acts from ours. Therefore we ourselves are the ones that make us reign and dominate.”

Jesus became silent, and I don’t even know (how) to say that which I felt. My mind was so magnetized by his words and invested with his empire that I would have liked to put up (my) life so that all might know of it. And my beloved Jesus, resuming his speech, said to me:

“My daughter, there is nothing to marvel at; that which I say to you is pure truth. My Will is all and can do all, and to not put into our conditions one who lives in him, is not of our Supreme Being. More so, one can see in us, nature, and for one who lives in him, grace, participation, venting of our love, our Will so wants that the creature be and therefore we want that it live in our Volition, in order to have her acts and ours (become) fused together and sound of one sound alone, of one value alone, of one love alone; and to resist an act of ours, we are neither able nor do we want (to do so).

“Rather you must know that the living in our Volition is unity. So much so, that if the creature loves, God is head of her love, so that the love of the one and of the other is one alone; if she thinks, God is head of her thought; if she speaks, God is (the) beginning of her word; if the creature works, God is the first actor and worker of her work; if she walks, he sets himself (as) head of her footsteps. Therefore the living in my Will is none other than the life of the creature in God, and that of God in her.

“To leave one who lives in our Volition apart from our love, from our power, from our acts, it proves impossible. If one is the Will, all the rest goes from itself: unity of love, of works and of everything. Behold therefore that the living in our Divine Fiat is the prodigy of the greatest prodigies, never seen nor heard (of), it is our exuberant love, that not can contain it, we wanted to do this prodigy, that only a God can do in the creature, but that ungrateful one didn’t accept. But we have not changed Will; in spite of our love having been opposed and repressed, that it makes us be racked with spasms of pain, we will use such excesses of love, such industries and stratagems, that we will arrive to the intent that our Will be one with the creature.”

* * *

August 23, 1937

How the Divine Will wants to grow in the creature and form his fullness. How one who lives in him stays enlightened by all the works of his Creator, which makes him possessor of all the divine works.

I feel myself in the waves of the Divine Volition, that, investing me, wants to penetrate more into the depths of my soul, in order to make himself known and to make me feel his life, his celestial joys, the immense goods that he wants to give to one who wants to live together with him. And my beloved

Jesus, who seems that with anxiety, is waiting in order to resume his speech on the Divine Fiat, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, how contented I am of it when comes the disposed soul, that wants to listen to me and to receive the great gift of which my word is bearer! I never speak if the soul does not come disposed, because if she is not disposed, my word cannot consign the gift of which my word is generator.

“Now you must know that how much more the creature seeks my Will, wants to know him, love him, if she doesn’t make him flee in all her acts, so much more grows his fullness. One attention more, one sigh, one desire of wanting his life is enough in order to make her grow, oh, how admirably she grows and he pushes her aloft so much, even to arrive on the heights of the divine spheres and to know the most high and intimate secrets!

“My Will is life, and as life doesn’t want to stop itself, but always wants to grow, and in order to grow he awaits the smallest act, one loving invitation by the creature; more so he doesn’t want to grow through force, but wants that even she should also want that my Will always grow and (that he) might form his fullness in her. Now, as his fullness grows in her, thus grows the divine strength in the soul, the sanctity, the beauty, the felicity, the knowledge, the fullness of the innumerable goods that my Divine Fiat possesses.

“You see, therefore, what it means one act more, one sigh, one wanting of him, one calling to him: she acquires more divine strength, embellishes herself more, but so much so, that we ourselves remain enraptured by her, we watch and consider her, and recognize in her our strength, our beauty, and oh, how we love her! We feel ourselves felicitated more, because she is for us the bearer of our joys, of our goods.

“Before this creature, our love inflates itself, it overflows from us, pours itself out so much into her (as) to fill all of her, even to forming around and inside of her our labyrinth of love, which gives anxieties to her, the ardent desires to make the fullness of our Will grow.

“My daughter there is a great difference between one who is all attention, all eyes, all heart, because she wants my Will, and between one who wants him, but without great attention. It seems that they have no eye in order to look at him in all things, heart in order to love him or voice in order to call him; perhaps these possess my Will in a small part, so his fullness is far from them.”

Jesus became silent, and I remained in the eternal waves of the Divine Volition, so much so that my poor mind didn’t know (how) to go out of him and I felt myself saying:

“Jesus, enough for now; my mind cannot contain anymore (of) that which you want to say to me.”

And sweet Jesus put his hand to my forehead and resumed his speech:

“My daughter, listen still to me, where can the soul arrive that lives in our Will. She puts all of our works to daylight. Our Supreme Being always holds in continuous act all her works. For us the past and the future don't exist, so that the Celestial Father generates continually his Son, and between the Father and the Son proceeds the Holy Spirit. This is life in us, and is as the heartbeat and the respiration, that forms our life: to generate and to proceed continually. We would be missing life if this were not so, as would be missing the life to the creature if she didn't have a heartbeat and a continuous breath.

"Now, in this continual generating and proceeding becomes formed immense joys, felicity and such contentments, that not being able to contain them inside of us, they overflow outside and form the joys and felicity of all heaven.

"From the immense goods that the continuous generation of the Word and the proceeding of the Holy Spirit produces, overflowed outside the sumptuousness and magnificence of the machine of all creation, the creation of man, the Conception of the Immaculate Virgin and the descent of the Word upon the earth; all this and (more) is always in act in our Divine Being, as it is always in act that the Father generates his Son and the Holy Spirit proceeds.

"Now, one who lives in our Will is spectator of these divine prodigies, and senses given back to herself from the Father(,) the Son that always generates, the Holy Spirit that always proceeds, and oh, the contentments, the love, the graces that she receives! And she gives us the glory, that we always generate in our Volition; she finds in act the creation, and we give her with legal claim all the goods of it, and she is the prime glorifier of so many things that we have created; she finds in act the conceived Virgin, her seas of love, all her life, and the Virgin makes her possessor of it, and she takes and glorifies us for the great good that we did in creating this celestial creature; she finds in act the descent of the Word, his birth, his tears, his life throbbing again, his sufferings, and we make her possessor of everything; and she takes everything, glorifies us, loves us for everyone and for everything. In our Volition the creature can say: 'Everything is mine, even God himself, as is my Divine Will.' Therefore she feels the duty to glorify us and to love us in each thing and for everyone.

"Not to give that which we have done and do to one who lives in our Volition proves impossible; our love would not tolerate it, it would put us in pain. More so that we lose nothing with giving, rather we feel more glorified, more felicitated that creatures live with us, are to light of our works and are possessors of them. One can say: 'That which is ours is yours', it is our greatest happiness; disunities don't ever bring good; the 'yours', and the 'mine', breaks love and produces unhappiness. In our Will there doesn't exist disunity, the 'yours', and the 'mine', but everything is ours and (of the) highest accord."

* * *

August 29, 1937

How God wants to see his life in one who lives in his Will, (so much so) that he arrives to make himself her model. Gifts that God gives to his creature. The space of the human volition, divine room for the wonders of God.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues. His attractions, his fascinating ways, make themselves more insistent; his volition living in the soul is so much, that now he's posed to pray, now to supplicate, now to promise, even to promising her new gifts more beautiful and unexpected, provided that she lets him reign, and only one ungrateful can resist so many (of) his solicitations.

But while my mind was crowded by so many supplications and sighs of the Divine Fiat, my sweet Jesus, the dear of my life, repeating his brief little visit to me, all goodness, as if he might want to give vent to his love, said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Will, if you might know in what a labyrinth of love one puts us who doesn’t live in our Volition! I can say that each act that she does, word, thought, heartbeat and breath, that we don’t see flow in her the life of our Volition, our love, becomes repressed; feels a sorrow, gives into sobs of weeping, groans and sighs, because it doesn’t find in the creature its life, its act, its heartbeat, its word, the sanctity of our Intelligence, and seeing itself put outside and as apart, from within and from all that which the creature does; it feels its love extinguished, tying its arms, it feels that it cannot develop/unfold its constant work in her. My daughter, what sorrow! To be able to give life and not to give it, to be able to speak in the human word and be reduced to silence, because the creature doesn’t give the place to it in her word, to be able to love with our love in her heart and not find the place where to put it, oh, how our love remains impeded and as without life, because she doesn’t live in our Will.

“Now, you must know that when the soul does an act in our Divine Will, God makes himself (the) model, and the act becomes matter in order to receive the divine model. So that our more than paternal goodness is all attention in order to see all that which she does who lives in our Volition; and as she is about to think, to speak, to work, thus he seals there the model of his wisdom, the model of his creative word and the sanctity of his work. So much is our love that we want to make ourselves life of her life, heartbeat of her heart, love of her love. And so much is our delirium of love, that we want to make our facsimiles, and only for the one who lives in ours Volition can we obtain the intent; neither would we lack the adaptable matter in order to receive our model.”

After this he added with an even stronger emphasis:

“My daughter, so much is our love that we don’t do anything else other than to give continuous gifts to the creature. The first gift was all creation. Then came the creation of man; how many gifts didn’t we give him? Gifts of intelligence, in which we put the model, the mirror of our Most Holy Trinity; the eye, the hearing, the word, they were all gifts that we made for them; and we not only gave the gifts to them, but we took our conservative and creative part in order to look after these gifts for him, in (the) act of always giving them. So much is our love in giving our gifts, that we do not detach ourselves from the gift that we give, but we remain in the gift that we have given, in order to hold the gift that we have given them more secure and looked after.

“Oh, how exuberant our love is, how it ties us to for everything! And while it makes us give, it doesn’t leave the gift in the power of the creature, because she would not hold the virtue of conserving them, and therefore we offer ourselves to look after them; and in order to love her more, we put ourselves in (the) act of giving them continually.

“What say you then, my daughter, of the great gift that we make for them in creating the human will in the creature? How first we created the space and then we created the sky, the stars, the sun, the air, the wind, and so on, so that the space should serve in order to be able to create our other works. To create and not to have (a place) where to put them would not be a work worthy of our wisdom; so, with creating the human will, we created the space, the place, where to be able to put the great Gift that we made to man of our Most Holy Will. This space should serve our working Will; into which he should put skies more extensive, suns more radiant, and not one alone, but how many times he worked.

“Hence, the creation should serve man; this space of the human will should serve his God in order to form his delights, in order to be able to always work and to form his knoll, his throne, his divine room. I made this gift for them, I formed this space for them, in order to be able to hold the place to converse with him and to remain me with you for you in sweet company; I wanted to keep my Cabinet secret; my love wanted to tell them so many things, but I needed the apartment where to speak to him, and my love arrived to so much, even to give itself into the power of man and man into the power of God.

“Therefore I love so much that one who lives in my Will, because I want that which I created only for me; I demand my knoll, my throne, my divine room. Therefore, up to such that man doesn’t return into my Divine Will and give me my regal position in his, I cannot complete the creation. We have so many other beautiful things to do in our space of the human volition, so many other things to say; and we are not able to either do nor say, because missing our Will we find our space encumbered, hence we have nowhere to put our works, and if we want to speak he won’t understand us, neither will he have (the) hearing in order to listen to us. Therefore we will do prodigies never heard of in order to reacquire that which is ours, the space and our divine room.

“You pray and suffer, because you reacquire that which is mine, and never to deny me the space of your human volition, so that my love vents itself and my works return to continue the work of creation.”

* * *

September 6, 1937

Purpose of creation. Speaking and working life of God in the creature. Who is his word: the Divine Will. How one who does his own will loses the Divine one.

I am between the arms of the Divine Volition, which loves me so much that one doesn’t want to descend from his more than paternal arms, in order to guard me and to raise me as he wants and pleases. And if he senses me saying that I love him, oh, how he celebrates, and forms around me seas of his love, that in every instant say to me: “I love you, I love you!”

And my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul and finding me in the arms of his Volition, all content said to me:

“My blessed daughter: how I love to find you always all abandoned in these arms! Your fate is assured: you will live by own our food; we will have common goods.

“You must know that unique purpose why we created creation it was just this: creation should serve as residence to man, and man should serve for our residence.

“We wanted to form so many (of) our lives for how many creatures we brought forth to the light of day. Each one of them should have possessed our life, but speaking and working life, we neither know how to be where we are without saying anything nor without working; if this were (so), it would form for us so many prisons, which would impose on us silence and inutility. Our Supreme Being speaks and works; the word calls the work; the work manifests who we are and forms for us such beatitudes and joys, to render us happy and all those who cohabit with us. So that every word of ours and work is a new joy and happiness that we create.

“Behold therefore we want to form in man our speaking and working life, because we had to form such wonders of our Divine Being, to create new and always more beautiful creations. We wanted to show off and to give the course to that which we are able and know how to do, and the course to new joys and happiness; and where is all this?

“In our residence of man.

“But do you want to know who is our word? Our Will. He is the operator of our works, the narrator of our Divine Being, the bearer and the conservator of our life in the creature. Without him, we don’t move from our throne, nor do we form life in any residence.

“Do you see the great necessity that one possesses and live in our Divine Will? Because with him we can do everything, putting forth our most beautiful works, maintaining in vigor our purpose, forming of our Being how many lives we want. Without him everything is blocked, our love, our power remains blocked, it stops our works; one can say that we remain the mute God for creatures; what ingratitude! What crime, to reduce us to silence! And while we wanted to honor them with our life in them, as residences of our delights and wonders, they have rejected us, not giving us the liberty to form it; and in our place they have given residence to passions, to sin and the ugliest vices.

“Poor man without our Will, without divine purpose! It would be as if he might want to live without breath, without heartbeat, without circulation of the blood, they are the foundations of human life; what life would he ever have? Would it not be to kill oneself with a blow?

“Such would be our life in the creature: without breath, without heartbeat, without motion, without word; life would be an agonizing, oppression, that would end with dying. It is true that with our power and immensity we involve everyone, we find ourselves in everyone and throughout everything, but our Divine Volition missing in them, they never hear us speak, they understand nothing of our Supreme Being; they live in our immensity because no one can escape from us; so they do not feel themselves (to be) our children, but as estranged to us. What sorrow! To keep from saying so many things, and to keep quiet! To be able to work who knows how many wonders, and to not be able to do it, because our Will doesn’t reign in them!

“And yet our love is so much that it is not stopped; we are all eyes in order to watch (for) one who wants to live in him, all ears in order to listen (for) one who calls to him to live in them, all love in order to rest our great love upon the little love of the creature; and no sooner (do) we see her disposed, (then) we form our speaking life and we narrate the story of our Will to her, the long story of our eternal love, how much we love them, our sighs of wanting to be loved. Because you must know that when we love and we don't find one who loves us, our love doesn't have (a place) where to rest itself in order to be loved in return; then it goes wandering, delirious, restless, and if it doesn't find even a little I love you of the creature where to rest itself it withdraws itself into us, where we hold our center of love, but with such sorrow that it is incomprehensible to (the) created mind. The sufferings of love not loved in return are inexpressible; they surpass all other sufferings.

"We want to always give, we are in (the) continuous act of giving; but we need her will that wants to receive, one desire of hers, one sigh, that forms the place, the little knolls where we must rest our Will and that which we want to give and do. These desires and sighs are as ears that listen to us, eyes that look at us, hearts that love us, minds that understand us, and if we don't find these little knolls, we cannot give anything to her, and she remains blind, deaf, mute and without heart. Then our life becomes put in flight, sheltering itself in our celestial regions."

Whence I continued to think of the Divine Will; I felt myself all invested and prayed my dear Jesus that he might help me and might hold me shut in his heart, so that I might live and might not know anything else other than his Divine Volition alone; and he, returning, resumed his speech:

"My daughter, all the good of the creature is tied up to my Divine Will; if from this she undoes herself, all her goods are finished. You must know that every time that one does the human volition, one loses the Divine one with all his goods, hence one loses all the beauty, all that which is holy and good, so that it is an incalculable loss; the poor creature becomes cast into the most squalid misery, she loses the rights to all the goods, becomes invested by such unhappiness that never gives her peace, and if it seems that she has some good, it is (only) apparent, that finishes her with torture. Instead, every time that with all firmness she decides to do my Divine Will, the human volition is lost, the miseries, the passions; she loses all the evils, the miserable rags, the dirty dresses that had formed the human will to her. What happy loss! Losing the evil, the miseries, is glory and victory, it is honor; but losing the goods is cowardice and dishonor.

"You see therefore, if the creature wants she can reorder the great loss that she had done to my Will from doing her own. Even more so she will have to her help our power, our love and our own Will. With acquiring the rights of all the goods anew, everyone will defend her in order to remake some of the lost game."

* * *

September 12, 1937

How truths are the greatest gifts that God does for us. Divine birth. Yearnings and deliriums of wanting to see us possessors of his Gifts. Outlet of love, his word. The great good of an act done in his Divine Will.

My poor mind is as besieged by the Divine Will; in wanting to say so much about the truths that belong to him, that I cannot contain them, because my capacity is too little, and I am constrained to say: "Enough, Jesus, for now; you want to say so much about him, and I am incapable of retaining it, neither will I know how to say them to everyone; much less write them as you want."

And my sweet Jesus, pitying my littleness, all tenderness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition: do not fear; your littleness disperses itself in my Will, and it is not you who must manifest his truths but he himself will take the commitment of making himself narrator of that which he wants to make known. Therefore he will invest your mind, will make himself word upon your lips and will make known, who he is. Certainly by yourself you are not able (to do) it, but provided that we render your will in ours, we would repair everything and we will make known that which we want to say.

“You must know that when we want to do a good for creatures, to say a truth, that is the greatest good that we can give them because with saying it we make a gift of it, first we mature it in the bosom of our Divinity, and when we can contain it no longer, (we give it) because our love is so much that it wants to see creatures possessors (of) that gift, that it makes us give into yearnings, into deliriums, (and) arrives to make us languish because it wants to see that good transmitted to them. We find ourselves in the sorrowful conditions of a poor mother, that, having formed her birth, if she doesn't put it forth to the light, she feels herself die. We cannot die; but if the good that we want to give as our birth we don't put it forth to the light, our love gives into such excesses, that if creatures might see, they would understand how a God knows how to love and in what straits they put us when they don't receive the good that we want to give them.

“Therefore, when we find one who receives it, we confirm the gift, we make festive and feel ourselves victorious with the good that we have given them; and this because a single creature having received our birth brought forth with so much love, by itself it will make itself road, it will turn for all creatures and with its generative virtue it will regenerate so many other births, it will fill the whole world, and we will have the great glory of seeing our gift, our goods, fill heavens and earth and one who wants to receive it (the) possessor. We will feel as from everything the loving voices, the notes of our speaking love that reciprocates to us our repressed love, because we could not bring forth this birth of ours if we didn't find at least one creature that might want to receive it.

“For us, the doing of the good is passion, the giving is the continuous delirium of our love, and (in) finding one who receives it we feel in the gift our life and our rest. Hence, we so love one who lends herself the first to receive our birth, that we trust her, making her our secretary, and she, in seeing herself so loved by us, takes the commitment of loving us for everyone, and oh, the competition that she forms between herself and us!

“You must know that each word of ours is an outlet of love that we do with the creature, so that each word said on our Divine Will is an outlet of love that we have done, and receiving refreshment from this outlet, we have continued to speak, in order to form the chain of our outlets of love, because it was a repressed love that we held within us; and if you might know what it signifies this our outlet of love the goods that it does...! This our outlet of love fills heavens and earth, invests everyone, embalms the sufferings, makes itself day in the night of sin, converts sinners, straightens one who limps in good, reconfirms the good ones; in short, there is no good that one of our words that contains one of our outlets of love cannot do. So that us speaking is the greatest good that can be done to creatures, it is our love reciprocated, it is giving the Divine life to creatures, it is the greatest glory that we can receive.

“What cannot one of our words do? Everything; and whoever is disposed to listen to it one can say that they give life to our word, because we never speak if we don’t find one who wants to listen to us. Therefore, one who listens to us loves us so much, that we feel as if she might want to give us life in the midst of creatures, and we give her our life at her disposition. So be attentive to listen to us; to let us give vent in love, as many times as when we don’t have one with whom to do these outlets of love, these outlets justly convert into justice.”

Jesus became silent, but who can say what remained in my mind? I don’t have the words in order to repeat it. Therefore I end and abandon myself into the arms of Jesus in order to rest together with him, he who loves me so much and wants to be loved in return; he who gives me all of himself, in order to be loved in return as he loves me.

Whence I followed my round in creation, in order to trace the acts done by the Divine Volition, to make them mine, in order to be able to love him in return as he has loved me. And (as) I turned in the blue vault; I thought to myself: “This sky serves as vault to the inhabitants of the earth, as pavement to the celestial inhabitants; hence, since it serves everyone, everyone is obliged to adore him who with so much love has created for us this celestial vault in order to give it to us.” Hence I called all the angels, the saints and all the inhabitants of the earth together with me, because all united we might reciprocate in love, in adoration, glory and thanksgivings (to) our creator, because he has loved us so much that he has given us this sky. In the Divine Volition I called, I embraced everyone, and as if they were one alone they loved together with me. Sweet Jesus remained to love in return and wounded by so many voices, and with inexpressible love he said to me:

“My daughter, one act in my Volition is so much that its power gives of the incredible. As you called everyone, I felt myself loved in return by everyone, and you having a free and meritorious will, as you emitted your act, my Will sent forth from itself a love, a glory, a great happiness, by which everyone felt themselves invested, and the angels and saints feel a glory and great happiness and they feel themselves re-loved more by God, and (those of) the earth received more helps, more graces, according to their dispositions.

“All the acts done in my Volition receive this great good, because my Will is for everyone and everyone has the right to that act; since it is (an) act of (a) traveler, that races the merit to all that which does of good, the merit becomes common merit, hence joy, love and common glory; and if you might know what it signifies to be re-loved more by God, (and the) joy and glory that it gives a God, oh, how more attentive you would be! The angels, the saints, how they know it, they sigh (for) your call, in order to have this great good; and when you do not call them, solicitous they say: ‘You don’t call us today?’ So you are on earth and your merit races in heaven, in order to give new love and new happiness to the celestial inhabitants.

“Oh, how I would like that everyone might know what it signifies to work in my Will, because knowledge is like the appetite that makes one desire and taste the food that one eats; on the contrary, without the appetite, one feels aversion to the same food and doesn’t taste. Such is knowledge: it is the little door to my gifts, of the good that I want for creatures; it is the confirmation of the possession. Then knowledge generates respect, the appreciation of my truths and I then speak, when I know that my words are loved, listened to and appreciated; rather, when I see the respect, the love,

I feel myself drawn by my own love to manifest other truths. If I don't see this I keep silent, and I feel the sorrow of my repressed love. You will not do this to me, is this not true?"

* * *

September 20, 1937

How the Divine Will is never stopped and seals with his eternal love all the works of the creature. Exchange of imitation and of life between the Creator and the creature.

My flight continues in the Divine Fiat, and oh, how he shows himself contented in holding his creature in his womb, being always together and working together with her! The company of her renders him very happy about that which is, because he finds one who watches him, one who loves him, one who would like to render him tit for tat by being all his, as the Divine Volition is that for the creature. If he loves, he finds one who loves him; if he works, he finds one who receives them; if he is offended, he finds one who defends him, and many times he changes justice into graces. Therefore, all the stratagems of love he does them with her.

But while my mind was lost in the Divine Volition, my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, all love said to me:

"My blessed daughter, the love of my volition is never stopped; he goes finding always new contrivances, new inventions of love, rather he arrives to enclose one who lives in him into the intimate hideaways of his loving secrets, and makes her see his intimate creations of always new and growing love, with which he maintains comprehenders and wayfarers as within a single breath of love, the new arcane celestial discoveries of our Divinity, gives her new notice where his loving power can arrive, his prodigies for one who lives in him, provided that he might find her in his Will; it takes gusto to always tell her new things, and to give her new surprises of love.

"Rather you feel what he does, he becomes small in her while he remains immense, and loves to say: 'Ah, the creature loves me as I know how to love her.' And since nothing enters into us that is not love, this my Will, as made small in her, all that which she does he converts into love. If she prays, if she adores, if she works, he dissolves all into love, and with a power all divine my own Will conducts these acts of the creature into the bosom of our Divinity and they take position in our love; and we watch these acts like they are our acts, and we feel in them the eternal prayer of our love, our adoration all of love, our eternal works of love; and oh, how we remain glorified and felicitated, because the creature can say to us: 'My prayer, my adoration, my acts are eternal, invested by your eternal love; such has your Divine Will made them for me. Hence I love you as you love me.' And it is proper this our folly, our delirium of love: what we want in the creature, that we do, we love, as we do and love in ourselves.

"But only our Will ruling and operating in her can arrive to so much, because we, if we abase ourselves, it is not in order to lose our Divine Being in the end, but in order to raise the creature into the infinite and to give her of ours, and to seal her littlest acts, even her breath, her motion, with our eternal love, so that we feel in her our breath of eternal love, our motion in hers, that is not moved if she does not emit love.

“Therefore all the creation was none other than an outlet of love. We wanted to unite ourselves with our works, with the creatures that we put forth to the light, in order to love us with one love alone.

“My daughter, what sorrow in not being understood by creatures, and hence we cannot have the good of saying to them who we are, of making ourselves known, as we are none other than love and we want to give love in order to receive love. As I would like that everyone might know it!”

Whence Jesus became silent, as drowned in his flames of love. Then, as if he might have need of giving vent still, he resumed sighing, as if he wanted to ignite all the world with his love:

“You sense, my daughter, another greater surprise of our intense love, and where our deliriums of love arrive.

“Our Supreme Being loves the creature so much, that we arrive to the excess of imitating her. We make ourselves small, we enclose ourselves in her, and we want to walk with her feet, work with her hands, speak with her mouth, look with her eyes, think with her intelligence, palpitate and love in her heart. So that in order to do all, that which she does and how the creature does it, we want to have feet, hands, mouth, eyes and heart as the creature has them, and this we ask it of her, as if we were not the absolute masters. We say to her: ‘Let us love each other; we give you of ours, and you give us of yours.’

“Because our Supreme Being, being purest Spirit, is step without feet, without walking it finds itself everywhere; does everything, works everything without need of hands; is word without mouth; is light (and) sees everything without eyes.

“Since we love her greatly, we like to imitate her; but this is an immense contrivance of our love, that only a God can do; in order to be able to say to the creature: ‘You must imitate us; you must do as we do’, we say to her: ‘We want to imitate you and do as you do.’

“After all it is our creature, work of our creative hands, brought forth by us, from within the power of our creative love. Hence, it is no wonder if we want to descend in her in order to imitate her and to do that which she does and how she does it; it is none other than to honor ourselves and to give great importance to our works.

“But this we can do in the creature where our Will reigns; we can do everything; show off in love, imitate ourselves mutually, because (in) everything she lends herself to do that which we want. Instead, where he doesn’t reign we can say (that) we cannot do anything.

“Now you sense another surprise of love that gives of the incredible.

“When the creature has given us the liberty of imitating her, she has given us life in her, she has given us feet, hands, mouth, we call her to our imitation, and making her enter into our Divine Being, the power of our Fiat gives her step without feet and makes her found as in everything, in the angels, in the saints, in the Celestial Queen, even in our divine bosom, and oh, how contented we are (in seeing her) no more encircled by human nature, but free together with us, that work without hands, speech without mouth, and oh, how many words. With our word she tells us the long story of our love and operating Fiat; she feels in herself flow our eternal wisdom, and oh, how many things she says to us of our Divine Being. She speaks, she speaks always, and oh, how we enjoy sensing ourselves narrate through the creature that which we are; so much so that, taken by our own flames of love, she feels the need of loving us without heart, because the heart has its limits, while our love without heart has no limits, it is immense, and the creature gets rid of the heart and loves in our infinite love.

“Do you see, my daughter? Is it possible to give surprises of love more beautiful (than) these? To feel the pleasure, the gusto of imitating her; doing that which she does, as pretense of love, in order to call her to imitate us and to make her do that which we do! The abysses of our love are so many and what (is) more, it goes re-finding always new contrivances of love.”

I don't know to say what I felt in my mind. Immensity of light, that converting itself into words, said so many inventions of love of my Creator. And my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, listen still to me. Our love is so much that it seems that it does not give us peace if we do not make new inventions of love, in order to love and make ourselves loved. If we did not do this, we would condemn ourselves to idleness, which cannot be in our Supreme Being, because we are a continued act of love that always burns, with works that never have terminus. Our wisdom is so much, that it always does new things.

“Now, where our Will reigns we enclose ourselves in her, and we give wide outlet to our love; we centralize all that which we have done and do and will do; we repeat in the soul our most beautiful works, our outlets of love, the new inventions of our wisdom, which knows how to do so much in her, which to the creature it is not given her (the ability) to number them all. And oh, how many moving scenes we do! She becomes our theater of love, the deposit of our works that never cease to work, the refuge of our delights, joys and happiness, the hideaway of our secrets and celestial arcanum, the exposition of our varied beauties, but do you know why? In order to enjoy ourselves together (with) her, because where our Will reigns nothing should be missing of our works.

“She encircles us in the soul and makes us do that which we do in ourselves; and this because we want that she know who we are, what we know how to do, how we love. And in order to give her a more certain proof, we give her our love, we make her love as we ourselves love, so that she might touch with her own hands how one loves and knows how to love a God; and in order to enjoy ourselves together (with) her, we make her do together that which we ourselves do. Neither should you marvel, this is the nature of our Will and of true love, to unify the creature with ourselves, to love her and make her love us as we love her. Disparities must not exist, otherwise it would sadden the creature, seeing that we love her so much and she (does) not, that we know (how) to do so many things and she knows (how) to do nothing. Poor daughter; she would be in our Divine Being under the weight of a profound humiliation, as extraneous, without trust like a poor one before a rich one; these things we know them to happen. If she is with us, that which is ours must be hers. The living in our Fiat is unity, work and common joys; and it is this that renders us more happy and gives wide field to us to the out-letting of our love.”

September 26, 1937

How God always gives to the creature without ever ceasing. Gifts that he makes to one who lives in his Volition. The palpitating life of God. The little victor.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues, and I remain dumbfounded in seeing him who always wants to give to me; and since I am little, it isn't given me to contain within me his immensity, with a patience and unconquered love he waits that I contain within me the truths that he has said to me, equipped with his graces, in order to make me take possession; and as he sees me possessor, he immediately puts himself in (the) frame of mind of wanting to give to me and to say more surprising things. 'Will of God, how much you love me! How can I ever repay you?' And my amiable Jesus, making his usual little visit to me, all goodness said to me:

"Blessed daughter, it is our Divinity that possesses in nature the volition to give always, as you possess the breath, that always wants to breathe although you might not want it. Thus we, possess the continuous act of always giving; and if, ungrateful, the creature doesn't take that which we give (and) it remains around us in order to praise the perfection, the goodness, the sanctity, the generosity of our Supreme Being, as triumph of our love and of how much we love the creature, we wait with a patience that only we can have to have other creatures take that which the others have rejected from us. And so much is our love that we adapt ourselves to them in giving little by little, because being little it cannot take all together that which we want to give them; but our giving must be continuous. We would feel ourselves as lacking, suffocating the breath if we didn't give.

"Now, our Divine Will wants to be life of the creature; the greatest act, the most exuberant love, that only a God is able and knows how to do. Now, in order to make one possess, he makes her a gift of his pregnant virtue and puts himself as head in order to confirm the gift, and makes all created things pray; he imposes himself upon our love, power, goodness, and makes our love, our power and goodness pray; and all our attributes pray; even justice, mercy, our fortitude, change themselves into prayer; no one can be missing. When our Will wants that we do an act and that he makes himself a gift, everyone and everything prays (on their) knees in order to do that which he wants.

"When all have prayed, even our Divine attributes, we confirm the gift.

"The prayer of this (creature) becomes universal, and each time she prays it has such power that all our things pray, even our attributes, because in the gift has been given her the right over everything. What thing can one not obtain with this gift of prayer? One can say that the heavens are moved, our own Being feels itself bound and tied, and concedes.

"With the pregnant gift, he passes on to make her the gift of love, and in order to confirm her in love she loves with new love in the sun, in the sky, in the stars, in the wind, even in our Divine Being, in a way that acquires the right of loving everyone and being loved by everyone with a new continuous love; and if you might know what it means to be loved by a love always growing and new by everyone, and to hold the power of loving everyone with a growing and new love! To be able to say to your Creator: 'Growing and always new is your love for me; growing and always new is my love for you!'

“This love surpasses the heavens, fills the celestial fatherland, and its waves go to flow in our divine bosom, and oh, the wonders that happen! Everyone remains dumbfounded and they glorify my Divine Volition of a gift so great that he gives to the creature.

“Now, as we make her the gift, thus we enlarge her capacity in a way that she understands the gift that she has received and makes use of the gift.

“We pass on to make her (the) gift of the inseparability of union with God, that she arrives to feel more our life than her own. God becomes for her actor and spectator, and she remains with her Creator, living with his own life, with his love and power.

“With this gift everything is hers, she holds right over everything, and we, when we see her possessor, we add on the gift of rendering her victor (over) everything, victor (over) her own self, victor (over) God. Everything is triumph in her; triumph of grace, of sanctity, of love, and we call her ‘our victor’. We make her win (over) everything, because it is (a) gift that we have given her, and when we give we want to see the fruits that our gift contains.

“So that each act that she does in our Volition, each word, work and step, form between her and us so many distinct harmonies, one more beautiful than the other; she keeps us always occupied, and so much is our love that we surround her exteriorly with all our works, in the interior we invest her, we repeat all our acts that have been bearers of life, hence the life of the Queen, the life of the Word upon the earth, that was an excess of continuous love, that gave new life to everyone. Therefore we always give, we never become exhausted. One who lives in our Volition is the full day of our continuous works and our life, that palpitates and repeats ours acts that are always in act without ever ceasing. Hence, it is our delirium of love that we want to be overcome by the creature. When she wins, our love is relieved and our yearnings and deliriums find life in the creature and they rest.”

* * *

October 3, 1937

Prodigies of creation. Dose of power, of sanctity, et cetera, that God put forth for love of man. The acts done in the Fiat will be always new, and one more distinct and beautiful than the other. They will contain everything, and will form the seas, the works, the speaking steps of their Creator.

I was doing my round in creation, in order to trace all the acts of the Divine Volition, in order to make them mine, to embrace them, adore them and put there my little ‘I love you’, for thankfulness of how much he has loved me and worked for me and for everyone. And oh, how many surprises, how many new things one understands, how many divine secrets contain the things created by their Creator!

And my always amiable Jesus, visiting my little soul, seeing me surprised, said to me:

“My daughter, our works are always new and harmonize with their Creator. (There) passes such harmony between them and us, that they always know how to say new things of he who created them, more so that being inseparable from us, they receive new contact from our Divine Being. Therefore you, always find new surprises in following the acts of my Divine Volition and you understand new things, that our works possess.

“Now, you must know that when we brought forth the creation from within the bosom of our Divinity, [because ab eterno it was already inside of us], in bringing it forth in our Fiat, within a sea of love we put forth all that which the creature had to do. So that everything went forth from us. We made ourselves (providers)/[porgitori] of all that which he had to do. Therefore the whole creation is crammed with all the works which they must do, even to the last of men; and although invisible to human eyes, but visible and palpitating for us, in our Will, which forms a creation more beautiful than the creation itself, for which our love is so much that, while it occupies all the atmosphere, we carry it in our divine womb; and as we bring forth creatures to the light of day, thus we commence to offer them with our creative hands that which they must do; at (the) beginning of each act that they must do, we put as foundation the life of our Fiat, and as food for the act our love, because we do not do anything, nor do we give anything, if it doesn't hold as beginning our Volition and as food and trousseau our love. They would not be worthy works of our Supreme Highness, to offer works that do not give of our life and that do not possess our food which is love.

“All creation was one birth, with all the acts that the human generation had to do, which ab eterno we held in our divine bosom, that not being able to contain it anymore because our love felt the need of putting it forth, it wanted to relieve itself; and since when we do an act we do (a) complete act, hence bringing forth creation, we brought forth together all that which the creature had to do.

“Our Divine Fiat, containing all within itself, creation and human acts, put itself to the expectation of bringing forth the creature to the light of day, in order to administer to her the acts that belonged to her. Is this not an exuberant love, that only a God could have: to order, to form the acts, and then to bring forth to the light she to whom these acts should serve as formation of sanctity, of love, of glory, for herself and (for) he who had created her?

“But this is not everything. Our love is never stopped. As this our birth went forth, we put forth from ourselves a dose of our power, in order to sustain her and her acts, arming them and outfitting them with divine power; so that she holds our power that sustains her. We put forth the dose of our wisdom, that had to animate her intelligence and all her acts; hence, if in the creature one sees new sciences, new inventions, discoveries that give of the incredible, it is our wisdom that invests them. As well we put forth a dose of love, of sanctity, of goodness and of all our attributes, in order to administer to her love, sanctity, goodness, and so on.

“The creature did not exist yet, and we were occupied with him, (man); we contemplated with pleasure our power, wisdom, love, sanctity and our goodness in him; we put ourselves at his disposition in order to make him as much more beautiful (as) we could and to say to him: ‘You resemble us in everything; more beautiful we could not make you.’

“This our putting forth our divine qualities and all his acts that he had to do, before man came to the light of time, was for us a love so very intense that it gives of the incredible. We went on saying in our delirium of love: ‘Oh man, how much I love you! I love you in my power, I love you in my wisdom, in my love, in my sanctity; I love you in my goodness, in your own acts that you will do; I love you so much, that I put them all in expectation of you. My Divine Volition, to which we entrusted everything, our divine dowries and your own acts that will be already yours, are in act to offer them as (an) outlet of his love for you.'

"But this was not enough for our love; if he could be [that which he cannot be], it would render us unhappy.

"Now, you must know that our Supreme Being possesses as in nature his act always new. Therefore these established acts for each creature will be new and distinct the one from the other, distinct in sanctity, always new in beauty, one more beautiful than the other, new in love, in power, new in goodness; they are acts formed and fed by us, hence they possess all our characteristics; all beauties, varied in sanctity, in love, in beauty but one not like the other; they will be our order, the type of our varied beauties, the fecundity of our love, the harmony of our wisdom, as one sees all our works in the creation, all are beautiful, but the sky is not sun, the wind is not sea, the flowers are not fruits; but however, for how much they are distinct between themselves, they are all beautiful, rather they form the harmony of the various beauties, true image of our acts and of creatures themselves.

"You must know that these acts in my Divine Will form an army of new beauties, of new love and sanctity, that we, (from) only watching them, we feel ourselves enraptured, and we wait with anxiousness that creatures come that, possessing our Volition, will be outfitted and possessors. You see how certain it is that his Kingdom must come upon earth, because there are already the acts? And then they will emit from within him, as (a) noble host, they will make themselves possessed by creatures.

"My daughter, from within my Fiat went forth creation and everyone and everything; in my Volition it must return to me, as (a) work worthy of our power. Then we will remain fully glorified, when we will recognize ourselves in the creature and in her acts. We can give all, and she can receive all, provided that our Divine Volition reigns; instead, if he does not reign, it forms an abyss of distance between her and us, and we can give her nothing.

"But it is not yet everything, my daughter. Since it is (a) firm decision of giving the Kingdom of our Volition to creatures, we want that they know the goods that there are in him and where their acts can arrive, done in our Divine Volition, because if they do not know his goods we will have so many children blind, deaf, mute, that do not know (how) to speak to their Creator; and not knowing them, neither will they love or appreciate (those) same goods that they possess.

"In our Volition they all have clear sight, keen hearing and animated word through the creative strength; hence they will hold a manner of speech, that they will always hold as to say, [in a way] that everyone will remain dumbfounded, and the heavens themselves for delight will lower themselves to listen to them. The children of my Will will be the joy of everyone and the true narrators of their Creator. Only then we will find one who knows how to speak of us, because they won't speak, but our own Will which will speak in them, the which is the unique and only one that can and knows how to speak of our Supreme Being.

"Therefore continue to listen to me. As the creature will possess our Volition, all her acts, little and great, human and spiritual, will be animated by my Will; animated by him they will elevate themselves between heaven and earth, they will invest and they will weave together the sky, the sun, the stars, all the creation; they will elevate themselves above more and they will invest all the acts of the Queen of the Heaven, uniting her with them; they will have the power of investing the acts of our Divinity, our joys and beatitudes, those of all the saints; when they will have enclosed everything in their acts, without anything remaining outside of them, as victorious they will present themselves before our Divine Majesty and there they will offer them as complete acts that lack nothing; and oh, what will be our joy, our glory, in finding in these acts the sky, the sun, all the acts of the Queen of Heaven, the love with which I love there, our acts, our joys, our love that never ceases!

“These acts, done in our Divine Volition, duplicate for us the glory of creation, they duplicate the glory, the love that the Sovereign Queen gave us, they duplicate our glory and that of all the saints. It is enough to say that our Will has entered within, in order to say everything and that he contains everything. Where he enters, he knows how to make (a) fury of love, of glory and of centralization of everything. After all, everything is his; therefore he holds right over everything.

“Now, the wonders that these acts done in our Volition form in the soul are inexpressible. Our Divine Fiat makes use of them to form by means of them seas of love; but not seas that murmur, but seas that speak, and they speak with such eloquence of our love, that it pleases us so much that we always want to listen to them. Their voices are wounds that it sends us; their words are darts; always keeping to speak about the story of our love; and since it pleases us so much, we are always at attention to listen to it, because it is beautiful to hear that the creature holds our sea of speaking love, that she always speaks of our love!

“So that my Will, being possessor of one who lives in my Will, makes of her all the colors; he forms the works that speak of our works, the steps that speak of our ways; in short, since our Will is word, where he reigns he gives the word to all that which the creature does and forms of her a divine prodigy.

“Therefore there is no thing greater, holier, more beautiful or that glorifies us more than the living in our Will, neither is there (a) greater good than this that we can give to the creature. Hence be attentive and follow me, if you do not want to stop my speaking.”

* * *

October 12, 1937

For one who lives in the Divine Volition, her prayers are commands and her acts are messengers between heaven and earth. One who lives in Divine Volition, all things become for her Divine Will.

I am in the authority of the Divine Will; I feel his anxieties, his yearnings of love, that he wants to make himself known, not in order to make himself feared but in order to make himself loved, to possess, to identify himself, in order to say to the creature: “We have life together, in (a) way that that which I do you will do. I feel that my love gives me the need of living heart to heart, rather, with one heart alone with you. Oh, do not deny me your company! I know that you are lacking many things in order to live together with me, but do not fear, I will think to everything; I will dress you with my regal robes of light, I will arm you with my power, I will make (for) you (a) show of my love, making flow in you in your most intimate fibers the life, the love of my Will. Only that you want it, everything is done.”

I remained surprised, and I prayed that he might give me the grace of living in the Divine Will, because I greatly feared myself. And my sweet Jesus, making his brief little visit with me, all goodness said to me:

“My little Daughter of my Volition, why do you fear? In my Will there are no fears, but highest love, courage and firmness, and decision one time (that) is not moved anymore; so much so that one who lives in him does not pray, but commands, and she herself (as) mistress can take that which she wants. We put everything to her disposition, and this because everything is sacred, everything is holy in her; much more (so that), living in our Volition, she will not want nor will she take nor will she command us if (it is) not that which we want. Therefore her commands please us, they make us rejoice, and we ourselves say to her: ‘Take, say, what else do you want? Rather, how much more you take, (so much) more you will render us happy.’

“Rather, when the creature wants our Will, all her acts are like so many messengers between heaven and earth; they descend and climb continually, making themselves now messengers of peace, now of love, now of glory, and some times they arrive to command divine justice to halt itself, taking upon themselves its just fury. How much good these messengers do! When we see them come before our throne, we recognize ourselves in these acts, that disguised by the human veils of the acts of creatures, they hide our Will, but it is always him; and being delighted in ourselves we say: ‘How much artistry of love he holds! He hides himself in the acts of the creature in order to not make himself known; but we know him (just) the same(’), and loving ourselves again, we let him do that which he wants.

“Therefore, these acts, we call them our acts, and as such we recognize them; only that the creature has concourse with us, and with her acts has given (them) as attire in order to cover herself. Therefore she is the knoll where my Divine Will (can) rest himself, and he is delighted to unfold his life, making unheard of prodigies, hiding himself in the creature, as covering himself with her cast offs; even more than the creation, all creatures had origin from his Fiat, they live, they grow and are conserved in him. He is actor and spectator of all their acts; she will complete her life in his Fiat, and it will fly in heaven in one act wanted by his Volition.

“Hence, everything is his, all rights are his, no one can escape (him).

The only difference (is) that one who lives in him has life together, knows him, is to light of that which he does, rejoices him with her company, forms her/his joy and the confirmation that she wants my Will done in her, instead one who doesn’t live in him doesn’t know him, remains isolated and forms her/his continuous sorrow.”

After this he added, with tenderness of inexpressible love:

“My blessed daughter, how beautiful it is to live in my Volition! This creature keeps us always in festival; she know nothing other than our Will alone, and everything becomes for her Will of God: the sorrow, Divine Will; the joy, her heartbeat, breath, movement, become Divine Will; her steps, her works, they feel the steps of my Volition and the sanctity of the works of my Fiat; the food that she takes, the sleep, the most natural things, become for her Will of God; that which she sees, feels and touches, she sees, feels and touches the palpitating life of my Volition. My Will holds her so occupied and invested by him that jealous he doesn't permit that even the air is not Divine Will.

“And as everything for her is our Will, so for us. We feel her in all our Divine Being, in the heartbeat, in the movement; neither do we know (how) to do anything nor do we want to do anything without the one who lives in our Volition. Our love is so much that we make her flow in all our works, and together with us she maintains and participates in our creative and conservative act. So that she stays together with us to do that which we ourselves do and to want that which he wants from us; neither can we put her aside, being one the Will that we possess, one the love, one the act that we do. And it is proper this living in our Volition, to live together always, to do only one thing. It was this need that our love felt, to keep company with the creature, together to gladden ourselves, to hold her in our womb in order to felicitate ourselves together; and since the creature is little, we want to give her our Will, in order to have occasion, in her every act, of giving her our life, our act, our ways, us through nature and her through grace; and this is our joy, the greatest glory for us. Does it seem little to you to give our being, that the creature, not being able to contain because little, she gives it back to us again together with (herself), and we again return to give ourselves? It is one continuous giving of ourselves to each other, and this makes rise such love and glory, that we feel as repaid by her for having given her life.

“Therefore, in each thing that she does, and it does not enter our Will, it is a rent that we feel, a right that we feel taken away, a glory, a joy that we lose. Hence, be attentive, and make that everything becomes for you Divine Will.

“Beyond this, to each act that the creature does in our Divine Volition we duplicate our love toward her. This our love, as it invests her, carries with itself our sanctity, goodness, our wisdom; so that she remains duplicated in sanctity, in goodness, in the knowledge of her Creator; and as we love her with duplicated love, thus she loves us with double love, with sanctity and duplicated goodness. Our love is operative, and as it departs from our Supreme Being, in order to love the creature with double love, thus it gives her grace to make (her) love us with love always growing. Not to give anything (less) to an act so great done in our Will, proves to us impossible. These acts, we can say, are the enrapturers of our love, they enrapture our sanctity, and the ways are formed in order to know who we are and how much we love her.”

* * *

October 19, 1937

How living in the Divine Will, forms the Divine Trinity in the creature. Wonders of her acts. How true love commences from oneself. The Divine Will, fecundator and sower of divine life in souls.

The Divine Volition continues to invest me; I feel his motion in me, that as he moves he speaks, but with such eloquence, that if he didn't make a prodigy in order to make himself understood, I could not repeat what he says. Rather he adapts himself to my capacity, because if he speaks, being his creative word, he wants to create the good that his word possesses, and if I did not understand it I could not make that good mine, nor offer it to the others as property of the Supreme Fiat.

Whence I remained worried: “How can it be that his motion is word?”

And my sweet Jesus, visiting my poor soul, all love said to me:

“Blessed daughter of the Divine Volition, you must know that where my Will reigns, with his creative power, his motion and word, he speaks in the works, in the steps; he speaks in the mind, in the breath. As he wants to distend his Kingdom, thus he speaks, in order to create his divine life in every act of the creature. Therefore there is needed supreme attention, in order to sense where he wants to initiate his teachings. With the power of his word he invests the human act, the breath, the heartbeat, the thought, the human word, and there he forms his divine work, breath, heartbeat, thought, divine word. These acts elevate themselves to heaven, present themselves before the Most Holy Trinity; our divinity looks at these acts, and what does it find? It finds itself reproduced in these acts, its life; the Most Holy Trinity itself, it watches the prodigy of our Will, that with his power has overwhelmed the creature, making the repetition of our life, and oh, how we remain contented, enraptured, because we find in her the sanctity that resembles us, our love that loves us, the intelligence that understands us, our power and goodness that transports us with ties of our sweetness to love the human generation. We recognize in her and find the work of creation which we want in her.

“A single one of these acts contains such marvels, that they cannot find the place where they can put themselves; so much is their greatness. Only in our immensity do they find the place where they can remain; they remain fused with our acts, what glory won’t be ours, and also for the creature, because her acts, in virtue of our Fiat, hold their place in the acts of her Creator?”

“Oh, if everyone might know what it means to live in the Divine Volition, to let him reign, they would compete to make themselves invested, in order to have him make divine life.”

Beloved Jesus became silent, and I remained immersed in the sea of the Divine Volition, and as stupefied I said: “My God, where can one arrive who lives in your Volition!” And a crowd of thoughts, as so many voices spoke, they spoke. But I don’t know how to repeat them. Perhaps I will know how to repeat them when I will be in the celestial fatherland, because I will possess the same language up there.

Whence as being worried, my highest good, Jesus, resumed his saying:

“My daughter, do not marvel; everything is possible in my Will. True love, when it is perfect, commences from oneself. The true model is the Most Holy Trinity. My Celestial Father loved himself and in his love generated his Son, hence he loved himself in the Son. I, his Son, loved myself in the Father, and from this love proceeded the Holy Spirit. (In) this loving oneself the Celestial Father generated only one love, only one power and sanctity, and so on; it bound the inseparable union of the three Divine Persons.

“And when we created the creation we loved ourselves. So that we loved ourselves in stretching out the sky, in creating the sun; it was the love of ourselves that pushed us to create so many beautiful things worthy of us and inseparable from us. And when we created man, the love of ourselves made itself more intense, and loving ourselves in him, our love reproduced our life and likeness in the depth of his soul.

“One cannot give if not that which one holds; and since our love was perfect, loving ourselves we could separate ourselves from that which went forth from us.

“Now, our Will, with wanting the creature to live in him in order to form his Kingdom, loving himself he wants to give that which he possesses; and then he is content, when he forms the repetition of our life, when he works in the acts of the creature, and triumphant and victorious, with our highest glory and honor, he carries them into our divine bosom, in order to have us recognize our life in his work of one who lives in his Volition.

“It is proper this what it means to love oneself in that which one wants to do and to produce; giving himself, in order to be able to form another being similar to himself.

“Our Will is the fecundator and sower of our life, and where he finds souls disposed he loves himself, with his love he fecundates them and there he sows his divine acts, which, united together, forms the great prodigy of the divine life in the creature.

“Therefore leave yourself in the authority of my Will, and allow that he may do with you that which he wants to do, and you and we will be happy.”

* * *

October 25, 1937

The Sovereign Queen heiress of the Divine Will, hence heiress of divine life. How she formed in the creative hands a precious pledge of herself. “The great good that an act in my Fiat contains.”

I was making my round in the acts of the Divine Will, and arrived to the conception of the Most Holy Virgin I stopped myself in order to offer the Divinity their power, (and) love that they had in having conceived this Celestial Lady, in order to obtain that his Kingdom come upon the earth. And my sweet Jesus, surprising me, said to me:

“My daughter, as this Holy Virgin was conceived, thus she restarted our festival with mankind, because even from the first instant of her conception she inherited our Divine Will, which immediately began his intense divine work in her beautiful soul; and in every heartbeat, thought, breath of hers, with his creative power he formed enchanting prodigies of sanctity, of beauty, of grace, that we ourselves, were actors and spectators together with our Divine Volition, we remained enraptured, and in our emphasis of love we said: ‘How beautiful is the creature together with our Volition! She gives ease to us by forming our most beautiful works, and she gives us life through our life in her!’

“Our love rejoiced, it celebrated, because our divine heiress was brought forth to the light of time, the heiress of our Will and of our own life. And since in virtue of our Will working in her she was all ours, exclusively ours, watching her we felt our breath, our heartbeat, our love that always burns and loves, our motions in hers; our beauty gleamed in the movement of her pupils, in the gestures of her hands, in the sweet enchantment of her enrapturing voice. She held us so very occupied and in festival, that not even (for) an instant could we dissuade our glances from her. So that she was ours, all ours, (and our Will) by right was already hers, and we recognized in this holy creature our divine heiress. Already with possessing our Will she had taken possession of it.

“Now, this Holy Virgin held her humanity, in which bound the whole human family, almost as members to the body; and we, for her love, watching in her the whole of mankind, as she was conceived we gave the first kiss of peace to all humanity and we constituted her heir of our divine heiress, despite some ungrateful one (that) might not want to receive her.

“Now you see, therefore, how it is certain that the Kingdom of our Will must come upon the earth, now that one exists who inherited him, and having a creature (who) inherited him who belongs to the human race, all creatures acquired the right to be able to possess him.

“This Celestial Sovereign (Lady), taken by love, formed a pledge of herself in our creative hands, in order to have that everyone might receive this Kingdom, and since this pledge possessed the life of my Will, it contained an infinite value, that for everyone she could pledge herself. What (a) sweet and dear pledge was this holy creature in our hands! She, by making her life, her acts flow in our Divine Volition, formed divine coins in order to be able to pay us for those that should inherit our Divine Fiat. Then my humanity came, united to the Eternal Word, that with my life, sufferings, and death I disbursed the sufficient price in order to repurchase this our Divine Will, and give him to creatures as (an) inheritance that belonged to them.

“One act, one breath, one motion in my Will contains such value, that it can buy heaven and earth, and all that which one wants. Hence, let him alone be your life and your everything.”

Whence he continued to absorb me in the Divine Volition. What enrapturing force he possesses! And such sweetness, the attractions of his enchantment (so) that one would not want to lose even a breath. And my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, the prodigies of my Will are unheard of. So much is his power that, as the creature works in my Volition, he calls into act that which he has first done, he unites it together and regives the merit, the good, his power to each act, as if again he himself (was) doing it, enriching it with so much grace and beauty (as) to form the enchantment of all heaven. Then, as celestial dew he invests all the saints, and gives (them) new glory and felicity that the work of the creature contains in my Will; (he makes) this dew rain on all wayfarers, so that they feel the power, the grace of it in their acts. How many souls burnt by passions, by sin, by brutal pleasures, feel the freshness of this divine dew and transmute themselves in the good.

“One act in my Will overwhelms heaven and earth and if it doesn’t find souls disposed that want to receive such a good, it puts itself on the look-out, spying the circumstances, the occasions, the disillusionments of life, in order to invest them, to embalm them and give them the good that they possess. The acts in my Will are not ever idle; they are impregnated with light, with love, with sanctity, with divine sweetness, and they feel the need of giving light to one who lives in the darkness, of giving love to one who is cold, of giving sanctity to one who lives in sin, of giving divine sweetness to one who finds himself embittered. These acts, true children of my Divine Fiat, are never stopped, they always turn, and if it needs (be) even centuries, in order to give the good that they possess; and since they are animated and armed by his power, they can say: 'We can do everything, because a Divine Volition that enables everything has given us life.'"

* * *

October 31, 1937

How an act of the Divine Will contains such power, (and) love, that if God did not make a prodigy, the creature could not contain this infinite act. The passport.

My poor mind continues to cross the sea of the Divine Volition. It seems to me that he wants to always say new things of that which he wants and can do in the creature where he reigns. And since sweet Jesus takes much delight in speaking about his Will, as he sees the creature disposed, that she wants to hear his story, he takes the first part of narrator in order to make her know and love. Therefore, repeating his little visit, he said to me:

"My daughter, if you yourself might want to always speak of my Fiat, I would always hold new things to say to you, because being eternal his story never finishes, neither that which he is in himself, nor that which he can do in the creature.

"Now, you must know that an act of my Will in the creature contains such power, grace, love, sanctity, that if my Volition did not work a prodigy, (the creature) could not contain it, because it is an infinite act, and to the finite it is not given to be able to embrace all of it.

"You feel where his love arrives; as the creature lends herself, (and) calls him in her act, my Divine Will works; into the work he calls his infinity, his eternal life, his power that imposes itself over all, his immensity that calls and embraces everyone and everything: no one can put himself apart from his work. When he has enclosed everything, my Will forms his work. You see therefore what thing an act of his is; an infinite act, eternal, armed with divine power, immense, in which no one can say: 'I was not there in that act.'

"Now, these acts cannot remain without producing a great divine glory to our Supreme Majesty and an immense good to creatures. Since they are acts done together with the creature, they work from God, and they bind God and the creature; God in order to give, and the creature in order to receive. They are like opportunities to our love, which says to us: 'The creature has given us the place in her act, she has given us the liberty to let us do that which we want.' Hence, our love imposes itself upon us in order to make us give that which we are, also in order to honor ourselves and for (the) honor of our operating Will.

"Our love arrives to such pretences and mania of love, that it never wants to let us finish giving, putting ourselves before our immensity that does not finish, our power that can give all, our wisdom that can dispose all.

"These acts are divine acts, and can form the passport for the other creatures, in order to have them enter into the Kingdom of our Volition. They will give a child into our Kingdom; so that how many more acts will be done in him, so many more will be populated, and all the good will redound to those people that have been the first ones to give life to my Will in their acts.

“Now, you must know that the first passports were formed by me and by my Celestial Mother to the first children of my Volition, which contain my signature, written with my blood and with the sorrows of the Most Holy Virgin. To all the other passports my signature is needed, otherwise they would not be recognized.

“Therefore, one who lives in my Volition holds for principle my life, for heartbeat my love, for dowry my works and footsteps, for word my own Will; I sense myself in her, and oh, how I love her, and feel myself loved in return with my own love! And the soul feels such joy and contentment, because she loves me no more with her little love, but with my eternal love, she embraces me with my works, races to approach me with my footsteps; feels there (in) her life am I; she finds everything in me, and I everything in her. Therefore be attentive daughter, if you want to make yourself and make me happy.”

After this I felt a little more suffering, and I coughed strongly. To every blow of cough I asked the Divine Will, that he might come to reign upon the earth; and my dear Jesus, all tenderness, squeezed me between his arms, saying to me:

“My daughter, I knew that you would have asked my Will of me to every blow of your cough, and I felt my Heart wounded and bursting with love, and I felt myself re-give in your cough my immensity, that involved me and asked my Will of me; my power and infinity, that made me ask of everyone my reigning Will, so much so that I myself was constrained to say: ‘My will, come to reign, delay no more!’ I feel such violence, that I do not do anything else other than to do and say that which the creature does and says.

“Therefore I want that you ask my Will of me in your sufferings, in the food that you take, in the water that you drink, in the work that you do, in sleep; I want that you pledge your breath and heartbeat to ask me that my Will come to reign. So that everything will be occasions for you to ask my Will of me, even in the sun that fills your eye with light, in the wind that blows (upon) you, in the sky that you see stretch over your head. Everything must be occasions for you to ask me for my Will to rule in the midst of creatures. With this you will put so many pledges in my hands; and the first pledge will be all your being, because you won’t move if you won’t ask of me that my Will be known and longed for by everyone.”

* * *

November 7, 1937

How all the truths written about the Divine Will will form the day to whom must live in him. The Queen of Heaven suffers agonies of love because she wants to endow her children.

I felt my poor mind as crowded by so many truths that my sweet Jesus made me write about the Divine Will; and I thought to myself: “Who knows when these truths written about the Divine Fiat will go forth to the light, and what will be the good that they will do?” And my beloved Jesus, surprising me with his little visit, all goodness and tenderness, said to me:

“My daughter, I also feel the need of love to have you sense the order that these truths will hold and the good that they will do.

“These truths about my Divine Will will form the day of my Fiat in the midst of creatures; according to what they will know, so will it go forming the day. So that, as they will begin to know the first truths that I have manifested to you, provided that they have (the) good will and disposition of making (a) proper life of it, so will it form a most splendid dawn; however, these truths will have the virtue even to dispose them and to give light to so many blind ones that don’t know and love him.

“Whence, the dawn risen, they will feel themselves invested by a celestial peace, more reconfirmed to good, and hence they themselves will long to know other truths, which will form the beginning of the day of my Divine Volition. This beginning of the day will augment the light, the love; all things will convert into good for them; the passions will lose the force of making them fall into sin. One can say (that) it is the first order of the divine good which they will feel; this order will facilitate their actions; they will feel a strength (with which) they can do everything, because it is really this his primitive virtue: which cast in the soul transmutes her nature into good.

“Then, sensing the great good of the beginning of the day of my Volition, they will long that the day advances itself; they will come to know other truths, which will form the full day.

“In this full day they will sense the life of my Will living in them, his joy and happiness, his operative and creative virtue in them; they will sense themselves in possession of my own life, that they are the carriers of my Divine Will. The full day will give them such anxieties to know the other truths, and known they will form the full day.

“In this she will not feel alone anymore; between her and my Volition there will not be separation anymore. That which he will do she will do; working together. Everything, by right, will be hers: heaven and earth, and even God himself.

“You see, therefore, to what a noble, divine and precious purpose, these truths will serve, that I have had you write about my Divine Will, in order to form his day? To some they will form the dawn, to some the beginning of the day, to some the full day, and lastly the full noon. These truths, according to what they know of them, will form the different categories of the souls who will live in my Volition. One knowledge more or less will make them climb or remain in the different categories. The knowledge will be the hand in order to let them climb to the superior categories; it will be the life itself of the fullness of my Will in them.

“Therefore I can say that with these truths I have formed the day to whom wants to live in my Divine Volition. Day of heaven, more than of creation itself, not of sun and stars, because each truth holds (the) virtue of creating our life in the creature, and oh, how it surpasses all creation!

“Therefore our love has overcome everything in manifesting so many truths about my Divine Will; our glory will be full on the part of creatures, because they will have our life in them in order to be able to glorify us and love us.

“In respect to it going forth, as I have held power and love to whom had to manifest them, so I will hold power and love to invest and transmute them in the truth itself, that feeling in themselves the life, they will feel such need as to put to light that which they feel in themselves. Hence, give no thought to it; I, who can do everything, will do and will think to everything.”

After this I was following the acts of the Divine Will, in which there were all the works, the love, the prayers, the sorrows, the palpitating life, the breaths, and all that which the Queen of Heaven had done, as if then she herself were doing them. I embraced them, kissed them, adored them and offered them, in order to obtain the Kingdom of the Divine Will upon the earth. And my dear Jesus, resuming his speech, added:

“My blessed daughter, one who lives in my Will can enter everywhere and can give me everything, (even) my Celestial Mama as if she were hers, and how (she) loved me, and all that which I did. She can arrive to duplicate my life and to give it to me in order to love me as if it were hers.

“Now you must know that, as I have formed his day for the creature with manifesting to you so many truths about my Divine Volition, (so did) the Sovereign (Lady) of Heaven, with her love, with her sorrows, with her prayers and acts that she did [that since they were all done in my Divine Will they will fill heaven and earth (and) form the sufficient dowry for those that must live in him], with what anxiety she waits and longs to be able to endow her children! She sees herself immersed in so many riches of grace, of love, of sanctity, and she doesn’t find her children in order to endow them, because they do not live in that Volition in which she lived. She watches, my daughter, as in all that which she did and suffered it is written: ‘For my children’; therefore, if she loves, she calls her children to receive the dowry of her love, in order to make them known as her children and our children, and to love them as we love her; if she prays, she wants to give the dowry of her prayer; in short she wants to endow them with her sanctity, with her sufferings and with the life itself of her Son.

“How touching it is to hear her, watch her, because in her maternal Heart she holds, as within a sanctuary, her children; and in all her acts and breaths she calls her children, and says to our Supreme Being: ‘All that which I am and posses, is all for my children. Oh, listen to me! I feel my Heart bursting for love! Have pity on a Mother that loves and that wants to endow her children in order to make them happy! My happiness is not full; it feels halfway to me, because I do not have my children to enjoy together with me. Therefore do it soon, that the Divine Volition be known, so that they also know the pangs of their Mother, (and) how I want to endow them and to render them happy and holy!’

“Do you believe that we remain indifferent before this moving spectacle, that (with) so many longings of love, that with her maternal tenderness and with the rights of Mother she begs us, implores us? Oh, no! How many times, after these solitudes of hers I manifest other surprising truths about my Fiat, in order to give vent to them by making her endowed with (a) more extensive dowry for the children, because it will be given to them (to do it) according to what they will know.

“Therefore, you also enter into my Divine Volition, and together with this Celestial Mother pray and supplicate that our Will be known and reign in all creatures.”

* * *

November 12, 1938

An act done in the Divine Will loves God for each one and gives him that which the creature is obliged toward God. One who lives in my Fiat gives us the occasion of repeating our works in act. How he wants to work one on one/[to you for you]. The 'I love you', jewel of God.

The Divine Volition continues to inundate me with his light, which emits such power by forming such prodigies in the acts of the creature, that one remains as enraptured; one sees the creative power that contains all and does all in the little human act. O power and love of the Divine Will, how insuperable you are! Your power conquers all; your love gives of the incredible!

And my amiable Jesus, who wants to make understood the unheard of prodigies that his Divine Fiat can do in the creature, visiting my little soul, said to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, the flames of my love are so much that I feel myself suffocate, and in order to give some outlet to my love that burns me (and) gives me mania, I return to say that which my Will can do in the creature. In order to reign one must know who he is, where his love arrives, what is his power and what he can do.

“Now listen to me. As the creature gives liberty to him to let him work, he calls his immensity and power, he encloses everything and everyone in that act, and our Most Holy Divinity receives in that act the love of every creature; we feel in that act the voices, the heartbeats of all hearts, that say to us: ‘We love you, we love you!’ He gives us the adoration of each one and that which they are obliged toward their Creator. He animates everything, and we feel in that act that even the sun, the sky, the stars and all creation say to us: ‘We love you, we adore you, we glorify you!’

“So that on the part of our operative Will in the creature we receive everything, and for each one our love remains repaid, our glory completed.

“He can give us everything, although if he uses some act of the creature; and taken with love toward one who has let him work in her act he says: ‘I surrender all to you, my daughter; before our Supreme Majesty I find that you have loved for everyone and for each one, you have given us the glory, the adoration of everyone, you have made us loved even by the sun, by the sky. All creation harmonized, and said between themselves: “Love, love to our Creator.” Therefore I surrender the merit of everything to you: everything is yours.’

“My Will does neither know nor want to work if he does not enclose everything and does not do everything.”

Whence, I remained surprised and said to myself “Possible? Possible all this?” And my dear Jesus added:

“My daughter, do not marvel. One act alone by my Will is greater than heaven and earth; its immensity has no confines, its power (has) no limits, it holds in its own fist everything and everyone; therefore, in its work it has an act of infinite love, that can say for everyone love; and after having loved for everyone, oh how much it advances! And then, our love is perfect: first we love ourselves, we put into security our interests, our glory, our love (and) we glorify ourselves with our work. Who is there that does not think first to himself? Hence our Will, as much as he works in us, as much in creatures, first she must give us, by right, that which is due and necessary to us, for everyone and each one, and then creatures will have according to their dispositions.”

Afterwards, I continued to be inundated by the waves of the Divine Volition, but waves of light, crammed with truths, with love, that wants to make known his prodigies, his power and what he wants to give to the creature. So I followed his acts that he did in the creation in order to make them mine, in order to be able to say: “That which is Jesus’ is mine.” And my always amiable Jesus, returning, resumed his speech and said to me:

“Daughter of my Will, as the creature returns into our works in order to contemplate them with pleasure, love them and make them hers, thus our love makes us race in order to go meet them, in order to admit her together with us and to renew them for her alone, as if in act we repeated our works only for her. Hence, we centralize all our love in her, our power, our joys, the stratagems, the follies of love that we had in creating and putting forth all creation. And in our emphasis of love we watch her and we find the sky in her, and (we find) the love that we had in distending its blue vault; we return to watch her, and we find the multiplicity of the stars, that gives her voice to each in order to have said to us ‘I love you, I love you, I love you’; and these voices of ‘I love you’, form the most beautiful celestial music, and so much is their harmony the sweet sound that it forms (for) us, as to (make) us feel inebriated; and in our drunkenness we say to her: ‘Daughter, how very beautiful you are! You are (the) bearer of infinite joys to us; not even when everything was created did we receive these musics and joys, because it lacked a creature united to our Will that might say to us through our works: “I love you, I love you, I love you!”’

“To such spectacle of love we renew the creation of the sun, of the wind, of the sea, of the air, and we centralize in her all the love, our divine harmony that we had in creating all these elements; and oh, our joy, the exchange of love that she gives us, in watching her and finding in her (the) sun that burns for us with love, wind that blows and groans for us with love, that forming arcane voices of love she would like to surround us with her love in order to say to us: ‘You have loved me, and I love you; love you have given me, and love I give you.’ And with her sea she forms impetuous waves for us; even to arrive to give us air of love for each breath of the creature. We feel ourselves continually wounded and become taken by her love.

“A soul that lives in our Will is all for us, she holds us always occupied, she always loves us, but with our love; and every time that she does her acts in our Fiat, we renew the works of the creation, and in order to amuse ourselves (and) love her and make us loved, in every act that she does we make use of it as material in order to renew our various created works; rather, our love is not content; it wants to add on more, and it creates new prodigies of grace, even to create our own life in the beloved creature.

“The one on one/[to you for you] work pleases us much, as if for her alone we did everything. This makes arise more love toward us, more respect, more appreciation toward us, that we love her so much.

“Whence, according to how one unites oneself into the works of creation, we renew our works of creation; if one unites oneself to our works on the redemption, we renew, and I repeat my birth in act, and watching her find in her my birth, the love for which I was born, and she loves me with that same love with which I was born upon the earth; and does it seem little to you that I find my love, that made me born, cry, suffer, walk, work? And together with her one on one/[to you for you], I repeat my life down here, and my Divine Volition makes me loved by her with that same love as I loved, when being upon the earth I unfolded my redeeming life. Therefore living in my Divine Volition is everything for the creature and everything for us.”

Whence I followed the acts of the Divine Will in his works and I thought to myself: “What will be of more glory to God: to follow the acts of the creation or the redemption?” And Jesus, returning, added:

“My daughter, the one and the other are supremely pleasant to me; however with this difference: in the works of the creation, the creature finds our majesty in festival, that if she creates so many works, our primary purpose was that everything should serve our reigning Will in her, and all created things should serve as deposit of her exchange of love, adoration, (and) glory toward of us. All created things tell (of) our love toward creatures and she, through means of them, should love her Creator.

“You must know that your every ‘I love you’ which you hide in the sun, in the sky and in other created things are our jewels, and we love them, we kiss them, we embrace them and we felicitate ourselves with them; we feel glorified and repaid for all that which we have done. Do you believe that to your so many ‘I love you’s, (by which) you have invested creation, we are indifferent? Quite! We watch them one by one, and as our jewels they give us the joy that we had in the creation. Therefore continue our festival; and if these ‘I love you’s’ do not come/(show) forth if not for us alone, it is because our Will being immense even in the creation, his light eclipses your ‘I love you’, and jealous he holds them hidden in his bosom. It happens as with the sun, that its light being greater and its heat more intense, all the preciousness of the effects that it contains do not come/(show) forth, but it is certain that it possesses them; so much is it true, that if its light touches the flower, it gives (it) the color and paints it as if it were painting the range of beauties of colors, by forming the sweetest enchantment for human generations; if it touches plants and fruits, it gives the multiplicity of varied sweetnesses and tastes; this says that it is not only light and heat, but (that) other goods hide in its bosom of light.

“Such is the creature that lives in our Will. As she loves, adores, thus he forms the beauty of the rainbow of love of her in his works, the range of joys and sweetnesses of his good acts, that jealous he hides in his bosom. My Will is the hideaway of love and (of) all that which the creature does in him, and she forms the most beautiful ornament to our divine works and the sweet enchantment to our pupils, and she is so much our satisfaction that we show her to all the Celestial Court, in order to make her feel happy together with us. Hence, you cannot give us greater glory, (than) by following our acts in creation, because it is united to our own purpose, it is woven with our love, we feel that it kisses our love, and we kiss hers and we make of it one alone. What joy, what happiness, to have the creature together with us to love us and do that which we ourselves want to do!

“Now, in the redemption the purpose changes, it is guilty man, of whom we go in search of, in the creation everything was festival; our works smiled at us with joy, with love, with glory; instead in the redemption, sufferings, bitternesses, tears, remedies, medicines in order to restore man to health. And the creature, entering into our Volition, can invest my sufferings, bitternesses and tears with her tender and compassionate 'I love you', and hide her jewels of the 'I love you' in them; and I, kissing these jewels, will not feel alone, but comforted, sustained, accompanied by one who lives in my Volition. In the jewels of her 'I love you' I will find one who dries my tears, one who divides my sufferings with me, one who defends me. Therefore, I want you always in my Will; thus, either in festival or in suffering, I will always hold you with me."

* * *

November 20, 1937

Follows the same argument. How the Divine Will makes love arise, in a way that anywhere and everywhere one feels loved by the creature. Where there is our Will we find the adaptable material in order to carry out, be born and grow our life.

My poor mind continues to swim in the sea of the Divine Volition, and the surprises (and) his anxieties are such and so many because he wants to have life in the creature, and so much is his speech to such regard, that it proves to me impossible to be able to say everything. And my beloved Jesus, visiting my little soul, with inexpressible love said to me:

"My blessed daughter, speaking of my Will is for me the greatest festival, and heaven unites itself with me to celebrate; and as it arrives for me to speak of my Volition, they all put themselves at attention to listen to me. There is no festival more beautiful that I can give to the whole Celestial Court, than to speak of my Divine Will. He makes arise the operative love in souls on earth and the blessed in heaven. Where there is no love I do not move, nor do I go, nor do I know what to do with the creature. And then, the love that makes my Will arise is immense, and there is no point where one does not find one who lives in him, all invested and as encumbered by my love.

"She has suffered our own fate, because we love anywhere and everywhere, we love everyone and always; so that we feel that she loves us in the hearts of everyone; her love races everywhere and she loves us in the sun, in the sky, in the twinkling of the stars, in the groans of the wind, in the murmur of the sea, in the wriggle of the fishes, in the song of the little bird; we feel that she also loves us in the hearts of the angels and saints, even in our divine breast. Everyone says to her: 'Be welcome! Oh, how we have waited for you! Come to take your place of honor! Come to love our Creator in us!'

"My Will, jealous, holds her tight to himself, and inundating her always anew (with) love makes songs of love, dirges of love, sweet enchantments of love, wounding with love. It seems that he says: 'I have found one who loves me, and I want to enjoy myself with her'; I would not feel happy if she does not always and everywhere say to me, 'I love you, I love you.' So that the soul that lives in our Will will be our triumph, our victory, the depositary of our love, our continuous glory.

"My love feels the need of the company of this creature, in order to vent mine and to have hers. Therefore I want to breathe together with her, to palpitate and work together. The union knows (how) to produce joys more beautiful, contentments ineffable, works more great, love more intense.

"Now, my Will will give so much love to this creature that lives in him, as to be able to inundate all creation; he will extend a new sky of love over all human generations, in a way that one will feel themselves embraced, loved by the love of this one, given by herself, anywhere, in each one and everywhere; and while she embraces and loves him, she will say to him: ‘Come, oh Supreme Volition, to reign upon the earth! Invest all generations! Overcome and conquer everyone!’

“Do you not see how beautiful the living in him is? To have your love in his power, that contains such power and virtue that no one can resist?

“Then, when this love will have arrived to invest everything and everyone, since it is (the) love of a creature that has lived in our Fiat, that offered with herself the bond of the human family, we will win, we will demolish all the obstacles and we will have our Kingdom upon the face of the earth. Therefore pray and use all things in order to ask me that he come to reign as in heaven so on earth.”

Whence I continued to be inundated by the Divine Fiat, that rained upon me light, (and) love; light in order to make himself more known, love in order to make himself loved. And my sweet Jesus, returning, added:

“My daughter, how beautiful is living in my Volition! We do not know how to be without her (the creature); we do not do other than think (of) what surprise we should do for her, what anew to give her, what to say to her so that she knows our Fiat more, and according to what she knows of it, thus we are more able to magnify the sea of our love in her. The knowledge is the bell that while it sounds it calls, with sounds so sweet, our power, sanctity, goodness, and love to enclose itself in the creature that lives in him, in order to make us work our unheard of prodigies.

“Now, you must know that when we find our Will in her we feel beatified, and we take so much pleasure in looking at her that, in order to enjoy ourselves more in her, we look at her in the mind, and we make conceived, be born and grow our intelligence; we look at her in the mouth, and we make conceived, be born and grow our word, in a way that she will speak of our Supreme Being with such eloquence and grace, as to make us loved by one who has the good (fortune) to listen to her; we look at her in the Will, and we make be reborn and grow to new life ours; we look at her in the heart, and we make conceived our love in her, its harmonies, its stratagems in order to make us conquer to make her be reborn always in our love; we look at her in the hands and feet, and we make conceived, be born and grow our works and our steps. We could do everything together, but we do not do it, in order to take more time for us to be with her and to enjoy ourselves more with her.

“So much is our love, that we want to form with our own creative hands our own life in the creature. That which we are we want to give her. Our love does not remain content if we do not repeat our life in her; and then we find the adaptable material, when we find our Will that has formed for us the ground, (has) purified and adorned (it). While we form our life we sing victory and glory to our Divine Being.

“And she, what does she do? She gives us food in order to feed us and make us grow in her, she gives us water in order to quench our thirst, her being in order to dress us, her soul for room, her heart for bed of repose and all her acts in order to keep us amused and surrounded by our own celestial joys.

“But who can say, my daughter, what we can do and give to one who lives in our Volition? We give all and we do all, and she gives all to us.”

* * *

November 29, 1937

Sufferings united with the sufferings of Jesus form his life in us. There is no good that does not arise from them. How not loving martyrs divine love.

My poor mind swims in the sea of the Divine Volition, rather I feel him to me as breathing, palpitating in me, and (as) more than blood circulating in the veins of my soul and he says to me: “I am here, inside and outside of you, more than your life; I race in each act of yours, and with my love I facilitate all for you and I felicitate/rejoice together (with) you.”

And in this while he made me see all the sufferings, suffered by me, invested with light, that he held them pressed to his bosom as conquests of his Volition. I remained worried, and my always amiable Jesus, visiting me, said to me:

“My little daughter of my Divine Volition, you must know that all my sufferings suffered by my most holy humanity on earth, each tear that I spilled, each drop of my blood, each step and motion, and even my breath, were and are invested by a single voice (with which) they speak and cry out continually: ‘We want the Kingdom of the Divine Volition reigning and dominant in the midst of creatures; we want our divine rights placed in vigor’; they pray, they speak, they groan around our supreme throne without ever ceasing, that one be the Will of heaven and earth.

“Now, one who unites themselves with my sufferings, with my heartbeats, breaths, steps and works, prays, speaks and groans together with all that which I did and suffered upon the earth. There is no good that does not arise from my sufferings, and unites mine with those of the creature, mine form the deposit, (and are) the innkeepers in order to receive the sufferings of her, together forming one prayer alone, one voice alone, one Will alone; rather my sufferings transport the sufferings of the creature and all that which she does before our majesty, in order to make them want and do that which I did; those of the creature enrapture mine on earth, in order to involve them all in my sufferings and hers, in order to dispose them to receive the life of my Divine Will. Union with me, her sufferings with mine, form the great prodigy of my life in the creature, which works, speaks and suffers as if a new self upon the earth; and I animate all her being with the power of my acts; even in her little trifles my life flows, in order to make everything mine, animated by my creative power, and (that) she might give me the love, the glory of my own life.

“Do you believe that all that which you have suffered, my Will holds no account of it? Quite. He conserves in his bosom of light all your sufferings, little and great, your agonizing and sorrowful sighs, your privations; rather he uses it as material in order to conceive, be born and grow his life. In each suffering was growth that I did, which fed her with his sanctity, filled her with the heat of his love, adorned her with his unparalleled beauty.

“My daughter, how you should thank me for all that which I have disposed for you and for all that which I have made you suffer, because everything has served to form my life in you and to the triumph of my Will. What fortune for the creature, to see that her sufferings have served my life so holy, that she will have for completion my Divine Will palpitating in her! Does it seem little to you that the Creator makes seen that he has need of the creature, he who can (do) all and gives life to all? Is this not the greatest excess of our love?"

Jesus became silent, and I remained to think of that which Jesus had said to me, and I saw in me lined up all the sufferings, suffered, that spread rays of light, that transformed in the sufferings of Jesus formed the divine support, the defense of creatures, that formed voices, continuous groans, that asked that the Divine Will might come to reign. Whence he resumed his speech:

"My good daughter, our love is so much, that anywhere and everywhere, even on the little blade of grass, in the air that she breathes, in the water that she drinks, even beneath her steps while she stamps (upon) the earth, we make our voices arrive, our wooing cry of love: 'I love you, I love you, I love you!' But our love does not give us peace if it is not sensed (to be) listened to by the creature and she is not heard to repeat, 'I love you, I love you', and in our delirium of love and sorrow saying: 'Aye, does no one listen to us? Aye! Does no one repeat to us "I love you, I love you?" To what advantage (is it) to say "I love you, I love you." If no one reciprocates it to us? To whom do we say "I love you": to the air, to the wind, to the void?') Our 'I love you' does not find one to whom to direct itself, where to rest itself, if it does not find the 'I love you' of the creature that receives it in order to reciprocate it with hers, so that her love finds refuge in our immense love in order to rest itself and to magnify itself always more.

"When the creature listens to our 'I love you' and reciprocates it, in our emphasis of love, and as reconciled by her love, we say: 'So we have been listened to; our love has found one to whom to direct itself, where to shelter itself; we have been recognized, because we have found one who says to us "I love you."' Then our love makes festive. Instead, when we do not find one who says to us, 'I love you', we do not find one who recognizes us, nor one who listens to us, nor one who loves us.

"How hard it is to love and not be loved! How I would like everyone might know it, that with my love I sustain them, embrace them, love them and make them breathe, I love them and give heartbeat to them, I love them and give word to them, I love them and give step to them, I love them and give motion to them, thought, food, water; all that which they are and receive is (an) effect of my love that races. Hence, is it not a horrendous ingratitude not to love me? It renders our love martyred, because we love and we are not loved in return."

After this I thought to myself: "But how can the creature know when Our Lord says to her his repeated and uninterrupted 'I love you', in order to reciprocate them with hers?" And my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, and yet it is easy to know it, if the creature possesses as her own life my Divine Will, because he gives his divine hearing to her and makes her listen to when her Creator says 'I love you' to her; and not only the hearing, but also his divine word, in a way that the hearing hears and the word says 'I love you', rather, before he says to her 'I love you' he already warns that she must receive the 'I love you' of her God, and she has met his 'I love you' with the divine 'I love you', almost as putting herself to compete with her Creator.

“My Will wants to give everything to one who lives in him; (he) gives his arms in order to embrace her and his steps in order to race after him. How we feel our divine nature all love and the need to love, so much so that if one could prevent us from loving, it would suffocate us, as removing from us the breath from our divine life, because in us, our breath, our motion, our own Volition is love, (and) not loving for us is impossible, thus, one who possesses our Will feels the need of loving us and of always loving us. Therefore only she knows how to put order between the Creator and the creature, and she is to light of our love, of our sanctity, and it puts her in communication (with) our Supreme Being.”

* * *

December 6, 1937

As one works in the Divine Volition, Jesus sounds his bell in order to call the inhabitants of heaven and those of earth. How the company of the creature is urgent to divine love.

I feel his life in me, overflowing with love, that as he moves, so seas of love are emitted, that, investing everyone, says to every heart: “Ah, look at me, know me, receive me in your hearts! Give me the dominion! I come loaded with all my goods, in order to have life together with you. But alas, I am not recognized, rather they reject me; and not being known, my supreme laws of love do not have vigor in them; my goods remain with me, without being able to give them to my children.”

Whence I followed the acts of the Divine Will, and arrived in the blue vault bombarded with stars, I called together with me the inhabitants of heaven and the inhabitants of the earth, so that all together we might reciprocate with our little love the infinite love of God, that, with so much love, he had created the expanse of the sky, as in order to cover us and hide us in his love; hence, everyone, without excluding anyone, holds the duty of loving him who has loved us so much. Now, while I did this, my highest good, Jesus, visiting my little soul, all love said to me:

“My blessed daughter, if you might know with what love I awaited you, that you might make your call to everyone, in order to feel in your act the exchange of love of everyone! No sooner than you commence to call, (then) I sound the bell to the celestial inhabitants and to those of the earth; and then I cease sounding, when I see that everyone has raced into your act.

“The first ones are the celestial inhabitants, that living in my Volition, neither can nor want to put themselves apart; they feel the unifying Divine Will, that unites them in that act; rather, they wait with anxiety one who calls them, in order to be able to reciprocate me in love, and since who calls them is a creature of the earth that possesses her free will, in her they feel that they can give me new love, and oh, how they rejoice to the sound of my bell, and they fly in order to put themselves into that act of the creature that wants to love me!

“For the inhabitants of the earth, not living all in my Volition, they feel very little (of) the vibrating sound of my bell.

“When I see everyone together in that act, our Divinity puts itself at attention in amorous expectation, and oh, how beautiful it is to feel in that act innumerable voices that say to us: ‘We love you, we love you, we acknowledge you in your works! How much you have loved us, and for everything we reciprocate you in love!’

“Our Supreme Being, wounded by so many voices, emits other seas of love, and covers and invests everyone with such joys and happiness that everyone remains enraptured, enjoying through means of that creature a greater paradise.

“One who lives in our Volition gives us the field for new works, makes our love overflow (with) more force, which not being able to contain it, he emits new seas of love in order to love the creature and in order to make us love, and oh, how much we love her!

“You must know that the thing that is most urgent to our Supreme Being is the company of the creature. We do not want to be the isolated God, nor to hold her far from us; isolation has never been the bearer of great works or of happiness; company matures the birth of good and makes arise the most beautiful works to the light. Behold therefore we created so many things, in order to have (the) occasions to have her company so many times for how many things we created, and since that which we did one time we are always in the act of doing it, one who lives in our Volition is always in company with us; she undergoes our creative act and we receive the glory, the exchange of the created love.

“Therefore we hold her company in the celestial spheres, in the radiant sun, in the auras of the wind, in the air that everyone breathes, in the murmur of the sea; anywhere and everywhere she follows us, defends us and reciprocates us in love. She does not know how to live without us or without loving us, and we cannot be without her, and jealous we hold her pressed to our divine bosom.”

Then he added: “The company of the creature is so very dear to us, that we form our recreation with her, we make the greatest decisions for our glory and for the good of human generations we complete our designs while we are in company. Our love rises to new life, and goes inventing new contrivances of love and new surprises in order to chain creatures to always love us and more.

“If not for company, with whom should we vent ourselves? Upon whom to form our designs? Where to rest our love that always rises? Hence, our goods, without company, would be depressed, without being able to give life to that which we want to do for love of creatures. Do you see therefore how much her company is necessary to our love, to our works and to the completion of our Volition?”

* * *

December 8, 1937

On the Conception of the Queen. Her race of love. Where she found her Creator she found herself in order to love him. How she remained conceived in each created thing, and became constituted Queen of Heaven, of the sun and of everything.

Today my poor mind, swimming in the Divine Volition, found in act the conception of the Queen of Heaven, and oh, the marvels, the surprises, are indescribable! And I thought to myself: “But what else can one say about the Immaculate Conception, after having said so much?” And my amiable Jesus, surprising me, all festive, as if he might want to celebrate the conception of the Celestial Queen, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, oh how many other things I hold to say about the conception of this celestial creature! She was a life that we created, not a work; from a work to a life there is (a) great difference; and then divine and human life, in which there had to be the highest accord of sanctity, of love, of power, that the one had to be able to balance with the other.

“Such were (the) prodigies that we did in creating this life, that we had to make the greatest prodigy, and a chain of miracles, in order that this life might be able to contain the goods that we deposited in her.

“This holy creature, conceived without original sin, felt the life of her Creator, his operative Will, which did not do other than make arise new seas of love, and oh, how she loved us! She felt us inside of herself and outside of herself, and oh, how she raced, in order to be able to find herself everywhere and throughout everything, where there was the life of her Creator! For her it would have been the hardest and cruelest martyrdom, if she could not find herself throughout everything in order to love us. Our Will put her in flight, and our life, while it was in her, made her find herself throughout everything in order to have her love and in order to enjoy she who so loved (and by whom) she was loved in return.

“Now hear another surprise; as she was conceived she commenced her race, and we loving her with infinite love [not loving her would also be the cruelest martyrdom for us], hence, as she raced in order to trace out our life that she possessed within [because a good is not ever completed if one does not possess it within and without], hence, as she raced, so she remained conceived in the sky, in the celestial spheres, of which the stars made chorus and hymned and declaimed her as their Queen, and she acquired the rights of Queen over all the celestial spheres. Our immensity awaited her in the sun, and she raced and remained conceived in the sun, which, making itself diadem for her adorable head, invested her with light and praised her Queen of the light. Our immensity and power awaited her in the wind, in the air, in the sea, and she raced, raced, not ever pausing her race, and she remained conceived in the wind, in the air, in the sea, and she acquired the rights of Queen over all.

“So that the Sovereign Lady made flow her power, her love, her maternity in the sky, in the sun, in the wind, in the sea, even in the air that everyone breathes.

“So that anywhere and everywhere and in everyone she remained conceived; where there was our power and immensity she erected her throne in order to love us and to love everyone. This was the greatest miracle that our powerful love did, bilocating her, multiplying her in all things and created beings, so that we might find her in everyone and everywhere.

“The Celestial Queen does as (the) sun does, that if someone does not want its light, the light imposes itself and says: ‘Whether you want me or you do not want me, I must make my race, I must give you light.’ However someone can hide from the light of the sun, but from the Sovereign Lady no one can hide. If this were not so, one could not say with facts Universal Queen and Mother of everyone and everything; and we do not know how to say words if we do not make them facts.

“You see therefore where our power, our love arrived, in the conception of this holy creature? Even to elevate her to such heights and glory as to be able to say: ‘Where there is my Creator there am I in order to love him. He has invested me with such power and glory, that I am Sovereign of all. All depends on me; my dominion extends itself everywhere, so much so that, while I am conceived in all things, I hold conceived in me the sky, the sun, the wind, the sea and everything, everything I possess within me, even my Creator, and I am Sovereign and Mistress of him, of everyone. This is all my unparalleled heights, my glory that no one can arrive to me, my great honor, that with my love I embrace everyone, love everyone and am for everyone, even the Mother of my Creator.’”

* * *

December 14, 1937

How the human nature holds its day. (For) one who lives in the Divine Volition, he forms his day in the depths of the soul. Prodigies that happen in him.

I felt as immersed in the Divine Volition; rather it seemed to me that his waves of light, as I went doing my acts in the Fiat, his light widened itself and centralized itself more in me, and the need grew to love him, to breathe him more than my life; so that without him I felt without breath, without heat, without heartbeat; and as I returned to do my acts in the Divine Volition, so I felt return the breath, the heat, the divine heartbeat, to cheer my poor existence. Hence, for me it is a need and need of life, living in the Divine Volition.

And my sweet Jesus, returning to visit my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, as nature holds its day for human life, in which all the actions of life become unfolded, so my Divine Will forms his day in the depths of the creature that lives in my Will.

“As he gives beginning to form his acts in her, calling her as his life, thus he gives beginning to his day, forming a most splendid aurora in the depths of the soul. This aurora gathers its power and renews in her the power of the Father, the wisdom of the Son, the virtue of the Holy Spirit; so that her day commences together with the Most Holy Trinity, which descends into the littlest acts and hideaways of the creature, in order to have life together with her and do that which she does.

“This aurora puts in flight all the darkness of the soul, in a way that all is light for her, and he puts himself at attention as a vigilant sentinel, so that all her acts can receive the light of the Divine Will.

“This aurora is the first repose of God in the room of the soul; it is the beginning of the eternal day, in which commences the life of the Supreme Being together with the creature.

“My Will does not move himself nor is he able to nor does he know how to do without the adorable Trinity; at most he goes forward, he does as (an) actor, but he drags them along with an irresistible way and there forms the divine Cabinet where as to enjoy their creature, so very beloved by them. Where he reigns, my Will holds (the) power to centralize everything, even our divine life.

“How beautiful is the beginning of the day for one who lives in our Fiat! It is the enchantment of all heaven; and if all the Celestial Court were subject to envy, they would envy she who is so fortunate as to possess in her soul, while she still lives in time, the beginning of the eternal day, precious day in which God gives the beginning to unfold his life together with the creature.

“Now, as she passes on to do the second acts in the Divine Volition, thus arises the sun of my eternal Volition. So much is his fullness of light, that it invests all the earth, visits all hearts and carries the ‘good morning’ of light, of new joys to all the Celestial Court. This light is crammed with love, with adoration, with thanksgiving, with gratefulness, with glory, with benediction; but of whom are they? Of the creature, who with her act in my Volition has made arise the sun that shines on everyone, in a way that everyone finds one who has loved God for them, one who has adored him, thanked, blessed, glorified; each one finds what they were obliged to do toward God; everyone is supplied for.

“An act in my Will must enclose all, hold power, capacity to supply for everyone and to do good for everyone, otherwise it could not be called an act done in my Will. These acts are crammed with unheard of prodigies, worthy of our creative work.

“Now, as she returns to her third act in our Volition, he forms the full noon of our eternal sun in the creature; and do you know what she gives us in this full noon? She prepares the table for us; and do you know what she gives us for food? The love that we have given her, our divine qualities. Everything has the imprint of our beauty, of our chaste and pure perfumes, she is so pleasing to us that we get satisfaction from her; much more than, if there (was) missing something for our decency, being in our Will she is mistress of all our goods, therefore she takes that which she wants from us from our treasures, and prepares for us the most beautiful table, worthy of our Supreme Majesty; and we invite all the angels and saints to take a seat at this celestial table, so that they might receive, to feed themselves with us on that love which the creature has given to us that lives in our Volition.

“Now, after we have banqueted together, the other acts that she does in our Volition serve, some to form for us celestial music, some loving songs, some the most beautiful scenes, some to repeat our works, that are always in act. In short, she holds us always occupied. And when she has given the course to all her actions in our Volition, we give her rest and we rest there together. And after the rest we give field to work of giving beginning to another day, and so on.

“And many times this faithful daughter of ours [because true fidelity is in the living in the Divine Will], if she sees that her brothers and our children are to be struck by deserved scourges for their sins, she doesn’t close her day, but prays and suffers in order to implore rescripts of graces, as much for the soul as for the bodies. Therefore the life of one who lives in my Divine Volition is the new joy and glory of heaven, the help and (the) thanks of the earth.”

* * *

December 18, 1937

All that which one does in the Divine Will acquires life, and these lives swim and float in the seas of love in the Divine Volition.

I am prey/(in the power) of the Divine Volition, which does not do other than spring forth from himself seas of light and of love; but it seems that he is not content if he does not see the life of the light of his Will and the little love of the creature that, springing forth from her, they meet together, kiss each other, love each other with one love alone, and oh, how he makes festive! And in his emphasis of love he says: "The life of my Will is inside and outside of the creature, so that I possess her, she is all mine."

So I thought: "The little love of the creature does not disappear in the immense sea of the Divine love?"

And my always amiable Jesus, returning to visit my little soul, as inundated in his flames of love, said to me:

"Daughter of my Will, all that which the creature does that holds my Will for beginning and for life, even though they might be little (things), each one contains a divine life. So that in the interminable sea of my Volition and of my love so many little lives of love, of light, come to swim, to float, that have taken position in our sea; and oh, how we feel ourselves reciprocated, because it is life of love that she has given us in her little love and life of light that she has given us in doing her acts, because they have been formed in the center of the life of our Fiat, that possessing true life, all that which goes forth from him are lives that first he creates them, forms them in (himself), and then he puts them forth, as giving birth to them from his Divine Bosom/Womb.

"Hence, each 'I love you' possesses the life of love; each adoration possesses the life of divine adoration; each virtue that (she) managed to possess, some the life of divine goodness, some wisdom, some fortitude, some power, some sanctity, and since they are little lives that have received life from our life, they don't know how to be and they come to continue their little lives in our interminable seas, and oh, how they love us! They will be little, but we know what little the creature can give us, because great things, immensities, are ours. The creature does not even have (a place) where to put them, if we want to give them; therefore it is necessary that she (take) refuge in us and we, seeing her in our seas, feel reciprocated with that love that we want from the creature."

I remained in thought of that which Jesus said, and he added:

"You want to see it, so that it convinces you of that which I say to you?"

Now, in this while, my dear Jesus made me see his interminable seas, which invested heavens and earth; and the little love of the creature and all the rest, done in his Divine Volition, as so many little, but beautiful lives, they swam in these seas; some remained at the surface, in order to look steadily at their Creator, some raced into (his) arms; one embraced him, another kissed him, another penetrated into the sea; in short they made for him thousands of mannerisms and stratagems to the one (from whom) they had received life. The Supreme Being looked at them, but with such love, that called all the Celestial Court to celebrate together with him, and he said to everyone:

"Look at them, how beautiful they are! These lives, formed by the acts of the creature, from my Will, are my glory, my triumph, my smile, the echo of my love, of our harmony, of our felicity!"

Now, these lives were seen in the Sun, in the stars, in the air, in the wind, in the sea; each 'I love you' was a life of love, which raced to take the place of honor in the divine seas. What enchantment!

What beauties! How many inexpressible surprises! I remained mute, and didn't know what to say.

And Jesus: "Has my daughter seen? How many rare beauties of life my Will knows how to do! His love, his jealousy is so much, that he guards them in his own sea.

"But (this) is not yet everything, my daughter; I want to tell you another surprise. If the creature lives in my Volition, one 'I love you' does not wait for the other, with the little life of love that it contains within the prodigious 'I love you', some race ahead, some escape behind, some fly in order to take (a) place in our interminable seas; they compete amongst themselves, some race faster, some want to put themselves ahead more, some want to be the first to throw themselves into our arms, and some make the leap even to shut themselves in our divine bosom... Life cannot remain still. These little lives, although little, have a breath, a heartbeat, a step, a voice; they are all eyes in order to watch us; therefore they breathe love and give love to us, they palpitate love, they have our step, in which we move and walk because we love; their voices speak to us always of love, and they love so much, that they want to always hear our story of eternal love.

"These little lives never die; they are eternal with us. The 'I love you', the acts in my Volition, populate heaven. These little lives diffuse themselves everywhere: in all the creation, in the saints, in the angels; and how many of them race around the Queen! Everywhere they want their place; they arrive to descend into the hearts of the creatures of the earth and they say between themselves: 'How, should our Creator be without our little life of love in human hearts? Ah, no, no! We are little; we can enter into them and love our Creator for them.'

"These little lives are the enchantment of all heaven; they are the greatest wonders of our Supreme Being; they are the true reciprocators of our eternal love; they have follies so strange of love that (by) only looking at them one knows that they are our daughters, lives formed and created by our Divine Volition."

But who can say my surprises? And Jesus:

"Do not marvel; even my life down here did not do other than emit life from me, so much so that my steps walk still in the presence of everyone, they are never stopped, rather all the centuries will have the life of my steps. My mouth still speaks, because each word of mine contained a life, and therefore still speaks; only one who does not want to listen to me does not hear my voice. My tears are full of lives and are always in act of pouring themselves upon the sinner in order to touch him, move him to remorse and convert him, and on just and good souls, in order to embellish them and snatch away their hearts in order to make me loved. Every suffering, every drop of my blood, they contain my distinct lives, and therefore they form the force of the sufferings of creatures and the labor of all their sins. They are the prodigies of my Volition.

"Where he reigns, with his creative virtue by nature, over each trifle, even (though) little, he creates life in order to make us loved. You must be convinced that to so much of our love, without which no one might love us we cannot be. Therefore our Will, that thinks to everything and knows how to do everything, creates so many lives from the acts of the creature that live in him, he does as a supplicator to our love, and renders less agitated our anxieties of love and our eternal deliriums, that we want to be loved.

“Therefore always live in our Volition; he loves always and you will be the new enchantment of all heaven and our perennial festival, and we will be yours; we will celebrate each other.”

* * *

December 21, 1937

How the Kingdom of the Divine Will is decreed in the Consistory of the adorable Trinity upon the earth. The new breath of God with which the creature will be renewed.

My poor mind was occupied by the great wonders and prodigies that the Divine Volition knows how to do if he reigns in the creature, and I thought to myself: “What happy fate to live in him! A greater fortune there can not be, neither in heaven nor on earth. But how can he ever come to reign upon the earth, if evils, (and) sins, abound so much that they horrify? Only a divine power with a prodigy of his of the greatest can do it; otherwise the Kingdom of the Divine Will will be in heaven, but not upon the earth.”

But while I thought this, my dear Jesus, the sweet (of) my Life, visiting my poor soul, with inexpressible goodness said to me:

“My good daughter, it is decreed in the Consistory of the Most Holy Trinity that my Divine Will will have his Kingdom upon the earth; and how many prodigies there are needed, we will do them; we will not spare anything, in order to have that which we want. But we, in the work, always use the simplest, but powerful ways, to overwhelm heavens and earth, (and) all creatures, in the act that we want.

“You must know that in the creation, in order to infuse life into man, not was needed from us but our omnipotent breath; but how many prodigies in that breath! We created the soul, endowing her with the three powers, true image of our adorable Trinity. With the soul she had the heartbeat, the breath, the circulation of blood, the motion, the heat, the word, the sight. What thing was needed from us in order to make all these prodigies in man? Our simplest act, armed with our power, that is our breath, and from the race of our love, that not being able to contain it, it raced, raced toward him, even to make of him the greatest prodigy of all the creative work.

“Now, my daughter, with man not living in our Divine Volition, his three powers have been obscured, and our adorable image deformed in him, in a way that he has lost the first heartbeat of love of God in his divine breath in his human breath; that is, not that he has lost it: he does not sense it, hence he does not feel the circulation of divine life, the motion of good, the heat of supreme love, the word of God in his, the sight to be able to look at his Creator. All has remained obscured, weakened and perhaps even deformed.

“Now, what thing is needed from us in order to renew this man? We will return again to breathe in him with more strength and growing love. We will breathe into the depths of his soul, we will breathe forth more strongly into the center of his rebellious will, but so very strongly as to shake off from him the evils by which he is bound; his passions will remain knocked down and petrified before the power of our breath, they will themselves burn from our divine fire, and the human will will feel the palpitating life of his Creator, by which he, as veiled, will hide in him, and he will return to be the bearer of his Creator.

“Oh, how happy he will feel! With our breath we will renew him, we will restore him to health; we will do as a most tender mother that, having her child crippled, she pours herself upon him by way of breath, by breathing forth, by puff of breath, and then she allows him to breathe forth when he has been restored to health and made beautiful as she wanted him. The power of our breath will not leave him; then we will cease blowing (in) him when we will see him returning into our fatherly arms, (as) beautiful as we want him, and then we will feel that the child has recognized our paternal goodness, that we love him so much.

“You see therefore what is needed from us in order to make our Will come to reign upon the earth: the power of our omnipotent breath. With it we will renew our life in him. All the truths that I have manifested, the great prodigies of living in my Volition, will be the most beautiful properties, most great, of which I will make a gift to him. Even this is a certain sign that his Kingdom will come upon the earth, because if I speak, first I do the deeds and then I speak; my word is the confirmation of the gift, of the prodigies that I want to do. Hence, to what gain is it to expose my divine properties, make them known, if his Kingdom should not come upon the earth?”

Now I continue with the same argument on the 18 day of December, how our acts done in the Divine Volition change themselves into life.

Whence I thought to myself: “(There) are so many good works, but not brought forth from within the Divine Volition, that his seed of life being missing they cannot be life, but works, what will they be in the divine order?”

And my sweet Jesus, always benign, added:

“My daughter, possessing in nature his creative life, it is no wonder that each act of the creature, even a little ‘I love you’, done in my Volition, becomes as matured in the center of his divine life, and as co-natural they acquire life. All that which one does in him becomes regenerated in our eternal love, and acquires the long progeny of so many divine lives that are exclusively ours.

“Now, the good works not done in my Volition can be so many beautiful ornaments in the creative work, some more some less beautiful but not ever life. Even in the order of creation there are lives and there are ornaments. The flowers are not life, and yet they form a beautiful ornament to the earth, however not permanent; the fruits are not life, but they serve to feed man and to let him taste the so many varied sweetnesses, but they are not lasting, and he cannot always taste them how many times he wants. If the flowers, the fruits were life, man could enjoy them how many times he might want. The sun, the sky, the stars, the wind, the sea, are not life, but since they are our works, how many goods don’t they do? First, they serve as the most beautiful (and) primary habitation of man. What are their habitations in comparison to the great habitation that we made of the entire universe? There is an azure vault bombarded with gold that never loses color, there is a sun that never goes out, there is an air that making itself breathable gives life, there is a wind that purifies and refreshes, and then so many other things.

“To our love it was necessary to make a mixture of works and of lives, because they had to serve to felicitate man, and because they had to serve to the decorum, to the propriety, to the habitation of him whom we created with so much love. So having done more than sufficient works, it was up to him to enjoy our works and to live in our Volition, in order to form so many lives of love and of glory for he who so very loved him.

“But the difference is great between works and life. Life does not perish, but works are subject to so many changes, and if they are not right and holy, instead of forming the ornament they form our dishonor and their confusion, and perhaps also their condemnation.”

* * *

December 25, 1937

The descent of the Divine Word. How he departed from heaven and remained; prodigies of the incarnation. The beginning of the festival of the Divine Will. How in his divine works he puts aside human ingratitude. The graft. How the love of Jesus paid for everyone and ransomed us.

I was following the acts of the Divine Will, and my poor mind stopped at the act of the descent of the Divine Word upon the earth. My God, how many marvels, how many surprises of love, of power, of divine wisdom! They are such and so many, that one does not know where to begin to speak.

And my beloved Jesus, as inundated in his sea of love that raises its waves, surprising me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, in my descent upon the earth (there) were such and so many marvels, (in) our enthusiasm of love, that neither to the angels nor to creatures is it given to comprehend that which our Divinity worked in the mystery of my Incarnation.

“Now, you must now know that our Divine Being possesses by nature his incessant motion. If this motion might cease even (for) an instant, that which cannot be, all things would remain paralyzed and without life, because all things, life, conservation, and all that which exists in heaven and on earth, everything depends on that motion.

“Hence in the descent from heaven to earth, I, Word and Son of the Father, departed from our first motion; that is, I remained and I departed. The Father and the Holy Spirit descended with me, they were concurrent, neither did I do any act that I didn’t do it together with them, and they remained upon the full throne of majesty in the celestial regions.

“So in departing, my immensity, my love, my power, descended together with me; and my love, that gives of the incredible and is not content if it does not form from my life so many lives for how many creatures exist, not only (did it do this), but anywhere and everywhere it formed my life, multiplied it, and holding my immensity in its power, it filled it with so many of my lives, so that each one might have a life of mine all (their) own and the Divinity might have the glory, the honor of so many of our divine lives for how many things and creatures we brought forth to the light of day.

“Aye, our love paid us for the work of creation, and by forming so many lives of ours it not only reciprocated us, but it gave us more than that which we had done. Our Divinity remained enraptured, and had an enchantment so sweet in seeing the contrivances, the stratagems of our love, in seeing so many lives of ours dispersed, (our love) making use of our immensity as circumference in which to put them; so that while it saw my life as center [they saw each other] my immensity and power as circumference in which these innumerable lives became deposited, (that) finding everything and everyone they gave themselves in order to love us and to make themselves loved.”

I remained surprised in hearing this and my sweet Jesus, not giving me time, immediately added:

“My daughter, do not marvel; we, when we work, make a complete work, in a way that no one should be able to say: ‘he has not done this for me, his life it is not all mine.’

“Aye, love does not arise when things are not owned and are not held in one’s own power. And then, does not the sun also do this, work created by us? That while it makes itself light for the eyes, even to fill them all with light, at the same time it is full light, complete to the hand that works, to the step that walks? In a way that everyone, things created and creatures can say: ‘The sun is mine.’ And while the center of the sun is in the heights of the atmosphere, its light departs and remains, and with its circumference of light it invests the earth and makes itself life and light of each one, even of the little flower and of the little blade of grass.

“The sun is not life; light holds and light gives, and all the goods that its light contains.

“Our Divinity is life and author and life of everything; hence, in the descent from heaven to earth I had to make complete acts, and more than sun make (a) display of my life and multiply it into so many lives, so that heaven and earth and everyone might be able to possess my life. It would not have been a work of our wisdom and our infinite love if this were not so.”

Jesus became silent, and I continued to think of the birth of the little baby Jesus. And he added:

“Little daughter of my Volition, the feast of my birth was feast and as the beginning of the feast of my Divine Will. As the angels sang: ‘Glory to God in the highest of heavens, and peace on earth to men of good will’, the angels, the creation, were posed to feast, and while they celebrated my birth, they celebrated the feast of my Divine Will, because with my birth our Divinity received the true glory even in the highest of heavens, and men will have true peace when they will recognize my Will, they will give dominion to him and they will let him reign. Then their will will be made good, they will feel the divine strength, and then (the) heavens and earth will sing together: ‘glory to God in the highest of heavens and peace on earth to the men that will possess the Divine Will!’ all will be remitted in them and they will possess true peace.”

Whence I continued to think of the birth of the little King Jesus, and I said to him: “Dear Little Baby, tell me, what did you do when you saw so much human ingratitude to so much of your love?”

And Jesus: “My daughter, if I had held account of human ingratitude to so much of my love, I would have taken the way to go to heaven from it; hence, I would have grieved and embittered my love and changed the feast into mourning.

“So do you want to know what I did in my greatest works in order to make them more beautiful? With pomp and with the greater show of my love I put everything aside, human ingratitude, sins, miseries, weaknesses, and I gave the course to my greatest works, as if these (things) were not so. If I had wanted to mind the evils of man, I would not have been able to work great works, nor put into field all my love; I would remain impeded, suffocated in my love. Instead, in order to be free in my works and in order to make them how much more beautiful I can make them, I put everything aside, and if needs be I cover everything with my love, in a way that I don’t see but love and my Will, and thus I go ahead in my greater works and I do them as if no one had offended me. Because for our glory nothing must be missing to the decorum, to the beauty and the greatness of our works.

“Therefore I would like that you also do not occupy yourself with your weaknesses and with your miseries and with your evils, because how much more one thinks of oneself, so much more one feels weak, so many more evils drown the poor creature, and the miseries tighten themselves stronger around her. By thinking of them, weakness feeds weakness, and the poor creature goes falling more, the evils take more strength, (and) the miseries make her die of hunger; instead, with not thinking of them, by themselves they fade away.

“Instead, all to the contrary with good. One good feeds the other good; one act of love calls the other love; one abandonment in my Volition makes one feel in oneself new divine life, so that the thought of good forms the food, the strength, in order to do the other good. Therefore I want that your thought does not occupy itself with other than to love me and to live in my Will. My love will burn your miseries and all your evils, and my Divine Volition will constitute himself (as) your life, and with your miseries he will make use of them in order to form the footstool where to erect his throne.”

Whence I continued to think of little Jesus born, and oh, how it tore my heart to pieces in seeing him crying, sobbing, wailing, trembling with cold! I would have liked to put one of my ‘I love you’s for each suffering and tear of the divine child, in order to re-warm him and to quiet his crying. And Jesus added:

“My daughter, I feel one who lives in my Volition to me in my tears, in my whimpers; I feel her in me flowing in my sob of crying, in the tremblings of my infantile limbs; and in virtue of my Volition that she possesses, she changes my tears into smiles, my sobs into joys of heaven. With her songs of love she re-warms me and changes my sufferings into kisses and embraces. Rather, you must know that one who lives in my Volition receives continuous grafts of all that which my humanity does. If I think, I graft her thoughts; if I speak and pray, I graft her word; if I work, I graft her hands; there is no thing that (I) might do that don’t form (the) graft in order to graft the creature and to make the repetition of my Will in her. Much more than my Divine Will being in her, I found my power, my sanctity, my own life, in order to let me do that which I wanted with her.

“How many prodigies can I not do where I find my Will in the creature? I came upon the earth in order to cover all with my love, in order to drown the evils themselves and to burn all with my love. For justice I wanted to redo (for) my Father, because it was just that he might become reinstated in the honor, in the glory, in the love and gratitude that everyone owed to him. Hence my love did not give itself peace; it filled the voids with his glory, with his honor, and arrives to so much that by way of love it pays the Divinity, that had created a sky, a sun, a wind, a sea, an earth in bloom and all the rest, which man had not even said one thanks, for so many goods received; he has been the true thief, the ungrateful one, the usurper of our goods. My love raced, raced, in order to fill the abysses of distance between the Creator and the creature; he paid my Celestial Father by way of love, and by ways of love he repurchased all the human generations in order to re-give anew to them the life of my Divine Will; he had already formed so many lives of himself in order to form the redemption of them. And when my love pays, so much is his value that he can pay for everyone and reacquire that which he wants. Therefore you are already bought by my love, hence leave me to enjoy you and possess you.”

* * *

December 28, 1937

How the redemption served to put into safety the habitations, the Kingdom of my Will will serve in order to put into safety and return the habitation to him who had created it. How in every act done in the Divine Will, God creates his divine life.

So, I continued to think of the Divine Will. How many moving scenes before my mind! A Jesus that cries, that prays, that suffers, because he wants to be (the) life of each creature, and a throng of crippled children, some blind, some mute, some lame, some paralyzed, some covered with sores to make one pity; and dear Jesus, with a love that only he can have, who races now to one, now to the other, if they are afflicted, he presses them to (his) Heart, touches them with his creative hands in order to heal them, and says to (them) quietly, quietly to the heart:

“My child, I love you; receive my love and give me yours and by way of love I will heal you.”

“My Jesus, my dear Life, how much you love us!”

Now, while I felt myself suffocate from his love (and) breathing in me with his burning breath, surprising me he said to me:

“Daughter of my love, let me relieve myself, because I can no longer contain myself. How hard it is to love and not be loved in return; and not to have one to give my surprises of love is the most indescribable suffering for our Supreme Being. Therefore listen to me.

“Now, you must know that I came upon the earth in order to put into safety my habitations. Man is my habitation, which I had formed (for) me with so much love, in which in order to make him worthy of me, my power and the creative art of my wisdom had to concur. This habitation was a prodigy of our love and of our divine hands.

“Now, with removing himself from our Will, our habitation became collapsed, obscured and (a) habitation of enemies and thieves. What sorrow was (this) not for us!

“So that my life down here served to return and renew and put into safety this habitation, that we had formed (for) ourselves with so much love. He was also ours; it was worthwhile to save him, in order to be able to live (in) him again. Therefore, in order to save him I gave all the possible and imaginable remedies; exhibited my own life in order to strengthen him, to cement him again; I poured out all my blood in order to wash him from all the filths, and with my death (I) re-give them life in order to make him worthy of receiving again as inhabitant he who had created him.

“Now, having given all the means in order to save our habitation, it was decorous for us to put into safety the King who should live (there). Our love remained at half of its course, impeded and as suspended and arrested in its walk. Therefore the Kingdom of our Will will serve to put into safety that Fiat rejected by the creature, to give him entrance into his habitation, to make him reign and dominate as the sovereign that he is. It would not be a work worthy of our creative wisdom to save the habitations, and he who should live in them goes wandering, in the open, without Kingdom and without dominion. To save the habitations and not to save ones own self, nor to be able to live in the saved habitations, would be absurd, as if we might not have sufficient power in order to save ourselves; this will never be; if we have had (the) power to save our creative work, we will have (the) power to put into safety our life in our work. Ah, yes, we will have our Kingdom; we will make unheard of prodigies in order to have it! Our love will complete its walk, it will not remain at half, it will get rid of the fetters, will continue its course bringing the balm to the wounds of the human volition, will adorn with divine friezes these habitations, and with its rule will call our Fiat to live and reign, giving him all the rights that are his due. If the Kingdom of my Will was not certain, to what benefit (would it be) to repair, to renew the habitations?

“Ah, my daughter, you do not understand well what it means not to do our Will! All rights become taken away, they suffocate so many of our divine lives.

“Our love was and is so much, that in each act of the creature we wanted to create ourselves, in order to make ourselves loved, in order to make ourselves known and in order to be in continuous exchange of life between creatures and ourselves. To do this without our Will is impossible; he alone holds (the) power and (the) virtue of rendering the creature adaptable in order to receive our divine life, and puts our love en route in order to create ourselves in the act of the creature.

“You must know that in each act that one does in our Will, an irresistible force calls us. We watch it, reflect in it, and with a love that it is not given to us to resist we create our life, and if you might know what it means to create our life? A show of love enters so great, that in our emphasis of love we say: ‘Ah, the creature has let us form our life in her act!’ we feel (a) parity of love, of sanctity, of our glory, and we remain to wait with anxiety the continuous repetition of her acts in our Volition, in order to repeat our life, in order to have in her act ourselves that loves each other, that glorifies each other; and then we have the true purpose of the creation, that everything serves us. Even the littlest act of the creature serves in order to repeat our (life) and to make (a) show of our love. Therefore the living in our Volition will be everything for us and everything for the creature.

* * *

January 2, 1938

In the Divine Volition, the miseries, the weaknesses, change into the most beautiful conquests. How all that which one does in the Divine Volition becomes formed first in heaven, all the Celestial Court takes part, and there it descends to the good of the earth.

I continue my flight in the Divine Will, and I thought to myself: “The living in the Divine Will gives of the incredible. How can one live in him, if there are so many miseries, weaknesses that are felt, the encounters, the circumstances, that, for how much they are felt, it seems that the Divine Volition with his light wants to invest everything and with his love burn everything, in order to make it that between the creature and him nothing should exist that is not his Will and love?"

But while I thought this, my dear Jesus, who is as on the look out in order to spy, in order to see if anything passes in me that is not his Will, said to me:

"My good daughter, my jealousy is so much for one who lives in my Will, that I do not tolerate neither a thought, nor a weakness or anything else that has life in her.

"Now, you must know that in order to pass to live in my Will there is needed decision on the part of God and firm decision on the part of the creature, to live in him. Now, this decision becomes animated by a new life, by a divine fortitude to render it impugnable to all the evils and circumstances of life. This decision does not suffer changes, because when we decide we don't put ourselves to decide with little boys that make a game of their decisions, but with one who knows what he must withstand.

"Therefore we put (forth) ours, so that it does not come (to) less. It can be that one feels the miseries, the evils, the weaknesses; but this says nothing, because before the power and sanctity of my Volition, these die, they feel the pain of death and flee; much more so because the miseries are not born from the human will, because it is sunk in my Volition, hence it cannot be Volition if it (is) not that which I want. And many times my Volition makes use of these miseries to make of them some of the most beautiful conquests and to extend there above them his life, to form his Kingdom, to extend there his dominion, and to convert weaknesses into victories and triumphs, because for one who lives in him everything must serve him as the most beautiful love that the creature gives to him who forms her life, almost as the stones, the bricks, the rubble serve to him who wants to make a beautiful habitation.

"Now, you must know that before entering to live in our Volition we purify everything, we cover and hide everything in our love, in a way that we should not see in her (anything) but love. When our love has hidden everything, even the miseries, then she takes (her) place in our Volition; rather, each time that she emits her acts, first it becomes purified and then he invests it and makes of it that which he wants.

"My daughter, in my Will there are neither judgments nor judges, because it is such and so much the sanctity, the order, the purity, the utility of our ways, that they must bow their heads and adore that which we do. Therefore do not lose peace, nor occupy yourself with miseries and circumstances, but leave them in (the) authority of my Will, so that he makes his portents of love with them."

Afterwards he added:

"My daughter, all that which the creature does in my Divine Will first becomes formed in heaven, in the eternal day that does not know night. Already all the Celestial Court is to light that a creature of the earth is sheltered in her celestial fatherland, that it is already hers; but in order to do what? In order to enter into the center of the Fiat and to call his power, his creative virtue, in order to give her the occasions to let her work in his act.

“Oh, with how much love is (she) welcomed not only by the Divine Volition, but also by the Most Holy Trinity! They harmonize her, they embalm the act, they blow there within with their creative power, and there they form such marvels with that act, that all heaven feels such joy and happiness that everyone makes the celestial regions resound with their harmonious voices: ‘Thank you, thank you because you have given us the great honor of being spectators of your Will working in the act of the creature!’

“So that heaven becomes flooded with new joys and new contentments, in a way that everyone remains bound, (and) appreciative, and everyone calls her: ‘Our welcomed one.’

“This more than celestial creature feels herself re-loved by God with double love, she feels herself inundated with new seas of graces; as re-ascended to heaven making her bearer of his acts, having formed in them the marvels of the Divine Fiat worked in the act of the creature. There is no homage, love(,) glory more great that she can give us, than to let us do that which we want in her acts.

“We can do the greatest wonders, without anyone lending us anything and yet not even they may say it to us, as we made creation; no one said anything to us, and yet how many wonders did we not create? But then there wasn’t anyone, nor one who could even lend a sigh as pretext of our love and refuge where to rest our creative marvels, but now there are some who can say it to us and give us the multiplicity of her little acts, even natural ones, because nature is also ours, and everything can serve us in order to form in her the greatest marvels. Our love proves/(shows) more gusto, our power remains more elated in doing our greater marvels in the little circle of the act of the creature, (rather) than outside of her.

“And then, there are the usual pretexts of our love, that in order to give it goes finding the occasions, in order to be able to say,: ‘She has given to me, and I have given to her. It is true that she is little, but she has retained nothing for herself; hence it is just that I should give everything to her, even myself’.”

* * *

January 7, 1938

One who lives in the Divine Volition forms the refuge of the life of the Divine Will. The “I love you”, refreshment of divine love. How God feels obligated toward one who lives in him.

My poor mind flowed in the Divine Volition and in seeing the anxieties, the desires, the contentment that he (finds) in seeing the creature who wants to have life together (with him), in order to love him with his own love and, (even) if she doesn’t know how to do other, but to collect in her soul his anxieties, his ardent sighs, and to say to him: “I am here with you, I will not leave you ever alone, in order to quiet your anxieties of love and in order to make you content.”

But while I thought this, my dear Jesus, the sweet of my life, visiting my little soul [and such was his love as if it might want to burst his adorable Heart], he said to me:

“My dearest daughter, heavens and earth, creatures all, are all involved and as enclosed in the intensity of our love. Our Volition flows with such rapidity in every fiber, in every atom, in every instant, with such velocity and fullness, that nothing remains behind, not even a breath, that is not life of his Will; and my love loves ardently, but with such ardor that it feels the need (of) one who brings a little refreshment to the immensity of his love.

“Now, do you want to know who can give a refreshment to the intensity, totality and fullness of our love? The ‘I love you’ of the creature; and how many more times she says it, so many more refreshments does she bring us. This ‘I love you’ enters into our flames, there it shatters them, lifts them, quiets them, and as the sweetest comfort it says, ‘I love you, I love you; you loved because you want love and I am here to love you.’

“This ‘I love you’ makes its way into our intensity and there forms its little post, the little space where to put her ‘I love you’. So that the ‘I love you’ of the creature is the support of ours, our comfort, the quiet of our love in order not to let it be too delirious. My daughter, to love and not to be loved in return is as if one might want to impede the course of our love, to restrict it in ourselves and make us feel all the suffering and the hardness of our love not loved in return, and therefore we go finding one who loves us. It is so sweet, (and) refreshing for us the ‘I love you’ of she, that who knows what we would give them in order to have it.

“You see therefore [how in] one who lives in our Will we find the refuge for our life, and we don’t do other than to exchange our life continually; she gives us hers, and we give ours. In this exchange of life we find one who receives ours and gives us hers; we can put (forth) ours, to do that which we want; we feel ourselves (the) God that we are.

“Hence the living in our Volition serves us as shelter, theater for our works, refreshment for our love, exchange of all creation; there is no thing that we don’t find in her(.) Therefore we love her so much that we feel obligated to give that which she wants; and every act more that (she) does in him, so much more does she press us, so many more chains does she add. And do you know what she gives in order to make us remain obligated? Our life, our works, our love, our own Will; and does it seem little to you? That which she gives us is so very exuberant, that if it were not because we hold in our ability power that we can do everything, there would lack the means in order to disoblige ourselves. But our love, that never lets itself be overcome and exceeded by the love of the creature, goes finding new contrivances, inventing new stratagems, even to re-give so many times our life in order to disoblige itself with its beloved creature; and in its emphasis of love says: ‘How content I am that you live in my Volition! You are my joy, my happiness, so much so that I feel as obligated to give you the air in order to breathe; and since I feel obligated to breathe together (with you). The sun brings you in my hands its light, but I don’t leave you alone, I remain with you.’

“So that there is no thing, water, fire, food and all the rest that I do not bring it to you with my hands, because I feel obligated, and I want to remain together (with you) in order to see as you take it; I want to do everything by myself.

“And if while she takes it she says to me: ‘I take all in your Will because I love you; I want to love you and to glorify you with your own Volition.’ Oh! Then who can tell you the refreshments that she gives me? And she tries to disoblighed herself with me. And I let her do it, but afterwards I return with my surprises of love. Therefore I recommend to you, to render me content by living always heart to heart and harmonized with my Will, (and) you and I will be happy and content.”

* * *

January 10, 1938

The first sermon that the little King Jesus made to the children of Egypt; how each one held their Celestial Father in (their) own heart, that he loved them and wanted to be loved.

I was making the round in the Divine Fiat, and oh, how I long that not one act escape me, of that which he has done as much in the creation as in the redemption. It seems to me that there is something missing if all that which he has done I don't recognize it, I don't love it, I don't kiss it, I don't press it to my heart, as if it were mine. And the Divine Volition would remain as discontent if one who lives in him might not know all his acts, and might not find in all that which he has done the little 'I love you' of one whom he loves so much; and there is no thing that he has not done for her.

Whence I arrived to follow when the celestial child found himself in Egypt, in the act when he made his first footsteps; and I kissed his steps, I put my 'I love you' into every step that he made, and I asked for the first steps of his Will (for) all the human generations. I sought to follow him in everything. If he prayed, if he cried, I asked of him that his Will might animate all the prayers of creatures, and that his tears might regenerate the life of his Fiat in the human family.

Whence while I was attentive to follow him in everything, the little King child, visiting my poor soul, said to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, how content I am when the creature doesn't leave me alone! I feel her to me (as) behind, (and) before, in all my acts.

“Now, you must know that my exile in Egypt was not without conquests. When I arrived to the age of around three years, from our little hovel I heard the little boys that played, (and) shouted in the middle of the road, and I, little though I was, went out in the midst of them.

“As they saw me they raced around me, to whom (each) wanted to put himself near, because such was my beauty, the enchantment of my look, the sweetness of my voice, that they felt enraptured to love me; therefore they crowded around me and they loved me so much that they didn't know (how) to detach from me.

“Now, I also loved these children, and since love when it is true searches to make itself known, not only (this), but by giving that which can make one happy in time and in eternity, now, to these little ones I made my first little sermon, adapting myself to their little capacity, even more so (by) possessing innocence they were able to more easily understand me. Now, do you want to hear what my sermon was? I said to them:

““My children, listen to me. I love you very much, and I want to make known to you your origin. Look at heaven; up there you have a Celestial Father who loves you very much; but he loves you so much, that he is not content to be your Father from heaven, to guide you, by creating for you a sun, a sea, an earth in bloom, in order to make you happy, but loving you with an exuberant love, he wanted to descend into your hearts, to form his palace in the depths of your soul, making himself (a) sweet prisoner of each one of you; but in order to do what? In order to give life to your heartbeat, breath and motion. So that you walk, and he walks in your footsteps, moves in your hands, speaks in your voice. And while he walks, you move, since he loves you very much, now he squeezes you, now he embraces you and carries you as in triumph, because you are his dear children.

“How many kisses and hidden embraces does not this Celestial Father of ours give you! And you, because you are inattentive, have not had your kiss meet his and your embraces (meet) his paternal embrace, and he has remained in sorrow that his children have neither embraced nor kissed him.

“Now, my dear children, do you know what this Celestial Father wants from you? He wants to be recognized in you, that he holds his seat in the center of your soul; and since he gives everything to you, nor is there anything that he doesn't give you, he wants your love in all that which you do. Love him! Let the love never depart for him from your little heart, from your lips, from your works, from everything, and this will be the delicious food that you will give to his paternity.

“He loves you very much and wants to be loved. No one can arrive to love you like he loves you; so very true is it that you also have an earthly father, but how very dissimilar he is from the love of the Celestial Father! He doesn't always follow you, doesn't watch over your steps, doesn't sleep together (with you), nor beat in your heart, and if you fall he does not even know anything of it. Instead the Celestial Father doesn't ever leave you; if you (are about) to fall he gives a hand to you in order not to let you fall, if you sleep he keeps vigil over you, and also if you play and are impertinent he is with you and knows all that which you do. Therefore love him very, very much!’

“And inflaming myself more I said (to them): ‘Give me (your) word that you will love him always, always! Say it together with me: “We love you, our Father who are in the heavens, we love you, our Father who resides in our hearts!”’

“My daughter, to my speech, the children, some were moved, some remained enraptured, some pressed themselves so very strongly to me, that they didn't want me to leave anymore, I made (them) feel the beating life of my Celestial Father in their little hearts, and they rejoiced in it, they made festive, because they did not have a far distant Father anymore, but in (their) own hearts, and I, in order to harden them and in order to give (them) the strength to depart from me, blessed them, renewing upon those little boys our creative strength, invoking the power of the Father, the wisdom of I, (the) Son, and the virtue of the Holy Spirit; and I said to (them): ‘Go, and then return’, and thus they departed from each other.

“But then they returned the other days, but almost as throngs, a crowd of little boys, they put themselves to spy when I had to go out, and in order to see what I might do in our hovel. And when I went out they clapped (their) hands for me, made festive for me, they shouted so much that my Mama went out to the door, in order to see what had happened, and oh, how she remained enraptured, in seeing her little Son speak with such grace to those children, that she felt (her) heart burst for love, and I saw in them the first produce of my life down here; because, of these children that listened to me, not one was lost.

“The knowledge that they had a Father in their hearts, was as (a) deposit to be able to possess the celestial fatherland, in order to love that Father who already was also in the heaven. My daughter, this sermon of mine that I, (a) little child, made to the little boys of Egypt, was the foundation, the substance of the creation of the man. It contains the most necessary doctrine, the highest sanctity; it makes love arise in every instant in order for the Creator and the creature to love each other.

“What sorrow in seeing so many little lives that don’t know the life of a God in their souls! They grow without divine paternity, as if they were alone in the world; they don’t feel nor know how very loved they are; how can they love me? Hence, the love removed, the heart hardens, life becomes brutish, and [the poor youth!], he gives into the most serious crimes. This is a sorrow for your Jesus, and I want that it be a sorrow for you, so that you pray for so many, because it teaches that I am in their hearts, that I love and want to be loved.”

* * *

January 16, 1938

How the Divine Will in his acts calls the creature in order to make the gift of his works; if the creature responds, she calls God and receives the gift. Exchange of Wills between creatures and God.

The Divine Volition is always around me, and now he calls me, now he presses me to his bosom of light, and if I respond to his call, if I exchange it with my embrace, he loves me so much and wants to give me so much, that I don’t know where to put that which he wants to give me; and in the midst of so much love and liberality I remain confused, and I love that holy Volition that loves me so much. Now, my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, with indescribable tenderness said to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, you must know that only your Jesus knows all the secrets of my Fiat, because I being the Word of the Father, I glorify myself by making myself (the) narrator of that which he has done for the creature.

“Therefore his love is exuberant; in each thing that he did he called you, as much in the works of the creation, as in the works of my redemption; and if you listened to his call by saying to him: ‘I am here, what do you want?’, he made for you the gift of his works, if you didn’t respond, he remained to always call you, even though you might not have listened to him.

“Now, if he created the sky, he called you in that azure vault by saying to you: ‘My daughter, come to see how very beautiful the sky is that I have created for you. I have created it in order to make of it a gift; come to receive this great gift. If you don’t listen to me, I cannot give it to you, and you make me remain with the gift suspended in my hands and to always call you; nor will I cease calling you, even to such that I do not see you possessor of my gift.’ The sky contains a most great extension, such that the earth can be called a little hole compared to it. Therefore everyone holds their place and a sky for each one; and I call them all by name, in order to make the gift of it. But what is not his sorrow, to call and recall (and) not to be listened to, and they look (at) the sky as if it were not a gift that has been given to them?

“This, my Volition, loves so much, that as he created the sun, thus he called you with his voices of light, and went in search of you and of everyone in order to make a gift of it. So that your name is written in the sun, in characters of light, nor can I forget it; and as his light descends from his sphere and even arrives to you, thus he goes always calling you. So that he is not content to call you from the heights of his sphere, but loving you always more, he wants to descend even to the base, and by way of light and heat says to you: ‘Receive my gift; this sun, for you, I have created it’; and if he is listened to, how he goes into festival! Because he sees that the creature possesses the sun as her property and gift that her Creator has made for her.

“Anywhere and everywhere he calls you. He calls you in the wind, now with rule, now with groans, now as if he might want to cry in order to move you to listen to him, so that you may receive the gift of this element. He calls you in the sea, by way of murmurs, in order to say to you: ‘This sea is yours; take it as a gift that I make you.’ Even in the air that you breathe, in the little bird that sings he calls you in order to say to you: ‘Of everything I make you (a) gift.’

“Now, if the soul responds to the call, the gift becomes confirmed; if she does not respond, the gifts remain as suspended between the heaven and the earth. Because if my Will calls, it is because he wants to be called, in order to maintain the commerce between himself and creatures, in order to make himself known and in order to make arise the incessant love between himself and one who lives in his Fiat; because only one who lives in his Divine Volition more easily senses his so many calls, because while he calls her in his works, he makes himself felt in the depths of her soul, and hence she is called from both parts.

“And then, who (can) tell you how many times I called you and call in all the acts of my humanity? [I was] conceived and I called you, in order to make you the gift of my conception; I was born and I called you more strongly, and I arrived to cry, to groan (and) to wail, in order to move you to compassion, so that you might immediately respond to me, in order to make you the gift of my birth, tears, groans and whimpers. If my Celestial Mama wrapped me, I called you in order to wrap you together with me. In short, I called you in every word that I said, in every step that I made, in every suffering that I suffered, in every drop of my blood; even in my ultimate breath that I gave upon the cross I called you, in order to make you (the) gift of everything; and in order to put you in security I put you together with me into the hands of my Celestial Father.

“Where have I not called you, in order to make you (the) gift of that which I did, in order to vent my love, in order to make you feel how much I loved you and make descend into your heart the sweetness of my enrapturing voice, that enraptures, creates and conquers, and also in order to hear your voice that might say to me: ‘Here I am for you; tell me, Jesus, what you want?’, how I reciprocate with my love and how it protests that you accept my gifts, and thus I might be able to say: ‘I have been listened to; my daughter has recognized me and she loves me.’”

“It is true that these are excesses of our love but to love and not to be recognized and loved, cannot be endured, nor can one continue to live. Therefore we will continue our follies of love, our stratagems, in order to give the course to our life of love.”

Then he added, with a still more intense emphasis of love:

“My daughter, so many are our sighs, our anxieties, because we want that the creature be always with us, because we want to always give her of ours. But do you know what we want to give her? Our Will. Giving her this, there is no good that we don’t give her. Then, having as drowned her with our love, with our beauty, sanctity and so forth, we say: ‘We have given you much, and you give us nothing?’ And the creature, as confused, because she has nothing that she can give us, and if she has something it is ours, looks then at her will and she gives it to us as the most beautiful homage to her Creator.

“And we, do you know what we do? If she might give her will to us in every instant, so many times would we give her the merit, as if she might hold so many wills for how many times she has given it to us; and so many times we give her ours, for how many times she has given hers to us, doubling so many times in her our sanctity, our love, etc.”

I in hearing this, said: “My dear Jesus, I earn much, in receiving so many times the merit for how many times I give you my will, and having yours for exchange is the greatest profit for me; and your profit, what is it?”

And he, assuming a smile: “To you the merit, and to me the profit of receiving all the glory of my Divine Will; and how many times I give him to you, so many times he doubles, he multiplies, he centuples my divine glory, that I receive through means of the creature. So that I can say: ‘She gives me everything, and I give her everything.’”

* * *

January 24, 1938

How Our Lord departed to heaven and remained on earth in the tabernacles in order to complete the Kingdom of the Divine Will. One who lives in the Divine Volition can say as Jesus: “I depart and remain.”

My flight in the Divine Volition continues, and while I was making the visit to Jesus in (the) sacrament, I wanted to embrace all the tabernacles and every single sacramental host, in order to have life together with my prisoner Jesus; and I thought to myself: “What sacrifice, that long imprisonment, not of days, but of centuries! Poor Jesus, was he at least reciprocated for it!”

And my beloved Jesus, visiting my little soul, all immersed in his flames of love, said to me:

“My good daughter, my first prison was love, it imprisoned me so much, that I didn’t have liberty neither to breathe, nor to palpitate, nor to work, if it was not imprisoned in my love. So that it was my love that imprisoned me in the tabernacle, but with reason and with highest and divine wisdom.

“Now, you must know that the chains of my love made me depart from heaven in my Incarnation. I departed in order to descend to earth in search of my children and brothers, in order to form for them with my love so many prisons of love, to not be able to go out from them. But while I departed, I remained in heaven, because my love, making for me (a) prison, tied me in the celestial regions. Now, having completed my career down here, I departed for heaven, and I remained imprisoned in every sacramental host; but do you know why? My love, making a sweet imprisonment for me, said to me:

‘Your purpose why you descended from heaven to earth is not completed. The Kingdom of our Will, where is it? Neither does it exist, nor is it known; hence you remain imprisoned in every sacramental host. Thus it won’t be one Jesus alone, as in your humanity but so many Jesus’ for how many consecrated hosts (that) will exist; so many (of) your lives will make a breach and a rage of love before the Divinity, (and) a breach and a rage to every heart that will receive you. They will have a little word to say in order to make our Volition known, because these lives mute, but speaking, and you will speak in the secret of their hearts of our Fiat; you will be the carrier of our Kingdom.’

“Hence, I saw the just pretensions of my love, and willingly I remained on earth, in order to form the Kingdom of my Will until (it is) a finished work.

“You see, if I departed for heaven and I remained on earth, my life scattered in so many sacramental hosts will not be useless down here. I will form with certainty the Kingdom of my Volition; nor would I have remained if (it was) known (I) should not obtain the intent, even more so that it brings me more (of the) sacrifice of my own mortal life. How many secret tears, how many bitter sighs, in the midst of so many flames of love that devour me! And I would like to devour all [souls] in my love, in order to make re-arise to new life the souls that must live in my Divine Volition. From the center of my love this Kingdom will come forth. He will burn the evils of the earth; he will make (an) account on himself, he will arm his omnipotence, and by his so many wins he will win our Kingdom in the midst of creatures, in order to give it to them.

“Nor was I content to remain imprisoned, but my love blazing more, made me choose you, in order to make you imprisoned, with chains so strong as not to be able to escape me, as vent of my love and company of my imprisonment, in order to be able to speak at length of my Volition, of his anxieties and sighs, because he wants to reign, and as a pretext of my love in order to say before the Supreme Majesty: ‘A creature of the human race is already our prisoner; with her we speak of our Will, in order to make him known and to extend there his Kingdom. This prisoner is as (a) deposit for the whole human family, that with right we must give our Kingdom to.’ I can say that each sacramental life of mine are so many deposits that I give you, sufficient, in order to secure my Kingdom for my children; but to my so many deposits, my love wanted to add on the deposit of a simple creature that carries the signs of my imprisonment, as to confirm the parts between creature and Creator, and thus come to conclusion and complete the Kingdom of our Will in the midst of creatures.

“From every tabernacle my prayers are incessant, so that creatures know my Will in order to let him reign; and all that which I suffer, the tears and sighs, I send them to heaven, in order to move the Divinity to concede a grace so great; I send it to every heart, in order to move them to compassion for my tears and sufferings, in order to make them surrender to receive such a good.”

Jesus became silent, and I thought to myself: “My dear Jesus, by making himself imprisoned, has done an act of heroism so great that only a God can do; but while he is imprisoned he is also free, so very true is it that in heaven he is free, he enjoys the fullness of his liberty; not only, but also on earth, how many times does he not come to my time without sacramental veils? But with having rendered my poor existence imprisoned, he has made it really big, and he knows in what (a) tight prison he puts me, and how hard my chains are; nor can I do as he does, that while he is imprisoned he is free. My prison is continuous.”

But while I thought this, he resumed his speech by saying to me:

“My daughter, my poor daughter, you have suffered my same fate! When my love wants to do a good, he doesn’t spare anything, neither sacrifices, nor sufferings; it seems as if he might not want to give (into) reason. All his intent is to make arise the good that he wants.

“It is then certain that (I had to) made it big. It didn’t concern (just) any good, but a Kingdom of Divine Will to establish upon the earth. This good will be so very great, that no other good can compare itself to this; all the other goods will be like so many little drops before the sea, like little lights before the sun. Therefore do not marvel if I have made it big, as you say. Your continuous imprisonment entered as (a) necessity (of) my love, in order to give me company and to let me speak of the knowledge of my Will, that was so much to my heart and I felt the need to make them known. And you must know that as I speak to you of him, my love pays you and releases you from the fetters of your human will, and renders you free in the fields of the dominions of the Kingdom of my Volition. To this I have directed the knowledge of him: to release the creature from his will, from his passions, from his miseries, therefore thank me for that which I have disposed for you; my love will know how to pay you and will also hold account of one breath of yours, and of one instant of your imprisonment.”

After this I followed to think of the prodigies of the Divine Volition, and my beloved Jesus added:

“Daughter of my Volition, as your Jesus said in the descent from heaven to earth: ‘I depart and remain’, thus when I rose to heaven I said: ‘I remain and I depart’; my same word repeats in the sacramental descent into creatures: ‘I depart and I remain in the tabernacles. ‘Thus, one who lives in my Will, in all her acts can say my same word.

“As she begins her act, so her Jesus becomes formed in her act. My life holds (the) virtue of multiplying itself to the infinite, how many times I want. Hence she can say with all truth: ‘I depart and remain; I depart for heaven, in order to beatify it, in order to reach my seat and to make known to everyone my dear Jesus, that I have enclosed in my act, so that they enjoy and love him; I remain on earth, my life as support and defense for all my brothers.’ How beautiful is an act in my Will!”

* * *

January 30, 1938

All that which one does who lives in the Divine Volition acquires the divine nature. His prodigies in creating divine life in the human act. Festival of all heaven. The true reciprocation of creation.

My poor mind swims in the sea of the Divine Volition. His murmur is continuous, but what does he murmur? Love, souls, light that he would like to invest, that he would like to reign in each one of his children; and oh, what stratagems of love he uses in order make them reenter into the bosom of his light, from where they went forth! And in his sorrow he says:

“My children, my children, let me reign, and I will give you so much grace as to acknowledge that you are the children of your Celestial Father!”

But while my mind was lost in this divine sea, my dear Jesus, the sweet (of) my Life, renewed his brief little visit, and all goodness said to me:

“Little daughter of my Divine Volition, so many are the anxieties, the sighs that my Will wants to work in the act of the creature, that he puts himself to spy in order to see if the soul calls him as (the) first act of her acts, and called he becomes festive, he races, and, blowing, there engraves his creative force and converts the act of the creature into divine nature. So that she feels the nature of divine love that invests her, surrounds her, flows as blood in her veins, even in the marrow of her bones, in the beat of her heart. Hence all her being says none other than love.

“Converting human acts into divine nature, are the greatest prodigies that my Divine Will can do. He doesn’t know how to give except that which he holds; love possesses, love gives; and oh, how happy he feels that that love not seen, nor sensed, nor can he do less than love. With my Will giving love in (her) nature to the creature, he has put her into the divine order; all is harmony between God and her; one can say (that) he has cast her into our own labyrinth of love. So that if she adores, thanks, blesses, his creative force races in order to change into divine nature the adoration, the thanksgivings, the benedictions; hence, the creature holds in her power, as in her nature, (that) of always adoring the Supreme Majesty, thanking him and blessing him, because that which she communicates in nature the act holds continued which never ceases.

“Therefore we hold her at our disposition; our love finds one who loves him with his love, and if he feels the need of venting himself, he holds with one who allows his ventings. Our majesty finds his eternal adorations in the creature, who truly can say a divine thanks, an I bless you. In short we find one who can give us of ours. And oh, how we love this more than celestial creature! She always holds us in activity, because we can give her that which we want; and giving for us beatifies us and felicitates us (the) more. While one who does not live in our Volition holds us as in idleness, without activity; and if we give some thing, all is measured, because we don’t have (a place) where to put it, and we fear that that little which we give will be wasted and she won’t know how to appreciate it.”

Whence afterwards, with an anxiety yet more strong he added:

“My good daughter, the prodigies that my Fiat works in the act of the creature that lives in him are unheard of. As he sees that she is about to do it, he races, takes the act in his hands, purifies it, molds it, invests it with light; then he looks at it in order to see if that act can receive his sanctity, his beauty, (if) he can enclose it in his immensity, (if) he can make his power, his love race inside. When he has done everything, because nothing must (be) missing as his act, he kisses it, embraces it, and pouring himself out again all over it, with an indescribable solemnity and love he pronounces there his omnipotent Fiat, and there creates himself in that act. The heavens put themselves at attention, when my Volition is about to work in the act of the creature, they are moved, they remain stupefied and enraptured by it, and exclaim: ‘Possible that a God, his Volition three times holy arrives to love so much, even to creating himself in the act of the creature?’

“My own Fiat returns to look (at) that which he has done in the human act, he feels himself enraptured, is happy in seeing his new life; and taken with indescribable joy he makes festive all of heaven and lavishes in pouring out graces on all the earth. These acts, I call them my life, my act, echo of my power, prodigies of my love.

“My daughter, make me content; these are the joys of my creation, the feasts of my creative virtue: to be able to form so many (of) my lives for how many acts the creature does. Therefore always call me in your acts, do not put me aside ever, and I will always make new things in you, to stupefy all the people. And then I will have the exchange, the glory of all creation, when I will have filled heavens and earth with so many (of) my new lives.”

* * *

February 7, 1938

How God doesn't love force, but spontaneity. Display of magnificence, of luxury, of sumptuousness, that the Divine Volition will do in one who lives in him. How the creation is not finished.

I am under the rule of the Divine Volition. His creative virtue has such force, that it makes his sweet rule over the poor creature felt, that sweetly, not forced, she agrees with the Fiat and gives him ample liberty to do that which he wants of her, rather she tells him: “How honored I feel, because you want to make a portent of my being; but so much so, that you want to use your creative and operative force in my poor soul.”

But while my mind was immersed in receiving the creative virtue of the Divine Fiat, my always amiable Jesus, surprising me with his brief little visit, with indescribable love said to me:

“Daughter of my Volition, how beautiful is my Fiat in working with his creative virtue! You have seen that he doesn't use violence but sweetness; but irresistible sweetness, more perhaps than violence itself. With his sweetness he embalms the creature, makes her feel the beauty of the divine, in a way that she herself says: ‘Do it soon, holy Volition, do not delay anymore; I feel myself languish if you do not come in me to work with your creative virtue.’

“My daughter, the things, a forced will, we have never liked; rather we don't even want them; they give much of the human and they do not agree neither with our love, nor with our works. Everything is spontaneity and full Will, that we want it, we long to do good, and we do it; and therefore we do it with such fullness of love and grace, that no one can reach/(equal) us. So much so that if we don't see the spontaneity, the will that wants to receive the good that we want to do in her we don't do anything; at most we wait, we make our sighs, our anxieties felt, but we don't move to work if first we don't see that with love she wants to receive the work of her Creator.

“Now you must know that (to) every act that the creature does in our Volition, thus goes growing his life in her, and when it arrives to the fullness that everything is my Will in her, then we begin the display of our love, of our graces, in a way that in every instant we give her new love and new surprising graces; we put forth our divine pageantry, the magnificence, the luxury of our stratagems of love; all that which we make for her carries the imprint of the abundance of her Creator.

“When the soul is full of our Divine Will we don’t mind anymore to anything; that which we hold we give, and that which she wants is hers. So much is the luxury that we do, that in her every act we make flow a note of our divine music, so that not even our music is missing to us in her, and she often makes for us beautiful little sonatas with our divine notes; and oh, how felicitated we feel, harmonizing our harmonies, our divine sounds!

“You must know (that) for one who lives in our Will, we exceed the luxury, the pomp, the magnificence, the sumptuousness that we had in the creation. All was abundance; abundance of light that no one can measure it, extension of sky, luxury of beauties adorned with so many stars. Each created thing became created with such abundance, invested with such splendor of luxury, that no one can have need of the other; rather they can give to you, without (the) need of receiving.

“Only the human will sets the limits, the straits to the creature, casts her into miseries, and impedes my goods from giving themselves to them. Therefore with anxiety I await that my Will be known and that they live in him, and then I will make such a show of luxury; each soul will be a new creation, beautiful, but distinct the one from the other. I will enjoy myself, I will do it as an insuperable craftsman, I will put forth my creative art. Oh, how I await it, want it, sigh for it! Therefore the creation is not finished; I hold/(have yet) to do the most beautiful works.

“Therefore, my daughter let me work. And do you know when I work? When I manifest a truth to you about my Divine Will, I immediately do it as a craftsman, and with my creative hands I work in you, in order to make that that truth form its life in your soul; and oh, how I enjoy the work! The soul is made as soft wax in my hands and there forms the life that I want. Hence, be attentive and leave me to do (it).

* * *

February 14, 1938

As one lives in the Divine Will his acts extend themselves to everyone and make themselves narrators of the Supreme Being. Show of love. How, in creating the Virgin, he created pardon.

My flight continues in the Divine Volition. Oh, how I feel dispersed in his immensity! So much is his power and activity, that when he works in the act of the creature, he wants to give that act to everyone; he wants to fill heaven and earth in order to make seen and felt that which he knows how to do and knows how to love. I remained surprised and, my beloved Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, so much is the love of my Will in the work in the act of the creature, that it gives of the incredible. He, as he works, wants that everyone receive that act and make it as (their) own act. With his omnipotent breath he puts that act into flight and makes it go through to the sun, to the sky, to the stars, to the wind, to the sea, even in the air that everyone breathes; it flies on more, even into the celestial regions, and everyone, angels and saints, the Queen Mother, even our own Divinity, experiences that act, in a way that, each one experiencing it, they must be able to say: ‘this act is mine.’ But do you know why? So much is his love that he wants that everyone possess his act, and he gives life to each one. He wants to decorate, adorn, invest with his creative virtue everything and everyone, in order to receive the glory, the love, the honor that my Volition possesses, from all and from each one.

“My Volition is not stopped ever; then he is content, when he sees that his act has filled everything, and as triumphant he carries the creature with him that has given him the liberty of letting him work in her act, in order to make him known and loved by everyone.

“These are our festivals, our pure joys of creation; to be able to put forth of ours in the creature, as if we might want to duplicate our power, immensity, love and glory even to the infinite, in the human act of the creature. Nor is this to marvel (over); our Divine Will finds himself everywhere, hence our acts with which they become animated, the acts of them, fly and shelter themselves in our Volition, even in the smallest hideaways where he finds himself; and these serve us as reciprocation of love for all creation, as our sweetest company and as narrators of our Supreme Being.

“Therefore my love is exuberant for one who wants to live in our Fiat; we are all eyes over him, we are almost on the spy, in order to see when she lends us her act in order to let us put into work our creative virtue. She is for us our show of love, the activity of our power, and makes herself (a) repeater of our own life.”

After this I followed my round in the Divine Volition, and my sweet Jesus transported my little will into his creative act. My God, how many surprises! My poor intelligence was lost, it didn't know how to say anything; and my always amiable Jesus, repeating his brief little visit, all goodness said to me:

“My good daughter, our Fiat in the creation made (a) show of our operative, powerful and wise love, in a way that all created things are pregnant with our love, power and wisdom and unspeakable beauty. We can call them the administrators of our Supreme Being.

“Instead, in the creation of the Sovereign Queen we passed onto more. Our love was not content with the show of it, but wanted to move to pity, to tenderness and to compassion, so profound and intimate, as if he might want to convert himself into tears for the love of creatures. Behold therefore, how our Fiat pronounced itself in order to create her and call her to life, he created pardon, mercy, the reconciliation between us and mankind, and we deposited it in this celestial and holy creature, as administrator between ours and her children. So that the Sovereign Lady possesses seas of pardon, of mercy, of pity and tearful seas of our love, in which all the generations can be involved, regenerated in these seas created by us in her; of pardon, of mercy, and of a pity so tender as to soften the hardest hearts.

“My daughter, it was just/right that everything might become deposited in this Celestial Mother, because having to possess the Kingdom of our Will, everything might become entrusted to her. She alone holds sufficient place in order to be able to possess our seas created by us. With his creative and conservative power he maintains whole that which he creates, without ever diminishing, in spite of that we always give. Therefore, where there is not our Will we are not able to neither give, nor entrust, nor depose; we don't find (the) place; our love remains impeded, to the so many beautiful works that we want to do in creatures.

“Only in this Sovereign Lady he didn’t find impediment to our love, and therefore showed off so much and made so many marvels, even to give her divine fecundity in order to make her Mother of her Creator.”

Whence my beloved Jesus made present to me all the acts that he did together with his Celestial Mama, and while they worked, the seas of love of the one and of the other formed into one alone, and raising their waves even to heaven they invested everything, “even our Divinity [Luisa passes from her speaking to Our Lord speaking.], that forming rain dense with love on our Divine Being we carried the love of everyone, the refreshment, the balm with which it remained sweetened, and they changed justice into transport(s) of love for creatures. One can say that our love regenerated anew love (for) the human family, and God loved it with double love, but where? in the Queen and in her dear Son.

“Now hear another surprise. When I, (a) little baby, sucked milk from my Mama, I sucked souls, because she held the deposit of them, and in giving me milk she deposited in me all souls, because she wanted that I might love them, might give (a) kiss to everyone, and might form hers and my victory from it; not only this, but in giving me milk she made me suck her maternity, her tenderness, and she imposed herself over me with her love, so that I might love souls with maternal and fatherly love; and I received in myself her maternity, her indescribable tenderness, and so I loved souls with divine, maternal and fatherly love.

“Whence, after that she deposited them all in me, I, with a stratagem of love of mine, with a breath, with a sweet look, deposited them anew in her maternal Heart, and in order to repay her I gave her my paternal love, my divine love that is incessant, firm, inflexible, that never changes, because human love is easily changed, and I wanted that my inseparable Mother might have the same prerogatives of my love and she might love them as she knows how to love a God. So that in every act that we did, from the littlest to the greatest, they were exchanges of deposit of souls that we did, I in her and she in me. Rather I can say that we duplicated this deposit of soul, because that which I received from my dear Mama, I guarded with highest jealousy in my divine Heart, as the greatest gift that she made me; and she, receiving my gift, held such jealousy, that she put all her maternity in aptness, in order to guard the gift that her Son made her.

“Now, in these exchanges of deposit that we made, our love grew and loved with new love all creatures, we formed projects as to love them more and as to overcome all by way of love, and we exposed our life in order to put them into safety.”

* * *

February 20, 1938

How Jesus, in the incarnation, formed of himself so many Jesus’ for how many creatures had to exist, so that each one might have a Jesus at his disposition.

I am between the arms of the Divine Volition, which loves me so much, and in order to make me see how much he loves me he wants always to give me his eternal and long story of love, adding new surprises, (so) that one remains so very enraptured that it proves impossible not to love him, and only one ungrateful and without sense could do it. Whence the Divine Fiat made present to me that which he had worked in the descent of the Word upon the earth, and my Jesus, repeating his usual little visit, all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, you must know that my love is so much that it feels the need of venting itself and of entrusting its secrets to one who lives in my Volition, so that being to light of everything, we love with one love alone, and it repeats in her that which I did myself. Listen therefore to me, daughter, where the excess of my love arrived, which made me do unheard of and unbelievable things to created minds.

“So, with coming upon the earth, I wanted to form of myself so many Jesus’ for how many creatures were existing, existed and will exist. So that each one should hold her Jesus, all hers, to her disposition; hence one should hold my conception, in order to remain conceived in me; my birth in order to be reborn, my tears in order to wash, my infant age in order to renew and give beginning to her new life, my footsteps for life and guide of her, my works in order to make hers arise, and as satisfaction for whatever contracted debt with divine justice; my death in order to re-find her life, my resurrection in order to re-arise entirely in my Will and to the complete glory that should be given to her Creator. And this with highest love, with reason, with justice and with highest wisdom.

“My Celestial Father had to find in me, in order to satisfy, in order to glorify, in order to be repaid for so much of his love, so many of my lives for how many creatures had been put and should be put to the light of day; and although not everyone takes this life of mine, my Celestial Father demanded my life in order to glorify himself of all that which he had done in the work of the creation and redemption. I can say that, as man removed himself from our Will, thus ceased the glory that was due to my Divine Father. Hence if I did not form of myself so many Jesus’ for how many creatures exist, the glory of the Celestial Father was incomplete, and I cannot do incomplete works; my love would have waged war if I had not formed of myself so many Jesus’, first for decorum and our glory, and then in order to give the complete good to every single creature.

“Therefore our highest sorrow (is) that in spite of so many of my lives that are to (the) disposition of each one, some don’t recognize them, some don’t look at them, some don’t make use of them, some offend them, some take them as hardly the crumbs of my life. Few are those that say: ‘I live the life of Jesus, with Jesus, and I love as Jesus loves and I want that which he wants.’ These last ones are the exchange together with me of the glory and love of the creation and redemption. But in spite of that these lives of mine do not all serve to the creature, they serve however admirably to the glory of my divine Father because I didn’t come upon the earth only for creatures, but in order to reinstate the interests and the glory of my Celestial Father. Oh, if you might see that beautiful cortege they form(,) my so many lives around our Divinity, how much love and glory are emitted by them, you would remain so enraptured that it would prove difficult for you to return into yourself!”

Jesus became silent and I remained and saw before my mind so many Jesus’ for how many creatures existed. But since I held a thorn in my heart that tortured me, it embittered (me) even in the marrow of my bones, for a person so very dear to me and necessary to my poor existence, being in danger of dying, I would have wanted at whatever cost to save her. Therefore I took the Divine Will, I made it all mine, and in my sorrow I said: “Jesus, your Will is mine, your power and immensity they are in my power; I don’t want it, and also you must not want it.”

My God, I felt myself struggling with a power; and in order to win, my mind carried itself before the Divinity, and put around it the extension of the sky, with all the stars in prayer, the vastness of the light of the sun, with the force of its heat, all the creation, in prayer; then, the seas of love, of power of the Queen of Heaven, the pains and the blood scattered from Jesus, as so many seas around the Divinity, all in prayer; and then, the so many Jesus' of every single creature, so that they might have a sigh, a prayer, in order to obtain that which I wanted. But what not is my surprise and emotion together, in seeing and hearing that the so many Jesus' of every single creature prayed in order to obtain that which I wanted? I remained confused in seeing such goodness and divine condescension. Be always thanked and blessed, and all to his glory.

* * *

February 26, 1938

As one searches to recognize God in his works, God recognizes himself in her. Happiness that (he) receives from the love of the creature. The place that man holds in creation and in the Divinity itself. How he forms the members of one who lives in the Divine Volition.

I am beneath the rule of the Divine Volition, which loves, (and) sighs from wanting to be recognized in all his works. It seems that he takes the little creature by the hand, and bringing her to flight, shows her that which he has done, how much he has loved her in each created thing, and how by right he wants to be loved. Loving and not being reciprocated in love is his greatest sorrow. I remained surprised, and my always amiable Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, to love and be loved is the greatest refreshment to our love. To the happiness of heaven is united the happiness of the earth, that giving the kiss (of) the one and (of) the other, we feel that the earth also felicitates us, bringing us the love of the creature that recognizes and loves us; she brings us the most beautiful joys and the greatest happiness. Much more, with those of heaven (which) are ours, no one can remove them. Instead those that we have through the love of the creature are new for us, and they form our new conquests.

“Then, to be recognized in our works; the creature puts herself into flight in order to climb to recognize he who has created her; for us, to be recognized is the greatest glory, the most intense love that we receive, and with being recognized we form there our army, the divine militia, our people, from which we don't demand other than the tribute of being loved, and we put at her disposition all our works in order to serve her, abounding her with all that which can make her happy. If they don't recognize us, we remain as the God without army and without people. How sorrowful it is to put so many creatures to the light of day and to not have neither an army, nor a people!

“Now listen to me again. As she recognizes us in created things and loves, thus is sealed in (her) a note of love and of happiness for her Creator, and rising to recognize her Creator, she knows us and we recognize our Divine Being in her; and if you might know what it means to recognize each other! Our loved love pacifies us and loves more intensely she who loves him, and arrives to such (an) excess that, in order to recognize himself in the creature, he creates himself; but in order to do what? In order to recognize himself in her and to be loved.

“How beautiful it is when we recognize ourselves in the creature! She becomes for us our throne, our divine room, our heaven; the seas of our love inundate her; her littlest acts form waves of love that love us, glorify us, bless us; and she recognizes us in ourselves, she recognizes us in herself, she recognizes us in all created things. And we recognize her in all our works: in the sky, in the sun, in the wind, in everything. Our love united to our Fiat carries her (with) us everywhere, and we put her into order in our works.”

After this, my poor mind continued to swim in the sea of the Divine Volition. My God, how many surprises, how many marvels! And my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, all inundated in his flames of love, said to me:

“Blessed daughter of my Will; my love doesn’t give me peace if it doesn’t make me say new surprises about my Divine Fiat. He wants to make you know the sublimity, the nobility and her post that she occupies, as much in the creation as in our Divine Being, for one who lives in our Divine Volition.

“Now, you must know that in the creation (she) occupies the first place. All created things feel so connected together and united, that they become for her as her inseparable members. So that the sun is her member, the extension of the sky, the wind, the air that everyone breathes is her member. All created things feel happy, honored to be members of this fortunate creature; and some act as heart, some as hand, some as feet, some as eye, some as breath. In short, there is no created thing that doesn’t hold its distinct post and exercise the office of member in her; and her soul as head, holds in order her members, and she receives and gives to God all the love, the sanctity, the glory and all the goods that created things contain; even more so that all created things are also our members; so that for one who lives in our Volition, her members are ours and ours hers, the which hold in communication our Supreme Being with the creature, and we become for her more than blood that circulates in the veins of the soul, continuous beat of love because we beat in her heart, divine breath that we breathe in her soul.

“And we, loving with excessive love this more than celestial creature, we put in circulation in our Supreme Being her little love, her acts; we are jealous of her heartbeats, of her breath, and we enclose it in ours. Nothing goes out from her that doesn’t remain enclosed in us, in order to reciprocate her with our love and in order to feel her pleasant and sweet refrain: ‘I love you, I love you, I love you’. So that in one who lives in our Volition we see the continuous chain of love that never breaks, and our love (has) its knoll where to rest, in order to be able to say incessantly: ‘I love you, I love you, I love you.’

“Our love, when it doesn’t find the love of the creature, remains suspended and gives into cry(s) of sorrow, almost wanting to deafen the creature in order to say to her: ‘Why don’t you love me?’ Not loving us is the cruelest wound for us.

“But this is still not everything. Our love, if it doesn’t give into excess, is not content. Do you want to know why we made in the creation so many members that were obliged to serve as our members and members of the creature? In each created thing we put our gifts, our sanctity, our love, as carriers of that which we wanted to give to her, and as carriers of that which she did for us. All created things are crammed and depositories of all that which we wanted to give her: the sky, with the multiplicity of its stars symbolizes our so many acts new and distinct that we wanted to give her;

the sun symbolizes our eternal light, with which we want to inundate her, and its heat and effects that it possesses, our love, that almost wants to drown her in order to make her feel how much we love her, and in the effects, our varied beauties with which we wanted to invest her; in the wind we put in every puff our kisses, our loving caresses, and in its impetuous waves our ruling love, in order to overwhelm her in ours with our holds and embraces, to make her inseparable from us.

“In short, each created thing possesses our gifts to give to the creature; but who takes them? Only one who lives in our Volition. I can say that they are impregnated with our gifts, but they cannot give them, they cannot work as carriers because they don’t find one who lives in our Divine Fiat, which holds (the) virtue and power of putting her in communication with all our works, more than her members, and with her Creator himself, more than her life.

“How many unheard of prodigies will we bring forth from our divine bosom, for one who will let our Will reign! Our works will sing triumphs and victory, and with full hands they will (be) lavish in giving the gifts, the goods that they possess of their Creator. Everyone will be happy, (the) one who gives and (the) one who receives. Therefore be attentive, nor (should) you take care of anything (else), if not to live in my Volition, because I hold much to give you and you to receive.”

I remained surprised in hearing this, and I said to myself: “Is it possible all that which he has said? It seems incredible!”

And my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, do not marvel; you should know that all that which we made should serve the creature that should possess as life my Divine Will, and this was necessary to our decorum, wisdom, power and our majesty. Now, with the creature removing herself from our Will, justice wanted that we withdraw from her that which should serve as suitable to our Supreme Majesty, and the creature remained like a head that didn’t have members. Poor head without members! What can she do of good? It is true that the head holds supremacy over the members, but without the members the head cannot do anything; it is without life, without works.

“Now, wanting to return my Volition into creatures, my love wants it, demands it, that the members be returned; not alone, but the life itself of he who has created them. Our Will reigning will put in vigor all his works and will return to the creature that which she lost by doing her will, which is the devastator of all goods, it breaks all communications with our works and with her Creator himself, and renders her as a bone moved that loses the communication with all its members and serves only to give sorrow.”

* * *

March 6, 1938

Oppressions, melancholies, have no reason to exist in the Divine Volition; they form the clouds, the bitter drops that embitter God and the creature. Prodiges of the abandonment in the Divine Volition. How all created things remain animated by one who lives in the Fiat.

The sea of the Divine Volition doesn’t cease immersing me in its waves, as if he might want that no other thing might enter into me than only his light, in order to grow in me by way of light and heat, (and) that (of) the life of his Will alone. But in spite of all this I felt oppressed, with an air of melancholy, for the circumstances, ah me!, too sorrowful from my poor existence down here, that formed as clouds for me in order to impede me from enjoying the beauty of the light and the softness of the heat in which the soul remains fecundate, reborn and growing in her Creator himself. And my sweet Jesus, who with jealousy watches over my poor soul, all goodness said to me:

“My good daughter, courage! Oppressions, melancholies, the thought of the past, have no reason to exist for one who lives in my Will. These are discordant notes with our notes of joys, of peace and of love, and they form feeble sounds, that sound badly to our divine ears. They are as bitter drops that would like to embitter our divine sea, cast (in it); while with living in our Volition we make her proprietor of our seas of joy, of happiness, and if needs be we arm our power in her might, in order to make that everything be propitious to her and nothing can harm her; because there is no power against our Will, rather she holds (the) ability of leveling and of crushing everything, as dust under the rule of an impetuous wind.

“Therefore, when we see the creature in our Will afflicted, oppressed, how badly it sounds to us! And since she lives in our Volition, from the only Will that animates us, we are constrained to feel her afflictions and oppressions. To put ourselves apart when the creature is afflicted, is not of our Divine Being nor of our love. Rather we make use of our power, we inundate her more with our love, so that we re-see her anew with a smile on her lips and with joy in her heart.

“Then, the thought of the past is really absurd; it is a wish to arbitrate to oneself some divine rights. You must know that that which the creature has done of beauty and of good is deposited inside of us, there they attest her love, her glory that she gives us, and it forms her crown in order to crown her in the first entrance that she will make in our celestial fatherland.

“Then the most beautiful act of the creature is to throw herself into our arms, to abandon herself in a way to allow us to do that which we want to do with her, as much in time as in eternity, and then we take all gusto to make of her one of the most beautiful statues that should adorn our celestial Jerusalem.”

Then he added: “My daughter, when the creature abandons herself in our Will, she is so much our gratification, that she flows in us and we re-flow in her and we give her our life anew, new love, new sanctity, new knowledges of our Supreme Being. When the creature abandons herself in our Divine Volition, we can make in her the greatest prodigies and the most surprising graces, because there is our own Will that receives and makes the deposit of that which we want to give to the creature.

“The abandoning of oneself in our Volition takes heaven by assault, and so much is his rule, that he imposes himself on our Divine Being, encloses himself in her littleness, and she, triumphant, encloses herself in our divine breast.

“The heavens (are) stupefied, the angels and saints remain in ecstasy, and everyone feels a new life flow in them, in virtue of the act of the abandonment that the creature has done, still (a) wayfarer. And we finding her abandoned in our Fiat, we find in her that we can do that which we want; all lends itself to our power. Hence we give the beginning to the work and form in her soul so many fountains of love, of goodness, of sanctity, of mercy, and so on; in a way that when our love wants to love, with our omnipotent breath we move the fountains of love, and she loves us and makes overflow from the font so much love as to flood all the Celestial Court. When we want to use goodness, mercy, grace, we move these fonts, and the earth is flooded by our goodness and mercy, and some convert, some receive grace.

“All this we can do it directly by ourselves; however we prove more gusto/(style), we feel more pleasure in making use of the fonts that we ourselves have formed in the creature, through her means we feel more inclined to use mercy toward everyone; we hold her intermediary between heaven and earth, that with her abandonment she make us pour out grace and makes us love anew all creatures.

“So that how much more you will be abandoned in our Will, (so much) more we will be liberal towards you and towards everyone, and everyone [more or less disposed] will find new strength, new light, new guidance.”

I remained surprised, and he added:

“My good daughter, how I would like that everyone might know what it means to live in my Divine Volition, that it seems that it gives of the incredible, but do you know why? Because they don’t know what my Will is and the whole series of prodigies that he knows how to do and wants to do in the creature; hence not knowing it, they believe that it is not possible that he can do in the creature all that which I say. Oh, if they might know it! It is little that which he does and that which he says.

“It is the knowledge that puts us en route toward the creature and there prepares the place, forms the void where to depose our unheard of prodigies; it is the knowledge that forms the eyes in order to be able to look and to appreciate our divine wonders. Everything is prodigy for one who lives in our Will.

“You must know that as they do acts in my Will all created things remain animated by the will and word of that creature. All possess a voice, and some say love, some glory, some adoration, some thanks, some benediction to our Creator. What harmony they form in the atmosphere, what sweet enchantment, even to feel ourselves enraptured! But of whom are all those voices? Of one who lives in our Volition.

“It happens as when by way of talent the voices, the songs are enclosed in the instruments of wood and of metal. The instruments sing and speak. Thus one who lives in my Volition, so much is her love, because she wants to see me loved and glorified, that she encloses her will, her voice, her love, in created things; and some narrate to me the story of my love, some sing glory to me. It seems that everything has a thing to say to me, and oh, how I remain content from it, because I see that the creature masters all creation, and as queen that she is she animates everything and makes me loved by everything! Oh, how sweet it resounds to our divine hearing! I have given her everything and she gives me everything; and I return to regive everything.”

* * *

March 12, 1938

How God loves himself and prays to himself in order to give the Kingdom of the Divine Will. One who lives in him her life becomes formed in God. How one is reborn continually. Seed of divine life. How it is well wanted and loved by everyone.

I feel between the arms of the Divine Volition, which, mastering me is (all) attentive, even over my little nothings, in order to invest them with his life, with his light, in order to enclose in the little nothing the All. What goodness! What love! It seems that in all ways he wants to have (something) to do with the creature, but in order to do what? In order to always give. With giving he vents himself, with giving he feels operative, because he makes of himself so many beautiful things that they love him and praise who he is.

Whence my dear Jesus, who takes the highest delight to always say new things about his adorable Will, visiting my poor soul, as if he felt the need of entrusting his secrets to me, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, the living of the creature in our Volition is our amusement, our fun, our perennial occupation. Now, you must know that, as the creature unites herself, she enters into our Volition, so (our Volition) kisses the human will and she kisses ours, and we love ourselves, we pray and we ask ourselves that our Will come to reign in the human generations. The creature disappears in our divine sea like a drop of water, and our prayer remains, which with its power wants to invest everything and to obtain that which we have asked of ourselves; and we cannot do less than grant it.

“Whence, as we have prayed, we put ourselves en route, we tour all the nations, every heart, in order to see if we find even a little disposition, that they want to live in our Volition; we take that little disposition in our creative hands, we purify it, sanctify it, embellish it and put inside the first act of our Will, and we wait in order to put the second, the third act of life of our Fiat, and so on.

“Hence, all that which the creature does in our Volition, (it is) we are ourselves that do it: we love, we pray. One can say that we compromise ourselves in order to give that which we want, and not to grant it to ourselves is impossible. Do you see therefore what it means to live in our Volition? To impose oneself on us and make us do that which one wants, and make us give that which one wants that we give.”

After this my beloved Jesus added:

“My daughter, one who lives in our Will, her life is formed in our Divine Being; she is conceived, born, reborn continually. As our Divine Being is always in (the) act of generating, so she is always in (the) act of being reborn, and as she is reborn, thus she is reborn to new love, to new sanctity, to new beauty; and while she is reborn, she grows and always takes from us.

“These rebirths are her greatest fortune, and also ours, because we feel that the creature not only lives in us, but is reborn and grows in our same life, she becomes renewed in our same act, always new; and as she is reborn we take gusto in looking at her, because as she is reborn she acquires a new beauty, more beautiful, more attractive than that of before. But does she remain there perhaps? Ah, no, other beauties will invest her, they will never cease; but so many as to enrapture our look, to not be able to move it, in order for us to be able to enjoy in her our interminable beauties, and we love our beauties with which incessantly we go investing her.

“And while we look at her under the rain of our varied beauties, our love doesn’t remain behind, it makes her reborn in us, gives us always new joys, new surprises of happiness; because as she is reborn, so is she reborn in our power, wisdom, goodness and our sanctity. So perceiving in her our life, we love her as ourselves.

“Now, being reborn so many times in us, we give her (the) virtue to be able to receive our seed, that is to be able to sow in her so many of our divine lives, for how much we want of her. And behold our Divine Will goes out in field, and with his Fiat speaks and creates, speaks and sows divine life, and with his breath grows (it in) her, with his love he feeds her, with his light he gives the tints of all the varied beauties. Even more so that this life being reborn so many times in us, grown in ourselves, we have infused (in) her all the prerogatives of being able to receive the seed of our divine lives.

“These lives are the most precious, they possess the creative virtue, they have our same value; we can say; it is we ourselves that, having formed so many lives of ourselves, have sowed them in the creature. These lives compared to the sun its light remains as shaded before them. The extension of the sky is little to their comparison.

“But do you want to know to what (purpose) these lives of ours will serve, formed with so much love in the creature? They will serve to populate the earth and to generate in the human family the life of our Will. They are our lives, my daughter; our life doesn’t die, it is eternal with us; therefore all are in expectation of taking possession of creatures, in order to form with them one life alone.

“And yet this is the cause, our great divine reason for speaking so at length on our Divine Volition. Every word that we say is a life (of) ours that we put forth, it is a birth that we put forth to the light. Every word that we say on our Fiat is a life that we exhibit, which is put in communication with creatures. Every knowledge that we manifest carries our kiss, which breathing it forth, forms our life; and since life holds motion, heat, throb, breath, hence it must also feel even by necessity this life of ours in it, which will have (the) virtue of transforming in itself the life of the fortunate creature.

“Therefore, our dear daughter, be attentive; don’t let any word escaped on our Fiat, because they are lives, and lives which we live in the other creatures.

“The value of one single word on our Fiat is so much, that all the creation, oh, how it remains behind, because the creation is our work, instead a word on our Fiat is life, and life always costs more than all the works.

“Other than this, so much is our love for this creature that receives the seed of our divine lives, that as we speak to her of our Volition, thus our eternal love re-pours itself over her, is relieved, feels itself loved in return; the weight of human ingratitude, that they don’t love us, remains emptied, because we find one who loves us with our love, which holds (the) virtue of redoing all the love that all creatures should give us and of burning all their evils, of filling and of approaching the longest distances. And therefore our love finds in her our refreshments, our revenges, and therefore we love her infinitely. But we are not content to love her (by) ourselves alone; we make her loved by the Celestial Queen more than (a) tender daughter, by the angels and saints as their inseparable sister; we make her loved by the sky, by the sun, by the wind, by everyone. They feel in her the force, the virtue, of our love, and they feel themselves to be fortunate to love her, because she is the bearer of joys to everyone. And so much is our love, the contentment that we experience, that we call her 'our comforter, our Fiat that we hold upon the earth, our depositary'; everything is ours in her."

* * *

March 16, 1938

How the Divine Fiat arrives to count the breaths, the minutes, in order to make the creature return to live in him. The (door)knock that she makes to all created things. How he wants to be in (the) continuous act of giving and of receiving. The sufferings of Jesus kiss the sufferings of the creature.

It seems to me that the Divine Volition waits for me, wants me, longs that in every instant I might enter into him in order to reenter mine into all his acts, and if [may it never be, heaven watch over me!] I flee some instant, he feels isolated and laments inconsolably the company of his creature; and in his sorrow he says:

"What! You leave me? For you I left myself in the spheres, in the sun, in the air, in order to keep you company and to receive yours, but do you know why? In order to love you and to be loved, and in order to be able to say: that which I do in heaven in our Divine Being, I do in the spheres, (and) I want to do it in my beloved creature; but if you are not in my Volition, you withdraw yourself from me and I from you, and I remain isolated; but in my sorrow I don't cease from calling you."

"Divine Will, how much you love me! How very amiable and admirable you are!" Whence I felt the sorrow of his solitude. But my sweet Jesus, repeating his little visit to me, said to me:

"My good daughter of my Volition, anticipation is one of our greatest sufferings; it holds us as in sentinel; we arrive to count the breaths, the heartbeats, the minutes, because we don't feel her with us; to make our love felt in hers and to love each other with one love alone, we feel as harmonized with the creature, and as victorious we carry her into our divine bosom. Therefore without her the minutes seem to us centuries, and we long for her return.

"Even more so, as she enters into our Volition and asks us that our Will come to reign upon the earth, we make festive, because she wants that which we want, that (is a) great thing and it is the most beautiful of all, that the creature wants that which her Creator wants. This forms our rest, and our love smiles and is quieted.

"Now, as she asks that our Volition come to reign, she knocks at all the created things, at the sun, at the wind, at the sky, at the stars, at everything. I, rule there dominant in them, as I feel (the) knocking, I open all the doors and I put myself en route in order to come to reign. But she does not stop; she climbs on more, and knocks at our Divinity, at everyone, angels and saints, and from everyone she makes me ask that my Fiat come. How sweet is her penetrating knock, ruling, because everyone opens, they all put themselves at attention; she (continues) to do (this) to everyone, and everyone asks (for) that which she wants.

“Therefore the living in our Volition moves heaven and earth, puts our work in aptness for a cause so holy.”

After this he added:

“My daughter, do you want to know why we want that the creature live in our Divine Volition? Because we want to give her always new gifts, new love, new charismas; we want to tell her always new things of our Divine Being. And she, because she must receive and listen to us, if she doesn’t live in our Volition, she won’t hold a place where to put our gifts, and we won’t put forth our gifts if we don’t have a place to deposit them, and we remain with sorrow that we want to give and we are not able; we are as suffocating from the love, and we cannot relieve ourselves, because there is no one who takes it, and we are constrained to see the poor creature, weak, ignorant. What sorrow! While in our Volition we put our goods in common, and we go to her always saying: ‘take that which you want, and for thanksgiving give us the little tribute of your love and of your will.’

“Therefore my daughter, we make the pacts, we put ourselves in accord that I should always give you, and you should always give me your little love; thus we will always be in communication, we will always have that to do together, we will love with one love alone, we will be happy with one same happiness.”

Whence suffering with a restlessness that I didn’t know how to apply myself, my sweet Jesus, returning, resumed to say:

“My daughter, my sufferings kiss yours, they embrace them, they blow (on) them with their love, they unify with mine, and they make them take life in my own sufferings, and they receive the infinite value and the good that my own sufferings do.

“In my Will things, sufferings, change themselves, from human they become divine. I feel that it is not the creature that suffers, but I myself form them (in) me, I create those sufferings (in) me, in order to suffer them in my beloved creature, it is my life repeating in her with the cortege of my sufferings, and therefore I call them my sufferings; and if you might know what I do with these sufferings! I put them between the heaven and the earth, as glory and perennial love to my Celestial Father, as defense and refuge for creatures, as remorse to one who offends me, as (a) cry of love to one who doesn’t love me, as light to one who doesn’t know me; in short I make them do all the offices of the goods that are needed there near creatures. Therefore leave me to do it; they are works that your Jesus wants to do, and I can do them in one who lives in my Will.”

* * *

March 20, 1938

Contrivances of love of the creature that lives in the Divine Volition. Example of a teacher that possesses the sciences and does not find one to whom to teach them; of a rich one that does not find one to whom to give his riches.

I am between the arms of the Fiat, which so very loves his beloved creature that lives in him, that he always holds her pressed in his arms, rather there is more: his love is so much, that he puts her in his incessant motion. The littlest distances, the instants of interval that he might not feel her with himself in his own life, would form for him the most sorrowful martyrdom of love, and in his sorrow he would say to her:

“My daughter do not remove yourself from me not even for one single instant; you would embitter my love, because we feel your life as ours; hence we would feel ourselves torn, our love tortured, because you must know (that) your breath makes life, it breathes in ours, and as it breathes we feel ourselves loved and we love her (Jesus passes from speaking about Luisa to speak on the soul that lives in his Volition.); her motion moves in ours, she has our same life, works with us, speaks with our same word, we feel her circulate in our Divine Being like blood that circulates in the veins of creatures, and she says and always repeats: ‘I love you, I love you.’ Not content she takes flight, turns through all the created things, collects our love scattered in all the creation, and comes to shelter herself in our Supreme Being and makes for us the surprise of carrying to us all the love that all created things should give us if they might have reason. She goes always finding new contrivances in order to love us.

“Other times she goes to her Queen Mother and asks her for all her love, and makes for us the surprise of bringing to us the love of the great Lady duplicated, and celebrating she says to us: ‘I bring to you the love of my Celestial Mama in order to love you.’ And, oh, how we remain content! To be without one who lives in our Volition proves impossible for us.”

Oh Divine Will, how much love, (and) power you contain for one who lives in you! And I felt so amazed, that I didn’t know how to go ahead in speaking more. And my beloved Jesus, repeating his brief little visit, with indescribable love said to me:

“My daughter, born and reborn in our Volition; you must know that the living in our Volition contains such prodigies and unheard of wonders, that the heavens themselves are shaken, and reverent they abase themselves in sensing them, because in her (the creature) we can unfold our creative work, we can depose our love, our deliriums, our anxieties and sighs, our Will; she will make our Supreme Majesty understood, she will make us loved with our love.

“Without her we find ourselves like a teacher that possesses all the sciences; he could impart his lessons to all the universities, to all the schools; not at all, he doesn’t even find one pupil whom (will) learn his sciences. What sorrow for this teacher! To possess so many sciences, and to hold them useless in himself, without being able to make known the value of the sciences that he possesses. Oh, if this teacher might find one single pupil that might want to learn his sciences, he would put him upon his knees, he would hold him with himself night and day, he would feel that his science will not die, but will live in his pupil, and as almost duplicate his life. Oh how he would love him! He would feel reborn in his pupil; the solitude broken, loved by [the one to whom] he imparts his lessons; hence, it would change his bitter life into joys.

“Such is our Supreme Being. If we don’t find one who lives in our Divine Will, we are like the teacher, that we don’t have one to whom to impart our lessons; we possess infinite sciences, and yet we don't have one to whom to say a word, because (there) is missing the light of our Volition, that will make them understand that which we want to teach them. Instead, if one lives in our Volition, we will feel ourselves revived in the creature; we can teach her our divine sciences, rather they will form life in her; she will understand our celestial dialect and marvel, she will love us as we want one to love us. And here is ours and her fate changed; solitude won't exist anymore, the company will be perennial; we will always have to say, and will hold one who listens to us; our eternal sorrow will be changed into joys, into festivals because the creature lives in ours Volition.

“Or rather it happens for us, when we don't find one who lives in our Will, as one who possesses immense riches, but so many, that he feels as drown by them; and yet he doesn't find neither one to give to, nor one who takes his goods. Poor (man), in his riches he is very unhappy, he suffers a cruel solitude; there is no one who loves him, who respects him, who says to him one thank you rather it seems that they flee from him, because he doesn't find neither one to whom to give them to, nor one who takes them. Without company, joy dies, and with not giving them to anyone he feels that his goods, his life, doesn't live in the others; and isolation is the greatest of bitternesses.

“Oh, how many times we want to give and don't have one to give to! Rather, with not doing our Will one closes the doors to us, impedes the step to us, indeed one puts oneself at (a) distance from us and surrounds oneself with misery, weakness, (and) the most ugly passions.

“Behold that the living in our Volition awakens wonder in everyone, and we ourselves remain amazed by it, having to enclose the infinite in the finite, the immensity in the littleness. It is necessary that we make such wonders and prodigies, that only our love reigning over our Divine Being induces us to do the most outstanding wonders, but so much so that the angels and saints themselves remain surprised and mute for (the) amazement of it.”

* * *

March 22, 1938

As the creature decides to live in our Volition, all things are changed for her and she becomes put in the same divine conditions. To what the children of the Divine Fiat will serve, and how they will carry in them the life of their Celestial Father. The ultimate spying of love at the point of death.

My flight continues in the Divine Volition. As one enters into him, so is felt his balsamic air, his pacifying waves; everything is peace, his fortitude is such that the soul feels invested by such fortitude that in an instant she can do everything, arrive to everything, even to do that which God himself does. Divine Will, how you know how to change the human will! Your power is such that it renovates the poor creature, makes her reborn to new life.

And my amiable Jesus, returning with his brief little visit, all tenderness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Will, as the creature decides to live in my Volition, all things change for her. Our divine dominion invests her and we make her dominator of everything, dominator of our fortitude, of goodness, of our sanctity; dominator of the light. Heavens and earth by right are hers. We put her in an atmosphere of security, of imperturbable peace. Nothing should be missing to this creature that lives in our Volition, of good, of sanctity, of beauty, of divine joys; all her little acts are full of such contentments that enraptures the smile of all heaven and our own Supreme Being.

“Therefore we are all at attention in order to see when she loves, works, in order to enjoy ourselves in her and to smile together.

“So much is our love, that we put her in our same conditions. We, if we are not loved, we love; if not taken care of, and perhaps even offended, we continue to give life; and if one returns to us by asking pardon of us, we don’t make any rapprochement of them, we embrace them and press them to our divine breast.

“So that one can say that man can trust only us, because in creatures he cannot solely trust, but will find mutability, deceptions, and when he believes he can rest they will come to less. Now, they can trust only one who lives in our Will; she (the creature) will do as we do: not loved, she will love; not taken care of and offended, she will race near in order to put one into safety.

“We sense ourselves in one who lives in our Volition, and therefore we love her so much that we don’t do other than to pour torrents of love upon her, in order to be re-loved always more with double and growing love.”

Afterwards he added with (a) more tender and touching love:

“My daughter, all the creation was done in one venting of our more intense love; therefore the children of our Fiat will serve to the necessity of our love. My love feels the need of relieving itself, otherwise we feel suffocated in our flames. Here is the necessity of the children of our Volition; as continuous vent of our love we ourselves will put them in our conditions of feeling the need of venting themselves in love with us, and we will relieve each other. And as the creation commenced in one venting of our love, thus we will close it together with our children, in one venting of love.

“These children of ours will serve to the complete glory of all the creation. It would not be a worthy work of us, if we didn’t receive the glory that creatures should give us, in order to have created so many things for their love.

“And then there is the highest point, most noble, holy and sublime: that we created everything so that everyone might be enclosed and animated by our Will. So as we put it forth, thus it must return to us, in our adorable Fiat. If we didn’t do this, it would seem that we don’t have sufficient power in which we can do everything, love that we can win everything, wisdom that we can dispose everything. Hence, the children of our Volition will serve to let us complete our Will in them, and therefore they will be our glory, our triumph, our victory; they will be our true children, that will carry, not only our image but the life of the Celestial Father himself as proper life, residing in them.

“These children of ours will be our life, our heavens, solely ours. And, oh, how we will delight by creating in them winds that blow love, seas that murmur ‘I love you, I love you’; we will find everything in them. There won’t be differences anymore between the heaven and the earth; for us they will form one thing alone: as much as to hold them with us in heaven, as to hold them with us on earth.

“Therefore have to heart the thing that should more interest you, of living in our Divine Volition. Our love will find its rest, its outlet, its peace in you, and the beginning of our happiness upon the earth in the heart of the creature. Our Will will be always over you, in order to make our life grow in you, and our love will give you continuous breaths, in order to love you always with new love, and in order to receive yours, as I vent and reciprocate with his.”

After this, my beloved Jesus added, but with an indescribable tenderness, as to feel my heart break:

“My good daughter, the saying to you (of) what my Will does with the creature, how he is with her, if everyone might know it, they would cast themselves into his arms, without ever detaching from him.

“You should know that he does to them as (a) true Mama; with his creative hands he creates her and conceives her in the maternal womb, as within a shrine; he forms her, gives her the use of members, grows her with his breath, gives her heat, and when he has formed her well, makes her born to the light of day. But he never leaves her alone; more than Mother he is always above her, watching her, assisting her, he gives her motion, articulation to the members, breath, heartbeat, and as she grows, so he gives her the use of the word, step to the feet. There is no thing that the creature does that he does not do together (with) her, in order to give her the use of human life.

“So that the beginning of human life, as much the soul as the body, (is) all formed by my Will, and there remains within, as her refuge, in order to give her perennial life.

“Now, my daughter, even to such that the fault doesn’t begin in the creature, everything is my Will; and as the fault begins, so begins the tears, the sorrows of this Celestial Mother. Oh, how he laments his child! But he doesn’t leave her; his love ties him to live in that creature in order to give her life, and although he feels how suffocated his divine life (is), and perhaps not even known, nor loved, his love is so much that he follows her life, although she might offend him, in order to make for her a surprise of love, in order to save his child.

“Our goodness, our love is so much, that we try all routes, we use all means in order to tear her from sin, in order to put her in safety, and if we don’t succeed there in life, we make the ultimate surprise of love at the point of death. Now, you must know that at that point it is the ultimate spying of love that we do to the creature, and we furnish her with graces, with light, with goodness; there we put such tenderness of love, as to soften and to overcome the hardest hearts. And when the creature finds herself between life and death, between the time that finishes and the eternity about to begin, almost in the act that the soul is about to go forth from the body, I, your Jesus, make myself seen with an amiability that enraptures, with a sweetness that captivates and softens the bitterness of life, specifically at that extreme point; then, my look..., I look at her, but with so much love as to tear an act of sorrow from her, an act of love, an adherence to my Will.

“Now, in that point of disillusionment, in seeing, in touching with (one’s) hand how much we have loved and love them, they feel such sorrow that they repent for not having loved us, and they recognize our Will as beginning and completion of their life, and as satisfaction they accept death in order to complete an act of our Will. Because you must know that if the creature doesn't do not even one act of the Will of God, the doors of heaven are not opened, nor is she recognized as heir of the celestial fatherland, nor can the angels and saints admit her among them, nor would she like to enter there, because she would know that it doesn't belong to her. Therefore without our Will there is neither true sanctity, nor salvation. And how many become saved in virtue of this spying of ours all of love, except the most perverse and obstinate, although it will be necessary for her to make the long stopover of purgatory. Therefore the point of death is our daily catch, the recovery of lost man."

Afterwards he added:

"My daughter, the point of death is the hour of disillusionment, and all things are presented in that point the one after the other, in order to say: 'Good-bye, the earth for you is finished, eternity for you begins.' It happens for the creature as when she finds herself closed in a room, and it comes to be said to her: 'Beyond this room there is another room, in which there is God, paradise, purgatory, hell, in short eternity'; but she sees nothing, if she listens to it asserted by others, and since those that say it it has not yet come to them, they say it in a way almost as not believing, not giving a great importance as to make one believe reality, certainty, (of) that which they say in words.

"Now, one beautiful day the walls fall, and she sees with (her) eyes that which they said before; she sees her Father God, who with so much love has loved her; the benefits that he has done for her one by one, and all the injured rights of love that she owed him; how her life was of God not hers. Everything (brings) itself before her: eternity, paradise, purgatory, hell; the earth escapes her, pleasures turn (their) shoulders/(backs), everything disappears, and only that which is present to her is in that room in which the walls have fallen, that is eternity. What change happens for the poor creature!

"My goodness is so much, that I want everyone safe, that I allow that these walls fall when creatures find themselves between life and death, between the soul going forth from the body in order to enter into eternity, so that at least they make an act of sorrow and of love for me, and they recognize my adorable Will upon them, I can say (that) I give (them) an hour of truth, in order to put them in safety. Oh, if everyone might know my industries of love that I do at the last point of life, so that they don't escape from my more than fatherly hands, they would not wait for that point, but they would love me for all (of their) life."

* * *

March 28, 1938

How for one who lives in our Volition creation serves as so many cities where to repatriate the creature. How the human act must begin and finish in the Divine Volition in order to be complete. Rain of light. The great sorrow of Jesus is seeing that one doesn't live in his Will.

My poor mind always goes in search of the acts done by the Divine Volition. It seems to me that I search (for) them and they await me in order to make themselves found, because these acts long to make themselves found by the creature, in order to receive her 'I love you', in order to make (her) know how much they love her; and the soul feels herself as repatriated in the acts of her Creator and as immersed in the sea of joys and of happiness. And my always amiable Jesus, in seeing me amazed, repeating his brief little visit said to me:

“My blessed daughter, since man was made by us in order to live in our Volition, all our acts had to serve as so many different cities or nations, in which man should find with right his fatherland, the different cities which should hold his amusements, his joys, the enchanting and delightful scenes that his Creator had prepared with so much love. So that one can say the sun is a city, and as the soul enters into our Volition she finds this city of light, with all the various beauties of colors and of sweetness; she finds our creative and festive act, full of joys, of love and of indescribable happiness, and she immerses herself in these seas of beauties, of sweetness, of love and joys, and as her fatherland she makes her long walk and renders herself proprietor of the goods that she finds there.

“And oh, how we remain content in seeing our works, our cities created only for man, deserted no more, but populated by our children, because entering into our Volition they find the way that conducts them into the different cities that we have formed in the creation; and there they find a delight, there a distinct joy, there one knowledge more evident of their Creator, and there a very intense love that embraces them, kisses them and communicates the life of love to them.

“Every created thing possesses of ours, but not for themselves but in order to give it to creatures; but they must live in our Volition, otherwise the doors are closed, and at the most they enjoy the effects, but not the fullness of the goods that there are in our works.

“Therefore, my daughter, in order for the act of the creature to be perfect and complete it must begin and finish in our Will, which administers his own life of light and of love to her, in order to make that act be complete and nothing missing of beauty, of sanctity and of good. If it doesn't begin in our Will, there is missing the order, the sanctity, the beauty; hence the human act cannot be signed with the signature of our Volition as his act.

“It is to cry, my daughter, in seeing so many human acts upset, disordered, some remaining at the beginning, some at half; some missing one point, some another; and then, worse yet, some dirtied with mud, some with rottenness, some as soaked in guilt/sin, that they don't do other than irritate our justice.

“Therefore, without our Will there cannot be good in the creature, and if it seems that they do some good it is seeming good; and since there is missing the substance of the life of our Fiat, it cannot be enduring, and it is enough that a contrast arise, a displeasure, (and) the good ends and they are penitent/sorry for having done it. Instead, all that which one does in my Will possesses unshakable firmness, and before displeasures and contrasts (these acts) are not stopped; they race on more, in order to give the life of the good that they possess.

“Now, you must know that one who does her acts in our Volition does complete and perfect acts; instead one who always lives in him finds herself under a continuous rain of light that, as she moves, palpitates and breathes, so rains on her all the effects and varied beauties of our divine light. Our Divine Being is most pure light, and although interminable light, it encloses all possible and imaginable goods. While it is light it is word, it is all eye, it looks everywhere; there is no thing that can hide from us. This light is work, is step, is life that gives life to everything and everyone. It encloses beauties that are not exhausted, joys and happiness without end.

“Now, one who always lives in our Divine Volition finds herself under the rain of light of our ruling and creative word, and oh, how our word transforms her, speaks always to her of our Supreme Being, and produces all our divine effects upon the creature, with such variety of beauty, that we ourselves remain enraptured by it. Our look of light looks at her always, our step races toward her always, our works with their arms of light embrace her and press her to the breast, and all light rains (on) her, in order to communicate our look of light, our works and steps of light.

“So that one who always lives in our Volition is always in direct communication with her Creator and receives all the effects that a God knows how to produce. Instead, one who works in him is in communication with our works, and hers become modeled with our works.”

So I proceeded to trace the acts of the Divine Will and arrived to that which Our Lord did in the redemption, one by one I kissed them, adored them, blessed them, thanked them, and taking the same love with which Jesus loved them, I loved them also. And Jesus, all moved and touched in seeing his acts loved with his own love, said to me:

“My daughter, it is always love that strikes me and wounds me, and induces me to speak in order to reveal to my beloved creature my secrets hidden from whom does not love me, because not loving me they would not understand my dialect of love.

“Now, you must know that all these acts done by me on the earth contain each one a sorrow so intense, that if my Divinity might not have sustained me, it would have been enough to make me die. Hence as I worked, my Supreme Will thus created for me the sorrow of not finding the human will in mine, in order to enclose it in my acts and to give her virtue and grace to have her live in my Will. In all that which I did, even if I breathed, palpitated, looked, walked, I sought the human Will in order to enclose it and to give her the primary place in my breath, heartbeat, look and my steps.

“What sorrow, my daughter! To want to do good, and not find one to whom to do it; to want to put her in (a) secure place, where she would have been happy [because my sufferings, my works, my humanity itself would have been not only her defense, but would have formed (for) her the regal palace where they would have held her as Queen], and instead of being grateful and listening to me, she escaped from my hands, from my sufferings, in order to live unhappy in the midst of dangers and enemies, without anyone that might defend her. What sorrow! What sorrow!

“I can say that my greatest sorrow down here, that gave me continuous death, was seeing creatures, that they did not live nor do my Will, because I saw that my acts remained without the purpose for which I did them, without giving the life with which they were invested; and if it was not that with my omni-clairvoyance I saw every century as presently acting, in which I saw my beloved children that should live of my Divine Volition, of which they should make use of that which my humanity did and suffered in order to establish my Kingdom, and make use of it as the most beautiful of their habitations, I would not have been able to support such a sorrow.

“Therefore continue to trace my acts, my steps, my sufferings, in order to ask me that my Will come to reign upon the earth, and my sorrow will be sweetened and will change itself into love, in order to shorten the time in order to make him known, loved and reign. And I will keep you as my refreshment and as bearer of balm to my sufferings. And when I will see my acts and my sufferings embittered by sorrow because creatures run away from my Will, I will come to shelter myself in you, in order to sweeten myself and to embalm my sufferings too embittered by sorrow.”

* * *

March 30, 1938

When sacrifices are done with good will, dear Jesus puts his divine gusto there, and renders them pleasant, amiable. How God created in them the passion to love.

I feel between the arms of the Divine Fiat, whose love is so much that he feeds me with his light, warms me with his heat, and if I am tired cradles me on his knees in order to give me his rest, that makes me re-arise to new life. Divine Will, how very amiable are! You alone know how to really love me, and I find the refuge from all my evils!

But I felt oppressed in seeing that those that surround me suffer and make great sacrifices for my cause. How sorrowful it is to see (the) sacrifices (of) others! And my sweet Jesus, pressing me between his arms in (an) act of sympathizing with me, all tenderness said to me:

“My poor daughter, courage; I don’t want for you to think there. You must know that I can and know how to pay well, even the little sacrifices, the attentions; much more so the great ones. I number everything, and not even a breath done for me I leave without recompense. Even more so if these sacrifices are done by one who loves me, who wants to live in my Volition, I feel that one does it for me myself; and I, in order to have that these sacrifices are done with good will, I put there my divine gusto, in a way that I make the gusto felt, the pleasure of doing those sacrifices, in a way that they feel the need to do them, the gusto, the pleasure in the sacrifice. They are like salt, the condiments to foods, as the oil to the wheels, which first moved with difficulty, put the oil on (and) they race. The divine gusto empties the sacrifice and makes it light and pleasant.

“Behold therefore the reason that in our love we created a holy passion, a gusto, a pleasure, that we don’t know how to be if we don’t love the creature.

“It was this our passion of love, that made us feel the extreme need of attesting with our works the love toward creatures, so much so that no one prayed to us that we might create a sky, a sun and so many other things; so much so that after creating we looked at it, and we experienced so much gusto and pleasure that in our emphasis of love we exclaimed: ‘How beautiful our works are!’ But they will give us more glory, we will experience more gusto, when our works will give themselves to creatures in order to love them, in order make us loved by them. Then, added to our passion of love, to the extreme need of love was added the folly, the delirium of love, so much so that we were not contented by the works alone; the love arrived to such, that we felt the need to put forth even life.

“Indeed, what didn’t it make me do this necessity of love that I felt in myself? It made me suffer unheard of pains, I felt the most humiliating humiliations and even death itself, between atrocious spasms.

“Now this same passion of ours of loving is not content if it doesn’t participate the creature in this our same passion of love. Therefore, in the sacrifices that we make to do we created in them the holy passion, we equip it with gusto, with pleasures, to make them have the most beautiful conquests. This passion becomes ingenious, being industrious in a thousand ways, and if it does not become operative it seems that it doesn’t know neither (how) to be nor (how) to live. If there is no passion, even in holy works, and gusto in the sacrifices, it seems that they are painted works, not living; they have a coldness, an apathy, that produces more (of) disgust than gusto, and perhaps more evil than good.

“Therefore, my daughter, do not give thought to the sacrifices that they do for you; rather I should say to you that they do it for me, not for you, and I will put there such grace, gusto and pleasure, as to empty the sacrifice, and then, according to the love in which they will do it, I will pour myself out in them, and as they will do the sacrifice wanted by me, thus I will make my life grow in them.

“Is it not maybe my passion of love, that makes me say so much about my Will, in order to create in man the passion of living in my Volition? By saying so much about it I want to drown the human will with our divine gustos but so much so as to make her decide in virtue of the gusto that she feels, of the happiness that she experiences, to live in my Will. And then, you yourself can say, how many gustos, contentments, joys have I given you in the sacrificial state in which I have put you? Hence, leave your Jesus to do it, because he knows how to adjust the sacrifice and render it amiable, easy and even desirable; even more so that to the sacrifice of the creature I put forth the strength, the support, the life of my sacrifice; I can say that my sacrifice takes in its womb the sacrifice of her, and does as guide, as life, as light, to him or her that of good will wants to sacrifice themselves for me.”

* * *

April 4, 1938

“How God created the necessity of our Will in the creature, how she cannot live without it; example, how he created the necessity of water and sun to the earth.” How one who doesn’t live in him wants to conceal God in heaven. Each further word on the Divine Will gives a new and distinct life.

My poor mind feels the extreme need of tracing the acts of the Divine Volition, like breath and heartbeat in my poor existence, and if I might not do this I would feel myself missing the air to breathe, the heart to beat. My God, how can one live without the air and the life of your Will? It seems impossible to me. And my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My good daughter of my Will, my love was so much in the creation of man, that I gave (him) my Will as his primary life and of absolute necessity, so much so that without it he cannot produce anything of good.

“As the earth does not produce without water, because one can call water the soul of the earth; but if one does not add the sun, that with its light and heat fecundates, purifies, embellishes the earth, water would serve to mildew the earth and to make it a muddy sewer, from which would emit a contagious air able to afflict the earth. But these three elements, water, earth and sun are not enough; there is needed the seed, in order to be able to form from the earth the most beautiful flowerings, the plants, the fruits that cheer the agriculturist and form the food to all human generations. You see, (if) one of these elements should be missing, the earth would be infertile, dismal, dark, to make one fear. Now, the necessity of the union of these elements forms the beauty, the utility, the good, the fecundity of our creative work; separate they can cause damage and be harmful to poor creatures, united they can do a world of good.

“Now, thus created the strict necessity of my Will in the creature. I created the soul as water to the earth, which had to flow more than water in the earth of her body. I created my Will in her as sun, light and heat that had to vivify her, fecundate her, embellish her, but with such rare beauty as to enrapture us continually to love her. And as the agriculturist occupies himself with casting the seed in the earth in order to make her produce, so my Will took the pledge of casting in the creature so many divine seeds, through which so many suns should arise, one more beautiful than the other, that should produce flowerings and celestial fruits, that should serve as his food, of the creature’s and of her Creator himself, because our food, our life, is our Will.

“You see therefore the necessity of the union of the acts that as seeds form in the creature? This forms the growth of my Will in her, communicates the virtue of our divine qualities, and forms such prodigies of grace in her, of beauty, that we ourselves love her so much so as to not only make us inseparable, but continually operative in her, because we know that if we love she loves, if we work she works, neither does she know how to do anything without us, because our union missing (she) would be reduced into uselessness as the earth without water, without sun and without seeds. Therefore we, loving her a great deal we do everything in her.

“Do you see in what sorrowful, harmful and almost horrible point the creature puts herself without our Will?”

Then he added, with a most sorrowful and moving accent:

“My daughter, how it pains us not seeing the creature live in our Will! By not living in him she wants to conceal us in our celestial fatherland; she doesn’t want us to live together upon the earth. With this, our Will is weight (on) her, she escapes from our sanctity, closes the doors to the light and searches the darkness. Poor little one, with doing her will (she) will die of cold and of hunger, and she could say: ‘Heaven doesn’t belong to me.’

“They live exiled upon the earth, without support, without defense, without strength; good itself, for them converts into bitterness, and if needs be also into defects. Therefore they form our sorrow and they continually suffocate our love.

“So much is the love of our Will, that every word or knowledge that manifests of him is a divine life of his; not only, but new, distinct the one from the other; new in sanctity, in beauty, in love. Therefore we enjoy so much and we make festive in making known what our Will is, that which he knows how to do and can do in the circle of the creature, and to what noble, sublime, high point he wants to put her in our divine bosom. Because with making him known we don’t do other than to emit new divine lives, and as they are made to possess (them), thus we receive our new love, our new beauty, goodness and so on from the creature, and oh, how we feel glorified, loved, through means of our own lives, by which we have made ourselves known.

“Therefore making ourselves known, finding one who wants to know us, is the act that glorifies us more. Our love (looks) for one to vent and to be able to give that which we want.

“And then, to what advantage (is it) to create the creature, if we didn’t want to make ourselves known? It is the knowledge that makes us descend in her, and gives her flight in order to make her rise even to us. Hence, when we see that you yearn to know more of our Volition, I immediately make the most beautiful surprises of our omnipotent Fiat for you; but not only to make it known to you, but in order to give you the goods that we make known to you.”

After this he added, all moved:

“My daughter, one who lives in my Will is the longed for one by everyone, because everyone feels loved by her; her love races to everyone, embraces everyone, deposes herself in the hearts of everyone, in order to make us loved by everyone. Even the littlest ‘I love you, I adore you, I bless you’, of one who lives in our holy Volition, holds the right of enclosing itself in everyone, indeed, the saints and angels themselves feel honored to give the place in themselves to the littlest ‘I love you’ of this fortunate creature, and they love us with this ‘I love you’, what won’t be her contentment, when she will come into the celestial fatherland, and will see her ‘I love you’ in all the blessed that love her God? And this in the simplest way; finding herself in our Will as in all, that which one does in him takes its place everywhere and acquires the continuous act of always loving. So that even the sun, the sky, the stars, the creation all will possess these acts in order to love us and to bless us.”

* * *

April 10, 1938

How (in) one who lives in the Divine Will Jesus wants to find everything, and he wants to find her in everyone. How God wants to find in our love the knoll of his works, the hideaway of his life.

My poor mind is always returning in the Divine Volition; and having made holy communion, I was saying to my amiable Jesus: “In your Volition everything is mine; therefore I love you with the love of mine and your Queen Mama, I kiss you with her lips, I embrace you tightly with her arms, and I take you and I shelter myself in her Heart in order to give you her joys, her delights, her maternity, so that you find the sweetness, the custody that your Mama knows how to do (for) you.” But while I enclosed myself together with Jesus in my Mama, sweet Jesus, all tenderness, said to me:

“My daughter and daughter of my Mother, how content I am to find the daughter with my Mother, and the Mama with the daughter, because she wants that creatures love me with her own love and make use of her mouth in order to kiss me and of her arms in order to embrace me. She wants to give her maternity to them in order to put me in security and to do for me as Mama. Finding that the Mother and the daughter love me with one love alone is for me the greatest contentment; I feel that both give me a new paradise on earth.

“But this is not enough for me; in one who lives in the Divine Will I want to find everything; if something is missing I cannot say that it is complete in the creature. And I not only want to find at her place of honor, of Queen and of Mother, my Mother in her but I want to find my Celestial Father and the Holy Spirit, and making their love hers she loves me with the immensity and infinity of their love. Hence my daughter, give me the gusto to say to me that you love me as the Father and the Holy Spirit love me.”

Jesus became silent in order to wait that I might speak to him as he wanted; and I, although unworthy, in order to content him I said to him: “I love you in the power and immense love of the Father, with the interminable love of the Holy Spirit; I love you with the love with which they love you all, angels and saints; I love you with that love which they love you or they should love you all the present creatures, past and future; I love you for all created things and with that love with which you created them.”

Dear Jesus drew a long sigh, and added:

“Finally I feel my desires satisfied, by finding all in the creature. I find our seas of love which never finish, I find the delights of my Mama who loves me, I find everything and everyone. So that in one who lives in my Will I should find everything and everyone, and I should find her in everyone.

“And then, my Celestial Father generated me in love, and one who loves me and does not let any of our love escape I feel her to me with me, in (the) act of giving to me and of receiving continuous love.”

After this he added: “My daughter, behold therefore we feel in our love an extreme need that creatures know us and know our works. If they don’t know us, we remain as apart from them, while we live inside and outside of them; and while we are to light of that which they do and think, loving them in each act (of) theirs, not only don’t they love us, but they don’t even recognize us. What sorrow! If they don’t recognize us love doesn’t arise, and if there is missing love we don’t have (a place) where to lean our works, nor does our love find a refuge where to relieve and shelter itself; all remains as suspended. Therefore we want to find in our works the ‘I love you’ of the creature, that arming it with our power, we can rest/lean our greatest works; and oh, how we remain content in finding the little I love you of her for support of our works. To work and not find (a place) where to rest/lean is a sorrow for us; it seems that there is missing the life of our love. Our operative love becomes repressed, suffocated; to be able to do, and not to do, and only because the ungrateful creature neither recognizes us nor loves us!

“And since all our works are directed to benefit her, not being able to give them, because the knowledge, the love (is) missing, (there) lacks the space where to be able to put our works, hence they tie our arms and they put us in inutility. And then, to what benefit (is it) to work, if we don’t find one who wants to receive them?

“Rather you should know that before working we look (for) one who should know, receive and love them, and then we work. My own humanity made no act if first it didn’t find one whom should love and to give that act; and although (then) I might not have found one who might receive then, I looked (through) the centuries and I directed my act to one whom would have loved, known and received it.

“So much so (that), born (a) child, I cried; those tears of mine were directed to whom should move himself to remorse, to regret his sins and wash himself in order to reacquire the life of grace; I walked, my footsteps were already directed to those people who should walk the way of good, for strength, for (a) guide of their walk.

“There was no work that I did, word that I said, suffering that I suffered, in which I didn’t search the works of creatures for (a) knoll for mine; my word in order to rest/lean it in the words of them; my sufferings searched the knoll in their sufferings in order to give the good contained in that which I did.

“It was my passion of love, that didn’t make me do other if not that which could be useful for my children. And this is one of the most powerful reasons why I want that one live in my Volition, because only then all my works, the creation, the redemption, even one sigh of mine, will find where to rest/lean itself, in order to make itself work of their work, suffering of their suffering, footsteps of theirs footsteps, life of their life; and then all that which I have done and suffered will be changed into glory and victory by banishing all the enemies and recalling into the midst of them the order, the harmony, the peace, the celestial smile of the celestial fatherland.”

I remained surprised in hearing this, and my beloved Jesus added:

“My blessed daughter, the living in my Will will enclose such surprises and manifold divine novelties, as to make the angels and saints themselves dumbfounded; even more so that in my Will there are no words, but deeds; the words themselves, the desires, the intentions, convert into deeds and finished works. Outside of my Will, that which the creature wants is reduced into words, desires and intentions; but inside of him, there being creative virtue, that which the creature wants acquires completed deeds, works full of life.

“Even more so that being in our Volition, she is already to light of that which we do, she feels that which we want; therefore she follows us in the works, wants that which we want nor can she do less, nor put herself apart. For her, our Fiat becomes the greatest of her necessities, of which she cannot do less; for her it is more than breath that she must give and receive; more than motion, that feels the extreme need to move. In short, my Will is everything for her. Living without her proves impossible.

“Therefore be attentive, and let your flight be always in our Fiat.”

Be all to the glory of God and for the completion of the Divine Will.
Thanks Be to God.

*The Kingdom of the Divine Fiat
in the Midst of Creatures*

The Servant of God

Luisa
Piccarreta

Little Daughter of the Divine Will

Book of Heaven

* * *

The Call of the Creature
to Return to the Order,
to the Place, and to the Purpose
for Which It was Created by God

Volume 36

Contents

April 12, 1938 .....	p. 1
In every act of one who lives in the Divine Volition he pronounces the Fiat there and forms of it so many divine lives. How he gives himself into (the) power of the creature and lets her do that which she wants with him. Difference that passes between one who lives in him and between one who is resigned.
April 15, 1938 .....	p. 3
One who lives in our Divine Volition moves as breath in the Fiat, all the Celestial Court feels in her, the breath, the motion of him, and the conquering and felicitating virtue of which she is bearer. Sorrowful conditions in which one finds the Divine Will when he is rejected.
April 20, 1938 .....	p. 5
How the "sitio" of Jesus upon the cross still continues to cry out to every heart "I thirst". How the true Resurrection is in arising in the Divine Volition. How (for) one who lives in him nothing becomes denied her.
April 25, 1938 .....	p. 7
The sign that the Divine Will reigns in the soul is feeling the need of loving incessantly. The great evil of not working the good in the Divine Volition. The little flame fed by the great light of God.
May 2, 1938 .....	p. 9
How the Divine Will asks for the human will in every instant in order to say to her: "You have not denied anything to me, nor can I deny you anything." How her little sea of love forms in the divine sea. The creation the sweet enchantment of the manifestation of the divine love toward creatures.
May 6, 1938 .....	p. 11
In order to live in the Divine Volition it is enough to want it and to take the first steps. How the Divine Will possesses generative virtue and where he reigns he generates without ever finishing. Inseparability of the works of Our Lord; for one who lives in his Volition.
May 10, 1938 .....	p. 13
How God in order to be loved puts in the heart of the creature his love and converts it into coins. The vigils of Jesus. The divine paternity, and the progeny of one who lives in the Divine Will. How it is written in indelible characters: "My daughter."
May 15, 1938 .....	p. 15
How the word of God is life and encloses all centuries. How it looks in one all the human generations. How Jesus doesn't know what to do with one who doesn't love him. How in the necessities of creatures one can find Jesus.

May 17, 1938 .....	p. 18
How the soul is the voice, the song and the hands in order to play, the body is the organ.
How the Divine Volition wants the littlest acts in order to make his sun rise.
Seed that the sun does to the earthseed that the Divine Will does.
Wedding that God prepares with his truths.
May 19, 1938 .....	p. 20
How the Divine Will forms the paralysis to all the evils and the human volition paralyzes the goods.
How to love is to possess. How God becomes formed in the creature and the creature in God.
Fears over the writings.
May 27, 1938 .....	p. 23
Repeated and continuous acts bind God more to the creature and form the strength of the soul.
How beautiful is the living in the Divine Volition. How God himself prays (for) it.
Rain of love that God makes on the creature and rain of love that one who lives in the Fiat makes.
June 5, 1938 .....	p. 25
The sign if the creature lives in the Divine Volition, if she feels her life in him, his working act which is the greatest gift that he makes the creature. Centralization of God in the creature and of the creature in God.
June 12, 1938 .....	p. 27
Truths bearer of divine seeds. How knowledges form new divine lives.
Exchange of glory that (one) will have in heaven.
One who lives abandoned in the arms of Jesus is his preferred.
June 16, 1938 .....	p. 29
How the Divine Volition wants to always give to creatures and wants to receive.
Delivery/Consignment of both parts; rights that one loses, and reign that one acquires.
How God finds everything in the act done in his Will.
June 20, 1938 .....	p. 31
One who lives in the Divine Volition is in continuous communication with God. Rebirth and love that arises. How it felicitates and gives joy to everyone. How Jesus himself will be made vigilant custodian of these writings and the interest will be all his.
June 26, 1938 .....	p. 33
The human will, united to the Divine, also knows how to do prodigies; without him she is a poor cripple. One who lives in the Divine Volition acquires the conquering act.
June 30, 1938 .....	p. 35
How true love wants to find oneself in the loved person.
How Our Lord formed so many ways in order to make himself found.
Who is our field. How the knowledge opens all the doors between God and the creature.

July 6, 1938 .....	p. 37
How in the Divine Volition everything triumphs; joys and conquests.
The office of mother of the Divine Volition.
Example of the sea one who lives in him.
July 11, 1938 .....	p. 39
How true love (is) that which the one wants the other one wants (too).
Every act of Divine Will is a way that is opened between heaven and earth.
The breath/[fiato] of God in the creature.
July 18, 1938 .....	p. 41
How beautiful it is to see the creature in the Divine Will.
How created things wait for her in order to love their Creator.
The exuberant love of God for one who lives in him.
July 24, 1938 .....	p. 43
Difference that passes between the Divine Will and love. How one who lives in the Divine Volition receives the deposit of the love of all the created things and forms the knoll to the acts of Our Lord.
Call to everyone.
July 30, 1938 .....	p. 45
How in heaven there are innumerable offices/(mansions), every blessed will hold a God to himself as his. How Jesus loved us in all created things. Spontaneity of Jesus in the sufferings.
August 6, 1938 .....	p. 47
Exchanges of life between the Divine and human Will. Victory of Jesus.
There is no greater offence than to remove oneself from the Divine Will.
The speaking creation. The divine heartbeat and breath.
Necessity of God to speak to the creature.
August 12, 1938 .....	p. 50
When the creature enters into the Divine Volition, heaven abases itself and the earth elevates itself in order to give each other the kiss of peace. Love of God in manifesting the truth. How all things become life. How all created things are members of Jesus. Diversity of love.
August 15, 1938 .....	p. 52
The feast of the Assumption is the most beautiful feast, most sublime.
The working feast of the Divine Will in the Celestial Queen.
August 21, 1938 .....	p. 54
Difference that passes between the life that forms in the sacramental hosts and that which forms in one who lives in his Volition.
August 28, 1938 .....	p. 55

*How an act in the Divine Will contains everything, it can love for everyone.
How everyone races in this act.
Every act done in my Will is a day that one acquires.*

September 5, 1938 ..... p. 58

*The human will cross of the divine; and the divine cross of the human.
How in the Divine Volition things change themselves, dissimilarities don't exist.
How Jesus makes up for all that which can be missing to one who lives in his Volition.*

September 11, 1938 ..... p. 60

*An act completed with the Divine Will is everything.
Jesus grows his life in one who lives in him (the Divine Will).
Horrible state of God in one who lives with the human will.
"Every time that one enters in our Volition so many times we renew our works."*

September 18, 1938 ..... p. 62

*How Jesus in our sufferings feels his repeated.
How he is not ever moved in his works and in loving us.
Example of the flower, one who doesn't live in the Divine Volition.*

September 27, 1938 ..... p. 63

*Symbol of the sea the Divine Will. How next to the sufferings of Jesus flow seas of joys.
Power of innocent sufferings.
The truths manifested new creation.*

October 2, 1938 ..... p. 65

*How the Kingdom of the Divine Will is decreed that it must come upon the earth.
How it must sweep. The earth(,) the Queen of Heaven cries and prays.
The Divine Will is like the sap to the plants.*

October 10, 1938 ..... p. 67

*First field of action of God the creation.
Field of action one who lives in his Volition.
How God doesn't know how to deny anything to one who lives in him.*

October 12, 1938 ..... p. 68

*Who lives abandoned in God, finds in him his paternity, the refuge, the hideaway.
The Fiat, support and life of all creation.
How God takes the cord to/(of) one whom wants to live in him.*

October 26, 1938 ..... p. 70

*The sad effects of the Disturbance. The little sick one in the Divine Volition.
"Who lives in the Divine Will forms the support to her Creator and we put in safety our interests."*

October 30, 1938 .....	p. 72
“As the creature loves in our Volition we double (for) her new love.”
Stupor/Amazement of heaven. How she acquires the right to judge.
November 6, 1938 .....	p. 74
An act in the Divine Volition encloses and embraces everything.
All that which the creature must do is in God. How the human acts, find the divine acts.
November 13, 1938 .....	p. 76
How the truths on the Divine Will will form the regime, the laws, the trained army.
The knowledges will give the eyes in order to make such a good possessed.
The distinction /badge of the Most Holy Trinity.
Sign in order to know if we live in the Divine Will.
November 20, 1938 .....	p. 77
The spectator of the Divine Will. He forms the adaptable matter for the works of God.
The little divine field.
November 26, 1938 .....	p. 80
The disposition calls the divine work.
The Divine Will puts the divine motion in one who lives in him.
How one can give everything to his Creator.
Enchantment of the divine pupils. The Blessed and the wayfarer.
November 30, 1938 .....	p. 82
One who turns in the Divine Volition and recognizes him in his works, receives the dowry that God has given them and forms her days, makes herself messenger of peace between heaven and earth.
The divine generation. The bearer.
December 5, 1938 .....	p. 84
Yearnings of God that one lives in his Volition. How he holds established that he will make so many divine lives for how many things he has created and for how many acts the creature will do in his Volition. How his sanctity, his love will remain formed in them.
December 8, 1938 .....	p. 86
How the humanity of Our Lord served to veil his divinity, and the prodigies of the Divine Volition.
How all created things and the creature herself are veils that hide the divinity.
The Immaculate Conception, rebirth of everyone.
December 18, 1938 .....	p. 89
God doesn't give if the creature doesn't want to receive.
Sorrowful conditions when one doesn't live of the Divine Volition.
The depositor of all creation. Divine food, love.
Condition of God when one doesn't live of the Divine Volition, how one descends from his likeness.

December 25, 1938 ..... p. 91

The descent of the Word.

How easy it is to make Jesus born provided that one lives in his Volition.

The paradise that let the Queen of Heaven find her little Jesus on earth.

December 28, 1938 ..... p. 93

How one forms the echo between the Creator and the creature.

How one act in the Divine Volition is found everywhere.

The King and the army. The Maternity of the Queen of Heaven.

Volume 36

Fiat!

April 12, 1938

In every act of one who lives in the Divine Volition he pronounces the Fiat there and forms of it so many divine lives. How he gives himself into (the) power of the creature and lets her do that which she wants with him. Difference that passes between one who lives in him and between one who is resigned.

I am always between the arms of the divine Fiat, and, oh, how I feel the need of his life, that breathes, beats, circulates in my poor soul! Without him I feel that all dies for me, the light dies, sanctity, strength, even heaven itself, as if it might not belong to me anymore. Instead as I feel his life, all re-arises in me. The light re-arises with its beauty that vivifies, purifies and sanctifies. My own Jesus re-arises with all his works. Heaven re-arises which the holy Volition encloses within my soul as within a sanctuary in order to make it all mine. So that if I live in his Will everything is mine and nothing should be missing (for) me.

Therefore, oh holy Volition in giving beginning to this 36th Volume, I pray you, I beg you, I implore you not to leave me alone an instant without you, so that you speak, you write; you yourself will make known who you are, and how you want to be life of everyone in order to give your goods to everyone. If you will have me do it, I won't know how to make you known as you want, because I am incapable, but you will do it, you will triumph, you will make yourself known and you will have your Kingdom in the entire world. Oh, holy Volition, with your power eclipse all the evils of creatures! Put forth your omnipotent "enough!" So that they lose the way of sin, and find themselves in the way of your Divine Will.

To you Queen Mama of the divine Fiat I consecrate in a special way this volume, so that your love, your maternity, extends itself in these pages, in order to call your children to live together with you in that same Volition by which you possessed his kingdom, and while I begin, I implore genuflecting at your feet your maternal benediction.

Whence while my mind was immersed in the divine Fiat my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, with an inexpressible goodness said to me:

"My blessed daughter of my Will, how many wonders my Volition knows how to do in the creature, provided that she gives him the first place and all liberty to let him work. He takes the will, the word, the act that the creature wants to do, unifies it in himself, invests it with his creative virtue, pronounces there his Fiat, and forms of it so many lives for how many creatures exist.

"You see, you were asking in my Will (for) his baptism (for) all the newborns that will go forth to the light of day and hence his ruling life in them. My Will has not hesitated an instant, he has immediately pronounced his Fiat, and has formed so many lives of himself, for how many newborns went forth to the light, baptizing them, as you wanted, with his light first, and then giving his life to each one. And if these newborns, or for incorrespondence, or for lack of knowledge won't possess this life of ours, never-the-less for us this life remains, and we have so many divine lives that love us, glorify us, bless us, as we love in ourselves.

“However these divine lives of ours are our greatest glory; but they don’t put aside she who gave the occasion to our Divine Fiat to form so many lives of ours for how many newborns went forth to the light, rather they hold her hidden in them in order to let her love as they love, and to let her do that which they do, nor do they put aside the newborns, rather they are all eyes over them, they watch over them, defend them in order to be able to reign in their souls.

“My daughter, who can tell you how we love this creature that lives in our Volition? We love her so much, that we give our Volition into her power so that she might do that which she wants with him; if she wants to form our lives, we let her do it; if she wants to fill heaven and earth with our love we give liberty to let her do it, so much so that she makes said to us from everyone that they love us; even in the little birdie that trills and warbles and sings, we hear the I love you of one who lives in our Volition. If in the enthusiasm of her love she wants to love more, she enters into our creative act, and delights herself in creating new suns, skies and stars and makes said to us without ever ceasing: I love you, I love you, and she takes the narrator part to narrate our glory.

“In our Will the sight is long and it is all attention, all eyes in order to see what we want and how she can love us more.”

My God, how many wonders, how many surprises there are in your Volition; his sweet enchantment is so much that one not only remains enraptured, but as embalmed, transformed in the same wonders of the Fiat, in a way that one doesn’t know how to go out of him.

Whence I thought to myself: but what will be the difference between one who lives in the Divine Volition and between one who is resigned in the painful circumstances of life, and between one who doesn’t do at all the Divine Will? And my sweet Jesus, returning, added:

“My blessed daughter, the difference is so much that there is no comparison that holds up; for the one who lives in my Volition she holds the dominion over everyone, and we love her so much that we make her arrive to dominate (over) ourselves, and we enjoy so much in seeing the littleness of the creature dominating (over) us, that we experience unusual joys, because we see that our Will dominates in the creature, and she dominates together with our Volition; and, oh, how many times we let ourselves be overcome! And many times our joy is so much, that we let our Will overcome in the creature, rather than ourselves.

“Beyond this, with living in our Volition, with her continuous contact (she) acquires the divine senses, she acquires long sightedness; (her) light is so very penetrating and clear, that it arrives to fix itself in God, in which it watches the divine arcanum; our sanctity and beauties are palpable to her, she loves them and makes them hers; with this eye of light she finds her Creator anywhere; there is no thing in which she doesn’t find him; with his majesty and with his love he involves the creature and lets her feel how much he loves her in feeling himself loved, love him, and, oh, the indescribable joys on both parts, in feeling loved, and (in) loving him in every thing!

“She acquires the divine hearing, and immediately hears that which we want, she is always intent to listen to us, nor is there a need to say and to re-say that which we want, a small sign is enough and everything is done. She acquires the divine sense of smell and by only smelling is warned if that which surrounds her is good and holy and belongs to us. She acquires the divine taste, so much so that she nourishes herself to satisfaction on love and on all that which is heaven. Finally in our Volition she acquires our touch, in a way that everything is pure and holy, nor is there is fear that the least breath can overshadow her, all beautiful, graceful and fair is one who lives in my Fiat.

“Instead one who is only resigned, doesn’t live with our continuous contact, one can say that she knows nothing of our supreme being; her sight is very weak and sick, that does badly if she wants to look; she suffers a myopia in ultimate degree, that (with) difficultly is she able to discover the most necessary objects. (With) difficultly she hears, and how much she wants us to listen to her, even if she listens to us. The sense of smell, the taste, the touch, smells (of) that which is human, they nourish themselves (on) that which is earth(ly), and they feel the touch of the passions, the sweetness of the worldly pleasures; and it seems that with doing my Will in the circumstances, in the painful meetings, they don’t feed themselves every day, but when they have the occasion that my Will offers them a sorrow. Oh, how they grow weak, nervous, sick to move to pity! Poor creatures without my continuous Will, how they make me pity (them).

“For one then that is not resigned, she is blind, she is deaf, she doesn’t hold at all the sense of smell, she loses the taste to all goods; she is a poor paralyzed one that can not make use of even herself to help. She herself forms a net of unhappiness and of sins, that she doesn’t know how to get out of it.”

* * *

April 15, 1938

One who lives in our Divine Volition moves as breath in the Fiat, all the Celestial Court feels in her, the breath, the motion of him, and the conquering and felicitating virtue of which she is bearer. Sorrowful conditions in which one finds the Divine Will when he is rejected.

My poor mind races, flies in the Divine Volition as to its center, in order to rest, in order to depose of its cast offs and take in exchange the attire of his light, his breath, his heartbeat, his motion that moves in everyone and everything and gives life to everyone and everything. Now, while I swam in the sea of the joys of the divine Fiat, my always amiable Jesus, making his brief little visit with me, with inexpressible love said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, how beautiful is the living in my Will; as the soul enters into him, thus she breathes with our breath, beats with ours, and is moved in our motion, is put in communion with everyone, and does that which the angels, the saints and all the created things do, and lets everyone do that which she does.

“The wonders that there are in our Volition are surprising; the scenes are so moving that they put everyone at attention, in order to enjoy scenes so rare that they remain enraptured by it, and who knows what they would do in order to be spectators of enjoying scenes so delicious of one who lives in our Volition.

“Now you must know that as the soul enters into him, breathes, palpitates, and moves in our motion, her breath, heartbeat, motion, she doesn't lose it however, nor is it separated from ours. And since our Will finds itself everywhere, and circulates, more than breath, heartbeat and motion of everyone, now, what happens? The angels and saints, our divinity itself, the entire creation, feel together with my Will, the breath, the heartbeat of the creature in them, and they feel it move in their motion even in the center of their souls, which is full of happiness, of inexpressible and new joys, which the wayfarer soul, not enjoying but suffering and conquering with her free will, is (the) bearer in every blessed, and only with breathing, palpitating and moving, and in the flood of joy of which the soul is bearer, (from) which my Volition never separates, his always new joys, even the breath done in his Will, and since there is the free will, that forms the conquering act of the creature, it gives me her new conquering gusto; and, oh, how the blessed remain felicitated! Our divinity itself, the entire creation, and in their emphasis of love and in the flood of joy they say: 'Who is it that breathes, palpitates, and moves in us? Who is from earth, that brings us the conquering act of pure joys, of new love, that which we don't have in heaven, that so very much felicitates us and increases our love toward one who so very loves us?' And everyone in chorus: 'Aye, it is a soul that lives in the Divine Will upon the earth! What prodigies, what wonders, what enchanting scenes! A breath that breathes in everyone, even in her Creator, that moves in everyone, even in the sky, in the stars, in the sun, in the air, in the wind, in the sea; it takes everything in fist/(hand), in its own motion, and gives to God love, adoration, all that which each one should and doesn't give, and has not given, and she gives her God to everyone, his love, his Will; she makes herself bearer of everything to God and of God to everyone.'

"And (if) yet all creatures might not take us, we remain equally loved and glorified, because an act, a motion in our Will, so much is its fullness, that creatures all remain as so many drops of water in front of an immense sea, as so many small little flames before the great light of the sun. Hence this motion, breath and heartbeat of the creature in our Will, super abound over everything, embraces eternity, they form suns and seas so extensive that can give us everything, and if other things don't take life, they remain so small, as if they were not.

"Oh, my Will! How very admirable, powerful and amiable you are, in you the creature can give us everything and we can give her everything, he covers everything and everyone with his light; he makes the love arise, and gives us love for everyone; we can say that he is the true repairer, because when creatures offend us, we find that in his love he can hide us in order to love us, in his light to defend us, and by way of light, put in flight those that want to offend us. Therefore (take) to heart to live in our Volition."

Then he added:

"My daughter, so much is the love for one who lives in our Divine Will, that as she breathes so she gives us all that which we have done, the creation, the angels, the saints, our own supreme being, as homage, love and our glory. And we, taken by such (an) excess of love, re-give to her that which she has given us. So that as she breathes she re-gives to us that which we are, as she withdraws the breath, we re-give that which she has given us. Therefore we are in continuous rapport and we exchange continuous gifts. With this we maintain in continuous vigor the love, the inseparability of not being able to disconnect ourselves the one from the other, and we find such gratification that we give her that which she wants."

But while I felt drowned in the Divine Volition, a thought tormented me upon my poor state, the duty to succumb to a kind of death every night, and for fifty years and more, and then to have need of the others in order to go out from that state. My God, I feel a pain that only you know how much it costs me, and only the fear of displeasing you and of not completing your Will, makes me push ahead, otherwise who knows what I might do in order not to submit myself. And my sweet Jesus races toward me and squeezing me tightly between his arms said to me:

“My good daughter, courage, do not torment yourself too much; I don’t want it; it is your Jesus that wants this your state so sorrowful; this succumbing as if you might lose life, I suffer it together with you, and true love does not deny anything to one who it loves. And then, this your state so sorrowful, as if you might lose life, was necessary and wanted by my Divine Will; he wanted to find in you, the reparation, the exchange of so many deaths that creatures make him suffer, when they reject him not giving him life in them. Your submitting yourself for so much time to these pains of death remade my Divine Will from the so many deaths suffered, it called him to kiss the human will in order to become reconciled together, and therefore I have been able to speak so much of my Will, in order to make him known and so he might be able to reign, because I held one who reciprocated me and remade my so many lost lives for them and for me rejected, as suffocating in the inaccessible light of my Will.

“Because you must know that in all that which the creature does, my Will races in order give and form a life of his in her, and not receiving it, this life of mine dies for her and does it seem little to you that is my great sorrow in seeing so many divine lives of mine die for them? Hence it was necessary to find one who in some way might let himself to me in order to return the assault to form my life in them.

“My Will finds himself in the conditions of a poor mother, that is to give to the light her birth already mature, and that birth is impeded to the light suffocating it in her own womb; poor mother, she feels the birth die in her own viscera and she, for the sorrow dies together. Such is my Will; he feels in himself so many births of divine life already mature that he wants to bring them forth in order to give them to the creatures; but while he is about to bring them forth he feels them suffocate in his own womb, and the birth dies for him, and while the birth dies he also dies together, because without my Will, there can not be true life of sanctity, of love, and of all that which belongs to our divine life.

“Therefore my daughter quiet yourself and do not think there anymore, if we have done this it has been done with highest wisdom, with love which we could not contain and for (the) order that we hold in our way of operating, therefore it is necessary to bow the head and to adore that which we dispose for (the) love of creatures.”

* * *

April 20, 1938

How the “sitio” of Jesus upon the cross still continues to cry out to every heart "I thirst". How the true Resurrection is in arising in the Divine Volition. How (for) one who lives in him nothing becomes denied her.

My flight continues in the Divine Volition and I feel the need to make mine all that which he has done, to put there my little love, my affectionate kisses, my profound adorations, my thanks for all that which he has done and suffered for me and for everything; and having come to the point when my dear Jesus was crucified and raised on the cross between atrocious spasms and unheard of pains, with a tender and compassionate accent, that one felt the heart break, he said to me:

“My good daughter! The pain that transfixed me more upon the cross was my ardent thirst; I felt myself burn alive, all the vital humors had gone out from my wounds, which burned like so many mouths and they felt an ardent thirst that wanted to quench itself, so much so that not being able to contain myself I cried out: ‘Sitio!’ This ‘sitio’ remained and is always in (the) act of saying: ‘I thirst!’; I never cease to say it; with my open wounds and with my burnt mouth I always say: ‘I burn, I thirst! Oh! Give me a little drop of your love, in order to give me a little refreshment to my ardent thirst!’ So that in all that which the creature does I always repeat to them with my open and burnt mouth: ‘Give me to drink, I thirst ardently.’ And since my dislocated, wounded humanity, had only one cry: ‘I thirst!’, therefore as the creature walks I cry out to his footsteps, with my burnt mouth, ‘Give your footsteps done for my love in order to quench me’; if she works I ask her work of her, done only for my love, for refreshment of my ardent thirst; if she speaks I ask her words of her; if she thinks I ask her thoughts of her, as so many little drops of love for relief of my ardent thirst; it was not only my mouth that burned, but all my most holy humanity felt the extreme need of a bath of refreshment to the ardent fire of love that burned me, and since it was for creatures that I burned in the midst of agonizing pains, therefore they alone were able, with their love, to extinguish my ardent thirst and give me the bath of refreshment to my humanity. Now this cry: ‘Sitio!’, I left it in my Will and he took the pledge to make it felt in every instant in the ears of creatures, in order to move them to compassion for my ardent thirst, in order to give them my bath of love and to receive, their bath of love, although they might be little drops, for relief of the thirst that devours me; but who listens to me? Who has compassion on me? Only one who lives in my Will; all the others are deaf and perhaps increase my thirst with their ingratitude, that it renders me restless without hope of relief.

“And not only my ‘sitio’, but all that which I did and I said in my Will, is always in act of saying to my sorrowful Mama: ‘Mother, here are your children’, and I put her at their side for help, for guide, in order to have her loved by children, and she in every instant felt herself put from her Child, to the side of her children; and, oh, how she loves them as Mama and she gives her maternity to them, in order to make me loved as she loves me! Not only (this), but with giving her maternity, she also puts the perfect one amongst creatures, so that they might love each other with maternal love, that is love of sacrifice, of unselfishness and constant. But who receives all this good? One who lives in our Fiat feels the maternity of the Queen; she, one can say, puts in (the) mouth of her children her maternal Heart, so that they suck and receive the maternity of her love, her sweetness and all her dowries with which her maternal Heart is enriched.

“My daughter, one who wants to find us, one who wants to receive all our goods and my Mother herself, must enter into our Will, and must there remain within. He is not only life to us but forms around us, with his immensity, our residence, in which he maintains all our acts, words and all that which we are, always in act; our things don’t go out from our Will; who wants them must be content to have life together with him, and then everything is hers, nothing is denied her; and if we want to give to her, and she doesn’t live in our Volition, she won’t appreciate them, she won’t love them, she won’t feel the right of making them hers, and when the things are not owned, love doesn’t arise and it dies.”

After this I continued my round in all that which Our Lord did upon the earth and I stopped in the act of the Resurrection; what triumph, what glory; heaven poured itself upon the earth in order to be spectator of a glory so great, and my beloved Jesus resumed his speech:

“My daughter, in my Resurrection, the right became established (for) all creatures to arise in me to new life; it was the confirmation, the seal of all my life, of my works, of my words, and that if I came on earth it was in order to give myself to everyone and each one, as life that it might belong to them. My Resurrection was the triumph of everyone and the new conquest that everyone got from him whom had died for everyone, in order to give life to them and to make them arise in my own Resurrection.

“But do you want to know where the true resurrection of the creature consists? But not in the end of the days, but while still alive upon the earth; one who lives in my Will arises to the light, and can say: ‘My night is finished’; she arises in the love of her Creator in a way that the cold, the snows don’t exist for her anymore, but she feels the smile of the celestial spring; arises the sanctity, which puts to precipitous flight the weaknesses, the miseries, the passions; she arises to all that which is heaven and if she looks at the earth, the sky, the sun, she looks at it in order to find the works of her Creator, in order to have occasions to narrate to him his glory and his long story of love.

“Therefore one who lives in my Volition, can say as the angel might say, to the pious women, when they went to the sepulcher: ‘He is risen, he is here no more’; one who lives in my Volition can say the same: ‘My will is with me no more, it is risen in the Fiat’; and if the circumstances of life, the occasions, the sufferings surround the creature, as seeking her will, she can respond: ‘My will is risen, I don’t have it anymore in my power, I hold in exchange the Divine Will, and with his light I want to invest all that which surrounds me, circumstances, sufferings, in order to form so many divine conquests of them.’

“One who lives in ours Volition finds life in the acts of her Jesus and she always races, in him, our working, conquering, and triumphant Will, and she gives us such glory that heaven can not contain it. Hence live always in our Volition, never go out of him, if you want to be our triumph and our glory.”

* * *

April 25, 1938

The sign that the Divine Will reigns in the soul is feeling the need of loving incessantly. The great evil of not working the good in the Divine Volition. The little flame fed by the great light of God.

My poor mind races, it flies in the divine Fiat, and if I don’t do this, I feel uneasy, without strength, without food, without air to breathe; I feel without feet in order to walk, without hands in order to work, without heart in order to love; and therefore I feel the need of racing in his Volition in order to find his acts, in order to form with them (for) myself feet that race, hands that embrace everything and work, love without heart that takes the love of eternity in order not to ever cease loving. But while I thought so many blunders, my always amiable Jesus, repeating his brief little visit to me, being delighted with my blunders, all love, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, do not marvel over your blunders, it is really this that happens; one who lives in my Will her being, and her will entering into mine, she makes use of our works as in order to form new members that is needed there in order to live in him; therefore she acquires new footsteps, new motions, new love in order to be able to unite with our works and do that which we do.

“Therefore the most certain sign that my Divine Will reigns and dominates in the soul is the continuous motion of love, and because she knows that she holds a love that never ceases, nor works, she multiplies in order to give them to me, in order to love me, she does what? She enters into the interminable enclosures of my Volition, she sees the great theater of the creation, the sumptuousness and the luxury of the love with which creatures are invested, and she races from one of our works to another, and goes collecting all our love that we have scattered in all the creation, she puts it as in (her) womb, and comes before our majesty in order to give us so many distinct varieties of love that we have put in the creation, and she makes resound her notes of love in the various notes of love of our creative love; and, oh, the contentments that she gives us, the feasts that are opened between heaven and the earth, the seas of love with which she surrounds our throne! And then, after she has made for us the feast of all the creation, in order to love us all the more and with double love, she descends from our throne and goes scattering again over all created things our doubled love, and with the power of our Will, that (she) holds in her power she makes said from everyone to us: ‘Love, love to our Creator.’ One who lives in him we can call her our continuous feast, the outlet of our love.”

Then he added with sorrowful accent:

“My daughter, how the creature descends into the depths, when she does not live in our Will, and although she might do good, since there was missing the light of him, the strength of our sanctity, the good that she does remains covered with smoke that blinds the sight and produces self-esteem, vainglory, love of oneself; one can say that she remains poisoned, in a way that she can not produce great good, neither for herself, nor for others; poor good works without my Will, they are as bells without sounds, as metals without the image of the king, that don’t hold (the) value of coins; at most she converts them into self satisfaction. And I who very much love creatures, am constrained many times to embitter the goods that they do, so that they enter into themselves and seek to work upright and holy.

“Instead one who lives in our Volition, there is no peril that the smoke of self-esteem enters, even in the greatest works that one can do; she is the little flame, fed by the great light that is God, and the light knows to clear itself from the darkness of the passions, from the smoke of self-esteem; and since it is light, it touches with (its) hand all that which one does of good it is God that works in her own nothing, and if this nothing is not emptied of all that which doesn’t belong to God, God does not descend into the depths of her own nothing, in order to do great works worthy of him. So that in our Volition not even humility enters there, but the true nothing, to know oneself that is nothing; and all this of good that enters into her, is none other than the divine work; and it happens that God is the carrier of the nothing and the nothing is the carrier of God.

“Therefore in my Volition all things change for creatures; it is none other than the little light that must undergo for as much as it can the great light of my Fiat, in a way that it does none other than to feed itself with light, with love, with goodness, with divine sanctity; what honor to be fed by God! Hence it is no wonder that the creature being the little flame, God feeds himself with her.”

Then he added: “Besides the incessant love there is another sign if the soul lives in my Volition and he reigns there in her, and this is the immutability; (one) never changes from the good to the evil, it is only of God; a firm character, constant, nor being easy to change action, that only a divine patience can have; the constancy to always do an act, without ever tiring, without ever seeming annoying, (or) regretful is alone of God. Now, one who lives in our Fiat feels his immutability and feels herself invested with such firmness that she would not change action neither for heaven, nor for the earth; she would be content to die rather than to leave and to repeat continually that which she is doing. More so that that which she does with firm mind without ever changing she has held for beginning God, hence God feels in the act his, and as she repeats the act, he feels it running, and her act animates God himself; how can she ever cease repeating that which began together with our supreme being? She should have to go out from our Will in order to make it change act. He when he works never changes, so he renders one who lives in his Volition.

“And, oh, how one immediately sees, one who doesn’t live in him! Today she wants to do a thing, tomorrow another; one time it pleases her to make a sacrifice, another time she flees it; one can not trust her, always a reed that is moved to the puff of the winds of her passions; the mutability of the human will is so much, that it arrives to render the creature the laughingstock of herself and maybe even of the demons themselves.

“Behold, therefore I call the creature to live in our Volition, so that she might be sustained, fortified by ours, and so she might be able to do honor to our creative work, because only man is inconstant, while all our other works never change, the sky is always fixed, nor is it ever tired of being extended; the sun always makes its course, nor does it ever change action, of giving its light to (the) good of all from earth; the air is always in (the) act of making itself breathe(able); all things, as they have been created by us, so they maintain themselves and they always do the same action. Only man with not wanting to live in our Divine Volition descends from the ways of his Creator, and he doesn’t know how to conduct to term his work, hence he doesn’t know how to love nor to appreciate them, nor to receive the merit of his works.”

* * *

May 2, 1938

How the Divine Will asks for the human will in every instant in order to say to her: “You have not denied anything to me, nor can I deny you anything.” How her little sea of love forms in the divine sea. The creation the sweet enchantment of the manifestation of the divine love toward creatures.

My flight continues in the Divine Volition, and oh, how one remains surprised, in seeing that in every instant he asks for the human will, in order to make of it one of his loving portents! How one remains moved in seeing that a divine Fiat asks creatures for their human will! And my sweet Jesus in seeing me moved, repeating his brief little visit with me, all goodness said to me:

“My daughter, it is always our love that with an irresistible force pushes us toward the creature and puts us in (an) attitude of asking, as if we might have need of her, in order to say to her: ‘You have loved me, and I love you. You have given yourself, and I give to you.’

“Now you must know where our love arrives. Every time that we ask for her will, and she gives us the gift, so many lives she gives us for how many times she gives it to us, and we in order to give her the occasion, the merit of giving us not one time her life but so many times for how many times we ask her, we are always in (the) act of asking her, and does it seem little to you that the creature can say to us: ‘So many lives have I given you, and not one time, but thousands of times, for how many times you asked it of me?’ And we not only love her with double love, for how many times she gives us her will, we re-merit it each time, but we feel glorified and loved the more, for how many lives she has given us.

“This is none other than our exuberant love, the finesse, the stratagems, the excesses, the follies of our working love, that does not know how to be without inventing new ways in order to have that we work/(are involved) with the creature, and in order to be able to say: ‘How many times we have asked her, she has never denied us; neither can we deny her.’ Is this not a trade of insuperable love, which only a God can do?

“Besides this our love is not stopped, we always search for the creature to unify her with us; as she loves in our Will, so we make them form her tiny little sea of love in the interminability of our immense sea of love, and this in order to feel that her love is in ours, and she loves with ours; it will be very little, and this we know, that the created love can never arrive to the creative love but our contentment (is) inexpressible, that she loves in ours and with our love; a divided love, separated from us, can never please us, neither can it wound us, and then it would lose the most beautiful (part) of the love. And every time that she loves us in our Fiat, so much more grows her tiny little sea of love in our divine sea, and we feel more glorified and loved in seeing augmented the love of our creature.”

After this I was making my round in the creation, in order to trace all the acts done by the Divine Will. And my always amiable Jesus added:

“My blessed daughter, creation is the sweetest enchantment of the manifestation of our love toward creatures, there is the azure sky with its stars, the radiant sun, the air, the wind, the sea, always fixed, they are never moved, in order to say to man our love that never ceases; there is then in the low earth, flowers, plants, trees, the little grass, that all have a voice, a motion, a life of love of their Creator, in order to say to everyone, even the littlest thread of the grass, the story of love of he who has created them toward man.

“Now, the things created in the low earth it seems that they die, but it is not true, rather they re-arise more beautiful; this is none other than the new resurrection of the love of God toward creatures, and in order to make a sweet surprise of love, while it seems that they die they re-arise more beautiful, and it puts the human eye under the new enchantment of the flowerings and of the fruits in order to be loved; one can say that every flower and plant brings the kiss, the I love you of its Creator to he who looks at it and takes possession of it. And therefore our supreme love waits that in every thing he recognize us and send us his I love you, but in vain we wait.

“In all created things our supreme being manifests our power, wisdom, goodness, (the) order of our love and we offer it to man so that he love us with love (that is) powerful, wise, full of goodness, that is that the image of our divine love be in him. And this one who lives in our Will can receive, because we can say, that she lives of our life; instead outside of him love is weak, wisdom is insipid, goodness is changed into defects, order into disorder; poor creature, without our Will, how it makes us pity! Even more so that we love the creature with incessant love and he wants to find in her the love that never ceases; and when she doesn’t love us it forms great voids in her soul of our love, and our love not finding his love in these voids does not have a place to rest itself, it remains suspended, goes wandering, races, flies and does not find one who receives it, and it cries, suffers agonies of sorrow and says: I am not loved, I love and I don’t find one who loves me.

Then he added with a tender accent:

“Dearest daughter, (if) you might know where my love arrives for who lives in my Divine Will, you would love me so much, that it would burst your heart for joy, and yours and my love would make you remain consumed, devoured of pure love for me. Now you must know that my Divine Will is the gatherer of all that which the creature does that lives in him; all that which becomes done in my Fiat does not exit, it remains in our fields of light, and my Will delighting himself goes gathering the motion, the love, the breath, the step, the words, the thoughts, all that which she has done in our Volition, in order to incorporate it in our own life. If I didn’t do this there would be missing a breath, a motion and all that which the creature has done in our Volition, to our life. Hence being parts of our life, we feel as the need that they continue their breath in ours, her motion, her step in ours.

“Therefore we call one who lives in our Volition: our breath, heartbeat, motion, our love; to separate from us even the breath of one who lives in him, we can not do it, nor do we want it, we would feel (our) life torn. Therefore as she moves, breathes, and so on, my Will puts himself in festival and goes gathering that which the creature does and feels of loving him so much, as if he contributed to form the breath, the motion in the creature and the creature as if she contributed to give the breath, the motion to God. They are the excesses and the inventions of our love that then is content, when it can say: ‘That which I do she does, we move, we sigh and we love together.’ And then we feel the happiness, the glory, the exchange of our creative work, that as it went forth from our paternal bosom in a flame of love thus it returns to us all love into our divine bosom.”

* * *

May 6, 1938

In order to live in the Divine Volition it is enough to want it and to take the first steps. How the Divine Will possesses generative virtue and where he reigns he generates without ever finishing. Inseparability of the works of Our Lord; for one who lives in his Volition.

My poor mind is beneath a crowd of thoughts that regard the Divine Volition, they seem to me as so many messengers that bring so much news of this Volition so holy. Whence, I felt surprised, and my sweet Jesus, returning to his little daughter, all goodness, said to me:

“My good daughter, in order to enter into my Will the way is most simple, because your Jesus never teaches difficult things, my love, makes me adapt myself much to the human ability, so that the creature without difficulty, can do that which I teach and want. “Now you must know that in order to enter into my Fiat the first indispensable thing is volition, to yearn for with all firmness that she wants to live in him. The second thing, to take the first step, indeed first my Divine Will surrounds her with light and with such attractions, that the creature loses the desire to do her will, because as soon as she has taken a step she feels herself dominated(;) the night of the passions, of weaknesses, of miseries, is changed into daylight, into divine strength, hence she feels the extreme need to take the second step, which calls the third step, the fourth, the fifth, and so on and so forth. These steps, are steps of light, which embellish her, sanctify her, felicitate her, direct the way to her, and participate her (in) her Creator’s likeness but so much so, that she not only feels the extreme need to live in my Volition, but she feels it as proper/(her own) life, that can not separate itself.

“You see therefore how easy it is, but it is necessary to want it; as she wants it, my paternal goodness equips that will, with grace, with love, with goodness, and since I also want it I put forth of mine, and if needs be my own life, in order to give her all the helps, the means and also my life as her life, in order to have her live in my Divine Volition. I don’t spare anything, when it deals with having the creature live in my Volition.

“Now my daughter, so much is our love that we fix different degrees of sanctity and different ways of sanctity, and of beauty in order to adorn the soul in our Divine Will; we will make of them one distinct from the other: distinct in beauty, in sanctity, in the love, but all beautiful, but distinct between them. Some will remain in the sea of the light, and they will enjoy the goods that my Volition possesses, others will remain under the act of my working light and these will be the most beautiful, we will put forth all our creative art, our working act; finding the creature in our Volition, we can do that which we want, she will lend herself to receive our creative power and we will delight (in) creat(ing) new beauties, sanctity never seen, love that we have never given to creatures, because lacked in her the life, the light, the strength of our Volition, in order to be able to receive (it), we will feel in her our echo, the generative strength that always generates love, glory, continuous repetition of our acts and of our own life.

“The life of our Fiat is just this, to generate; and where he reigns, he generates continually, without ever ending; he generates in us and conserves the generative virtue of the Sacrosanct Trinity, he generates in the creature where he reigns, and he generates our images, love, sanctity.

“Therefore we still hold to do much in the work of creation, we hold to reproduce our acts, our works, that will serve as the most beautiful ornament of our celestial country.”

After this my mind was lost in the sea of the Fiat, which made everything present to me and it seemed to me that everything was mine, as everything was of God; and my beloved Jesus, as suffocated in his flames of love added:

“My blessed daughter, one who lives in my Will remains always inseparable from her Creator; even from eternity she was already with us, our Divine Volition carried her there in (our) arms in our bosom and made us love, court and enjoy her, and since that time we felt her love palpitating in us, and it called us to the work of our creative hands, in order to make of her one of our most beautiful images. Oh, how we enjoyed in finding in our Will, in one who could develop our creative work!

Now you must know that these souls that live, and will live in my Fiat, being inseparable from us, when I, eternal Word, in the excess of my love, descended from heaven to earth, they descended together with me, and headed by the Celestial Queen, they formed my people, my faithful army, my living palace in which I constituted myself true King of these children of my Divine Volition. To descend from heaven without the cortege of my people, without (a) kingdom where I might be able to dominate with my laws of love, I would never have done it.

“For us all the centuries are as a sole point, in which everything is ours, we find everything as in act, therefore I descended from heaven as dominator and King of my children, I saw myself courted and loved as we know how to love ourselves, and my love was so much that I made them remain conceived together with me; to be without them was impossible to me, to not find my children that might love me, I would not have been able to tolerate it, therefore they had life together in the bosom of my Sovereign Mama, they were reborn together with me, they cried together with me, that which I did they did; walked, worked, prayed, suffered together, and I can say that also upon the cross they were with me, in order to die and in order to re-arise to the new life that I came to bring to the human generations.

“Therefore the kingdom of our Will is already established; we know their number, we know who they are, their names; already he makes us feel them palpitating ardently with love; oh, how we love them and yearn that the time arrive to bring them forth to the light of day in our same Will upon the earth!

“Hence the children of my Volition have in their power my conception, my birth, my steps, my sufferings, my tears, and how many times they will want to be conceived, be reborn, so many times will they be able; they will feel my steps, my sufferings in theirs, because in my Will, my life my birth repeats itself is renewed in every instant, they can take it for themselves, they can give it to the others, to do that which they want, knowing that they will never do that which I don’t want. These children of ours reborn, grown, formed, fed by our Volition, will be the true glory of our creation that will crown our creative work, and there they will put the seal of their love in every single thing created by him who has done everything for them and whom has loved them so much.”

* * *

May 10, 1938

How God in order to be loved puts in the heart of the creature his love and converts it into coins. The vigils of Jesus. The divine paternity, and the progeny of one who lives in the Divine Will. How it is written in indelible characters: “My daughter.”

I feel that the Divine Volition calls me in every instant, that he wants to be loved, and since my love I can call it hardly (a) little drop, he wants to give me his, so that I might have seas, not drops, in order to say to him that I loved him, very, very much; what goodness! He wants to put forth of his, in order to have the contentment of being able to say that the creature loves him!

Hence my always amiable Jesus, returning to visit my poor soul, (my) heart beats (for) him strongly, strongly, and pressing me to himself between his arms, he said me:

“My blessed daughter of my love, I burn, I feel myself faint, I am delirious because I want to be loved, and in order to obtain the intent, do you know what I do? I put my love in the heart of the creature, I made it flow in the mind, in the words, in the works, in the steps, and I converted all this love that flows everywhere into coins of divine love; and in order to make it race as coins that belong to us, I coin there his image written around about: 'Jesus, King of the Kingdom of the Divine Will.'

"Now this coin of love is a means that we give to the creature to be able to say: 'With right I have loved you.' This love converted from our goodness into coin can buy that which she wants and loves; hence she can buy our sanctity, our same Will, our virtues, and if she wants other love, she holds sufficient coins as to buy it. And oh, how we enjoy in seeing that the creature is poor no more, but rich! And she holds so much, even that she can arrive to buy our virtues, our same sanctity. How beautiful it is to see that she holds our coin of love that renders her proprietor of our same goods. However this coin of love, we give it to whom lives in our Volition, because she won't make waste of it, she will know (how) to conserve it, she will multiply it, in order to be able to always love us more and give us a relief to our flames that devour us."

Whence I followed my round in the acts of the Divine Volition. I felt as suffering and with a vigil (in) which I could not be calm; the minutes seemed to me centuries; that night eternal; and I waited for my sweet Jesus that he might come to calm me. Finally, after waiting much, my dear Jesus made himself seen all troubled, and all goodness he said to me:

"Poor daughter, how hard is the vigil, is it not true? How many times is your Jesus found himself with these raw and excruciating sufferings? How many vigils creatures make me do! I can say that I always remain in vigil, and I suffer the restlessness of my love; if the creature sins, I feel it escape me from my arms, and I keep vigil; I watch her, I see her surrounded by demons that they make festive and they come to make fun of her of the good that she has done, poor good, how much (she) becomes covered by the mud of guilt/sin; and I since I still love her, I send some glimmer of light to her and I keep vigil; I send remorse in order to make her raised again and I keep vigil; the minutes seem to me centuries, nor can I calm myself if I don't see her return in my arms and I keep vigil, I always keep vigil; I spy the palpitations of her heart, the thoughts of her mind in order to arouse the memory of how much I love her, but that, in vain, and I am constrained to keep vigil; what (a) hard vigil! If she returns to me I rest somewhat, otherwise my vigil continues. If another wants to do a good and she takes time and never decides, I keep vigil, I seek to allure her with my love, with inspirations, and also with promises, but she is not resolved, she finds so many pretexts, difficulty and she always holds me in vigil. How many vigils! How many vigils creatures make me keep, and in so many ways; here is your vigil in order to hold a little of the company to my continuous vigil. Therefore we suffer together, love me and I will find a little rest to the so many (of) my vigils."

Afterwards he added with a more tender accent:

"Daughter of my sufferings, do you want to know who doesn't give me this suffering so hard, of not making me keep vigil? One who lives in my Will; rather, as she decides to live of him, I declare her my daughter; and I call all heaven, the Sacrosanct Trinity to celebrate the new daughter whom I have acquired, everyone recognizes her, because I write it in indelible characters in my Heart, in my love that always burns, my daughter.

“Now in my Volition she is always with me, all that which I do she does. Hence in my continuous rebirths, she is reborn together with me, and I write: ‘The daughter of my birth’; if human ingratitude constrains me to cry, she cries together with me, and I write it even in my tears: ‘The daughter of my tears’; in short if I suffer, if I work, if I walk, I write: ‘The daughter of my sufferings, of my work, the daughter of my steps’; anywhere I go it is written.

“Now you must know that between paternity and progeny there are indelible ties, no one can ignore, neither in the supernatural order, nor in the natural order, the rights of paternity and progeny. So that I as Father feel the duty to constitute heir of my goods, of my love, of my sanctity, one who with so much solemnity has declared that she is my daughter, even to carry it written in my Heart; not to love her I would feel that it would defraud my paternal love, hence I can not do it; she then holds the duty of loving me and of possessing the goods of her Father, of defending him, of making him known, and of putting forth the life, so that no one might offend me.

“And oh, how beautiful it is to see these children of mine, that live in my Volition, who arrive to say to me: ‘My father, you have kept vigil too much, you are already tired, rest, and in order to make your rest be sweet, sweet, rest in my love, and I will put myself in vigil, I will take your place near souls, who knows it succeeds me to have you find someone when you awake’; and I trust them and I rest somewhat.

“What thing can not one do who lives in my Will? She can do everything for me, because her/his light makes her be (to light) of all my sufferings, and I do everything for her, we alternate in succession the vigil and the rest. How beautiful it is to live in my Volition, the creature is already put in the same conditions, that which we want she wants, and this is the holiest thing, more great, more noble, full of majesty and of purity; to want that which God wants, no other act can arrive to such a sublime height, to a value that never ends, to want that which God wants, God is holy is pure, he is order, he is goodness; to want that which God wants, the creature wants that which is holy, pure good, and with the fullness of the order, she feels reborn in God, she does that which God does. God does everything, embraces everything, moves in everyone, and she is concurrent with that which God does, can one ever do (a) greater good? Therefore the living in my Volition there is no thing that is able (to compare) to it neither to reach it nor to surpass it. Hence live always in my Fiat and you and I will be happy.”

* * *

May 15, 1938

How the word of God is life and encloses all centuries. How it looks in one all the human generations. How Jesus doesn't know what to do with one who doesn't love him. How in the necessities of creatures one can find Jesus.

I felt immersed in the Divine Volition; his light made me understand so many truths, but I felt incapable of enclosing them in my mind so little, with a repugnance to manifest them and to write them on paper; and my sweet Jesus visiting my poor soul all tenderness and compassionating my incapability, said to me:

“Poor daughter, before the immensity of my Volition one is confused and would like to remain in sweet rest, in order to enjoy the joys, his happiness, of which you feel yourself filled; but no, my daughter, there is yet needed the work; in heaven there is always joy, but on earth there is an alternative of joys and of work, for you the manifesting, to write it is work, the entering into my Will, is to possess the purest joys and the greatest happiness, however in the work I never leave you alone, I do more than you, nor without me would you have been able to do it.

“Now you must know that our love is so much, that our goodness when it decides to bring forth a word, to manifest a truth outside of our Supreme Majesty, we form the act in ourselves, we enclose the good that that truth must produce that we bring forth. When everything is matured and completed, the good that we must give to creatures, in virtue of that truth that we manifest, then we offer it to the creature, as bearer of the good that we want to give to the human generations. Hence our word encloses all the centuries, and since our words are lives, they possess the creative strength; anywhere one can arrive they will feel the creative life and the good that our truth is the bearer (of).

“Hence to stop our words with not manifesting them (is) to want to say stop to all the good and the so many of our lives that our words can produce. And I know, my daughter, that not even you would like to give me this displeasure and impede this great good to the human generations, is (this) not true? One who loves me doesn’t know how to deny me anything, not even the sacrifice of their own life. Therefore be attentive, nor want to render yourself responsible for so many of our divine lives that must take life in creatures.”

Whence afterwards I felt myself suffering, but so much so, as if I might want to give the last breath. Jesus immediately races to sustain me in his arms and said to me:

“What, do you want to come from it?”

And I: “Yes, heaven is wanted but you decide yourself to bring me.”

And Jesus: “My daughter, and of earth what do we do with it?”

And I: “I don’t know anything, nor am I good for anything, and then what interest (is it) to me of the earth?”

And he resumed: “My daughter, and yet it must interest you, because it interests your Jesus, and my and your interests must be one alone. Now you must know what is immediate, still (to be), and the Divine Will has not manifested everything, because how much more he manifests, so many more souls become taken into the net of his light; not only, but how much more he becomes matured and grows in a creature, so much more do they acquire (the) right of receiving him, and we feel more transported to grace the human generations, to let them possess the life, of our Will; because our goodness, our love is so much, that in one creature, we watch everyone, and for love of one, we do good to everyone.

“But to whom does the good of everyone redound? To whom it is (given) to be the first to receive that good, one who has had the good to listen to us and has held account of our truths more than if they were (her) own life, and who not seeking (her) own life, (is) ready to sacrifice it in every instant for our love, in order to let us do that which we want to do with her. This has so much force on our supreme being, it transports us so much, that one (is) enough, in order to make everyone receive that good. "Even more that the human generations are bound together, more than members to the body, hence it is no wonder that a healthy and good member makes its vital and holy humors flow into the other members; therefore the strength of one single creature that lives in our Will is omnipotent, and it is so much that it can overwhelm heaven and earth, to win over everyone and to win over God and creatures. Hence leave me to finish, and then I will bring you immediately."

Then he added: "My daughter, how much more one suffers (so much) more one feels the need to be loved; I am the one that has suffered the most, hence, my sufferings, my blood poured out, my tears, change into loving, suppliant voices, that want to be loved, by one who loves much, that it made me suffer and cry much; and one who loves me brings me the sweetest refreshment to my sufferings, dries my tears, and my blood is converted for them into a bath of love.

"But do you know who changes my sufferings, my tears into joys, into contentments? One who lives in my Divine Will, because in her is found the love that always loves me, which is support of my sufferings, my continuous refreshment, and I feel like a victorious King, that although wounded, I have won with the weapons of my sufferings and with my love, the will of the creature. Oh, how happy I feel, in feeling myself loved and having life together, for who has (undergone) a so very sorrowful and bloody battle!

"Even more so that I created everything in order to be loved, and if the love is missing for me I don't know what to do with the creature, because I don't find that which I want; at the most there can be for us diversity of love, there can be for us love of reparation, love of compassion, love of imitation, but (it's) always love I want, if I don't find the love they are not things for me; and since love is (the) child of my Will, if I find the daughter, I find the Mother, therefore I find all that which belongs to me, therefore I rest and I felicitate myself in her, and she felicitates herself and rests in me and we love each other with one love alone."

And I: "My beloved Jesus, if you crave so much to be loved, and that creatures work that which you want, why don't you abound them so much with your graces in a way that they feel the strength to work and to love you as you want?"

And Jesus: "My daughter, in that moment I feel myself give to the creature the necessary strength rather I super abound it, in the act in which they are moved to work that which I want, not before; I don't know how to give useless things, because they would give me more account if they feel the strength and they don't do that which I want.

"How many before doing an action feel impotent, as they put forth the act to work thus they feel invested with a new strength, with new light; it is I that invest them, because I never lack to the strength necessary that is needed in order to do a good, necessity ties me and constrains me if it is necessary to do together that which the creature does. Therefore the true necessity is I, it is I that want them and I always myself together with them in the necessity; if that which they do is not necessary, I put myself apart and leave them to do it themselves."

After this I thought to myself: “How miserable I am, I feel as if I had done nothing for Jesus to his so many graces; who knows how I should love him, instead I am cold; it is true that I don’t know how to love anything other than Jesus, but I should be a whole flame, and I am not.” But while I thought this he returned and sweetly reproached me saying to me:

“My daughter, what are you doing? Do you want to waste time? Don’t you know that what you must take to heart is to do and to know if you are in my Will? In him everything is love, the breath, the heartbeat, the motion, the human will itself doesn’t want to know other than to love me; my Will, jealous of this creature, forms the air of love for her, in a way that she doesn’t breathe other than love; and your Jesus never looks at the feeling of the creature, many times it can betray, instead I look at the will and that which she wants, and that I take to me; how many things are felt and they are not done instead if she wants everything is done.

“And then in my will she doesn’t lose anything. He numbers everything for one who lives in him, the breaths, the heartbeats, the little I love you, all that which she does in him remains written with characters of indelible light and they form the same life of my Volition in her; and many times the gifts that I have given them, the acts that she has done, remain hidden as her property in the depth of the will and hence she feels as if she had done nothing; but it is not true, to the circumstances they are made to feel that the light more than sun is in her soul, the sanctity is at its place of honor, the virtues remain all in act to give heroism if there might be the need of exercising them.

“My Will knows how to maintain the harmony, his divine order, where he reigns, and all that which he does acquires the imprint of eternity. Therefore live in him and do not give thought to anything, rather he will think to your good more than you.”

* * *

May 17, 1938

How the soul is the voice, the song and the hands in order to play, the body is the organ. How the Divine Volition wants the littlest acts in order to make his sun rise. Seed that the sun does to the earthseed that the Divine Will does. Wedding that God prepares with his truths.

Continuing my flight in the Divine Volition, I feel that he invests me inside and out and wants to take his reigning place in my littlest acts, even (the) natural (ones) and perhaps even over my nothingness itself, and if I didn’t do this one could not say that the fullness of his Will reigns in the creature. Now, my dear Jesus, repeating his brief little visit, all goodness, said to me:

“My daughter, all went forth from us and was shaped by our creative hands, the soul and the body, therefore everything should be ours, the one and the other, rather we made the body the organ; and every act that should be done in order to complete the Divine Will, should form a key, which should enclose so many notes and music concerts, distinct between themselves; and the soul should be that which with the union of the body should form the voice, the song, and touching these keys should form the most beautiful music.

“Now, an organ without one who plays it seems a dead body, it doesn’t entertain, nor allure anyone, and one who intends (to make) music, if he doesn’t hold the instrument in order to play, he can not exercise his art of (a) musician. So that there is needed one who speaks, who moves, who holds life, in order to form beautiful music, but still there is needed the instrument, that contains keys, notes and other, the one and the other necessary. Such (is) the soul and the body. There is such harmony, order, union, that the one can not do without the other.

“Therefore I remain attentive, I watch over your steps, your words, the movement of your pupils, your littlest acts, so that my Will might have his life, his place.

“We don’t mind if the act is natural or spiritual, if it is great or little, but we are attentive to look (to see) if everything is ours, if our Volition has made its sun of light, of sanctity, of beauty, of love rise and we also make use of even the littlest acts of her in order to form our most prodigious portents, which form the most beautiful scenes in order to hold us entertained. Was it for nothing that we formed the wonders, the enchantment of all creation? Was it for nothing that we formed so many harmonies even our image that resembles us in the creation of the man? My daughter, if the creation had to give us only that which is spiritual, little could it give us; instead with giving us even her littlest natural acts, she can always give us, we remain in continuous rapport, the union between us and her is never broken. Even more so, that little things are always on hand, from the range of the little ones and of the great ones, of the ignorant ones and of the scholars; the breathing, the moving, taking care of oneself in personal things is of everyone, and never stops; and in fact to love us, in order to let the life of the Divine Will be formed in them, it is our triumph, our victory and the purpose for which we created him. You see, therefore, how easy it is living in our Volition? One must not do new things but that which one does: that is, to unfold his life as we have given it to him in our Will.”

Fiat!!!

After this my sweet Jesus continued to say to me:

“My daughter as the sun each day sows light, heat, sweetness, perfumes, color, fecundity, diversity of tastes, and with this it embellishes all the earth, and only that it touches with its light and shapes with its heat, it fertilizes the plants, matures and sweetens the fruits, gives the various colors and perfumes to the flowers, so much so as to form the sweet enchantment to human generations; thus one who lives in my Will, exceeding in an insuperable way the seeding that the sun does, sows over one who lives in him, light, love, various beauties, sanctity, giving to every single seed, the divine fecundity. And oh, how beautiful it is, to see this creature embellished, fecundated by our divine seeding! How specious she remains to form the enchantment to our divine eyes!

“Now, my daughter, as the earth, the flower, the plants, in order to receive the seed of the sun must submit to receive the contact of its light and of its heat, otherwise the sun would remain in the heights of its sphere, without being able to (send) its seed to the earth, which would remain sterile, without fecundity and without beauty; because, in order to give and receive a good, there is needed union, accord of both parts, without which the one can not give and the other, can not receive; thus the soul, in order to receive the seed of my Will must live in him, she must always remain united with highest accord, she must let herself be shaped, in order to receive the new life that he wants to give; otherwise he does like the sun, he doesn’t sow, and the creature remains sterile, without beauty, beneath the darkness of her human will. Behold therefore I want the soul to live in my Volition, not only in order to sow and to have that my seed does not become lost, making I myself (the) cultivator in order to be able to produce the most varied beauties.

Then he added with more tenderness of love:

“My good daughter, my love wants to bind always more with the creature, and how many more truths it manifests on my Will, so many more ties of union I put between God and her. And as it manifests truths, thus it prepares the wedding between God and the soul; and how much more it manifests, so much more with pomp and with splendor will the wedding be made. Do you want to know? My truths will serve as dowry, in order to be able to marry God, they will know who he is who abases himself, and that only his love induces him even to bind himself with the knot of marriage; my truths touch and retouch the creature, they shape her, they form her new life, they return and embellish our image and likeness to her when from us she was created, the imprint of his kiss of inseparable union.

“One truth of ours, can form a sea of prodigies and divine creations in one who has the good (fortune) to listen to him; it can change a world from perverse into good and holy, because it is a life of ours, that is exposed for (the) good of everyone; it is a new sun that we make rise in created intelligences, which by way of light (and) by heat will make itself known, in order to transform into light and heat one who has the good (fortune) to listen to it. Therefore, to hide a truth that we with so much love brought forth from our paternal bosom is the greatest crime, and it deprives the human generations of the greatest good.

“Further more, one who lives in our Volition, marrying us forms the feast of all the saints; everyone takes part in the divine wedding, and in virtue of this, they have a feast all truly in heaven and another on earth; every act that the creature does who lives in our Volition is a feast and a communion/meal that is proclaimed to the celestial regions, and the saints reciprocate it with new gifts and they implore God that he manifest other truths to them in order to enlarge always more the confines of the dowry that God has given them.”

* * *

May 19, 1938

How the Divine Will forms the paralysis to all the evils and the human volition paralyzes the goods. How to love is to possess. How God becomes formed in the creature and the creature in God. Fears over the writings.

I am always in the sea of the Divine Volition which, as he might want to put me on watch to be attentive not to let enter in me the poor and restless human volition, I remained worried. And my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, have courage, do not fear, the virtue, the power of my Will is so much, that as one enters into him in order to live thus all the evils remains paralyzed, the passions paralyzed, the steps and the bad works, the human will undergoes such defeat as to feel itself die; but without dying, but however she understands with great contentment, that while the evil feels paralyzed, she feels re-arise the life of good, the light that is never extinguished, the strength that never lessens, the love that always loves; the heroism of sacrifice rises in her, the unconquered patience. I can say that my Will, puts the that's enough to the evils of the creature, because there is no beginning and life of good if not that from my Will.

“Now if my Fiat holds the power to paralyze the evils, the human volition, when it dominates in the creature alone, every good remains paralyzed; poor good under the paralysis of the human volition! She wants to walk and hardly drags along, she wants to work and feels (her) arms fall, she wants to think good and feels groggy and as stupid. So that the human will without mine, is the beginning of all the evils and the total ruin of the poor creature.”

Whence afterwards, my beloved Jesus added with a moving accent:

“My daughter, one who wants to possess me must love me; to love and to possess is the same; as you love me thus I remain formed in your soul, and as you return to love me so I grow, because only love makes me grow; and as you repeat your love, thus I make myself known, in order to make me loved more. So that as you love me thus I make felt when I love you.

“Now as you love me, I love you and I possess you and as we alternate in loving each other thus you remain formed in me, you grow, I feed you with my love, I form you in the life of my volition, I flood you with my seas of love, in order to make you feel how much I love you, with how much tenderness I grow you in my Heart, how I hold you jealous, guarded, so that you love me more and use with me that same tenderness that I do for you in holding me guarded and jealous of (my) love, which is all eyes, all attention to give me her life in every instant, in order to love me, in order to make me happy and content in her soul as I make her happy and content in my Heart!

“Love wants to go (at an) equal step, and if one loves and is not loved, one feels the unhappiness, the bitterness of one who should love and does not love him. Therefore always love me, and if you want to really love me love me in my Volition, in which you will find the love that never ceases, and you will form (around) me chains of love so long as to imprison me in a way as to not know how to release me from your love.”

After this I thought of the great sacrifice of writing, my repugnances, the struggles that I have undergone in order to put pen to paper, that only the thought of displeasing my dear Jesus made me make the sacrifice of obeying he whom commanded me to do it. And yet I said to myself: ‘Who knows where, where they will go to finish [A few days after, the 31 of May, an envoy of the Holy Office unexpectedly arrived, that carried away with himself the first 34 Volumes of Luisa.]; and to whose hands they might go, who knows how much caviling/ quibbling, how many oppositions they will make, how many doubts.’ And I felt restless; my mind was devastated from such apprehensions that I felt myself dying. And my sweet Jesus, in order to quiet me, returned saying to me:

“My daughter, do not disturb yourself, these writings are mine, not yours, and to whose hands they can go no one will be able to touch them in order to spoil them, I will know (how) to guard, and to defend them, because it is stuff that belongs me, and whoever will take with good and upright will will find a chain of light and of love with which I love creatures. I can call these writings the vent of my love, follies, deliriums, excesses of my love, with which I want to conquer creatures, so that they return into my arms in order to make them feel how much I love her and for all the more to make them know how much I love them; I want to arrive to the excess of giving them the great Gift of my Will as life, because only with him can man put himself into security and feel the flames of my love, my anxieties of how much I love him.

“So that who will read these writings with the intention of finding the truth, will feel my flames and will feel transformed in love, and will love me more. One who will read them in order to find (with) his intelligence cavils/quibblings and doubts, by my light and by my love he will remain blinded and confused. My daughter, the goods, my truths, they produce two effects, one contrary to the other: to the disposed it is light in order to form the eye in his intelligence and life in order to give life of sanctity that my truths enclose; to the indisposed it blinds them and deprives them of the good that my truths enclose.”

Then he added: “My daughter, have courage nor (do I) want to disturb you: that which your Jesus has done was necessary for my love and to the importance of that which I had to manifest to you on my Divine Will; I can say that they should serve my life itself, and to let me complete the work of creation; therefore it was necessary that at the beginning of this state of yours, I used so many stratagems with you of love: I used so many intimacies with you, that it gives of the incredible how I arrived to so much; I also made you suffer much, in order to see if you submitted yourself to everything and then I drowned you with my graces, with my love, and I subjected you again to sufferings, in order to be sure that you would have denied me nothing; and this in order to conquer your will.

“Oh, if I might not have demonstrated to you how much I loved you, I would not have bestowed so many graces on you! Do you believe that it was easy, that you would have submitted to this state of suffering and for so long a time? It was my love, my truths, that held you and still hold you as magnetic in one who loved you so much. However all that which I have done from the beginning of this your state was necessary, because it had to serve as base, as decency, as decorum, preparation, sanctity and disposition to great truth, that I had to manifest to you about my Divine Will.

“Therefore of the writings I will have more interest more I than you, because they are mine and one truth alone of mine on my Fiat costs me much, that it exceeds the value of all the creation, because the creation is my work, instead my truth is my life, it is life that I want to give to creatures; and you can understand it from that which you have suffered and from (the) graces that I have made you in order to arrive to manifest my truths to you on my holy Volition; therefore quiet yourself and (let) us love each other, my daughter, we do not break our love, because it costs us a great deal to all and two, you with keeping your life sacrificed to my disposition, and I with sacrificing myself for you.”

With all of Jesus’ speaking I didn’t feel fully calm; in the act of his speaking to me the peace had returned; but afterwards; reconsidering that which had happened to me in these days; that is not necessary to say here, I returned to disturb myself. Whence around after two days, my sweet Jesus had become silent; therefore I felt worn-out of strength, with an extreme weakness and my beloved Jesus, having compassion on me, all goodness, came and said to me:

“My poor daughter, you are fasting, therefore you feel worn-out of strength; it is two days that you haven’t taken food, because not being in peace I could not give you the food of my truths; because while they feed the soul, they also communicate strength to the body; even more so that being disturbed you would not have understood me, nor would you have been disposed to take a food so dainty; because you must know that peace is the door where truth enters, and the first kiss and invitation that they make/(give) creatures in order to listen to them, and in order to speak to them. Hence if you want that (I) give you much food return to your peaceful state.

“Peace is the smile of heaven, the source where celestial joys spring forth. And then your Jesus is never disturbed, for how much they might be able to offend me; I can say: ‘My throne is peace.’ Thus I want you, all peaceful, my daughter, even in the way we must adapt ourselves, to be alike; peaceful I, peaceful you; otherwise the kingdom of my Will can not establish itself in you, because he is (a) kingdom of peace.”

* * *

May 27, 1938

Repeated and continuous acts bind God more to the creature and form the strength of the soul. How beautiful is the living in the Divine Volition. How God himself prays (for) it. Rain of love that God makes on the creature and rain of love that one who lives in the Fiat makes.

I feel the need of enclosing myself in the Divine Volition in order to continue my life in him. Oh! How I would love that he might imprison me in his light, so that I might see nothing and I might feel nothing than that which regards his Will. And my beloved Jesus returning to visit my poor soul, all love said to me:

“My blessed daughter I want you here, in my Volition imprisoned, so that all the other things don’t have life in you. Now you must know that all the harmony of the creature is in the continuation of his good acts, done in my Volition; one act doesn’t form harmony, nor (a) variety of beauties; instead so many continuous acts united together call the attention of God, whom puts himself in expectation to await the acts of the creature, and as she goes forming them thus (he) communicates them, to some beauty, to some sanctity, to others goodness, wisdom, love, in short they remain endowed by God with his friezes and divine quality. Acts repeated in the creature form the strength of the soul, they tie God more to the creature, they form the heaven in the depths of the soul; and as she goes repeating her acts, some form star, some sun, some wind that groans and blows with love, some sea that murmurs continually love, glory, adoration, to my Creator; in short one sees the atmosphere copied in her.

“Instead when the acts are not continuously repeated there lacks the only strength that the one is strength of the other, there lacks the divine way that when it does an act it never ceases doing it, it sustains it with its creative strength, in (the) act of doing it continually. And then a single act has never formed sanctity. The acts, when they are not continuous, they don’t have strength, they do not possess the life of love, because true love never says enough, it is never stopped and if it says enough it feels itself die. And then it is the continuous and repeated acts that form the beautiful surprises (in) heaven, that while an act arrives and they are enjoying it, another arrives of it, it does not do other than to send continuous acts to heaven, which form the enchantment of the celestial fatherland. Therefore in my Volition there is always to do, nor can one lose time.”

Then, with a more tender and stronger force of love he added:

“My daughter, how beautiful it is when a soul loves to do the Divine Will; heaven abases itself and everyone poses themselves to venerate and adore the Supreme Volition, because his majesty, height and power becomes; enclosed in the little circle of the creature; and in order to do that which he does in his celestial palace, in order to make (a) pageant of his love and of his works, (he) feels so very honored that he assumes to play queen in order to have so many lives of queen for how many acts the creature does; in his Volition one feels his divine regime, his ruling scepter, that unfolds with his regal ways, the creature renders him the honors that are appropriate to him. And since my Fiat embraces everyone he feels so very glorified as if everyone might let him reign. Therefore we cannot find beauty more true, we can not receive greater love, we can not work prodigies more outstanding, than only in one who loves to live in our Volition.

“So much is my desire, that the soul live in my Volition, my anxieties, my ardent sighs, that go repeating to the ears of the heart: ‘Oh, content me, do not make me yearn anymore; if you will live in my Fiat, the night will cease for you, you will enjoy the full day, rather every act done in him will be a new day, carrier of new graces, of new love and unexpected joys, all the virtues will celebrate you, they will hold their place of honor as so many princesses that will court your Jesus and your soul. You will form (for) me in you my throne of the most refulgent light, where I will dominate as dominant King in which I have formed my kingdom and with all liberity I will dominate all your being, even your breath. All my works will court you, my sufferings, my steps, my love, my strength itself they will serve you as defense, as help and as food; there is no thing and what won’t I give you if you live in my Will.’

“Now you must know that our supreme being holds the creature under a direct rain of love, all created things rain on her love; the sun rains on her light of love; the wind rains on her puffs, billows, freshness and caresses of love; the air rains on her continuous life of love; my immensity that involves her, my power that sustains her and carries her as in (my) arms, my creative act that conserves her, they rain on her immense love, powerful love, love that creates in every instant love; we are always above the creature in order to involve her and to drown her with love. Therefore it makes us go into (a) delirium (from) so much of our love, and the creature does not let herself be conquered to love us, what pain, what sorrow!

“But do you want to know who has exact knowledge of this our never interrupted rain of love? We ourselves do it and one who lives in our Volition; she feels, our continuous rain of love, much more so that living in him everything is hers, and she in order to give us the exchange, not knowing what to do in order to make us his rain of love, she takes all created things, our immensity and power, our creative virtue that is always in (the) act of creating, and only because we love, she elevates herself in our same Will and rains on our divine being love of light, caresses of love, immense and powerful love, as if she might want to render us the pair to bring to us in her arms in order to say to us: ‘You see how much I love you, you bring to me and I bring to you, I hold in my power your immensity and power that gives me the virtue of being able to bring to you.’

“My daughter, you can not understand what refreshment we feel, as our flames remain refreshed and relieved under this rain of love that the creature makes for us; so much is our contentment that we feel as paid that we have created all the creation and paid with our same coin of love, with which we have loved her so much; our love, holds (the) virtue of making rise in the creature sufficient and superabundant coins in order to pay us from that which we have given her and done for her.

“Whence in the sea of our joy we say to her: ‘Tell me what you want? Do you want that we invent other stratagems of love? For we will do it for you. Say, what you want? We will content you in everything, nothing will we deny you; to deny anything to you, to not content you in everything would be as we might deny it to ourselves and as if we might want to put a discontentment in our joys that never finish.’ Therefore one who lives in our Volition we find everything in her, and she finds everything in us.”

* * *

June 5, 1938

The sign if the creature lives in the Divine Volition, if she feels her life in him, his working act which is the greatest gift that he makes the creature. Centralization of God in the creature and of the creature in God.

My flight continues in the Divine Volition, I feel that he wants to breathe(,) to palpitate, to move, and to think in me; it seems to me that he puts aside his immensity, his height and depth, his power and diminishes himself in me in order to do as I do; it seems that he delights in descending from his heights in order to abase himself in me, and to breathe as I breathe, to palpitate and to move in my motion, while outside of me he always remains that which he is, immense and powerful, who invests and surrounds everything. Whence, my mind, while I wanted to enjoy him within me, in order to give my life and receive his, I wanted also to go forth from myself in order to cross his immensity, power, height and depth that the confines are not found. That abyss of light in which cannot be found neither the depth, nor the height, nor the confines. And while my mind was lost my sweet Jesus visiting my little soul, all goodness, said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, my Will invests and involves everything and everyone in his womb of light, he possesses everything, nor is there one who can escape him; everyone lives in him, only they don’t recognize him, who it is who gives them life, motion, step, heat and offers them even breath. We can say that living in our Volition as if she might live in our house, we offer them that which they need, we feed her with more than paternal tenderness, and she doesn’t recognize us, and many times she attributes to herself that which she does while we ourselves do it and she arrives even to offend he who gives her life and conserves (her). We can say that we hold in our house so many enemies of ours that live at our expense, as so many thieves of our goods, and our love is so much that it constrains us to give life to them, to feed them, as if they might be friends. How sorrowful it is, that our Will serves as habitation to one who doesn’t recognize us and offends us. They are in him by reason of creation, of our immensity, that if they might not want to be in our Volition there would not be a place for them, because there is no point in heaven and on earth (in) which one doesn’t find him.

“Now, the creature in order to say that she lives in our Volition, must want him, must recognize him, with wanting him she feels that everything is Will of God for her, and with recognizing him she feels our working act upon her, and this is the living in my Divine Volition, to feel our working power inside and outside of oneself; and as she feels that He works; she works together; if she feels that we love, she loves together; if we want to make ourselves more known she is all attention to listen to us and to receive with love the new life of our knowledge. In short, she feels our working life and wants to do and does that which we do, following us in everything. This is living in our Volition, to feel our life that gives life to her, to feel our working act that moves itself, breathes, works in her being.

“These are our celestial dwellers, our glory in our habitation; we are as children and Father, that which is ours is theirs, but they recognize it, they are not blind and thieves that don’t have eyes in order to look at our light, nor ears in order to listen to our paternal interests, nor do they feel our working act upon them. While one who lives in our Volition feels the virtue of our working act and this is the greatest gift that we can make the creature. Therefore be attentive, recognize that your life comes from us, that we give you everything, breath, motion, in order to have life together with you.”

After this I continued to think of the great marvel of the Divine Volition. How many surprises, how many unheard of prodigies, which only the divine Fiat can do! And my always amiable Jesus, returning, added:

“My blessed Daughter, I created the creation and all creatures, in order to form in it my delights and in order to put forth from our supreme being the excesses of our love and the prodigious power of our works; if they delight us so much in creating so many varied and manifold works in the order of creation that should serve man, so much more we should delight ourselves in working unheard of prodigies, works never thought of, beauties that enrapture who should serve us.

“Man was the first act of creation, hence we should have delighted ourselves so much in him, as to always hold ourselves occupied, how many more beautiful works could we do in him; and he should be always with us, in order to love us and in order to give himself to love, and to receive the great prodigies of our works. It was the subtraction of himself from our Volition that stopped our delights and the course of our works that with so much love we wanted to do in man. But that which was established by us must have its completion; behold therefore we return to the assault of calling creatures to live in our Volition, in order to do that which was decreed and established of the work, that it may become punctually executed.

“Now, you must know that as the soul completes her acts in our Volition, our love is so much that we centralize in her our supreme being with all our works. And oh, what delights and joys we experience in seeing in her our dominant majesty surrounded by all our works! The angels(,) the saints, pour themselves out and centralize themselves in her, in order to honor their Creator, because where there is God everyone races and they want their place of honor around us.

“But while everything remains centralized in her, another greater marvel happens: she remains centralized in everyone and in every single created thing; our Will loves her so much, that wherever one searches, he multiplies her and gives the place to her everywhere, in order to hold her as harmonious with him in all his works.

“We can not be without this creature that lives in our Divine Volition, we should have to divide our Will into two parts, in order not to hold her in everyone and in our works; but this we can not do because he is not subject to divide himself he is always one and one act alone; and then our love would make war (upon) us if we put aside one who lives in our Volition; rather, it is this reason for which we want her to live in our Will, because we want her together with us, we want make our works known to her, we want to make her feel the beating and the notes of our love, so that our love loves us in her. From afar works don't know each other, and our love is not felt, therefore we need to be together in order to love each other, to know each other and to work; otherwise the creature makes her way and we make ours, and we remain deprived of our delights and of being able to work that which we want, with our highest sorrow. Therefore be attentive, live always in our Volition if you want that we live in you and you in us."

* * *

June 12, 1938

Truths bearer of divine seeds. How knowledges form new divine lives. Exchange of glory that (one) will have in heaven. One who lives abandoned in the arms of Jesus is his preferred.

I am always returning in the Divine Volition; his immensity is so much that while I am in his sea, wanting to embrace all his acts and not having done it yet, because it (would) take centuries, and still it would not be enough for me to be able to embrace all his acts, hence to my littleness it seems to me that I return, while I remain. Whence while I lost myself in the Fiat, my sweet Jesus, who feels the need of love that wants to say where the soul can arrive who wants to live in his Volition, he said to me:

"My blessed Daughter, my love then becomes reconciled, it is quieted in its anxieties, it is calmed down in its deliriums, when I speak of my Divine Will. In my word, in the truths that I manifest on him he takes a sweet rest, because he sees that his love takes (a) place in creatures, in order to be relived, and my Will forms his life. It is necessary to manifest the merits(,) the goods that there are in him in order to allure, to infatuate, to enrapture creatures to live in him, otherwise they would not move themselves. Now you must know, that every knowledge that I manifest, and every act done in my Volition courted by the knowledge that I have manifested is a divine seed that the soul acquires, this seed will produce new divine science; and oh, how she will know how to speak of the language of her Creator, every truth will be a new celestial language that will hold (the) virtue of making itself understood by one who listens to it and who wants to receive this divine seed; this seed will produce new life of sanctity, new love, new goodness, new joys and happiness. This seed of my truths they will be so many new divine properties that the soul will acquire.

"Now so much is the glory that we receive when the soul works in our Volition, that we communicate them to all the blessed. You must now know that how many divine seeds the soul acquires in virtue of the knowledges on my Fiat so many more degrees of our knowledge and our glory will we participate her (in) when having finished her life down here she will come into our celestial country. To correspond to the knowledge acquired on earth she will acquire the double knowledge of our supreme being in our celestial sojourn, and every divine seed that she will have received, a degree of glory, of joy, of happiness. So that happiness, joy, the glory of the blessed will be proportionate for how much they will have known us.

"We find ourselves in the conditions, between us and the blessed, of one such that he has not studied the diversity of the languages, hearing speaking he won't understand anything; not only, but they can not occupy themselves as teacher in (the) place of being able to teach the diversity of the languages in order to be able earn a great salary; hence he must be content to teach the little that he knows and to earn little.

“(As) such we find ourselves, if they don't know us on earth, they don't form the place in their souls in order to receive all of our joys and happiness, and if they want to give them(selves) they won't enter them and they won't understand anything of them.

“So that the glory of the blessed will correspond to how many acts of will they have done in our Divine Volition; it will augment the glory, joy, for how many more knowledges they have acquired; one knowledge more will let the blessed climbed to a height so great as to astound the entire Celestial Court; because one knowledge more is a new divine life that the soul acquires, the which possesses goods and infinite joys. And does it seem little to you that the soul possesses so many of our new divine lives as her properties. And we, what can we not give of joy, of happiness, of love for exchange of ours new divine lives, that she possess as her property?

“Therefore we wait for our children that will live in our Volition, in order to make us known on earth, because he will do (for) them as teacher in order to teach them the new sciences of their Creator and he will shape them beautiful, wise, holy, noble, according to the acquired sciences; we wait for them in our Celestial Court in order to flood them with our new joys, beauties and happiness that until now we have not been able to give. And since in heaven all the blessed are bound between them as family that love each other with perfect love, they will participate in the glory, in the joy of these, not as direct glory and joy, but indirect, because of the tie that they possess of union of love that they possess between themselves. Therefore our supreme being waits with anxiety the children of our Volition in order to make himself known on earth for then to show off from the depth of our divine bosom new joys and happiness that never finish, because one who lives in him has acquired in his acts the infinite and the joys that are never exhausted.”

Then he added but with inexpressible tenderness:

“My good daughter I greatly love creatures, but I feel more drawn to love, (to be) enraptured and conquered by the soul that lives abandoned in my arms, as if she might have no one in the world but only her Jesus; she trusts only me and if they offer her other supports she refuses them, in order to have the support of her Jesus, that holds her tightly between his arms, defends her and takes all care of her. These are the souls that I greatly greatly love; my preferred ones, that I surround with my divine power; I form around her the wall of my love, in a way that troubles one who touches her (from) me, my love will know how to defend them and my power will knock down those people that want to displease me.

“The souls abandoned in me, live only for me and I live only for them, as if we might live with one breath alone and with one love alone; and if some human support is presented, they look if I am there in that support, if I am not there they run away, in order to arrive to shelter themselves in my arms from it. Of these souls alone I can trust, to entrust my secrets, even to lean myself on them; I am sure that they won't go out from my Will because they are always together with me.

“Instead one who doesn’t live all abandoned in me, escapes from my arms, she doesn’t refuse the human supports, rather she takes gusto/(pleasure) from them, they are inconstant; now they search (for) me, now the creature; they are constrained to feel the disillusionment of creatures that open in their souls profound tears; they feel the earth in their heart, and my Will as life is far from them. Oh, if they might abandon themselves in my arms! The earth would disappear for them, they would not take care of/pay attention to any one, because I alone am enough for everyone.

“I love so much one who lives abandoned in my arms, that I manifest to them my greater excesses of love, my finesses of love, my caresses are for them, I arrive to invent new stratagems of love, in order to hold them occupied and all unified in my love. Therefore only live abandoned in my arms, and in all things you will find your Jesus who defends you, helps you and sustains you.”

* * *

June 16, 1938

How the Divine Volition wants to always give to creatures and wants to receive. Delivery/Consignment of both parts; rights that one loses, and reign that one acquires. How God finds everything in the act done in his Will.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues. I feel that he doesn’t give me time, he wants to always give me of his, but he wants to always receive mine also; and if I don’t have something to give him, because I am pure nothing, he wants my will in act of always giving to him, and this is all his festivity, to receive as gift the will of the creature; and if needs (be), he wants the same thing that he has given in order to always receive; and he is content to receive from her in order to re-give her love, new light, new sanctity doubled again. Divine will, how much you love me! Oh, how much I would like to re-love you!

I felt myself sink/swallowed up in the Fiat, and my always amiable Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness, said to me:

“My little daughter of my Will, you don’t know even where my love makes me arrive to for one who lives in him, how many inventions it makes me do, how much it makes me combine of it, I arrive to make new surprises in order to always have something to do with her; and in order to always hold her surprised and occupied with me, I don’t give her (a) time limit, now I tell her a truth, now I make her a gift, now I let her see our beauty that enraptures her, our love that groans, that burns, that is delirious, that wants to be loved; in short I don’t give her (a) time limit and that which I want more so, that even she doesn’t give me (a) time limit, I always want.

“Now, do you sense what I do; in order to give and to always receive, we call the creature to live in my Will and I make her (the) gift of his sanctity, of his light, of his life, of his love, of his infinite joys, for as much as she can contain of it; after she has lived some time then, finding her faithful, I go to her and say: ‘Make me the consignment of that which I have given you’; she then wants to make me see how much she loves me, without hesitating an instant, she quickly consigns everything to me, even her breath, her heartbeat, her motion, everything, everything she gives me, she retains nothing for herself, rather she remains happy that she gives everything to her Jesus. I take everything, I look and regard that which she has given me, in order to feel happy and to felicitate in her gifts; I deposit them in my heart in order to enjoy them in me as property of my daughter.

“But do you believe that I remain content from it? On the part of the creature I remain content, but on my part, no never; my love does not give me peace, it swells itself, overflows and makes me give into the greatest excesses, and do you know what I do? I make the consignment of my being to my beloved creature, I redouble for her all that which she has given me, I give her love, light, doubled sanctity, I consign my breath to her, my motion, my life itself, in a way that I breathe in her breath, I move in her motion, I love in her love, there is no thing that I don’t do in her; I don’t want to do (anything) without her, I would feel as if I might not love her in all my things, and this to my love would be unbearable; one who has given me everything, I must give everything; and it seems little to you that your Jesus consigns his life to you in order to have you live of me, and you make me your consignment, in order to live of you, and almost in order to find pretexts of always giving and of always receiving, in order to have occasions to tell you my long story of my Will and my eternal story of love? And this not in order to give her simple news, in order to have them see how very good, holy, powerful I am, but in order to endow her with my love, with my Will, with my sanctity, goodness and my beauty; is this not therefore an excessive love that gives of the incredible?

“Only the wanting of her to hold/take up with me already my love is greater; because if I want her to hold/take up with me, it is because I want to give of mine to her, and since she doesn’t hold anything that is worthy of me I give her of mine, so that making it hers she can say to me: ‘You have given to me and I give to you.’ Is this not a love to break and to move the hardest hearts? Only your Jesus is able and knows how to love in this way, no one can say that they can reach me in my love; and I myself can do it for one who lives in my Volition, because every act that she does in him is a sun that rises with all the fullness of the glory and of the sanctity. And I go sheltering myself in these suns in order to delight myself and to take rest, and finding my beloved creature invested with these suns, how beautiful she seems to me; even more so, that living in my Volition there is nothing of human in her, she loses the rights over her will and over all that which is human, all the rights are ours over her volition and she acquires the rule over that which is divine.

“And oh, how beautiful she is, how content and happy we are in seeing her with right to reign over all that which pertains to us! She reigns over our love and she takes how much she wants of it in order to love us, and she reigns over our love in order to make herself love; she reigns over our wisdom and makes us speak of our supreme being truths never spoken of; she reigns over our goodness it is there she makes it rain more than beneficent rain over all creatures, her reign is sweet and powerful over our paternal bosom that makes us come to say: ‘Who can resist you our daughter? You want it we want it.’ Therefore if you want everything to never go out from our Will, all will be yours and you will be all ours.”

After this I continued to think of the Divine Will, of his great marvels, and as to the times while one crosses his sea all is serenity, profound peace, his divine sun, refulgent with light, but all is silence; and since his word is life, one feels lacking the new life that one would like to receive; but while I thought this, my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, the sun of my Volition always speaks, the light doesn’t keep silent, it speaks with its heat, with its fecundity and with the imprint in the soul that lives in him, his varied beauties; and then there I am who am the carrier of his word, that abasing myself more to the human intelligence, I facilitate with more adaptable words the height of the word of the light of my Fiat. Therefore where he reigns he cannot keep silent, he holds his saying continuous by way of light, or through means of my word. Rather when you are not attentive, you don't ruminate well, you don't eat and therefore you don't digest that which I say to you, hence not ruminating it, you forget it and you say that I have not told you anything.

“Whence you must know, that in every word or act done in my Will, all the centuries become embraced, all creatures are enclosed and present; the past and the future doesn't exist for us and for one who lives in our Volition. Indeed our truths, enclose all the centuries, all time, and are the carriers of all creatures in the act of one who lives in our Fiat; therefore we find in that act ourselves, the love, the glory that everyone should give us. Therefore when the creature is about to work and about to receive the working act of the Divine Fiat, the heavens abase themselves for reverence and they are astonished in seeing a Divine Volition working in the human act and everyone feels that they take part in that act. So that we find everything in the act done by the creature in our Will; we find our power that honors us as we merit, our immensity that encloses everything and puts everything at our disposition, our wisdom that praises our divine being with the most beautiful notes, the angels that sing hymns to us, the saints that enraptured repeat: ‘Holy holy, three times holy the Lord our God, who works with so much goodness and makes a show of his love in the act of the creature.’ We can say that nothing is missing to us, our glory is complete and our love finds its sweet rest and perfect reciprocation.

“Therefore we yearn so very much (for) one who lives in our Volition; and it seems to us as if we might not have done anything in the creation, because there is lacking the greatest act that we can do, that is our life repeating in the human act, in which we will find ourselves, everything and everyone; there is no good that we won't give to our beloved creature and there will not be love and glory that she won't give us, she will find all that which she wants in us, and we will find everything in her.

“Daughter, to be able to give everything and to give but (a) little part of our good, is a sorrow for us, and to hold our love restrained and impeded and only because (there is) missing as life our Will in her, not being able to receive everything from her, is the greatest suffering of our creative work. Hence our love, our power and wisdom, all our creative works demand it, that the creature live in our Volition.

“Therefore the centuries won't finish, if first our Fiat won't form its kingdom, and while it will dominate, it will give all the goods and will give the dominion of its goods to the human generations. Hence pray and let your life be a continuous act of my Will in order to obtain that he come to reign.”

* * *

June 20, 1938

One who lives in the Divine Volition is in continuous communication with God. Rebirth and love that arises. How it felicitates and gives joy to everyone. How Jesus himself will be made vigilant custodian of these writings and the interest will be all his.

I am under the empire of the Divine Volition; his power raises me into his center, his love embalming me carries his celestial air to me, his light purifies me, embellishes me, transforms me and encloses me within the Divine Volition, in a way that everything is forgotten; because they are such and so many the joys, the enchanting scenes of the supreme being, that one remains enraptured. Oh Divine Will, how I would love that everyone might know you in order to let everyone enjoy joys so pure, contentment so ineffable, that only in you they can find! But while my mind felt inexpressible happiness, my beloved Jesus, repeating his brief little visit with me, all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Volition, have you seen how beautiful it is to live in my Volition? We are in continuous communications with the creature, we prepare (for) them new joys in every act that she does in order to render her always more happy in our sojourn; the actions done in the Fiat are always in act of being done; our life is reborn continually; our love rises and forming its waves invests everyone and calls everyone into that act, so that everyone repeats it, and we feel the echo that everyone loves us and glorifies us. The angels and saints remain all in expectation, and with anxiety yearn (for) the act of the creature done in the Divine Will; but do you know why? Thus they receive double glory, that of heaven and the new glory, joy and happiness of the act done in my Fiat. How they thank me and love the creatures that double the new contentments and joys without end!

“Who can not love one who lives in my Divine Volition, who gives joys and happiness to us, (who) gives us the great glory of letting us do that which we want in her, (and) gives happiness and joys to everyone? There is no good that does not descend from her. Therefore, one who lives in our Volition is not subject to unconfidence, to fears; mistrust doesn't find the doors in order to enter there, because everything is hers; she feels master of everything, rather she takes that which she wants; her life is none other than love and our Will, so much so that she arrives to suffer our own follies of love, and she would be content to put forth her life for each one, in order to give us the glory of making our Will known.”

After this I felt worried for these blessed writings, and the insistence of my beloved Jesus in wanting that I might continue to write; and then, after so many sacrifices, where will they go in the end? And my Jesus, interrupting my thought, said to me:

“My daughter, do not give it thought; I will be (a) vigilant custodian, because they cost me too much; it cost me my Will which enters in these writings as primary life; I could call them testament of love that my Will makes to creatures; he makes himself donor of himself, and calls them to live in his inheritance, but with ways so suppliant, attractive, loving, that only hearts of stone would not be moved to compassion and would not feel the need of receiving a good so great.

Therefore, these writing are full of divine life, which can not be destroyed; and if someone might want to try, it would happen to him as to one who might want to try to destroy the sky, which, offended, would fall on him (from) above, from all parts, and it would annihilate him under its azure vault. So that the sky would remain at its place, and all the evil would go upon he who might want to destroy the sky; or else, one might want to destroy the sun, the sun would laugh at him and would burn him; another one might want to destroy the waters of the sea, the sea would drown him. There is too much needed to touch that which I have had you write on my Will, because I can call it (the) new, living and speaking creation; it will be the last display of my love toward the human generations. Rather you must know that every word that I make you write upon my Fiat, doubles my love toward you and toward those whom will read them in order to make them remain embalmed with my love. Therefore, as you write, you give me the field to love you more, arrive the great good that they will do, feel every word of mine, the palpitating lives of the creatures that will know the good of my word and will form the life of my Will in them. Therefore the interest will be all mine, and you abandon everything in me.

“You should know that these writings have gone forth from the center of the great sun of my Will, of whose rays are full of truths gone forth from this center, which embrace every time, every century, all the generations. This great ray of light fills heaven and earth, and by way of light knocks at all hearts, and prays and supplicates that they receive the palpitating life of my Fiat, which our paternal goodness has benigned and has deigned to dictate from within his center with ways most insinuating, attractive, affable, full of sweetness, and with love so great that it gives of the incredible, as to make the angels themselves astonished; every word can call itself a portent of love, one greater than the other. Therefore, to want to touch these writings is to want to touch myself, the center of my love, my loving finesses with which I love creatures, and I will know how to defend myself and to confuse one who might want to belittle to disapprove (of) even one single word of that which is written on my Divine Will.

Therefore, continue to listen to me, my daughter, nor want to impede my love, nor want to tie (my) arms by rejecting in my bosom that which follows to write; these writings cost me too much, they cost me as much as myself costs. Hence, I will take such care that not even one word will I let get lost.”

* * *

June 26, 1938

The human will, united to the Divine, also knows how to do prodigies; without him she is a poor cripple. One who lives in the Divine Volition acquires the conquering act.

I am always in the arms of the Divine Volition, his light puts the night of my will in me in flight, his beauty enraptures me, his love enchains me, so as not to know how to find the way to go out from within his bosom of light. And I don't know why, I was (in) fear and dread of my will. And dear Jesus, visiting my little soul, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, the human will together with mine, also knows how to do prodigies; instead, without mine, it is a poor cripple that can not even help itself; without my Will it remains like a disciple without the teacher; poor little one!, without the teacher it will always remain ignorant, without science, without art, incapable of earning a piece of bread in order to live. Without mine, it will be like a person that has legs, without feet; arms, without hands; mouth without language; eyes without pupil; head without reason; poor creature! In what abyss of miseries she finds herself! One would say: ‘Better she had never been born.’

“So that the thing that would give more terror and fright, is not living united with my Will; all misfortunes rain on her. Instead, united with my Will, inside of her, she will hold the Teacher to her disposition, (so) that he will teach her the highest and most difficult sciences, the most beautiful arts, so much so as to be able to be a portent of science on earth and in heaven. The human will united with mine, will hold human legs and divine feet that will make it race in the way of good without ever tiring; it will hold human arms and divine motion that will hold (the) virtue of doing the greatest works, that resembles her Creator; with our divine motion she will embrace eternity, she will hold us always courted and pressed to her heart; united with our Will, she will hold the human mouth, but the word, the voice will be divine. And oh, how well we will speak of our supreme being! In short, she will hold our eye, through which, looking at all created things she will recognize in them our life, our love, and how she must love us; united to ours she will hold divine reason, she will feel a species of infused science, which will form an ordered man, all in order with her Creator; everything will convert into good, rather, there is no good that she won't possess if she lives in our Will. She is the true failure of all the evils, of all the misfortunes, and recalls to life all the goods, because she possesses the source of it.

“Beyond this, for one who lives in our Volition, every motion, breath, heartbeat, all that which one can do, are continuous conquests that she does, and divine conquests; I can say that living in my Volition, one breathes with my breath, one moves to my motion, one beats with my eternal palpitation. So that she acquires the conquering act in all her acts and this becomes given to her with justice and with exuberant love, because with living in ours, giving no more life to her volition, with right she should be in the celestial region, in order to feel happy and to enjoy our felicitating Will. Now, in order to live in our Will on earth, the poor daughter deprives herself of the joys of heaven; this is the most heroic act, the most intense love, which all heaven, our divinity, the Sovereign (Lady) of heaven, remain wounded and love the heroism of this creature, and oh, how everyone loves her!

“And our love, that never lets itself be conquered by anyone, cedes/surrenders in every breath of hers, to her little motion, if she thinks, if she looks, if she speaks, the conquering and divine act. The conquests are innumerable; we feel that it is not the creature that breathes, that moves, but us, and we give it the value that our breath and motion contains, that all the possible and imaginable values contains. So that she is the conqueror of our life and acts. This happy creature, with her conquering act, becomes our outlet of continuous love, our own happiness, our rest; and her conquests are continuous signatures on our decree of the coming of the Kingdom of our Volition upon the earth; these conquests shorten the time; more so that our working life is no longer estranged upon the earth, but already exists and has formed his Kingdom in this fortunate creature. Hence be attentive; never stop yourself, and I will keep count of everything, even of (your) breath, in order to love you more and in order to have you make so many conquests, one more beautiful than the other.”

Afterwards he added: “My daughter, as the creature lets me make I am of her will in order to live in mine, I make for her (a) gift of mine. But do you know what my Will does before giving himself? He pours himself upon the act of her, he embellishes it, forms the day, sanctifies it, puts there his divine joys, and then encloses himself in the act of the creature. As my Fiat works in this act, all created things receive new life, new creation, they feel renewed in beauty, in love, in the joy of one's Creator; and as he completes his divine act, the act remains of the creature and everyone remains in expectation in order to see what the creature does with this act, because it is an act that encloses everything, and everyone feels enclosed in that act; and the happy creature, what does she do? She enjoys it, she kisses and embraces it, and knowing that an act so great can not remain for herself alone, she says in her emphasis of love of joy: ‘Adorable Will, you have given me Divine Will, and I give you Divine Will, in order to make you the exchange, the thanksgiving, the glory, the joy, the love that you have given me; I am incapable of being able to contain it! 'Therefore this act races to everyone, sanctifies, embellishes, felicitates, gives honor to everyone. This is the most beautiful act that the creature can give me; no one can equal this act, that is to give my Will in order to receive it and to give it again.'

* * *

June 30, 1938

How true love wants to find oneself in the loved person. How Our Lord formed so many ways in order to make himself found. Who is our field. How the knowledge opens all the doors between God and the creature.

My poor mind feels itself under the empire/rule of the Fiat, which drawing it to himself, makes it follow that which he has done for love of the creature, and while I followed the acts of the redemption, my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

"Daughter of my Will, my love feels the need to relieve itself with one who loves me and to entrust my most intimate secrets to her; true love holds this virtue of breaking whatever secret, because it wants to find in the loved person that which itself possesses, its joys, its sorrows, all its same prerogatives; love wants to find itself in the beloved person.

"Now, know, my daughter, that as I came upon the earth, my love gave me no rest; as soon as I was conceived, I began to form so many ways that should serve creatures in order to come to me; these ways, while I formed them, I stretched them, but I didn't detach them from myself; I remained the center from where all the ways departed. So that every act, word, thought, step, were ways of light, of sanctity, of love, of virtue, of heroism, that I formed; hence every act that the creature does, finds my way in order to come to me.

"At the head of these ways, that are innumerable I put as queen my Will, and I put myself to wait, at the head of every way, in order to receive them in my arms; many times I wait in vain, and my love, giving me neither peace, nor rest, puts me en route in order to meet them at least halfway on the walk, and if I find them, I invest the act of the creature, in a way that I make myself act and way of it, and with an exuberant love I cover them, I hide them in my own love, I cover them with my own acts, but so many as to find myself in them, and I carry them in order to hold them secure in the arms of my Will. Therefore, every thought of the creature holds the way of my thoughts, every word holds the way of my words, every work holds the way of my work, of my steps; if she suffers she holds the way and the life of my sufferings, and if she wants to love me she holds the way of my love. I have surrounded creatures with so many (of) my ways, in a way as not to be able to escape me; and if someone escapes me, I give into delirium, I race, I fly, in order to track her down; and then I stop, when I have found her, and I close her in my ways, in order to not let her go out anymore.

"Therefore my coming upon the earth was none other than relieving my repressed love from so many centuries, through which I arrived to excesses, formed the new creation, indeed I exceeded it in the multiplicity of the works, and in the intensity of my love; but my love is still repressed, and as I vent I want to give my Will as life, in order to give them the greatest good that I can give, and in order to receive the great glory of having his children in our kingdom.

“As the creature enters into our Volition, our contentment is so much, that it gives us the field of repeating in her all that which we have done in the creation and redemption; our love wants to see in act, as if then we were doing it, the extended sky, the sun refulgent with light, the winds that blow continually billows of thanks and of love in one who lives in our Volition, seas that murmur love, glory, adoration to my Creator; in repeated act the descent of the Word; my Will is the repeater of that which my humanity did in the creature. So that we are always in (the) act of working in her; we never stop, because nothing should be missing in one who lives in our Volition; our own acts will be our throne, our cortege and the life itself of the creature.

“Therefore our love for her gives of the incredible; we are all eyes upon her, in order to see if she does not enclose everything; and how many times, because we love her too much, we repeat our working act, we put forth new beauty, new sanctity to our masterpieces that we have done in her. It pleases us always to give to her, and to keep her occupied under the rain of our working acts, in order to give occasions to her of loving her and of making us loved more. So, live always in our Volition, and you will feel the continuous vent of our love, our working act, that will not only repeat our works in act, but will add on new things to astonish heaven and earth.”

After this he added: “My daughter, everyone lives in my Volition; and if they didn’t live (in him) they would not find the space where to be able to live; but who feels our divine life? Who feels themselves involved by our sanctity? Who experiences the contentment of feeling touched by our creative hands in order to feel embellished with our beauty? Who feels themselves drown in our love?

“One who wants to live in our Volition; not one who finds themselves though necessity of creation, because our immensity involves everything and everyone; these remain without knowing us, as true usurpers of our goods, as disloyal and ungrateful children, degenerates of their Father; and since they don’t know us, nor love us, we don’t find the place in them where to put our sanctity, our love; their souls are incapable of receiving our always growing beauty; they give us nothing, not even the rights of Creator; and while they live together in our divine sea, they remain as far away from us; with not knowing us, they have put (up) the bars, they have closed the doors and broken the communications between them and us.

“Knowledge is the first ring of conjunction between them and us; it is the wanting to live in our Volition that removes the bars and opens all the doors, in order to let them come into our arms and to delight themselves with us; it is loving us that makes us pour out in torrents our love, our graces, even to cover them with our divine qualities; if there is no knowledge, we can give nothing, nor they receive.

“Instead one who lives in our Volition knows us; as she enters into him, thus she gives her kiss to her Father, she embraces him, she puts around us her little love, and we give her our seas of love; she kisses with all heaven; we can say that the feasts are opened between her and us between heaven and earth. We ourselves call her blessed, and we say to her: ‘You are the most happy and fortunate creature, because you live in our Volition, you live and know us, you live and love us, and we hold you hidden in our love, covered by our arms, beneath the rain of our graces.’”

July 6, 1938

How in the Divine Volition everything triumphs; joys and conquests. The office of mother of the Divine Volition. Example of the sea one who lives in him.

I am between the arms of the Divine Volition, and I can say that every day I make my day his sea; all that which he has done, as much in the creation as in the redemption, they meet me and say to me: “We are already yours; look with how much love your Creator gifts you with us; and put your little love in us, so that the creative love, you love in the created love, and the created love you love in the creative love, and both remain victorious.”

But while I followed the acts of the Divine Volition, I wanted to suddenly take heaven, to enclose myself in the celestial region in order to go out of it no more. Oh, how the exile weighs on me! If the divine Fiat might not have made his rivulets of joys and celestial happiness flow, I don’t know how I would have borne it! And I felt embittered. And my beloved Jesus, who watches over me in everything, and doesn’t want that I occupy myself with other than living in his Volition, compassionating me and reproaching me sweetly, said to me:

“My good daughter, why do you embitter yourself? In my Will bitternesses sound badly, because he is source of all sweetnesses, of triumphs and of conquests, and if creatures are embittered it is because they don’t live in him, and their will tyrannizes them and they suffer bitterness, and remain defeated.

“Therefore courage, my daughter; you should know that, as the creature lives in my Will, she feels the need of her celestial country, already she feels possessor of it, and depriving herself of the celestial glory for my love, in every act that she does I feel re-give into me myself by her, she gives me all heaven, and the sea of joys and happiness that there are in the celestial regions. Hence don’t you want to give this contentment to your Jesus? And then, if I don’t finish forming in you the Kingdom of my Volition, how can I transmit it into the others? Therefore, leave me to do it.”

After this he added: “My daughter, so much is my love toward one who lives in my Volition, that I do, as a mama, that might have her child crippled and that might hold (the) power to give to her child the rarest beauty; the mother extends herself over him, warms him with her heat, and by way of kisses and embraces re-gives to the child the use of (his) members, makes him beautiful; and watching him she feels happy, as fruit of her maternal love; but the mama doesn’t hold this power, and therefore she will be always unhappy with her child.

“But that which the Mother doesn’t hold (the power of) I myself hold it; my love is so much that, as one enters into my Will, I extend myself over her I warm her with my love in order to call her to new life, I kiss her, re-kiss her, I tie her to my heart in order to remove from her whatever evil that might be able to overshadow her and re-move (in) her the freshness and divine beauty; then I blow (on) her, I send my regenerative breath to her in order to generate her to new life and to give back to her the rarest beauty. I am not yet content, I form the throne of all my works and put there upon it my Volition as king on his throne, reigning and dominant in this creature; I can say: ‘What else could I do and didn’t I do? Could I maybe love you more and have I not loved you?’

“You should know that my love arrives to excess; as the creature does her acts in my Volition, I recall in that act all our acts that we have done, possible and imaginable, even my own generation of the Word, which proceeded the Holy Spirit, all creation, my incarnation in time; I enclose everything, everything in that act, in order to be able to say,: ‘It is our act, (a) complete act’; nothing should be missing; and the creature should be able to say to us: ‘In your Will everything is mine, and I can give you everything, even yourselves.’ Hence the glory, our love, echoes in all our works, and assembling everything, re-flows even into our divine bosom. Oh, how sweet it is to hear resound in all things, ‘Glory, love to our Creator!’ But who has given us the occasion of receiving so much of our glory? One who lives in our Volition.’

After then he added: “My daughter, as the creature calls my Will into her acts, into her prayer, he repeats that act together and prays together with the creature, and since with his immensity he finds himself everywhere, the creation, the sun, the sky, the angels, the saints, they feel in themselves the strength of the creative prayer, and everyone prays; the prodigies of this prayer is omnipotent, it involves everyone, it gives itself to everyone; only one, ungrateful, who doesn’t want to receive it, remains without (it’s) effects. So that my Will possesses pregnant virtue; and oh, how beautiful it is to see him pray in his divine way, and with his creative virtue that imposes itself on everyone and makes everyone pray! This prayer imposes itself on our divine attributes, and makes pour out rains of mercy, of grace, of pardon and of love; it is enough to say that it is our prayer, in order to say,: ‘It can give everything.’

“Now you should know that the creature, either she does, or she doesn’t do our Will, either she lives or she doesn’t live in him, already she is in his immensity; indeed, he is life of her life, he is act of her acts, and assists her continually with his creative and conservative act; however one who lives in him feels his life, his power, his sanctity, and how much he loves her.

“It happens for her as with the fish that is in the sea and that knows it: she feels this divine sea that makes (a) bed (for) her, carries her in the arms of it’s celestial waters, feeds her, lets her walk in it’s sea, recreates/(amuses) her, embellishes her, and if she wants to sleep, forms for her the bed in the depths of it’s sea in order to have that no one waken her, indeed sleeps together (with her). So much is my Will’s love toward one with whom is in his sea and knows that she is there within, that he does for her all the arts that she wants to do, and if she wants to think he thinks in her, if she wants to look he looks in her eyes, if she wants to speak he speaks and holds her in continuous communication and tells her so many of our marvels of our eternal love, if she wants to work he works, if she wants to walk he walks, if she wants to love he loves. My Fiat always holds that we do with her, and she not only recognizes him, but she doesn’t leave him ever alone, she sinks more in his sea, because she knows that if she goes out she loses (her) life. It would happen as with the fish that if it goes out from the sea it loses (it’s) life. These creatures that live in our Volition are our celestial dwellers and with their love, they delight themselves in forming the waves in our sea, in order to recreate/(amuse) us and felicitate us.

“Instead one who is in the immensity of our sea, and doesn’t know us, feels nothing of all this; they don’t feel our paternal solicitude that presses her to (our) bosom, they live in our sea as if they might not live; they are very unhappy, as if they were not our children; they live as estranged, and not being known, we are constrained by their ingratitude to not even tell them a word and to retain repressed in our bosom the goods that we should give. And to see our children poor, dissimilar from us, only because they don't know us is a sorrow for us; and if we might give it would be as the Gospel says: 'Don't hand over pearls before the swines; not knowing them they would cover them with filth, and they would stamp them beneath (their) feet.'

"Therefore the knowledge makes one know where we are, with whom we are, what we can receive and what we should do. Hence one who doesn't know the truth is blinded: for how many goods one puts around him he doesn't see anything, and he is the vagabond of creation."

* * *

July 11, 1938

How true love (is) that which the one wants the other one wants (too). Every act of Divine Will is a way that is opened between heaven and earth. The breath/[fiato] of God in the creature.

I am always between the arms of the Divine Volition, and while I wrote I felt the weight of the great sacrifice of writing and offered it to my dear Jesus in order to obtain that the Divine Will might be known, wanted and loved by everyone. Oh, how I would like to put forth my life, in order to be able to make him known by everyone! And since I felt myself suffering, with difficulty I continued to write, and my sweet Jesus strengthening me said to me:

"My blessed daughter courage, I am with you, and so much is my satisfaction while you write, that every word that you write I give you a kiss, an embrace, a divine life of mine as a gift, and do you know why? I see copied in these writings our life of eternal love, the copy of our working Divine Will.

"And then our repressed love for well six thousand years, which is relieved, has its refreshments to our flames that it makes known how much he loves the creature, and loves her so much that he wants to give them his Will as life, and this because we can say on both parts: 'That which is mine is yours.' Then true love is content, when it can say: 'We love each other with equal love; that which I want she wants'; if there might be disparity of love, it would render unhappy the love of the one and the other, and if one might want a thing and the other another, the union, the love would cease.

"And since my love is true love, and knowing that the creature possesses love and finite will, I give her my love and infinite Will; thus we can say: 'We love each other with one love alone; we hold one Will alone.' If the one doesn't become will of the other, true love doesn't exist nor does it possess (the) source. Hence you should be content with the sacrifice that you make writing, knowing that it serves to the vent of my love repressed for so many centuries, and to the refreshment of my flames, that are so many that make me give into delirium. Therefore, we love each other with one love alone and we say together: 'That which you want I want.' Say: 'Jesus scatter my will in yours and give me yours in order to live.'"

Whence after that we declared on both parts, to live with one sole Volition, my beloved Jesus added with more tenderness:

"My good daughter, you must know that every act done in my Volition so much is its power that it opens a way to heaven for oneself and for the others that come afterwards. So that every act is a way that leads to heaven; these ways descend from heaven, they interweave the earth, they spread themselves everywhere and (to) whoever wants to enter, they make themselves sure ways and sure conductor that guide one even into the bosom of one's Creator. Do you see therefore what an act is in my Will? It is a way more than opened between heaven and earth.

“How beautiful is living in my Volition, not only is it a way, but as the soul is (about) to do her act, the divine breath descends into her act, and breathing forth fills all the creation with his omnipotent breath and everyone feels the refreshment, the love, the power of the creative breath that holds (the) power of enclosing everyone and everything, embalming with his divine and celestial air. My working Will, as much in ourselves, as in the creature, must work prodigies; but so many that it must be able to say: ‘I am a divine act, I can do everything.’ So that there is no honor greater that we can give her, nor do we receive glory that more glorifies us, felicitates us and renders us glorious and triumphant on the part of creatures, than to let our Will work in their act; we feel ourselves enclosed in her act, while left free, and to work in the human circle as we know how to work by God. To do this for us is an exuberant love, we love our act in which we see unfold our power and unreachable beauty; our sanctity, love and goodness that covers everyone; they kiss and embrace everyone, that they would like to transmute everyone and everything, into our divine dowries; how not to love an act so great? We love she who has called us and has lent us her act in order to let us do an act so great, and how not to love her who has served us as bearer in order to work so many of our wonders? What thing would we not give to her and who could deny her anything? It is enough to say to you that one who lives in our Volition everyone remains behind she is the first in sanctity, in beauty, in love, we feel our echo, our breath in hers, she doesn't pray, but takes that which she wants from our divine treasures. Hence take to heart to live in our Divine Volition.”

After this he added: “My daughter, our Will, circulates in all created things like blood in the veins; the primary act, the motion, the heat is always his, however if he finds a creature that recognizes him and lives in him, while he continues to circulate in everything, in this one he stops and forms his support in order to work his wonders, and while with power and immensity he doesn't leave anyone, with this (one) he opens his communications, because she will have ears in order to listen to him, intelligence in order to understand him, heart in order to receive him, and love him.

“In this he will make the deposit of his graces, of his finesses of love; the human will that lives in his will serve him as space where to continue his working act; he will form his center, his divine room and his outlet of continuous love; and as she will do her acts in my Volition thus is she reborn in God and God in her; and these rebirths make re-arise new horizons, more beautiful skies, suns more radiant, new divine knowledges. Every act more that she does in my Volition we feel ourselves more transported to make ourselves recognized, we feel more confidence to entrust ourselves to her; because our Will being in her, will know how to guard with jealousy that which we say and give to her; and therefore in every rebirth she will be reborn to new love, to new sanctity, to new beauty.

“Hence, watching her in the delirium of our love we say to her: ‘Our Volition, makes you always more beautiful, more holy, and how much more you are in him so much more you grow and are reborn in our divine being.’ Every act more that you do our Will imposes himself to make you give of ours, to tell you new secrets to make you new discoveries of our love; if we didn't always give to this creature we would feel ourselves missing the motion to our divine life, that which can not be; and she can not even be if she doesn't receive, she would feel herself missing the food of love, the tenderness of her Celestial Father. Therefore be attentive and recognize that you are carried in the arms of the divine paternity."

* * *

July 18, 1938

How beautiful it is to see the creature in the Divine Will. How created things wait for her in order to love their Creator. The exuberant love of God for one who lives in him.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues; his power and immensity feel as the need of the company of his beloved creature in order to carry her everywhere he is found and as found, his works, detain her in order to tell her the different story that every single work of his possesses and the diversity of love with which they are animated and so much is he delighted in making known the source the specialty of his works, that not only does he make a gift of his works to one who listens, but he celebrates together (with) his works. Now while my mind was surprised, enchanted, my always amiable Jesus surprising me said to me:

"My blessed daughter; there is no enchantment more beautiful, that pleases our supreme being, than to see the creature enter into our Will; she, as she enters, takes us as in (her) arms and redresses herself inside and outside with our divine being, and we in order to repay her take her into ours in order to enjoy her; and oh, how beautiful it is to see her little but beautiful, little and powerful, little and wise, little and strong so much so as to be able to carry her Creator! There is nothing (in) which she doesn't resemble us.

"So that only the entering into our Volition she acquires and redresses herself with our divine qualities, with right given by us; master over everything, she gives herself to everyone, she loves everyone and wants to be loved by everyone, and she wants everyone to love us. To see a creature that wants that everyone love us is our most pure joy, most beautiful, most great; we truly feel our echo that we want that everyone love us and we love everyone; and if many don't love us we feel offended and robbed the rights of Creator, of Father who greatly loves his children. So that we feel ourselves portrayed by this creature, we find in her our own follies of love, how not to love her? Therefore to her our first kiss, the holds of our embraces; the stratagems of love that we do for her are unheard of, and how much more we love her more we want to love her."

Jesus became silent, and then added:

"My daughter, all created things await you, but do you know why? Because they feel with you, in virtue of my Fiat by which all are animated, the union, the inseparability with you, and since to the creature is given supremacy over everything they await you in the midst of them, so that together with her you glorify us, love us, according to the office that each one holds to give us.

"Every created thing possesses the fullness of true good; the sun possesses the fullness of the light and every act of light that it emits, every effect and good that springs forth from its bosom of light is a continuous little sonnet of glory, of love that it gives us; but it doesn't want to give us (that) alone, it wants her together for which it has been created. And then we remain truly loved and glorified, when the creature animated by our Will, flows in that act of light, and loves us and glorifies us with love and glory of light; we feel our purpose, the cause for which we created the light; we find the creature hidden in that light that loves us with the fullness of the light and the heat; we find in her love that wounds us, love that sweetens us, love that always says love. Hence we gave to the creature into her power a sun that might love us. If we don't find her in created things, we are not content; they are rendered as instruments without sound and without life; at most we love and glorify ourselves, but it is not the creature that loves us and glorifies us; our purpose remains (a) failure.

"The wind awaits you, so that your voice flows in its moans, in order to feel your groaning love toward their Creator; oh, how honored it feels, when comes in the impetuositities of the wind your impetuous love almost ruling toward he who has created it, his billows, his breaths invested by your I love you! And while we feel breath of love from you, we breathe (in) you with love, in order to be more loved. The air awaits you that everyone breathes, so that it remains animated with your voice; and in every breath that they receive, they receive the I love you of their Creator and each breath that they emit races your I love you in order to carry us in your womb, all the lives, breaths changed into so many voices of love. Everyone awaits you in order to receive the new life of love of which the soul is bearer who lives in my Volition. Also the saints, the angels, the Queen of Heaven herself, awaits you in order to receive the freshness, the joy of the working love of the creature, that although she lives on the earth, but she lives with that same Volition (with) which they live; in order to be as watered with the love of this happy creature. They feel the new love with which my Volition has filled her, that investing everyone, they feel the joy of the conquering love of which she is bearer.

"What order, what harmony, my daughter, it puts one who lives in my Will between heaven and earth! All her acts, motions and thoughts are changed into voices, into sounds, into harmonies, that investing all created things, say by everyone that they love us, and while we remain loved, together with us everyone remains loved anew. All heaven remains enraptured from it in seeing the wonders, the sweet enchantment of one who lives in our divine Fiat.

"Now you should know that my love is not content, if I don't make and give new surprises of love to one who lives in my Volition, if I don't add (on) new things to make them known. Do you feel, my daughter, when I have loved you: my Celestial Father generated me, and I loved him; in that love I also loved you, because my Will carried you always present. I generate continually and in the enthusiasm of our love of Father and Son proceeded the Holy Spirit; in that enthusiasm I also loved you with continuous love. I created the entire creation, and each thing that I created first I loved you and then I created it and I extended it to your service. Also in the love between me and my Celestial Mamma, I loved you; and oh, how much I loved you in my incarnation in her virginal bosom! I loved you in every breath, in every motion, in every tear; my Will made you present, so that I might love you and you might receive as my gift(,) my breath, my tears, my motion; my love arrived to so much for the one who should live in my Volition, that also [when] I made graces to my saints, and I loved them, in that love she became enclosed.

"I can say I have always loved you, I have loved you in everyone and in everything, I have loved you in all times, in every place, I have loved you anywhere and everywhere.

"Oh, if everyone might know what it means to live in my Volition, the seas of love and of graces by which they are inundated! A God that loves with always new love. How in our divine being we can hold our divine and predominant passion, that the creature live in our Volition, thus it would become their predominant passion, and at whatever cost they would put forth (their) life in order to live in that Fiat that loves them so much.”

* * *

July 24, 1938

Difference that passes between the Divine Will and love. How one who lives in the Divine Volition receives the deposit of the love of all the created things and forms the knoll to the acts of Our Lord. Call to everyone.

I feel invested by the Fiat, it seems to me that he calls me in all created things, in order to give me his love and so to be able to love him more; but I thought to myself: “What difference passes between love and the Divine Will?” And my adorable Jesus, repeating his brief little visit with me, said to me:

“Daughter of my Will, my Will is life, my love is food; life can not be without food and if the food might exist without life that takes it, it would be rendered useless, and useless things God doesn’t know how to do. Life makes the food arise, so that the one and the other render themselves necessary; life can not form itself nor grow nor develop its great works without feeding itself, the food would remain without works, without giving of itself in marvelous things if it might not have a life that receives it.

“Beyond this my Will is light, love is heat; inseparable between themselves, light can not be without heat, nor heat without light; it seems that they are twins born from one birth, but however the first one to be born is the light and then arises the heat, so that the heat is child of the light; thus my Will holds his act first, love is his favorite daughter, his inseparable first-born; if my Will, doesn’t want it, she does not move(,) she doesn’t want to work, love remains hidden inside of her Mama, without doing anything, instead if my Will wants to work, she races, flies, is all eyes, motion, work and steps, without ever tiring.

“So also in the creature if she lets herself move by Will she will hold true love, she will be firm, constant and unshakable in good, if then she won’t be animated by him, her love will be a painted love, without life, inconstant; poor love where there is not the life of my Will; the good, the works that she will do will be exposed to the cold, to the nighttime hoarfrosts, to the scorching sun, that holds (the) virtue of burning and of drying out the most beautiful works! Do you see therefore, daughter, the difference between my Will and love? The daughter can not be born without the mother. Therefore take to heart, to possess his life, if you don’t want to be sterile in good, without generation to be able to populate heaven and earth.”

After this he added: “My blessed daughter, living in my Divine Will, puts everything in order, and makes known the good that all created things possess, the love with which they are invested, and they pour themselves upon the creature, in order to have her love with each distinct love that every created thing possesses. So that we find, in one who lives in our divine Fiat, the love with which we created and we extended the sky, and the multiplicity of our distinct love, with which we punctuated it with stars; each star is a distinct love and we see it sealed in the creature, whom loving us with so much diversity of love for how many stars there are, we feel our immense and infinite love crowned with the crown of the love of the creature!

“Oh, how we remain content in finding in her his love that crowns ours! And in order to repay her we double our love in her in order to make her love us more, so that you exceed the sky with all its stars to love us.

“We find in her, the love, with which we created the sun; the sun is one, but the multiplicity of the effects (and) goods that it produces are innumerable; each effect is a distinct love, it can be a kiss, a caress of light that gives the Creator to his creature, an embrace of love, so many acts of life that we make rise from inside those effects that they can be called food with which creatures live; and we find in one who lives in our Volition, the love and multiplicity of the effects with which we created the sun; and oh, how we feel ourselves return the love, the kisses, the embraces, the multiplicity of the effects of love that the light possesses! And we feel ourselves crown our inaccessible light with the crown of light of her love.

“What doesn’t our Will let us find in one who lives in him? He lets us find the love with which we created the wind, the air, the sea, the little flower of the field, everyone and everything, and he regives us this love, rather he doubles it (for) us, and we double the love with which we created all the created things; our love makes festive it feels beloved, repaid, and prepares new surprises of love and forms the working creation in the creature. This love binds everything, heaven and earth, it flows everywhere and forms itself as cement, in order to reunite the inseparability that the lack of love has produced between God and creatures.

“Now, so much is my love for one who lives in my Divine Volition that that which I do, I have to do to her; I give the right to her over my acts as if they might be hers, and I remain with anxiety waiting that she takes my steps in order to have her walk, my hands in order to have her work, my voice in order to have her speak; so much so that if sometimes she omits making use of me, my love reproaches her sweetly and with inexpressible tenderness I say to her:

‘Today you have not had me walk, my steps remained waiting for you in order to walk in you and you have made them stop for me; my works today are suspended because you have not given me the space to work in your hands; I have always been in silence because you have not had me speak in your voice. You see, also my tears I hold them on my face, because you have not removed them from me in order to make use of them for you, in order to wash yourself, in order to refresh yourself in my love, and even to make of them a bath for who offends me, and still I feel (a) wet face from weeping. My sufferings are days without the kisses, the sweetenings of one who loves me, and I feel more embittered by them. Therefore take all of me do not leave anything of me, let me lean/rest my being with all my acts upon you and upon all your acts, and thus I will call you my knoll, my shelter; I will put in you, in the bank of my Will that reigns in you, all that which I did and suffered being on earth, I will multiply it, I will centuplicate it, I will make it continually re-arise to new life, so that you take for yourself that which you want and you will give me to everyone so that everyone knows me and loves me.’

“Indeed you should know that as the creature enters into my Will in order to do her acts she calls the appeal to all created things, to the saints and angels, so that everyone becomes enclosed in that act. And oh, how beautiful it is to feel in that act that everyone loves me, everyone recognizes me and adores me, everyone does the same thing! My Will calls everyone, imposes himself over everyone, and everyone remains felicitated, honored to be enclosed in that act done in the Divine Volition, in order to love with new love and with the love of everyone he who loves them so much.”

* * *

July 30, 1938

How in heaven there are innumerable offices/(mansions), every blessed will hold a God to himself as his. How Jesus loved us in all created things. Spontaneity of Jesus in the sufferings.

My poor mind is thickly invested by the enthusiasm of love of the Divine Volition; his wonders are always surprising, one more beautiful than the other; and my amiable Jesus surprising me with its brief little visit, with a love that enraptured my little soul, said to me:

“My little daughter of my Will the prodigies, the wonders, the enchanting scenes that I unfold in one who lives in my Volition are manifold, and so very beautiful and enchanting that to no one is it given to imitate them.

“You must know that in heaven there are innumerable offices/(mansions), but those prepared to the souls that have lived in my Volition on earth will be the most beautiful and distinct from the others; they will possess harmonies and divine scenes, enchanting, joys always new that will rise from the depth of my Will in which they have lived; they will hold in their power joys and happiness always new; in their power how much they will want of it so much will they form of it; because my Fiat holds (the) virtue of creating always new joys; these offices/(mansions) will be the new enchantment of that celestial sojourn.

“Now I want to tell you another surprise more beautiful yet. In heaven every blessed will have me inside of himself as his Creator, King, Father and glorifier; he will have me outside of himself, truly next to him, in a way as to feel himself carried in my arms; we will love together, we will felicitate ourselves together; I won’t be one God for everyone, but a God for each one; rather I will keep myself bilocated inside and outside of him; I will possess him inside and outside of me and they will possess me inside and outside as if I might be for each one alone. One God for everyone would not be full happiness; some would be near some far, some to the right, some to left, hence some would enjoy my caresses some not, some would feel more loved and felicitated by my near presence, and some not. Instead with each one having me to himself, inside and outside, we will never lose sight of each other; we will enjoy close love, not from afar; how much we would have loved and known each other on earth, more we will love each other in heaven.

“And then that which I will give to one who has lived in my Volition on earth, it will be so very great that all the blessed will enjoy double happiness. It is true that there from where I have my throne seas of joys spring forth to enlarge the whole celestial country, but my love is not content, if I don’t bilocate myself and descend to be to you for you/(face to face), one on one with my beloved creature, in order to love each other more and to enjoy ourselves together with her; and then, how to be able to be far from one who lives in my Volition? If between her and us is formed the inseparability of

Will and of love, how to be able to be even one single step away, if one alone is the love with which we love each other, and one the Will with which we work?

“Indeed, you should know, that one who lives in our Volition is inseparable with everyone even with the created things themselves; as she does her act in him she calls and embraces everyone, she encloses everyone in her act, she imposes herself over everyone in order to do that which she does. Therefore in one act done in my Volition I receive everything, even my own creation, in order to love me and to glorify me.”

After this he added: “My daughter, I do as a king that holds many queens that love with a love that one can not be without the other. This king forms so many sumptuous palaces, there he puts music inside, the most delightful scenes in order to make his queen happy and him together with her; then I bilocate myself for each one in way that all possess me and I am felicitated by my possession. The king can not bilocate himself in order to make his queens happy and he must be content to be now with one now with the other, and this already makes their love unhappy, and they are tyrannized by a broken love and not enjoyed forever. And if I might not hold (the) virtue of giving myself to each one as if I were only for her, leaving the creature even one instant alone without me my love would make me unhappy. Instead I am king that always courts my queens and they court me; if this were not so the fullness of happiness would be missing in the celestial sojourn.”

Whence I continued my round, in the divine Fiat, and detained myself at that which Jesus did being upon the earth, and my sweet Jesus added: “My daughter, for one who lives in my Volition and loves me, the silence weighs (on) me, my love always wants to say and reveal where it arrives, and in how many ways it loves her. Now, you must know that I being upon the earth, there was nothing that I did (in) which I didn’t search my beloved creatures, I kissed them to me, I pressed them to my Heart, I watched them with paternal tenderness. So that if I met with the sun I found in its light my beloved creatures, because having created it for them, with right they rule in its light, one can not say to you master of a good, if one doesn’t possess it and is there inside.

“Hence I found in the sun my creatures, I kissed them to me, I embraced and pressed them to my Heart, and since I also held them inside of me, I kissed them outside and inside of me, pressing them so very strongly to unite them to my own life. If I met in the wind I raced to kiss it; if I drank water, also in it I found them; and oh, with how much love I watched them kissed them, also in the air that I breathed! I met them (in) everything, I felt their breath and in every breath were kisses of love with which I sealed them. Therefore, in every created thing, in the starry sky, in the sea, in the plants, in the flowers, in everything I met with my beloved creatures in order to double my love in them, in order to make for them (a) feast, in order to re-embrace them and to say to them: ‘Your unhappiness is finished, because I have come from heaven to earth in order to make you happy; it is I that have taken your unhappiness upon myself; you can be sure. And then a God that loves you will be your fortune, your defense, your powerful help!’

“And then the most beautiful characteristic of my love, (is) spontaneity, so much so that in the same sufferings that they gave me in the passion; first I formed them myself in myself, I loved them, I covered them with kisses and then I passed them into the minds of the creatures so that they might make me suffer in my humanity. There was no suffering, that creatures might give me that was not wanted first by me, in secondary order the creatures came, therefore my sufferings were drenched by my love, covered by my ardent kisses and possess the creative virtue to make re-arise souls to love me.

“True love is seen by the spontaneity, a forced love can not be said (to be) true love, it loses the freshness, the beauty, the purity; and oh, how they become unhappy in the sacrifices, inconstant! And while, it seems that they love; and since it is forced, or from necessity or from persons that they can not free themselves (from), they feel unhappy and embittered; a forced love makes poor creatures slaves. Instead, my love was free, wanted by me, nor did I have need of anyone, I loved, I sacrificed myself, even to give (up my) life, because I want and I love. Therefore, when I see in the soul a spontaneous love, it enraptures me and I say: ‘My love and yours gives the hand to each other, hence we can love each other with one love alone.’”

After this he added: “My daughter, one who lives in my Will, becomes guarded in my divine room, possesses all our goods; the strength and the light are in her power. Instead one who does my Will forms the way in order to arrive to enter into him. Now, on the way there are perils, she must be exposed to the heat and the cold, she won’t find water ready in order to drink, good foods in order to feed herself, bed in order to rest, one can say, she will be a poor wayfarer that never arrives to her residence. What difference between one who lives in my Volition and between one who does my Will, but it is necessary however to form the way, that is to live resigned, to do my Will in all the circumstances of life, in order to arrive to be able to live in my Volition; where she will find his divine room, the center of her rest, the exile changed in homeland.”

* * *

August 6, 1938

Exchanges of life between the Divine and human Will. Victory of Jesus. There is no greater offence than to remove oneself from the Divine Will. The speaking creation. The divine heartbeat and breath. Necessity of God to speak to the creature.

I feel the need of giving myself continually to the Divine Will, I am the little baby that seeks the bosom of my mother in order to shelter myself in her, in order to be secure, and all abandoned in his arms. But while I thought this my beloved Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

My little daughter of my Volition, you seek your refuge in me and I seek my refuge in you, in order to enjoy my creature and to rest myself in her, so that her love keeps me defended from all the offenses of creatures. You must know, that every time that the creature enters into my Will in order to do her acts, so many times I give her my divine life, and so many times she gives me her human life. So that she remains equipped with so many divine lives for how many acts she has done in my Will, and I remain honored and glorified surrounded with so many human lives; because an act in my Will must be complete, I give everything of myself, I don’t reserve for myself anything of my supreme being, and she gives everything to me of her human being.

“Therefore what is not the good that the creature receives with possessing so many of my divine lives? And as she goes repeating her acts, so many of my lives are added and I give (the) virtue of freeing her life in order to be able to say: ‘How many of my lives I have given her, so many she has given me.' I can say that then I found all my contentment, when I see given me in every instant the life of her, in order to be able to give it to her. Seeing the human will given to me, is my greatest triumph, and taken with love I sing my victory, victory that costs me my life, and the anticipation of around six thousand years, in which I have longed with so many anxieties and bitter and ardent sighs the return of the human will in mine; whence having obtained it I feel the need of resting and of singing victory.

“Therefore there is no joy more beautiful that she can give me than to live in him, nor can there be greater sorrow that she can give me than to remove herself from my Will, because I feel offended in all created things; because anywhere and everywhere one finds my Volition, and I feel the offense arrive in the sun, in the wind, in the sky even inside my bosom. To see converted the great gift of the human will, that I gave to the creature that she should use it for (an) exchange of love and of life between me and her, into (a) deadly weapon in order to offend me, what sorrow! Now, one who comes to live in him makes this sorrow so raw disappear, how should I not I give all myself into her power and give her that which she wants?”

Then he added: “So much is my love toward one who lives in my Fiat, that as the creature feels the need to breathe, to feed herself, to move, thus I feel the need of forming a single life with her; because my Will, since he lives in her, he makes it for me my breath, my heartbeat, my motion, my food. You see, therefore, how necessary it is to me her permanent union with me and inside of me, otherwise I would feel myself missing the breath, the motion, the heartbeat and the food of my love from all the creation. Oh, how badly I would feel! Because one who lives in my Volition and inside of our supreme being is the creation speaking, moving and throbbing, that in the name of all created things brings us the food of love that all should give us. We can say that our love feeds all created things, therefore we feel the need of receiving the exchange of love in order (for) us not to remain fasting, and only one who lives in our Volition who embraces everything, loves us in everything, can re-give us the exchange of feeding us with her love.

“How beautiful it is to see the creature gather from all creation our scattered love, and also our love that has not been taken by human ingratitude and she brings it to us in order to give us the food of love in the name of everyone and of everything, she forms the enchantment of all heaven and we call her our welcome one, the bearer of all our works, the exchange of our love in which we can repeat our wonders.”

Then with an affection more tender he added: “My daughter, so much is our love for one who lives in our divine Fiat, that the mama can be, it seems more easy to divide herself from her daughter, we can not do it because our Will is united to her, transforms her into us, makes her want that which we want and do that which we do. As he enters into her, thus he transports her everywhere, gives her the place in all created things, in order to hold her anywhere and everywhere, always together in harmony with him, and says to her in how many ways he has loved her. To be without her seems impossible to us, we should (have to) separate ourselves from our Will in order to do it, but even we can not do this.

“Hence I give her the place in the starry sky, and oh, how beautiful it is, to hold her together with me in that azure vault, in that interminable extension of the sky that one can not see where it ends! And

I tell her the story of our eternal love that doesn't have (a) beginning nor can it have (an) end, nor can it undergo mutation; and since our love never stops, we take the creature from all sides, from above, from beneath, from right, from left, in order to bombard her with our love. And as the sky hides and covers all the inner world beneath its vault bombarded with stars in order to hold them defended and covered, thus our immutable love, more than sky, holds covered and hidden everyone in the sky of our love. We feel the need to say to the creature how much and in how many ways we love her, to love her and not to make her know how much we love her (is impossible); and in order to make us love, she forms the refreshment of our love, and loving us, although she is little, we feel ourselves re-give a sky of love, and with her repeated acts of love, we feel as bombarded by so many stars that rain on us: 'Love, love, love.'

"You see therefore, (the) necessity to our Heart to give her the place in every created thing; in order to tell her the distinct story of love that every created thing contains, I give her the place in the sun; and oh, how many things I say to her of our supreme being! Our inaccessible light that invests everything with its ardent love, that invests and hide itself in every fiber of the heart, in every thought and word; with my light I embalm, purify, embellish and there form with my light more than sun my life of love in the creature, and she feels my light and by way of light she wants to enter into the most intimate hideaways of our supreme being, in order to love us and to be loved.

"How beautiful it is to find one who loves us, our love finds its refuge, its rest, its outlet, its exchange. Therefore everywhere we give her the place, because in every created thing we hold to tell her a secret of love of ours; how many things we hold still to say, and if the creature doesn't live in our Volition, she won't understand us and she will constrain us to silence.

"Now, you must know, that as the creature does her acts in my Will, so many suns arise; and since one act in my Will is so much that it can not remain without doing good to everyone, these suns, as they arise, thus they race in the midst of the people and carry to some the kiss of light, to some strength, to some they put in flight the darkness, to some they pave the way, to some with (a) strong voice of light they recall (them) into good, an act in my Will can not remain without producing great goods. As the sun that rises in the horizon with its light in order to make itself light of every eye, it races and matures the plants, colors the flowers, purifies the air, gives itself to everyone; one can say, it renews and reinvigorates the earth, and forms its joy and its feast. So that if the sun might not rise, the earth would be dressed in mourning and would burst into weeping.

"More than sun is an act in my Will, its light races and does good to everyone, it renews and reinvigorates everyone in its light, minus some who might not want to receive it. And although they might not want to receive it, they are constrained to receive the good of its light, as one who might not want to receive the light of the sun, he is constrained by the empire of the light to feel its heat; such is the empire of an act in my Fiat, it can not be if it doesn't work prodigies of graces and of incalculable goods. Therefore one who lives in our Volition does everything, embraces everyone and gives us everything, if we want to love she gives us love, if we want glory she gives us glory, if we want to speak we hold one who listens to us, and if we want to do great works we hold one in whom to do them and who will render us the exchange. Behold therefore in our Volition I want you always, never to go out of him."

* * *

August 12, 1938

When the creature enters into the Divine Volition, heaven abases itself and the earth elevates itself in order to give each other the kiss of peace. Love of God in manifesting the truth. How all things become life. How all created things are members of Jesus. Diversity of love.

The Divine Volition is always around me, that wants to invest my acts with his light in order to unfold his life there; it seems to me that he is so very at attention that he arrives to persecute me with love and with light, because he wants that in all that which I do he might enclose his life. Oh, how happy I feel in feeling myself persecuted with love and with light by the Supreme Fiat! And my sweet Jesus, surprising me, said to me:

“My daughter, see to what (an) excessive point my love arrives, that it wants the creature to live in my Volition, that I arrive to persecute her with love and with light. The light eclipses (in) her all the evils, in (a) way that seeing only my Will, she abandons herself in him and lets us do that which we want; the love allures her, felicitates her and makes her conquered by us.

“You must know that as the creature enters into our Volition in order to form her act, heaven abases itself and the earth elevates itself, and they meet together; what happy meeting! Heaven feeling itself transported on earth by the creative strength of the divine Fiat, they kiss the earth, that is the human generations and at whatever cost they want to give to them that which they possess, in order to content the Divine Volition that has transported it on earth, because he wants to reign in everyone; the earth, feeling itself elevated to heaven, they feel an unknown strength that drags them to good, a celestial air that imposes itself upon them, that makes them breathe a new life.

“An act in my Will gives of the incredible, these acts will form the new day, the human generations will feel themselves renewed, rejuvenated in good through means of them; they will form the disposition in order to dispose them to receive his life, in order to let him reign. These acts of creatures done in my Volition will be the outfit/wealth, the powerful preparations, the most effective means, in order to obtain such a good.”

After then he added: “My daughter, our love gives of the incredible! When we must manifest a truth that regards our Will, first we love it in ourselves, we facilitate it, we adapt it to the human intelligence, so that the creature succeeds easily to understand it and to make it real life; we outfit it with our love, and then we make it known as suitor of love that wants to give itself to them, as life that feels the need that wants to form itself in them. But this doesn’t satisfy, we purify the human intelligence, we invest it with our light, we renew it, so that it knows our truth, she kisses it, she encloses it in herself and gives it all liberty to form its life, in order to remain transformed in the truth itself.

“Therefore every truth of ours carries our divine life in the creature, suitor, that loves and wants to be loved, and our love is so much that we adapt ourselves to human conditions in order to facilitate the knowledge, so that if we know each other it is easy to conquer the human will in order to make it ours and she will have (an) interest (in) possessing her God. Without knowledge the ways are closed, the communications broken and we remain as the God distant from the creature, while we are inside and outside of them, and they remain distant from us, no one can possess a good if they don't know it.

“Therefore we want to make known that one who lives in the Divine Will and works in him, everything becomes divine life in her. Possessing my Fiat, his creative virtue, all that which she does, if she thinks, if she speaks, if she works, if she walks, if she loves, he unfolds his life and thinks, speaks, works, walks and loves, he forms the working, speaking creation; the creature serves as to continue his creation indeed (in order) to do things more beautiful yet. Hence the creation didn't end, but continues still in the souls that live in our Volition, and if in the creation one sees the order, the beauty, the power of our work, in the creature one will see the love, the order, beauty, our creative virtue repeating our divine lives, for how many times she has lent us her acts in order to let us work.

“The creature is life she is not (a) work like the creation, therefore we feel an irresistible love of forming our lives in her. And oh, how we struggle, how content we are, as our love finds its rest and our Will his conclusion that is to form our life in her!

“Instead one who doesn't live in our Volition her works and steps are without life, as painted pictures that are not able neither to receive life, nor to give it, nor can they produce any good. Because they not are not able to nor can there be nor life, nor good, without my Will.”

Whence I was following my acts in the Divine Will and having made holy communion, my sweet Jesus said to me:

“How beautiful it is when I descend into the sacramental hearts and I find them in my Will, I find everything in him, I find my Queen Mother and I feel re-given the glory as if anew I became incarnate, I find all my works that surround me, they honor me, they love me; and since my Will circulates as blood and beats in all created things, therefore they are united with me as members that part from me, and remain in me; so that all that which I did on earth, and all created things, some (act) as arms for me, some as feet, some as heart, some as mouth and they love me and glorify me in (an) infinite way.

“The creature with living in my Volition everything is hers as it is mine, and she can give me my living humanity in order to love me, in order to keep me protected and defended from everything. She can give me the love that I had in creating the sun; how much specialty of love doesn't that light contain! She is stuffed with so many various and innumerable effects of sweetness, of colors, of perfumes; in every effect there is a distinct love of mine and you can see from the various sweetnesses (one) is not like the other; my love is insuperable, that I am not content to let man taste a single sweetness of my love, to allure him with only one color, with only one perfume, it puts forth (from) us so many different ones in order to drown her and to feed her with my love; so that my first food was my love, the other things came in (the) second order.

“Hence, the sun, that does so much good to the earth, with its light extends itself beneath the steps of man, fills their eyes with light, invests him everywhere, goes after him where he goes; it is my love that races in its light, that loving him lets himself (be) stamped on by his steps, my love fills their eyes with light, invests him everywhere, follows him everywhere and in that light there are my innumerable stretches of love; there is my love that languishes, that wounds, that enraptures; there is my love that burns, that sweetens everything, that re-gives life to everything, there is my love that takes from all sides the creature and carries her as in (his) arms. Look, my daughter, the light, and you yourself can not number the so many varieties of my love, and if you will live in my Will, the sun will be yours, your member and you can give me so many diversities of love, for how much of it I have given you.

“All created things are my members; the sky and every star is a distinct love of mine toward the creature, the wind as my member does none other than as it blows, thus it blows my distinct love, and therefore now it blows to her the freshness of my love, now the caress with my love, now it blows to her with my impetuous love, now with its puff it carries the refreshments of my love to her. Also the sea, the drops of water press themselves among themselves in order to never cease murmuring (the) diversity of love with which I love creatures; also in the air that they breathe I send them in every breath my distinct I love you.

“Therefore descending sacramentally I carry together with me the created things as my members; with the enchanting scenes of so much variety and multiplicity my love is as an army (that) I put inside of the creature in order to love her and to make her love me. How hard, (and) sorrowful it is to love and not to be loved. Therefore live always in my Will and he will put you to light (of) the so many ways with which I have loved you and you will love me as I want you to love me.”

* * *

August 15, 1938

The feast of the Assumption is the most beautiful feast, most sublime. The working feast of the Divine Will in the Celestial Queen.

While my mind swam in the sea of the Divine Volition, I stopped in the act in which my Queen Mama was assumed into heaven. How many wonders, how many surprises of love that enrapt ones mind. And my sweet Jesus, as if he felt the need to speak of his Celestial Mother, all festive, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, today the feast of the Assumption is the most beautiful feast, more sublime, more great, in which we remain more glorified, loved and honored. Heaven and earth are invested with an unusual joy never experienced, the angels and saints feel invested by seas of new joys and new happiness, and they extol with new hymns the Sovereign Queen, who in her empire reigns over everyone and gives joy to everyone. Today is the feast of feasts, and the only and new one, that is not repeated anymore. Today, the day of the Assumption becomes celebrated the first time the Divine Will worked in the Sovereign and Lady. The wonders are enchanting. In her every little act, even in her breath, in her motion one sees so many (of) our divine lives that flow as so many kings in her acts, that more than radiant suns they inundate her, surround her, embellish her, and make her so beautiful, that she forms the enchantment of the celestial regions. It seems little to you that her every breath, motion, work and suffering, were filled with so many (of) our divine lives? This is truly the great prodigy of the work of my Will in the creature, to form so many (of) our divine lives for how many times he had entrance into the motion, into the acts of the creature; and since my Fiat possesses the bilocative, and repetitive virtue without ever ceasing that which he does, hence the great Lady feels in herself multiplied these divine lives, which don't do other than to extend all the more his seas of love, of beauty, of power, of infinite wisdom.

“You must know that our divine lives are such and so many that she possesses that as she entered into heaven she populated the whole celestial region, that not being able to contain them they filled all the creation. So that there is no point where don’t flow her seas of love, of power and so many lives of ours of which she is the possessor and the Queen.

“We can say, she dominates us and we dominate her; and re-pouring herself into our immensity, power and love, she populated all our attributes with her acts and with the so many (of) our divine lives that she had conquered. So that from anywhere and everywhere we feel ourselves loved, glorified, inside and outside of ourselves, from within created things, in the most remote hideaways, by this celestial creature and by one who from our own divine lives that our Fiat has formed in her. Oh, power of our Volition, only you can make so many prodigies even to create so many (of) our lives in one who lets you dominate, in order to make us loved and glorified as we merit and want! Behold therefore she can give her God to everyone, because she possesses him, rather without losing any one of our divine lives, as she sees the creature disposed that wants to receive our life, thus she holds the virtue of reproducing from within our life that she possesses another (of) our divine life in order to give it to whom she wants.

“This Virgin Queen is a continuous prodigy, that which I did on earth she continues in heaven, because our Will when he works as much in the creature as in us, that act never finishes and while it remains in her, she can give it to everyone(,) the sun perhaps finishes to give its light because it has given so much to the human generations? Quite, while it has given so much it is always rich in its light, without losing not even one drop of light. Therefore the glory of this Queen is insuperable, because she holds in possession our working Will that holds (the) virtue of forming in the creature eternal and infinite acts; she always loves us, nor does she ever stop loving us with our lives that she possesses; she loves us with our love, she loves us anywhere and everywhere; her love fills heavens and earth and races to relieve itself in our divine bosom, and we love her so much that we don’t know how to remain without loving her; and while she loves us, she loves everyone, and makes us love everyone; who can resist not to make us give that which she wants? And then it is our own Volition that asks that which she wants, that with his eternal bonds she ties us everywhere and we can not deny her anything.

“Therefore the feast of the Assumption is the most beautiful because it is the feast of my working Will in this great Lady, that made her so rich and beautiful, that the heavens can not contain it; the angels themselves, feel mute, nor do they know how to speak of that which my Will does in the creature.”

After this, my mind remained astonished in thinking of the great prodigies that the divine Fiat worked and continues to work in the Celestial Queen, and my beloved Jesus added:

“My daughter, her beauty is unreachable, she enchants, fascinates, conquers, her love is so much, that it is offered to everyone, she loves everyone and (all) remain behind (her) seas of love, one can call her Queen of love, Victor of love, that she loved so much that by way of love she conquered her God.

“You must know that man with doing his Will broke the bonds with his Creator and with all the created things. This Celestial Queen, with the power of our Fiat that she possessed, bound her Creator with creatures, she bound all beings together, she united them, reordered them anew, and with her love she gave new life to the human generations. It was so much her love that she covered and hid in her love weaknesses, evils, sins and creatures themselves in her seas of love. Oh, if this holy Virgin, didn't possess so much love, it would prove difficult for us to watch the earth! But her love not only makes us watch, but we want to give our reigning Will in the midst of them, because she so wants it, she wants to give to her children that which she possesses, and by way of love she will conquer us and her children."

* * *

August 21, 1938

Difference that passes between the life that forms in the sacramental hosts and that which forms in one who lives in his Volition.

I am always en route in the Divine Volition and I felt worried, and I said to myself: How can it be that so many divine lives can be formed in us for how many acts we do in him? And my always amiable Jesus, always benign in order to make me understand all the more said to me:

"My daughter, to us everything is easy provided that we find that she lends the human will to live in ours; we delight even in the motion, in the breath, in the step to form new lives that move, that breathe, that walk, that speak; the human will lends us as so many veils, in which to form so many lives of ours. This is the last display of our love, and it pleases us so much that provided that the human will lends us its little veil, we populate all its acts, with the multiplicity of our divine lives.

"And then there is my eucharistic life, that gives proof of it and confirmation of that which I say to you, are they not perhaps little veils the accidents of the bread, in which I remain consecrated, I live and truly in soul and body(,) blood and divinity? And if there are a thousand hosts, a thousand lives of mine I form in every single host, if there is only one host, I form there only one life of mine. And then, what does the host give me? Nothing, not an I love you, nor a breath, nor a heartbeat, nor is a step of company, I am alone, and many times the solitude oppresses me, embitters me and I burst into weeping; how it weighs on me not having one to whom to say a word, I am under the nightmare of a profound silence. What does the host give me? The hideaway in order to hide me, the tiny prison in order to have (that) I would remain in order to speak, in order to make me unhappy. But since it is my Will that wants that I remain sacramentally in every host, he that is not ever bearer of unhappiness, neither to us, nor to the creatures that live in him, he makes flow in my sacramental life, our celestial joys that are inseparable from us, but always on our part; but the host never gives anything to me, it doesn't defend me, nor love me.

"Now if I do this in the host, that is form so many (of) my lives that give me nothing, much more so in one who lives in my Will. The difference between my sacramental lives, and the so many lives of mine that I form in one who lives in my Volition is incalculable; (there) passes more distance between the sky and the earth. First, we are not ever alone, and to have company is the greatest joy, that felicitates divine and human life.

"Now, you must know that as I form my life in the thought of the creature that lives in my Volition, I feel the company of the human intelligence that courts me, and loves me, understands me and gives me its memory, the intellect, the will in my power and since in these three powers was created our image, I feel our eternal memory given to me for company that doesn't forget anything, I feel the company of my wisdom that understands me, and then the company of the human will fused with mine, that loves me with my eternal love; how not to multiply in every thought of hers as many of our lives, when we find that she understands us and loves us more? We can say, we find our profit; because how much more life we form so much more we make ourselves understood, we give her double love and she loves us more; if we form our life in the word, we find the company of hers, and since our Fiat is hers, we find all the prodigies that he has worked when our Fiat was pronounced; if we form it in her breath, we find hers that breathes together and the company of our omnipotent breath, when creating we infused life (in) her; if we form it in her motion, we find her hands that embrace us squeezing us strongly, that don't want to leave us anymore; if we form it in the steps they follow us anywhere. What beautiful company, one who lives in our Will, there is no peril that they ever leave us alone, we both are inseparable.

"Therefore the living in our Volition is the prodigy of prodigies, where we make (a) display of our so many divine lives, we make ourselves known who we are, that which we can do, and we put the creature in order with us, which we created; because you must know, that these lives of ours carry with themselves seas of light, of love, seas of wisdom, of beauty, of goodness, that invest the creature in order to make her possess the light that always grows, the love that is never extinguished, the wisdom that always understands, the beauty that always embellishes more.

"Therefore we love so much that the creature live in our Volition, because we want to give, we want that she understand us, we want to populate all the human acts with our divine lives, we don't want to remain enclosed, repressed, in our divine circle. To be able to give, and not give, how much it grieves us, and even to such that she won't live in our Volition the creature will be always the little ignorant one of our supreme being, incapable of even learning the vowels of how much we love her and of how much we can give her. They will be always the dissimilar children from us, that maybe don't even know us, degenerates from their Father."

* * *

August 28, 1938

How an act in the Divine Will contains everything, it can love for everyone. How everyone races in this act. Every act done in my Will is a day that one acquires.

I continue to cross the sea of the Divine Volition in which it seems to me that everything is mine: light, sanctity, love; I feel assailed from all the parts, that they want to give themselves to me. And my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, said to me:

"My daughter, do not marvel, as the creature enters into my Will, all created beings, they feel an irresistible force to race toward who is working in my Will, because she, in order to work, needs the cortege of all his works; first, because it is inseparable from all that which he has done; second, because working, everything and everyone must take part in that which he does, in order to say with facts: 'My act is of everyone'; it elevates itself to heaven and felicitates all the celestial regions, it descends to the basest (regions) of the earth and makes itself step, work, word and heart of everyone. If it might not centralize everything and everyone in my act, the communicative force would be missing (for) everyone to be able to receive my full act of life, that with one single act it can give life to everyone, to sustain and to felicitate everyone, to do good to everyone. Therefore when I work all things racing go forth from me, they enclose themselves in my act in order to receive new life, new beauty and happiness, and everyone feels honored and glorified in my act. Behold therefore when the creature enters into my Will and she remains in order to work, in order to love, no one wants to put themselves apart, everyone races; the Sacrosanct Trinity races, the Virgin Queen, indeed we want the supremacy in that act, and then everything and everyone, minus that one who ungrateful not knowing such a good, doesn't want to receive it. Whence, one act in my Will, there can be such prodigies, that it proves difficult to the creature to be able to retell them all.

"Now, you must know, she does all that which all the other creatures should do; if she thinks in my Will, she circulates in every thought of the creature, and the creature being in my Will circulates together and gives me the homage, the love, the glory, the adoration of every thought; creatures don't know anything of it, but I that am to light of everything, I receive the glory of all created minds. If she speaks in my Will, since mine is (the) voice of every word, I feel re-given to me the glory, the love of every word. If she walks in my Fiat, being step of every foot, she gives me the love, the glory of every step; and thus with all the other things; but creatures know nothing of it, that by means of one who lives in my Volition I take the glory that should be given me, they are secrets that pass between me and one who lives in my Volition. Rather there is even more, she arrives to give me the glory, the love that the lost souls should give me.

"The communicative virtue of my Fiat arrives to everything, and to everyone it gives everything and makes itself have everything. Who does and gives everything holds right over everything, and of receiving; but in order to receive everything the soul must live in our Volition, in harmony with us, wanting that which we want.

"My Will did this in my humanity, that in a single act that he did he felt loved, glorified, satisfied for everyone. He did it in the Queen of Heaven; if he might not have found in his acts love that loved for everyone, glory and satisfaction for everyone, I, Word Eternal, would not have found the way in order to descend from heaven to earth.

"Therefore an act in my Will can give me everything, love me for everyone and let me do the greatest excesses of love and of works toward creatures. And so much is my contentment when in my Volition he finds in the steps of everyone that she loves me, in the thoughts, in the words, that in my emphasis of love I tell her: 'Keep doing that which I did, so that I call you my echo, my love, little repeater of my life.'"

So much was the flood of his love while he said this then he was silent. And then he resumed:

"My daughter, blessed, every act done in my Divine Will by the creature is a day for her, a day full of happiness and of all goods; and if she does ten of them, twenty, so many days she acquires. Now, in these days she takes heaven as hers, and since she is still on earth, she takes the sun, the wind, the air, the sea as hers and her nature takes the most beautiful flowerings in order to adorn and to embellish herself, but flowerings that never fade. Oh, what beautiful appearance she will make when she will be in our celestial country! For how many acts done in my Volition so many days she will possess, each one will have its distinct sun, its azure sky bombarded with stars, its sea that murmurs, its wind that whistles, that howls, that groans and blows impetuous love, love that reigns; they won't be missing not even the most beautiful flowerings, one distinct from the other, for how many acts she has done in my Will, nothing will be missing of beauty and of the good to one who has lived in my eternal Fiat."

Whence (I) continued to turn in the acts of the Divine Will, and my poor mind lost itself in the enchantment of creation, how many marvelous surprises, how many secrets of love there are in it; and then, the most beautiful work, the creation of man. And my sweet Jesus resumed to speak:

"My daughter, the creation of beings and the creation of man I can call them my two arms, because ab eterno it was in the divinity and in the going forth I didn't detach them from myself, I retained them as my members, in which I made flow life, motion, strength, creative virtue and continuous conservation. The arm of creation of beings serves to the arm of creation of man, but in that arm was I myself who had to serve man, and I serve him all hours, now with light, now with wind, now with air in order to make him breath, now with water in order to quench him, now, with food in order to feed him, and even with earth in order to have him enjoy the most beautiful flowerings and abundances of fruits. In this arm I put myself to (the) service of man, my love didn't let me mind to anything, I raced to him through means of created things carrying him as in (my) arms so that all things might bring joy and happiness to them; in this arm he finds all things as they went forth, has not gotten lost neither one drop of light, nor of water, nothing has changed, all that which went forth remains at their place of honor, giving me the glory of my eternal love, and they reveal me who is he who has created them, my power, my inaccessible light, my inarrivable beauty; every created thing is a story of my eternal love, and how much I love the one for whom all things were created.

"Now, from the creation of the beings, I passed to the creation of man; how much love in creating him! Our divine being flowed love, and in forming him our love raced and invested every fiber of his heart, every little particle of his bones; our love extended in his nerves, we made flow in his blood our love, we invested his steps, his motion, his voice, his heartbeat, each one of his thoughts, with love. When our love shaped him, it filled him so much with our love, in a way that in each thing, even in his breath, he had to give us love; how we loved him in everything, then our love arrived to the excess of breathing (in) him in order to leave (in) him our breath of love; for conclusion and crown we created our image in his soul, endowing him with three powers, with memory, with intellect and with will, remaining there in him as our carrier. So that man is united to us as members and we remain in him as our residence.

"But how much sorrow don't we find in him? Our love is not in vigor, our image remains, but it is not recognized, our residence is full of enemies that offend us; we can say: he has changed our fate and his, he has turned upside-down our designs upon him, and he does none other than to bring sorrow to our arm, that continues to love him and to give him life.

"Now, my daughter, our love wants to arrive to greater excesses, it wants to save our arm, that is man, at whatever cost it wants to reorder him; we will be constrained by our love to breathe anew (in) him, in order to scatter his enemies and ours, we will cover him anew with our love and we will make enter in him the life of our Will. It is not appropriate neither to our majesty, nor to our sanctity, power and wisdom, which to our creative work there be this disorder that dishonors us so much; ah, no, we will triumph (over) man! And the certain sign (is) that we are manifesting the prodigies of our Volition and how one lives in him. If we didn't do this it would violate our power, as if we might be impotent to save our work, our own arm; this can not be, it would be as if we might not be able to do that which we want; ah, no, no! Our love and our Will will conquer and will triumph over everyone!

* * *

September 5, 1938

The human will cross of the divine; and the divine cross of the human. How in the Divine Volition things change themselves, dissimilarities don't exist. How Jesus makes up for all that which can be missing to one who lives in his Volition.

I feel the life of the divine Fiat in my soul, which wants to be my motion, my breath and heartbeat; he wants such union with the human will, that in nothing must one be opposed to that which he wants to do, otherwise he laments, is displeased and feels put on (the) cross by the human volition. And my beloved, repeating his brief little visit with me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, how much my Will suffers in the creature! It is enough to say to you, each time that one does ones will it puts mine on (the) cross. So that the cross of my Will is the human volition; but not with three nails, as I was crucified upon the cross, but with so many nails for how many times one is opposed to mine, how many times he is not recognized; and while he wants to do good, he becomes rejected with the nails of ingratitude. How excruciating is this crucifixion of my Will in the creature; how many times he feels the nails put forth to his breath, heartbeat and motion, because not being known that he is life of the breath, heartbeat and motion, the human breath, motion and heartbeat, serve as nails that impede him from developing in them the good that (is) needed. Oh, how he feels (on the) cross in the human volition! He with his divine motion wants to make sprout the day in the human motion, and the creature puts the divine motion (on the) cross and with her motion she makes sprout the night and she puts (on the) cross the light; how my light sorrows in seeing itself repressed, crucified, put in the state of inability by the human volition!

“With his breath he wants to make his breathed in order to give her the life of his sanctity, of his fortitude; and the creature, by not receiving it, puts forth the nails of sin, of her passions and weaknesses; my poor Will, in what (a) state of sorrow and of continuous crucifixion he finds himself in the human volition! She does none other than to put (on the) cross our love and all the goods that we want to give her are filled by her nails.

“Only one who lives in mine doesn't put (on the) cross my Will; rather, I can say that I form her cross, but her cross is well different. With mine my Volition knows how to put forth nails of light, of sanctity, of love, in order to make her strong with our own divine fortitude, which doesn't give sorrows, rather, he renders her happy, beautiful with an enchanting beauty, and they are carriers of great conquests, and one who has tried it so much is the happiness that she feels, that she prays us, begs us that we hold her always (on the) cross with our divine nails.

“From here she can not escaped; if two wills, human and divine, are not united, hers will form our cross and ours hers; rather, so much is our love and jealousy that we don't leave her free not even a breath without our nail of light and of love, in order to always have her with us, in order to be able to say: 'That which we do she does, and she wants that which we want.'

"Rather, you must know that as the creature enters into our Volition, all is transformed, the darkneses are changed into light, weakness into fortitude, poverty into riches, passions into virtue; such mutation happens that one is not recognized anymore from that of before; her state is no more of the most vile slave, but of noble queen, our divine being loves her so much that it races into her acts in order to do that which she does; and since our motion is continuous, we move and we love her, we move and we embrace her; our motion moves itself and kisses her, makes her more beautiful, sanctifies her more; in every motion we give her of ours; and in the emphasis of our love, we speak to her of our supreme being, we make ourselves known who we are and how much we love her. Such identification passes between her and us, being one our Will with hers, that we feel her in our divine motion, and hers doing that which is ours, she loves us with our love, she gives our inaccessible light to us, in order to glorify our sanctity, in order to extol us and say to us: 'Holy, holy, three times holy you are; you enclose everything, you are everything.'

"How beautiful it is to see the human littleness in our Volition, that holds in her power our divine being in order to re-give it to us, in order to love us and to glorify us as we want and we justly merit; in our Volition the parts make themselves equal, the dissimilarities disappear, our unity unites everything and everyone and makes it one single act of everyone, in order to make itself act of everyone."

In hearing this I understood the sanctity, the beauty, the greatness, of living in the Divine Volition, and I thought to myself: It seems difficult to me living in him; how ever can the creature arrive to so much? Human weakness, the circumstances of life, many times too painful, the unexpected meetings, the so many difficulties that one doesn't even know what to do, divert the poor creature from a living so holy and that wants (from) us a highest attention? And my sweet Jesus resuming his speech, with an inexpressible tenderness as to feel my heart burst, added:

"My little daughter of my Volition, so much is my interest, my continuous yearning that I want that the creature live in my Volition, that when we have taken the accord, I and she, with firm decision that she must live in my Fiat, being my Will, I am the first to make the sacrifice. In order to obtain the intent that she can live in him, I put myself at her disposition, I give her all the graces, light, love, knowledge of my own Will, in a way that she herself must feel the need of living in him; when I want a thing, and she with promptness accepts to do that which I want, it is I that think to everything; and when (she doesn't do it) from weakness, from circumstance, not from will, from carelessness, I arrive to supply for and do that which she owed, and I cede to her that which I have done as if she might have done it. My daughter, the living in my Volition is life that I must form it is not virtue, and life has need of motion and continuous acts; if this were not so it would not be life anymore, it could be at the most work that doesn't have need of continuous acts but not life. Hence when for involuntary indisposition, for weakness (she doesn't do it), I don't break the life, I continue it, and perhaps in those same indispositions there is yet that my Will permits those weaknesses; hence the will of the creature already races in mine.

"And then (above) everything I look at the accord taken together, the firm decision made, of which there has been no other decision (to the) contrary, and in view of this follows the pledge of supplying for her in that which she lacks. Rather, I double the graces, surround her anew with love, with new stratagems of love in order to have her be more attentive, I arouse in her heart an extreme need of living in my Will this need serves her as she feels the weaknesses thus she throws herself into the arms of my Will and prays him to hold her so very tight, so that she might be able to always live together with him.”

* * *

September 11, 1938

An act completed with the Divine Will is everything. Jesus grows his life in one who lives in him (the Divine Will). Horrible state of God in one who lives with the human will. “Every time that one enters in our Volition so many times we renew our works.”

I feel that the sea of the Divine Volition always murmurs inside and outside of me, and so very often he forms his highest waves and inundates me so much, that I feel him more than life itself. “Oh Divine Will, how much you love me, that you want to always give yourself without ever ceasing in order to form your life in my poor soul, and so much is your love that it arrives even to besiege me with light, with love, with sighs in order to obtain the intent!” And my always amiable Jesus, surprising me said to me:

“My blessed daughter, in our completed Will becomes enclosed all the glory that the creature can give us, the love with which we must love her, and the love with which she must love us. So that in a completed act of Will we can say we have done everything, everything we have given, even ourselves, and everything we have received. Because with living in him, we give everything, and take everything, and she can give us everything.

“Instead if she doesn’t live in our Volition, if our Will is not completed, we can not give everything, she will be incapable of receiving our love, nor will she hold (the) capacity of loving us how much we want to be loved; and we to give of ours almost in little particles, as if we might be poor, we are not content; we don’t like giving our things at half, to be able to give and not give is always a sorrow for us, our love remains repressed and makes us give into delirium.

“Behold therefore we want the soul to live in our Divine Volition, because we want to give; everything and always without ever ceasing to give, our divine being never exhausts itself, how much more we give so much more we can give, and giving for us is relief, is happiness, is (an) outlet of love, is communication of our life that we do, and my love is so much that I remain in the soul in order to grow myself.

“Now, having to grow myself I watch over it continually, so that that which she does serves to make my life grow in her, I dispose her acts, her love, some to form my members, some my Heart, some the food in order to feed me, some the dress in order to cover me, in order to warm me; I am always in aptness in order to unite her motion to mine, her breath to mine, in order to find her motion in mine and her breath as if it were my motion and breath; I don’t let anything escape of that which she does, thinks, speaks, works, suffers, because it must serve to myself and to make my life grow. Hence I always remain in aptness, I never give rest to myself; and oh, how content I am with it, how happy

I feel always being occupied in my work to make myself grow in her.

“I didn’t create the creature so that she might remain isolated at all, it was my work and hence I had to unfold my work in order to form worthy work of me. Therefore if she doesn’t live in my Will I don’t find the first matter in order to form and grow my life, we live as distant, as isolated, and the solitude grieves me, the silence weighs on me; not being able to unfold my work, I give into manias of love and I feel myself rendered the unhappy God apart from creatures.

“Therefore, my daughter, be attentive, live always in my Will lend me your acts, let me work in order not to hold me in you as a God that might not be able or know how to do anything, while I hold to do the greatest work of making grow and forming my life, which will be so very beautiful that it will form the sweet enchantment to all the Celestial Court.

“Instead one who doesn’t live in our Will, our state is horrible in the creature, our life remains as strangled, broken, divided by the human will; her acts can not serve to form and grow our life; rather, they serve to break it, in a way (that) there one sees a foot of ours, there a hand, there an eye; how it makes us pity to see us so strangled, because our Will alone is unity, and where he reigns, of so many acts he forms of them one alone, in order to form one life alone. Instead the human will doesn’t do but broken acts amongst them that don’t have the virtue of uniting themselves, rather, they put in pieces our divine life in them. There is nothing more horrible, (the) scene that would make even the stones cry, than to see in the soul that she does her will the excruciating way how it reduces our life in her; her unworthy acts, that descend from the origin of her creation, dissimilar from her Creator, they form the knife in order to cut in pieces our divine life. How it grieves us, how our creative work, remains deformed, dishonored and our purpose of creation destroyed. Aye, if we might be capable of sorrow, the human will would embitter the sea of our joys and immense happiness!”

Whence I was following all that which the Divine Will has done, as much in the creation as in the redemption, and I found everything in act as if everything might want to give itself to me and my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, all that which has been done by our supreme being, is all in act, as if we were doing it for love of creatures, because all our works were done for them. Now, the creature that enters into our Divine Volition finds everything, and everything wants to give itself to her; and she in seeing herself so loved, makes them hers, loves them, and loves us for so many gifts that we make her and in every gift that we make her; she would like to give us the exchange of her life for gratitude and thankfulness, and in order to thank me for the so many gifts that we have given her. Hence, she feels given the gift of the sun, of the starry sky, of the sea, of the wind, of all creation; she feels given my birth, my tears, my works, my steps, my sufferings, my love with which I loved her and love her; and oh, how happy she feels! And making all our works and my own life hers, she loves us in the sun with that same love with which I created it, and thus in all the other things; she loves me in my birth, in my tears, in my steps, in my sufferings, in everything; and oh, how she felicitates us, glorifies us!

“And so much is our contentment that she gives us the occasion to be able to renew our works, as if we did them again. So that our love overflows from us and invests everything again with love, she doubles our power in order to sustain everything, our wisdom that orders everything; our creative work races in all the creation and redemption in order to say to the creature: 'Everything is yours, and every time you enter into our Volition you recognize them and you make all these gifts yours, you give us the occasion and the glory as if we repeated again all that which we have done for love of creatures.' Our Will, is the repeater of all our works, he repeats them, always renews them, in every instant, every time that the creature wants to receive them; and while they give themselves, they remain at their place, they give themselves and they remain, and with giving themselves they lose nothing, rather they remain more glorified. Therefore be attentive to always live in our Volition."

* * *

September 18, 1938

How Jesus in our sufferings feels his repeated. How he is not ever moved in his works and in loving us. Example of the flower, one who doesn't live in the Divine Volition.

I am in the sea of the Divine Volition between immense bitternesses and humiliations of the most humiliating and as a poor condemned one [August 31st 1938 the Holy Office emanated the decree of condemnation and put on the index of prohibited books the three books of Luisa up to then published.], and if it were not that my Jesus made himself my support, strength and help, I don't know how I could live, and my sweet Jesus, taking part in my sufferings, suffered together with me, and in the vent of his sorrow and love, said to me:

"My dear daughter, if you might know how much I suffer, if I might let you see, you would die of pain; I am constrained to hide everything, all the straights, the rawness of the pain that I feel in order not to torment you more. Know that it is not you that they have condemned, but me together with you; I feel my condemnation again; when one condemns the good it is to condemn myself; you however unite yourself in my Volition yours and my condemnation to that which I underwent when I was crucified, and I will give you the merit of my condemnation and all the goods that it produces to you: it made me die, called to life my resurrection, in which everyone should find life and the resurrection of all goods.

"With their condemnation they believe to have made die that which I have said on my Divine Will, instead I will permit such scourges, sad incidents, then I will make my truths re-arise more beautiful, more majestic in the midst of people. Therefore on my part and yours we won't move anything, we continue to do that which we have done, although everyone put themselves against (us); this is my divine way, that for how many evils creatures do, I never move/shift my works, I always conserve them with my power and creative virtue, for love of whom offends me; I always love them, without ever ceasing. With never moving ourselves our works are completed, they always remain beautiful, they do good to everyone; if we moved ourselves, all things would go into ruin, not one good of it would come to finish. Hence also in this I want you together with me; always firm and without ever moving yourself from inside my Will, doing that which you have done up to now; attentive to listen to me and to be the narrator of my Will.

"My daughter, that which doesn't serve today will serve tomorrow, that which now seems darkness because it finds blind minds, tomorrow for others that have eyes it will be changed into sun, and how much good they will do. Whence we continue that which we have done, we do on our part that which is wanted (of) us, so that nothing lacks of help, of light, of goods, of surprising truths, so that my Will and kingdoms be known. I will make use of all means, of love, of graces, of chastisements, I will touch all the sides of creatures in order to make my Will reign, and when it will seem as if true good might have had to die, it will re-arise more beautiful and majestic.”

But while he said this he made me see a sea of fire in which the whole world remained to be enwrapped, I remained shaken by it; and my amiable Jesus, drawing me to himself, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, courage, do not be afraid, come into my Divine Will, so that his light takes away from you the sad sight in which the world races, and speaking to you of my Volition we soothe the pains that unfortunately we both suffer.

“You feel how beautiful it is to live in my Volition, that which I do, she does; how she feels that I say to her: ‘I love you’; immediately she repeats to me: ‘I love you.’ And I in feeling myself loved transform her so much into me, that with one voice alone we say: ‘We love everyone, we do good to everyone, we give life to everyone.’ If I bless, we bless together, we adore, we glorify together, we race together in help of everyone, and if they offend me we suffer together; and oh, how content I am in seeing that a creature doesn’t leave me alone ever! How beautiful is the company of one who wants that which I want and does that which I do! The union makes rise the happiness, the heroism in doing good, the tolerance in supporting (it), much more so that it is a human creature that belongs to the human family, that doesn’t do other than send me nails, thorns and pains; and I finding in this my hideaway and my desired company, knowing that she would be displeased if I punished them as they merit, in order not to displease her, I abstain (from) punishing them as they merit. Therefore, do not ever leave me alone, solitude is one of the hardest and most intimate sufferings of my Heart; not having one to whom to say a word to, as much in the sufferings as in the joys, it makes me give into such manias of sorrow and of love that if you might be able to experience them you would die of pure sorrow.

“And it is really this not living in my Will, leaving me alone! The human volition removes the creature from her Creator, and as she removes herself peace flees, and disturbances takes (the) place that torment her, the strength is weakened, the beauty is discolored, the good dies and evil rises, passions keep her company, poor creature without my Will, in what abyss of miseries and of darkness she casts herself! It happens like to the flower that is not watered, it feels itself lose life, it loses color declines upon its stem in order to await death, and if the sun invests it, not finding it watered, it burns it and finishes to dry it. Such is the soul without my Will, it is as a soul without water; my own truths that are more splendid than the sun, not finding water from the life of my Will, burn it more, they blind it and render it incapable of understanding them and of receiving the good, the life that they possess; and they arrive to such excesses that the good, my own truths, bearers of life to creatures, wage war. Therefore I want you always in my Will, so that neither you nor I suffer the hard pain of solitude.”

* * *

September 27, 1938

Symbol of the sea the Divine Will. How next to the sufferings of Jesus flow seas of joys. Power of innocent sufferings. The truths manifested new creation.

I am always in the sea of the Divine Volition and my sufferings and inexpressible bitternesses I make flow in him, so that they remain invested by his divine light and change into light for me and for everyone. And my sweet Jesus, visiting my little soul, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, as the sea gives the place to all the things that there immerse themselves within, so much so that it gives (a) place to the fishes and holds them sunk in its waters, giving them all that which is needed in order to keep them alive; the fishes are the most fortunate the richest that they lack nothing, because they always live in the sea; oh, if the fishes might go out from the sea life would finish! The sea receives everything, lends itself to everyone, bathes everything and everyone and hides everyone in its waters. If the sailor wants to cross the sea and to go into different regions, the water of the sea receives the ship, makes itself way, accompanies him, never leaves him until he arrives to (the) destination; everyone can find (a) place in the sea.

“Such is my Will, everyone can find their place and with inexpressible love he makes himself life of each one, way in order to conduct them, light in order to disperse the darkness of life, strength in order to sustain them; he never leaves them alone, that which they do he wants to do it together. Oh, how distressed he is when he sees his creatures outside of his sea! Because he sees them ugly dirty so very dissimilar that they make one disgust them. Hence the most fortunate are those that live in my Volition, they are carried in the womb of his waves and provided that they live in him, he will think to all that which is needed for their good.”

After this I followed my sweet Jesus in his sufferings, and I united mine to his in order to receive the strength from his sufferings in order to sustain mine, because I felt as crushed, and my dear Jesus added with inexpressible tenderness:

“My blessed daughter, I suffered unheard of pains, but next to these pains of mine, flowed seas of joys, of happiness without end, I saw the good that they should produce I saw enclosed in them the souls that should be saved; and my pains, since they were pains of love, with the heat they matured the most beautiful sanctities, the most difficult conversions, the most surprising graces. And I felt in my most bitter sorrowful pains that they gave me the most merciless and cruel death, and seas of joys that sustained me and gave me life. If I was not sustained by the joys that my pains contained I would have died at the first pain that I suffered so much was the torment, nor would I have been able to prolong life.

“Now your pains not only are similar to mine, but I can say that your pains are mine; and if you might know how much I suffer from it? I feel the harshness, the torment that embitters me even in the depths of the Heart; but even in these pains come to flow the seas of joy, that will make rise my beautiful and majestic Will in the midst of creatures, you don’t know what is an innocent pain suffered for my cause, such is its power that the heavens remain astonished by it and everyone wants the satisfaction, the good of an innocent pain suffered; it can form with its power seas of graces, of light, of love, to (the) good of everyone; if it were not for these innocent sufferings that sustain my justice I would send in ruin the whole entire world. Therefore courage do not batter yourself my daughter, trust in me and I will think to everything, and defend the rights of my Will in order to make him reign.

“All that which I have said on my Will, I can say that it is a new creation, more beautiful more manifold more majestic than the creation itself that everyone sees; rather, oh, how the rest remains behind! And as it is impossible (for) man to destroy it, to suffocate the light of the sun, to impede the impetuosity of the wind, the air that everyone breathes, and with all things to make a heap of it; thus they can not suffocate, much less destroy, that which I have said on my Will with so much love, because that which I have said is a new speaking creation, and every truth carries the imprint, the seal of our divine life; hence in the truths that I have manifested to you there are the speaking suns, the winds that speak and sweep away in my Volition even to be able to besiege the creature with the empire of his power; there are in these truths my various beauties that will enrapture creatures, the seas of love which will be continuous and inundating, that with their sweet murmur they will conquer hearts to love me; in these truths I have put all the possible and imaginable goods, love that conquers, that enraptures(,) that sweetens, that shakes, lacking nothing, in order to dominate the creature and in order to make my Will descend, with decorum and majesty together with the army of my truths to reign in the midst of them. And it won't be given to the creature to conceal this my new creation, I will know well (how) to look (after) it and to defend it; and then, my daughter, this new creation cost me the work not of six days, but for well fifty years and more, how can I ever permit that it will be repressed, that it doesn't have its life and doesn't go forth to the light? This would be not to have enough power, this can not be, I will know how to look after it, nor can they touch and destroy a single word of mine, it cost me too much, and when things cost a great deal one uses all the means, all the arts, one pledges even one's own life in order to obtain the intent. Therefore let me complete the work of this new creation, nor give thought of that which they say and do, they are the usual human inconstancies, that to one puff of wind they become black to another puff they are taking away the bandage and become white, hence I will know how to sweep away everyone and to make go forth my truths like (an) army trained to dominate the creature; patience is needed on my part and on your part, and without dirtying ourselves we go forward."

* * *

October 2, 1938

How the Kingdom of the Divine Will is decreed that it must come upon the earth. How it must sweep. The earth(,) the Queen of Heaven cries and prays. The Divine Will is like the sap to the plants.

I am always in the Divine Volition although between inexpressible bitternesses, as if they might want to render turbid his sea itself, but this sea of the Fiat forms its waves, covers me, hides me within, sweetens the bitternesses for me, re-gives me strength, and makes me continue the way in his Will; his power is so much that it reduces into nothing my bitternesses and makes me re-arise from within them his life full of sweetness, all beautiful and majestic; and I adore him, thank him, pray him that he never leave me alone and abandoned. Whence my sweet Jesus, repeating his little visit with me, said to me:

"My daughter, good, courage, if you batter yourself you will lose the strength to always live in my Volition, nor give thought of that which they say and do, all our victory is that they can not impede us from doing that which we want; hence I can speak to you of my Divine Volition and you can listen to me, not any power can impede it. That which I say to you on my Volition, is none other than the carrying out of our decree done ab eterno in the consistory of our Sacrosanct Trinity, that he must hold his Kingdom upon the earth; and our decrees are infallible, no one can impede us who is not effected. As was decreed the creation, the redemption, thus is decreed our Kingdom of our Will upon the earth. Hence, in order to complete this decree of ours I must manifest the goods that there are in him, his qualities, his beauties and marvels; behold the necessity that I had to speak to you so much, in order to be able to complete this decree.

“Daughter, in order to arrive to this I wanted to conquer man by way of love, but human perfidy impedes it from me; therefore, I will use justice, I will sweep the earth, I will take away all the harmful creatures, that like poisonous plants poison the innocent plants; when I will have purified everything, my truths will find the way in order to give life to the survivors, the balm, the peace that they contain and everyone will receive it they will give the kiss of peace to them, to the confusion of whom has not believed him, indeed condemned, he will reign, and I will have my Kingdom upon the earth, that my Will be done as in heaven so on earth.

“Therefore, I repeat to you, we don’t move ourselves in anything, we make our way and we will sing victory, and they make their way in which they will find confusion and shame of themselves. It will happen to them like to the blind ones that don’t believe the light of the sun because they don’t see it, they will remain in their blindness and those that see it and believe will enjoy, will show off in the goods of the light with their highest contentment.”

Jesus became silent, and my poor mind remained devastated by the so many gruesome evils of which he invested and will invest the earth. In this while he made the Sovereign Queen seen with red eyes and as blood stained by the so much weeping that she had done, but what straights to the heart in seeing my Celestial Mama cry, and with her maternal accent, with an inexpressible tenderness, crying, she said to me:

“My dearest daughter pray together with me, how my Heart aches in seeing the scourges in which the entire humanity will be enwrapped, the inconstancy of the heads, today they say and tomorrow they unsay it, it will cast the peoples in a sea of sorrows, and also of blood; my poor children! Pray, my daughter, do not leave me alone in my sorrow, that it all occurs for the triumph of the Kingdom of the Divine Will.”

Whence I followed the Divine Will in his acts, all abandoning myself in his arms, and my sweet Jesus resumed to say:

“My daughter, as the creature enters into our Will in order to make him hers, she makes hers ours and we make ours hers, and in all that which she does, if she loves, if she adores, if she works, if she suffers, if she prays, our Volition forms the divine germ/seed in her acts; and oh, how she grows beautiful, fresh, holy! Our Will is like the sap to the plants, if there is the sap the plants grow beautiful, are green, thick with leaves and produce mature, fat and tasty fruits; if instead it begins to lack the sap, the poor plant loses the green, the leaves fall, nor does it have the virtue of producing its beautiful fruits and it finishes with drying out; because the sap is like the soul of the plant, like the vital humors that sustain it and make the plant bloom. Such is the soul without my Will, she loses the beginning, the life, the soul of good, she loses the vegetation, the freshness, the vigor, she becomes faded, ugly, grows weak, and finishes with losing the seed of good.

“If you might know how much it makes me compassionate a soul that lives without my Will? I could call it my sorrowful scenes of creation, I who have created all things with such beauty and harmony, I am constrained by human ingratitude to see my most beautiful creatures that I created, poor, weak, covered with wounds as to make (one) pity. And yet my Will is at (the) disposition of everyone, he doesn’t deny himself to anyone; only who rejects him, who ungrateful doesn’t want to know him, voluntarily deprive themselves of him with our highest sorrow.”

* * *

October 10, 1938

First field of action of God the creation. Field of action one who lives in his Volition. How God doesn’t know how to deny anything to one who lives in him.

I am always in the sea of the Supreme Fiat, of which so much is his love, that not being able to contain it in himself, he wants to make his creature see, his new surprises of his love, how much he has loved her and loves her; and if he finds the creature that loves him, he will make arise new love in order to make her touch with (her) hand that his love will never stop, but will always love her with new and growing love. And my always amiable Jesus, repeating his brief little visit with me, all goodness said to me:

“My little daughter of my Divine Will, you must know that our first field of action was the creation; this was a birth that ab eterno we held in our divine bosom, and in every thing that we had to put forth to the light of day we loved man; why only for him, because we loved him so much, we had decreed to create so many things even to forming (for) him the light of day, the azure vault that must never fade, an earth in bloom that had to serve him for floor; and then the greatest thing, the centralization of our love in every created thing that had to serve him as our womb where to carry him in our arms in order to felicitate him and to give him continuous life.

“And do you know why all these preparations, even to making ourselves go forth from our interior, as in (a) field of action, as to work, for love of whom had to make our Will reign? To so much work of ours we wanted our profit, our divine purpose that the man and all created things should hold for life, for regime, for food our Volition. This field of action of ours still lasts, our love races with an incredible velocity, because we are not subject to mutation, we are the immutable one, and that which we do one time, we always do. Even more so that to so extensive (a) field of action of ours, to so much work of ours, to so much of our palpitating love in every created thing and in every single fiber of the man, our purpose is not realized, that is, that our Volition reign and dominate in the heart of man. Can we form such an extensive field, does it still last in the work without obtaining the intent? This will never be, and only that the creation still lasts is the certain sign that the kingdom of my Volition will have its life and its full triumph in the midst of creatures. We don’t know how to do useless things, indeed, first we strengthen with highest wisdom the good, the profit, the glory that we must receive and then we do.

“Now I want to tell you another surprise. As the creature enters into our Volition in order to make him reign, we put ourselves again into field of action, we renew our work, and only for her we centralize our new love in every created thing, and in our emphasis of love we say to her: ‘You see how much we love you, that only for you we unfold our field of action, only for you we repeat all our works? Incline the ears and you will hear in each thing our new notes of love that say to you how we love you, how you are covered and hidden in our love; and oh, the contentments, the joys that you give us, that we can repeat our field of action for one who lives and doesn't want to know other than our Will!

“Now all the creation, ourselves, finding in her our Volition, we all recognize her as our daughter; all the creation remains centralized in her and she in us; she renders herself inseparable from all created things, because our Volition gives her the right over everything; and our field of action finds its profit, the exchange of our work; already a creature living in our Volition works together with us, wants to do that which we do, want to love us with equal love; because being one the will that animates us, there can not be neither dissimilarities, nor disparity. Therefore we don't feel isolated anymore in the field of creation, we hold our company and this is all our triumph, our victory and the greatest good that we can give to creatures. Even more so than the creation that surrounds her outside, we unfold our field of action in the interior of her soul, and we create in her the most radiant suns, the most beautiful stars, winds that blow continuous loves, seas of graces, of beauties, divine and balmy air; and she receives everything and leaves us free, in our field of action, our true creation that did not oppose us in anything in that which we wanted to do; all found their place where to put our works.

“Thus the soul that lives in our Volition we can put all our most beautiful works in her; and our Volition prepares for us the space where to put them. So that our field of action, never finishes in one who lives in our Fiat. Therefore be attentive to receive that which we want to do with you.”

After this he added with a love that I don't know how to say:

“My daughter the interest that is more to (our) heart, our attention more assiduous, is on the soul that lives in our Volition. We are all eyes on her, it seems to us that we neither know nor can we do anything if we don't unfold upon her our working and creative virtue; our love brings us to look at her in order to see what she wants to do, if she wants to love our creative virtue creates our love in the depth of the soul, if she wants to know us we create our knowledge, if she wants to be holy, our creative virtue creates sanctity; in short what does she want to do? Our creative virtue, lends itself to create the good that she wants, in a way that she feels in herself the nature, the life of the good that she wants; neither can we, nor do we want to deny anything to one who lives in our Volition, it would be as to deny it to our own Volition, that is to deny it to ourselves, it would be too hard to not serve ourselves with our creative virtue for ourselves. Do you see therefore to what high, noble and sublime point one is found who lives in our Volition? Therefore, be attentive, not to take care of anything if not to live in him, thus you will feel our creative and working virtue.”

* * *

October 12, 1938

Who lives abandoned in God, finds in him his paternity, the refuge, the hideaway. The Fiat, support and life of all creation. How God takes the cord to/(of) one whom wants to live in him.

I am between the arms of the Divine Volition, although under the nightmare of most hard sufferings as to move to pity all heaven and to make it race to my help in order to give me strength in a state so sorrowful. “My Jesus help me do not abandon me, I feel myself succumb, how hard is my state.” But while I said this, my sweet Jesus, more than a most tender mother, had me (in his) arms pressing me to himself, and uniting his tears to mine, all goodness he said to me:

“My poor daughter, your pains are mine, and I suffer together with you; therefore courage, abandon yourself in me and you will find strength to your pains; one who abandons himself in me grows as a child that becomes brought up by his mama, who, swaddles/wraps him in order to make him reconfirmed in his members, feeds him with her milk, holds him between her arms, kisses him, caresses him, and if he cries mixes her tears with those of her baby’s; so that the mama is the life of her child; oh, if the little baby might not have his mama, how badly he would grow, without one who feeds him with her milk, without swaddling, without one who warms him, he would grow sickly, weak, and only a miracle could make (him) live! Such is the soul that lives abandoned in my arms, she holds her Jesus who does for her more than (a) mother, I feed her with the milk of my graces, I bandage her with the light of my Will, so that she becomes hardened and confirmed in good, I hold her pressed to my breast, so that she might not feel other than my love and the ardent throbs of my Heart, I cradle her between my arms, if she cries, I cry together; in a way that she feels my life more than hers, she grows together with me and I make of her that which I want. Instead one who doesn’t live abandoned in me, lives by herself, isolated, without milk, without one who takes care of her existence; one who lives abandoned in me finds her refuge in her pains, the hideaway where to hide herself in order to make that no one might touch her, and if they would like to touch her I will know how to defend her, because one who touches one who loves me, it is more than if they might touch myself, and I hide her in me and I confuse those people who want to strike one who loves me. And I love so much one who lives abandoned in me, that I make of her the greatest portent as to make astounded all heaven and thus to make remain confused those people that believed to strike her in order to make her remain covered with confusion and humiliation. To the so many pains that we suffer, we don’t add on this pain, that would be the most sorrowful of you not living abandoned in me and I in you, my daughter. Leave them to say and do, provided that they don’t touch our union, nor can anyone enter into our secrets, in the abysses of my love, nor impede me (from) that which I want to do with my creatures. We live with only one Volition and all things will be at (their) place between you and me.”

Then he added with a love still more tender:

“My blessed daughter, my Fiat is the support of all the creation, everything leans upon it, there is no thing that is not animated by its power; if it were not for my Fiat, all things, the creatures themselves would be none other than as so many painted pictures or as inanimate statues, incapable of generating, vegetating or reproducing any good; poor creation, if was not for my Will! And yet she doesn’t want to recognize him; what sorrow! To be life of everyone and to feel as suffocated in our own things created by us, because they don’t know us! What bitterness! If it were for not for our love and if we were capable of changing we would retract our Will from everyone and from everything, and everything would be been reduced into nothing; but since we are immutable and we know with certainty that our Will will be known, wanted, loved and that each one will hold him, more than life itself, therefore with unconquered patience that only our divinity can have and support, we await that he be recognized. And this with justice and with our highest wisdom because we never do useless things, if we do (something) it is because we want our profit, that is to receive glory, honor from all our works, even from the littlest tiny flower of the field.

“If this were not so we would be like a God that might not know nor appreciate, nor give the just value to our works; therefore it is our justice that our Will be known as life of everything so that we obtain the purpose for why we created all the creation.

“Now you must now know that as the creature wants to do our Will and enters into him, she remains rehabilitated in ours; he rehabilitates in sanctity, in purity, in love, re-arises in beauty and purpose with which we created her, he scatters the evils of the human will and commences the life of good.

“My Will as he sees that the soul wants to live together with him, does as one does to the clock that has stopped, with giving the cord it commences its walk and marks the hours, the minutes, and makes itself guide of the days of man. Thus my Will, seeing her stopped in good by the human volition, as she enters into him he gives the divine cord, in a way that the whole being human and spiritual feels new life and the virtue of the divine cord with which she feels invested, which races in the mind, in the heartbeat, in everything, and with an irresistible strength, races in all that which is holy and good.

“This cord marks the minutes and the eternal hours of divine life in the soul, and oh, how it races in all that which is divine! We rehabilitate her in everything, we make her race everywhere in the immensity of our sea and do and take that which she wants, and although she can not embrace all our immensity, however she lives in our sea, is fed by him, he goes always embellishing her with our beauty, dresses her with the royal dresses of our Volition; in our sea she finds her rest, the chaste embraces of her Jesus, her reciprocal love, she divides together her joys and her sufferings, she grows always in good. My Will becomes for her life, her predominant passion; our cord makes her race so much that she arrives to form her little divine palace in our sea, which becomes inhabited by the Sacrosanct Trinity, who enjoy this fortunate creature, always overwhelming her with new graces and gifts. Therefore may it be to your heart to live in our Fiat, so that we find in you the joys, the glory of all the creation, the purpose with which we created it.”

* * *

October 26, 1938

The sad effects of the Disturbance. The little sick one in the Divine Volition. “Who lives in the Divine Will forms the support to her Creator and we put in safety our interests.”

My poor existence feels the extreme need to live in the Divine Volition; the bitternesses, the sufferings that involve me are so many that I feel as if they might want to tear me from within the divine Fiat and therefore I feel more than ever the need to live in him; but with all the efforts that I make of living abandoned in his arms, I can not do any (more) than to feel myself embittered, groggy and upset by the so many nuisances and hard sufferings that surround me even to not being able from it anymore. “My Jesus, my Celestial Mama, help me don’t you see that I am about to succumb? If you don’t hold me in your arms, if you don’t continue to inundate me with the waves of your Divine Volition, I tremble and I fear what will become of me from it. Oh! Do not leave me, do not abandon me to myself in a state so hard.” But while I thought this my always amiable Jesus raced in order to sustain me in his arms, and all goodness said to me:

“My good daughter, do not fear(,) courage, I won’t leave you, nor can I leave you, there are the chains of my Will that tie me to you, and render me inseparable; and then why do you fear to go out from my Will? As in order to enter into him there was a firm act, definite, of wanting to live in him, thus in order to go out there would be needed another firm and definite act, this you have not done, my daughter will never do it, is (this) not true? That which I want (is) that you not let yourself be surprised by the disturbance, which makes you pale, makes you lose the freshness, weakens the strength, makes you lose the vivacity of the light of the Fiat, and my love remains repressed, the attention loses the step; and although you are in my Will, but you are as if you might be within a house that you don’t take care to do that which is needed to do, in order to decorate it, order it and give it all the sumptuousness that is necessary to you; thus being disturbed in my Will, you don’t mind/(pay attention) to receive my creative and working act, hence neither can I give to you nor I receive, you remain as in idleness.

“But however, courage, since your sufferings are for my cause, we hold you in our Will like the little sick one, which I the first, while I suffer together with you, because they are my sufferings and I suffer more than you, I do (for) you as (a) nurse, I assist you, I make you (a) bed with my arms, I put my sufferings around you in order to strengthen you; our Queen Mama races in order to put you in her womb in order to keep defended her little sick daughter and since one who has worked in my Volition has been the bearer of the glory and joy of all heaven, therefore everyone races around our little sick one, the angels, the saints, in order to assist her and to lend themselves to her needs. In our Will extraneous things don’t enter and that don’t belong there, the sufferings themselves must be our sufferings, otherwise they don’t find the way in order to enter you. Therefore courage that which I want is that you remain in peace.

“How many times I also beneath the press of hard sufferings became sick and the angels raced to sustain me; my own Celestial Father in seeing me between excruciating sufferings, raced, took me in his arms in order to fortify my groaning humanity. And my Mother, how many, how many times she fell sick in my Volition in seeing the sufferings of her Son, even to feel herself die and I raced to sustain her, I placed her to my Heart in order not to let her succumb. Therefore that which I want, courage, peace, do not batter yourself too much and I will think to everything.”

Afterwards he added: “My daughter, you still don’t know all the great good that the creature receives with living in my Will and the great glory that she gives to her Creator. Every act that she does in him is a support that God makes upon his creature, support of his power, of love, of sanctity. How many more acts she goes repeating so much more we entrust ourselves to her and more we can support that which is ours, because there is our Will that gives capacity and strength to the creature in order to receive that which we want to give; instead if we don’t find our Will and his repeated acts in her, we don’t find where to support ourselves, not possessing, neither strength, nor capacity, nor space, where to be able to receive our gifts, nor grace to be able to entrust ourselves. Poor creature without our will! It is the true citadel without doors, without sentinels that defend it, exposed to all the perils; and if we want to give, it would expose our gifts and our life itself to uselessness and perils to undergo offenses and ingratitude, as to make us change the gifts, the graces, into chastisements.

“Because you must know that when the creature does our Will, we put in place our interests, we never work to our disadvantage; beforehand we put in safety the interests, our glory, and then we work; otherwise it would be as if we might not have care of our sanctity, nor might we appreciate our gifts, nor that which we might do, and neither might we know ourselves, nor our power, nor that which we can do. Who never undertakes an enterprise without putting in safety first his interests? No one; what can happen that for misfortune in his enterprise he can have some losses, but with having thought first to put into safety his interests, it will serve them that he doesn't descend from his condition, he can maintain himself in his state, instead if he might not have put in safety his interests, he could be reduced to die of hunger.

“Behold therefore we want the creature in our Will, because we want to put into safety our interests, that which we give, love, sanctity, goodness and all the rest. Our Volition takes the assignment to make them for us to retribute in as many divine acts; so that divine love we have given, and divine love she gives us. He transforms the creature in our sanctity, goodness, and makes us give holy and good acts, so that even her breath, her motion, her step is pure and holy, we feel in her acts the likeness of ours, because (as) such our Will renders them for us; and when we receive that which is ours from the creature, reciprocated in divine by our Fiat, our interest is in place, our love celebrates, our glory goes in triumph, and we prepare new surprises of love, of gifts and graces; when the interest comes to us, we don't mind anything anymore, we abound so much that the heavens are stupefied(.)”

* * *

October 30, 1938

“As the creature loves in our Volition we double (for) her new love.” Stupor/Amazement of heaven. How she acquires the right to judge.

My little walk in the Divine Volition continues, although it seems to me that I do it with difficulty, step by step but my sweet Jesus it seems that he is content, provided that she doesn't divert and go out of his Fiat; I can say that I am truly sick for the so many sorrowful incidents of my poor existence. and therefore he is content with the little that I do, however he doesn't leave from urging us, to allure me with telling me new surprises of his Volition in order to make me retake the flight. Hence visiting my little soul, he said:

“Blessed daughter of my Will, how I yearn that the soul live in our Divine Volition; so much is my satisfaction that as she goes repeating her acts in him, thus I go preparing new gifts, new graces, new love, new knowledge in order to make her know my Will always more and make her appreciate and esteem, the celestial sojourn which has had the great honor of residing in you. So that, if she loves, I double my new love, and if I return to love I (return) always with my new love and surprise her , so much so that the creature feels so inundated, that confused she repeats: ‘Possible that a God loves me so much?’ And while she says this, she is taken by the enthusiasm of my love, she returns to love me, and I again surprising her with my love; a competition of love happens, the human littleness harmonizes with the love of her Creator.

“And not only does she love me for herself, so much is my love that she feels that she loves me for everyone and for everything and my Fiat what does he do? With his power and immensity he puts in flight this love that we have given to the creature, he makes it circulate everywhere; and we feel that she loves us in every step, in every motion, in every thought, word and heartbeat of all creatures; she loves us in the sun, in the wind, in the air(,) in the sea, there is no thing where she doesn't love us; and oh, how we feel happy, glorified, that the creature loves us in everyone, and everywhere! With this we not only love her with new love, but all creatures; an act of love in my Will such prodigies happen, that the heavens aspire to be spectators in order to enjoy the new surprises of our love; and our own divinity, awaits with indescribable joy, that the creature comes into our Volition to love us in order to be able to make (a) display of our love, in order to feel ourselves loved by everyone, our love goes forth in field in order to make its way.

“And not only our love, but as the creature goes repeating her acts, in our Fiat, thus we put forth new power, new goodness, new wisdom in (a) way that she will feel animated by new power, goodness and wisdom (of) which everyone will take part; and we would have the joy of seeing you invest the human generations, with our new power, goodness and our wisdom.

“What can we not do with this creature that lives in our Volition? We arrive to so much that we give her the right to judge together with us, and if we see that she suffers, that the sinner must undergo rigorous judgments, in order not to have her suffer we make more mild our rigorous justices, and she makes us give the kiss of pardon, and in order to make her content we say to her: ‘Poor daughter, you have reason, you are ours, and you also belong to them, you feel in yourself the bonds of the human family, therefore you would like that we might forgive everyone, we will do how much more we can in order to content you minus that one might not despise or refuse our pardon.’

“This creature in our Will is the new Ester that wants to put in safety her people, and oh, how content we are to always hold her together with us in our Volition! Because through her means we feel more inclined to use mercy, to concede graces, to forgive the most obstinate sinners, and to make brief the sufferings of the purgative souls. Poor daughter! She has a thought for everyone, a sorrow similar to our sorrow, that she sees the human family as swimming in our Volition and they don’t recognize him, and they live in the midst of enemies, in the most squalid misery.”

Then he added: “My daughter, you must know, as the creature recognizes our Will, loves him, she wants to have her life in him, thus she pours herself into her God, and God pours himself into her; with this pouring forth on both parts, God makes the creature his, makes her take part in all his acts, rests in her, feeds her and makes her grow always more in his acts; and the creature makes her God hers, she feels him everywhere, takes her sweet rest in he who she loves and who forms her life and her everything.

“Other than this, as the creature does her act in our Fiat, thus we feel the bond of all created beings; in that act she wants to give us and make found everyone and everything, it seems that she makes us the visit from all beings, because everyone recognizes us, they love us and they make their obligation toward their Creator. And she makes herself supplicator\supplier of everyone, she loves for everyone and in everything, nothing must be lacking us in an act done in our Volition, otherwise we cannot say that it is our act. Our Will for decorum and honor makes himself provider to the creature of all that which all the other creatures should owe to do (for) us and all creation if it might have reason. If we might not find in our Will, in which the creature works, all our glory, the honor the exchange that is appropriate to us in order to have given life to so many, and create so many things in order to maintain these lives, where could we find it? Our Will diffuses into everyone, life and support of everything, ours is the greatest glory and the creature that lives in him he administers the occasion to her to have her complete that which every creature should give us, of the glory and of the exchange for having created them.

“We knew that the creature was finished, her littleness can not give us neither love, nor complete glory, and therefore we exposed our divine being, the power of our Volition in order to receive that which was owed us, and the creature living in our Volition was (the) guarantee that for everyone she might love and glorify us. Therefore they are rights that we demand, that she live in him; rights of creation, of redemption, rights of power, of justice and of immensity, that at least that which she can not do alone, she does it united with our Volition and thus we can say: ‘The creature loves us, glorifies us as we want and merit.’ Hence if you want to give us everything, love us for everyone, live always in our Volition and we would find everything and our rights will be satisfied.”

* * *

November 6, 1938

An act in the Divine Volition encloses and embraces everything. All that which the creature must do is in God. How the human acts, find the divine acts.

My poor mind feels transported by a supreme force into the sea of the Divine Will, and for how much I turn/tour and return in him, it is not ever given to me to turn (in) all of him; his immensity is so much, that it is not given to me to my littleness neither to look at all of him, nor to embrace him; and for how much it seems to me that I walk, so much is his immensity, that it seems to me to have made hardly a few steps. Whence I remained amazed, and my amiable Jesus, surprising me with his brief little visit, said to me:

“My good daughter, my immensity is unreachable, and neither can the creature embrace it all; and for how much we give them of ours, compared to our immensity, they can be called hardly little drops; it is enough to say to you, that even one act of our Will alone, so much is its greatness, that it surpasses all the possible and imaginable beings, it encloses and embraces everyone and everything; therefore the glory that we receive, when the creature offers her act and makes it invested by our Volition, is so very great, that it occupies all creation; because creation is without reason, while in the act in which the creature lets us work it holds the fullness of human reason, that invested by the divine one it surpasses the sky, the sun and everything.

“Hence if our glory is great, the exchange that we receive of love gives of the incredible, the good that the creature receives is incalculable. As she gives her act to us, and we make it ours, and thus everyone wants to give themselves to her, the sun with its light, the sky with its immensity, the wind with its power and empire, everyone finds (a) place in that act and they want to give themselves because their God becomes glorified with the fullness of a human reason, of which they are deprived.”

Jesus became silent, and I thought to myself: “How can it be that with only entering into the Divine Will our acts acquire so much good?” And Jesus resuming his saying added:

“My daughter, this happens in (a) simple and almost natural way, because our divine being is the most simple, thus our acts pure. Now you must know that all that which the creature had to do of good has been done, formed, fed by our Divine Volition; one can say that her acts existed, exist, will exist, in him; they are as orderly lined up and all hold their place in our Volition; more so that first it becomes formed in us and then in its time we bring it forth to the light.

“Now, with entering into our Volition, the soul finds all that which is already hers and that we want that she takes, hence the human acts find our divine acts established by us for her, they fling themselves, transform themselves, kiss each other, enclose themselves in our divine acts, that are already theirs, and the human one becomes divine act; and since our divine act is great, is immense, and the human one is little, it feels scattered in the divine one, as if it might lose (its) life; but it is not true, the little life exists, the human reason is lost, is closed, has become occupied by ours, with its highest honor and with our highest glory, because we have given of ours to the creature. And playing the little atom of the human volition, we make such prodigies of love, of our glory, as to astound heaven and earth and feel ourselves as reciprocated that we have created the creature with all the creation.

“Now, you must know that all that which the creature does in our Will remains written with indelible characters of light in our Fiat; it is these acts that with their infinite value, they will have power to give to the creature his Kingdom and therefore we await that these acts be completed; they will give such exchange of love and of glory to us, of graces to the living, as to equalize the part between the Creator and the creature, in order (for) our Will to be able to reign in the midst of the human family. One act in our Will is so much that we can do and give everything.”

After this he added: “My daughter, as the soul enters in our Volition, thus she finds all the truths that I have manifested to her and that she has known about my Divine Will; when they have been manifested to her she has received the seed of each one of them and she feels the possession of them. Now as she enters into him while she feels them in herself, thus she finds them in my Fiat like so many queens that giving her (a) hand, make her climb in God, making him all the more known, giving her new light and new graces. So that my truths form the ascent in order to go to God, and God seeing the creature climbing into his arms, feels so much love, that he descends into the depth of the creature, in order to enjoy his truths and to reconfirm and instruct her as he must unfold his life in the truth that she has known. One can say that the soul and God form a divine society that works together and loves with a single love.

“Now you must know that the acts done in my Volition unite the times and form of them one alone; distance doesn’t exist between them; they are so very unified that while they are, one can say, innumerable, they form one alone; so much so that one works in my Volition, one loves, one adores, uniting the times they find themselves united together with the same acts that innocent Adam did when he loved and worked in our divine fields of our Fiat, they incorporate themselves with the acts and love of the Celestial Queen and even with the same acts and love of our supreme being; these hold the power of identifying themselves with everyone, of taking their place of honor everywhere, where there is my Will, they can say: ‘It is our place.’

“These acts done in our Volition are gifted with divine value, each one possesses a happiness, a new joy, in a way that the creature forms in her acts innumerable joys, contentments and happiness without end, as to form for herself a paradise of delights and of beatitude, beyond that which her Creator will give her.

“And this is as connatural to her, because my Will when he works as much in ourselves, as in the creature, he makes arise the fullness of his joys and delights that he possesses, and invests that which he works. Possessing in nature his seas always new with infinite joys, he can not work if he doesn’t generate new joys and delights. Therefore all that which one does in my Volition acquires in virtue of him the nature of celestial joys, the inseparability of all the goods, and one can say: ‘All times are mine and I make of them one alone.’ What joy to be able to say: ‘I myself have formed paradise because the divine Fiat has worked together with me.’”

* * *

November 13, 1938

How the truths on the Divine Will will form the regime, the laws, the trained army. The knowledges will give the eyes in order to make such a good possessed. The distinction /badge of the Most Holy Trinity. Sign in order to know if we live in the Divine Will.

My flight in the Divine Volition continues, nor can I do less, I would feel as if I myself might kill my soul; heaven watch (over) me! And then how could I live without life? Whence, I thought to myself of the truths that Jesus had said to me on his Divine Will as if I might want to form doubts and might not understand well, and I said to myself: “Possible that one can arrive to so much living in the Divine Volition?” And my beloved Jesus, surprising me, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, do not marvel, my Will holds (the) power of making the creature arrive where he wants, provided that she be together with him. Now, you must know that his Kingdom will be formed, founded, upon the truths that he has manifested; how many more truths he manifests, so much more sumptuous, beautiful, majestic and more superabundant with goods and with joys will be this Kingdom. My truths will form the regime, the laws, the food, the trained army, the defense and life itself of whom will live in him; my truths will take every single distinct office of his, some will do as teacher, some as (a) most loving father, some as (a) most tender mother that in order not to expose her daughter to peril carries her in her womb, the crib in her arms, feeds her with her love, dresses her with light; in short every truth will be bearer of a special good.

“Do you see how will be my Kingdom of my Will (of) which I am speaking so much? And it displeases me when you are not attentive to write everything, because you will make missing one good more, because they will enjoy to according to what they will know; the knowledge will bring the life, the light, the good that it possesses; to possess a good without knowing it is almost impossible, it would be as if one might not have eyes in order to look, intelligence in order to understand, hands in order to work, feet in order to walk, heart in order to love. Instead the knowledge, the first thing that it does, it gives the eyes in order not to make it be a poor blind one, and making itself be looked at makes one understand and desire the good, the life that it wants to give them; more so that the knowledge of my truth makes itself actress and spectator in order to transmit its life into the creature.

“Now you must know that the acts done in my Volition are inseparable but well distinct between themselves, distinct in sanctity, in beauty, in love, in wisdom; they will have the distinction/badge of the Sacrosanct Triad, that while the divine persons are distinct between themselves, they are inseparable; one is the Will, one the sanctity, one the goodness, and so on. Thus these acts will be inseparable and distinct, they will enclose in themselves the distinction/badge of the Supreme Trinity, one and three, three and one; indeed, they will possess it as (their) own life; these acts will be our greatest glory and of all heaven, in seeing in these acts so many times multiplied our divine life for how many acts one has done in our Volition.”

Whence, I thought to myself: “How can one know if one lives in the Divine Volition?” And my sweet Jesus added:

“My daughter, it is easy to know it. You must know, that my Fiat when he reigns in the soul, holds his working and continuous act, nor does he know how to be without doing anything; he is life, and life must breathe, move, palpitate, make itself be felt, must hold his first act agent, and the creature feels under his empire, and follows his acts, almost in (a)continuous way in the Divine Volition. So that the continuation is a certain sign that one lives in him; with this continuation, one feels the need of breath, of motion, of the divine attitude, therefore if one interrupts his continuous acts one feels to be missing life, motion and everything, and she immediately resumes his continuous acts, because she knows that it costs her much not continuing her acts, it costs her divine life, and who has possessed him with difficulty lets him escape.

“Now, this working of the creature in him, do you know what it is? The carrying out of the life of my Will that he does in the creature; because he alone holds (the) virtue of not ever ceasing in his continuous acts; if this might be able to give, that which can not be, everyone and everything would remain as paralyzed and without life. Now the creature by itself doesn’t hold this virtue of working continually, on the contrary united to my Volition she holds (the) virtue, strength, will, love to do it. He knows how to change things provided that the creature allows herself (to be) carried, possessed by him! He knows how to make such changes, that the creature does not recognize herself anymore, she remains but a distant memory of her past life.

“Then there is another sign, my Will, in order to reign, when he sees the soul disposed, first he embalms her will, her sufferings, with an air of peace and then forms there his throne. Hence one who lives in my Volition possesses a strength that never becomes less, a love that while she loves no one she loves with true love everyone in God; and to how many sacrifices she is exposed, for everyone and (each) in particular! Poor daughter, she is the true martyr and victim of everyone! And oh, how many times in seeing her suffer I look at her with such tenderness and compassion, and in order to encourage her I say to her: ‘My daughter, you have undergone my same fate, poor daughter, courage! Your Jesus loves you more!’ And in feeling herself more loved by me, she smiles in the sufferings and abandons herself in my arms. My daughter, in order to experience, to possess that which my Will knows how to do it is necessary to remain within him, otherwise they won’t understand an H/(letter) of it.”

* * *

November 20, 1938

The spectator of the Divine Will. He forms the adaptable matter for the works of God. The little divine field.

It seems to me that the Divine Volition is inside and outside of me, in (the) act of surprising me when

I am about to do my little actions, to say my little I love you, in order to invest it with his light and make it his; he has an admirable and inimitable attention, that gives of the incredible, and if the creature is not attentive to give him her little acts, oh, how he suffers from it! Oh, how I would also like to be all attention in order to imitate him with not letting anything escaped me, so that we might be able to surprise each other side by side! But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus visiting my little soul all love said to me:

“My blessed daughter, the soul that wants to live in my Volition he becomes her spectator. He awaits her if she loves, because he wants to love together; if she works he awaits her, because he wants to be the actor and the spectator. So that my Will is in continuous anxieties and anticipations, of all that which the creature does, in order to invest it, in order to be the actor and to make them his. Indeed, you must know that as the soul enters into him, she finds the sanctity of God that invests her, his beauty that embellishes her, his love that transforms her in God, his purity that renders her so clear as to recognize her no more, his light that gives the divine likeness to her. Oh, how the power of my Will knows how to change the human fate. Behold therefore he becomes her spectator who wants to unfold his constant work, that ab eterno he holds prepared what he must do for that creature; he doesn't want to be repressed in his incessant motion; he arrives even to confine her in his eternal motion, so that she receives to give, in order not to suffer anticipations. Because (if) one who lives in his Volition doesn't have life together with him, he doesn't tolerate it; if he doesn't feel her in his divine motion, feel his divine sanctity (in) her, his love (is) stopped and suffocated.

“Therefore one who lives in our Fiat we hold our little divine field where we can unfold our work(,) our Will administers to us the adaptable matter in order to let us do the most beautiful works. Because when we want to work in the little field of the soul, we want to find the matter of our sanctity, because we never put our holy hands in human mud. In order to make our more beautiful works, we want to find our purity that attracts us, our beauty that enraptures us, our love that imposes itself upon us in order to make us work; and only our Will knows how to administer these divine matters of ours in order to let us work; everything is adaptable for us, and therefore we do work to make heaven and earth astounded.

“Instead where there is not our Volition, we are constrained to not be able to do anything, there are not our adaptable matters for us, and if there is some good, it is apparent good, flawed from one's own esteem and glory, from twisted intentions and we escape from working in her; because we will put in peril our most beautiful works; first we assure ourselves, and then we work.

“You must know that how many more acts one does in our Volition so much more one enters into God and more we enlarge the little field in our divine bosom and we can do more works more beautiful, we can give more of ours. So that the creature finds herself always under the growing act of our divine life; our love loves her so much, it carries her in (its) arms and makes us say continually: ‘We make you to our image and likeness.’ And it makes us grow her with our divine breath, with our sanctity, power and goodness, we look at her and we find our reflection, our wisdom and enchanting beauty; how to be able to be without this creature if we are tied with our divine prerogatives? If she possesses of ours and in order to love us, and in order to get herself out of debt for how much we have given her she gives us continually that which we have given her.

“Much more so that living in our Volition she has received from us (the) virtue of being able to produce life, not work; because we in giving our sanctity, our love and other we give the generative virtue, and she continually generates life of sanctity, life of love, life of light, of goodness, of power, of wisdom; and she offers them to us, surrounds us, and never finishes to give us exchange in life, that which we have given her; and oh, our satisfaction, our feast, our glory, in seeing return to us so many lives that love us, that glorify our sanctity! They make (an) echo to our light, wisdom and our goodness. The other creatures can give us at most work of sanctity, of love but not life; only one who lives in our Volition it is given to her to be able to form so many lives with her acts, because she has received from us the generative virtue to be able to generate how many lives she wants, in order to be able to say to us: ‘Life you have given me and life I give you.’

“Do you see therefore the great difference? Life speaks it is not subject to finish, it can generate, while works don’t speak, don’t generate, they are subject to disperse themselves. Therefore that which one can give us who lives in our Volition, how one can love us, no one can reach it; for how many great works they could do, they will be always little drops of water before the sea, the little light before the sun; a single I love you of this creature remains [leaves] all the love of all the other creatures united together behind. This I love you, for however little, walks, races, embraces and elevates itself over everyone; it comes into our arms and embraces us with its, it makes for us (a) thousand caresses. It tells us so many beautiful things of our love, shelters itself in our bosom we feel it always saying: ‘I love you, I love you, I love you life of my life, you have generated me, and I will always love you.’

“Whatever thing she wants to do he doesn’t do other than to form life if she does good acts and holy possessing the life of our Will she generates the life of our goodness and of our sanctity, and coming into our arms they speak to us of the story of our goodness and sanctity; and oh, how many beautiful things they say to us! With how much grace they narrate to us where our goodness arrives, what height and greatness of sanctity we possess! They never finish to say how very good and holy we are; and casting themselves into our divine bosom they penetrate into the most intimate hideaways in order to know more of how very good and holy we are and they remain to praise us how very good and holy we are; and oh, how beautiful it is to hear narrated our divine story to us from a human will, united with ours that suggests to them who is one’s Creator! In short, if she wants to glorify us she generates the life of our glory, and narrates our glory to us; if she admires our power, wisdom and beauty, she feels in herself as life our divine qualities, and she narrates to us how powerful, wise and beautiful we are. She says to us: ‘Life of my life, I have known you and I feel the need to speak of you and to narrate your divine story to you.’

“These lives are our greatest glories, our wide/generous generation, inseparable from us; they are always in motion, they always have something to say of our supreme being; and one life, doesn’t await the other, while of it another comes racing afterwards, and then still another, it doesn’t ever finish; our contentment is full, the purpose of creation is realized; that is the company of the creature that knows us. And while we enjoy her and she is with us, we make her grow in our likeness. Who is there that doesn’t love the company of one who belongs to him? More so we love the company of the creature, because we are life of her life.

“Therefore our sorrow was great when Adam, our first child, descended from within our Volition in order to do his, the poor little one lost the generative virtue of generating with his acts divine life, at the most he could do works not life. He, united with our Volition, held the divine virtue in his power and therefore could form with his acts how much life he wanted; it happened to him as to a sterile mother that it is not given her to be able to generate, or yet as to a person that wants to do a work that possesses thread of the most radiant pure gold, this one removes from himself the gold thread, rather he puts it under (his) feet. The gold thread that has departed from him is my Will as life, the thread is substituted with his will which one can call iron thread. Poor little one! Works of gold he could do no more, invested by the radiant sun of my Volition; he must content himself to do works of iron, and if also required dirty works of passions. The fate of Adam underwent such mutation that he was almost not recognizable anymore; he descended into the abyss of miseries, the strength, the light were no more in his power; before sinning, in everyone and his acts grew in him our image and likeness, because it was an assignment that we took in the act of creating him, and we wanted to maintain our assignment, to hold in vigor our creative word, through means of his own acts, also to always hold him together with us and to be in continuous communication with him.

“Hence our sorrow was great, if in our omniscience it might not have made present to us that our Will should reign as life in future centuries, that was as a balm to our intense sorrow, for force of sorrow we would have reduced into nothing all creation, because our Will not reigning it served us no more, he had to serve only to creatures, while we created all things that should serve us and them. Therefore pray that my Will returns as life, and you be his victim.”

* * *

November 26, 1938

The disposition calls the divine work. The Divine Will puts the divine motion in one who lives in him. How one can give everything to his Creator. Enchantment of the divine pupils. The Blessed and the wayfarer.

I am beneath the eternal waves of the Divine Volition, which wants to always give himself to creatures, but wants that she also should want it, he doesn't want to be an intruder that is made to find himself inside without her at all knowing it, he wants to be searched (for), he wants to give her his kiss of love, and then, as triumphator loaded with gifts, he enters into her and fills her with his gifts. But while I thought this, my sweet Jesus, who feels the need of entrusting his secrets to his creature, said to me:

“My blessed daughter, my Volition wants to give, but wants to find the disposition of the creature in order to dispose his gifts. The disposition is as earth in the hands of the farmer, for how many seeds he might have and might not hold an earth where to cast his seeds, never could he sow; and if earth might have reason and would not be disposed to receive his seeds, the poor farmer would feel cast in the face in the eyes the seeds with which he would like to enrich it. Such is my Will he wants to give but if he doesn't find the soul disposed he would not find the place where to put his gifts, he would feel them cast in the face with his highest sorrow, and if he wants to speak to her he would find her without hearing in order to let one listen.

“Therefore the disposition prepares the soul, it opens the divine doors, gives the hearing, puts her in communication; if they feel first, that which my Volition wants to give, in a way that she loves, yearns

(for) that which she should receive, if she is not disposed we give nothing, because we don't want to expose our gifts to uselessness. Instead the disposition serves as earth to the farmer, that is surrendered to that which he wants to do, it lets him work, hoe, form the furrows in order to put in safety the seed with which he wants to fill it.

“Thus our supreme being, if we find the disposition we do our works, we prepare her, we purify her, with our creative hands we prepare the place where to put our gifts and form our most beautiful works. Instead, if she is not disposed, with all our power, we can do nothing, because her inside is encumbered with stones, with thorns, with vile passions, and since she is not disposed she doesn't lend herself to let us take them away; how many sanctities go (up) in smoke for lack of the disposition! More so, that if she is not disposed she is not adapted to live in our Divine Volition, rather it seems that it is not for her; her sanctity grounds her, her purity makes her shame, her light blinds her. Instead if she is disposed she throws herself into his arms and lets him do that which we want to do; indeed, she is like a little child receiving our works with such love as to feel ourselves enraptured; and our Volition, what does he do? He makes his divine motion flow. With this divine motion she finds in act all our works, she kisses them, embraces them, invests them with her little love, she finds my conception, my birth in act, and with her love she wants to be conceived and reborn with me; and I not only let her do it, but I feel such a contentment that I feel reciprocated that I was born upon the earth, because I find one who is reborn together with me. But she goes ahead still more, the divine motion that she possesses makes her race everywhere and she finds, as a trained army, all that which my humanity did, my tears, my words and prayers, my steps, my sufferings; everything she takes, kisses, adores; there is nothing done by me that she doesn't invest with her love. And then, what does she do? She makes everything hers, and with a childlike way and grace she encloses everything in her womb, elevates it on high, she comes before our divinity there she arrays them around and with (an) emphasis of love says to us: ‘Adorable majesty, how many beautiful works I bring you! Everything is mine and everything I bring to you, so that all love you, adore you, glorify you and reciprocate you with the so much love that you have for me and for everyone.’

“This divine motion that my Volition puts in the creature that lives in my Volition is the new life that she receives; with this motion she holds right over everything, that which is ours is hers, therefore she can give everything; and oh, how many surprises she makes us! She always holds to give us. With this divine motion she holds (the) virtue to race everywhere, and now she brings us the creation in order to love us as we have loved her in all the created things, now she brings us all creatures in order to love us for everyone and with everyone, now she brings us all that which I did being on the earth, in order to say to us: ‘I love you as you want to be loved’; it is never stopped. It seems that she doesn't know how to be, if she doesn't make for us new surprises of love; she wants the intent to be able to say to us: ‘I love him, I love him always.’ And we call her our joy our perennial happiness; because there is no joy more beautiful for us than the continuous love of the creature.

“Because you must know that an act done in our Volition is more than sun that rises, which invests with its light all the earth, the sea, the springs, even the littlest blade of grass does not become put aside, everyone is invested with light. Thus an act done in him races, searches, invests everything, forms its mantle of the most radiant silver outside and within creatures, and thus pearled it carries them to us before our adorable majesty and makes us pray through our own Will with voices of light, with speaking love for everyone, and putting a sweet enchantment to our divine pupils, makes us see all creatures mantled in our divine light, and we ourselves exalt the power of our Fiat, that with the power of his light knows how to hide the human miseries and even converts them into light, to one act of his he doesn't deny anything, because he holds (the) power to give us everything and to make up for everyone."

In hearing this I thought to myself: "If a wayfaring creature can do so much that lives in his Volition with one act alone, what won't the blessed in heaven do that have perennial life in him? And my sweet Jesus added:

"My daughter, there is (a) great difference between the blessed and the wayfaring soul. The blessed don't have anything to add on; the life, their acts, their will remained fixed in us, and they can say: 'We completed our day'; to do more is not given them, at the most we can give ourselves new joys and new love. Instead the wayfarer, her day is not finished and if she wants and lives in our Volition she can work prodigies of graces, of light for the whole entire world; prodigies of love for her Creator. Therefore all our solicitude is for the wayfarer soul, because our work is still in progress, it is not finished, and if she lends herself we will do works not ever done, works so very beautiful as to make heaven and earth astonished.

"Therefore our sorrow is great when we find the wayfarer that doesn't lend herself to let us do the most beautiful works that we want to do; how many of our commenced works (are) not finished! Others the most beautiful (are) broken. Because only in our Volition and for one who lives in him, can we complete our works, with an inarrivable beauty; because she administers to us the adaptable matter in order to do that which we want to do; outside of him we don't find neither sufficient light, nor love that rises, nor divine matter, we are constrained to fold (our) arms, without being able to go onward. And how many don't live in our Volition?

"And then, for the wayfarer there is the coin of the merit that races, and (in) all her acts animated by our Volition becomes coined our divine image, containing infinite value; so that when she wants she holds the coin in order to pay us (for) that which she wants. Therefore our work and interest is for the souls that are en route, because it is (a) time of conquests, while in heaven there are not acquisitions, but only joy and happiness."

* * *

November 30, 1938

One who turns in the Divine Volition and recognizes him in his works, receives the dowry that God has given them and forms her days, makes herself messenger of peace between heaven and earth. The divine generation. The bearer.

I was making my round in the acts of the Divine Volition done for our love, and it seemed to me that everyone wanted to be recognized what they had done and how much they had loved us and how they love us, not being subject to finish their love. Whence I thought to myself: "What is the good that I do always returning in the acts of the Divine Volition?" And my always amiable Jesus, surprising me, all goodness said to me:

"My blessed daughter, you must know that all that which we have done as much in the creation, as in the redemption, we didn't do other than to form the dowry, in order to endow creatures with our own goods and works. Now, one who comes into our Volition comes to take possession of her dowry, to recognize it and love it, and as she turns in him in order to know her most extensive dowry that her Creator has given her, thus it forms her day in time; so that how many times she turns, walks, loves, knows, so many days she forms, and I therefore have given her this great dowry that she can receive and know in time, so that she makes her days, which will be the days that will crown the eternal day of eternity that never finishes; hence how much more she turns in him so many more days she forms that will render her more rich and glorious in heaven.

“And if the creature might not take care to recognize, to possess, to love, this great dowry, first, that would be a poor unhappy one that lives in the miseries and is constrained to die of hunger, while she possesses so many goods. It would happen as to a father that endows his child with his most extensive properties, the which does not take care neither to know them, nor to go there often in order to possess and to enjoy the dowry that the father himself has given to her; this child with all the dowry that she could possess, because she does not care, doesn't recognize it as rich, she is poor, and one can say that she has descended from the nobility of the father, as if she were not his legitimate child. What sorrow would it not be (for) the poor father, that while he is so very rich he sees the child poor, covered with rags, and begs the bread of the others? This child, if she might have power, would make the father himself die of sorrow.

“In such state one finds our supreme being; all that which we have created was (a) dowry that we gave to the creature in order to make her happy and rich, and in order to let her know who we are, how much we have loved and done for her; hence one who doesn't turn in our works, doesn't recognize them, and neither possesses them, nor forms there the merit of her days in time. Isn't this a great sorrow for us? Therefore always come into our works; how much more you will come so much more will you recognize them, will love them and with right you will hold possession of them.

“Beyond this, every act done in my Will is a messenger of peace that departs from earth and comes into heaven and comes to put peace between heaven (and) earth; every word said on my Volition, carries the bond of peace, and one who comes in him to live, the first good that she receives is the bond of peace between her and us; she feels as embalmed in our divine peace. With this bond of peace, she feels in herself the virtue of making peace between heaven and earth, everything is peace in her; peaceful are the words, the glances, the motions; oh, how many times with a word she puts peace between us and the creature! A single sweet glance of hers and she peacefully wounds us and makes us change the scourges into graces! Therefore all her acts are none other than bonds of peace, peaceful messengers that bring the kiss of peace of creatures to God and of God to creatures.

“Even more so how much more the creature lives in our Will more so she penetrates into our divine family, she acquires more (of) our ways, becomes put to knowledge of our secrets, she resembles us more, we love her and she loves us more, and she puts us in (the) condition of always giving her new graces, new surprises of love, we hold her in our house belonging to our family; we can say: ‘She eats at our table, sleeps upon our knees.’ To live without her we can not do it; our Volition binds her in a way that renders her to us amiable, attractive, that we can not remain without her, nor her without us.”

After this he added: “My daughter, our desire is great, that creatures might live in our Volition. We find ourselves in the condition of a poor mother that feels the need to bring forth her birth and is not able to, she doesn’t have (a place) where to put it, nor one to whom to entrust it, nor one who receives it, poor mother, how much she suffers! Thus our supreme being finds itself, we feel the need to generate ourselves and where to put ourselves? If our Will is not life of the creature there is no place for us, we don’t have one to whom to entrust ourselves, nor one who feeds us, nor the cortege that is needed (by) us (for) our adorable majesty. And since our Most Holy Trinity is always in (the) act of generating, these births of ours remain repressed in ourselves, while we want to generate our Divine Trinity in creatures; but since they don’t live in our Volition, there is no one who receives our divine generation. What sorrow to see us conceal in ourselves without being able to unfold the great good that our eternal generation can do in the creature! Our Will embraces everything, and one who lives in him, as she forms her acts, thus she makes herself the bearer of everyone; if she loves she carries the love of everyone to us, if she adores she carries the adoration of everyone to us, if she suffers she encloses the satisfaction of everyone. One act in our Volition must surpass, enclose, embrace everyone and everything; and it arrives even to make itself bearer of our supreme being, because we never go out from our Volition, and one who lives in him can enclose us in her every act in order to bring us where she wants, to creatures in order to make us known, to all the creation in order to say to us: ‘How very beautiful are your works!’; to ourselves, in order to say to us: ‘You see how much I love you, that I arrive even to carry yourself to you.’

“We find ourselves in the conditions in which one finds the sphere of the sun, that never goes out from within the circle of its rays, and if these descend even into the depths of the earth, it invests everything, even the little seedling, its sphere, from the heights where it finds itself, is never drawn away by its light, it walks together and does that which its rays do. Such are we, we are the bearers of our Will, and she is our bearer; we are one life alone, and one who lives in him makes herself bearer of our divine being, and we make ourselves bearers of little human will. And we love her so much that she forms our victory and most beautiful joy to see completed in her our Will.”

* * *

December 5, 1938

Yearnings of God that one lives in his Volition. How he holds established that he will make so many divine lives for how many things he has created and for how many acts the creature will do in his Volition. How his sanctity, his love will remain formed in them.

The sea of the Divine Volition always murmurs, he forms his highest waves in order to assail creatures now with light, now with love, now with enchanting beauty now with groans that want his spot in creatures in order to live in them; his love is indescribable and would arrive to excesses, he would use all his stratagems of love, provided that he might have the liberty of living and of making us live in his Fiat! I remained surprised in seeing this, and my amiable Jesus, said to me:

“Daughter of my Will, you don’t know where our love arrives and what we will do in order to make the creature live in our Will, this is the most beautiful point of the creation and if we don’t do this we can say our work is not completed, nor have we done that which we know how to and can do, we can say that we have not done anything of that which remains (for) us to do.

“You must know that ab eterno it has been established by our divinity, that so many lives we will make of ourselves, for how many things we have created and for how many acts the creature will do in our Will. Being (that) our being (is) superior to everything it is just that in its lives it exceeds the number of all the created things and of all the acts of the human family. Now, if the creature doesn’t live in our Will, we can not do it, there would be missing the divine material, in order to form our life in her acts, there would be missing the place where to put it; and then, to form these lives of ours without one who might want to receive them, without one who might know them and might love them, (is) to what advantage? Do you see therefore how it concerns the most beautiful act, the most powerful and wise? It concerns exposing our lives that we already hold generated in our bosom, and we can not bring them forth, because our Volition doesn’t reign. And it seems little to you that which the great work of the creation lacks? It is the most interesting act, the most culminating point in which the creation and all acts will be enveloped with a beauty so rare, a glory so great, as to make remain as so many drops the beauty that they have known of us and the glory that they have given us of the past.

“My daughter, oh, how we yearn (for) it! How our love quivers, groans, is delirious, that the creature live in our Volition! And since we know that many things will be lacking them in order to be able to make use of her acts in order to form our life, we are disposed to our continuous work in order to make up for her in everything; in every act of hers we will give her our love, our sanctity, our goodness and beauty, because nothing lacks for that which is necessary in order to form our life, and thus we will generate and will produce ourselves; and oh, how much exchange of love, of sanctity, of goodness we will have! We will felicitate ourselves in the sweet enchantment of our beauty, how must we not yearn that one lives in our Volition that it is not only the creature that we will have, but our own life generated in her acts? And while we will enjoy one life of ours, another will follow and then still another according to the acts that she will do. As we will see that she is about to do the act we will put forth of ours, and we will make of our own lives actors and spectators; what joy, what happiness, my daughter, to be able to form ourselves, to hold one who knows and loves us, and to possess our palace in the creature!

“Beyond this, the great good that the creature will have, her little sanctity will remain in ours, her little love will remain in ours, her goodness and beauty will remain in ours, in a way that if she will do a holy act, it will hold our sanctity in its power, if she loves she will love with our love and so on, in a way that her acts will arise from within our acts, because all that which is done in our Volition doesn’t go out neither from us, nor from within our acts. So that she will always love us and we will always feel loved; she will always grow in sanctity(,) goodness and beauty. With this she will always acquire new knowledges of her Creator, because she will feel him palpitating in her acts; my Will will make himself revealed, he will always tell her new things of our divine being, and in order to make her appreciate our life that she possesses all the more. The knowledge makes new love arise, it communicates other varieties of our beauty, it won’t give (only) time to time to tell her new things, as feeding her with that which we are. The happy creature will feel taken in the net of our love, she will feel invested by our light and by the enchantment of our beauty, and we will be so very enraptured with her love that we will refresh ourselves in her in order to love and in order to give vent to our love, and we will embellish her so much as to make ourselves undergo the enchantment of a beauty so rare.

“Therefore all the other things we can call little drops to the comparison of the creature living in our Volition. Hence be attentive; you will give me the greatest contentment, you will make me happy if you will live in my Will.”

After this I continued to think of the great good of living in the Divine Volition, and sweet Jesus resumed his saying:

“My daughter, so much is this good, that I feel our palpitating life alive in her, so much so that we don’t have need anymore of words in order to make ourselves understood, our breath in hers is word, which invests the human being transmutes it into our word, and she feels that he speaks in the mind, in the works, in the steps; and the virtue of our creative word invests her in a way that makes itself felt in the most intimate fibers of the heart and changes the creature into my word itself. My word becomes nature in her and not to do that which I say and want would be as if she might go against herself, that which cannot be.

“So that for one who lives in my Volition I am word in the breath, in the motion, in the intelligence, in the glance, in everything; so much so that while she feels herself fused and soaked in my word not having felt the sound of my voice she is amazed and says: ‘How can I feel my nature changed into his word and I don’t know when he said it to me.’ And I say her: ‘You don’t know that I am word in every instant? And although you don’t listen to me I speak, knowing that when you will enter into the Cabinet of your soul, you will find it and you will take the gift of my word.’ My words don’t run away but they remain and transform the human nature into him. Such union and transformation passes between one who lives in our Volition and us that we (make) ourselves understood without speaking, and we speak without word. And this is the greatest gift that we can make the creature, to speak with the breath, with the motion. She is so very unified with us that we use the same ways as we use with ourselves, and in spite of that our divine being is all word and voice, when we don’t want to we don’t make ourselves felt by anyone. Therefore be attentive and allow yourself to be guided in everything by my Volition.”

* * *

December 8, 1938

How the humanity of Our Lord served to veil his divinity, and the prodigies of the Divine Volition. How all created things and the creature herself are veils that hide the divinity. The Immaculate Conception, rebirth of everyone.

The flight in the Divine Volition continues, it seems to me that in all natural and spiritual things he makes himself found and with an indescribable love says: I am here, we are together, not to be alone; without me you would not know how to do as I do and I would remain with sorrow to have been put aside, and you would remain with sorrow of not having in your acts the value of one single act of a Divine Will. While I thought this, my sweet Jesus, repeating his brief little visit to me, all goodness said to me:

“My blessed daughter, my most holy humanity was the depositary of my Divine Will, there was no act little and great, even the breath, the motion, that my humanity making itself veil didn’t hide in all my divine Fiat; rather, I would not have known how to breathe, nor to move, if it might not have enclosed it in me. So that my humanity, served me as veil in order to hide my divinity, and the great prodigy of the work of my Volition in all my acts.

“If this was not so no one would have been able to draw near me, my majesty, the glaring light of my divinity, would have eclipsed and knocked them down, and everyone would run away from me. Who would ever have dared to give me the littlest suffering? But I loved the creature, and I didn’t come on earth in order to make display of my divinity, but of my love, and therefore I wanted to hide myself within the veil of my humanity in order to unite myself with man, to do that which he himself did, even to make him give me unheard of pains and death itself.

“Now one who unites with my humanity in all her acts, in her sufferings, with wanting to find my Will in order to make him hers breaks the veil of my humanity and finds in my acts the fruit, the life, the prodigies that he did in me, and receives as her life that which I did in myself; and my humanity will serve her for help, for guide, it will do for her as (a) teacher (for) how to live in him; in a way that I will hold myself on earth, which will continue to make me (the) veil in order to hide that which my Will wants to do. Instead if they will search (for) me without my Volition they will find only my veil, but they won’t find the life of my Volition, which can not produce the prodigies that he worked in the hideaway of my humanity. It is always my Will that knows how to hide in the creature the greatest prodigies, the most radiant suns, the wonders not ever seen, how many of my living humanities I would have held on earth, but alas, I search (for) them and I don’t find them because there is not one who searches with all firmness my Will.”

Dear Jesus became silent and I remained to think of that which he had said to me, and touched with (my) hand all that which Jesus had done, said and suffered, they were carriers of the Divine Volition, and resuming his speaking he added:

“My good daughter, not only (did) my humanity in a very special way hide my divinity and Will but all created things, and the creature itself is (a) veil that hides our divinity and adorable Will; the sky is (a) veil that hides our immense divinity, firmness and immutability; and the multiplicity of the stars, the manifold effects that our immensity, firmness and immutability possesses. Oh, if man under that azure vault might be able to see our disclosed divinity, without the veils of that azure that covers us and hides us! From our majesty he would remain crushed (in) his littleness and would walk trembling feeling (on) himself the continuous watch of a God pure, holy, strong and powerful; but since we love man we veil ourselves lending ourselves to that which he needs, but as hidden.

“The sun is (a) veil that hides our inaccessible light, our glaring majesty; indeed we must make a miracle in order to restrain our uncreated light in order not to arouse fright in him, and veiled by this light created by us, we approach each other, we kiss him, we warm him; we extend this veil of light even under his steps to the right to left, beneath his head; we arrive to fill his eye with light, who knows the delicacy of his pupil recognizes us; not at all, in vain! He takes the veil of light that hides us and we remain the unknown God in the midst of creatures. What sorrow!

“So that the wind is (a) veil that hides our empire, the air is (a) veil that hides our continuous life that we give to creatures, the sea is (a) veil that hides our purity, our refreshments and divine freshness; its murmur hides our continuous love, and when we see that she doesn’t listen to us, we arrive to form the highest waves as to riot, so that they recognize us and because we want to be loved, whatever good man receives, there is veiled within our life that offers (it to him).

“Our divinity, that loves man so much arrives to veil itself even with earth in order to make it firm and stable beneath his steps in order not to let him stagger; even in the bird that sings, in the flowering meadows, in the various sweetnesses of the fruits our divinity veils itself in order to offer him our joys and let him taste the innocent delights of our divine being. And then what to say to you of how many prodigies of love, are we veiled and hidden in man? We veil ourselves in the breath, in the heartbeat, in the motion, in the memory, intellect and will; we veil ourselves in his pupil, in his word, in his love. And oh, how it hurts us not to be recognized, nor loved! We can say: ‘We live in him, we carry him and make ourselves carried by him, nor could he do anything without us, and yet we live together without knowing us!’ What sorrow! If he might know us the life of the man should be the greatest prodigy of our love and omnipotence, from within their veils they should not do other than to offer him our sanctity, our love, to cover him with our beauty, to have him enjoy our delights; but since he doesn’t recognize us, he holds us as the God far away from him; if we are not recognized we can not give, it would be like to give to the blind ones our goods. And he is constrained to live under the nightmare of his miseries and passions; poor man who doesn’t know us, neither in the veils that hide us in him, nor in the veils of all created things; he doesn’t do other than to escape from our life and from the purpose for which he was created. And many times not being able to support his ingratitude the goods that contain our veils change for him into chastisement.

“Therefore recognize in yourself that you are not other than a veil that hides your Creator, so that, you receive and we can administer to you in all your acts our divine life; recognize him in the veils of all created things so that everyone helps you to receive such a good.”

After this I was making my round in the acts of the Divine Volition. How many surprises in this Volition so holy! And what is more, he awaits the creature in order to keep her to light of his works, in order to make her know how much he loves her and in order to make a gift of that which he does; he feels the mania of always giving without ever ceasing, and is content, for exchange, with the little I love you of the creature. Whence, I arrived to the Conception of my Queen Mama, how many wonders! And my sweet Jesus, resuming his speech, said to me:

“My blessed daughter today is the feast of the Immaculate Conception, it is the most beautiful feast, more great for us and for heaven and earth. We, in the act of calling from the nothing this celestial creature, worked such prodigies and wonders that heavens and earth remained filled by it; we called everyone, no one was put aside so that everyone might remain reborn together with her. So that it was the rebirth of everyone and all of ours. (The) divine being overflowed so much from us, that we put at her disposition, in the act of conceiving, seas of love, of sanctity, of light with which she could love everyone, make everyone holy, and give light to everyone; the celestial tiny one felt reborn in her little Heart an innumerable people.

“And our paternal goodness, what did it do? First we make (a) gift to ourselves, so that we might enjoy and might court her, and she might enjoy and court us, and then we made (a) gift to every single creature. Oh, how she loved us and loved everyone with such intensity and fullness that there is no point that she didn’t make her love arise! All the creation, the sun, the wind, the sea, is full of love of this holy creature, because it felt also reborn with her to new glory; more so that they had the great glory of possessing their queen; so much so that when she prays to us for the good of her people, she, with a love which is not given to resist, says to us: 'Adorable majesty, remember what you gave me, already I am yours and I am theirs, hence with right you must grant it to me.'"

* * *

December 18, 1938

God doesn't give if the creature doesn't want to receive. Sorrowful conditions when one doesn't live of the Divine Volition. The depositor of all creation. Divine food, love. Condition of God when one doesn't live of the Divine Volition, how one descends from his likeness.

I am always between the arms of the Divine Volition, which makes everything present to me, in order to say to me: 'I have done everything for you, but I want that you recognize to what excesses my love has arrived.' But while my mind was lost my always amiable Jesus who wants to be always the first narrator of the Fiat and of their works, all goodness said to me:

"My blessed daughter, the making known what we have done for creatures is for us as the exchange of all that which we have done, but to whom can we do it? To one who lives in our Volition, because he gives the capacity in order to make us understood, the hearing in order to make us heard, and transmutes the human will to want that which we want to give them. We never give if the creature doesn't want to receive and doesn't know that which we want to give. You see, therefore, in what sorrowful conditions they put us when one doesn't live of our Will; they render us the mute God, nor can we make known how much we love them and how they should love us; it can be said, the communications remain broken between heaven and earth.

"Now, you must know that everything was created in order to make it a gift to creatures; every created thing, we made it bearer of the gift and of the love with which we endowed that gift. But do you know why? The creature didn't have anything to give us; we, loving her with highest love and wanting that she might have something to give us, (because if she doesn't have something to give the correspondence finishes, the friendship becomes broken, the love dies), we furnished the creature with so many gifts of ours, as if they were hers, so that she might have something to give us.

"Therefore one who lives in our Volition, we make her the depositary of all creation. And oh, our joy, our contentment, when making use of our gifts and in order to love us she says to us: 'You see how much I love you, I give you the sun in order to love you and I love you with that love with which you loved me in the sun; I give you the homages, the adorations of its light, its manifold effects in order to love you, its continuous act of light, in order to spread me everywhere and to put for you my I love you in all that which his light touches!' Now do you know what happens? We see all the light of the sun ruling, all its effects, from wherever its light passes, the I love you, the adorations, the homages of the creature; indeed, there is more; the sun carries as in triumph the love of the Creator (and) of the creature. So that we feel united in the sun with one Will alone and with one heart alone. And if the creature feeling that she wants to love us more, boldly says to us: 'You see how much I love you, but it is not enough for me, I want to love you more, therefore I enter into his inaccessible, immense and eternal light, that never finishes, and inside of that light I want to love you with your eternal love.' You can not understand our joy in seeing that not only does she love us in our gifts, but also in ourselves, and we as conquered by her love, we repay her with doubling the gift and with giving ourselves into her power in order to make ourselves loved not only as we love in our works but as we love in ourselves and in order to love her.

“And so in all the other created things, she makes use of it in order to make us new surprises of love, in order to reciprocate the gifts with us, in order to maintain the correspondence, in order to say to us that she loves us continually; and we don’t know how to receive if we don’t give, we double the gifts; but the greatest gift, is when we see her carried in the arms of our Will; we feel so very drawn that we can not do less than to speak of our supreme being, to tell her one knowledge more of that which we are. It is the greatest gift that we can do that exceeds all the creation; knowing our works is gift; to make ourselves known is our life that we give, it is to admit her to our secrets, it is to entrust the Creator with the creature.

“To live in our Volition, to be loved, is everything for us. More so that the love of ourselves forms our continuous food. My Celestial Father generates without ever ceasing his Son because he loves; with generating me he forms the food as to feed ourselves; I, his Son, love with his same love and the Holy Spirit proceeds; with this we form other food in order to feed ourselves. If we created the creation it was because we love; and we sustain it with our creative and conservative act it is because we love; this love serves us for food. If we want that the creature knows us in our works and in ourselves it is because we want to be loved, and of this love we make use of it in order to feed ourselves. We never despise love, because it is love, it serves us, it is our stuff; our love appeases the hunger with the beloved being; and having done everything for love, we want that heaven and earth, creatures, and everything be for us all love; and if it is not all love, there enters the sorrow that gives us the delirium that we love and we are not loved.

“Now, our Will is our life, love is food. You see to what (a) high, noble, sublime point, we want the creature that forms in herself the life of our Will, (in) which, all things, the circumstances, the crosses, even the air that she breathes will convert into love, in order to feed her in a way to be able to say: ‘The life of our Volition is yours and is ours and we feed with the same food.’

“With this we see the creature grow to our image and likeness and these are our true joys in the creation; in order to be able to say to our children: ‘We resemble each other.’ And what should not be the joy of the creature to be able to say: ‘I resemble my Celestial Father.’ Therefore I want that she live in my Volition, because I want my children who resemble me.

“If these children don’t return to me in my Volition, we find ourselves in the condition of a poor father that, while he is noble, he possesses a science to be able to give lessons to everyone, he is rich and endowed with goodness and with rare beauty. Instead the children don’t resemble him at all, they have descended from the nobility of their father, they become poor, idiots, ugly, dirty as to make one disgust; the poor father feels dishonored in the children, indeed he looks at them and almost doesn’t recognize them; and in seeing them blind, lame, sick, and (that) they don’t even arrive to recognize (their) own father, these children form the sorrow of the father himself. Such are we; one who doesn’t live in our Volition dishonors us and forms our sorrow, how can they resemble us if our Will is not theirs? The which feeds our children with our same food, the which doesn’t do other than as they feed themselves thus he forms in them our sanctity, they remain embellished with our beauty, they acquire such knowledge of their Father, because our Fiat with his light speaks to them, tells them so many things of their father even to make them fall in love so much so that they can not be without him; and this produces the likeness.

“Daughter without my Will there is not neither one who feeds them nor one who instructs them, nor one who forms them, nor one who grows them as children that resemble us. They go out from our residence and don’t know neither that which we do, nor who we are; nor how we love them, nor what they must do in order to resemble us; hence our likeness is distant from them. How can we resemble each other if they don’t know us and there is no one who speaks to them of our divine being?”

* * *

December 25, 1938

The descent of the Word. How easy it is to make Jesus born provided that one lives in his Volition. The paradise that let the Queen of Heaven find her little Jesus on earth.

My poor mind continues its walk in the Divine Volition; oh, how happy he feels in seeing that his little newborn goes in search of his acts, in order to know them, kiss them, adore them, make them hers and say to him: ‘How much you have loved me!’ Whence I stopped in the descent of the Word upon the earth and I was sorry for him in seeing him alone. And my sweet Jesus with an indescribable tenderness surprising me said to me:

“My dearest daughter, you are wrong, the solitude was part of human ingratitude; but from the divine part and of our works, all accompanied me nor did they ever leave me alone. Rather, you should know that together with me descended the Father and the Holy Spirit while I remained with them in heaven, they descended with me on earth. We are inseparable; we ourselves if we wanted we could not separate ourselves; at the most we bilocate; and while we hold our throne in heaven, we form our throne on earth, but to separate ourselves not ever; at the most the Word took the operative part, however the Father and the Holy Spirit (are) always concurrent.

“Indeed, in the act that I descended from heaven, everyone moved in order to make (my) cortege and in order to give me the honors due to me; heaven courted me with all its stars giving me the honors of my immutability and of my love to me that never finishes; the sun courted me, giving me the honors of my eternal light, oh, how well it praised me the multiplicity of its effects, I can say making for me (a) cradle with its light and with its heat in its mute language it said to me: ‘You are light and I honor you, I adore you, I love you, with that same light with which you created me.’

“Everyone surrounded me, the wind, the sea, the little birdie, everyone and everything in order to give me the love(,) the glory with which I had created them, and some praised me my empire, my immensity, some my infinite joys, created things made for me (a) feast and if I cried they also cried, because my Will residing in them held them to light of that which I did; and oh, how they felt honored in doing that which their Creator did! Then I had the cortege of the angels, that never left me alone. And since all times are mine, I had the cortege of my great people that would have lived in my Volition, the which brought it to me in his arms and I felt it beating in my Heart, in my blood, in my steps; and only to feel myself invested by this people, loved with my own Will, I felt as repaid for my descent from heaven to earth. This was my primary purpose to reorder the Kingdom of my Will in the midst of my children, never would I have created the world if I might not have the children that resemble me and that might not live with my own Will. He would have been in the conditions of a poor sterile mother who doesn't hold (the) power to generate and who cannot form a family for herself. Therefore my Will holds (the) power to generate and to form his long generation, in order to form his family."

Whence I continued to think of the descent of the divine Word, and I said to myself: "How can Jesus ever be born into our souls?" And the dear baby added:

"My daughter, it is the easiest thing to make me born, more so that we, do not know how to do difficult things; our power facilitates everything; provided that the creature live in our Volition, everything is done. As she wants to live of him, already she forms the residence for your little Jesus; as she wants to give beginning to do her acts, so she conceives me, and as she completes her act she makes me be born; as she loves in my Volition, thus she dresses me with light and warms me of the so many coldnesses of creatures. If every turn she gives me her will and takes mine, I amuse myself and I form my game and victory song of having conquered the human volition, I feel myself the little victorious King.

"Do you therefore see my daughter, how easy it is on (the) part of your little Jesus? Because when we find our Will in the creature we can do everything. He administers to us all that which we want and is needed by us in order to form our life and our most beautiful works. Instead, when there is not our Volition we remain impeded; there lacks us the love, there the sanctity, there the power, there the purity and all that which is necessary in order to be reborn and form our life in them. Therefore all is on the part of creatures that on our part we put ourselves at her disposition.

"Beyond this, in my birth my divine Mama formed for me a beautiful surprise: with her acts, with her love, with the life of my Will that she possessed, she formed for me my paradise on earth, she didn't do other than to weave with her love all the creation, and there she extended seas of beauties in order to let me enjoy our divine beauties within which shone her beauty. How beautiful was my Mama, in finding her in all the creation that let me enjoy her beauty and the beauty of her acts. There she extended her sea of love, in order to let me find that in all things she loved me; and I found my paradise of love in her and I felicitated and rejoiced in the seas of love of my Mama.

"Now, in my Volition, she formed for me the most beautiful music, the most delicious concerts, so that her little Jesus, might not miss the music of the celestial country. My Mama thought to all this so that I might not miss anything of the enjoyments of the paradise I left; she did nothing else in all her acts, (than) to form joys in order to make me happy. Only to rest on her Heart I felt such harmonies and contentments that I felt enraptured. My dear Mama with living in my Volition took in her womb paradise and made her Son enjoy it, and all her acts didn't do other than to serve to make me happy and to double my paradise on earth.

"Now, my daughter, you don't know another surprise, one who lives in my Volition is inseparable from me and every time that I am reborn, she is reborn together with me. So that I am never alone, I make her be reborn together with me to divine life; reborn to new love, to new sanctity, to new beauty; reborn in the knowledges of her Creator, reborn in all our acts; indeed, in every act that she does she calls me to be reborn and forms a new paradise for her Jesus, and I make her be reborn together with me, in order to make her happy, to felicitate one who lives together with me is one of my greatest joys.

“Therefore be attentive to live in my Volition if you want to make me happy, if you want that in your acts you find my paradise on earth, and I will think there, to have you enjoy the sea of my joys and happiness, we will make each other happy.”

* * *

December 28, 1938

How one forms the echo between the Creator and the creature. How one act in the Divine Volition is found everywhere. The King and the army. The Maternity of the Queen of Heaven.

My poor mind for how much it finds itself under the nightmare of excruciating pains, even to feel myself die, I do how much I can to follow to the acts of the Supreme Volition, although difficult, but I search him as my refuge and in order to draw strength in the painful state in which I find myself. And my beloved Jesus, having compassion for me, all tenderness said to me:

“Daughter of my Will, courage, do not batter yourself too much, depression makes (one) lose strength and makes feel distant he who lives in you and loves you so much.

“You must know that as the creature enters into our Volition in order to depose hers and to take ours, thus it commences in her our divine echo, which echoes in our divine being; and we; only to hear it we say: ‘Who is it that holds so much virtue that she arrives even to have the echo felt of her love, of her breath, of her heartbeat in our supreme being? Ah! It is a creature that having recognized our Will has entered to live in him; be our welcomed one! We in order to reciprocate will make her feel ours in her, in a way that we will breathe with one breathe alone, we will love with one love alone, we will palpitate with one heartbeat alone, and we will feel that the creature has life in us; we won’t feel alone, and she will feel that we have life in her in company with her Creator who never leaves her alone.’

“You must know that every act done in our Volition never finishes, it becomes repeated continually; and since my Will is found everywhere, thus the act becomes repeated in heaven, in created things and in everyone. Therefore an act in our Will surpasses everything, fills heaven and earth, and gives us such love and glory, that all other works remain like so many drops before the sea, because (it is) we ourselves who glorify and love ourselves (in the) creature that is covered with her Creator, and works together with him.

“Therefore for how many beautiful things it seems that they do outside of our Volition, they can never please us, because they don’t give of us, they can not be diffused everywhere, the love is so little that it hardly, if even, covers the act that she has done.

“Now, you must know that we love the creature a great deal, but in spite that we love her we don’t tolerate that she be together with us indecent, dirty, without beauty, nude, or else covered with miserable rags, it would not be worthy of our Supreme Majesty to have children that don't resemble us and that in some way are dressed well, with the regal attire of our Fiat. It would be like a king that holds his army and his subjects poorly dressed, covered with filth to make one disgust to look at them, some blind, some lame, some deformed; would it not be (a) dishonor to this king to be surrounded by an army of miserable ones to make one pity? Would not one condemn the king who did not take care to form an army worthy of him, in a way that everyone should admire not only to look at the majesty of the king, but also the order, the beauty of the army, the flowering of the young people, the way how they are dressed? Would it not be (an) honor of the king to be surrounded by ministers, by (an) army that one takes pleasure in looking at them?

"Now our invincible love, with infinite wisdom, wanting to deal with the creature face to face, has disposed to give my Will to her, so that with his light he embellishes them, with his love he dresses them, with his sanctity he sanctifies them. You see, therefore, how necessary it is that our Will reign in the creature, because he alone holds (the) power of purifying her and embellishing her, in a way as to form our divine army; and we will feel honored in living with them, and in them; they will be our children who surround us dressed with our regal attire, embellished with our likeness.

"Therefore our Will first purifies, sanctifies, embellishes and then he admits them into our Volition to have life together with us. More so that, as the creature enters into our Volition so much is our love, that our divine being rains on her his rain of love, and in seeing her so very loved by us everyone races around her: angels, saints, in order to love her. The creation itself exults with joy in seeing our Will triumphant in that creature and rains love on her. And oh, how beautiful it is to see, that everyone loves her! And she feels so thankful in seeing herself loved by everyone, that she loves everyone."

After this I followed my round in the Divine Volition and arrived to the point of the birth of the little Jesus, who trembled with cold and cried and sobbed bitterly, and with his eyes swollen with tears he looked at me asking my help and between hiccups and groans said to me:

"My good daughter, the lack of love of creatures makes me cry bitterly. As I don't see myself loved thus I feel wounded and it gives me such sorrow that it makes me give into hiccups; my love races over every single creature, covers her, hides her, and constitutes me life of love for them, whom, ungrateful, don't even say to me an I love you, how should I not cry? Therefore, love me, if you want to quiet me (of) the weeping.

"Now, my daughter, listen to me and pay attention to me; I want to tell you a great surprise of our love and I want that you don't let anything escape you; I want to make you know where arrived the maternity of my Celestial Mother, what she did and how much it cost her and still costs. Now, you should know that the great Queen, not only made (herself) Mother of me with conceiving me, with giving me to the light, with feeding me with her milk, with lending all the possible cares that there needed to my infancy; this was not sufficient, neither to her maternal love, nor to my love of Son.

"Therefore her maternal love raced in my mind, and if afflicting thoughts tormented me, she extended her maternity in every thought of mine hid them in her love, kissed them, so that I felt my mind hidden under the maternal wing that didn't ever leave me alone; every thought of mine my Mama loved me and lent me all her maternal cares.

“Her maternity extended itself in my every breath, in my every heartbeat, and if my breath and heartbeat were suffocated by the love and from the sorrow, she raced with her maternity in order not to have me suffocated by the love and to put the balm to my transfixed Heart. If I looked, if I spoke, if I worked, if I walked, she raced in order to receive in her maternal love my looks, my words, my works, my steps, she invested them with her maternal love, hid them in her Heart and did for me as Mama. Even in the food that she prepared for me she made her maternal love flow, so that eating it I felt her maternity that loved me.

And then, what to tell you of how much display of maternity she did in my sufferings? There was no suffering nor drop of blood that I poured forth that my dear Mama didn't feel; after she did for me as Mama, she took my sufferings, my blood, she hid them in her maternal Heart, in order to love them and to continue her maternity.

“Who can tell you how much she loves me and how much I love her? My love was so much, that I didn't know how to be in all that which I did without feeling her maternity together with me. I can say that she raced in order to never leave me, even in the breath; and I called her, her maternity was for me a need, a relief, a support to my life down here.

“Now, my daughter, listen to another surprise of love of your Jesus and of our Celestial Mama, because all that which was done between me and my Mama the love didn't find (an) obstacle, the love of the one raced in the love of the other in order to form one life alone. Now, wanting to do it with creatures, how many obstacles, rejections and ingratitude, but my love is never stopped.

“Now, you must know that as my inseparable Mama extended her maternity inside and outside of my humanity, thus I constituted her and confirmed her Mother of every single thought of the creature, of every breath, of every heartbeat, of every word, and I made her maternity extend in the works, in the steps, in all their sufferings. Her maternity races everywhere; in the perils of falling into sin, she races, covers them with her maternity, so that they don't fall, and if they have fallen, she leaves her maternity as help and defense in order to have them rise again; her maternity races and extends itself over the souls that want to be good and holy as if she might find her Jesus in them, she does as Mother to their intelligence, she guides their words, covers and hides them in her maternal love in order to raise so many other Jesus's. Her maternity makes (a) display over the beds of the dying, and making use of the rights of authority of Mother from me she gives (to) them, she says to me with (an) accent so tender that I can not deny her: ‘My Son, I am Mother, and they are my children, I must put them into safety, if you don't concede this to me my maternity goes (swept) under/(is undermined) by it’; and while she says this, she covers them with her love, hides them in her maternity in order to put them into safety.

“My love was so much that I said to her: ‘My mother, I want that you be the Mother of everyone, and that which you have done for me you will do to all creatures; let your maternity be extended in all their acts, in a way that all I will see is covered and hidden in your maternal love.’ My Mama accepted and remained confirmed that not only should she be Mother of everyone, but to invest every act of theirs with her maternal love. This was one of greatest graces that I did to all the human generations, but how many sorrows doesn't my Mama receive? They arrive to not want to receive her maternity, to refuse to acknowledge her; and therefore all heaven prays(,) awaits with anxiety that the Divine Will be known and reigns; and then the great Queen, will do to the children of my Volition that which she did to her Jesus, her maternity will have life in her children.

"I will surrender my place to one who lives in my Volition in her maternal Heart. She will raise them in me, will guide their steps, will hide them in her maternity and sanctity; one will see impressed in all their acts her maternal love and her sanctity; they will be her true children, that will resemble me in everything. And oh, how she would love that everyone might know that one who wants to live in my Volition has a Queen and powerful Mother that will make up for that which they lack, she will raise them in her maternal womb, in all that which they will do she will be together with them in order to model their acts to hers, so much so that they will know that they are children raised, guarded, educated by the love of the maternity of my Mama! And these will be (those) that will render her content(ment), her glory and her honor."

Fiat!!!

*Adveniat Regnum tuum; Fiat Voluntad tua
sicut in coelo et in terra.*

Your Kingdom come;
Your Will be done
as it is in heaven and on earth.